Bajazet the Second excluded from the ſucceſſion in the Turkiſh Empire by his Son Corcutus, cometh to Conſtantinople, 297, b. by the mediation of the Great Baſſaes obtaineth the Kingdom of Corcutus, 298, a. goeth againſt his Brother Zemes, up in Rebellion againſt him, ib. a. in doubt to have been betrayed by his Souldiers, 300, a. reviled by the Janizaries, 302, a. putteth ſome of them to death, 302, b. purpoſeth their utter deſtruction, 303, a. glad to diſſemble his purpoſe, and to reconcile himſelf unto them, ib. a. ſendeth Dautius his Ambaſſador to Alexander Biſhop of Rome, 307, a. glad to hear that divers of the Chriſtian Princes had combined themſelves againſt the French King, 310, b. in danger to have been ſlain by a Dervislar or Turkiſh Monk, 315, b. Bajazet by nature peaceable, ib. b. his Children, 324, b. ſendeth Ambaſſadors with preſents unto his Son Selymus, 327, a. ſeeking to prefer Achomates his eldeſt Son to the Empire, himſelf yet living, is mightily withſtood by the Souldiers of the Court, before corrupted by Selymus, ib. b. he forbiddeth Selymus to come unto him, and threatneth him, 328. b. fearing to loſe Conſtantinople, departeth from Hadrianople, ib. b. his reſolute ſpeech unto the Janizaries and other Souldiers of the Court, 338, a. in plain battel overcometh his Son Selymus at Tzurulum, 331. a. willing the ſecond time to have reſigned his Empire to Achomates, is again withſtood by his men of War, 332, a. his reſolute anſwer unto Muſtapha and the other traiterous Baſſaes after that Selymus was, by their practiſe, by the Souldiers of the Court ſaluted Emperour, 337, a. poyſoned by Hamon, his Phyſitian a Jew, ib. b. dieth, 338, a.

Bajazet, Solyman's younger Son, ſeeketh to aſpire unto the Empire, his Father yet living, 519, a. ſetteth up a counterfeit Muſtapha to make an head to his intended rebellion, ib. a. the ſubtile and crafty dealing of the ſuppoſed Muſtapha to deceive the People, ib. a. forſaken of his followers, is taken and brought to Solyman at Conſtantinople, 520, a. ſecretly with his complices drowned, Bajazet ſent for by his Father, goeth unto him in fear, ib. b. in few words comforted by his Mother, 521, a. ſharply for his diſloyalty reproved by his Father, and ſo by him pardoned, ib. a. returneth again to his charge, ib. b. after the death of Roxolana his Mother raiſeth new ſtirs, ib. b. admoniſhed of his duty by his Father, 521, b. unwilling to go to Amaſia the Province appointed him by his Father, ſeeketh delays, 522, a. by a Chiaus requeſteth his Father not to intermeddle betwixt his Brother and him, 523, a. making ſhew as if he would go to Amaſia, ſtayeth at Ancyra, and there

there raiſeth his forces, ib. b. his quarrel generally favoured of the Souldiers, 524, a. his purpoſe, ib a. he goeth againſt his Brother towards Iconium, ib. a. fighteth a bloody Battel with his Brother Selymus, wherein were forty thouſand Turks ſlain, ib. b. put to the worſe, retireth, and ſo goeth to Amaſia, ib. b. more commended by the Souldiers in his overthrow than was his Brother in his Victory, ib. b. ſeeketh again for his Father's favour, 525, b. deſpairing thereof ſlyeth into Perſia, deceiving by the way the Baſſa of Sebaſtia and Erzirum, 526, a. at the firſt well entertained by the Perſian King, 527, a. his Followers by the cunning of the fearful Perſian diſperſed and ſlain, ib. b. he himſelf with his Sons impriſoned, ib. b. his miſerable eſtate in Priſon, 528, b. with his four Sons at the inſtance of his Father by the Perſian ſtrangled, 529, a.

Bajazet Baſſa ſent by Amurath againſt Muſtapha the Rebel, forſaken of his Souldiers, yieldeth, 173, a. upon a falſe ſurmiſe executed, ib. b.

Baldwin County of Edeſſa, and Brother to Godfrey ſecond King of Jeruſalem, 18, a. winneth Cæſaria from the Infidels, ib. a. overthroweth the Turks hard by Rama, ib. a. beſiegeth Ptolemais, and in retiring thence is mortally wounded, ib. b. beſiegeth it again, and hath it by compoſition yielded unto him, ib. b. after many ſharp Aſſaults winneth Berythus, ib. b. taketh Sidon by Compoſition, and in vain beſiegeth Tyre, ib. b. maketh an Expedition into Ægypt, and near unto Laris, dieth, 19, a.

Baldwin ſirnamed Brugenſis, County of Edeſſa, beſiegeth Carras, and there taken Priſoner, after five years Captivity redeemeth himſelf, 18, a. after the Death of Baldwin the Firſt, choſen King of Jeruſalem, and called Baldwin the Second, 19, a. overthroweth the Turks, and joyneth the Principality of Antioch to his own Kingdom, 19, b. by Balac the Perſian Sultan overthrown and taken Priſoner; after eighteen Months Captivity, for the ranſom of 100000 Duckets ſet at liberty, 20, b. in three notable Battels overthroweth the King of Damaſco, 20, b. Dieth, 21, a.

Baldwin the third of that name crowned King of Jeruſalem, 22, a. hardly diſtreſſed by Noradin the Turk, ib. a. he fortifieth Gaza, and taketh Aſcalon by Compoſition, 24, b. in a ſet Battel overthroweth Naradin the King of Damaſco at the Caſtle of Sueta, 25, b. falleth ſick and dyeth, ib. b.

Baldwin the fourth of that name ſeventh King of Jeruſalem, 41, b. with a great ſlaughter overthroweth Saladin invading his Kingdom, ib. b. putteth him with his great Army again to flight, 42, b. reſigneth the Government of his Kingdom to Guy Luſignan County of Joppa and Aſcalon, 43, a. ſendeth Ambaſſadours unto the Chriſtian Princes of the Weſt, and immediately after dyeth, 443, b. 444, a.

Baldwin the fifth of that name, yet but a Boy, was crowned eighth King of Jeruſalem, and within ſeven Months after dyeth, 44, a.

Baldwin County of Flanders and Henault, choſen by the Latines Emperour of Conſtantinople, and ſo ſolemnly crowned, 59, a. ſubdueth Thracia, and beſiegeth Hadrianople, ib. b. overthrown in a Battel by the Scythians, and taken Priſoner, is by the commandment of their barbarous King moſt cruelly put to death, 60, a.

Baldwin the ſecond of that name, fifth and laſt Emperour of the Latines in Conſtantinople, 68, a. pawneth his Son unto the Bruges Merchants for money, 79, a. flyeth out of the City of Conſtantinople, being ſurpriſed by Alexius Strategopulus ſent from Michael Paleologus the Greek Emperour, 81, a.

Balabanus ſent by Mahomet againſt Scanderbeg, 269, b. put to flight, taketh divers of Scanderbegs beſt Captains Priſoners at Alchria, 270, a. with his Army overthrown at Oronicheum, the third time overthrown in the Battel at Sfetigrade, 270, b. overthrown by Scanderbeg the fourth time in the Battel at Valcha, 271, b. left by Mahomet to continue the Siege of Croia, 273, a. ſlain, ib. b.

Barbaruſſa ſucceedeth his Brother Horruccius in the Kingdom of Algiers, 429, b. his wonderful ſucceſs, ib. ſent for by Solyman, ib. b. envied in the Turks Court, 430, a. by Solyman himſelf rejected to Abraham the great Baſſa, ib. a. travelleth by land unto him into Siria, and by him commended to Solyman, i. a. his Speech to Solyman to perſwade him to invade the Kingdom of Tunes, ib. b. he is made Solyman's great Admiral, 341, b. ſpoileth the coaſts of Italy, ib. b. paſſeth over into Affrick, and hath Biſerta yielded unto him, 433, b. cometh to Guletta, deceiveth the Citizens, and is received into Tunes, 434, a. diſcomfiteth the Citizens riſen up againſt him, ib. b. hath the City of Tunes yielded unto him, ib. b. is much diſcouraged with the coming of Charles the Emperour into Affrick, 441, b. in his rage executeth Aloyſius Preſenda, ib. b. encourageth his Souldiers, 442, a. his chief Captains, ib. a. the County of Sarne his Head and right Hand by Salec ſent unto him for a Preſent, 443, b. his Fleet taken by Charles the Emperour at Guletta 445, a. he rageth, ib. a. calmed by Sinan the Jew, ib. a. in field with his Army againſt Charles the Emperour, 447, b. flyeth to Tunes, 448, a. diſſuaded by Sinan the Jew from killing the Chriſtian Captives; who ſhortly after breaking Priſon, drive the Turks out of the Caſtle of Tunes, ib. b. flyeth to Hippona, and there comforteth his Souldiers, 450, a. eſcapeth to Algiers, ib. b. ſent by Solyman againſt the Venetians, 463, a. repulſed in Crete, ib. a. reproved of Cowardiſe by one of the Turks Eunuchs, ib. b. jeſteth at the flight of Auria, 465, a. braveth the Chriſtians at Corcyra, ib. a. ſuffereth Shipwreck upon the Acroceraunian Rocks, ib. b. with a great Fleet ſent by Solyman to aid the French King againſt Charles the Emperour, 496, b. burneth Rhegium, and taketh the Caſtle, ib. b. becommeth amorous of the Captain of Rhegium's Daughter, ib. b. maketh them affraid in Rome, 497, a. cometh to Marſeilles, ib. a. for lack of Imployment groweth diſcontented, 502, a. with the French beſiegeth Nice in Provence, ib. a. rageth againſt the French, and threatneth Polinus, 503, a. giveth over the Siege of the Caſtle of Nice, and ſetteth fire on the City, ib a. derided by the Turks Captains, ſharply anſwered their Taunts, ib. b. rewarded and diſcharged by the French King, departeth out of Provence, 506, b. requeſteth of Appianus Governour of Elba, to have a Son of Sinan the Jew's, there Priſoner, delivered unto him, 506, b. 507, a. ſpoileth the Iſland, and hath the young man delivered unto him, 507, a. in his return to Conſtantinople doth much harm upon the Coaſt of Italy, 507, b. dieth, 508, a.

Barbadicus the Venetian Proveditour, a notable Man, 592, b. ſlain in the Battel of Lepanto, 596, a.

Barbarous cruelty, 616, b.

The Barbarous manner of the Turkiſh Sultans to murther their Brethren in the beginning of their Reign, when and by whom firſt begun, 139, a.

Baſe ſhift for Money, 235, a.

The Baſſa of Boſna and his Brother ſlain, 705, b.

The Baſſa of Temeſwar overthrown by the Raſcians and ſlain, 730, a.

The Baſſa of Buda taken Priſoner, 776, b.

The Baſſa of Boſna ſlain, ib. b.

The Baſſa of Natolia taken Priſoner by the Prince of Sarcan, 150. b. his ſtout anſwer to Tamerlane, ib. b. by Tamerlane ſet at liberty and rewarded, ib. b.

The Baſſa of Buda ſlain, 794, a.

The Baſſa of Agria with 10000 Turks overthrown by Ferrant Gonzaga, and chaſed to the Gates of the City, 797, b.

The Baſſa of Trebezond with his Army diſcomfited by the Perſian King, 871, b.

The Baſſa of Damaſco, Tripolis, and Gazare overthrown by the Baſſa of Aleppo, 872, a.

The Baſſa of Tripolis again overthrown by the Baſſa of Aleppo, and the City of Damaſco taken and rifled by him, ib. a. who after three notable encounters with the Viſier, flieth, 881, a. by the Great Sultan pardoned, and again received into favour, ib. a.

The Baſſa's reward that brought the Ægyptian Caravan ſafe to Conſtantinople, 904, b.

The Baſſa of Arzitum in rebellion, 904, b.

Baſilicus a faithful man unto his Prince, 118, b.

Baſta (the Emperours Litutenant in Tranſilvania) beſiegeth the Caſtle of Solomoſe, 816, a. which is yielded unto him, ib. b. his admonition to the States of Tranſilvania, ib. b. their anſwer, ib. b. beſieged in the Caſtle of Somoſinner, 117, b. ſendeth Preſents to the Emperour, 819, b. purſueth the Turks Army departing from the ſiege of Strigonium, 853, a. goeth againſt Botſcay, 855, a. diſcomfiteth certain Companies of the Rebels, ib. b. and putteth to death one of their Captains, ib. b. diſtreſſed by the Rebels, and yet overthroweth them, ib. b. contemned by the Citizens of Caſſovia,, 856, a. recovereth Eperia, ib. a. taketh one of Botſcay's Spies, 857, a. being in a ſtraight, publiſheth a general pardon for all the Rebels, 859, a. his Proclamation, ib. b. his Souldiers mutiny for their pay, 860, b. and ſpoyl all the Country betwixt Eperia and Presburg, 862, b. his notable exploit, 803, a.

Battels.

A cruel Battel fought betwixt Solyman the Turk and the Chriſtian Princes going towards the Holy Land, 12, a. an hundred thouſand Turks ſlain in the battel near unto Antioch, betwixt Corbanas the Perſian Sultans Lieutenant, and the Chriſtian Princes, 14, b. 100000 Turks and Saraſins ſlain in the great battel not far from Aſcalon, fought betwixt Godfrey of Buillion and the Turks and Saraſins, 17, b. the great battel betwixt Amurath the Firſt, and Lazarus the Deſpot, fought in the Plains of Caſſovia, 138, b. 139, a. the battel of Nicopolis betwixt Bajazet the Firſt, and Sigiſmund King of Hungary, 142, a. the great and mortal battel betwixt Bajazet and the great Tamerlane, 151, a. the battel of Vaſcapo betwixt Huniades and Abedin Baſſa, 186, a. the woful battel of Varna betwixt King Uladiſlaus and Amurath the Second, 202, b. the great battel of Caſſova fought three days together betwixt Amurath and Huniades, 209, b. 210. a. the battel betwixt Uſun-Caſſanes the Perſian King and Mahomet the Great, 279, b. 280, a. the battel of Tzurulum betwixt Bajazet and his Son Selymus, 330, b. 331, a. the great battel between Selymus and Hyſmael, 347, a. the battel of Singa betwixt Selymus and Campſon, 360, a. the battel betwixt Sinan Baſſa and Gazelles, 363, b. the great battel of Rhodania betwixt Selymus and Tomombeius, 366, b. the great and dreadful battel of Caire fought two days together betwixt the Mamalukes and the Turks, 370, b. the battel of Moharzch betwixt Solyman and King Lewis, 405, b. the battel of Tockay betwixt the Armies of King John and King Ferdinand, 408, a. the memorable battel of Lepanto betwixt Haly Baſſa and Don John, 595, a. the battel of Sancazan betwixt the Perſian Prince and the Turks, Oſman their General then lying ſick, 700, b. the battel of Alba Regalis betwixt the Imperials and the Turks, 721, b. the battel of Strigonium 749, a. the battel of Agria, betwixt Mahomet the Third, and Maximilian the Archduke the Emperours Brother, 767, b. a great battel in Tartary, 900 b. another betwixt Alexander and the Vayvod of Stephano, 929, b. another between the Turks and Perſians, 950, a.

Battori, his Practices, 901, b. demands Succours of the Turk, and is betrayed, 909, a. killeth Nage, 910, b. is envied by his own People, ib. b. ſends an Ambaſſador to the Emperour Mathias, ib. b. his cruelty, 911, a. ſlain by his own Souldiers, ib. b.

Bedredin the counterfeit Prophet hanged, 171, a.

Begum the Perſian Queen made away, 665, b.

Beged Baſſa thinking to ſurpriſe Baſta, is himſelf overthrown, 831, a.

Belgioſa goeth againſt the Rebels in Tranſilvania, 854, a. in a great battel overthrown by Botſcay, ib. a. beſieged by the Rebels in the Caſtle of Zipze, 855, a.

Belioioſa Author of the great Rebellion in Hungary, 857, b.

Belgrade beſieged by Amurath the Second, 178, b. notably defended by the Chriſtians, 180, b. again beſieged by Mahomet the Great, 251, a. won by Solyman, 382, b.

Belgrade in the Confines of Epirus beſieged by Scanderbeg, 252, a.

Bethlin Habor chief of the Rebels in Tranſilvania, ſurpriſed and overthrown by the Count of Tambier, 851, a. again defeated by the ſaid Count, ib. b.

Bloody precepts left by Selymus unto his Son Solyman, 380, b.

Bodo conſtant to King John, 408, b.

Boſna of a Kingdom converted to a Province of the Turks Empire, 248, b.

Boſna with ſome part of Servia taken from the Turks by Mathias King of Hungary, 275, b.

Botſcay raiſeth Rebellion in Tranſilvania, 853, b. dealeth treacherouſly 854, a. countenanced by the Grand Seignior, and ſtiled Prince of Tranſilvania, ib. a. his Lieutenants policy, ib. b. Caſſovia yielded unto him, ib. b. his unreaſonable demands for Peace, 858, a. refuſeth to receive the Emperours Ambaſſadors, 861, b. ſendeth Ambaſſadors into Polonia, and is there denyed Aid, 866, b. cauſeth his Chancellor to be beheaded, 877, b. dieth, 879, b.

Bragadinus Governour of Famaguſta, encourageth his Souldiers, 585, a. yieldeth unto the requeſt of the Citizens of Famaguſta, in time to deliver up the City, not now longer to be defended, 586, b. entereth into Parley with the Turks, ib. b. coming to the falſe Baſſa Muſtapha unto his faith, for his ſafety before given, is by him moſt ſhamefully and horribly murthered, 587, a.

Buda diſtreſſed for want of Victuals, 805, b. victualled, 806, b. a breach made in the walls by the negligence of the Cannoneers, 807, a.

Buda beſieged by the Lord Rogendorff, King Ferdinand's Lieutenant, 473, b. ſurpriſed by Solyman 479, b. beſieged, and the lower City taken by the Lord Palfi, 773, a. the Caſtle by him battered, undermined, and in vain aſſaulted, ib. a. the lower City of Buda again taken by the Chriſtians, 801, b. the upper City and Caſtle beſieged, 802, a. in vain aſſaulted, ib. b. the Siege for fear of the Tartars given over by the Chriſtians, 803, b.

C.

CAffa with the Country of Taurica Cherſeneſus ſubdued by the Turks, 281, a.

Caire deſcribed, 368, b. taken by Selymus, 371, a.

Calo Johannes after the death of Alexius his Father, ſucceedeth him in the Empire, 19, b. he taketh Tarſus in Cilicia, beſiegeth Antioch, and upon Compoſition raiſeth his ſiege, 21, a, b. wounded with a poyſoned Arrow, dyeth, ib. b.

Calcis the chief City of Eubœa beſieged by the Turks, 276, a. taken by the Turks, ib. b.

Callipolis taken by the Turks, 129, b.

Caly Baſſa diſſwadeth Mahomet from the ſiege of Conſtantinople, 234, b. Caly Baſſa cruelly executed, 238. a.

Calybeius Baſſa and Cherſeogles after a long and mortal battel taken by Usbeg, and ſent Priſoners to Caytbeius, 306, a.

Campſon Gaurus with what cauſes moved to fall out with Selymus, 355, a. his moderate and happy Government, 357, a. his anſwer unto the Ambaſſadors of Selymus, ib. a. perplexed, 358, b. ſlain, 361, a. his dead body laid out to be ſeen of all men, ib. a.

Canalis the Venetian Admiral doth the Turks great harm, 275, b. with his whole family exiled, 277, a.

Caniſia beſieged by the Turks, 790, b. cowardly yielded, 791, a. beſieged by Ferdinand the Archduke, 794, b. the ſiege by reaſon of tempeſt and extremity of weather given over, 795, b.

Cancapus Governour of Damaſco revolteth from the Tartars to the Turks, 88, b.

Capi-Aga with ſome others executed, 811, a.

Canaſina yielded unto Orchanes, 128, b.

Caraguſa a Turk offereth a challenge unto any of the Souldiers in Scanderbegs Army, 213, a.

Caragoſes Baſſa Beglerbeg of Aſia in a great battel overthrown by Techellis, 321, b. taken priſoner, 322, a. horribly empaled by the high-ways ſide, ib. b.

Caramania by Bajazet united to the Othoman Empire, 304, b.

Caracoſſa the famous Pyrat ſlain, 597, a.

Carazies Baſſa ſlain, 243, b.

Cardinal Bathor taketh upon him the Principality of Tranſilvania, 776, a. in a great battel overthrown by Michael the Vayvod, 778, b. his head ſent for a Preſent unto the Emperour, ib. b.

Caſſovia in danger to have been burnt by the Turks, 842, b.

Caſſan Baſſa ſlain, 347, a.

The Caſtle of Buda by the Garriſon Souldiers without the conſent of their Captain yielded to Solyman, 421, a.

Caſſanes the Tartar invadeth Syria, 87, b. in a great battel overthroweth Melechnaſer the Egyptian Sultans Lieutenant, ib. b. rendreth Jeruſalem, and giveth it to the Chriſtians, hath Damaſco yielded unto him, 88, a.

Caſtelnovum taken from the Turks, and by the Imperials unjuſtly detained from the Venetians, 465, a. recovered again by Barbaruſſa, 466, a.

The Catelonians entertained by Andronicus the Emperour for want of pay, ſpoil his Subjects, 105, a. take the ſpoil of Calipolis, and there fortifying themſelves, do great harm both by Sea and Land, ib. b. aided by the Turks, overthrow Michael the Emperour in plain battel, 106, a. ſpoil a great part of Thracia, and ſeiſe themſelves on the Cities of Athens and Thebes, 107, b.

Cauſes of the Troubles in Bohemia, 898, a.

Caytbeius the Egyptian Sultan ſendeth Ambaſſadors to Bajazet in the behalf of Zemes, 299, b. dieth, 306, b.

Cayarbeius Governour of Comagena bearing a grudge to Campſon, hath intelligence with Selymus, 359, b. playeth the cunning Traitor, 360, a. by Selymus made Governour of Cayre and Ægypt, 376, a.

Cazianer General of King Ferdinands Army againſt the Turks, 456, b. beſiegeth Execke, 458, a. to retire with more haſte, would have broken his great Ordnance, 459, a. a general fear in his Camp, ib. b. his diſhonourable flight, 460, b. breaketh Priſon, 462, a. ſhamefully murthered, and his Head ſent to King Ferdinand, ib. b.

Cephalenia taken from the Turks by the Venetians, 313, b.

Ceremonies of the Turks at the firſt audience of Ambaſſadors, 901, a.

Chamuzes Baſſa and Catabolinus the Turks Secretary hanged by Wladus, 246, a.

Charles the French King invadeth the Kingdom of Naples, 308, b. received into the City of Naples, 310, a.

Charles the Emperour's great preparation againſt Solyman, 415, a. his power at Vienna, 419, b. after the departure of Solyman returneth into Italy, 422, a. his great preparation for the Invaſion of Tunes, 440, b. he paſſeth over into Affrick, 441, b. landeth his Army at Guletta, 442, b. deſerveth the Oken Garland, 446, b. he marcheth towards Tunes, 447, a. content to be commanded by his Lieutenant, 448, a. putteth Barbaruſſa to flight, ib. a. hath Tunes yielded unto him, 449, b. reſtoreth it to Mulcaſſes now become his Tributary, 451, a. returneth into Italy, ib. a. with the Venetians and the Biſhop of Rome entereth into a Confederation againſt Solyman, 462, b. invadeth Algiers, 484, b. ſendeth a Meſſenger to Aſſan Aga Governour of Algiers for Barbaruſſa, 485, a. his Meſſenger and Meſſage ſcorned by Aſſan Aga the Eunuch, ib. b. his notable courage in ſtaying in the flight of his Army, 487, a. moſt part of his Fleet loſt by Tempeſt, ib. b. the miſery of his Army, 488, a. Horſes good meat in his Camp, ib. b. raiſeth his ſiege and departeth from Algiers, 488, b. drowneth his Horſes of great price, to make room for his common Souldiers, 489, a. after many troubles, arriveth at length at new Carthage in Spain, 489, b. reſigneth his Empire unto his Brother Ferdinand, and ſhortly after dyeth, 529, b.

Charles County Manſfelt ſent by the King of Spain out of the Low-Countries with 2000 Horſe and 6000 Foot to aid the Emperour in his Wars againſt the Turk, 744, b. by the Emperour appointed Lieutenant General of his Army in the Lower Hungary under Matthias the Arch-duke, and created one of the Princes of the Empire, ib. b. with ſeverity appeaſeth the mutinous Germans, 746, a. removeth ſuddenly with his Army from Dotis to Strigonium, 747, a. in a great battel overthroweth the Baſſa of Buda coming to the relief of Strigonium, 749, a. dieth at Comara, 750, b.

Chars in three and twenty days fortified by the Turks, 667, b.

Chaſan Chelife and Schach-Culi two hypocritical Perſians, Authors of the ſect of the Cuſel-baſſa's or Red-heads among the Turks, 317, ſtir up a great rebellion, 319, b. Chaſan Chelife ſlain, 323, a.

Chendemus Baſſa by many grave reaſons diſſuadeth Selymus from invading the Perſians, 344, a. he is by the commandment of Selymus unworthily ſlain, ib. b.

Cherſeogles Baſſa what he was, and why he turned Turk, 329, b. a favourer of Learning, ib. b. the only of great men faithful to Bajazet, perſuadeth him to give battel unto his rebellious Son Selymus, 329, a.

Chios taken by the Turks, 554, a.

Chiroche diſſuadeth the Baſſa's Partau and Haly from giving battel unto the Chriſtians at Lepanto, 592, b. encountereth with Contarenus 596, b. ſlain, and his Galley taken, ib. b.

Chriſtians fight againſt Chriſtians, to the Confuſion of themſelves, and benefit of the Turk, 231, b. in ſeeking too greedily after the ſpoil, overthrown and diſcomfited in the battel at Kareſta, 768, a.
A notable Exploit done by a Chriſtian fugitive, 813, b.
The Chriſtians great Army, 819, b.
A rich booty loſt through the negligence of certain Chriſtians, 823, a.
The Chriſtian General layeth a great Ambuſh to intercept the Turks, 824, a. which ambuſh overthroweth them, ib. b. they purſue the Turks flying Army, 826, a. reſolve to give the Turks battel, ib. b. they offer the Turks battel, 828, a. who ſhun it, ib. a. take ſome booties from them, 840, b.
A Chiaus ſent from Conſtantinople to Paris, and the cauſe why, 942, b.
Cicala-Baſſa with his Army overthrown by the Rebels in Aſia, 844, b. diſcomfited the ſecond time, ib. b. again made General of the Turks Army in Aſia, 846, a. his evil ſucceſs againſt the Perſian, 858, b. overthrown by the Perſian, 871, a.
Cicala Baſſa by the appointment of Oſman the Viſier Baſſa, commandeth the Turks great Army after his death, in the return thereof from Tauris, 701, a. diſchargeth the Army at Van, ib. b. afraid to give Aid to Giaffer Baſſa at Tauris, 703, a. reſtoreth the battel before loſt at Kareſta, 768, a. with a great fleet cometh to ſee his Mother the Lady Lucretia at Meſſina, 774, a.
Columnius the Popes Admiral interpoſeth himſelf as a Mediator betwixt Don John and Venerius the Venetian Admiral, and ſo well appeaſeth the matter, 592, a.
Colonitz a valiant Captain in arms againſt the Turks, 805, a. lyeth in ambuſh for them, ib. a. in vain beſiegeth Babotz, 808, a. retyreth to Comara, ib. b. his noble reſolution, 809, a. he oppoſeth the Tartars, 813, a. defeateth two thouſand Turks, 814, a. beſiegeth the Caſtle of Loqua, 814, b. and taketh it, 815, a. his notable enterpriſe upon the avantguard of the Turks Army, 820, a. ſeeking to ſurpriſe the Turks, is himſelf indangered, 827, a. wiſely appeaſeth his diſcontented Souldiers, 856, b. craveth aid from Vienna, 857, a. overthroweth the Haiducks, 867, b.
A Combat fought betwixt the Lord Tiſcheuich and the Turks General, 937, b.
A Comet ſeen over Conſtantinople, 950, a.
Commiſſioners of the Turk, the Emperour, and Hungarians meet together to entreat a Peace, 877, b.
Commiſſioners appointed to appeaſe the new Troubles in Hungary, 885, a.
Compariſon betwixt Bajazet and Tamerlane, 157, b.
Confederation hard to truſt upon, 568, a.
Conrade Marqueſs of Montferrat ſlain by two deſperate Ruffians, 50, a.
Conrade the Third, Emperour of Germany, taketh upon him an Expedition into the Holy Land, 22, a. cannot be ſuffered to enter into Conſtantinople, but is treacherouſly dealt withal by the Greek Emperour, 23, a. with a notable ſpeech encourageth his Souldiers to adventure the River Meander, 23, b. with a great ſlaughter overthroweth the Turks, 24, a. beſiegeth Iconium, and ſo returneth, ib. a.
Conſtantine Prince of Bulgaria, with the Tartars invade the Territories of Paleologus the Greek Emperour, and ſpoileth Thracia, 82, a.
Conſtantine the Deſpot ſent by the old Emperour Andronicus his Brother, againſt young Andronicus his Nephew, 113, b. taken Priſoner at Theſſalonica, and miſerably uſed, 114, a.
Conſtantine the Greek Emperour in vain craveth Aid of the other Chriſtian Princes, 231, a. at the winning of Conſtantinople by the Turks troden to death, 236, a.
Conſtantinople built by Pauſanias, deſtroyed by Severus, re-edified by Conſtantine the Great, 231, b. how ſeated, ib. b. taken and ſpoiled by the Latines, 57, b. 58, a. recovered from the Latines by Alexius Strategopulus, 81, a. betrayed unto the young Emperour Andronicus, 119, b. in vain beſieged by Amurath the Second, 175, a. again beſieged by Mahomet the Great, 231, b. aſſaulted by the Turks, 235, b. won, 236, a.
Conſtantinople again troubled by Fire, 877, a. fired the third time, 882, b. violent rain in the City, 904, b. afflicted with Graſhoppers, 910, a. the People much waſted by the Plague, 920, a. all the Dogs ſent from thence, ib. a. the ſcituation thereof deſcribed, 956, a.
Conſtantine Son of Jeremy enters the Government of Moldavia, 909, a. his anſwer to the Turks Aga, ib. b. he and Potoſky taken Priſoners by the Turks, ib. b.
Contarenus the Venetian Admiral ſlain, 282, a.
Corcutus ſaluted Emperour before his Father Bajazet, 297, a. kindly reſigneth the Empire to his Father, ib. b. given to the ſtudy of Philoſophy, and therefore not beloved of the Janizaries, 326, a. cometh to Conſtantinople, 335, a. his notable ſpeech unto his Father to perſwade him to reſign unto him the Empire before the coming of his Brother Selymus, ib. a. comforted by his Father, and put in hope of the Empire, ib. b. flyeth to Magneſia, 337, a. ſought after by Selymus, hideth himſelf in a Cave, 341, a. is found and taken, ib. a. by the commandment of Selymus ſtrangled, ib. a.
Coreſky a Prince of Polonia marrieth the Princeſs Alexandrina, 934, b. a challenge ſent unto him by the Turks General, 937, b. taken Priſoner by the Turks, 938, a. his Wife carried Priſoner into Tartaria, 941, a. his generous reſolution, 946, a. he eſcapes out of Priſon, 947, a. and alſo out of Conſtantinople, 948, a. ſtrangled in Priſon, 974, a.
Corinth taken and ſpoiled by the Knights of Malta, 906, a.
Cortug-Ogli the Pyrat perſwadeth Solyman to beſiege the Rhodes, 383, a.
Corone, Pylus, and Criſſeum, Cities of Peloponeſus belonging to the Venetians, yielded unto the Turks, 312, a.
Corone beſieged by the Turks, 423, b. relieved by Auria, 424, b. abandoned and forſaken by the Spaniards, 426, a.
Cornea and Serbellio, two antient Spaniſh Captains perſuade the giving of battel unto the Turks at Lepanto, 590, a.
Coſtly diſhes, 504, a.
Coſſacks, they mutiny and leave Prince Alexander, 936, b.
Count Solmes ſurpriſing Wiſcenburg is taken Priſoner, 810, b.
Cowardiſe puniſhed, 765, a.
Crete deſcribed, 588, a.
Croia beſieged by Amurath the Second, 221, a. in vain aſſaulted, ib. b. beſieged by Mahomet the Great, 273, a. relieved, ib. b. again beſieged by Mahomet, 274, b. the third time beſieged, 282, a. yielded to the Turks, 286, a.
Cubates Selymus his Ambaſſador cometh to Venice, 568, a. but homely entertained there, ib. b. his ſpeech in the Senate of Venice, ib. b. for fear of the People ſecretly conveyed away, 569, b.
Curzola forſaken by the men, defended by Women, 588, b.
Cuſahin Baſſa of Caramania riſeth up in Rebellion againſt Mahomet the Third, 779, a. overthroweth the Sanzacks ſent to have apprehended him, ib. b. at the coming of Mehemet the Viſier Baſſa ſent againſt him, flieth, ib. b. forſaken of his followers, is taken and tortured to death at Conſtantinople, 780, a.

The Cuſelbaſſa's when and how they begun amongſt the Turks, 317, a.

Cydan King of Fez with his Army overthrown, 915, a.

Cyprus deſcribed, 570, b. how that Kingdom came to the Venetians, ib. b. taken from them by Selimus the Second, 587, b.

Cyrene yielded unto the Turks, 576, b.

Czarnieuiche corrupted, giveth the Turks paſſage over the Danubius, into Valachia, 617, b. revolteth unto the Turks, 618, b.

D.

DAmaſco betrayed to Saladin Sultan of Egypt, 41, b. taken and ſacked by the Tartars, 79, b. yielded to Selymus, 361, b.

Damiata and the deſcription thereof, 62, b. taken by the Chriſtians, being before unpeopled by the Plague, 65, a.

Dampiere a valiant Commander, 869, b.

Dandalus Admiral of the Venetian fleet, 59, b.

Daout Baſſa his death conſpired by the Great Viſier, 976, b.

David and Alexius Comneni, Nephewes to Andronicus the Emperour, erect unto themſelves a new Empire in Trapezond, 59, b.

David the laſt Emperour of Trapezond put to death by Mahomet the Great, and that Empire ſubverted, 245, b.

Daut Chan for his good ſervice rewarded by Amurath the Third, 701, b.

Dearth in the Turks Army at Triala, 684, b.

Death of the French Ambaſſador at Conſtantinople, 901, a. of Amurath Seider, 905, a. of Sultan Achmats Daughter, 907, b. of Sigiſmund, ſometime the warlike Prince of Tranſilvania, 919, b.

Debricus ſlain, and his Army overthrown by Scanderbeg, 250, a.

Dedeſmet the Georgian Widow, with her Son Alexander ſubmit themſelves to Muſtapha the Great Baſſa, 663, b.

Delimenthes with five thouſand Perſians purſueth the Turks Army, 439, a. aſſaileth their Camp by Night, and maketh of them a great ſlaughter, ib. a.

Demetrius ſubmitteth himſelf unto Mahomet the Great, 241, b.

Deſcription of the Town of Arrache or Allarche, 900, a. of the Grand Seigniors Chamber, 901, b.

Deſdrot Governour of Stelluſa, to the terror of the Turks in Sfetigrade, before their Faces executed 195, b.

Didymoticum yielded unto the Turks, 131, a.

Diogenes the Emperour diſcomfiteth the Turks, 6, a. himſelf by the treaſon of John Ducas by them again overthrown, 7, a. taken Priſoner, 7, a. honourably uſed by the Turks Sultan, 7, b. overthrown and taken Priſoner by Andronicus, hath his Eyes put out, whereof he dieth, 8, a.

Diſcourſe of the magnificence of the Turks Court and Empire, 955, a, b.

Diſſention among the Turks, about the ſucceſſion, after the death of Mahomet the Great, 297, a.

Diſſention betwixt Don John and Venerius the Venetian Admiral, 591, b.

Dium a Caſtle of the Venetians in the Eaſt-Indies, in vain aſſaulted by the Turks, 451, b.

Doganes Aga of the Janizaries whipt and diſplaced, 230, b.

Dotis taken by the Turks, 769, a.

Dragut a moſt famous Pyrat of the Turks, by Auria driven out of the City of Africa, in the Kingdom of Tunes, 508, b. cometh to the ſiege of Malta, 538, b. his Souldiers enforced ſhamefully to retire, 540, is ſlain, 541, a.

Dracula Vayvod of Valachia diſſuadeth King Uladiſlaus from farther proceeding in his Wars againſt Amurath, 201, b. aideth him with his Son and 4000 Horſe, 202, a. his laſt farewel unto the King, ib. a.

The Druſian People what they are, 692, a.

A Drunkard ſeverely puniſhed, 920, b.

Dulcigno, Antivari, and Budua, ſtrong Towns of the Venetians upon the Coaſts of Epirus, and Dalmatia, yielded to the Turks, 588, b.

The Duke of Muſcovy his Letters and Preſents ſent unto the Emperour, 751, a.

Duke Mercury General of the Emperours Forces in the lower Hungary, cometh in vain to relieve Caniſia, 790, b. in retiring loſeth three thouſand of his men with certain pieces of great Ordnance and his baggage, 791, a. beſiegeth Alba-Regalis, 793, a. winneth it, ib. b. enforceth Haſſan the Turks General with the loſs of 6000 of his Turks to retire, 794, a.

Dyrrhachium, now called Durazo, taken by the Turks, 314, a.

E.

EArthquake moſt terrible in Conſtantinople, 324, a.

Edward eldeſt Son to Henry the Third, King of England, taketh upon him an Expedition into the Holy Land, and arriveth at Tunes 83, b. arriveth at Ptolemais, 84, a. taketh Nazareth, and putteth the Turks to flight, ib. a. by a deſperate Saraſin dangerouſly wounded with an envenomed Knife, ib. b. cured of his wound, maketh Peace with the Sultan, and returneth into England, ib. b.

The Egyptians diverſly affected towards the Mamalukes, 368, b.

Eivaſes Baſſa hath his Eyes burnt out, 175, b.

Elpis the Egyptian Sultan beſiegeth Tripolis, and taketh it by force, 86, a. winneth Sidon and Berythus, and raſeth them, taketh Tyre by Compoſition, and winneth all the ſtrong Holds in Syria and Palaſtine from the Chriſtians, except only the ſtrong City of Ptolemais, ib. a. maketh Peace with the remainder of the Chriſtians, ib. a.

Emanuel the Greek Emperour with a great power invadeth the Dominions of the Sultan of Iconium, 27, a. loſeth a great part of his Army, 28, a. in danger to have been taken, notably defendeth himſelf, ib. b. in his greateſt diſtreſs hath Peace offered him by the Sultan, which he accepted gladly, 30, a he vanquiſheth Arapacke the Sultans General, ib. b. falleth ſick and dieth, ib. b.

Emanuel the Greek Emperour upon hard Conditions obtaineth Peace of Bajazet the Great Turk, and becometh his Tributary, 142, b. by his Ambaſſadors offereth his Empire unto Tamerlane, and ſo to become his Vaſſal, 153, a. cometh himſelf unto him at Pruſa, ib. b. honourably entertaineth him, coming in private over to Conſtantinople, 154, a.

Ambaſſadors ſent from Tamas the Perſian King to Selymus, 565, b. hononourably entertained by the Turks at Hadrianople, 566, a. the Perſian Ambaſſador in going to viſit Muhamet the Viſier Baſſa, in danger to have been ſlain, ib. b the rich Preſents by him given to Selymus, ib. b.

Ambaſſadors From the Emperour to the Arch-duke Mathias at Zname, 887, a. from the Electors of Saxony and Brandenburg, for appeaſing the Troubles betwixt the Emperour and Mathias his Brother, ib. b. from Mathias to the Emperour, 888, b. from the Elector of Saxony, in behalf of the Proteſtant States of Bohemia, 894, b. from the Perſian to the German Emperour, 897, a. to the Grand Seignior, 905, a, another, 908, b. the Poliſh Ambaſſador arreſted at Conſtantinople, 911, b. an Ambaſſador from the Turk to his Majeſty of Great Britain, and his Speech unto him, 958, b. from Bethlem Gabor arriveth at the Port, 974, a. from the King of Poland to the Turk, ib. b. his Oration to the Grand Seignior, 975, a. his Remonſtrance to the Great Viſier, 977, a. from the Duke of Muſcovy to the Turk, 976, a. from the Prince of Tranſilvania to the Great Sultan, 980, a. the Engliſh Ambaſſador arriveth at the Port, 765, b. his Oration to the Grand Seignior, ib. b. delivereth his Letters of Credence, 966, a. his advice to Delauir Baſſa, and the Baſſa's reply, 972, b.

Emir-Hamze the Perſian Prince cometh into Syruan, 664, b. killeth Caitas Baſſa, and recovereth Eres, ib. b. overthroweth the Tartars, and taketh Abdilcheray, 665, a. recovereth Sumachia, ib. a. returneth to Casbin, ib. a. overthroweth the Vayvod of the Turks Army, 679, b. in a great battel overthroweth Cicala Baſſa and the Baſſa of Caraemit, 699, b. dareth Oſman the Turks General to battel, ib. b. with his own hand killeth the Baſſa of Caraemit, 700, a. killeth alſo the Baſſa of Trapezond with twenty thouſand turks more, 700, b. overthroweth 20000 of the Turks at the battel of Sancazan, 701, a. overcometh the rebellious Turcomans, and executeth their Leaders, 703, a. ſacketh Salmas, 704, a. putteth the Baſſa of Reivan to flight, ib. b. ſlain by one of his Eunuchs, 705, b.
Emir Chan having his Eyes put out, dieth miſerably in Priſon, 686, a.
The Emperour, the French King, and the King of Polonia intangled in their Leagues with the Turk, refuſe to give Aid unto the Venetians againſt him, 570, a.
The Empire of Trapezond overthrown and ſubverted by Mahomet the Great, 245, b.
The Emperour makes fair weather with the Proteſtant States of Bohemia, 894, b.
The Engliſh Ambaſſador, Sir Tho. Glover makes interceſſion at the Port, for the reſtoring of a depoſed Prince of Moldavia, 902, b.
An Enterpriſe of the Chriſtians upon Albania, diſcovered by the Turks, 903, a.
A notable Enterpriſe of four Chriſtian Slaves, 916, a.
Eperia by the Rebels diſtreſſed, 875, a.
Ertogrul with his Brother Dunder, and four hundred Families of the Turks, ſtay in their return towards Perſia, 93, a. by his good ſervice obtaineth of Sultan Aladin a place at Suguta for himſelf and his Turks to dwell in, ib. b. taketh the Caſtle of Cara-Chiſar from the Chriſtians, ib. b.
Eubœa taken from the Venetians by Mahomet the Great, 277, a.
Euremoſes his rich Preſent unto Amurath at the marriage of his Son Bajazet, 133, b.
Eudocia the Empreſs contrary to her Oath, deſirous to marry, dealeth cunningly with the Patriarch to diſpenſe with her Oath, 5, b. marrieth Diogenes Romanus, a Priſoner condemned to dye, and maketh him Emperour, 6, a. ſhe is depoſed by the Traitors John Ducas, Pſellus, and others, and thruſt into a Monaſtery, 7. b.
Euſtace Governour of the Kingdom of Jeruſalem, diſcomfiteth the Saracens in a great battel near unto Aſcalon, and not long after dieth, 20. a.

F.

FAcardin Emir of Sidon abandons his charge, and retires to Florence, 921, a. is received courteouſly of the Duke, ib. a.
Falſhood of a Turk juſtly puniſhed, 905, b.
Famaguſta beſieged by the Turks, 576, b. hath a new ſupply put into it by Quirinus, 578, b. deſcribed, 584, a. the number of the defendants in it, ib. b. twice aſſaulted and notably defended by the Chriſtians, ib. b. undermined, 585, b. furiouſly by the Turks aſſaulted, and valiantly by the Chriſtians defended, ib. b. great part of the wall blown up, and the City again aſſaulted, 586, a. yielded up to the Turks, ib. b.
Famine in Scodra, 290, b.
Faulconers and Huntſmen in great number in the Turks Court, 230, a.
Ferat Baſſa ſent by Solyman againſt Alis-Beg the Mountain Prince, 404, a. treacherouſly murthereth him and his four Sons, ib. b.
Ferat Baſſa by Amurath choſen General of his Army againſt the Perſians inſtead of Sinan, 681, a. in the ſpace of fiteen days buildeth a Fort at Reivan, as he was by Amurath commanded, ib. b. breaketh up his Army at Erzirum, 682, a. raiſeth a new Army, ib. b. fortifieth Lori, 683, a. buildeth a Fort upon the ſtraight of Tomanis, ib. a. reproveth Veis Baſſa of Aleppo, 684, a. is himſelf reviled by the Janizaries and Spahi, ib. b. by them diſobeyed and threatned, 685, a. his ſtout anſwer to his mutinous Souldiers, ib. b. his Tents overthrown and he again threatned, ib. b. diſgraced, breaketh up his Army at Ardachan, ib. b. grievouſly complained of to Amurath, 686, b. by Amurath again made General againſt the Perſians, 703, b. cometh to Van, 704, a. putteth Succours into Tauris, 705, a. taketh Genge, 707, a. ſent by Mahomet General of his Army into Hungary, 744, a. diſgraced at his firſt coming to the Army, ib. a. overthrown in Valachia, 745, a. ſent for to Conſtantinople, and there ſtrangled, 572, b.
Ferdinand King of Bohemia laieth claim to the Kingdom of Hungary, 407, b. taketh Buda, ib. b. crowned King of Hungary, 408, b. ſeeketh for the favour of Solyman, 409, b. is by him rejected and threatned, ib. b. perſwaded by the Hungarian fugitives to invade Hungary, 470, b. diſſuaded by Laſcus, 471, a. ſendeth Laſcus to Solyman, and other Ambaſſadors to the Queen of Hungary, to demand of her that Kingdom, ib. b. he invadeth Hungary, 472, a. taketh Peſth and Vacia, and beſiegeth Buda, ib. a. dieth, 534, b.
Fileck taken by the Chriſtians, 722, b.
Filek yielded unto the Haiducks, 961, a.
The Florentines take the Caſtle of Lango, 908, a.
Folly of the Turks, 901, a.
Fortgaſie Lieutenant to King Mathias entreth Tranſilvania with an Army, 902, a. expelled by Battori, ib. a. his miſerable retreat, ib. a.
The Fort of Cochina yielded to Prince Alexander, 928, a.
Foſcarus a grave Senator, 467, b. unworthily diſgraced by the multitude, ib. b.
Fourteen Wagons loaded with the heads of the ſlain Chriſtians, 715, b.
Francis the French King, the more to trouble the Emperour, ſolliciteth Solyman to invade his Territories, 489, b.
Francis Acciavol, Duke of Thebes, by the Commandment of Mahomet murthered, 241, a.
Frederick the Emperour taketh upon him an Expedition into the Holy Land, 46, b.
Frederick Duke of Suevia, the Emperours Son, in his Fathers ſtead choſen General of the Chriſtians Army, 47, a. hath Antioch delivered unto him, ib. b. dieth of the Plague, and is buried by his Father in the Cathedral Church at Tyre, ib. b.
Frederick the German Emperour undertaketh an Expedition into the Holy Land, 69, b. crowned King of Jeruſalem, which is by him repaired, 70, a.
The Frenchmen and Wallons in mutiny at Pappa, 780, b. compact with the Turks to deliver to them the Town, ib. b. ſeeking ſecretly to have fled are moſt

moſt of them ſlain, and the reſt that were taken put to moſt horrible Tortures, 782, b.
A French Ambaſſador feaſted by the Turks, 901, b.
The French Ambaſſadors men tortured by the Turks, 947, a. he himſelf impriſoned, ib. b. ſet at liberty, ib. b.
Friuli part of the Venetian Territory miſerably ſpoiled by the Turks, 282, b. again ſpoiled by Scander Baſſa and the Turks, 311, b.
The frontiers of the Emperours Territories grievouſly ſpoiled by the Turks, 803, a.
The frugality of the Turks, 481, b.
Fulke County of Turin, Maine, and Anjou, taketh upon him an expedition into the Holy Land, 20, b. 21, a. dieth of a fall off his Horſe in hunting, and is buried at Jeruſalem, 22, b.
Funeral of the Lady Glover, the Engliſh Ambaſſadors Wife, 908, a.
Fuſcarinus in his abſence, by the general conſent of the Venetian State choſen Admiral, 602, b. encourageth the Confederates to give the Turks battel, 603, b. in vain perſwadeth the Confederates to take the advantage of the Turks diſperſed Fleet, 605, a. earneſtly diſſuadeth Don John, and the Spaniards from returning without giving the Turks battel, 609, a.

G.

GAbor and the Turk oppreſs Battori, 911, a. Gabor made Prince of Tranſilvania by the Turk, ib. b. his deſign upon divers places, 924, a. receiveth Aid from the Turk, and beſiegeth Lippa, ib. b. undertakes to ſuccour the Bohemian Proteſtants, 952, a. taketh many Towns in Hungary 952, b. makes a League with the Bohemians and Hungarians, 953, a. proclaimed King of Hungary, ib. a.
The Gallions of Malta defeated by the Turks, 898, a. they ſet upon the Turks Caravan, ib. a. go to ſurpriſe them of Biſerta, ib. b. ſink a Gallion of Tunes, ib. b.
The Gallies of Florence take a Turkiſh Ship, ib. b. win the Town of Biſquerre, ib. b. take divers Turkiſh Veſſels, 899, a. make a ſecond Voyage againſt the Turks, 903, a. meet with the Turks Fleet, ib. a. aſſailed by the Turks, ib. a. ſink five Turkiſh Gallies, ib. b. put their Fleet to flight, and take a rich Ship from them, ib. b. make an enterpriſe upon the Town and Caſtle of Agliman, 917, b. after a bloody fight take the place, and raze it, 919, a.
The Gallies of Malta and Naples, their Exploits, 903, b. take a Venetian Ship, ib. b. force the Iſland of Langa, 904, a.
The Gallies of Sicily ſail into the Levant, 919, b. aſſail the Turks Gallies, ib. b.
Certain Gallies of the Turks taken by them of Florence, 898, b.
The Gallies of the Turks ſurpriſe Manfredonia, a Town in Naples, 918, a.
Galile ſpoiled, and the Caſtle of Bury taken by the Turks, 42, b.
Garzias of Toledo Viceroy of Sicilia after long delay at laſt ſetteth forward with his fleet to relieve the beſieged at Malta, 550, b. by Tempeſt driven into the Iſland of Auguſa, 551, b. arriveth at Malta, and landeth his men, 552, a.
Gazelles his wholeſome counſel unto Campſon, for protracting the war againſt Selymus, 358, b. coming to have oppreſſed Sinan Baſſa at Gaza, is by him himſelf overthrown, 362, b. 363, a. his notable ſpeech in ſubmitting himſelf to Selymus, 371, b. by Selymus made Governour of Syria, 379, a. rebelleth againſt Solyman, 382, a. ſlain, ib. a.
Gaza yielded unto Sinan Baſſa, 362, b.
George the Deſpot of Servia, a Man of no Religion, 242, b. driven out of his Kingdom by Amurath, 277, b. reſtored by King Uladiſlaus, 297, a. denieth paſſage unto Scanderbeg through his Country, 201, a. glad to crave Aid of Huniades, whom he had before evilly entreated, 212, a. his death, 242, b.
George Biſhop of Veradium a notable man, 470, a. murthered in his own houſe, 511, b.
Geordiron the Phyſician notably deludeth the Janizaries and Spahi of the Court, 171, b.
George Baſta by the Emperour appointed Lieutenant General for his Wars in the upper Hungary, 772, b. commanded by Matthias the Arch-duke, to give Aid unto Michael the Vayvod againſt the Tranſilvanians, aideth them againſt him, 785, b. in a great battel overthroweth the Vayvod, 787, a. his ſtout ſpeech to the Chiaki and the reſt of the Nobility of Tranſilvania, 789, a. his error, ib. b. received by the Tranſilvanians as the Emperours Lieutenant, until further order were by him taken for the Government of that Province, 790, a. ſuddenly taken Priſoner by the Tranſilvanians, 796, a. ſet at liberty, and aided by Michael the Vayvod, overthroweth Sigiſmund the Tranſilvanian Prince with a great ſlaughter, and driveth him out of his Country, ib. b. conſpireth the death of Michael the Vayvod, 797, a. taketh in moſt part of the Country of Tranſilvania for the Emperour, ib. b. for fear of Sigiſmund and the Tranſilvanians, flieth, ib. b. in battel overthroweth Zachel Moyſes the Tranſilvanian Princes Lieutenant, and bringeth that Country again under the Emperours Obeiſance, 798, b.
Georgians, their manner of Salutation, 925, a.
The Germans in Tyrna forced to wear Hungarian Garments, 863, b.
Gervaiſe Rogers an Engliſh man commended for his good Service at the Siege of the Rhodes, 293, b.
Geraſimus the Patriarch dealeth unfaithfully with the old Emperour Andronicus, 112, a.
Giaffer Captain of the Janizaries ſlain, 444, a.
Giaffer the Eunuch Baſſa of Tripolis by Oſman Baſſa with a Garriſon of twelve thouſand Soldiers left Governour of Tauris, 700, a. beſieged by the Perſian Prince, 702, b. prayeth Aid of Cicala Baſſa, 703, a. put to flight, 767, b.
Godfrey Duke of Lorrain, with other the Chriſtian Princes with an Army of 300000 fighting men undertaketh the firſt expedition into the Holy Land, 10, b. concludeth a League with Alexius the Greek Emperour, 11, a. beſiegeth Nice, and taketh it, 11, b. in a great battel overthroweth Sultan Solyman with his Turks, taketh Antiochia in Piſidia, Iconium and Heraclea, winneth Cilicia, Armenia, and Capadocia, 12, a. putteth the Turks to flight at the River Orantes, 13, a. after long ſiege taketh Antioche in Syria, 14, a. winneth Jeruſalem by aſſault, 16, b. choſen King of Jeruſalem, 17, a. his Letters to Bohemund King of Antioche, ib. b. in a great and mortal battel overthroweth the Turks at Aſcalon, 17, b. crowned King of Jeruſalem, and dieth of the Plague, ib. b.
Gokara ſurpriſed by the Haiducks, 858, b.
The Governour of Alba-Regalis taken, 557, b. his ſharp anſwer unto a Spaniard, ib. b.
Graſhoppers ſpoil the Country about Conſtantinople, 910, a.
Great treaſure found by the Turks at the winning of Conſtantinople, 236, b.
A Greek Prieſt his notable Speech perſwading the Great Maſter of the Rhodes to yield up the City, 400, a. with the moſt reſolute anſwer of a common Soldier to the contrary, ib. b. and that his Speech notably refelled by a Greek, and the yielding of the City urged, 401, a.
The Greek Church by Michael Palæologus the Greek Emperour ſubjected to the Church of Rome, and why, 80, b.

The Greeks careleſs of the Turks firſt ſmall footing in Cherſoneſus, jeaſt thereat, 129, b.

The Guiſe Lord Grand Prior of the Knights of St. Johns in France, Admiral of Malta taketh certain of the Turks Gallies, 519, b.

Guletta how ſituated, 442, b. beſieged by Charles the Emperour, ib. b. furiouſly battered, 443, b. aſſaulted and won, 445, a. beſieged by the Turks, 620, a. taken from the Chriſtians, ib. a.

Guy County of Joppa and Aſcalon the ninth and laſt King of Jeruſalem, 44, a. in a battel overthrown and taken Priſoner by Saladin, 45, a. ſet at liberty beſiegeth Ptolemais, and fighteth a great battel with Saladin, 46, a.

H.

HAalon Brother to Mango the Great Cham of Tartaria, with a great Army invadeth the Turks, 79, a. his great Victories againſt the Turks, ib. b.

Hadrianople yielded unto the Turks, 131, b. by Amurath the Firſt made the Royal ſeat of his Kingdom in Europe, 132, b.

Haider marrieth Martha the Daughter of the great King Uſun-Caſſanes by Deſpina, and hath by her Hyſmael afterwards King of Perſia, 316, a.

Haider murthered by Jacup the Perſian King, 330, a.

The Haiducks ſurpriſe the Turks, 847, b. what manner of Soldiers they are, ib. b. take the Caſtle of Reouin, 848, a. and divers other places, 856, b. ſlay Copell and Pettinger, two of the Emperours Captains, and ſpoil their Companies, 857, a. ranſack the Iſle of Strigonium, 867, b. do great harm in the upper Hungary, 874, b. incenſed againſt the Turks and Tartars, truſt neither of them, 876, a. raiſe new ſtirs in Hungary, 879, a. conſpire againſt the Germans, 882, b. ſix hundred intercepted by Humanour, ib. b. refuſe to allow of the Pacification made at Vienna, 886, a.

Haly Baſſa ſlain, 597, a. the Greek that ſlew him honourably rewarded, 599, a.

Hamon the Jew for his Treachery juſtly rewarded by Selymus, 338, b.

Hardeck Governour of Rab corrupted, yieldeth the City unto the Turks, 734, a. executed at Vienna, 735, a.

Haſſan Baſſa honourably received at Conſtantinople after the winning of Alba-Regalis, 809, a. in great danger of his Life, 809, b. perſuadeth the Grand Seignior to humour the mutined Souldiers, 810, a. his excuſe to the Mutiniers, ib. b. appointed General in the Turks Wars in Hungary, 845, b. ſent for to Conſtantinople, 846, a. continued General, and cometh into Hungary, 850, a.

Haſſan Baſſa relieveth the diſtreſſed Turks in Garriſon at Teflis, 667, b. breaketh promiſe with Aliculi Chan, 668, b. rewarded for his good Service, 669, a. ſent by Ferat Baſſa to the relief of Teflis, 682, a. again rewarded by Amurath, ib. a. left by Ferat with a Garriſon of 8000 Souldiers in the new Fort at Tomanis, 684, a. General of Sultan Mahomets Army in Hungary, cometh out of ſeaſon to relieve Alba-Regalis, 794, a.

Haſſan Baſſa the Queens Eunuch ſent Governour to Caire, 690, b. caſt in Priſon at Conſtantinople, and his evil gotten Goods confiſcated, 691, b. his life ſpared at the interceſſion of the Queen, and he himſelf ſet at liberty, ib. b.

Haſſan Baſſa of Boſna inciteth Amurath to make War upon the Emperour, 713, b. taketh Wihitz the Metropolitical City of Croatia, 714, b. loadeth ſix Wagons with the heads of the ſlain Chriſtians, ib. b. ſpoileth Turopolis, 715, a. deceived by the Abbot of Siſeg, 718, a, b. his threatning Letters unto the Abbot, ib. b. beſiegeth Siſeg, ib. b. in a great battel overthrown, 719, b. drowned, ib. b.

Hatwan beſieged by the Chriſtians, [illegible] taken by aſſault, ib. b. again forſaken by the Chriſtians, ib. b.

Hatwan taken and diſmantled by Maximilian the Arch-duke, 800, a. again fortified by the Turks, ib. a. beſieged by the Chriſtians, ib. a. yielded unto them, ib. b. abandoned by the Chriſtian Garriſon, 831, a.

Henry Brother to Baldwin choſen ſecond Emperour of the Latines in Conſtantinople, 60, b.

Henry Duke of Saxony with a great Army ſent into the Holy Land by Henry the Sixth, Emperour of Germany, goeth accompanied with many great Princes, 51, b. falling ſick of a fever, dieth, 52, a.

Henry the French King by his Ambaſſadour ſolliciteth Solyman to invade the King of Spain's Territories, 518, b.

Heraclius the Greek Emperour by the help of the Arabians recovereth Siria and the Holy City from Choſroë the Perſian King, 16, a.

Haccata the Tartar by his Captains ſubdueth Armenia the greater, Cholchis, and Iberia, 53, b. ſucceeding his Father Zingis, invadeth the Eaſt and Weſt parts of Aſia, ſubdueth the Eaſt-Indies, and buildeth Cambalu, ib. a. driveth the Turks out of Perſia, and ſubdueth many Countries, ib. b.

Horruccius and Hariadenus how they of baſe Pyrats aſpired to the Kingdom of Algiers, 418, b. Horruccius his ſucceſs, 420, a. ſlain, and his Head in triumph carried about in Spain, ib. a.

Hungary divided into two factions upon the choice of Uladiſlaus King of Polonia, 113, b. again divided upon the diſſention betwixt King Ferdinand and King John, 407, b. becometh tributary to Solyman, and by him converted into the form of a Province of the Turkiſh Empire, 481, a.

Hungary, the Hungarians miſery, 841, a. upper Hungary by the Turks and Tartars ſpoyled and burnt, 853, b. great Towns taken and rifled by the Rebels, 864, a.

Huniades by King Uladiſlaus made Vayvod of Tranſilvania, 181, a. in a great battel overthroweth Iſa-Beg, Amurath's Lieutenant in Servia, ib. b. overthroweth Meſites Baſſa, and killeth him with twenty thouſand Turks more, 183, a. of the ſpoil of the Turks ſendeth a Preſent unto King Uladiſlaus and the Deſpot of Servia, 183, b. his moſt Chriſtian ſpeech to encourage his Soldiers againſt the Turks, 184, b. in a great and mortal battel overthroweth Abedin Baſſa with his Army at Vaſcape, 186, b. with ten thouſand Horſemen overthroweth a great Army of the Turks by Night, 189, a. eight times repulſeth the Turks purſuing him in his retreat down the Mountain Hemus, 190, a. with a great ſlaughter diſcomfiteth Carambey the Baſſa of Romania, and taketh him Priſoner, 191, a. flying out of the battel of Varna, taken Priſoner by Dracula, Vayvod of Valachia, 203, a. by general conſent choſen Governour of Hungary in the minority of King Ladiſlaus, 207, b. goeth againſt the Turks, 208, a. with a notable ſpeech encourageth his Soldiers againſt the Turks, 209, a. fighteth three days together with Amurath in the Plains of Coſſova, 209, a. 210, b. overcome, flyeth, 211, a. falleth into the hands of two notable thieves, 211, b. in doubt of a Shepherd, is by him relieved, 211, b. taken Priſoner by the falſe Deſpot, ib. b. ſet at liberty, revengeth himſelf upon him, ib. b. requeſted, giveth him aid againſt the Turks, 212, a. his moſt Chriſtian-like death, 244, a.

The Huſſians moſt traiterouſly ſpoil their Friends, 856, b.

Hyſmael after the death of his Father Haider flyeth to his Fathers Friend Pyrchales, 316, b. his behaviour in the time of his exile, 317, a. recovereth his Inheritance, ib. b. taketh Summachia, ib. b. obtaineth obtaineth Tauris, 319, a. overcometh Elvan the Perſian King, and killeth him, 319, b. peaceably poſſeſſeth Seyras, ib. b. perſecuteth his Fathers Enemies, ib. b. putteth Morat-chan to flight, and obtaineth the Perſian Kingdom, 319, a. b. the deſcription of his Perſon, ib. b. cometh to his Army at Coy, 345, a. ſendeth an Herald unto Selymus, 346, a. with 30000 Perſians giveth battel to Selymus with 300000 Turks, 346, b. diſcomfited, 348, b. the cauſe why he came with ſo ſmall an Army againſt Selymus, 352, a. his large Territories, ib. a. the reaſon why he invaded not Selymus wholly buſied in the Ægyptian Wars, ib. b.

Jacup Arnaute ſlain, and his Army diſcomfited by Scanderbeg, 272, b.
Jachia ſuppoſed Brother to Sultan Achmat, 926, a. becometh a Chriſtian, ib. b. joyneth with the Rebels of Aſia, ib. b. is defeated and wounded, ib. b. ſendeth to Conſtantinople, and corrupteth the Viſier, ib. b. his Life in danger at Cracovia, 927, a. repaireth to Prague to the Emperour, ib. a. cometh to Florence, and is honourably entertained, ib. a. goeth to Naples and Milan, ib. b. cometh to Rome, ib. b.
Jagermenner beſieged, 840, a.
The Janizaries firſt inſtituted by Amurath the Firſt, 132, a. 133, b. ſtand upon their Guard, and reviling Bajazet their Emperour, refuſe to receive him among them, 302, a. in mutiny againſt Selymus, 348, b. up in arms againſt Solyman for the unworthy death of the noble Muſtapha, 516, b. promiſe to be in the quarrel of Selymus againſt his Brother Bajazet, 531, a. their inſolent and threatning ſpeech unto Ferat Baſſa their General, 680, b. in a Tumult at Conſtantinople, 707, b. in an uproar with the Spahi, 772, b. threaten the depoſing of their Emperour, 776, b. in mutiny at Conſtantinople, 798, a.
Janizaries, they murther Mahomet Baſſa, 811, a. mutiny againſt the Viſier and the cauſe why, 832, a. again in mutiny, 871, a. mutiny againſt the Baſſa of Buda, 880, b. againſt the Grand Seignior, and the great Viſier ſlain by them, 909, b. they demand Muſtapha, 970, a. ſpoil the Houſes of the Chriſtians, 976, a.
Jathatines Sultan of Iconium ſucceedeth his Father Aladin, 60, b. beſieging Antiochia, is ſlain by Theodorus Laſcaris the Greek Emperour, 61, a.
Jathatines the ſecond of that Name, Sultan of Iconium, maketh great preparation againſt the Tartars, 76, b. overthrown, flieth to the Greek Emperour Theodorus for Aid, 77, a. maketh Peace with the Tartars, and yieldeth them a yearly Tribute, ib. a. again by them oppreſſed, flieth to Palæologus the Emperour at Nice, 80, a. dyeth in exile, 82, a.
Ibrahim Baſſa by Amurath made Governour of Caire, 686, b. oppreſſeth the People, and enricheth himſelf, 691, b. goeth againſt the Druſians, 692, a. ſpoileth the Country of Man-Ogli the Druſian Lord, 694, b. with Fire and Sword deſtroyeth the Country of Seraphadin, 695, a. createth Aly-Ebne-Carfus Baſſa of the Druſians, ib. b. the rich Preſents by him given to Amurath and the Ladies of the Court, 696, a. in danger to have been taken, 696, b. flieth out of the battel of Agria, 768, a. ſent again General into Hungary, 772, b. cometh to Buda, 777, b. purpoſing War, entreateth of Peace, ib. b. with a great Army beſiegeth Caniſia, 790, b. hath the Town yielded unto him, 791, a. his Letters unto County Serinus, ib. b. returneth with his Army to Belgrade, 792, a. dieth, 793, a.
Jeremie Vayvod of Valachia, dieth, 886, a.
Jeſuites, certain of them go to Mengrelia, 924, b. Shipwreckt, 925, a. entertained by a Prince in Aſia, ib. b. Jeſuites accuſed at Conſtantinople, 933, a. impriſoned, ib. a. ſet at liberty, ib. b.
Illieshazius abuſed by the Hungarians, 875, b. choſen Palatine of Hungary, 891, a. dieth, 893, a.
Imalier what men they be amongſt the Turks, 325, a.
Imirza ſtirreth up Solyman againſt his Brother Tamas the Perſian King, 508, a. betrayed to his Brother Tamas, and by him murthered in Priſon, 508, b.
Innocency of great force, 529, a.
John Batazes made Emperour of the Greeks in Aſia, 68, b. taketh in many Iſlands of the Ægeum, and forrageth the Country of Thracia even to the Gates of Conſtantinople, being very aged dyeth, 75, b.
John County de Brenne by Innocentius the Pope appointed King of Jeruſalem, 61, b. in deriſion called Royſauns ville, ib. b.
John Caſtriot Prince of Epirus for fear giveth his four Sons in Hoſtage unto Amurath, 177, a.
John Sepuſius, Vayvod of Tranſilvania, choſen and crowned King of Hungary, 407, a. after the battel of Toccay flieth into Polonia, 408, a. by Laſcus his Ambaſſador craveth Aid of Solyman, 409, a. cometh to Solyman at Belgrade, 410, a. by him reſtored to the Kingdom of Hungary, 414, a. in his old years marrieth Iſabella the Daughter of King Sigiſmund, 469, a. dieth, ib. b.
Don John of Auſtria General of the confederate Princes forces, 584, b. in a terrible fight encountreth with Haly Baſſa in the battel of Lepanto, 597, a. killeth him, ib. a. in doubt whether to ſend them Aid or not, 602, b. ſendeth word unto the Confederates to meet him at Zacynthus, 605, b. faileth them, 606, a. meeteth them at Corcyra, ib. b. offereth the Turks battel, 607, a. refuſeth to follow the Counſel of the Venetian Admiral, 607, b. breaketh promiſe with him, and returneth to Meſſana, 610, b.
John the Vayvod of Moldavia falleth into ſuſpicion with the Turks, 614, a. his notable ſpeech unto his Nobility and Subjects, concerning the Turks demand, ib. b. in vain craveth Aid of the King of Polonia, 616, a. with a great ſlaughter overthroweth the Palatine and the Turks, 616, a. giveth the Turks a ſecond overthrow, ib. b. betrayed by Czarnieuich, 617, b. overthrown by the Turks, 618, a. ſhamefully and perfidiouſly by them murthered, 619, a.
Jonima, Ballabanus his Brother, and Hedar his Son taken Priſoners by Scanderbeg, 273, b.
Jonuſes Baſſa ſent againſt Techellis, putteth him to flight, 234, a. hurt at the winning of Caire, 371, a. envyeth at the unworthy preferment of Cayerbeius, 376, a. is himſelf ſecretly hated of Selymus, ib. b. put to death, 377, b.
Irene the fair Greek beheaded by Mahomet the Great, 240, a.
Iſa after the Captivity of his Father Bajazet, ſeiſeth upon the City of Pruſa, 159, b. overthrown in battel by his Brother Mahomet, 162, b. with a great Army ſent by his Brother Solyman againſt Mahomet, 164, a. burneth Pruſa, ib. b. dieth in Obſcurity, 165, a.
Iſmael laſt of the Iſfendiars yieldeth his Principality of Caſtamona and Sinope to Mahomet the Great, 245, a.
Iſkender Baſſa overthrown by Aladules, taken and ſent Priſoner to Caitbeius to Caire, 551, b.
Ilan of a Priſoner made a King, 688, a.
Iſmael the Son of King Tamas ſaluted King of Perſia, 653, a. murthereth eight of his younger Brethren, altereth the Perſian Religion, and tyranniſeth, ib. b.

niseth, ib. b. by the device of his Sister Periaconcona himself murthered, ib. b.

The Italians left by the Emperour for the Aid of King Ferdinand in his Wars in Hungary, rise in mutiny, 420, b. eight thousand of them forsake their Captains, and return into Italy, 421, b.

Julia Gonzaga a fair Lady of Italy put in great fear by Barbarussa, 432, a.

Julian the Cardinal sent by Pope Urban to appease the dissention in Hungary, and to stir up the Hungarians against the Turks, 187, b. his effectual speech in Parliament to perswade the War, 187, b. cunningly perswadeth King Uladislaus to break the honourable and solemn League he had before made with Amurath, 198, a. disanulleth the League, absolving the King and the rest from their Oath before given to Amurath, 199, a. himself slain, 203, b.

K.

The Kingdom of Hungary by Solyman converted into a Province of the Turkish Empire, 481, a.

The King of Spain's Edict for the banishment of the Morisques or new Christians, 899, a.

The King of Fez besiegeth Morocco, and is defeated, 914, a.

The Knights of Malta crave Aid of Garzias the Viceroy of Sicilia, 543, a. his cold answer, 544, b.

Komara besieged by Sinan Bassa, 734, b.

Koppan surprised by the Christians, 706, a.

L.

Ladislaus a Child crowned King of Hungary at Alba-Regalis, 177, a.

Lazarus Despot of Servia becometh tributary unto Amurath the First, 134, a. purposing to make war against Amurath, craveth Aid of the King of Bosna, 136, b. in a mortal battel overthrown in the Plains of Cossova and slain, 139, a.

League betwixt the Turks and Hollanders, 916, b.

Leopold the Arch-duke, his proceedings in Bohemia, 897, b.

Lepanto yielded to the Turks, 312, b.

Letters.

Of Achmet Bassa to Collonitz concerning a Peace, 821, b. of the Bassa of Buda to Collonel Althem, 835, a. another, 844, a. of Hassan the Visier, and of Begedes Bassa, to the German Soldiers besieged in the Castle of Vicegrade, 859, a. of Collonitz to a certain Nobleman, concerning the Troubles in Hungary, 861, a. of Botscay to the Nobility and States of Hungary, 862, a. from a Citizen of Vienna, declaring the miseries of Hungary, 864, b. of the German Emperour to the Persian King, 873, a. from the Persian to the Spaniard, 881, a. of Confederation betwixt the States of Austria and Hungary, 885, b. of the Emperour to the Reformed States of Bohemia, for the free exercise of their Religion, 894, b. from Sultan Achmat to the Emperour, and his answer thereunto, 923, a. from Sultan Osman to the French King, 949, a. to the King of Great Brittain, 951, a. from Halil Bassa to the English Ambassador, ib. b. from the King of Great Brittain to Sultan Osman, 966, a. from the Grand Seignior to the King of Great Brittain, 968, a.

Lewis the Eighth of that Name, the French King, making an Expedition into the Holy Land, is by the malice of Emanuel the Greek Emperour therein much hindered, 24, b. he besiegeth Damasco, where by the envy of the other Christian Princes he was enforced to raise his siege, and so to return home into his Country, 25, a.

Lewis the Ninth, the French King, making an Expedition towards the Holy Land, arriveth in Damieta, 71, b. 72, a. taketh the City forsaken by the Turks, 90, b. with his whole Army overthrown, and himself taken Prisoner, 91, a. undertaketh a second Expedition toward the Holy Land, with his Sons and most of his Nobility, 93, a. overthroweth the Moors, and besiegeth Tunes, ib. b. falleth sick of the bloody flix and dieth, ib. b.

Lewis the Eleventh, the French King, giveth Aid unto the Venetians against the Turks, 314, a.

Lewis King of Hungary, with an Army of five and twenty thousand, fondly goeth against Solyman, being two hundred and sixty thousand strong, 405, a. overthrown in his flight, drowned in a ditch, 406, a.

Liscanus the covetous Spaniard dealeth uncourteously with Perenus, 495, a. himself in like sort served, and merrily stripped of his wealth by Hali Captain of the Janizaries, 499, a.

Lissa taken by the Turks, and the bones of Scanderbeg digged up, and by them worn for Jewels, 290, b.

Lodronius encourageth his Soldiers, 491, a. jested at by an old Soldier, ib. a. slain, and his Head, with the Heads of two other Captains in a Silver Bason presented to Solyman at Constantinople, 492, a.

Losses of the Turkish and Polish Armies in Sultan Osmans's Expedition against them, 963, a.

Lugaze, a strong place delivered to Basta, 838, a.

M.

Mahomet the First sendeth Spies into Tamerlane's Camp, 160, a. becometh famous in Tamerlane's Court, 161, a. in battel overthroweth his Brother Isa, 162, a. honourably buried the body of his Father Bajazet at Prusa, 163, a. again overthroweth his Brother Isa supported by his Brother Solyman, 163, b. giveth him a third overthrow, together with the other Mahometan Princes his Confederates, 164, a. besieged by his Brother Solyman in Amasia, 165, a. upon report of his Brother Musa's evil Government, goeth against him into Europe, 167, a. overthrown, flieth back again into Asia, ib. b. cometh again into Europe, 168, a. besiegeth Hadrianople, ib. b. overthroweth his Brother Musa in battel, and causeth him being taken Prisoner to be strangled, 169, a. wholly possesseth the Othoman Kingdom both in Europe and Asia, ib. b. oppresseth Orchanes his Brother Solymans Son, and putteth out his Eyes, 170, a. taketh the Caramanian King and his Son Prisoners, ib. a. enforceth the Valachian Prince to become his Tributary, ib. a. dieth at Hadrianople, 171, a. his death cunningly concealed by the three great Bassa's, ib. a. he worthily accounted the restorer of the Othoman Kingdom, almost quite overthrown by Tamerlane, ib. b.

Mahomet the Second, surnamed the Great, an Atheist, of no Religion, 229, a. murthereth his Brethren, ib. b. reformeth the Turks Common-wealth, ib. b. subdueth Mentesia, 230, b. winneth Constantinople, 236, a. solemniseth his Feasts in Constantinople with the Blood of the Grecian Nobility, 237, a. notably dissembleth his hatred against Caly Bassa, ib. b. first Emperour of the Turks, 238, a. amorous of the fair Greek Irene, ib. b. with his own hand striketh off her Head, 240, b. besiegeth Belgrade, 243, a. wounded and carried away for dead, 244, a. falsifieth his Faith with David the Emperour of Trapezond, 245, b. seeketh to entrap Wladus Prince of Valachia, ib. b. in danger to have been slain by Wladus Dracula his Ganymede, 247, a, b. his Letters to Scanderbeg, 262, a. sueth to Scanderbeg to have the League renewed betwixt them, 266, a. cometh himſelf in Perſon to the Siege of Croia, ib. forſaketh the Siege of Croia, 274, b. breaketh his faith with Paulus Ericus, Governour of Chalcis, 276, b. he is no leſs troubleſome unto the Mahometane Princes than to the Chriſtians, 278, a. cometh himſelf to the Siege of Scodra, 284, b. notably encourageth his Captains and Souldiers to a general aſſault, 285, b. melancholy for the repulſe of his men, 287, a. blaſphemeth, 289, a. curſeth Epirus, and ſo returneth to Conſtantinople, 290, b. by Meſites Palæologus one of his great Baſſa's beſiegeth the Rhodes, 291, b. invadeth Italy, and by Achmetes his great Captain taketh Otranto, 295, a. going againſt the Caramanian King, dieth by the way at Giviſen, in Bythinia, not without ſuſpition of Poyſon, and lieth buried at Conſtantinople, ib. b.

have

Mahometes one of the Viſier Baſſa's by the mutinous Janizaries ſlain, 297, a.
Mahometes the Son of Caytbeius, with four Sultans more, one after another ſlain by the Mamalukes, 306, b.
Mahometes Solymans Son diſguiſed, goeth to ſee his Brother Achmates, 325, a. as a Sea-fairing man cometh diſguiſed to Conſtantinople, and ſo into his Fathers Court, ib. a. by the commandment of his ſuſpicious Father poyſoned, dieth, 325, b.
Mahometes, Governour of Belgrade, aided by the other Sanzacks, maketh head againſt Cazzianer, General of King Ferdinands Army, 456, b. wiſely refuſeth battel offered by Cazzianer, and by temporizing diſtreſſeth the Army of the Chriſtians, 458, b. troubleth the Chriſtians in their retreat, 459, b. giveth them a great overthrow, 461, b. cometh to the relief of Belgrade, 476, a. his vehement Oration unto Solyman to perſwade him to take the Kingdom of Hungary into his own hands, and ſo to unite it unto his own Empire, 480, a.
Mahomet the Tartar King with his two Sons, ſtrangled by Oſman Baſſa, 688, a.
Mahomet Baſſa in deſpight of Sinan ſent General of his Army for the relief of his Garriſons in Chars and Teflis, 675, b. diſcomfited by the Georgians, and his proviſion of Money and Victuals taken from him, 676, b. with his diſcomfited Army arriveth at Teflis, ib. b. his heavy Oration in the Caſtle of Teflis, 677, a. maketh a Purſe for the relief of the diſtreſſed Garriſon, ib. b. plotteth the death of Manucchiar the Georgian, ib. b. himſelf in danger to have been by the Georgian ſlain, 678, a.
Mahomet the Third ſaluted Emperour of the Turks, 741, a. murthereth his Brethren, and cauſeth certain of his Fathers Wives and Concubines to be drowned, ib. a. with much ado appeaſeth the mutinous Janizaries, ib. b. ſendeth Ambaſſadors unto the Tranſilvanian Prince, 745, b. careful of Strigonium beſieged by the Chriſtians, 747, b. perplexed, 761, a. refuſeth the continuance of his Wars againſt the Emperour and the Tranſilvanians to be proclaimed at Conſtantinople, 762, a. cometh to Buda with an Army of two hundred thouſand men, 765, b. beſiegeth Agria, 766, a. furiouſly aſſaulteth it, ib. a. hath it yielded unto him, 767, a. with Ibrahim the Great Baſſa flyeth out of the battel of Kareſta, 768, a. by the Tranſilvanians and Valachians troubled in his return to Conſtantinople, ib. b. his Ambaſſadour contemned by the Perſian King, [illegible], b.
Mahomet the Grand Seignior ſheweth himſelf to the mutinous Souldiers, 810, a. with mild words ſeeketh to appeaſe them, ib. b. his cruelty, 811, a. in danger of being depoſed, 812, a. cauſeth his eldeſt Son with divers others to be ſtrangled, ib. b. ſeeketh to pacifie the Rebels in Aſia, but cannot, 821, a. and therefore offers Peace to the Chriſtians, ib. a. troubled in his Affairs, 824, b. dieth, 834, b. reaſons why he was not regarded of his men of War, 835, b. his Iſſue, ib. b. the manner of his Monument at Conſtantinople, 835, b.
The Mahometan Princes of the leſſer Aſia oppreſſed by Bajazet, diſguiſed, fly unto Tamerlane for relief, 145, a.
Malta deſcribed, 737, a. invaded by the Turks, 538, a.
Mamalukes, the beginning of their Kingdom in Ægypt, 356, b. their Imperious Government in Ægypt, Judæa, and Syria, ib. a. their Kingdom utterly ſubverted by Selymus, 375, b. the Mamalukes in Priſon at Alexandria, by the commandment of Selymus murthered, ib. b.
Manto cruelly ſlain by her jealous Husband Jonuſes, 378, a.
Man-Ogli his Letters to Ibrahim Baſſa, 693, a. ſendeth him Preſents, 694, a.
Manucchiar his ſpeech to Muſtapha the Viſier Baſſa, 659, b. with his Brother Alexander by Muſtapha ſent to Amurath, 663, b. turneth Turk, and hath his elder Brothers Principality given him, 666, b. in danger to have been betrayed by Mahomet Baſſa, 677, b. notably revengeth himſelf of the Treachery by the Baſſa intended againſt him, 678, a. revolteth from the Turks, and doth them great harm, 682, a.
Marquis S. Crucis taketh one of the Turks Gallies in ſight of their whole fleet, 608, a.
Marriage Rites with great Pomp ſolemnized by the Turks, 907, a, b.
The Maſſagets entertained by Andronicus againſt the Turks, ſpoil his Countries in Aſia, 104, a. in their return homeward, themſelves ſpoiled by the Catalonians and Turcopuli, 106, b.
Maſut the Sultan of Iconium divideth his Kingdom among his three Sons, 26, a.
Matthias the Arch-duke, the Emperours Lieutenant taketh Novigrade from the Turks, 724, b. beſiegeth Strigonium, 726, b. raiſeth his ſiege, 729, a. ſhamefully put to flight by the Turks, 733, a.
Matthias Coruinus of a Priſoner choſen King of Hungary, 269, a. at the requeſt of the Senate, taketh a great part of the Venetian Territory into his Protection againſt the Turks, ib. a. relieveth the Vayvod of Tranſilvania, 291, a. no leſs dreadful unto the Turks than was his Father Huniades, 275, b.
Matthias the Arch-duke cometh to Presburg, 885, a. prepareth for an Expedition into Moravia, 886, b. cometh to Zname, 887, a. hath the Crown of Hungary delivered unto him, 889, a. departeth with his Army out of Bohemia, ib. b. royally received at Vienna, ib. b. crowned at Presburg, 891, a. ſends an Ambaſſador to Conſtantinople, 913, b.
Maximilian the Arch-duke ſent to the Pope to crave Aid againſt the Turks, 146, b.
Maximilian choſen King of the Romans, and after crowned King of Hungary, 533, a. he and Solyman both deſirous of Peace, 560, a. he ſendeth Ambaſſadors to Solyman, 561, a. Preſents given by the Ambaſſadors unto the Baſſa of Buda, ib. b. his Ambaſſadors honourably received by the Turks at Conſtantinople, 562, a. Preſents given by the Ambaſſadors unto the Great Baſſa's, ib. a. Preſents ſent to Selymus, ib. b. a homely Feaſt given to the Ambaſſadors Followers in the Turks Court, 563, b. the Ambaſſadors brought in unto Selymus, with the manner of the entertainment of them and their Followers, 564, a. a Peace con-concluded betwixt Maximilian and Selymus, 565, a.

Maximilian the Arch-duke by the Emperour his Brother appointed General of his Army in Hungary, 765, a. marcheth but ſlowly to the relief of Agria, 766, b. flieth out of the battel of Kareſta, 768, b.

Maylat treacherouſly taken Priſoner by Peter the Moldavian, 483, b.

Meligalus a notable Traitor perſwadeth Mahomet to beſiege the Rhodes, 291, b. his worthy death, ib. b.

Meledin Sultan of Egypt,, and Corradin Sultan of Damaſco, ſend Ambaſſadors for Peace to the Chriſtian Princes at the Siege of Damiata, recovereth Damiata, before taken by the Chriſtians, 63, b. overthroweth the Chriſtians, and raſeth Jeruſalem, 71, a. dieth, 72, b.

Melechſala Sultan of Egypt overthroweth Robert Earl of Arthois the French Kings Brother, 73, b. taketh Lewis the French King Priſoner, and overthroweth his Army, 74, b. maketh Peace with the French King, and is ſuddenly ſlain by two Mamalukes, ib. b.

Melech the Egyptian Sultan invadeth Syria, and winneth Damaſco from the Tartars, 80, a.

Melechſares the Ægyptian Sultan determining to root out all the Chriſtians in Syria and the Land of Paleſtine, is by ſudden death taken away, 86, a.

Melechſala Sultan of Damaſco by the Treaſon of his Nobility diſpoſſeſſed of his Kingdom, 41, b.

Meſites Baſſa ſent by Amurath to invade Tranſilvania, 182, a. he with 20000 Turks more ſlain by Huniades, 183, a.

Meysberg's Regiment in mutiny, 841, b.

Michna's Souldiers defeated by Prince Alexanders Troops, 935, a. flieth, ib. a. ſends an Ambaſſador to Prince Alexander, ib. b. proclaimed Prince of Moldavia, 936, b.

Michael Ducas the Greek Emperour by Nicephorus Botoniates depoſed of his Empire, after he had reigned ſix years and ſix months, 8. b.

Michael Palæologus flieth to the Sultan of Iconium, 76, b. called home again by the Emperour Theodorus, and made Great Conſtable, 77, a. aſpireth, and by common conſent made Tutor unto the young Emperour, 78, b. himſelf proclaimed Emperour and crowned, ib. b. by Alexius Cæſar his Lieutenant ſurpriſeth Conſtantinople, 81, a. repaireth the decayed City, ib. b. cauſeth the young Emperours Eyes to be put out, 82, a. his Army overthrown by the Turks in Paphlagonia, ib. b. ſubmitteth the Greek Church unto the Latine, and for what cauſe, 100, b. perſwadeth his Subjects to accept of the alteration of their Religion and Ceremonies, 101, a. raiſeth Perſecution in the Greek Church, ib. a. hindered by domeſtical trouble, hath no leiſure to attend unto the danger ariſing from the Turks in Aſia, ib. a. b. obſcurely buried, ib. b.

Michael Coſſi by Othoman taken Priſoner, by him again ſet at Liberty, 95, a. Father of the honourable Family of the Michael-Oglies among the Turks, ib. a. diſcovereth unto Oſman the Treaſon intended againſt him, 98, a. enforced rather than perſwaded by Othoman, turneth Turk, 100, a.

Michael the young Emperour overthrown by the Catalonians and Turks, in danger to have been taken, 106, a. again overthrown by the Turks at Cherſoneſus, 108, b.

Michael Horwat by Amurath created Vayvod of Valachia, 738, a. perſwaded by the Tranſilvanian Prince, revolteth from the Turks, and killeth all the Turks and Jews in his Country, 739, a. killeth one of the Turks proud Emirs with all his followers, ib. b. doth the Turks great harm, ib. b. ſuffereth the Turks Ambaſſadors unto the King of Polonia by his Subjects to be ſlain, 744, a. ſpoileth the Turks Frontiers, ib. a. yieldeth his obeyſance again unto the Turk, yet refuſeth to aid him againſt the Chriſtians, 669, a. weary of the Turk, ſubmitteth himſelf with his People to the Emperours protection, 770, a. ſacketh Nicopolis, 774, b. with a great Army entereth into Tranſilvania, 778, a. in a great battel overthroweth the Cardinal Bathor, ib. b. ſendeth his head for a Preſent to the Emperour, ib. b. hath the Government of Tranſilvania by the Emperour confirmed unto him, 783, a. receiveth Preſents from the Turk, ib. b. in a great battel overthroweth Sigiſmund the late Tranſilvanian Prince, with the Vayvod of Moldavia, 784, b. tyranniſeth in Tranſilvania, 785, a. enforced by the Tranſilvanians to fly, craveth Aid of George Baſta the Emperours Lieutenant in the upper Hungary, ib. a. by Baſta and the Tranſilvanians in a great battel overthrown at Miriſlo, 787, a. reconcileth himſelf to Baſta, ib. b. for fear of being betrayed unto the Polonians, taketh his flight into the Mountains, 788, a. by Zamoſchie the Great Chancellor driven out of Valachia, and another Vayvod there placed in his ſtead, ib. b. ſubmitteth himſelf unto the Emperour, 796, a. returning into Valachia, giveth Aid unto Baſta againſt Sigiſmund the Tranſilvanian, 796, b. having with Baſia driven the Prince out of Tranſilvania, with great inſolency uſeth his Victory, ib. b. his preſumptuous ſpeech to Baſta, 797, a. ſuddenly ſlain in his own Tent, ib. a.

The Mingrelians manner of feaſting, 925, b.

The Miſery of the Captive Conſtantinopolitans, 236, b.

Mitylene yielded unto the Turk, 248, a.

Modon taken by the Turks, 313, a.

Moldavia invaded by the Turks and Tartars, 908, b.

Monſieur Laual a valiant Gentleman ſlain, 867, b.

Morat, who then reigned, by the Viſier attempted to be made Sultan, and Muſtapha again depoſed, 974, a.

Moravia ſpoiled by the rebellious Haiducks, 863, a.

The Moriſques chaſe the Jews out of Pera, 917, a. practiſe againſt the Chriſtians, ib. a.

Moyſes the Tranſilvanian Rebel overthrown by Baſta, flies with his Wife and all his Family to the Turks, 815, b. entereth Tranſilvania with an Army, 817, a. beſiegeth the Town of Wiſſeburg, and taketh it, ib. b. winneth Claudinople, 818, a. deceived by the Turks, ib. b. putteth to flight the Valachians, 818, b. by them overthrown and ſlain, 819, a.

Moyſes Golemus corrupted, revolteth unto the Turk, 253, b. with an Army of the Turks by Mahomet ſent into Epyrus againſt Scanderbeg, 254, a. overcome and put to flight by Scanderbeg, 255, a. contemned of the Turks, flieth from Conſtantinople, and again ſubmitteth himſelf to Scanderbeg, ib. b. he with divers others of Scanderbegs beſt Captains by Balabanus taken Priſoners, and by Mahomet flain quick, 270, b.

Muhamat and Parrau, two of the Viſier Baſſa's, by the inſolent Janizaries ſhamefully murthered, 559, b.

Muhamet for fear of them for a time refraineth to come into the Divano, 559, b. diſſuadeth Selymus from the invading of Cyprus, 567, b. as a ſecret Friend unto the Venetians, putteth them in hope of Peace, 580, a. cunningly diſſuadeth Selymus from the [illegible] of the [illegible], by filling his Head with more neceſſary conſiderations, 608, b. ſtrangely murthered, 698, b.

Muleaſſes King of Tunes cruel and unthankful, 433, a. for fear of Barbaruſſa flieth out of Tunes, ib. b. ſumptuous in his fare, [illegible], a. cometh to Charles the Emperour, 443, a. his ſpeech unto the Emperour, ib. b. his behaviour, ib. b. his Opinion con-concerning the preſent War, 446, a. three things by him eſpecially lamented in the ſpoil made by the Chriſtians in the Caſtle of Tunes, 450, a. fearing the coming of Barbaruſſa, departeth from Tunes into Italy, to crave aid of Charles the Emperour, 503, b. ſhut out of his Kingdom in the mean time by his Son Amida, 504, a. returneth into Africk to Guletta, ib. a. going to Tunes, is by the way overthrown, taken Priſoner, and hath his Eyes put out by his own unnatural Son, 505, a. at the requeſt of Touares is ſent to Guletta, 506, a. by Charles the Emperour ſent into Sicily, there to be kept of the common charge, ib. b. refuſeth to kiſs the Popes Foot, ib. b.

Murzuffe by the tumultuous People created Emperour, attempteth to burn the Venetian Fleet, 57, a. with his own hands ſtrangleth the young Prince Alexis, ib. b. encourageth his Soldiers, ib. b. being in deſpair flyeth, 58, a.

Muſa Son to Bajazet the Firſt, his ſpeech unto his Brother Mahomet, 165, b. marrieth the Prince of Valachia's Daughter, 166, a. in the abſence of his Brother Solyman received at Hadrianople as King, ib. a. goeth againſt his Brother Solyman, ib. a. fighteth with his Brother Mahomet, 167, b. his chief Captains revolt to Mahomet, 169, a. taken and ſtrangled, ib. a.

Muſachius a Chriſtian Captain contendeth with a Turk his Priſoner for his ranſome, 250, a. is afterward ſlain, 252, b.

Muſtapha the ſuppoſed Son of Bajazet raiſeth Rebellion againſt Amurath, 173, a. being in fear, flyeth, 174, a. is ſhamefully hanged, ib. b.

Muſtapha the younger Son of Mahomet raiſeth new Troubles againſt Amurath, 175, b. is betrayed and ſtrangled, ib. b.

Muſtapha Baſſa ſent by Amurath againſt Scanderbeg, 206, b. being aſſaulted in his Camp, flyeth, ib. b. deſirous to redeem his former diſgrace, craveth leave of Amurath to enter into Epirus, and obtaineth it, 212, b. Amurath's Letters of advertiſement to Muſtapha, ib. b. fighteth with Scanderbeg the ſecond time, 213, b. is overthrown and taken Priſoner, ib. b. and afterwards ranſomed, 214, a.

Muſtapha Baſſa perſwadeth Solyman to the beſieging of the Rhodes, 383, a. upon the evil ſucceſs of the ſiege falleth into diſgrace with Solyman, 393, b. in danger with Pyrrhus Baſſa to have been executed, 396, a. made Governour of Caire, ib. b. by Solyman ſent as General of his Army to Malta, 536, b. landeth at the Port Marza-Siroc in the Iſle of Malta, 538, a. beſiegeth the Caſtle Saint Elmo, ib. a. aſſaulteth the Caſtle, ib. b. in vain giveth a ſecond aſſault, 539, a. with loſs aſſaulteth it the third time, ib. b. in moſt furious manner battereth it by the ſpace of eighteen days, and aſſaulteth it the fourth time, 540, a. with great fury giveth the fifth and moſt terrible aſſault unto the Caſtle, 541, a. with all his Army giveth the ſixth and laſt aſſault, 542, a. winneth the Caſtle, ib. b. exerciſeth moſt barbarous cruelty upon the bodies of the ſlain Knights, ib. b. in vain aſſaulteth the Caſtle Saint Michael, 546, b. at one time aſſaulteth the new City and the Caſtle Saint Michael, 547, b. he by Meſſengers certifieth Solyman of the ſucceſs of the ſiege, 548, a. leaveth nothing unattempted, 549, a. at once aſſaulteth the Towns Saint Angelo and Saint Michael, and in both places notably repulſed, ib. b. giveth a freſh aſſault and entreth the new City, 550, a. with a great ſlaughter driven out again, ib. b. deſperately aſſaulteth the Town of Saint Michael, 551, a. repulſed, raiſeth his ſiege, 552. b. put to flight by the Chriſtians, ib. b. having loſt above four and twenty thouſand of his Turks at the ſiege, departed from Malta, ib. b. he with Pial Baſſa impugneth the Counſel of Muhamet the chief of the Viſier Baſſa's, and perſwadeth Selymus to invade Cyprus, 567, b. for his hatred againſt the Chriſtians made general of his Army for the invaſion of Cyprus, 572, a. his Letters unto the Venetians in the Iſle of Cyprus, ib. b. he landeth his Army in Cyprus, 573, a. beſiegeth Nicoſia, 572, a. in vain perſwadeth them of Nicoſia to yield, 575, a. he encourageth his Souldiers, and giveth a moſt terrible aſſault, ib. b. winneth the City, 576, a. beſiegeth Famaguſta, 576, b. raiſeth his ſiege, 577, a. returneth again to the ſiege, 584, a. after many aſſaults hath the City by compoſition yielded unto him, 586, b. ſhamefully and contrary to his faith before given, murthereth the valiant Governour Bragadinus, 587, a. tyrannizeth upon his dead body, ib. b. by Amurath made General of his Army againſt the Perſians, 657, b. cometh to Erzirum, 658, a. muſtereth his Army in number an hundred and ten thouſand ſtrong, ib. a. relieveth his Soldiers diſtreſſed by the Perſians, 659, a. maketh a Bulwark of the Heads of the ſlain Perſians, ib. a. he ſurveyeth his Army at Archicheleck, and lacketh forty thouſand of his men, 660, a. fortifieth Teflis, ib. a. loſeth ten thouſand of his forragers, 661, a. revengeth their deaths, ib. b. his notable anſwer unto his mutinous Soldiers, ib. b. loſeth eight thouſand of his men in paſſing the River Canac, 662, a. famine in his hoſt, ib. b. he fortifieth Eres, ib. b. ſendeth Oſman Baſſa to take in Sumachia and Derbent, ib. b. relieveth his diſtreſſed Garriſon at Teflis, 663, a. his Army in great miſery in paſſing the ſtreights of Georgia, ib. a. cometh to Erzirum and diſchargeth his Army, ib. b. maketh preparation for the next years Wars, 666, b. aſſembleth his Army at Erzirum, 667, b. in three and twenty days fortifieth Chars, ib. b. ſendeth ſuccor to Teflis, ib. b. returneth to Erzirum, and there diſchargeth his Army, 668, b. diſcharged of his Generalſhip, and called home to Conſtantinople, 669, b. maligned by Sinan, ib. b. dealeth warily with the Meſſengers ſent of purpoſe to have ſtrangled him, 670, a. appeaſeth the diſpleaſure of Amurath, ib. b. dieth ſuddenly, 672, a.

Muſtapha Solyman's eldeſt Son in great eſtimation with the People, 512, a. ſent Governour into Caramania, ib. b. maligned by Roxolana, ib. b. in danger to have been poyſoned, 513, b. ſent for by his Father, and warned of his preſent danger, 514, a. conferreth with his Doctor, ib. b. troubled with his melancholy dream, 515, a. cometh to his Fathers Tent, ib. b. in the ſight of his Father moſt cruelly ſtrangled, ib. b. his Son Mahomet ſtrangled alſo, ib. b. a Proverb taken from his death, 517, a.

Mutius Tortona a Spaniſh Captain raiſeth a mutiny in the Chriſtian fleet at Paxo, 591, b. Tortona and his Antient hanged, ib. b.

Muzalo by Theodorus the Emperour appointed Governour to his young Son John, 77, a. envied by the Nobility, is traiterouſly murthered in the Church, 78, a.

N.

Lord Nadaſti his great Vertues, 834, a.

Naſſuf (the Great Viſier) his fall foreſhewed, 921, b. the whole courſe of his Life and Fortune deſcribed, 922, a. his Throat cut, ib. b. his great Treaſure, 923, a. another diſcourſe of the manner of his death, ib. a.

Naupactum, otherwiſe called Lepanto, in vain beſieged by the Turks, 281, b. yielded to Bajazet, 312, b.

Neapolis the firſt Regal Seat of the Othoman Kings, 99, b.
Negligence ſeverely puniſhed, 529, a.
Neocaſtrum built by Mahomet the Great, 230, b.
Neritos, now called S. Maura, taken by the Venetians, 315, a.
Neuhuſe hardly aſſaulted and valiantly defended, 865, b. diſtreſſed, ib. b. yielded to the Rebels, 871, b. reſtored to the Emperour, 880, a.
Neuſol ſurpriſed by, and recovered from the Haiducks, 860, b. by them again taken, 863, a.
Nice taken by the Turks, 99, a. recovered again by the Chriſtians, 125, b. again ſurpriſed by the Turks, 126, b. by Orchanes made the regal Seat of his Kingdom, 128, a.
Nicholaus Cataluſius Prince of Mytilene turneth Turk, and is executed, 248, a.
Nicholas Karetſchen corrupted, betrayeth Giula to the Turks, 557, b. the Traitor juſtly rewarded, ib. b.
Nicephorus Botoneatus diſplaceth his Maſter the Emperour Michael Ducas, and taketh upon him the Empire, 8, b.
Nicomedia yielded unto the Turks, 127, b.
Novigrade yielded unto the Chriſtians, 724, b.

O.

ODenburg beſieged by the Rebels, and by Baſta relieved, 165, a.
Oſman proclaimed Sultan, 949, a. his Oath to Bethlem Gabor, 952, b. greatly inraged at the Emperour, 964, b. taketh a Wife contrary to the will of his Council, 965, b. deſirous of Peace with the Polack, 969, a. ſtrangled by Daout Baſſa, 970, b. diſcourſe of his Life and Actions, 971, a.
Othoman of greater Courage and Spirit than his other Brethren the Sons of old Ertogrul, 90, a. amorous of Malhatun, a Countrey of Muid, 94, b. in danger for his Love, 95, a. by general conſent choſen Governour of the Oguzian Turks, ib. b. ſurpriſeth the Caſtle of Calce, 96, a. fighteth a battel with the Chriſtians at Opſicium, 96, b. winneth the Caſtle of Cara-Chiſar, and killeth the Captain, ib. b. ſetteth in order his little Common-wealth, 97, a. killeth the Captain of Cupri-Chiſar, ib. a. his death contrived by the Captain of Bilezuga, 97, b. turneth the treachery deviſed againſt him, upon the head of the Captain that deviſed it, whom he killeth, and ſurpriſeth his Caſtle, 98, b. ſurpriſeth the Caſtle of Jar-Chiſar, ib. b. taketh the Caſtle of Einegiol, and cruelly executeth the Captain, ib. b. by the good adminiſtration of Juſtice ſtrengthneth his Government, 99, a. taketh the City of Nice, ib. a. taketh upon him the Honour of a King or Sultan, ib. b. maketh Neapolis his Regal Seat, ib. b. in a great battel overthroweth the Chriſtians, 99, b. beſiegeth Pruſa, 100, a. whilſt the Greeks are at diſcord among themſelves, layeth the foundation of the Great Othoman Empire that now is, 113, a. 116, a. dieth, and lieth buried at Pruſa, 123, b. the Wealth he left unto his Sons Orchanes and Aladin, 125, a.
Orchanes, his Father Othoman yet living, manageth the Turks Kingdom, 125, b. ſurpriſeth the Caſtle of Tzupri-Chiſar, 125, b. fighteth a doubtful battel with Andronicus the Greek Emperour at Phylocrene, 126, a. ſurpriſeth Nice, 126, b. hath Nicomedia yielded unto him, 127, b. committeth the Government thereof unto his Son Solyman, 128, a. firſt of the Turks that built Monaſteries, ib. a. ſubdueth the Country of Caraſina, ib. b. dieth, 130, b.
Orchanes and Mahometes, two of Bajazet's Nephews overthrown by Cheſiſe and Techellis the Rebels, 321, a.
Oſman Baſſa by Muſtapha made Governour of Siruan, taketh Sumachia, 662, b. hath Derbent yielded unto him, ib. b. by the Perſian Prince driven out of Sumachia, flieth to Derbent, 665, a. kills Sahamal his Wives Father, 666, a. is by Amurath ſent for into Siruan, 687, a. laid in wait for by Mahomet the Tartar King, ib. b. overcometh the Tartars lying in wait for him, ib. b. by Amurath made chief Viſier, and General of his Wars againſt the Perſians, 688, a. raiſeth a great Army, 697, a. wiſely appeaſeth his mutinous Souldiers unwilling to go for Tauris, ib. b. cometh to Tauris, 698, a. taketh the City, ib. b. in thirty days buildeth there a ſtrong Caſtle, 699, a. giveth the City to be ſpoiled by his Souldiers, ib. a. leaveth Giaffer the Eunuch Baſſa of Tripolis with a Garriſon of 12000 Souldiers, Governour of Tauris, 700, a. dieth, 701, a. much lamented for at Conſtantinople, ib. b.

P.

PAleapolis by Sultan Aladin given to Othoman, 96, a.
Palotta yielded to the Turks, 721, a.
Pallas Lippa beheaded by Botſcay his Maſter, 860, a.
Pantogles with the Turks fleet cometh to the ſiege of Conſtantinople, 233, a. diſplaced, 234, a.
Paphlagonia and Pontus, with a great part of Cappadocia won by Mahomet the Great, 245, b.
Partau the Viſier Baſſa ſent by Solyman againſt the ſuppoſed Muſtapha, brought him to Conſtantinople, 520, a. ſent by Solyman to have brought Bajazet to Amaſia, is by him with good words ſent back again, 522, b. ſtandeth indifferent for giving or not giving of battel unto the Chriſtians at Lepanto, 593, a. encourageth his Souldiers, ib. a. flieth himſelf out of the battel, 595, b.
Paradiſer executed for yielding up of Caniſia unto the Turks, 792, a.
The Patriarch of Græce flayed alive, 904, b.
Peace concluded betwixt King Uladiſlaus and Amurath the Second, 197, a. by the perſwaſion of Julian the Cardinal unfortunately broken by Uladiſlaus, 198. a.
Peace concluded betwixt Mahomet and Scanderbeg, 263, b. betwixt Bajazet and Caytbeius, 306, b. betwixt Bajazet and the Venetians, 315, a. betwixt the Venetians and Solyman, 468, b. betwixt the Venetians and Selymus the Second, 613, a. betwixt Amurath the Third, and Mahomet the Perſian King, 707, b.
Peace concluded betwixt the Emperour and his diſcontented Subjects in the upper Hungary, 876, b. between him and the Turks, 878, a. betwixt the Georgians and Turks, 925, a. between the Turks and Perſians, 950, a.
Peloponeſus deſcribed, 240, b. made tributary to the Turk, 241, a. ſubdued by the Turks, 242, a.
Pera yielded unto the Turks, 237, b.
Perenus the noble Hungarian, upon the ſuſpition of aſpiring, apprehended, 494, b. matters ſurmiſed againſt him, 495, a. He, Valentinus and Maylat, three of the chief of the Hungarian Nobility, unworthily kept in perpetual Priſon, 496, a.
Perſecution in the Greek Church for matters of Religion, 101, a.
Perſians better Horſemen than the Turks, 351, b.
The Perſian King's Succeſs, 845, a. he enters into the Province of Babylon, 897, a. his cruelty againſt the Armenians, ib. b.
Peſth diſtreſſed for want of Victuals, 806, b. victualled, 820, a. again victualled, ib. b. ſhamefully abandoned by the Chriſtians, 849, a. taken by the Turks, ib. b.

Peſth taken by Gaſon Admiral of the Turks fleet upon the Danubius, 478, b. beſieged by the Marquis of Brandenburg, 493, a. in vain aſſaulted, 494, a. the ſiege given over, ib. b. taken by the Chriſtians, 802, a.

Peter a French Hermit going on Pilgrimage to Jeruſalem, obſerveth the miſeries of the Chriſtians under the Turks and Sarazens, 9, a. in the Council of Claremont delivereth his meſſage in the behalf of the poor diſtreſſed Chriſtians, 10, a. he with Gualter Senſavier the firſt that ſet forward in the great Expedition of the Chriſtians into the Holy Land, ib. b. loſeth greateſt part of his Army, 11, a. diſcouraged, about to have ſtoln home, brought back, and inforced to take a new Oath for his fidelity and perſeverance in that War, 13, b.

Peter Damboyſe, Grand Maſter of the Rhodes, a careful Governour, 291, b. his chearful ſpeech unto the reſt of his Knights and Souldiers, 292, a.

Peter Emus for his barbarous Cruelty beheaded at Venice, 689, b.

Petralba yielded to Scanderbeg, 194, b.

Petrella yielded, ib. b.

Petrinia taken by the Chriſtians, 753, a.

Petrinia in danger to have been betrayed to the Turks, 848, a.

Philaretas the Greek Emperours Lieutenant put to flight by the Turks, 6, b.

Philadelphia taken by Bajazet, 140, b.

Philes a devout man, but no Soldier, undertaketh the defence of the Greek Empire againſt the Turks, 109, a. in plain battel overthroweth them, 109, b. 110, a.

Philip the Second of that Name, the French King, in going towards the Holy Land, ſuffereth Shipwreck upon the Coaſt of Sicilia, 48, a. arriveth at Ptolemais, 48, b. his ſpeech unto Richard King of England, and the other Chriſtian Princes, in his ſickneſs, ib. b. he ſweareth unto King Richard, not to invade his Territories in France, and ſo returneth home, 49, b.

Phocas by killing of Mauritius the Emperour with his Children, poſſeſſeth himſelf of the Greek Empire, 15, b. ſlain afterwards by them of his own Guard, 16, a.

Pial Baſſa, Solyman's Admiral ſent to remove the Chriſtians out of Zerbi, 530, a. in diſgrace with Solyman, ſhunneth to come to Conſtantinople, 532, a. by Selymus the Second ſent againſt the Venetians, 572, a. in vain attempteth the Iſland of Tenos, ib. a.

Piſaurius the Venetian Admiral doth very great harm unto the Turks, 313, b.

Plague and Famine among the Turks, 744, a.

Plague in the Venetian Fleet, 574, a.

A great Plague at Conſtantinople, 901, a.

Polinus the French Ambaſſador with Preſents from Francis the French King, meeteth Solyman coming from Buda, 490, a. his requeſt to Solyman, ib. a. returneth into France, ib. a. ſent back again to Solyman, by the way ſollicteth the Venetians to take up Arms againſt Charles the Emperour, ib. a. grieved, not to find the Turk ſo ready to ſend his fleet in the Aid of the King his Maſter, as he had before hoped, 490, a. is ſharply ſhaken up by Solyman Baſſa, ib. a. brought to the ſpeech of Solyman himſelf, 492, a. by him rejected until the next Spring, ib. a. ſetteth forward with Barbaruſſa and the Turks Fleet, 496, b. by his Letters from Oſtia comforteth the Popes Legat in Rome, 497, a.

Podolia and Ruſſia invaded by the Turks, 311, a.

The Pope and the King of Spain fearing leſt the Venetians ſhould make Peace with the Turk, haſten their Confederation with that State, long before by them delayed, 581, a. a perpetual League concluded betwixt the Pope, the King of Spain, and the Venetians, 582, a. the League proclaimed, ib. b.

The Popes Letters unto the King of Polonia, to diſſuade him from invading of Moldavia, to the trouble of the Tranſilvanian Prince, 756, b.

A Practiſe to murther the Brethren of Sultan Oſman, 973, a.

Prejanes cometh to the Rhodes, 391, a.

Preſents given by the Turks to the Emperours Commiſſioners, 833, b. ſent to the Grand Seignior by King Mathias, 890, a. from the Perſian to the Emperour, 897, b. from the Perſian to the Turk, 912, b. from the united States to the Turks, 916, b.

Preſents of great value ſent by the Perſian King unto Selymus, 566, b.

Prince Ciarcan ſlain, 151, b.

Princes of Germany joyn their Forces with King Ferdinand againſt the Turk in Hungary, 492, a.

Proceſſions of the Turks, 915, b.

The Proteſtant States of Auſtria take Arms in defence of their Religion, 892, a. ſwear obedience unto King Mathias, 893, a.

The Proteſtant States of Bohemia aſſemble in the new Court at Prague, ib. b. raiſe their forces in defence of their Religion, 894, b.

Pruſa yielded unto the Turks, 123, a. burnt by Iſa, 164, a. repaired by Mahomet, ib. a. again burnt by the Caramanian King, 164, b.

Q.

Queen Iſabella with Child, 469, a. delivered of a Son, ib. b. that Son by the Name of Stephen crowned King of Hungary, 470, a. her anſwer unto the Ambaſſador of King Ferdinand, demanding of her the Kingdom of Hungary, 471, b. invaded by King Ferdinand, craveth Aid of Solyman, 473, a. by the commandment of Solyman departeth with her young Son out of Buda, 481, a. yieldeth up to King Ferdinand all the right ſhe had in Tranſilvania and Hungary, 571, b.

Quinque Eccleſiæ yielded unto the Turks, 497, b.

Quinſay on the Province of Mangi, of all the Cities of the World the greateſt, 53, b.

R.

RAB beſieged by Sinan Baſſa, 731, a. battered and aſſaulted, 733, b. by Treaſon yielded unto the Baſſa, 724, a. notably again ſurpriſed by the Chriſtians, 771, b.

Rab attempted by the Turks, 875, a.

Radul the Valachian aideth Baſta againſt the Turks, 818, a.

Rama forſaken by the Turks, ib. b.

Ramadan Baſſa ſlain by the inſolent Janizaries, 690, a.

Rayſchachius for ſorrow of his Son ſlain by the Turks, ſuddenly dieth, 476, b.

The Rebels of Aſia appeaſed by the Viſier, 881, a.

New Rebels in Aſia, 887, b.

Rhodes by the Knights Hoſpitallers recovered from the Turks in the year 1308, 113, a. beſieged by Meſites Palæologus, 291, b. for fear of the Turks the Rhodians deſtroy their Suburbs and Places of Pleaſure without the City, 389, a. the Rhodes deſcribed, 391, a. beſieged by Solyman, 392, b. in five places at once by the Turks aſſaulted, 395, a. the diſtreſſed eſtate of the Rhodians, and their Reſolution therein, 398, a. the Rhodes yielded unto Solyman, 404, a.

Richard the Firſt, King of England, ſetteth forward toward the Holy Land, 48, a. revengeth the Injuries done to him by the Cypriots, and taketh Priſoner Iſaack Comnenus their King, ib. b.

arriveth at Ptolemais, ib. b. cauſeth all the Turks his Priſoners, in the ſight of Saladins Army to be executed, 50, a. giveth Cyprus to Guy in exchange for the titular Kingdom of Jeruſalem, ib. b. with great ſlaughter overthroweth Saladin in plain battel, ib. b. returning homeward, taken Priſoner by Leopold Duke of Auſtria, 51, b.

Rodolph the Emperour prayeth Aid of the German Princes againſt the Turk, 715, b. his Ambaſſador ſhut up cloſe in his Houſe at Conſtantinople, 716, b. his Letters to Amurath, ib. b. his Letters to Sinan Baſſa, 717, a. preſented with the ſpoil of the Turks overthrown at Alba Regalis, 723, b. requeſteth Aid of the Great Duke of Muſcovia, the King of Polonia, and of the Prince of Tranſſilvania, 725, a. holdeth a Dyet of the Empire at Ratisbone for the withſtanding of the Turks, 750, a. receiveth Aid from the Pope, the King of Spain, and the Princes of Italy, 792, b.

Robert Duke of Normandy by general conſent choſen King of Jeruſalem, which honour he refuſeth, 17, a

Robert Son to Peter, fourth Emperour of the Latines in Conſtantinople, 68, a. goeth to Rome and in his return dieth in Achaia, 68, a.

Rogendorf, his Name terrible unto the Turks, 413, b. with King Ferdinands Army entreth into Hungary, and beſiegeth Buda, 473, b. threatneth the Queen, derided by the Biſhop, 474, a. in vain aſſaulteth Buda, ib. b. in raiſing of his ſiege by Night, receiveth a great overthrow, 478, a. conveyed up the River to Comara, there dieth, 478, b.

Ronzorius, ſometime a notable Pyrat, entertained by Andronicus the Emperour againſt the Turks, 104, b. relieveth Philadelphia, 105, a. for lack of pay ſpoileth the Emperours Territories in Aſia, ib. a. ſuddenly ſlain, 105, b.

Roſcetes riſeth againſt his Brother Muleaſſes King of Tunes, 433, a. flieth to Barbaruſſa, and by him carried to Conſtantinople, ib. a.

Roverius robbeth Dautius, Bajazet the Great Turks Ambaſſador to Pope Alexander, 307, b.

Roxolana conſpireth with Ruſtan Baſſa againſt the noble Muſtapha, and faineth herſelf religious, 512, b. ſent for by Solyman, refuſeth to come, 513, a. plotteth the confuſion of Muſtapha, ib. a. bringeth him into ſuſpicion with his Father, ib. a. ſhe with Ruſtan put Solyman in fear of his Life and Empire by his Son Muſtapha, ib. a. loveth her younger Son Bajazet better than her eldeſt Son Selymus, 519, a. comforteth him, going in fear unto his Father, 520, b.

Ruſtan Baſſa, a man of a miſchievous Nature, 512, b. farthereth the devices of Roxolana, for the deſtruction of the noble Muſtapha, 513, b. ſent by Solyman with an Army into Aſia, to have taken or ſlain Muſtapha, 514, a. returneth in haſte, and with falſe ſuggeſtions ſtirreth up Solyman himſelf againſt his Son, ib. b. his exceeding Treachery at the coming of Muſtapha to his Fathers Camp, 515, a. diſgraced by Solyman, flieth to Roxolana at Conſtantinople, 516, b. by her means reſtored again unto his former Honours, dieth afterwards of a dropſie, 517, b.

Ruſſeworme a great Lord beheaded, 867, a.

The Ruſſians and Tartars make Incurſions upon the Turks, 908, b.

S.

SAcmar yielded to the Haiducks, 860, a.

Sahib after the death of Sultan Aladin his Maſter, taking upon him the Government, is by the Nobility thruſt out, and the Turks Kingdom in Aſia rent in ſunder amongſt them, 80, a.

Sahamal the Georgian cutteth off the Head of Aider, 659, a. ſubmitteth himſelf to Muſtapha the Great Baſſa, 662, b. ſlain by Oſman Baſſa his Son-in-Law, 666, a.

Saladin the Turk choſen Sultan of Egypt, killeth the Calyph and all his Poſterity, 40, b. invadeth the Kingdom of Jeruſalem, and by Baldwin ſuddenly ſallying out of Aſcalon, overthrown, 42, a. beſiegeth Berythus both by Sea and Land, taketh Edeſſa and Carras, ib. b. 43, a. ſpoileth the Holy Land, 43, a. in vain beſiegeth Ptolemais, 44, b. beſiegeth Tiberias, and by the Treaſon of the County of Tripolis overthroweth Guy the King, coming to the relief thereof, and taketh him Priſoner, 45, a. winneth Jeruſalem, with all the other Cities and Towns in the Holy Land, except Tripolis, Tyre, and Antioch, ib. a. beſiegeth Tyre, and with the loſs of his beſt Soldiers, and of his Tents, retireth, ib. b. taketh Antioch with all the Provinces and Towns thereunto belonging, ib. b. putteth to death the Chriſtian Captives, 50, a. dieth, and forbiddeth any funeral Pomp to be uſed at his burial, 51, b.

Salvagus a worthy Knight, 538, b.

Salazar a Spaniſh Captain goeth as a Spy into the Turks Camp at the ſiege of Malta, 548, b.

Sanguin the Turk overthroweth King Fulke, coming to the relief of the Caſtle of Mont-ferand, and hath the Caſtle yielded unto him, 21, a. taketh Edeſſa, and there uſeth all manner of Cruelty againſt the Chriſtians, 22, a. beſieging Cologenbar, is there ſtabbed by one of his own Friends, and ſlain, ib. a.

Sarmentus ſlain, 466, a.

Sarugatin, Oſmans Brother, ſlain, and accounted of the Turks for a Saint, 96, b.

Scanderbeg with his Brethren by their Father John Caſtriot given in Hoſtage to Amurath, 177, a. wiſely diſſembleth his deſire for the delivery of himſelf and his Country, 193, a. by great policy recovereth the City of Croia out of the hands of the Turks, 193, b. hath the ſtrong Cities of Epirus yielded unto him, 194, a. ſpoileth Macedonia, 195, b. in a great battel overthroweth Alis Baſſa with two and twenty thouſand of his Turks, 196, b. going to the Aid of King Uladiſlaus, is by the faithleſs Deſpot denied paſſage through Servia, 201, a. ſpoileth the Deſpots Country, and ſo returneth into Epirus, 204, a. his reſolute anſwer unto Amurath's melancholy Letters, 205, b. putteth Feriſes to flight, 206, b. overthroweth Muſtapha the ſecond time, and taketh him Priſoner, 213, b. carefully ſetteth all things in order againſt the coming of Amurath, 214, b. his effectual ſpeech unto the Soldiers and Citizens of Sfetigrade, to encourage them againſt the coming of the Turk, 215, a. cunningly entrappeth ſome of the forerunners of Amuraths Army, 216, a. troubleth his great Army, 217, b. with his own hand killeth Feri Baſſa, 218, b. troubleth Amurath's great Army at the Siege of Croia, 222, a. in danger to have been ſlain or taken, ib. a. deceiveth Mahomet the young Prince in his own device, 223, a. flieth by night into Epirus, 259, a. his anſwer by Letters unto the Letters of Mahomet, 262, b. his anſwer unto Mahomets Letters concerning the renewing of the League, 265, b. in danger, 271, b. Scanderbeg dieth, 275, a. buried at Liſſa, ib. a. his bones digged up by the Turks, and of them greatly honoured, ib. a.

Scodra beſieged by Solyman Baſſa, 280, a. relieved by Matthias King of Hungary, 281, a. a yearly fee appointed by Mahomet to one, to put him daily in mind of the ſiege of Scodra, ib. a. Scodra the ſecond time beſieged by Mahomet the Great, 283, a. ſore battered, 285, a. the fourth time aſſaulted, 286, a. twelve thouſand Turks ſlain in this laſt aſſault, 287, a. moſt furiouſly the fifth fifth time aſſaulted by the Turks, 287, b. by compoſition yielded unto the Turk, 291, a.

The Scrivano rebelleth againſt the Turk in Caramania, and giveth Mehemet Baſſa a notable overthrow, 793, b. in a great battel overthroweth him again the next year with an Army of fifty thouſand Turks, 797, a. having over-run a great part of the Turks Dominions in Aſia, dieth, 804, a. his younger Brother ſteppeth up in his ſtead, and in a great battel overthroweth Haſſan Baſſa, and killeth him, ib. a.

Selymus ambitious, and of a turbulent Spirit, and therefore of the Janizaries and men of War better beloved than his other Brother, 326, a. aided by Mahometes the Tartar King, riſeth againſt his aged Father, 326, b. coloureth his rebellious purpoſe with the Invaſion of Hungary, 327, a. marcheth with his Army towards Hadrianople, 328, a. in a great battel overthrown and put to flight by his Father Bajazet at Tzurulum, 331, a. by the perſwaſion of the Baſſa's, by his Father ſent for home, 335, a. choſen General by his Father, to go againſt his rebellious Brother Achomates, is by and by after by the Janizaries ſaluted Emperour, 336, b. cauſeth his Father to be poyſoned, 337, b. putteth three of his Fathers Pages to death for mourning for their Maſter, 338, a. bountifully rewardeth the Soldiers of the Court, 339, a. murthereth five of his Brothers Sons, ib. b. cauſeth Corcutus his Brother to be ſtrangled, 341, a. Treaſon intended againſt him, diſcovered, 342, a. craveth Aid of Aladeules and the other mountain Princes againſt the Perſians, 345, a. Selymus perplexed, ib. b. receiveth great loſs in paſſing the River Euphrates, 349, a. he and Hyſmael compared together, 350, b. Selymus with a great Army entreth into Armenia, and taketh Ciamaſſum a City of the Perſian Kings, 352, b. vanquiſheth Aladeules the Mountain King, putteth him to death, and converteth his Kingdom into the form of a Province, 354, a. invadeth Hungary, ib. b. ſendeth his Ambaſſadors with Preſents to Campſon the Egyptian Sultan, 357, a. encourageth his Soldiers to go againſt the Mamalukes, 358, a. paſſeth the Mountain Amanus, and cometh into Comagena, ib. b. in the battel of Singa overthroweth the Mamalukes, 360, b. in doubt leſt Sinan Baſſa had been loſt, becometh exceeding melancholy, 364, b. meeteth with Sinan Baſſa at Gaza, 365, a. paſſeth the ſandy Deſarts, and meeteth with Tomombeius at Rhodanus, 365, a. giveth him battel, and putteth him to flight, 367, a. encourageth his Soldiers to the winning of Caire, 370, a. fighteth a great and mortal battel with the Mamalukes in the City of Caire, 370, b. cauſeth the City to be ſet on fire, 371, a. putteth Tomombeius and the Mamalukes to flight, and ſo taketh the City, ib. a. his Ambaſſadors ſent to Tomombeius ſlain by the Mamalukes, 372, b. overthroweth Tomombeius again at the River Nilus, 374, a. cauſeth him being taken, to be tortured and put to death, ib. a. cunningly reduceth the Arabians to his obedience, 375, a. purpoſing to turn his Forces upon the Chriſtians, is ſtruck in the back with a Canker, 379, a. his death concealed by Ferat Baſſa, 381, a.

Selymus the Second by the Janizaries ſaluted Emperour, 559, a. appeaſeth the tumultuous Janizaries, ib. b. ſendeth Cubates his Ambaſſador to Venice, to demand Cyprus of the Senate, 569, a. rageth to have it denied him, 570, a. he invadeth the Venetians, 572, a. in his rage about to have put to death all the Chriſtians in his Dominions, 600, a. ſendeth out Uluzales his Admiral with 200 Gallies againſt the Chriſtians, 602, a. deſirous of Peace, concludeth the ſame with the Venetians, 613, a. by his Baſſa's taketh Guletta from the Spaniards, and the City of Tunes, 620, a. dieth, ib. b.

Serinus Governour of Sigeth, 555, b. his comfortable and reſolute Speech unto his Soldiers, ib. b. burneth the new Town, not now to be longer defended, and retireth into the old, 556, a. his laſt Speech unto his Soldiers, ib. b. ſlain, and his head ſent to County Salma, 557, a.

The Servians in mutiny againſt themſelves, are with a great ſlaughter overthrown by the Turks, 133, a.

Servia becometh tributary unto the Turks, ib. a. wholly yielded unto the Turks, 243, a.

Sfetigrade beſieged by Amurath, 216, a. in vain divers times by the Turks aſſaulted, 218, a. by the working of a Traitor, Amurath hath the ſtrong City yielded up unto him, 220, a.

Sigiſmund King of Hungary, with the Chriſtian Princes his Confederates, with a great Army invadeth the Turks Dominions, 141, b. his proud Speech upon the greatneſs of his Army, ib. b. in a great battel overthrown by Bajazet at Nicopolis, 142, a. hardly eſcapeth himſelf by flight, ib. a.

Sigiſmund Prince of Tranſilvania in danger by his own Subjects to have been betrayed unto the Tartars, 735, b. the Conſpirators apprehended and executed, 736, a. giveth his Subjects leave to ſpoil the Turks, ib. a. entreth into a Confederation with the Emperour, ib. b. perſwadeth Michael the Vaywod of Valachia, and Aaron the Palatine of Moldavia, to revolt from the Turk, 737, b. ſendeth Aaron the Palatine with his Wife and Son Priſoners to Prague, 745, a, b. marrieth Maria Chriſtina the late Arch-duke Charls's Daughter, 752, a. overthroweth thirty thouſand Turks coming as unbidden Gueſts to his marriage, ib. a. in a great battel overthroweth Sinan Baſſa with his Turks, ib. a. receiveth the Zaculians into his Protection, and hath from them great Aid, 753, b. putteth Sinan Baſſa to flight, 754, a. by force taketh Tergoviſta from the Turks, ib. a. taketh alſo Bucareſta, ib. b. goeth unto the Emperour at Prague, 761, b. beſiegeth Temeſwar, 764, a. with 18000 men cometh to the Aid of Maximilian the Arch-duke going to have relieved Agria, 767, a. doubting the power of the Turk, reſigneth his Principality of Tranſilvania unto the Emperour, 769, b. repenting himſelf, returneth again into Tranſilvania, and taketh upon him the Government, 773, b. by his Ambaſſadors offereth again his Principality unto the Emperour, 776, a. in a great battel overthrown, together with the Moldavian, by Michael the Vaywod of Valachia, 784, b. by the favour of the Nobility recovereth his ſtate again in Tranſilvania, 796, a. in battel overthrown by Baſta and Michael the Vaywod, flieth out of Tranſilvania, ib. b. by the favour of his Subjects, and countenance of the Polonians, recovereth again his ſtate, 797, b. doubting him to be able to hold it againſt the Imperials, yieldeth it by compoſition unto Baſta the Emperours Lieutenant, and goeth himſelf unto the Emperour, 798, b.

Sigiſmund King of Polonia's Letters unto Amurath, 706, b.

Sigiſmund Ragotſie choſen Prince of Tranſilvania, and reſigneth to the Emperour, 880, a.

Siliſtra ſpoiled by the Valachians, 807, a.

Simon County of Montford ſent by Philip the French King into the Holy Land, repreſſeth the fury of the Turks, and ſo concludeth a Peace with them for ten years, 52, b.

Sinan Baſſa the Eunuch overthrown by Achomates, 342, a. reſtoreth Selymus's battel againſt Campſon, before almoſt loſt, 360, b. by Selymus ſent before into Judea, 362, a. hath Gaza yielded unto him, ib. b. diſcomfiteth Gazelles, coming to have oppreſſed him at Gaza, 363, b. ſlain in the Battel at Rhodania. 366, b.

have

Sinan the Jew his ſhort Anſwer to Barbaruſſa, 445, a.

Sinan Baſſa by Amurath choſen General for the Perſian Wars, 671, a. relieveth Teflis, 673, b. loſeth ſeven thouſand of his Souldiers, 674, a. derided of his own Souldiers, ib. b. his proud Anſwer to Amurath, 678, b. diſplaced and caſt into Exile, 679, a. again received into favour, 706, b. overthrown in the Upper Hungary, 708, a. his Letters unto the Emperour, 717, b. ſent General of the Turks Army againſt the Emperour, 720, a. taketh Veſprinium, 721, a. hath Palotta yielded unto him, ib. a. with an Army of 150000 men cometh again into Hungary, 731, a. taketh Dotis and S. Martins, ib. b. beſiegeth Rab, ib. b. in aſſaulting thereof loſeth 12000 of his men, 733, b. by corrupting of the Governour, hath the City yielded unto him, 734, a. beſiegeth Comara, ib. b. raiſeth his Siege, and breaketh up his Army, ib. b. craftily ſeeketh to try the Emperours mind concerning Peace, 742, b. ſent for home to the Court, 744, a. by Sultan Mahomet appointed General of the Wars againſt the Emperour, 752, b. invadeth Valachia, ib. b. in a great Battel overthrown by the Prince of Tranſylvania, ib. b. in flying in danger to have been drowned, ib. b. with a great Army cometh again into Valachia, 753, b. ſeeing the general Fear of his Army upon the coming of the Tranſylvanians, flieth, 754, a. for fear delayeth his coming to Conſtantinople untill his peace were made, and there, ſhortly after, dieth, 761, a.

Siſeg by the Turks beſieged, 718, b. notably relieved, 719, b. again beſieged and taken by the Turks, 720, b.

Skinder Baſſa invadeth Prince Alexander, 932, a. his Kinſman taken Priſoner, 932, b.

Soldiers Inſolency juſtly puniſhed, 830, a.

Solyman, Orchanes his Son, by his Father made Governor of Nicomedia, 127, b. 128, a. taketh the Caſtle of Zembeny in Europe, 129, a. he the firſt that brought the Turks over into Europe, with purpoſe there to conquer and inhabit, ib. a. taketh the Caſtle of Maditus, ib. b. winneth Calipolis, ib. b. dieth, 130, b.

Solyman the unfortunate, Bajazet's eldeſt Son, by the great Baſſa's ſet up in his Fathers ſtead at Hadrianople, 153, a. goeth over with a great Army againſt his Brother Mahomet, 164, b. by policy taketh the Caſtle of Pruſa, 165, a. beſiegeth his Brother in Amaſia, ib. a. returneth into Europe to appeaſe the ſtirs there raiſed by his Brother Muſa, and recovereth Hadrianople, 166, a. in his exceſs regardeth not the approach of his Brother Muſa, ib. b. forſaken of his Soldiers, flieth, ib. b. taken Priſoner, is by the commandment of his Brother Muſa ſtrangled, ib. b.

Solyman the Eunuch Baſſa dealeth treacherouſly with the Kings of Arabia, 451 b.

Solyman hardly perſwaded that his Father was dead, 581, a. ſaluted Emperour by the Janizaries, ib. b. his Letters to Villerius, Great Maſter of the Rhodes, 384, a. his Oration to his men of War, declaring his purpoſe for the beſieging of the Rhodes, ib. b. he maketh great preparation for the ſiege, 385, a. his threatning Letters unto them of the Rhodes, 388, b. cometh himſelf in Perſon to the ſiege, 392, a. his cholerick Oration to his Soldiers, ib. b. diſplaceth his Admiral, and puniſheth him like a ſlave, 396, a. about to have forſaken the ſiege, ib. b. comforteth his diſcouraged Soldiers, perſwading them with patience to continue the ſiege, 397, a. his Letters to the Great Maſter and the Rhodians, ſent by their own Ambaſſadors, 399, b. his ſpeech unto the Great Maſter, at his coming to yield up the City, 403, a. he entreth into the Rhodes upon Chriſtmaſs-day, in the year 1522, 404, a. Solyman upon the diſcord of the Chriſtian Princes, and diſordered State of Hungary, taketh occaſion to invade that Kingdom, ib. b. cometh into Hungary againſt King Lewis with an Army of two hundred thouſand men, 405, a. overthroweth him in battel at Mohatz, ib. b. cometh to Buda, 406, a. Solyman in the quarrel of King John, againſt King Ferdinand cometh into Hungary with an Army of 150000 men, 410, a. without reſiſtance entreth into Buda, and beſiegeth the Caſtle ib. b. layeth ſiege to Vienna, 411, a. without ranſome releaſeth certain Chriſtian Priſoners, 412, a. loſeth his great Ordnance upon the Danubius, ib. b. burieth 8000 of his Turks in the Mines, 413, a. having loſt 80000 of his Turks, raiſeth his ſiege, and returneth to Buda, 414, a. he reſtoreth the Kingdom of Hungary unto King John, ib. a. returneth himſelf to Conſtantinople, ib. b. maketh great preparation for the ſubduing of the Territories belonging to the Houſe of Auſtria, as alſo for the Conqueſt of Germany, with the ſhort time he prefixed unto himſelf for the performance thereof, ib. b. Solyman with a mighty Army cometh again into Hungary, 416, b. beſiegeth Gunza, ib. b. his proud Letters to Charles the Emperour, 417, a. ſhunneth to meet him at Vienna, and ſo turneth out of the way into Carinthia, 418, b. the cauſes moving him ſo to do, ib. b. returneth towards Conſtantinople, 420, a. Solyman, perſwaded by Abraham Baſſa, reſolveth to go againſt the Perſians, 436, b. cometh with his Army to Tauris, 437, a. followeth Tamas the Perſian King into Sultania, ib. a. his Army ſtrangely diſtreſſed by Tempeſt, ib. b. hath Babylon with the Countries of Meſopotamia and Aſſyria yielded unto him, 438, a. he ranſacketh Tauris, ib. b. diſcouraged by the harm done him by Delymenches, giveth over his Wars in Perſia, and returneth to Conſtantinople, 439, b. he with a wonderful charge prepareth a great Fleet at Suetia againſt the Portugals in the Eaſt-Indies, 451, a. Solyman by the French Ambaſſador incited to invade Italy with an Army of two hundred thouſand men, cometh to Aulona, 452, a. ſendeth Lutzis Baſſa and Barbaruſſa with his Fleet before him into Italy, ib. a. converteth his Forces prepared for Italy, againſt the Venetians, 453, b. in danger to have been ſlain in his Tent in the midſt of his Army, ib. b. invadeth Corcyra, ib. b. carrieth away above ſixteen hundred Priſoners, and doth good Juſtice upon ſuch Turks as had violated their Faith at Caſtrum, 454, b. Solyman angry with the ſecret Confederation between King Ferdinand and King John, 468, b. promiſeth to protect the Queen and her Son, 473, a. with a great Army cometh to Buda, 478, b. ſendeth for the young King into his Camp, 479, a. courteouſly receiveth him, ib. a. craftily ſurpriſeth the City of Buda, 479, b. detaineth the Nobility of Hungary, ib.b. diverſly perſwaded by his Baſſa's for the diſpoſing of that Kingdom, ib. b. he ſacrificeth after the Mahometan manner in Buda, 481, a. pronounceth the doom of Hungary, and converteth it from a Kingdom into a Province of his Empire, ib a. his proud anſwer unto King Ferdinand's Ambaſſadors, 482, a. he returneth to Conſtantinople, ib. b. ſendeth his Fleet to Barbaruſſa his Admiral, to aid the French King againſt the Emperour, 496, a. Solyman with a great Army cometh again into Hungary, 497, a. taketh Strigonium, 498, b. entereth into the City, and there ſetteth up the Mahometan Superſtition, 499, a. winneth Alba-Regalis, 501, b. returneth to Conſtantinople, ib. b. by the Inſtigation of Dragut the Pyrat, Pyrate, ſendeth out Sinan Baſſa with a great Fleet to revenge the wrong done unto him by Auria, 509, a. Solyman amorous of Roxolana, 512, a. manumiſeth her, 513, a. marrieth her, ib. a. by her perſuaded, reſolveth to put to death his eldeſt Son, the noble Muſtapha, ib. b. goeth himſelf with a great Army into Aſia to kill his Son, 514, b. ſendeth for Muſtapha, who coming, is cruelly ſtrangled in his ſight, 515, b. his ſtout Speech unto the Janizaries up in Arms, for the unworthy death of Muſtapha, 516, b. he glad to yield unto the Janizaries, ib. b. Solyman deſirous, with as little ſtir as might be, to appeaſe the grudges betwixt his two Sons Selymus and Bajazet, ſendeth Partau and Mehemet, two of his Viſier Baſſaes, to bring them to the Provinces by him appointed for them, 322, b. maketh preparation againſt Bajazet, and ſendeth Aid to Selymus, 323, a. for countenancing of Selymus, goeth himſelf in perſon with his Army over into Aſia, 525, a. diſſembleth with Bajazet, 526, a. ſeeketh to ſtop his flight into Perſia, deceived of his purpoſe, procureth to have him and his four Sons ſtrangled in priſon in Perſia, 529, a. Solyman by his Ambaſſador Abraham Strotza, confirmeth his League with Ferdinand the Emperor for eight years, 533, a. his proud Letters unto the Emperor Ferdinand, ib. a. his Preſents ſent unto the Emperor, 534, b. he maketh preparation againſt the Knights of Malta, 535, a, b. his Oration unto his Captains for the Invaſion of Malta, ib. b. his Fleet arriveth at Malta, 537, a. with ſhame returneth, 552, b. Solyman purpoſing now the ſeventh time himſelf in perſon to invade Hungary, cauſeth a Bridge of a mile long with incredible labour to be made over the great River Savus, and tha deep Fens toward Sigeth, 555, b. beſiegeth Sigeth, ib. b. cometh himſelf with a great power into the Camp, 556, a. winneth the old Town, ib. a. falleth ſick and dieth of the bloody Flux at Quinque Eccleſiæ, ib. b. his Death by Muhamet the Viſier Baſſa concealed, and the Siege continued, ib. b. his body with great ſolemnity by his Son Solymus buried at Conſtantinople, 559, b.

The Spahies and Janizaries mutiny, 809, b. their proud Speech to Sultan Mahomet, 810, a. their Inſolency juſtly puniſhed, 807, a.

The Spaniards rejoycing at the Overthrow of the Italians by Salec, are themſelves foiled by Tabacces, 443, b.

The States of Bohemia their Requeſts to the Emperor, 888, a.

Stelluſa, with Deſdrot the Governor thereof, delivered to Scanderbeg, 194, b.

Stephen Rozwan, inſtead of Aaron, by the Tranſylvanian Prince placed Vayvod of Moldavia, 745, b. thruſt out by Zamoſchy Chancellor of Polonia, 756, a. taken Priſoner and put to death, ib. b.

Stephen, Vayvod of Tranſylvania, upon the commendation of Amurath choſen King of Polonia, 652, a.

Stephen made Vayvod of Moldavia, 910, a. his Tyranny and troubleſome Government, 927, b. &c. turneth Turk, 936, a.

Strigonium in vain beſieged by King John, 415, b. beſieged by Solyman, 497, b. divers times by the Turks in vain aſſaulted, 498, a. the ſtrength thereof by a fugitive Chriſtian diſcovered, ib. a. yielded unto the Turk, ib. b. beſieged by the Chriſtians, 726, b. five times in vain aſſaulted, with the loſs of five thouſand men, 727, b. the Siege by Matthias the Archduke given over, 729, a. beſieged by County Mansfelt, 747, a. twice in vain aſſaulted, ib. a. the lower Town taken, 750, a. yielded unto the Archduke Matthias, 751, b.

Strigonium beſieged by the Turks, 850, a. ſhameful Treaſon of the Haiducks there in Garriſon, 852, b. the Siege given over, 853, a. again attempted to be ſurpriſed, 858, b. again beſieged, 867, a. the inſolency of the Garriſon-Soldiers inforce the Governor to yield the Town, 870, b.

Styria and Auſtria ſpoiled, 864, a.

Styria forraged by the Turks, 791, a.

Suguta, by Sultan Aladin given to Ertogrul, 93. b.

Samuchia taken by Oſiman Baſſa, 662, a. recovered by the Perſian Prince, 665, a.

Swartzenbourg, by two Italian Priſoners flying out of Rab, informed of the ſtate of the Town, 770, a. conſulteth with the Lord Palfi, 771, a. ſurpriſeth that ſtrong Town, ib. b. in vain attempteth to have ſurpriſed Buda, 776, a. cometh to Pappa to appeaſe the French and Wallons there in mutiny, 780, b. beſiegeth the Town, 781, b. ſlain, 782, a.

Syrgiannes appointed by Andronicus the Emperor to obſerve the doings of young Andronicus his Nephew, treacherouſly diſcovereth the ſame unto him, 111, a. cunningly coloureth his Treaſon, ib. b. contemned of the younger Andronicus, revolteth again unto his Grandſather, 113. b. apprehended, impriſoned, and his Houſe raſed, 115, a.

T.

TAmas, the Perſian King, hearing of the coming of Solyman to Tauris, flieth into Hircania, 438, b. in fear of Bajazet, killeth his Followers, and impriſoneth him with his Sons, 527, b. ſendeth Ambaſſadors with Preſents to Solyman, 528, a. the cauſe why he would not by any means let Bajazet go out of his hands, ib. b. his Anſwer unto the Venetian Ambaſſador, perſuading him to take up Arms againſt the Turk, 584, a.

Tamerlane his reaſonable and modeſt Anſwer unto the other Mahometan Princes, craving Aid againſt Bajazet, 145, a. in their behalf ſendeth Ambaſſadors with Preſents to Bajazet, ib. b. provoked by the proud anſwer of Bajazet, the ſollicitation of the oppreſſed Princes, and the perſwaſion of Axalla, reſolveth to make War upon him, ib. b. his honourable Parentage and Anceſtors, 146, b. the cauſes why ſome report him to have been a Shepherd or Heardſman, 147, a. he himſelf not delighted in Blood, ib. a. marrieth the Daughter and Heir of the Great Cham of Tartary, the ground of his Greatneſs, ib. a. ſetteth forward againſt Bajazet, 148, a. his great Camp ſtill like unto a well govern'd City, ib. b. the number of his great Army, 149, a. he taketh Sebaſtia, and burieth all the People quick, 194, b. ſtayeth the coming of Bajazet, 150, a. diſpoſeth of the order of his battel, 151, a. fighteth a great and mortal battel with Bajazet, 151, b. taking him Priſoner, cauſeth him like a wilde Beaſt to be ſhut up in an Iron Chage, 152, b. refuſeth the Empire of Conſtantinople, offered him by Emanuel the Emperours Ambaſſador, 153, a. goeth privately himſelf to Conſtantinople, 154, a. much delighted with the ſcituation and Pleaſures of that City, ib. a. ſpoileth the Turks Dominions in Aſta, ib. a. reſtoreth unto the poor Mahometan Princes oppreſſed by Bajazet all their antient Inheritances, ib. b. in a great battel overthroweth the Sultan of Egypt near unto Aleppo, ib. b. winneth Damaſco, ib. b. cometh to Jeruſalem, 155, a. taketh Damiata, ib. a. aſſaulteth Caire, 155, b. driveth the Sultan out of Caire, 156, a. purſueth him to Alexandria, ib. b. chaſeth him into Lybia, ib. b. leaveth Calibes to govern the Countries of Egypt and Siria, 157, a. conquereth Meſopotamia and Babylon with the Kingdom of Perſia, ib. a. returneth to Samarcand, 158, b. the great power be continually kept, 162, a. his death, ib. a.

turneth

Tangrolipix the Turk ſent to aid the Perſian Sultan, 3, b. by conſent of the Soldiers choſen Sultan of Perſia, ib. b. firſt Sultan of the Turks, ib. b. having ſlain Piſaſiris Calyph of Babylon in battel, joyneth his Dominions unto his own, ib. b. invadeth the Greek Emperors Dominions, 4, a. putteth to death his Brother Habramie, ib. b.

Tancred created Prince of Galliley, winneth Apamea and Laodicea, 18, a. after the death of young Bohemund created King of Antioch, 19, a.

Tarſus in Cilicia yielded unto Bajazet, 304, a.

Tartar-Han's Letters unto the King of Polonia, 758, a.

Tartar-Cham, why ſo ready to ſerve the Turk in his Wars, 846, ib. dieth, 887, b.

The Tartars ſpoil many places in Hungary, 813, a. repreſſed by Count Serini, 813, b. defeated by the Huſſars, 814, a. defeated by the Coſſacks, 928, b. defeated by the Troianoski, 935, b.

Tauris taken from the Turk by the Perſian, 825, a.

Tauris yielded to Selymus, 548, b. who, contrary to his promiſe, exacteth a great ſum of Money from the Tauriſians, and ſo departeth, ib. b. ſacked by Solyman 438, b. taken by the Turks, 698, b. hath a new Caſtle therein built by the Turks in ſix and thirty days, 699, a. miſerably ſpoiled, ib. a.

Taurica Cherſoneſus, with the Tartars Præcopenſes and Deſtenſes ſubdued by the Turks, 281, b.

Techellis invadeth the Turks Dominions, 319, a. overthroweth Orchanes and Mahometes, Bajazet's Nephews, 321, a. diſcomfiteth Caragoſes the Viceroy of Natolia, ib. b. killeth Alis Baſſa, 323, a. flyeth into Armenia, 324, a. robbeth a Caravan of Merchants, and therefore burnt at Tauris, ib. a.

Temeſwar taken by the Turks, 511, a.

Temurtaſes, Bajazet's Lieutenant in Aſia, taken Priſoner by Aladin the young King of Caramania, 144, a. again ſet at liberty, hangeth the Caramanian King, ib. a.

Teuffenbach taketh Sabatska, 722, a. winneth Fileck, ib. b. beſiegeth Hatwan, 725, b. overthroweth the Baſſa of Buda, ib b. giveth the ſame Baſſa a ſecond overthrow, 729, b.

Theobald King of Navarre maketh an unfortunate Expedition into the Holy Land, 70, a. with Lewis the French King goeth againſt the Moors, 83, a. in his return dieth of the Plague in Sicilia, ib. b.

Theodorus Laſcaris flieth into Bythinia, and poſſeſſing himſelf of many Countries, taketh upon him the Name of the Greek Emperour at Nice, 59, b. he killeth Jathatines the Turkiſh Sultan, 61, a.

Theodorus Laſcaris, Son to John Bataſes, choſen Emperour, 76, b. aideth the Sultan of Iconium, 77, a. falleth ſick and dieth, ib. a.

Theupulus Earl of Paphos unworthily hanged by the faithleſs Baſſa Muſtapha, 587, b.

Thracia ſpoiled by the Turks, 173, b.

Tockai taken by the Rebels, 875, b.

Tomombeius by the general conſent of the Mamalukes choſen Sultan of Egypt, 362, a. maketh great preparation againſt the Turks, and ſeeketh to entrap them, 365, b. his devices diſcovered, ib. b. he fighteth a great battel with Selymus, and is put to the worſe, 367, a. raiſeth new Forces at Caire, ib.b. fortifieth Caire, 368, b. fighteth a great battel in the City, 370, b. overcome, flieth, 371, a. driven out of Caire, raiſeth new Forces in Segeſta. 372, a. diſtreſſeth the Turks in paſſing the Bridg made over Nilus, 373, a. giveth a notable attempt to have gained the Bridge, ib. b. repulſed and put to flight, 374, a. taken and brought to Selymus, ib. a. tortured and ſhamefully put to death, ib. a.

Totiſa yielded to the Turks, 865, b.

Tranſilvania miſerably diſtreſſed, 840, a. the troubles ſecretly maintained by the Nobles, ib. a. new Troubles, 843, a. the Rebels ſurpriſed and ſlain, ib. a. the miſerable State of that Province, 843, b. new Troubles raiſed, 901, b.

Tranſilvania given by Solyman to the Child King John's Son, 483, b.

Trapezond yielded to Mahomet the Great, 245, b.

Treachery of the Polonian General, 936, b.

Tripolis in Barbary beſieged by Sinan Baſſa, 509, a. battered, ib. a. the weakeſt places thereof, and fitteſt to be battered, by a fugitive Chriſtian diſcovered to the Turks, ib. b. upon hard Conditions yielded to the proud and faithleſs Baſſa, 511, a.

Troubles in Moldavia, 902, a. new Troubles, 908, b. in Tranſilvania, 910, a.

Tumult at Pera, 933, b.

Tunes beſieged by Lewis the French King, 83, b. yielded to Charles the Emperour, 449, b. by him upon an eaſie Tribute again reſtored to Muleaſſes, 451, a. again yielded to the Turks, 620, b.

Turks, their original Beginning diverſly reported, 1, a. deſcended from the Scythians, 2, a. the cauſes why they left their ancient and natural Seats in Scythia, to ſeek for other in Countries more Southerly, ib. b. where they firſt ſeated themſelves in Aſia after their departure out of Scythia, ib. b. their firſt Kingdom erected in Perſia by Tangrolipix their firſt Sultan, 3, b. the Turks firſt called into Europe by the Catalonians, 106, a. they differ not from the Perſians about the Interpretation of their Law, but about the true Succeſſor of their falſe Prophet Mahomet only, 314, b. They raiſe an Army, 804, b. cowardly retire for fear of the Chriſtians, 805, a. carrying a Convoy of Victuals to Buda, overthrown by the Chriſtians, ib. b. the Convoy recovered by the Turks, 806, a. again taken from them by the Chriſtians, ib. a. overthrow the Garriſon of Peſth, ib. a. bathing themſelves at Buda, by them of Peſth ſurpriſed and ſlain, ib. b. ſeeking to ſurpriſe Palotta are overthrown, 807, a. three of their Spies taken, ib. b. overthrown by Collonitz, ib. b. together by the ears among themſelves, 811, b. defeated by Collonel Sultze, 823, b. again overthrown, 825, b. their Army ſtealeth by night out of Hungary, 828, b. overthrown by the Vayvod of Valachia, 834, a. the manner of their burials, 836, b. treacherouſly ſeek to ſurpriſe Peſth, 838, a. ſeek in vain to ſurpriſe Lippa, 842, a. overthrown by them of Peſth, 843, a. their unreaſonable demands for Peace, 848, b. troubled with Civil Wars, 857, b. betrayed by the Haiducks, 864, a. thinking to ſurpriſe others, are themſelves ſurpriſed, 877, a. repair to Buda in Multitudes, 882, a. their Army for Tranſilvania, 917, a. threaten War in Hungary, 920, a. their courſes there, 923, b. defeated at Vaſſelloy, 932, a. the Greatneſs of their Empire, and their beginning, 955, a.

Turqueminus choſen Sultan of Egypt, 111, b.

Tzihanger refuſeth the noble Muſtapha his Brothers Wealth and Treaſure offered him by his Father Solyman, and for ſorrow killeth himſelf, 516, a.

V.

VAcia ſhamefully betraied by the Haiducks, 558. b.

Valachia ſpoiled by the Tartars, 847, a. the Vayvod expelled his Country by Battori, 901, b.

Valachia when firſt ſpoiled by the Turks, 140, b. invaded by Mahomet the Great, 247, b. oppreſſed by the Turks, 737, b. in great Troubles, 798, b.

Valmes fortified by Mahomet the Great, 274, a.

Valetta the Grand Maſter of Malta advertiſed of Solyman's purpoſe for the Invaſion of him and his Knights, 536, a. his effectual ſpeech unto his Knights, ib. a. his great preparation againſt the Turks coming, ib. a. his whole ſtrength, 537, b. he certifieth Garzias of Toledo, Viceroy of Sicilia, of his Eſtate, 538, a. ſendeth a new ſupply into the Caſtle of S. Elmo, twice before aſſaulted by the Turks, 539, a. diſappointed of a ſupply to have been brought him by his own Gallies, ib. a. his Letters to Garzias the Viceroy of Sicilia, 540, b. he ſendeth three of his Knights to know the ſtate of them in the Caſtle S. Elmo, 541, b. encourageth his Soldiers after the loſs of the Caſtle, 542, b. his Chriſtian-like Letters to the Governor of the City of Melita, 543, a. his reſolute anſwer to the Meſſengers ſent unto him from the Great Baſſa, ib. b. he receiveth a ſmall ſupply from Sicilia, 544, b. maketh hard ſhift to ſend News of his diſtreſs to the Viceroy of Sicilia, 546, a. his comfortable ſpeech unto his Soldiers at ſuch time as the Turks were entred the new City, 550, a. his great carefulneſs, 552, b. his Letters to the Grand Prior of Almaine, concerning the manner of the Turks proceedings in the Siege of Malta, 553, a.
Venerius the Venetian Admiral, and Barbadicus their Proveditor perſwade the reſt of the Chriſtian Confederates to give battel unto the Turks at Lepanto, 590, a. coming to the relief of Don John, is encountered by Pattau Baſſa, 595, b. in danger, ib. b. at the requeſt of the Spaniards diſplaced, but not diſgraced, 601, b.
The Venetians with a great Fleet ſpoil the Coaſts of Lycia, Pamphilia, and Cilicia, 13, b. in the diviſion of the Greek Empire amongſt the Latines, had for their ſhare all the rich Iſlands of the Ægeum and Ionian, with the famous Iſland of Candy or Crete, 59, a. enter into Confederation with other Chriſtian Princes againſt the Turk, 265, b. they with their Confederates do the Turks great harm, 277, b. receive a great overthrow from the Turks at the River of Sontium, 282, b. their Merchants in Syria impriſoned by Campſon Gaurus the Egyptian Sultan, 321, a. their Senators diverſly affected towards the Confederation with the Emperour and the French King againſt Solyman, 467, b. they refuſe to yield up Cyprus unto Selymus, demanding the ſame, 569, a. make great preparation for their own defence, and crave Aid of the other Chriſtian Princes, 570, a. what Princes promiſed them Aid, ib. a. weary of the delays and croſs dealings of the Spaniards their Confederates, conclude a Peace with Selymus without their Knowledge, 613, a.
Veradinum beſieged by the Turks, 773, b. relieved by the Lord Baſta, 774, a.
Veſprinium taken by the Turks, 721, a.
Veſprimium yielded to the Rebels, 864, a.
Uſegi Baſſa taken Priſoner, 340, a. put to death, ib. b.
Vicegrade taken by the Chriſtians, 752, a.
Vicegrade yielded to the Turks by the Haiducks, 859, a.
Victor Capella with a notable ſpeech perſwadeth the Venetians to take up Arms againſt Mahomet the Great, 264, a.
At Vienna a ſtrange Accident of two Citizens, 842, a.
Vienna by Solyman beſieged, 411, a, b. badly fortified, ib. b. the Walls blown up, 413, a. thrice aſſaulted, ib. a. worthily defended, 413, b. Solyman glad to forſake the ſiege, 414, a.
Villerius choſen Great Maſter of the Rhodes, 382, b. his Letters to Solyman, 384, a. his careful proviſion for defence of his City, 385, b. 387, a. his notable ſpeech unto the Rhodians, ib. a. his worthy Commendation, 390, a. in vain craveth Aid of the Chriſtian Princes, ib. b. recovereth the Spaniſh Bulwark from the Turks, 395, b. his reſolute Opinion concerning Solyman's demand for the yielding up of the Rhodes, 399, b. his anſwer unto Solyman, offering unto him moſt honourable entertainment, 403, a. he departeth from the Rhodes with his Knights upon New-years-day, 404, a.
Viſnovisky a valiant Prince poiſoned by a Prieſt, 939, a.
A Viſion in the Air at Modina Talnobi, 953, b.
Uladiſlaus King of Polonia choſen alſo King of Hungary, 178, a. ſendeth Ambaſſadors unto Amurath lying at the ſiege of Belgrade, 179, a. goeth himſelf in Perſon againſt the Turks, 188, b. taketh Sophia, ib. b. ſpoileth Bulgaria, 189, a. highly commendeth Huniades for his good Service, ib. b. enforced with the Difficulty of the paſſage of the Mountain Hemus, retireth with his Army, 190, a. by the perſwaſion of Huniades and others retireth, and in vain ſeeketh to have opened the Mountain paſſage, 191, b. in his retreat much troubled with the Turks, 192, a. in great Triumph returneth to Buda, ib. b. upon moſt honourable Conditions concludeth a Peace with Amurath for ten years, 197, a. by ſolemn Oath confirmeth the League he had made with Amurath, ib. a. abſolved of that his Oath by Julian the Cardinal of S. Angel, reſolveth for the proſecution of his Wars againſt the Turks, 199, a. by his Ambaſſadors and Letters craveth Aid of Scanderbeg, ib. b. ſetteth forward againſt the Turks, 201, b. fighteth the great and unfortunate battel at Varna, 202, b. is there himſelf ſlain, 203, a.
Uluſales in the battel of Lepanto taketh twelve of the Venetian Gallies, 590, a. ſeeing the reſt of the Turks fleet diſcomfited, flieth himſelf, ib. a. is by Selymus the next year ſent out with two hundred Gallies againſt the Venetians and their Confederates, 602, a. meaning nothing leſs, maketh ſhew of battel, 604, b. cunningly retireth, ib. b. flieth from Navarinum into the Bay of Modon, 607, a. returneth with his weak Fleet to Conſtantinople, 612, a.
Uranacontes by Scanderbeg appointed Governor of Croia againſt the coming of Amurath, 220, b. with chearful ſpeech encourageth his Soldiers, 221, a. rejecteth Amurath's Preſents, and threatneth the Baſſa by whom they were ſent, 225, a.
The Uſcoques what manner of People they are, 943, a.
Ultrof Baſſa of Van inciteth Amurath to make War againſt the Perſians, 654, b. by Amurath commanded to begin the War, which he readily performeth, 655, b.
Uſum-Caſſanes the Perſian King ſendeth Ambaſſadors with Preſents to Mahomet the Great, 344, b. marrieth Deſpina the Daughter of Calo Johannes, Emperour of Trapezond, 278, b. in a great battel overthroweth Zenza the Perſian King, and killeth Cariaſuphus his Son, the laſt of the Poſterity of the Mighty Tamerlane, 279, a. in a great battel overthrown by Mahomet the Great, 280, a. his death, ib. a.

W

Walpo treacherouſly yielded unto the Turks, and the Traitors juſtly rewarded, 497, a.
The Walloons overthrow the Turks and Haiducks at Presburg, 864, a.
War betwixt the Grand Seignior and the King of Poland, and the cauſe why, 963, a.
War in Barbary, 900, a.
Wars by Amurath the Third proclaimed againſt the Emperor Rodolph, 86, b.

Waſwood an old Janizarie, his preſumptuous ſpeech unto Mahomet the Great Sultan, 745, b. taken out of Priſon by the reſt of the Janizaries, 746, a.

Water dear ſold, 447, b.

The Wife of Prince Coreſky, being Priſoner in Tartary, ſendeth a Meſſenger to ſeek her Husband, 941, b. who brings her Tidings of him, 942, a. and ranſoms her, ib. b.

Wiglaſe in vain attempted by the Haiducks, 861, b.

Wihitz the Metropolitical City of Croaria taken by the Turks, 714, b.

William King of Sicilia invadeth the Tirant Andronicus*'s Dominions, taketh the City of* Dyrrhachium, paſſeth through Macedonia and ſpoileth the Country, meeteth with his Fleet at Theſſalonica, which he alſo taketh by force and ſpoileth, 36, a.

William Long-Eſpie Earl of Sarisbury, with a band of tall Soldiers goeth into the Holy Land, 72, a. his ſtout anſwer unto Earl Robert the French Kings Brother, 73, b. valiantly fighting is ſlain, ib. b.

Wladus Prince of Valachia putteth Mahomet the Great in fear, 246, b. Wladus cruel, 247, a. dieth in battel againſt the Turks, ib. b.

Wine for a ſpace running down the Streets of Conſtantinople as if it had been Water after a ſhower of Rain, 798, a.

Wolfgangus Hoder upon the Danubius doth good ſervice againſt the Turks, 412, b.

X.

XAycus Pay-Maſter of the Rhodes intrapped by the Turks, and ſent Priſoner to be tortured at Conſtantinople, 386, b.

Xene the fair Empreſs, the young Emperour Alexius*'s Mother, maliciouſly accuſed of Treaſon, and ſo wrongfully condemned*, 34, a. by the commandment of Andronicus ſtrangled in Priſon, and ſo poorly buried, 34, b.

Xerif troubleth the Kingdoms of Fez and Morocco, 914, a. his beginning, ib. a. his Children grow potent, ib. a. they kill the King of Morocco, ib. a. feared by the King of Fez, ib. a. diſſention between the Brethren, and eldeſt taken Priſoner by the younger, ib. b.

Xerif Mahomet aſſaults the King of Fez, ib. b.

Xiphilinus by Alexius ſent over to Andronicus, dealeth unfaithfully in his Meſſage, 32, a.

Y.

YOland Daughter to King John crowned Queen of Jeruſalem, and after by her Father given in marriage to Frederick the Emperor, 67, b.

Z.

ZAcharias Groppa fighteth a Combat with Alhemaze a Turk, 254, a.

Zachel Moyſes the Tranſilvanian Prince's Lieutenant, in battel overthrown by Baſſa, 798, b. flieth unto the Turks, 800, a.

Zacynthus, Neritus, and Cephalenia taken by Achmetes Baſſa, 291, a.

Zamoſchic the Great Chancellor of Polonia ſtaieth the Tartars from the invading of Moldavia, 755, b. invadeth Moldavia himſelf, 756, a. his Letters unto Clement the Pope in defence of himſelf and of that he had done in Moldavia, 759, a. driveth Michael the Vayvod out of Valachia, and placeth another in his ſtead, 788, b.

Zanius the Venetian Admiral with a Fleet of 117 ſail, cometh to Corcyra, 574, b. he with the Confederates ſetteth forward towards Cyprus, ib. b. upon the foul diſagreement of the great Commanders returneth, 577, b. diſcharged of his Office, and ſent in bonds to Venice, 878, a.

Zeffer Baſſa recovereth the Government of Boſna from Zellaly, and ſhortly after dieth, 841, a.

Zellaly formerly a Rebel in Aſia, reconciled to the Grand Seignior, cometh into Boſna, 832, a. defeateth Zeffer Baſſa the Governour of that Province, and ſeateth himſelf therein, ib. a. by the Grand Seignior ſent for to the Port, 832, b. refuſeth to come, ib. b. made Governor of Temeſwar, 841, a.

Zembenic Caſtle the place where the Turks began firſt to ſettle themſelves in Europe, 129, a.

Zemes riſeth in Rebellion againſt his elder Brother Bajazet, 298, a. overthrown in battel by his Brother, flieth to Caytbeius the Sultan of Egypt, ib. b. he with the Caramanian King goeth againſt his Brother Bajazet, 300, a. flieth to Sea, ib. b. delivered unto Pope Innocent the Eighth, 303, b. by Pope Alexander delivered to Charles the French King, 307, b. dieth within three days after, being before by the Pope poyſoned, as is ſuppoſed, ib. b. his dead body ſent to Conſtantinople, and honourably afterwards buried at Pruſa, 308, a.

Zenza the Perſian King in a great battel overthrown and ſlain by Uſun-Caſſanes, 279, a.

Zerbi Iſland invaded by the Chriſtian Fleet, ſet forth for the recovery of the City of Tripolis in Barbary, 529, b. the Caſtle of Zerbi yielded unto the Spaniards, 530, a. a great part of the Chriſtian Fleet oppreſſed at Zerbi by the ſudden coming of Pial Baſſa the Turks Admiral, ib. b. the Caſtle of Zerbi beſieged by the Turks, 531, a. yielded unto the Turks, ib. a. the Turks in Triumph return with Victory to Conſtantinople, 531, b.

Zingis paſſing over the Mountains Caucaſus and Tauris, conquereth the Turks Dominions, 53, a.

Zoganes Baſſa by the device of a wicked Chriſtian bringeth ſeventy of the Turks Gallies eight miles over Land into the Haven of Conſtantinople, 233, b. perſwadeth Mahomet to continue his ſiege, 234, a.

Zolnoc a ſtrong Fortreſs of the Chriſtians in the upper Hungary taken by the Turks, 511, a.

October the 4*th*. 1687.

ADVERTISEMENT.

IN Michaelmaſs-Term next will be publiſhed Mr. MIEGE'S large Folio DICTIONARY, in French and Engliſh, and Engliſh and French.

Lately Reprinted.

THE Hiſtory of Philoſophy; containing the Lives, Opinions, Actions, and Diſcourſes of the Philoſophers of every Sect. Illuſtrated with the Effigies of divers of them, by Thomas Stanley, Eſq; the Second Edition.

T*Heſaurus Brevium*, containing Forms of Writs in the Kings-Bench, the Second Edition, very much inlarged, in Folio.

REgiſter of Writs, the Fourth Edition, very much enlarged; to which is added Thelloal's Digeſt of Writs, Folio.

A TABLE

To the Continuation of Mr. KNOLLES's Turkiſh Hiſtory;

Written by Sir PAVL RYCAVT, &c.

Note that [a] ſignifies the firſt Column of each Page, and [b] the ſecond.

A.

ABaſſi's Conduct not ſatisfactory to the Grand Signior, 280, a. Afterwards ſends him a Sable in Token of his Favour, ib. a. He receives a Mandate from the Grand Seignior to aſſiſt the Rebels in Hungary, 281. a. He diſcovers a Conſpiracy againſt his Life, ſuſpected the Germans, and thereupon revolts, 278, b.

Abaſſa Paſha of Erzirum his Rebellion, 1, b. he advances towards Conſtantinople, 5, b. is reconciled to the Grand Signior, 11, b. and made Paſhaw of Boſna, 12, a. made General in the War with Poland, 24, a. he is ſtrangled by command of the Grand Signior, 26, b.

Abermont, the Captain of the French Man of War, whereon Monſieur de la Haye arrived at Conſtantinople, incurs great danger of his Life, and wherefore, 170, a.

Achmet Great Vizier deprived of his Office and ſtrangled, 78, b.

Aleppo, the Merchants thereof more ſubject to troubleſom Avania's than others, and an Inſtance given, 130, a. b.

Alexandria, a Plague there, 54, b. the Alexandrian Fleet encountred by the Venetians, 122, b. taken by the Maltoſes in 1673, 235, a.

Algierines infeſt the Seas caſting off their Reverence to the Sultan, 9, b. land at Scanderone and rob the Ware-houſes, and then ſet them on fire, ib. b. infeſt the Gulf of Venice, 38, b. are blocked up by the Venetian in Valona, 39, a. make Complaints at the Port of the Engliſh Fleet commanded by the Earl of Sandwich, but find no Encouragement, 115, a. they make a Peace with the Engliſh, 129, a. the Articles ſigned by the Grand Signior, 136, b. they are carried by the Author to Algier, with a Relation of two pleaſant paſſages in his Journey, 137, a. they except againſt an Article of the Peace, and ſend a Letter to His Majeſty, whereupon the War breaks out afreſh, 139, a. the inconſtancy of their Government, ib. a.

Ali Paſha ſlain in Meſopotamia by the Perſian, and his Army routed, 6, a.

An Alliance entred into between the Emperor, the King of Poland, and the Venetians, 308, a.

The French Ambaſſador threatned to be ſent Priſoner to the ſeven Towers, 284. b.

Sultan Amurat advanced to the Throne at fourteen years of age, 2, a. deſcribed, ib. b. his lewd debaucht life, 14, a. 15, b. like to have been killed by Lightning, which works ſome Reformation in him for the preſent, 17, a. he ſends an Ambaſſador into Perſia, ib. b. A Peace made with the Perſians, but quickly broken, 20, b. ſeveral Acts of his Tyranny, 23, a. he deſtroys Taverns, ib. b. makes War on the Poles, ib. b. ſues to them for Peace, 24, a. more Acts of his Cruelty. 28, a. forbids all Houſes of Entertainment, ib. a. goes in perſon with his Army into Perſia, ib. b. muſters at Erzrum three hundred thouſand fighting Men, 30, a. his Patience and Labours, ib. a. cauſes his two Brothers Bajazet and Orchan to be ſtrangled, ib. a. he returns from Perſia to Conſtantinople, 31, b. his averſion to Tobacco, 32, a. more Inſtances of his Cruelty, ib. a. & 37, 38, a. he reſolves again to march in perſon into Perſia, 37, a. he begins his March in May 1638. 38, a. the Hiſtory of his March, 41, b. 42, a. the whole Army arrives before Babylon or Bagdat, 42, b. he takes it, 43, b. his braving Letter to the King of Perſia, 44, a. he returns to Conſtantinople, ib. b. he dyes of a Fever contracted by a Debauch, 47, b. his Character, 48, a.

Colonel Anand, an Engliſh-man, and one Stefano Cordili made Plenipotentiaries to treat with the Great Vizier about the ſurrender of Candia, 217, b.

Michael Apaſi conſtituted Prince of Tranſilvania by the Turks, 110, b. his Letter to the Earl of Winchelſea, Engliſh Ambaſſador at the Port, 121, a. b. he is beloved of his People, 146, a.

Prince Thomas of Aremberg ſlain, 289, a.

Aſac beſieged and taken by the Moſcovites and Coſſacks, 35, b. beſieged by the Turks in the year 1641. but not taken, 52, a. again beſieged in 1642. and then taken, being abandoned by the Inhabitants, 53, b. After it had been ſacked by the Moſcovite in 1674. the Turk rebuilds it, 240, b.

Aſan Paſha of Aleppo, rebels and marches towards Conſtantinople, 91, a. he joyns Battel with the Great Vizier, and diſcomfits him, ib. b. he is treacherouſly ſtrangled by Mortaza Paſha, 92, a.

Aſan Aga, the Moſayp, or Favourite, his Story, 134, a.

Auſtria ſpoiled by the Turks in the Year 1663. 141, a.

B.

Babylon or Bagdat taken from the Turks by the Perſians in 1626, 6, a. the Turks laying ſiege to it to recover it are beaten off, ib. a. likewiſe the ſecond time, 9, a. a third time, 16, a. the Grand Signior himſelf commanding the Army takes it, 43, b.

Bakockza taken by Count Serini, 146, b.

Ballarino, Secretary to Signior Capello the Venetian Bailo, ſupplies his Office, 88, a. his ſorrowful Letter to Senator Nicolo Contarini, 122, b. his Character, 123, b. he is ſuſpected by the Turks to uſe Sorcery, 132, b.

Balſora taken by the Perſian, 6, a. its Paſha rebels in 1667. and is forced to flee into Perſia, 194, a.

Baltagibaſhee, what, 134, b.

Cardinal Barbarini beſtows a Penſion of eight hundred Crowns a Month upon Count Serini, 153, a. he ſupplies the Venetians with four thouſand Meaſures of Corn in their Wars in Candia, 194, a.

Barcan taken by Count Soiſſe, and burnt, 156. b. beſieged by the Chriſtians, 305, b. taken, 306, a. the grand Slaughter there, ib. a.

The Baſſas of Buda, Erſeck, and Poſſega ſtrangled, 303, a. The Baſſa of Buda ſtrangled by the Grand Signior's Order, 278, b. The Baſſa of Weradin ſtrangled by the Grand Signior's Order, 279, a.

Girolomo Bataglia, and Franceſco Bataglia, Proveditors General, both killed at the Siege of Candia, 204, b.

Duke de Beaufort, the Pope's General at Sea deſires of the King of France, his natural Prince, leave to try his Fortune by Land at the Siege of Candia, 212, b. he is killed there, 214, b.

Bechir Paſha of Babylon joyns with Abaſſa in his Rebellion, 3, a.

Beker Paſha of Rhodes ſtrangles the Paſha of Cyprus, 54, a. made Captain Paſha, 55, a. put to death by Order of the Grand Signior, 56, b.

Belgrade; here the Great Vizier had his Winter-quarters the firſt Year of the Hungarian War in 1663. 145, a. reſides there the ſecond Winter after the Peace made, 161, b.

Signior Bembo obtains a Victory over the Turks at Sea, 90, a.

Sir Tho. Bendiſh, Ambaſſador at the Port, his Expedient for obtaining redreſs of Wrongs offered to the Merchants, 58, a. he oppoſes the forcing of Engliſh Ships into the Turks Service againſt Candia, but without effect, 83, a.

Berclay made Prince of Tranſilvania, 107, b. the Tranſilvanians depoſe him, 110, a.

Berzenche taken by Count Serini, 146, b.

Bethlem Gabor, vid. Gabor.

Biram Paſha made Great Vizier, 34, a. is ſlain at the Siege of Babylon, 43, a.

A Blazing-ſtar ſeen in moſt parts of the known World in 1664. and particularly in Turky, with their opinion what it portended 162, a.

Dukes of Brunſwick and Lunenburg aſſiſt Candia with three thouſand men, 206. a.

Buda, the Garriſon their mutiny, but upon ſurrendring four of the Ring-leaders to puniſhment, and craving pardon, things are quieted and paſt by, 19, b. The Siege of Buda, 309, a. 319, a. ſome Standards taken and preſented to the Duke of Lorrain, with 15 Barks loaden with the Wives and Children of the Turkiſh Officers of Buda, with great Riches, 320, a. an Account given by a Deſerter of the Condition of the Beſieged, ib. b. General Schoning arrives with the Brandenburg Auxiliaries, 321, b. Several Mines ſprung by the Beſieged, 323, a. b. An Aſſault made with great loſs on both ſides, 323, 324. Letters from the Beſieged diſcovered, 324, a. another Mine ſprung, and ſeveral Miners in danger of being covered by the Earth, ib. b. ſeveral falſe Allarms, 325, a. Captain Libert an excellent Miner loſt, ib. a. Two Mines ſprung by the Turks with little harm, ib. a. Preparation for a general Aſſault, ib. a. The Caſtle blown up, ib. b. The Baſſa ſummoned to ſurrender; but refuſes, ib. b. A general Aſſault, 326. b. The Generals of the Infantry being moſt wounded, they of the Horſe were ordered to ſupply their places, 327, b. A ſecond Summons ſent, 328, a. The Baſſa's Anſwer, ib. a. Another Aſſault, 329, a. The Beſieged expect Succours, ib. a. their Succours defeated, 331, a. Another Attempt of the Grand Vizier's to relieve the Beſieged, 332, a. The Sieur Rummel ſlain with a Musket Bullet, ib. a. Another Attempt to relieve the Beſieged, 333, a. Upon the Chancellors' arrival from the Emperor a Council of War called, and a general Aſſault made, the Beſiegers enter the City, 334, a. Abdi Baſſa, the Governour, ſlain, ib. b. The great Treaſure taken, ib. b. The Grand Vizier decamps immediately upon the taking of Buda, ib. b. purſued by the Duke of Lorrain, 335, a.

C.

Caffa taken by the Tartars from the Turks, but ſoon reſtored, 11, a.

Cairo, a Rebellion of the great Beghs there, 149, b. another, 259, a.

Caminiec taken by the Turks in eleven days, 233. a. blocked up by the Poles, 239, a. but the Siege raiſed by the Turks, 240, b.

Candia, its General fights a Turkiſh Gally belonging to the Archipelago (miſtaking it for a Pirate) commanded by Dervis Bei, which had like to have broke the Peace, but the Venetian Ambaſſador at the Port makes up the buſineſs, 10, a.

Candia (the Iſle) how it became the Poſſeſſion of Venice, 61, a. what the occaſion of the Turks making War againſt it, 55, b. the beginning of the War, 59, a. The Turks Sea and Land Forces at firſt employed in it, what, ib. b. what the preparations of the Venetians, 60, b. the Turks land in this Iſle, 61, a. what ſupplies the Venetians had towards this War from Chriſtendom, ib. b.

Candia (the City) firſt beſieged in 1647. by the Turks, who were then forced to raiſe the Siege, 75, b. beſieged a ſecond time in 1650. and again beaten off, 83, b. beſieged a third time, when the Turks loſing 3000 Men at one Aſſault again drew off, 84, b. this War carried on faintly by the Turks for ſeveral years, 114, a. proſecuted afreſh in 1666. 185, b. what aid the Venetians then had from Chriſtian Princes, 188, b. the Fortifications of the Town deſcribed, and what Quarters were poſſeſſed by the Beſiegers and Beſieged, 195, a. the Hiſtory of the Siege continued (uninterruptedly) from 195 to 207, and from 211 to 219. its Duke killed, 206, b. large Succours ſent thither from France, 212, b. the Gariſon makes a notable Sally, but with bad ſucceſs, 213, b. French Officers ſlain in this Sally, 214, b. the French depart, 215, a. a Council held to conſider of the ſtate of the Town, 216, a. the reſult of the Council to enter into a Treaty with the Vizier, 217, b. the Conditions of Peace, 218, b. the Town delivered to the Turks, 219, b. an account of the number of the ſlain on both ſides, the Batteries, Storms, Sallies, &c. ib. a. what a ſad ſpectacle of Deſolation at its Surrender, 220, a.

Canea taken by the Turks, 61, b. they land here forty thouſand fighting Men, 74, b.

Cantemir, a Tartar, makes a new Colony, 34, b. being driven out of it by the Tartar Han, he is ſtrangled at Conſtantinople, 35, a.

Marin Capello takes the Algierine Gallies in the Port of Valona, 39, b.

Antonio

Antonio Capello, Commander of the Venetian Gallies, 60, b.

Gio. Capello made Doge General of the Sea, 62, a. what his Armata, ib. a.

Signior Capello Bailo at the Port impriſoned, 85, b. his ill uſage caſts him into a deep Melancholy, 86, b. his Commiſſion taken from him, 88, a. he dyes at Conſtantinople, but his Corps conveyed to Venice, 124, a.

Cara Muſtapha. See Kara Muſtapha.

Caramoſauls, what, 22, b.

Carriſia, a ſtrong Gariſon, allarms all Croatia, 277, a.

Caſchaw ſurrendred, 315, a.

Caſimir King of Poland reſigns his Crown, and how Affairs then ſtood there, 231, b.

Count Ceſi French Ambaſſador at the Port, 27, b.

Cheitan Ibrahim, Seraskier, condemned to loſe his Head for the Defeat at Gran, Newheuſel, &c. 318, a.

Chirſaleas, a courageous Captain, 145, b. is ſlain near Serinſwar, 152. a.

Chuſaein the Great Vizier advances Sultan Amurat to the Throne, who ſoon depoſes him from his Office, and afterwards cauſes him to be ſtrangled, and why, 2, 3.

Chuſaein Paſha, General of the Turks in Candia, 82, a. is made Great Vizier, but to reſide ſtill in Candia, 84, a. is diſcharged from the Office of Great Vizier, 86, a. is put to death by the Great Vizier Kuperlee, 92, b.

Chuſaein Paſha of Buda beſieges Leventz, 154, b. is routed by Count Soiſe, 155, b.

Another Chuſaein Paſha is made Governor of Caminiec, 233, b.

Claudiopolis beſieged by the Turks, but not taken, 111, a. yeilds it ſelf to Apaſi, Prince of Tranſilvania, 147, b.

Cliſſa taken by Foſcolo, the Venetian General, 76, a. the Turks endeavour to regain it, but are beaten off, 82, b. it is deſcribed, 172, a.

Count Coligni, Commander of the French Troops in Hungary, joyns Montecuculi, 154, b. his Valour at the great Battel with the Turks on the Raab, 158, a. having received Honours of the Emperour he returns homewards with his Army, 161, a.

Conſtantinople, a terrible Fire there in 1634. 25, b. a great Plague there in 1661. 111, b. an Inſurrection there on the account of the Grand Signior's Brothers, 211, a. another Plague there, 315, a. Great Diſorders there, 315, a. 318, a.

Corban, what, 2, a. the manner of it among the Turks, 144, b.

Andrea Cornaro, General and Inquiſitor in Candia, 60, b. is ſlain in the defence of Retimo, 61, b.

Another Andrea Cornaro, Captain-General of the Venetians, 186, a. being made Proveditor General, he is ſlain at Candia with a Granado, 212, a.

Coron taken by the Venetians, 317, a.

Coſacks, their Boats deſcribed, 4, a. in them entring the Boſphorus they make great ſpoil on the Turkiſh Coaſts, ib. a. they infeſt the Black Sea, 11, a. again more numerouſly, 14, b. their Country deſcribed, 36, a. the ground of the War betwixt them and the Poles, 36, a. b. they again infeſt the Black Seas, 82, b. they infeſt the Tartars, 133, a. great numbers of them carried into Captivity by the Turks, 241, b. they aſſaſſinate their General, 311, b. they give the Turks and Tartars a great Defeat, 308, a.

Croſs. The Vayvod of Valachia cauſed a prodigious Croſs to be erected before his Tent in the Camp at Vienna, 298, b.

Sir Sackvile Crow's difference with the Turky Company, 62, &c.

Curdi or Cordiazi their Country deſcribed, their Religion and Manners, 118, a.

Cyrillus the Patriarch ſtrangled at the falſe and malicious ſuggeſtions of the Jeſuits againſt him, 38, b.

Czecherin, a great Battle there between the Turks and Moſcovites, where the Turks being worſted, after rallied, aſſaulted and took the Town, at laſt are forced to retire for want of Proviſions, 280, a. b.

D.

DAlmatia one ſeat of the War betwixt the Turks and Venetians, 75, a. after Candia was ſurrendred, Commiſſioners are ſent hither by the Turk and Venetian for determining the differences of the Confines, 227, b. all the Particulars adjuſted, and the War between the Turk and the Venetian ended, 228 a.

Damaſcus revolts to the Perſian 6, a.

Clipt Dollars called in by the Great Vizier, 130, a. his Steward's Treaſurer put to death for diſobeying this Command, ib. a.

Doroſensko, General of the Coſacks revolts to the Turks, 232, a.

Dunelma, or a Feſtival among the Turks, how celebrated, 144, b.

The Dutch Reſident unjuſtly ſentenced to make ſatisfaction for Goods belonging to Turks on board a Dutch Veſſel ſurprized by Venetian and Malteſe Corſairs, 136, a.

E.

EGypt, the Government there at preſent rather Ariſtocratical than Monarchical, 259. a.

Elia Paſha rebels in Anatolia, but being firſt beaten in the Field, and then beſieged in Magneſia, ſurrenders himſelf upon fair promiſes, but at his arrival at Conſtantinople is ſtrangled, 19, b.

Elmas, a Village in the Upper Hungary, near which the German and Turkiſh Ambaſſadors uſe to be exchanged, 184, b.

Embrahore, that Office what, 263, a.

The Emperour ſends an Envoy to the Port, who diſputes with the Engliſh Ambaſſador for Precedence, 47, a. He craves aid of ſeveral Princes againſt the Turks; 283, b. He and the King of Poland make a League Offenſive and Defenſive, 286, b. He comes to the head of his Army, 287, a. He leaves Vienna, and retires to Lintz, 289, a. His Army retires to their Winter Quarters, 306, b. He publiſhes an Act of Oblivion, 308, b. His Army with the Confederates rendezvouſe at Barkam, 318, b. The Empreſs Crowned Queen of Hungary, 282, a.

Engliſh Trade firſt introduced into Turky, when, 96. what befel the Nation and Trade in Turky in the Year 1662. 128, b. the Cuſtom endeavoured to be raiſed at Aleppo and Scanderone in 1665. by the Cuſtumer, 172, b. the Scale alſo threatned to be removed from Scandarone to Tripoli in Soria by the Lord Treaſurer, but both without effect, 173, b. An Engliſh Factor in Smirna, deſigning to cheat ſeveral Principals in England of 215 fine Cloaths, and a conſiderable Summ of Money, turns Turk, but without ſucceeding in his Knavery, 239. b.

Ephraim Baſſa kill'd by a Cannon, 309, a.

Franceſco Erizzo elected by the Venetians Doge General of the Sea at the beginning of the War in Candia, 60, b. but hindred by Death from executing that Office, ib. b.

Erzirum ſiding with the Rebel Abaſſa is beſieged by the Turks who are beaten off, 10, b. but is ſurrendred voluntarily upon Abaſſa's Reconciliation, 12. a.

Eſperies ſurrendred, 115, a.

Eſſeck, Part of the Bridge burnt by Count Leſly, 316, a. the City of Eſſeck taken, ib, a.

F.

FAcardin an Arabian Prince his Hiſtory, 21, b. 22, a.
Feſtivals, how celebrated among the Turks, 252, a.b.
Filek taken by the Turks, 283, a.
Sir John Finch Engliſh Ambaſſadour at the Port, 239, b.
Fire hapning in Vienna at the time of the Siege much endangered the Magazine of Powder, 290, b.
Five-Churches taken by the Imperialiſts, 335, b.
Count Forgatz overthrows a Party of Turks making Incurſions into Hungary, 82, b. being Governour of Newhauſel at the Turks invading Hungary in 1663. adviſing a Sally is with his Party routed, 141, b.
Leonardo Foſcolo his ſucceſs againſt the Turks in Dalmatia, 75. b. his ſucceſs in Boſna, 82, b. he is ſent into Candia with the Title of Generaliſſimo in the room of Mocenigo, 84, a.
Marqueſs Frangipani, with others offer themſelves to the Turk in 1670. 221, a. they find not the protection deſired, but are overtaken by the hand of Juſtice, 230, b.
The French force the Tripolins into the Haven of Scio, 283, b.
French Ambaſſador impriſoned, 20, a. his Interpreter impaled, ib. a. another Interpreter of theirs hanged, 27, b. their Ambaſſador Marcheville forcibly ſent away, ib. a.
French Ambaſſador at the Port impriſoned contrary to the Law of Nations, 105, a. that King remits an hundred thouſand Crowns to Venice to aſſiſt them againſt the Turks, 188, b. three French Ships of War arrive in the Helleſpont, 208, a. an Ambaſſador from the Grand Signior to the French King, ib. b. the King ſends ſeven thouſand Men to the Relief of Candia, commanded by the Duke of Navaiſle, &c. 212, b. after having ſuffered great loſs there, 214, b. they depart, 215, a. a French Ambaſſador accompanies the Turks late Envoy to France in his Return to Conſtantinople with three Men of War, who bear themſelves very inſolently at their arrival, 228, b. what Succeſs he had in his Embaſſy, ib. b. he obtains ſome new Priviledges for his Nation, 236, b. and Licence to travel in the Turks Dominions, 237, b.
Count Fuchier General of the Artillery of the Empire killed at the great Battel betwixt Montecuculi and the Turks on the Raab, 157, b.
La Fueillade with two hundred French Gentlemen, Adventurers for Honour, and four hundred common Souldiers arrive at Candia, 205, a. having had above half of his Men ſlain in a deſperate Sally, he with the remainder returns home, 206, a.

G.

GAbor Prince of Tranſilvania makes War on the Emperour, 4, b. the reaſon of it, 5, a. he obtains Aid of the Turks, 4, b. a Truce made, 5, a. the Turks not keeping it are in ſeveral places diſcomfited by the Emperour's Forces, 5, a. the Truce ended, being aided by Duke John of Weymar and Count Mansfelt, as alſo by Morteza Paſha of Buda, he fights Walleſtein the Emperour's General, and routs his Army, 6, a. whereupon a Peace is made betwixt the Emperour and Prince, ib. b. he dyes, 13, a. his Character, ib. a. b. leaving no Children his Widow for a while keeps the Government, but is perſuaded to reſign it to Stephen Gabor, who yet keeps it not, but reſigns it to George Ragotski, ib. b.
Genoeſe make Peace with the Turk, 164, b. they ſettle a Trade in Turky, 165, a. they ſend a new Reſident, who through the bad ſucceſs of Affairs falling into a melancholy, kills himſelf, 230, a. their Trade turns to very ſmall account, 255, a. b.
Georgia, ſome troubles there, 119, a.
Captain Georgio a famous Pirate taken by the Turks, 202, a.
Germans continue their Truce with the Turks, 21, a. deluded by the Turks pretences of Peace, 131, b. their Preparations for War with the Turks in 1663, 140, a. what Confuſions then in their Councils, 143, a. they ſend Miniſters to implore aid of Chriſtian Princes, 149, a. their Forces in 1664. what, ib. a. their great Inclination to Peace, notwithſtanding their good Succeſs, whence, 160, a. a Peace concluded between them and the Turks, ib. b. they ſend an Ambaſſador to the Grand Signior, 164, a. what his Preſents were, ib. b. his Embaſſy ended with mutual Contentment, 169, a. the Controverſie between him and the Turkiſh Ambaſſador at the place of Exchange, 184, b.
Jembeg Gheray ſucceeds Mehmet in the Kingdom of Tartary, 12, b. 13, a. diſpeeds 40000 Horſe into Podolia and Ruſſia to Ravage the Country, who are intercepted by the Poles and Coſacks in their Return, and almoſt all cut off, 13, a. he is treacherouſly ſlain, 35, a. Bechir Gheray his Brother ordained King in his ſtead, ib. b.
Signior Giavarina ſent to the Great Vizier at the Siege of Candia to make Propoſals of Peace, 196, b. he dyes there of the Camp Diſtemper, 199, b.
Gran beſieged and taken by the Chriſtians, 306, b. beſieged by the Turks, 313, b. The Battel of Gran, 314, a.
Gregorians, a great Slaughter made of them by the Turk, 9, a.
Grillo, the Venetian Bailo's Interpreter, ſtrangled, 82, a.
Proveditor Grimani made Captain-General in the room of Capello, 75, a. he ſuffered Shipwrack and was drowned at the Iſle of Pſara, ib. b.
Emir Gumir betrays Revan to the Turks, 31, a.
Emir Gumir a Perſian Traitor ſtrangled, 52, b.

H.

HAlil Paſha made Great Vizier, 2, b. made General in the War with Perſia, 8, b. is recalled, 9, a. is put out of his Office, 10, b.
Hammerling, ſlain before Quinque Eccleſiæ, 147, a.
Count Herberſtein ſlain before Quinque Eccleſiæ, ib. a.
*Chevalier d'*Harcourt his Gallantry at the Siege of Candia, 196, b.
Sir Daniel Harvey, Ambaſſador from His Majeſty to the Port, 209, a. has his Audience of the Grand Signior at Salonica, 221, a. he dyes at Conſtantinople, 234, a.
Haſaki the Queen-Mother takes on her the protection of her Sons, 207, b.
Monſieur la Haye (the Father) Ambaſſador at the Port impriſoned contrary to the Law of Nations, 105, a.
Monſieur la Haye (the Son) propoſed by the French King to the Grand Signior and Great Vizier to be ſent Ambaſſador to the Port, in a Letter to each of them, and the Vizier's Anſwer thereto, 125, b. 126, a. b. he arrives as Ambaſſador at the Port, but ſlightly treated at his firſt arrival, 169, a. b. his firſt Audience, 169, b. his ſecond Audience, 171, a.
Hoſſman ſent Ambaſſador to the Grand Signior, 279. a. ſtopped at Belgrade in his Return from Conſtantinople, ib. b.
An Horſes tail ſet forth at the G. Vizier's gate is the ſignal of the Camps motion within a month, 131, b.

Huſaein Paſha of Siliſtria marries the G. Vizier's Siſter, 159, a.
Hungarians aſſiſted by the G. Signior in their Revolt from the Emperor, 279, a. The occaſion of the Hungarians Revolt from the Emperor, 278, a.
Hungary, the War begins there betwixt the Emperor and Turk in 1663. 140, a. the Hungarians unſatisfied with the Peace made by the Emperor with the Turk, and why, 160, b. but through the Emperor's Arguments brought to acquieſce in it, 161, a. what gave occaſion to the Rebellion there, 231, a. they petition to the Turks for aſſiſtance, 236, a.

I.

JAmbolat Ogli ſtrangled, 33, b.
Janiſaries unruly, 1, a. 2, b. they are curbed, 12, b. they again grow more inſolent, 18, a. b. but are ſoon tamed by the Sultan's ſeverity, 19, b.
Janiſaries, the formality of making them in theſe days, 200, b. they mutiny, 315, a.
Janoua in Tranſilvania taken by the Turks, 107, a.
Sultan Ibrahim ſucceeds his Brother Morat in the Throne, 49, b. his luxurious and effeminate way of living, 50, b. 58, a. 76, a. complimented by foreign Miniſters, 51, a. ſeized with an Apoplexy, ib. b. has a Son born, viz. Sultan Mahomet that now reigns, 53, a. a ſecond and a third Son, 54, a. a fourth and a fifth, 55, b. his lacivious fancy for a big Woman, 58, b. he falls in love with his Brother's Widow, but is rejected by her, 76, b. he falls alſo in Love with the Mufti's Daughter, who is taught by her Father to reject his Love, 77, a. he takes her by force, but after a few days Enjoyment returns her to her Father, 78, a. by the Mufti and his Accomplices he is depoſed and afterwards ſtrangled, 79, a. his Deſcription and Character, ib. b.
Ibrahim Paſha of Caro impriſoned there by the Beghs, but ſoon obtains his Liberty, 150, a. is deeply fined by the Grand Signior, ib. a. is made Paſha of Darbiquier, ib. a. arrives at Candia with 800 Spahees, 202, b.
Ibrahim Baſſa made Vizier inſtead of Kara Muſtapha, 308, a.
Jeruſalem, a great Controverſie betwixt the Religious there of the Latin and Greek Churches about the holy Sepulchre, 242, a. the Poſſeſſion of it adjudged by the G. Vizier to the Greeks, ib. b.
Jews how treated in Turky, 12, b. ſtrangely deluded by Sabatai Sevi the pretended Meſſiah in 1666. 174, 175, 178. they flock from all parts to him, 178, b. their ridiculous fancies concerning Elias, 180, a. b. they receive a new form of Worſhip from Sabatai Sevi, 179, a. but are enjoyned, upon his turning Turk, to return into their old Method, by the Cochams of Conſtantinople, 182. a.
Illay near Babylon Gariſoned by the Turks, 16. a. retaken in an Aſſault by the Perſians, ib. b.
Iſhmael Paſha of Buda made Chimacam of Conſtantinople, 131, b. killed at the great Battel upon the Raab, 157. b.

K.

KAniſſa beſieged by Count Serini, 148, b. the Siege raiſed, 152, a.
Kara Mehemet kill'd by a Shot, 309, b.
Kara Muſtapha made Great Vizier, 263, a. his kindneſs to the Servants of Kuperlee his Predeceſſor, ib. a. his Pride and Inſolence to foreign Miniſters, 262, a.
Kara Muſtapha ſucceeds Achmet the G. Vizier, 277, a. he is ſtrangled, 308, a. his great Treaſure, ib. a.
Katirgi Ogli Paſha of Canea his Original and Life, 207, a.
Kemenius made Prince of Tranſilvania, 110, a. he is routed by Ali Paſha and ſlain, 111, a.
Kemenitz. See Caminiec.
Kioſem the Queen-mother her Artifice to advance her Son Ibrahim to be Emperour, 49, a. ſhe is impriſoned by him, but by ſubmiſſion ſoon obtains her Liberty, 76, b. ſhe conſents to his being depoſed, 78, a. ſhe with the G. Vizier and twelve Paſha's govern during Sultan Mahomet the Fourth's Minority. 79, b.
Komorra, where ſituate, 140, b.
Kul-Ogli the Grand Signior's Favourite, 157, a. he marries the Grand Signior's eldeſt Daughter, 253, a.
Kuperlee (the Father) Paſha of Damaſcus made Great Vizier, 88, b. his Diſpoſition, 104, b. he gets his Son joyned with him in the Office, and procures the Succeſſion therein for him, 112, b. his Rules given to the Grand Signior, 113, a. he dies, ib. a.
Kuperlee (the Son) ſucceeds his Father in the place of Great Vizier, ib. a. endeavours to eſtabliſh himſelf, 116, a. his Cruelty to the Germans of Newhauſel, 142, a. his Artifice to quiet the Minds of his ſhattered Army after their great Defeat on the Rab by Montecuculi, 158, b. he ſends for his Mother to Belgrade, who was eſteemed a cunning Woman, 161, b. he offers to the Son of the Tartar Cham to depoſe his Father, but the Son accepts not the profer, 162, b. he returns to Adrianople to the Grand Signior, 163, b. he arrives with his Army in the Iſle of Candia, 188, b. ſits down before the City of Candia, 195, a. his Juſtice on ſome diſorderly Souldiers at the Surrender of Candia, 219, b. he drinks Wine exceſſively, 223, b. he is brought thereby into a Dropſie whereof he dies, 262, a. his Character, ib. b.

L.

LEmnos taken by the Venetians from the Turks, 89, a. retaken by the Turks, 90, b
Count Leſlie German Ambaſſador to the Turks. See Germans.
A Letter ſent from the Vizier to the Beſieged in Vienna, 209, b.
Levents, who ſo called, 127, b.
Leventz, or Lewa, a Town in Hungary, taken by the Turks, 144, b. retaken by the Germans under the Command of Count Soiſe, 154, a. again beſieged by the Turks, but not taken, ib. b.
Lewentz ſurrendred to the Turks, 283, a.
Lintz, the Emperour removes from Vienna hither at the beginning of the Hungarian War in 1663. 143, b.
Lorrain, his great Care at the Siege of Vienna, 291. a. he meets the King of Poland with his Son at the head of the Army, 298, a. he oppoſes the parting of the Armies, 305, a. His Conduct at Buda. See Buda.
Dukes of Lunenburg and Brunſwick aſſiſt Candia with 3000, 206. a.
Lupulo Prince of Moldavia deſires the Sultan to confer the Principality of Valachia on his Son, &c. 45, b.

M.

MAhomet IV. born 53, a. ſucceeds his Father at ſeven Years of age, 79, a. removes his Court to Adrianople, 111, b. returns again to Conſtantinople, 115, b. his extravagant hunting, 116, a. & 171, a. 221, a. he concerns himſelf about Affairs of the Government, 116, 117. again removes his Court to Adrianople, with a deſcription of his Cavalcade, 132, a. his Averſion to Conſtantinople, 151, a. 162, a. he has a Son born, 151, a. he ſeeks to deſtroy his Brothers, 162, a. he paſſionately loves his Queen, 165, a. 221, b. he returns with the Great Vizier to Conſtantinople, 166, b. he reſides at Lariſſa during the Siege of Candia, 200, a. 207, b. his Antipathy to Tobacco, 207, b. a ſecond Attempt to deſtroy his Brothers, 211, a. the News of the Surrender of Candia brought to him at Negropont, and how he received it, 220, a. he reſides the Winter following at Salonica, 221, a. then returns to Adrianople, where he receives the Great Vizier with great Reſpect at his Return from Candia, 224. b. a third Attempt to deſtroy his Brothers, which takes effect, on the elder of the two, 229, b. he circumciſes his eldeſt Son, and marries his eldeſt Daughter to Kul-Ogli, 253, a. his Government commended, 251, b. he returns to Conſtantinople, 258, a. the Reaſons of it, ib. b. he goes back to Adrianople, 262, a.

Mahomet Paſha made Great Vizier, 78, b. he with the Mufti and other Accomplices conſpire the death of Sultan Ibrahim, 79, a. he is depoſed from his Office, and afterwards murdered, 82, b.

Mahomet Paſha of Aleppo marries the G. Signior's Siſter, 159, a.

Mahomet Paſha of Romelia ſent Ambaſſador to Vienna, 162, b. what his Preſents to the Emperor were, 163, a. his ſordid way of living at Vienna, 185, a. his Controverſie with the German Ambaſſador at the place of Exchange, 184, b.

Malta, the Gallantry of the Knights of Malta at the Siege of Candia, 197, a. the Malteſes with ſix Gallies take the Fleet deſigned for Alexandria, which had on board the Kuzlir Aga, with his Slave and her Son, and all his Treaſure, 56, a.

Marcello, a General of the Venetians ſlain in a Sea-fight with a Cannon-bullet, but dyes a Conqueror (in 1656.) 89, a.

Count de Mare killed at Candia, 207, a.

Marqueſs of Marcheville, French Ambaſſador at the Port, for his Complaints againſt the Captain-Paſha, is forcibly ſent away, 27, b.

Vicenzo della Marra Governour General of the Arms of Candia killed there, 75, b.

Matthew Prince of Valachia obtains a Victory over Lupulo Prince of Moldavia, 45, b.

St. Maura taken by the Venetians, 311, a.

Maxims of the Turkiſh Policy, 279, a.

Medina taken by the Perſian, 6, a.

Mehmet elected King of the Tartars by the people, overcomes his elder Brother Gherey, whom the G. Signior would have impoſed on them, 3, a. he defeats him a ſecond time, though aſſiſted by the G. Signior, 10, b.

Mehmet Paſha of Cairo made Great Vizier, 19, a.

Count Mellin ſlain, 289, a.

Michael Korebut Wiſnowieſki elected King of Poland, 231, b. he dyes, 239, a.

Mocenigo General of the Venetians gains a great Victory at Sea over the Turks in 1651. 85, a. another in 1655. 87, b. in another his Ship blown up and himſelf ſlain, 90, a.

The G. Mogul promiſes to aſſiſt the Turk, if he will break with the Perſian, 10, b.

Moldavia, troubles there, 19, b. the Prince Revolts to the Poles, 238, b.

Franceſco Molino Proveditor General to the Venetians, 60, b. made Doge General of the Sea, ib. b. diſmiſſed from that Charge, 61, b.

Alviſé de Molino ſent Ambaſſador to the Port, but is transferred to the Vizier at Candia, 208, a. after the Siege ended he paſſes to the Court at Adrianople, 227, a.

Mongatz refuſed to be ſurrendred by Teckely's Wife, 315, b.

Marqueſs S. Andrea Montbrun made Governour of Candia, 203, a. his diligence in his Charge, 204, b.

Count Montecuculi, Governour of Rab, made a General at the beginning of the War in Hungary in 1663. 140, b. puts a thouſand Men into Newhauſel, 142, b. joyns with Count Serini, 152, a. clears Serinſwar of Serini's Forces, ib. b. repels the Great Vizier at Kemend endeavouring to paſs the Rab, 156, b. gives a ſecond great Defeat to the Turks at Chiesfalo on this River, killing ſeventeen thouſand, 157, b. for which he is highly applauded and made Lieutenant-General of the whole Army, 158, a. Reaſons why his Services were more acceptable than thoſe of Serini or Soisé, ib. a.

Morat, vid. Amurat.

Moravia ſpoiled by the Turks in 1663, 143, a.

Morlacks revolt from the Turks to the Venetians, 76, a.

Girolamo Moroſini Commander of the Venetian Galleaſſes, 60, b. braves the Turkiſh Fleet, 74, a. killed by a Musket-bullet ſhot through his Head, 75, a.

Franceſco Moroſini made Captain-General for the Venetians, 194, b. he obtains a Victory over the Turks and is Knighted, 101, b. he refuſes a Preſent from the Vizier at the Surrender of Candia, and why, 219, b.

Gioſeppo Moroſini Captain of the Venetian Galleaſſes, 197, b.

Moroſini the Venetian General takes great part of the Morea, 333, a.

Mortaza Paſha treacherouſly ſtrangles the Paſha of Aleppo, that formidable Rebel, 92, b. for which piece of Service, &c. being made Paſha of Babylon, and removed from thence, he flees to the Curdi, whoſe Kings Daughter he had married, who deliver him into the Turks hands, and they ſtrike off his Head, 117, b. 119, a. ib. b.

Morteza Paſha of Buda joyns with the Prince of Tranſilvania againſt the Emperour, 6, a. b. he with the Prince make Peace with the Emperour, 7, a.

Moſul taken by the Perſian, 6, a.

The Muſcovites preſs the King of Poland to conclude a League Offenſive and Defenſive againſt the Turk, 280, b.

Muſick in the Turks Camp at the Siege of Vienna, 293, a.

Sultan Muſtapha his incapacity for the Government, 1, a. is depoſed, 2, a. commanded to be ſlain by Sultan Morat, 44, b.

Muſtapha Great Vizier ſtrangled by Command of the Queen-Mother, 55, a.

Muſtapha, Captain-Paſha, loſes his Head, 50, b.

Muſtapha Paſha of Grand Cairo in Egypt, 53, a. made Paſha of Siliſtria, ib. a, Muſtapha, Captain-Paſha, made Chimacam of Adrianople, 131, b. his Affection and Popularity, 163, a.

A Mutafaraca, what, 162, b.

N.

Nadaſti with others offer themſelves to the Turk in 1670, 221, a. they find not the Protection deſired, but are overtaken by the hand of Juſtice, 230, b.

Bernardo Nani made Proveditor General, and arrives at Candia with five hundred Foot, 200, b. he is killed by a Musket-ſhot in the Head, 204, b.

Napoli di Romania ſurrendred to the Chriſtians, 338, b.

Narenta in Dalmatia taken by the Venetians, 311, a.

Count Naſſaw killed in the great Battel betwixt Montecuculi and the Turks on the Rab, 157, b.

Nathan, a Jew, an Accomplice with Sabatai Sevi, the pretended Meſſiah, gives out himſelf to be Elias, 175, a. his Letters to Sabatai Sevi, and the Jews of Aleppo, ib. a. b. he arrives near Smyrna, 182, b.

The Duke de Navaille Commander of the Succours from France in Candia, in 1669. 212, b. after having loſt many of his Men he departs from thence, 215, a. for which he incurs the diſfavour of his Prince at his Return home, ib. b.

Navarino ſurrendred to the Chriſtians, ib, b.

Nehemiah Cohen a Rival of Sabatai Sevi in his Meſſiahſhip, 179, a.

Newhewſel beſieged by the Turks in 1663, 142, b. it bravely defends it ſelf being ſtormed, 143, a. the Turks ſtorm it a ſecond time, and are repulſed, ib. b. it is yielded upon Conditions, ib. b. its new Baſſa aſſaulted by the Imperialiſts whilſt on his Journy, 279, a. beſieged by the Emperour, 287, b. he ſuddenly raiſes his Siege, ib. b. again beſieged, 312, a. Taken by Aſſault, 313, a.

Nitra, by the Cowardiſe of the Commander, betrayed to the Turks, 145, a. taken again by the Chriſtians under the Command of Count Soisé, 153, b.

The Nogay Tartar deſires Lands of the Grand Signior, for which they are fallen upon by the Crim Tartar, 171. b

Monſieur de Nointel Ambaſſador at the Port from France, 228, a.

Novigrade ſurrendred to the Turks, 145, a. taken by the Imperialiſts, 309, a.

O.

Opium its Operation with the Turks, 137, b, more fully deſcribed, 223, b.

Oſeck and the Bridge adjoining to it of ſix or ſeven Miles long taken by Serini and burnt, 147, a. the Bridge is built again in forty Days by the Turks, 151, b.

P.

Padavini dyes at Canea, 199, b.

Count S. Paul, together with la Fueillade, &c. arrive at Candia, 205, a. their Valour, ib. b.

Peace offered in vain by the Turk, 314, b. 317, b. 318, a. The Emperour ſends an Ambaſſador to the King of Perſia to break the Peace, whereby to divert the Grand Signior from a War with Hungary, 280, a.

Perſia, the King enters the Turks Dominions with a powerful Army, 5, b. his Succeſs, 6, a. ſends an Ambaſſador to the Port with Propoſals of Peace, but without effect, 9, b. ſends another likewiſe without effect, ib. b. the Perſians receive a Defeat by the Turk, 14, b. Peace made with the Turk, but quickly broke, 20, b. the King again ſends an Ambaſſador to the Port with Propoſals of Peace, 34, a. who not ſucceeding in his Errand is forced to accompany the Turkiſh Army into Perſia, 38, a. After the loſs of Babylon they ſend another Ambaſſador to the Port, 45, a. who obtains a Peace, ib. a.

Peſt taken by the Chriſtians, 315, a.

Signior Piſani, Proveditor General of the Kingdom, killed by a Granado at Candia, 199, a.

Plague at Conſtantinople, 315, a. The Plague at Hungary, Newheuſel, and ſeveral parts in the Turkiſh Countreys, 280, b. 285, a.

Poland, that King offers to enter into a League with the Emperour if he would declare War againſt the Turks, 280, b. he and his Son met by the Duke of Lorrain at the head of his Army, 298, a. his Speech to his Souldiers at the Siege of Vienna, 300, b. his Son preſented with a rich Sword by the Emperour, 303, a. he retires to his Winter-Quarters, 306, a. he takes the Field, 311, b. the manner of the marching his Army from Kalemberg to Vienna, 299, 300. their skirmiſhing with the Turks, 301, b. the Turks Flight, 302. a. the great Treaſure loſt in their Camp, ib. b. the K. of Poland enters Vienna, ib. b, Poles make Peace with the Turks, 16, b. but the Turks ſoon break it, taking part with the Moſcovites, 24, a. they ſend an Ambaſſador to the Port, ib. b. give a great Defeat to the Moſcovites, who profer an advantageous and honourable Peace to the Poles, which is accepted, 26, b. they are ſued to for Peace by the Grand Signior, and at laſt conſent, ib. b. the Peace confirmed by the Turk, 33, a. they fruitleſly complain at the Port of the Incurſions of the Tartars, 51, a. kill ten thouſand of them returning from ſpoiling the Countreys of Moſcovia, 55, a. upon another Incurſion, wherein the Tartars carried away an hundred thouſand Captives, they again ſend an Ambaſſador to the Port, who being diſguſted with his ill Treatment falls into a Fever and dyes, 189, a. b. the Turks deliberate a War againſt Poland, and the Cauſes of it, 231, a. the War breaks out in 1672, 233, a. the diſtracted Condition of the Poles at this time, ib. a. they accept very diſhonourable and diſadvantageous Conditions of Peace, ib. b. refuſing to pay their Tribute the War breaks out afreſh, 235, b. 237, b. they obtain a conſiderable Victory over the Turks, 238, b.

Poliſh Army in a great fright, 305, a. forced to retire, 336, a. the Affairs of Poland, 316, a. 336, a.

Poſſonium garriſoned, 144, a.

Presbourg receives a Garriſon of Hungarian Malecontents, 292, b.

Preveſa taken by the Venetians, 311, b.

Pſara, a great part of the Venetian Fleet caſt away there, 75, b.

Q.

Quinque Eccleſiæ ſtormed by Count Serini, who put all the Inhabitants to the Sword for their Treachery, and burnt the Town, 147, a.

R.

Rab (the Fortreſs) the Turks ſeek to take it by Stratagem in 1642. 53, b. the Deſcription of it, 140, b.

Rab (the River) the great Defeat of the Turk by Montecuculi here, 157, b.

Ragotski elected Prince of Tranſilvania, 14, a. he refuſes Aid from the Turks, 17 a. he inſtates one Matthias in the Principality of Valachia, and ejects one conſtituted by the Grand Signior, called Stridia Bei, or Lord Oyſters, 21, a. Stephen Bethlem, that had been his Competitor for the Principality, ſtirs up the Turk againſt him, whom he defeats in ſeveral Battels, 28, b. 30, a. b. whereby he is confirmed in the Principality, and obtains alſo from the Port a Confirmation of the ſame for his Son, ib. b.

Ragotski, Prince of Tranſilvania, raiſes Troubles in Hungary, 54, b. his ambitious Spirit, 105, b. he invades Poland, 106, a. beaten by Zerneski General of the Poles, 106, a. depoſes himſelf, ib. b. reaſſumes the Principality, 107, a. beats the Paſha of Buda, ib. a. is again depoſed, ib. a. and again aſſumes the Principality, ib. b. joins Battel again with the Paſha of Buda, but is beaten and dyes of his Wounds, 108, a. his Character, ib. a.

Ramadam, a Sangiack of Egypt, taken Priſoner in a Sea-fight by the Venetians, and moſt of his Fleet conſiſting of twenty three Ships taken or ſtranded, 194, b.

Redeius made Prince of Tranſilvania in the ſtead of Ragotski, 106, b. forced by Ragotski to relinquiſh his Power, 170, a.

Count Remorantino killed at the firſt Siege of Candia by the Turks, 75, b.

David Retani his Diligence and Courage in defending Claudiopolis, 111, a.

Retimo taken by the Turks, 61, b.

Revan betrayed by the Governour Emir Gumir to the Turks, 31, a. recovered by the Perſian, 32, a.

Aug. Roſtayne Adjutant of Marqueſs Villa at Candia killed with a Cannon-bullet, 203, a.

S.

SAbatai Sevi the pretended Meſſiah of the Jews in the Year 1666, 174, a. his Parentage and Education, ib. b. his Declaration, 175, a. he arrives at Conſtantinople, and is caſt into a Dungeon, afterwards impriſoned in the Dardaneſſi, 178, a. while he remains there he inſtitutes a new Method of Worſhip for the Jews, 179, a. he is accuſed to the Chimacam of Adrianople by Nehemiah Cohen, a Rival of Sabatai in the Meſſiahſhip, 181, a. being threatned with Death he turns Turk, 181, b. his Death in 1676. 184, a.

Samozadé, the Great Vizier's Secretary, his Ruine, 135, b. his vaſt Eſtate, ib. b.

The Chevalier de Savoy killed, 288, b.

Schinra aſſaulted by the Great Vizier, but he is beaten off, 145, a.

Sebenico beſieged by forty thouſand Turks, who were forced to raiſe the Siege, 75, b. the City deſcribed, 172, a.

The Iſland of Schultz attempted by the Turks, 285, again taken, 286, a.

Segedin taken by the Chriſtians, 335, b.

Selictar Aga who, 15, b. he is made Great Vizier, ib. b. gains a Victory over the Perſians, 14, b. beſieges Babylon, but is beaten off, 16, a. he returns to Conſtantinople, and is deprived of his Office, 18, a.

Seraglio at Conſtantinople in a great part burnt, 166 a.

Serches Paſha, vid. Selictar Aga.

Count Nicholas Serini Commander of Croatia beſieges Caniſia, but commanded by the Emperor to raiſe the Siege, 110, a. he raiſes a Fort on the Turks Dominions, and calls it Serinſwar, ib. b. he is made General of an Army in Croatia in 1663. by the Emperor, 340, b. his juſt Cruelty to ſome Turkiſh Priſoners, 142, b. his Fortune and Conduct, 143, b. a notable Inſtance of his Valour, 145, b. his incomparable Diligence and Succeſs, 147, a. b. he eſcapes a great Danger, 148, a. upon a Diſguſt from Montecuculi he retires from the Wars, 152, b. Reflections on his Diſgrace, 153, a. the Preſents ſent him and Honours done him by Chriſtian Princes, ib. a. he is ſlain by a wild Boar, 161, a. his Character, ib. a.

Count Peter Serini defeats the Turks in the Streights of Morlac, 148, a.

Serini Prince of Croatia, Count Nadaſti, and others offer themſelves to the Turks in 1670, 121, a. they find not the Protection deſired, but are overtaken by the hand of Juſtice, 230, b.

Serinſwar taken by the Turks and razed, 152, b.

Shart, what, 137, b.

Shecher Para, a Pander for Sultan Ibrahim's Luſt, 76, b.

Sigeth beſieged by Count Serini, but not taken 147, a.

Smyrna, a Beſaſteen or Exchange and a Cuſtom-houſe built there by the Turks, 256, a.

Sobieski great Marſhal of Poland obtains a great Victory over the Turks in 1673, 238, b.

Count Soiſc his Succeſs in the Upper Hungary againſt the Turks, 153, b. he beats a Body of fourteen thouſand Turks, ib. b. he routs Chuſaein Paſha of Buda with twenty five thouſand Turks, 155, b. his Commiſſion taken from him, but afterwards he is made Governour of the ſtrong Fortreſs of Komorra, 156, b.

Solyman Paſha, Kayab-begh of the Janiſaries, baniſhed into the Deſarts of Arabia, 113, b.

Solyman Baſſa made Vizier, 318, a.

Soranço, the Venetian Ambaſſador at the Port, impriſoned at the beginning of the War in Candia, 60, b. he is ſent home, 83, b.

Prieſt Sorich Captain of the Morlachs his undaunted Spirit, but hard Fate, 76, a.

Baron Spaar ſent General into Dalmatia, 133, a. arrives at Candia, 207, a.

Spalato in Dalmatia deſcribed, 171, b.

General Sporch joins Montecuculi and Serini near Serinſwar, 152, b.

Sultana Sporcha her Hiſtory, 259, b.

A Spy brings a Letter from the Duke of Lorrain to Count Staremberg to aſſure him of a Supply, 292, a. A Spy taken returning from Vienna to the Duke of Lorrain, ib. a. another ſent by the Duke of Lorrain taken by the Turks, 293, b. Another informs Count Staremberg of Relief deſigned within eight Days, 296, b.

Staremberg, C. Governour of Vienna, his Care in Defence thereof, 291, a. his Service requited for the Defence of Vienna, 303, a.

Styria near Gratz, an Inroad made thereunto by Abaffi, and a thouſand Priſoners carried off, 281, b.

Count Strozzi by his ſmooth Arguments is received into Poſſonium with his Regiment, 144, a. is ſent Ambaſſador to the French King to implore aid againſt the Turks, 149, a. his Speech to the French King, ib. b. he is ſlain by a Musket-bullet near Serini's Fort, 152, a.

Sultan Queen follows the Grand Signior into Hungary, 287, b.

Sweeds conquer Cracovia, 106, a. totally routed afterwards by the Poles, ib. b.

T.

TArtars their kind of Life, 133, b. join with the Turks in their War againſt Hungary, 134, a. invade Poland in 1667, and carry away near one hundred Thouſand Captives, 189, a. their Diſpoſition, 240, b. they make Inroads as far as Trinchein, and carry away eighteen thouſand Slaves, 282, b. a great Body of them make an Incurſion into Hungary, 288, a. ſwimming a River they ſurprize the Baggage of the Emperor's Army on their Retreat to Vienna, ib. b. the Tartars the Forerunners of the Turks Army commit great Outrages about Vienna, 289, b. They deny Aſſiſtance to the Turks, 312, a.

Tartary, the King thereof treacherouſly ſlain, 35, b.

Tauris taken by the Turks from the Perſian, 8. b. utterly deſtroyed by them, 31, b.

Tekeley ſucceeds Weſſelini in Command of the Male-contents in Hungary, 279, b. being ſuppoſed to be inclinable to return to his Obedience is offered the Principality of Tranſilvania after the Death of Abaffi, 281, a. he receives great Favours from the Baſſa of Buda and Preſents from the Grand Signior, 282, a. Some affirm he was declared King of Hungary, ib. b. he marries the Princeſs Ragotski, ib. b. he cauſes Money to be coined, comed, 283, a. he makes Propoſals of Peace, but upon too diſadvantagious terms to the Emperor, 285, a. he breaks the Ceſſation between him and the Emperor, 286, b. has a Son born at Mongatz, ib. b. he publiſhes a Manifeſto in the G. Signior's Name and his own, whereupon many Places revolt to him, 288, a. he is ſuſpected by the Grand Signior, 307, a. his bold Reſolution to juſtifie himſelf, ib. a. the Conteſts in Upper Hungary between him and the Imperialiſts, 315. a. betrayed by the Baſſa of Waradin, ib. a. ſent in Irons to Adrianople, ib. b.

Falſe Temins, the Story of them, 209, b.
Tenedos taken by the Venetians, 89, a. quitted again by them, 90, b.
Tranſilvania invaded by the Turks in 1661, 107, b. again in 1662, 121, a. a Hiſtory of its miſery, 122, a. the Turks make frequent Incurſions into it in 1665. yet the German Ambaſſador then at the Port would not interpoſe in their Behalf, 168, b.
A Treaſure found in a Vault at Vienna, 296, b.
Tripoli, Peace made by the Engliſh with the Tripoleſes in 1663, 138, a. they rebel againſt their Paſha Oſman, beſiege him in his Caſtle, and procure him to be ſtrangled, aſſuming the Form of Government of Algier, 234, a.
Pirates of Tunis infeſt the Seas, 9, b. See Algierines. Peace made by the Engliſh with Tunis, 138, a.
Turks keep no Reſidents in foreign Courts, the Reaſon thereof and the Conſequence, 50, a. eſteem Ceremony to be Submiſſion, 51, b. the Richneſs of their Tents, 132, b. the little Reſpect they bear to foreign Miniſters, 136, b. ſuperſtitious Admirers of old Propheſies, 150, b. their uſual Compliment to foreign Ambaſſadors, 165, a. 169, a. difficult to bring a Turkiſh Miniſter to Puniſhment, 174, a. they fall to drinking Wine exceſſively, 223, b. but it is ſoon forbidden them by the Grand Signior's ſpecial Command, which is recited, 225, a. The Turks conclude a Peace with the Poles and Moſcovites, 281, a. they make great Preparation for the War againſt Hungary, 282, a. the Turkiſh Court and Ladies contribute for the carrying on the War in Hungary, 286, b. the Turkiſh Army compoſed of 200000 Men advance into Hungary, 287, b.

V.

THE Prince of Valachia, by the Treachery of his Servant is forced to flee his Country, and to retire into the Emperour's Territories, 159, b. another Prince of Valachia is carried by his own Souldiers to the Poles in 1673. but makes his Eſcape from them. 238, a.
Valona, the Venetian Admiral takes fourteen Algierine Gallies in this Port, 39, a. b. which boldneſs the Venetians are glad to make amends for to the Port, 46, a. b.
Van beſieged by the Perſian, 33, b.
Vanni Effendi, a Shegh, a notable Diſpute between him and the Mufti, 150, a.
Varadin beſieged by the Turks, 108, b. the Inhabitants crave aid of the Emperour, but obtain none, ib. a. the Fortreſs deſcribed, 109, a. it is ſurrendred, ib. b.
Vayvod of Valachia cauſed a prodigious Croſs to be erected before his Tent in the Camp at Vienna, 298, a.
Venice, the Wars of Venice, 337, a. The Venetians declare War againſt the Turks, 310, a.
Monſieur de Ventelay. See la Haye.
Vienna, what Proviſion it made for it ſelf at the beginning of the War with the Turk in 1663, 140, b. 144, a. abandoned by the Emperour who removes to Lintz, 143, b. it is fortified by the Emperour, 284, b. 285, b, it is beſieged, 289, 290, &c. A Fire happening at Vienna during the Siege much endangered the Magazine, 290, b. Signs given to the Beſieged in Vienna of Relief at hand, 298, b. The Grand Seignior leaves the Siege of Vienna, 302, a. Cauſes the Heads of five of his Women to be cut off, leſt they might fall into the hands of the Chriſtians, ib. a.
Marqueſs Villa received into the Service of the Venetians as General of the Foot, and made Governour of Candia, 166, b. 186, a. his Speech to the Senate, 167, a. he ſurveys the Forts in Dalmatia in his paſſage to Candia, 171, b. he lands at Candia, 186, a. he takes the Field, ib. b. but after an aſſault or two of the Turks retires again into the Town, ib. b. 187, a. he is recalled by the Duke of Savoy his natural Prince, but by the interceſſion of the Pope and State of Venice licence for his continuance is obtained, 190. b. he is again recalled and departs, 203, a, b. his Speech to the Senate at his return, ib. b.

W.

WAldeck General of the Lunenburg and Brunſwick Forces in Candia ſlain there 206, a.
Earl of Winchelſea ſent Ambaſſadour to the Port, 97, a. his Anſwer to the Captain-Paſha propoſing to him to hire ſome Engliſh Ships to ſerve in the Wars againſt Candia, 166. a.
Wirtemberg ſlain at the Siege of Newheuſel, 315. b.
Wiſozki Ambaſſadour from Poland to the Port, his inſolent behaviour there, 232, a.

Y.

YAmboli, a famous Hunting of the Grand Signior there, 159, a.

Z.

ZAtmar beſieged by Abaffi, 281, b. Forced the City, but could not take the Cittadel, ib. b. Taken by Tekely, 283, a.
Zechelhyd revolts from the Emperour to Apaſi Prince of Tranſylvania, 146. a.

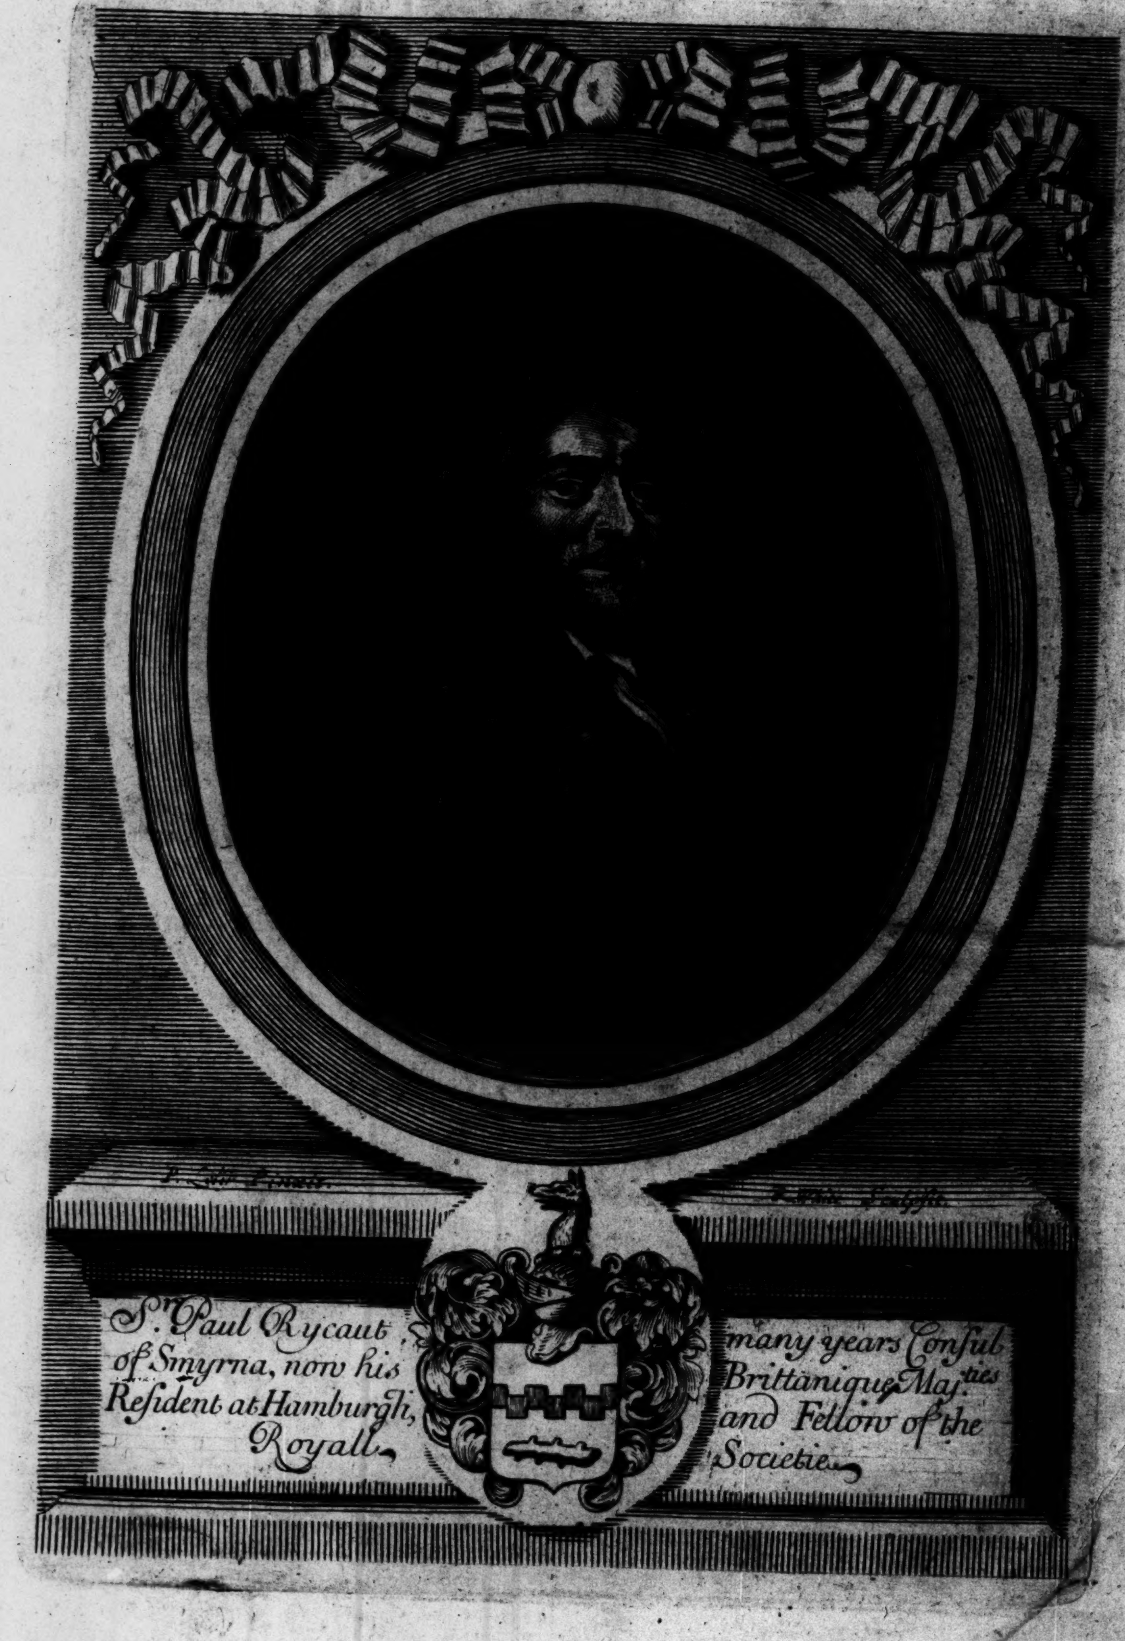
The End of the TABLE.

LB My 30



P. Lely Pinxit
R. White Sculpsit

Sr. Paul Rycaut, many years Conſul of Smyrna, now his Brittanique Maj.ties Reſident at Hamburgh, and Fellow of the Royall Societie.

Richard Knolles

THE HISTORY OF THE TURKS.

BEGINNING

With the Year 1679.

Being a full Relation

Of the Laſt Troubles in Hungary, with the Sieges of Vienna, and Buda, and all the ſeveral Battles both by SEA and LAND, between the CHRISTIANS, and the TVRKS, until the End of the Year 1698, and 1699.

IN WHICH

The Peace between the Turks,

AND THE

Confederate Chriſtian Princes and States, was happily Concluded at Carlowitz in Hungary, By the Mediation of His Majeſty of Great Britain, and the States General of the United Provinces.

vol. III.

With the Effigies of the Emperors and others of Note, Engraven at Large upon Copper, which Compleats the Sixth and Laſt Edition of the Hiſtory of the Turks. In Two Vol. in Folio.

By Sir PAVL RYCAVT, Kt. Eighteen Years Conſul at Smyrna, now his Majeſty's Reſident at Hamburg, and Fellow of the Royal Society.

LONDON:
Printed for Robert Clavell, in St. Paul's Church-Yard, and Abel Roper againſt St. Dunſtan's Church in Fleetſtreet. MDCC.

DR 439
.R75

TO THE

King's Moſt Excellent MAJESTY

WILLIAM III.

King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c.

Great SIR,

THE Dedication of this following Hiſtory of the Turks, may moſt juſtly be Addreſſed to the Clemency and Patronage of Your Majeſty for Two Reaſons. Firſt, Becauſe the greateſt Part of this Treatiſe was Written at Hamburg, whilſt I was actually employed for the ſpace almoſt of Eleven Years in the Service of Your Majeſty, the which, I hope will not be looked upon as a Point of my Demerit, or Neglect in my Duty, to have taken out ſo many Hours as this Work might Require from the Service of Your Majeſty. For I can ſafely ſay, and that Your Majeſty's Secretaries alſo in England, and Abroad, can Atteſt for me, that I have been diligent in my Office, and have neglected nothing therein, which my Duty and Services to Your Majeſty might require, and expect from me; for it was Written at my Vacant Hours, when nothing of my other Services could give me the leaſt Avocation.

But what may chiefly oblige me farther to this Dedication, is the Healing, Powerful, and Succeſsful Hand which Your Majeſty hath Applied by Your Ambaſſadors, in making that Peace at Carlowitz, between the Chriſtians and the Turks, which will ever be remembred in Future Ages, and which (as Your former Actions ſhewed the World You were a great Captain in the Arts of War) ſo this will give good Proof You were a Wiſe and Prudent Governor in the Exerciſes of Peace; And may deſerve to have that Motto inſerted in Your Eſcocheon, Beati ſunt Pacifici.

And ſo may Your Majeſty be always Bleſſed and Proſperous in this Life, and Your Great Good Works Rewarded in Heaven. Which are the moſt Devout Prayers of

Your MAJESTY's

Moſt Obedient Subject, and moſt Humble,

Devoted, and Dutiful Servant,

Hamburgh Jan 15.
1700.

Paul Rycaut.

THE PREFACE TO THE READER.

Courteous Reader,

I Would not have Thee entertain a worſe Opinion of this Hiſtory, by Reaſon of the Place where it was Wrote and Finiſhed, being at a far diſtance both from Conſtantinople and Vienna: Though perhaps it might have been more lively, had its Colours been laid on in the Places themſelves, where the Actions were performed; and at a time when the Humour of the Turks, and the Idea I conceived of their Actings, had taken ſo ſtrong an Impreſſion in my Mind, that whilſt I was upon the Place, I could ſuffer nothing to paſs my Pen, without its due Obſervation. Being thus accuſtomed to ſuch Contemplations as theſe, in my more Youthful Days, I could not let paſs the continual News, and the conſtant Intelligences I received from Hungary, and other Parts which were the Seats of War between the Chriſtians and the Turks, without making ſome Reflections thereupon.

After which, I might juſtly challenge the Privilege of an Exauctorate, or of a Miles Emeritus*: And I think I need not Blot any more Paper for the future on any Subject relating to the* Turks*; for having arrived, at that great Period of the laſt Wars, concluded between the Emperor of* Germany*, and all his Allies againſt the* Turks*; It may appear how much the* Ottoman Force is able to avail, when it is put into the Scale and Ballance againſt all Chriſtendom.

It hath been an ancient Cuſtom, and Policy amongſt the Turks*, in the time of their proſperous Succeſſes by which their Empire was enlarged, never to continue a War longer than for three Years, in which time they always advanced conſiderably, and would make no Peace with their Neighbours, until their Triumphs and Acquiſitions would anſwer the expences, and effuſions of their Blood, and Treaſures: After which they commonly fixed Twenty Years for the Settlement, and Security of thoſe new Conqueſts and Plantations; in which time many young Soldiers being Born and Bred up in Arms, they not only took thoſe Habitations for their Native Soil, but eſteemed them alſo to be by the* Mahometan Religion obliged ever to defend and maintain them. But theſe laſt Wars, have quite put the Turks out of their Ancient Methods*; for inſtead of maintaining a War no longer than Three Years, they have been forced to continue it for more than Twenty, to the great Ruin and Deſtruction of their Empire. I have always been of Opinion, That the* Turks could never maintain a War for longer than Three Years, I mean with benefit, and profit to the advancement of the Ottoman Empire, of which I once made very perſpicuous Obſervations. Whilſt I was in the Camp with them, I found the Timariots very poor, and wanting at the end of that Term, ſo that they ſtoal from each other their Bridles and Saddles, Lances, and all other neceſſaries of War, and would excuſe themſelves by ſaying, that they could not do otherwiſe in ſo long a War of more than their Three Years: And in like manner the Janiſaries by their ancient Conſtitution might challenge a Privilege to quit the Service at the end of the Month of October*, and in caſe they were not called, they might then Disband themſelves, on St.* Demetriu's Day, which is the 28th Day of October*, at which time the* Janiſar Aga*, could not without danger of his own Life in ſome mutiny deny them diſmiſſion for that Year's Campaign: Which the* Janiſaries eſteemed always a Privilege due to their Order, but the Aſiatick Timariots called Timar Spahcelar were always ſooner diſmiſſed, in conſideration of the long Journies they were to make to their Winter-Quarters, ſome of them being as far diſtant, as Bagdat or Babylon*, as* Damaſcus or Scham*, as* Aleppo and Iconium*, and other Parts, which to Travel backwards and forwards would take up commonly four or five Months* time: After which to paſs a Summers Campaign, was very Laborious for the Aſiatick Forces to undergo, (who commonly are eſteemed a ſoft People) which yet they were obliged to do on Forfeiture of all their Hereditary Eſtates; in which the Turks by their ancient Conſtitutions were ſo Rigorous, that they would admit of no excuſes for their abſence, even of Death it ſelf; for in caſe the Father died lealeaving an Infant Son of a Year old, even then he was obliged to the VVar, though he was carried in the Arms of his Nurſe. The Hungarians conſequently, being always in Action, and obliged to a perpetual Duty againſt the Enemy, were never excuſed from a ſtrict vigilance over all the Motions of their Neighbours, whom in the times of Peace we might properly call Enemies; for they Fought very often, and yet without VVar ſo called; for in caſe they met, and engaged in the Field with a leſs number than Five thouſand Men on a ſide, and without Cannon, it was not called VVar, but a Martial Exerciſe in the times of Peace; and that is the reaſon, why we find ſo many Palancas raiſed over all Hungary on one ſide, and the other, which are deſigned to give a ſtop to any ſuddain Irruption of an Enemy, within which Palancas (ſo called) the Poor Inhabitants on either ſide, Shelter their VVives and Children, their Horſes and Cattle, with all their Faculties and Subſtance, it being not lawful for the Enemies on either ſide to poſſeſs them.

Beſides, on their High-ways and Roads to a Market, every thing was to be ſecured, and neither ſide could touch the ſame without Juſtice performed upon due Complaints made to the Paſha, or Chriſtian Governour of the Province. This was the Ancient Conſtitution whilſt the Turks prevailed in Hungary: But ſince the laſt VVar and Peace concluded, things no doubt have been ſet upon another Foot, and other Proviſions have been made to ſecure the Chriſtian Cauſe and Intereſt; for before this time the Turks were become the moſt Inſolent People in the VVorld, and would never do Juſtice to a Chriſtian; for unleſs it were conſiſtent with their own Intereſt and Deſign, they would ſhew themſelves Proud, Haughty and Supercilious, expecting Gifts, and returning none, expecting for a Flower a piece of Gold, or ſome piece of Cloth of the fineſt Dye and Spinning we have in England; and to this Paſs were the Turks come, that they called the Preſents made to them by the Chriſtians to be their Tribute, and the Ambaſſadors ſent to them, they acknowledged for no other, than for Mahapous (as they called them) which ſignified Hoſtages given for Peace, and the Security of the Good-behaviour of their Maſters towards the Port: Their Pride was alſo ſo extraordinary, that they would never vouchſafe, to require any Counterpart from the King, or Prince with whom they Treated, or Copies, unleſs ſuch as were conſerved amongſt their Archives, or Office of the Reis Effendi, or Chief Secretary; inferring that the Power of the Grand Seignior was able to make good, whatſoever be

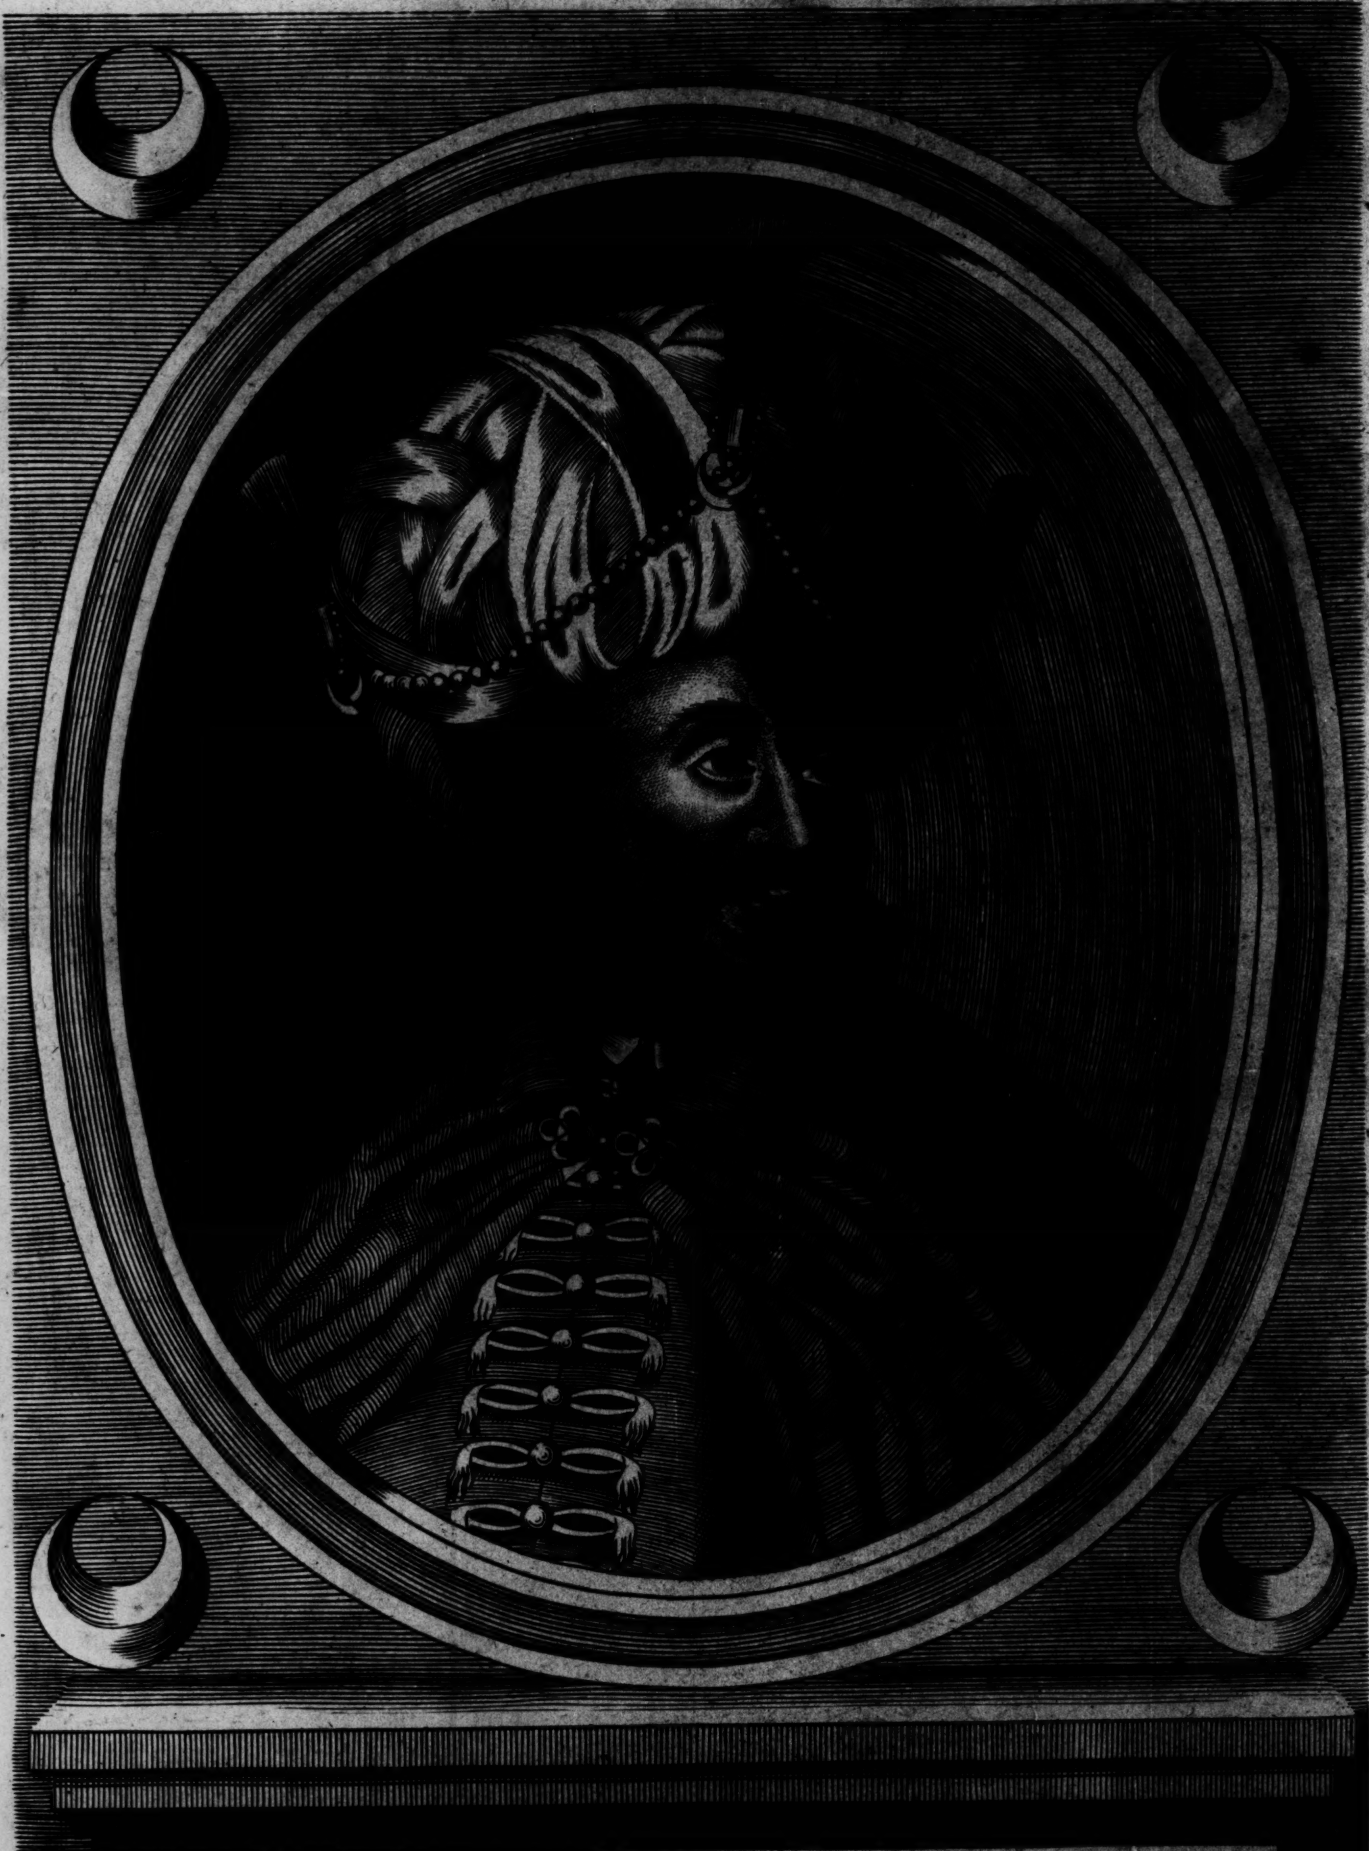
he ſhould require on the Score of the Royal Signature; which no Sovereign Prince will now receive from a Proud and Inſolent Turk: For praiſed be that God of the Chriſtians, who hath brought down that Imperious Spirit of the Turks to ſuch a Degree, That they can now own their Weakneſs and be aſhamed of their former Follies, which render'd them inſupportable in their Converſation with Chriſtians.

THE



Mahomethes Quartus
Magnus Turcarum Imperator
Qui Regnat.
Anno 1684.

pa. 5

Sold by Robert Clavell and Abel Roper

THE HISTORY OF THE TURKS

From the Year 1678, to the Year 1699.

Anno 1679.

WE have in our preceding Hiſtory repreſented the Ottoman Empire for ſeveral years paſt, under many Circumſtances of Happineſs and Glory. The Turks had been ſucceſsful in their Wars abroad, having increaſed and enlarged their Empire by adding Newhauſel in Hungary thereunto, with the Countrey belonging to it. They had gained and conquered all the Iſland of Candia, with that invincible Fortreſs, and thereupon had put an end to a War with the Venetians, which had continued for the ſpace of Twenty ſix Years. After which they carried their Conquering Arms into Poland, where they took the ſtrong Fortreſs of Caminiec, which is the Key of that Kingdom; and thence marched into that Countrey as far as Leopolis, which they brought under the Tribute of Eighty thouſand Crowns a-year, and ſo returned back again into their own Dominions without any Oppoſition, or ſo much almoſt as the Appearance of an Enemy: And to render this Action the more obſervable, it was attended with the leaſt Expence of Blood and Treaſure, of any Enterprize of ſo bold and daring a Deſign; and proved an Expedition ſo profitable and beneficial, that ſcarce a Janizary or Horſeman returned without Spoil, or Plunder, or Slaves of both Sexes. All which Wars were acted within the ſpace of Thirteen Years, during the Government of Achmet Kuperli, with ſuch Intervals alſo of Peace, that War ſeemed but an Entertainment to exerciſe the Soldiery, and amuſe their Minds, leſt they ſhould fall into Mutiny and Sedition; all the Particulars of which we have already at large related. And here I cannot but obſerve, and ſay; That Juſtice is the proper means to render a People flouriſhing and happy; an Inſtance whereof we have through all the Government of Kuperli, who being a Perſon educated and skilful in the Law, adminiſtred Juſtice equally to the People; his Eyes were not blinded with Avarice, which might biaſs or thwart him in giving Judgment; he was not cruel, or bloody, or inclined to take away Mens Lives for the ſake of their Riches; nor more ambitious than what ſerved to make him jealous of his Honour, and zealous to conſerve and keep up his Fame and Reputation in the World: which is neceſſary for Miniſters in his ſublime Station. Wherefore let us look on thoſe Times which were as quiet, calm and peaceable as any that ever had ſmiled on the Ottoman State, and juſtly attribute thoſe Bleſſings to the Favour of Heaven, which was pleaſed in thoſe Days to behold ſo much Juſtice and Equity diſpenſed to a People unaccuſtomed thereunto, and perhaps in Reward thereof, to make the Government more eaſie and pleaſant, than either before or ſince thoſe Halcyon Days. But now that Kara Muſtapha comes to ſucceed in the Place of ſo juſt and equal a Governour, a Perſon of Violence, Rapine, Pride, Covetouſneſs, Falſe, Perfidious, Bloody, and without Reaſon or Juſtice; we have nothing to repreſent at the beginning of his Government, beſides his Oppreſſion, Extortion, Cruelties and Acts of Injuſtice beyond any thing that was ever practiſed before in the Reign of the moſt Tyrannical Princes: and in Proceſs of time becoming vaſtly Rich with the Spoils and Ruine of many thouſands of Families, he accompliſhes the full Meaſure of his Iniquity by the perfidious Breach of the Truce between the Emperor and his Maſter the Sultan: For tho' it wanted only three Years of being expired, yet truſting to the Power and Force of his

Anno 1679.

1679. ill-gotten Wealth, he had not Patience to expect ſo long a Term, being puſhed forward by his own Deſtiny, and incited thereunto by covetous and ambitious Deſires, joyned to a Scorn, and a mean Opinion of the Chriſtians, to whom he would ſcarce allow either Underſtanding, or Courage, or Conduct in War: In which vain Confidence and Preſumption of his invincible Power, he precipitated the whole Ottoman Empire into a diſmal and direful Condition and State, from whence proceeded nothing but Slaughter, and Tragedies, fatal both to his own ſelf, and to his Maſter, as will appear in the Progreſs of this Hiſtory. But before we enter on thoſe greater Matters, let us firſt conſider this Grand Vizier in his Behaviour towards the Turks, and others who were Subjects to the Sultan. It is certain, that he had his firſt Riſe from Kuperli the Father, and married his Daughter, and was afterwards on the ſcore of that Alliance, favoured by the Son: he was made Capitan Paſha, or Admiral of the Fleet; but being as it were out of his Element, and not pleaſed with the Sea, he was conſtituted Chimacam, and placed with the Grand Seignior, and at all times next his Perſon when the Vizier was abſent, and employed in the Wars: In which Capacity and Condition (as we have before related) he behaved himſelf with that gentle and affable Behaviour towards all Perſons, as gave Hopes and Expectations of better and more temperate Government when he ſhould come to be Vizier. But being raiſed to that ſublime Station, he ſoon changed his Humour, and began to ſhew the Fierceneſs of his Nature, which he had long ſuppreſſed. In Evidence of which, we have ſo many Inſtances and Examples of his Cruelty and Injuſtice to produce, that had we no other matter than his Management of Affairs in the time of Peace, without Regard or Reference to Foreign Wars, his Proceedings were ſo irregular and unreaſonable, as might for the Extravagancy of them, deſerve to be kept in Memory: But they are too many to be recounted, and therefore we ſhall content our ſelves with ſome few which have relation to the Engliſh Nation, and to the Subjects of other Princes in Peace and Alliance with the Turk.

The Caſe of Mr. Samuel Pentlow, who lived about Thirty Years a Merchant at Smyrna, will never be forgotten by the Engliſh Factory of that Place: The matter is ſo extraordinary as might deſerve to be related at large, with all the Circumſtances of it; but I ſhall confine my ſelf to a ſhort and brief Narrative, which was this.

Mr. Pentlow had by a long Trade, in tract of time, gained very conſiderable Riches, beſides an Eſtate in Land left him by his Father in England; to inherit which, being deſirous to have Heirs of his own Body, he married a Greek Woman of mean Extraction. The Grand Vizier having received intimation thereof, and of the Riches of Pentlow, which were magnified to him, according to the Account made on Rich Men, whoſe Fortune it is to have their Eſtates always over-valued; he immediately ſwallowed in his Thoughts all his Wealth and Eſtate, as if he had been a Paſha, or ſome other Subject who had grown fat and wealthy to a degree worthy the Grand Seignior's Notice and Acceptance. And to bring him within the compaſs of ſuch a Seizure, he declared, That whoſoever had married a Woman, who was a Subject to the Grand Seignior, did by Virtue of ſuch a Match become, ipſo facto, a Subject, and yield himſelf to the ſame Condition with his Wife; which being a Law never before made or declared, was levelled only at Pentlow to hook in his Eſtate; having never before been practiſed, and perhaps will never be again, unleſs the ſame Circumſtances concurr of ſuch a Vizier, and ſuch a Perſon as this our Merchant was. 1679.

Pentlow had notice of this new Law which the Vizier had promulged, and was not unſenſible that it was levelled at his Eſtate: But yet I know not what Star guided him, or what Charm affixed, or wedded him to the Countrey, he provided not againſt the Snare laid for him, which he might eaſily have avoided by exporting his Eſtate, as Merchants commonly do, into other Countries; but inſtead thereof, he keeps all about him, and finding himſelf ſickly and decaying, he made his laſt Will and Teſtament in a formal manner, and conſtituted two Merchants to be his Executors, without Reflection or Thoughts how the Vizier had decreed the Grand Seignior to be his Heir, which accordingly ſucceeded in a ſhort time afterwards: For Pentlow being dead, the News was ſpeedily carried to the Chief Cuſtomer at Adrianople, who had laid the Plot to ſeize his Eſtate; and by him the Grand Vizier was informed of the great Wealth fallen to the Sultan by the Death of his Engliſh Subject. The covetous Deſire of ſo vaſt Riches, which was magnified five times beyond its real Value, cauſed the Vizier with all Expedition to diſpatch a Capugi-Baſha to Smyrna to take all the Eſtate of the Deceaſed into his Hands, for the Uſe of the Grand Seignior; and in caſe the Executors refuſed to make a free and clear Reſignation accordingly, then to bring them up Priſoners to Adrianople. The Executors not complying as the Officers required, were carried up by him to Adrianople: Where to extort from them a confeſſion of the whole Eſtate, they were threatned with the Gallies, with the Rack, the Wheel and other Tortures. In fine, after an Impriſonment of ſome Days, with a Collar of Iron about their Necks, to which a Chain was fixed and rivetted to a Poſt with Manacles on their Hands; and after a thouſand menaces of farther Puniſhment, they were forced ſo far to comply, as to Promiſe, and give Obligation to pay unto the Vizier, or his Order, the Sum of Ninety thouſand Dollars within a certain time after their Arrival at Smyrna. To raiſe this Money againſt the Term prefixed, ſuch haſt was made, that the Goods of the Deceaſed were Sold at ſuch low Rates, that they amounted not within Five or Six thouſand Dollars of the Sum, for which the Executors had Engaged; which they refuſing to pay out of their own Eſtates; were again Impriſoned at Smyrna, where they lay for the ſpace of five or ſix Months, until ſuch time as a Compoſition was made, and Expedients found for their Enlargment. Many other paſſages occurred of the like injuſtice, thro' the whole courſe of this matter, which for brevity ſake we purpoſely omit: In regard that what we have ſaid already, is ſufficient to give the Reader an inſtance of this Vizier's avarice and injuſtice. Of which the Turks, as well as the Chriſtians were ſo ſenſible; that Solyman, the late Vizier's Kiaja, or Steward, and then Imbrahor or Maſter of the Horſe to the Grand Seignior, demanding one day concerning the Avania of Pentlow, could not ſuppreſs his Thoughts (tho' much a Courtier) but ſaid, In this Man's time the Muſſelmin or Believers, cannot expect better Uſage or Treatment than the Gaurs or Chriſtians. But this ſingle inſtance is not ſufficient to expreſs the unjuſt, and rapacious Humour of this Vizier; who in an unparallell'd manner of proceeding did ever incline to the Plaintiff; in whoſe favour having given Sentence againſt the Defendant to the utmoſt Aſper demanded, his method was to cauſe the Money immediately to be paid; and took it to himſelf, giving the Plaintiff ſome ſmall ſhare thereof, not worthy the Trouble or Expence of the Suit: In this manner he dealt with another Merchant of our Nation, on whom one Pizzamano an Italian made a falſe pretence of Six thouſands Dollars, which Cauſe being brought before the Vizier, he readily condemned our Engliſh Merchant; and having forced the payment by a rigorous Impriſonment, he appropriated the whole Sum to his own Uſe; giving the Plaintiff about Thirty Dollars, as a gratuitous Reward for turning Turk; he having in compliance with the Vizier, and to gain his favour, renounced his Faith, and Sold his Religion at ſo vile a Price. In a ſhort time after which the Vizier extorted from our Turky Company Fifty thouſand Dollars, and demanded an increaſe of the uſual Preſents which at certain times were made to him, and to all the Officers of the Court: The which, and the like manner of Proceedings, tho' they gained him the hatred of all Men, yet the conſtancy of the Grand Seignior to his Miniſters, and his method in making his Maſter ſharer with him in all his Rapines, ſeemed to ſecure him from all apprehenſion of Danger: For when the Grand Seignior upon Complaints made to him, told him of the ill Reports he had received; The Vizier anſwered, That his Majeſty might be pleaſed to weigh the Benefits he had received by his Adminiſtration of Affairs, which would appear by the Increaſe of his Treaſury; and that if he deſired to have his Empire well Governed, he muſt ſuffer him to uſe the means proper for that end; otherwiſe his Head was at his Command, which he might take off, and ſupply the Office with a better Miniſter.

Mr. Gabriel Smith and Mr. John Aſhley.

He was afterwards Grand Vizier, and cut off with the Grand Seignior.

Many and frequent were the Examples of his unheard of injuſtices, as well to the Turks as to the Chriſtians.

The Valide Kiajan, or the Queen Mother's Steward, whoſe place was always eſteemed quiet, and free from danger, and Independant of the Meri, or the Grand Seignior's Treaſury; and their Eſtates permitted to go to their Children without any Interruption: Yet dying very Rich by the benefit of his Office, which he had enjoyed 18 Years; The Vizier was deſirous to partake of the Eſtate, and taxed his Heirs at 1200 Purſes, for Payment of which the Grand Seignior at the Inſtigation of the Vizier cauſed a Vakuf, or an Eſtate given to the Church to be ſeized; which was ſuch a piece of Sacrilege, as was never known, or heard of before in that Empire.

Draco Bey tortured.

Draco Bey, a late Prince of Moldavia, falling ſhort in the Payments he was to make to the Grand Seignior for Tribute of that Principality, had the Torture given him in Priſon at leaſt ſix times with Fire, and other ways, which cauſe the acuteſt pains; during which, they forc'd his Son to ſtand by him, and threatned to put him into his place, in caſe the Father dy'd under the Torture.

The Raguſean Ambaſſador Impriſoned.

But more hard and ſevere than all this, ſeems the Caſe of the Raguſean Ambaſſadors, from whom, beſides the Annual Tribute demanded of that Republick, the Vizier requir'd 300 Purſes as a Fine for what they had receiv'd on account of Cuſtoms, which the Turks Trading into their Ports had pay'd them during all the time of the Venetian War; the benefit of which was eſteem'd ſo great, and their Town ſo much enrich'd by the grand acquiſitions of Trade, that 300 Purſes, or 150000 Dollars, ſeem'd a mean exaction from a People ſo well improv'd and enrich'd as the Raguſeans were adjudged to be. It is true, their City being advantageouſly Situated in the Gulf of Venice, did for a long time during that War reap a conſiderable benefit by Trade, it being made the chief Mart or Scale for all the Commodities which Bulgaria, Hungary, Tranſilvania, and the Countries thereabouts, yielded for the ſupply of Italy: To advance which, the Raguſeans had erected a Factory at Sophia, which as I remember, (for I was at that Place three times) conſiſted of about 30 Merchants, whoſe Employment was to buy Hides, Tallow, Wax, and the like, and ſend them by Caravan to Raguſa, from whence they were tranſported to other parts of the World. The Vizier hereupon making up an account of the Profit which this little Republick could, or might have gain'd in ſo many years, eſteem'd it reaſonable, that the Grand Seignior, by whoſe Wars they had gain'd, ſhould partake of a ſhare in their Profits, which by a Computation he made out of his own head, or with the help perhaps of his Jew-Broaker, or of the Cuſtomer of Conſtantinople, he valued at ſo high a Rate, that 300 Purſes were eſteemed a moderate allowance to the Grand Seignior out of ſuch vaſt Riches which they had acquired. With this notion of the matter the Vizier called the two Raguſean Ambaſſadors to his preſence, Commanding them immediately to write unto their Principals to provide with all ſpeed the 300 Purſes which the Grand Seignior required from them in return of the favour and protection he had given them, during his Wars with Venice. The Ambaſſadors who were well acquainted with the Poverty of their State, which had for ſeveral years paſt labour'd under great difficulties to pay the Annual Tribute which the Turks exacted from them, endeavour'd to poſſeſs the Vizier with a true ſenſe of the impoſſibility of raiſing ſuch a Sum within the compaſs of their narrow Dominions; alledging that in the Year 1666. their whole City had been ſubverted by an Earthquake, in which all the Inhabitants periſh'd, excepting 5000 Perſons only, who by God's Providence being directed to the Fields, or Streets, were conſerv'd from this Univerſal Ruine: The which Deſolation was ſo grievous, that two Ages could not repair their Loſſes, nor increaſe their People to their former numbers. But the Vizier who could endure no contradiction, nor excuſes in oppoſition to his covetous deſires, Commanded the Ambaſſadors immediately to write to the Government to ſend the Money, for payment of which no more than 3 Months would be allow'd; at the expiration of which, the Raguſeans being in no Capacity to comply, the Ambaſſadors were ſent Priſoners to the Seven Towers, and threatned with Tortures, and drubbing on the Feet, unleſs ſpeedy payment were made. After more than a Years Impriſonment, at the beginning of the Year 1680. by the Mediation and Interpoſition of Friends, the Buſineſs was Compounded for 120 Purſes, but broke off again upon the time of payment; which the Vizier required to be ſatisfied, together with the Annual Tribute in one Payment in Auguſt following: But they alledg'd the impoſſibility thereof, by reaſon of the extream poverty of the Place, which had now for two years been deprived of all Commerce, and the benefit of the Saline, from which their chief Revenue did ariſe, and therefore humbly deſired to pay it at thrice; that is, 40 Purſes the next Auguſt, and as much the Years following, with the uſual Tributes. But the Vizier not contented with theſe Conditions, commanded them in his rage to be caſt into a Dungeon of the Priſon, and threatned to have the Torture given them. The Mufti interceded in their behalf, and laid before the Vizier the injuſtice of the Act, but in vain: The Kadileſcher or one of the Chief Juſtices refuſed to Sign a Hoget, or Sentence in the Caſe, without poſitive command from the Grand Seignior. Howſoever they were remanded to Priſon without other legality of Sentence than the Vizier's Boyardi and Command, where they remain'd until the time that the Vizier march'd into Hungary, when with ſome mitigation of the Sentence, together with ſome drubs, they were ſet at Liberty.

The Secretary of Holland drubb'd.

We ſhall only add one inſtance more to demonſtrate the manner and method of this Vizier in his Judicial Proceedings, which was in the Caſe of Monſieur Debroſſes Secretary to the Ambaſſador of Holland, who having a Demand on the Metropolite, or Greek Biſhop of Scio, for a Debt of one thouſand Dollars, upon non-payment of the Money call'd his Debtor to Juſtice; the Patriarch appear'd at the Divan to defend the Cauſe, with ſeveral other Metropolites, ſome of which might reſemble the Debtor; Debroſſes being asked whether he knew his Debtor, he not having ſeen him in ſeveral years, made anſwer, That perhaps he 1679. did, or perhaps he did not, and pointed to a wrong Perſon; whereupon the Vizier call'd him Telbis, or Robber, to which he reply'd, That Franks were not Men of that Profeſſion, or who made falſe Pretences: The Vizier enrag'd with this Anſwer, order'd him immediately in his preſence to have 300 drubs given him; of which having receiv'd 193, he lay ſtunn'd, and for dead; and then upon the humble interceſſion of the Boſtangi-Baſhee a remiſſion was granted of the remainder. Nor did the Patriarch and his Biſhops carry off their Cauſe ſo clear and eaſie, but were forc'd to pay unto the Vizier a good part of that Sum which the Plaintiff demanded, in reward and acknowledgment of that juſtice which was done them.

The Character of Kara Kiaja.

He that made at this time the greateſt Figure at Court next to the Vizier, was Kara Kiaja, of whom, to know him, we need give no other Character, than that he was the Vizier's great Confident, and intimate to all his Councels; for having all the ill qualifications, and miſchievous Arts of the other, he was the moſt likely Perſon to ſucceed the Vizier, which we ſhall find verified ſome years hereafter. He was Capitan-Paſha, or Admiral of the Gallies, which is eſteem'd one of the greateſt Places of Truſt and Honour in the whole Empire; but he was remov'd from that Station, not in diſgrace, but by favour of the Vizier, who knowing him to be a Perſon like himſelf, and of his Humor and Principles, plac'd him near the Perſon of the Grand Seignior, with Title of Chimaçam; and in recompence for the Commiſſion which he had laid down, he was gratified with the Revenue of three Paſſalicks in Anatolia, which had been given to the late Vizier after his return from Candia in his Place. Capitan Paſſa (of whom we have formerly made mention) was made Capitan Paſha, and this year diſpatched with Sixty Gallies into the Black-Sea, for building the two Caſtles upon the Boriſthenes: Other Preparations were not made this year for the War of Muſcovy, for the Turks intending for this Campaign to remain on the defenſive part, deſign'd only to build thoſe Forts which were to Command the paſſage of that River, and for the future to ſtop the Excurſions and Pyracies of the Coſſacks into the Black-Sea. The Muſcovites, tho' deſirous of a Peace with the Turk, yet out of dulneſs, or ignorance, made faint applications for it, by the means of a ſingle Letter only, which was ſent from Moſco by the hands of an Armenian who was turn'd Ruſſe, that is, one who had reconcil'd himſelf to the Ruſſian Church, and had no other buſineſs than only to deliver this Letter; the Contents of which was, That the Turks ſhould quit Verania, and deſiſt from Building their Forts on the Boriſthenes, both which Propoſals were rejected, and no Anſwer return'd unto the Letter. 1679.

So that now the Thoughts and Preparations for War giving no diſturbance at the Port, the Grand Seignior apply'd himſelf to the moſt ſoft Pleaſures. He was not now ſo eager in his Huntings as formerly, but attended to the more common Delights of the Seraglio; he had gotten together a parcel of Dancing and Singing Girls, which had been preſented to him, for he would not be at the expence to buy them; tho' he was ſo kind to them, as to have three of them at the ſame time with Child by him, and kept in the Seraglio; where hereafter they may prove a reſerve to the Ottoman Line, when the Souldiers ſhall become more wantonly profuſe of the Blood of their Emperors. At this time likewiſe Kul-Ogli, Favourite to the Grand Seignior, who (as we have before related) had in the year 1675. Married the Grand Seignior's Daughter at Adrianople, a Child then of 7 years of Age, being now become ripe for her Husband, he Bedded her at the beginning of this year.

Pleaſures of the Court.

And farther to increaſe the Pleaſures of the Court, the Grand Seignior for his Divertiſement caus'd a Dunalmah or Triumph to be made, which was repreſented on the Water by multitudes of Boats hanging out Lights, and Fire-Works on the Walls of the Seraglio; and a Float was made in the Sea, repreſenting the Iſland of Malta, which was batter'd on all ſides by a Fleet of Gallies.

Fire in Conſtantinople.

But for all theſe Triumphs Conſtantinople, which hath ever been infeſted by Peſtilence, and grievous Incendiations, was greatly afflicted this year by many Fires; the greateſt was on Chriſtmas-Eve, which, by common compute burnt down 2000 Houſes, all that quarter called the Fanar, with part of the Greek Patriarchs Church, the remainder being with much difficulty ſaved. After which, another Fire happening near the Old Palace of Conſtantine, a Boy found in the Rubbiſh a Diamond that weigh'd 96 Carats, which he ſold for 3 Paraws, or about two pence half-penny; and the Buyer re-ſold it again for a Zelot, or about half a Crown, to one of thoſe Shops near Sultan Bajazet's Moſch, which ſell Stones for Seals, and pieces of Chryſtal for Rings; and there it lay for ſome time unregarded, until at length the Owner not finding a Chapman, brought it to an Armenian to ſet in Silver. The Armenian being a Jeweller, ſoon apprehended the nature of the Stone, but the largeneſs of the ſize cauſing him to miſtruſt his own judgment, he Conſulted two others,

and

1679. and upon Trial, it proved to be a real Diamond; ſo when the Owner came for his Stone, it was pretended to be loſt, and with a Dollar and half they contented him. But the Jewellers diſagreeing in the diviſion of ſo great a Purchaſe; and one fearing to be betray'd by the other, he that had it in Poſſeſſion diſcovered it, and ſent it to the Grand Seignior. 'Twas ſaid to be the moſt perfect, and beſt Water that ever was ſeen. It was very old, and given to be new Cut. It was judged to have been a Jewel belonging to the Greek Emperors; it not being entred into the Regiſter of the Seraglio, where all Jewels of value are Recorded.

ANNO 1680.

1680. A Council called.

THis year began with the moſt ſolemn Council that was ever known to have been held at Conſtantinople, within the memory Man. Thoſe preſent at it, were all the Paſhaes of the Bench, the Janizar-Aga, Topegi-Baſhee or Maſter of the Ordnance, the Chief of the Spahees, the two Kadileſchers, or Chief Juſtices; in ſhort all the Great Men, then preſent, of the Empire. The Council was ſummoned at the motion of the Grand Vizier, who having a Breach with the Chriſtian Emperor then in proſpect, had a deſire to feel the Pulſe and try the Inclinations of the great Men, how they ſtood affected to ſuch an Enterpriſe. But it ſeems the Propoſal did not very well relliſh; for that a Moſcovite Ambaſſador being on his Journey to the Port, the Iſſue or Event of his Negotiation was firſt to be expected: And in the mean time, it was concluded moſt ſafe, and prudent not to Engage in another War. Beſides, the Emperor was then actually in Treaty to renew the Truce with the Grand Seignior, which in few Years terminated; and to that end, had ſent an Envoy extraordinary to the Port, but he dy'd before his Negotiation was accompliſhed, as did alſo three other Reſidents in leſs than the compaſs of one 1680. Year, who were all employ'd to conſerve, and renew the Peace.

The Vizier Marries his Daughter.

The preparations for War this year being thus laid aſide. The Vizier was at leiſure to Marry his Daughter to the Grand Seignior's Hazna-Kajaſee, or Privy-purſe, who thereupon was promoted to be a Paſha of the Divan, or Vizier of the Bench; he was eſteemed the Richeſt Man in the Empire; which the Grand Vizier ſoon found to his high Advantage; for he dying 40 Days after his Marriage, the Vizier in right of his Daughter entred into a vaſt Inheritance. The Widow remained not long in her deſolate Condition, before ſhe was 168 promiſed to Oſman then Paſha of Grand Cairo, who had formerly been Boſtangi-Baſhee, or Chief of the Gardiners, and Chimacam of Conſtantinople.

Faction againſt the Vizier.

By theſe means the Vizier was grown ſo Rich, and Great, and Inſolent, that he created many Enemies; but the moſt dangerous to him, was a Faction at Court, the Chief of which were the Kuzlir-Aga, or Prime Eunuch of the Women, and Solyman the Imbrahor, or Maſter of the Horſe, the which made it their buſineſs to croſs the Vizier, in all his Proceedings; and diſappointed him of preferring a favourite of his, to the place of ſecond Maſter of the Horſe, which was lately become vacant by the death of that Officer; and one prefer'd thereunto at the recommendation of Solyman Paſha, who was his Friend, and had been Treaſurer to the late Vizier. Upon which defeat the great Vizier fearing that he loſt ground, and decay'd in his power and intereſt, thought fit to haſten his own Marriage with the Grand Seignior's Daughter, a Child of 8 years of Age; who like other Sultanaes was Married to no other end, than that her Husband might have the Honour to maintain her a Court, and Equipage agreeable to a Lady of her Degree and Quality.

This near Alliance to the Ottoman Blood, and familiar Converſation with the Sultan, could not be procured and maintained without a vaſt expence to the Vizier; who was commanded by the Grand Seignior to Treat him once, and ſometimes twice a Week, and at every Meal, it coſt him 25 Purſes of Money, beſides other preſents to the Valide, or Queen Mother, and other powerful Perſons at Court to an incredible value: To ſupport which Charge, Rapine and Violence were neceſſary, and nothing but a ſhare in the Booty and Pray could ſtop and fortifie the Ears of the Sultan, and Miniſters of the Court againſt the Cries, and Groans of oppreſſed Wretches.

One of the ways to Raiſe Money, (and that eſteemed none of the meaneſt) was by Avanias, or falſe pretences to be made on the Ambaſſadors, or Reſidents of Chriſtian Princes, then actually reſiding at the Port; the violation of whoſe Character and Office the Vizier eſteemed to be no Sin or Offence; being in his Opinion but Gaurs and Infidels, and ſuch as were ſent for Pledges, and Pawns for the Fidelity of their Maſters to the Turks: Beſides which, he conceived ſo mean an eſteem of all Chriſtian Princes, and undervalued their power and courage in War; that he believed no Indignities or Diſhonourable uſage could provoke them to a Reſentment, or a Revenge for any injuries received: And ſo far had this belief generally prevailed, that the Paſhaes, and Governours who lived at a diſtance from the Port, would tell the Merchants, that in caſe their Eſtates were ſeized, and one of their Hands cut off, and expelled the Country; yet ſo wedded were they to their own Intereſt, and to the Delights of the Turkiſh Air, that the next Year they would return again, and adventure the like Treatment rather than forego the hopes, and ſweetneſs of that profit, which they had tried, and expected in the Dominions of the Grand Seignior. The Vizier had certainly thoughts like theſe, and the ſame poor and contemptible eſteem of Chriſtian Princes in compariſon with the Ottoman Force, which was no doubt one of his chief Motives to commence that fatal War, which in a few years afterwards he unhappily begun. And in the mean time acting on theſe Principles, he treated all the Chriſtian Miniſters at the Port with equal Scorn and Contempt.

The Vizier Treats the Chriſtian Miniſters with Scorn.

To begin with the French, he deny'd to that Ambaſſador the Privilege of Sitting on the Soffra, when he admitted him to Audience; an Honour formerly allowed to Chriſtian Repreſentatives; but now out of the height of Pride over-looking all the World, and not enduring to ſee a Chriſtian to ſit either ſo near or equal to him, the Vizier made it a ſtanding Rule, That no Ambaſſador whatſoever ſhould have his Stool placed on the Soffra: But his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, who was always tender in Points which concern'd his Honour, gave poſitive Commands to his Ambaſſador: Not to accept of Audience on any Terms derogatory to the ancient reſpect; and the Vizier as Reſolute on the other ſide, procured the Grand Seignior's command, to confirm that method of receiving Ambaſſadors, ſo that it was no longer an act of the Vizier's but of the Sultan's Determination: In which reſolves on both ſides the Vizier went to Adrianople, intending never to retract his Words; which afterwards proved true; for greater Thoughts, and Employments diverted him from other Treaties on that Matter. But before things proceeded thus far, the Vizier called this Ambaſſador to an Account for what the French-men of War had acted againſt the Tripolins, by violating the Grand Seignior's Port of Scio, for that People having committed many Pyracies on the French Nation, and then actually in War with them, were Roving in the Seas of the Archepelago, and there unhappily meeting with their Enemy, the French, they took Refuge and Shelter under the Caſtle of Scio: The French-men of War being animated againſt their Enemy, and tempted with the ſight of their Prey ſo near, and within their view, entred the Port and made ſeveral Shot at the Tripolins, ſome of which coming a Shoar and doing ſome little Damage to the People; it was interpreted as a Breach of the Peace, and Violation of the Grand Seignior's Port. Complaints whereof being brought to Conſtantinople, the Vizier ſent for the Ambaſſador to his Seraglio, and without ſeeing him, committed him Priſoner to the Cuſtody of the Chaous-Baſhee; Demanding Two hundred thouſand Crowns for reparation of the Damages which the French Ships had done at the Port of Scio, and alſo in ſatisfaction for the affront which they had done to the Grand Seignior in the Violation of his Port, which amounted unto no leſs than an abſolute Breach of the Peace. The Ambaſſador remained ſome Nights under this reſtraint with menaces, and threats of being removed thence to the Seven Towers: During which time the Cuſtomer (Huſaein-Aga, (who was always made the Agitator between the Vizier, and the Frank Nations) preſſed the Ambaſſador with much earneſtneſs, to an accommodation with the Vizier: And indeed there was Reaſon for it, becauſe it was the firſt time, that ever the Vizier had right in his demands; for certainly the Actions of the French Ships at Scio were not to be juſtified, nor otherwiſe to be judged than as Acts of Hoſtility. The Agreement was carried ſo privately between the Ambaſſador and the Cuſtomer, that after a confinement of three Days and Nights, the Ambaſſador was ſet at Liberty, with a Rumour over all the Town of being acquited and cleared without any payment, or engagement whatſoever. But time, which brings all things to light, did by the event diſcover about three or four Months afterwards, that the great Sum demanded was to be paid tho' in ſuch a manner, that the Payment ſeemed notional and figurative only, by which a tenth part was taken for the whole. And not to concern the King's Honour therein, the tender of this Satisfaction was not to be made in Preſence of the Ambaſſador, but by the Secretary and ſome Merchants; who were to give it out to the World, as an Act of their own, and as if they had paid the price at their own expence, rather than their Trade ſhould be obſtructed by an open Rupture. But whatſoever was rumoured abroad, and what Tricks were jugled under Hand, the Grand Seignior took it for granted, that the Money or the value thereof in Goods was to be laid down, and that the King by his Ambaſſador or Agents under him, was to be concerned in the Atonement which was offered in Satiſfaction for the late Treſpaſs: And that he might not be deceived herein; the Grand Seignior contrary to his uſual Cuſtom, which the French Ambaſſador impriſoned.

was

1680.

was to refer all ſuch Negotiations as theſe to the management of the Vizier, would himſelf be preſent at this ſubmiſſion; perhaps becauſe he would fancy that Great King actually at the foot of his Throne, offering his Preſents and Sacrifices for a Reconciliation. And indeed the Scene open'd not much unlike it, for when the Curtain was drawn up, behold the Grand Seignior ſeated in Majeſty on his Throne, and beneath him the Secretary and Agents of the French Nation, proſtrating themſelves with their Preſents before him; and then the Uſher of the R. Preſence Proclaim'd with an audible Voice, Behold the Agents ſent from the King of France to humble themſelves before our Myſterious Emperor, and in the Name of that their King to offer their Preſents in ſatisfaction for that Affront and Inſult which the French Ships offer'd at the Port of Scio. After which the Preſents were produc'd according to the Liſt, and an Eſtimate ſet upon them. As namely, Here is a Piece of Sattin value ſo much, a Piece of Cloth of Gold ſo much, a Clock at ſuch a Rate, all Priz'd and Eſtimated at ten times more than their worth; which the Grand Seignior did either little underſtand, or at leaſt was willing to overſee; having perhaps other more ſecret Intrigues then in agitation between himſelf and the Court of France, things at that time tending to a Breach between the Turks, and the Emperor of Germany. Or perhaps the Grand Seignior was well enough ſatisfied in gaining his Point, which was to ſee Agents from France humbling themſelves before him in that ſubmiſſive Addreſs.

Matters jugled between the Turks, and France.

Nor did the Engliſh Ambaſſador receive much better treatment, for beſides ſeveral preceeding Avanias, one whereof was caſt on the Turkey Company in general, on occaſion of a vaſt Sum of Lion Dollars imported to Aleppo, which at that time was the moſt hopeful Trade. Upon notice of the Importation of ſo immenſe a Sum in ready Money, the Vizier's heart was enlarg'd, ſo that he ſwallow'd down a great ſhare thereof within his imagination and deſires; and to bring the ſubſtance nearer to him, he pretended that they were falſe Money, and brought into the Grand Seigniors Dominions to Cheat and Defraud his Subjects with Coyn of a low and baſe Alloy. To prove the truth of this Allegation, Commands were ſent to Aleppo to try the Money, which accordingly was done, in the preſence of the Chief Officers; and tho' they receiv'd a full demonſtration of the true intrinſick value, according to the legal Standard of that Money, yet there was need of Preſents to obtain ſuch a favourable Report as might ſatisfie the Vizier, and make the Money currant in the Country. But be the Hoget or Report what it would, it could never content the Vizier, who inſiſted that the Certificates were falſe, and gain'd by Bribery and Corruption; and therefore for his better aſſurance, he would ſend for the Money to Conſtantinople, or at leaſt for a great part thereof, that an aſſay or proof of its goodneſs might be made in his preſence. In ſhort, to avoid ſo great a loſs and miſchief to the Merchants, 17000 Dollars were preſented to the Vizier and his Officers to take off farther pretences from that Money; which, with the Preſents and Charges at Aleppo, amounted to more than 20000 Dollars.

Troubles on the Engliſh Merchants.

1680.

Some Months after this, the Viſier wanting a new Pretence to draw more Money from the Engliſh Nation, he ſignified to the Ambaſſador, Sir John Finch, his deſire to have the Capitulations ſent to him by the hand of his Interpreter, on pretence of reading ſome particular Articles therein for his own Information, and Inſtruction. The Vizier accordingly having them in his hand, detain'd them, ſaying, That there were ſeveral Articles therein, which being contrary to the Turkiſh Law, and prejudicial to the Grand Seignior's Power and Revenue were to be made void and null, which he would take care to expunge, and would afterwards return unto the Ambaſſador another Capitulation. This new Method of proceeding was very ſurprizing to Sir John Finch, then Lord Ambaſſador, and the whole Engliſh Nation; who being diveſted of their defenſive Arms, and of thoſe Articles on which all their ſecurity in that Country was eſtabliſh'd, look'd on themſelves and their Eſtates as expos'd to the will and arbitrary pleaſure of the Turks. It ſeem'd now as if our Nation remain'd in a ſtate of War, or in a Condition of Outlawed People, being deprived of our Law and Privileges. The Conſuls did uſually carry the Authentick Copies of the Capitulations with them, whenſoever they appear'd before the Kadies, or Juſtices; but the Original Exemplar being taken away, the force of the Copies ceas'd, and thoſe Articles could not be produc'd, in Plea for us, as formerly they were. This Matter relating to a ſtate of War and Peace, was tranſmitted home to his Majeſty's Conſideration; who was humbly intreated by the Turkey Company to take notice thereof in Letters directed to the Grand Seignior, and the Vizier. But in the mean time the inconveniences were ſo great, and the obſtructions to Trade ſo inſupportable, that it was thought fit to ranſom our Capitulations out of Captivity at any rate, rather than to hazard all our Intereſt by the want of them. So that a Treaty being commenc'd, it was agree'd, that upon payment of 50 Purſes of Money, being 25 thouſand Dollars, the Capitulations pitulations ſhould be reſtor'd, which was accordingly perform'd.

A Trick put on the Engliſh Ambaſſador.

In this Condition things ſtood, when the Lord Chandois, another Ambaſſador from his Majeſty, arriv'd at Conſtantinople, bringing, beſides his Credentials, Letters to the Grand Seignior and Vizier, containing no other matter than Complaints of that unworthy Seizure of the Capitulations, and of the Price and Ranſom paid for them; an Action ſo ſtrange and new, that an Example of the like nature was never known, or heard of in the World. The Vizier, contrary to his uſual Cuſtom, being touched with a ſenſe of ſhame for ſo mean an Action; did deſire that the Letter of this Tenure from our King to the Grand Seignior might be ſmothered, and not delivered; promiſing to make reſtitution of the Fifty purſes, he had taken on that occaſion. This offer from the Vizier ſeemed a thing incredible, and as impoſſible to redeem a Soul out of Hell, as a Purſe of Money out of his Coffers: Howſoever, ſo touched he was with the ſenſe of this Act, of which the Grand Seignior had as yet no knowledge, nor taken any ſhare in the Booty, that he ordered Twenty nine purſes of the Money to be reſtored; but with ſo ill a Grace, and ſo unpleaſant a Countenance, that our Merchants apprehended ſome other Contrivances, and Machinations to be repaid again with a ſevere intereſt; which might probably have been expected, had not the Vizier been diverted from theſe low acquiſitions to matters of higher concernment in Hungary: Howſoever, before his departure he left thoſe menacing promiſes behind him, which threatned no leſs than Ruin and Deſtruction at his Return. We might here recount ſeveral other Acts of injuſtice paſſed on our Nation: As the encouragement of the Paſha of Tunis, to make demands on our Ambaſſador for what Goods the Corſaires, or Pirates had taken from him, on one of our Engliſh Ships: And tho' out of the reſpect and deference which the Great Duke of Tuſcany, and the Great Maſter of Malta bore to the Majeſty of our King, and by the induſtry and good management of Sir John Finch, then Ambaſſador at Conſtantinople, the greateſt part of the Goods and Money taken were reſtored, for which the Paſha declared himſelf ſatisfied; yet this Paſha receiving countenance and encouragement from this Vizier in his pretenſions, demanded 450 Purſes to be paid him by the Ambaſſador, for the remaining Goods which were not recovered. And tho' this pretenſion in the late Vizier's time, (a Man of more Juſtice and Reaſon than this preſent) was caſt out, and quaſhed; yet the Paſha looking on this conjuncture, as the moſt ſeaſonable of any, when the moſt extravagant demands would be heard and favoured, renewed his Suit, and pleaded it before the Vizier with as many Lyes, and falſe Teſtimonies as were required, or could be invented to give colour to an evil Caſe. The Vizier hearkned moſt devoutly to all the Allegations, and with a bended Brow, and a ſtern Countenance told the Ambaſſador, That he was to anſwer for the Blood and Eſtates of the Turks, which were loſt Aboard our Engliſh Ships: And again turning to the Paſha told him, That his Demands were too unreaſonable and extravagant; and ſo mediating, as it were, ſometimes on one ſide and ſometimes on the other, with deſign to take on both Hands, he at length fairly diſmiſſed the Audience: And in the Afternoon made a propoſal by his Kaja or Deputy abſolutely to ſuperſede the Cauſe, provided that Fifteen purſes, were given to him, and Seven to his Kaja, and Reis-Effendi, who is Secretary of State. In ſhort, after divers Treaties on this Subject, an Accommodation was made with a great Sum, other buſineſſes being entred and paſſed in the ſame Agreement.

The Venetians in trouble.

The next which comes into play is the Venetian Bailo or Ambaſſador, who about the beginning of this Year 1680, was ſent by that Republick to reſide at Conſtantinople, his name was Ciurani, a Noble Venetian, and one who had formerly been General in Dalmatia; he was eſteemed an Avaritious and a ſelf-intereſſed Perſon, a great Merchant, and a great Politician, and one made up of Intrigues and Deſigns. His firſt Enterpriſe, which was to Cheat the Turks, proved unlucky: For having brought a great quantity of Cloth of Gold with him, which was his own Merchandize and Adventure, he endeavoured to ſave the Cuſtom by Landing it under the notion of Preſents, which were to be made to the Grand Seignior, and the Officers of his Court. The Goods were privately convey'd a Shoar in the Night by Boats belonging to the Ships of War, which had brought the Ambaſſador, and defended by a Guard of Albanians, who are a company of luſty Fellows, to the number of Thirty, maintained by the Republick only to carry Letters to Zara, or Cataro in Dalmatia, from whence by a Felucca they are Tranſported to Venice: A Party of theſe Men I ſay conducted theſe Goods, and in deſpight of the Cuſtomer's Officers carried them to the Bailaggio, or Houſe belonging to the Venetian Ambaſſadors. The Cuſtomer Uſaine Aga, who had notice of all that paſſed, diſſembled at firſt his knowledge thereof, and contrived with the High Treaſurer to ſend one of his Servants to Buy a conſiderable parcel of the Cloth of Gold for the uſe of the Seraglio;

1680. And in regard different Sortments and Colours were demanded, it was neceſſary to open and unpack divers Cheſts; by which means they came to a full diſcovery of all thoſe Goods, which had privately been convey'd away by Night. When theſe Chapmen had concluded their Bargains, and agreed on the Prices, which amounted unto 3500 Dollars, they gave an Aſſignment for the Money on Uſaine Aga the Chief Cuſtomer; who willingly accepted the Bill, but to abate it out of the Cuſtoms due for thoſe Goods, making up the Account after his own faſhion: But not content herewith, he obtained a Warrant from the Vizier directed to the Judge of Galata, to examine the manner of carrying theſe Goods a-ſhoar in the Night by Force and Violence; which being made out by ſeveral Witneſſes, a report thereof was ſent to the Vizier, who immediately thereupon gave Orders to the Vaivod, and Captain of Galata to make Search in the Houſe of the Cuſtomer for thoſe Goods, which had not paid the Cuſtom. Seignior Ciurani Alarmed at this manner of Proceeding, and not willing to give an occaſion to the Turks to violate the reſpect due to the Houſe of Venice, (which until that time was ever eſteemed a Sanctuary, and place of Refuge) ſeaſonably compounded for his unjuſtifyable miſcarriage by the Payment of 30000 Dollars.

But this trouble was no ſooner ended, before another of worſe Conſequence began, ariſing from certain Slaves to the number of about Fifty, which had ſaved themſelves aboard the Venetian Men of War which had brought the Ambaſſador, of which Complaint being made by the Maſters unto the Vizier, Orders were given twice to make ſearch aboard the Ships for them; but by help of a little Money, Inquiſitions were made ſo ſuperficially, that Returns were given of none to be found. But the Complaints daily increaſing, new Orders were given to renew the Search, the execution whereof was committed to a Capugee and a Haſakee, who are Officers belonging to the Seraglio, together with a Naip or Kadee's Notary, who was to write down and record the proceedings. Theſe perſons being come aboard, and rudely making ſearch after their manner, the Soldiers aroſe againſt them, and beat them off, wounding ſome and throwing the Naip and others into the Sea. Upon report whereof the Vizier was ſo enraged, that he would have had the Ships brought to the Arſenal, there to be laid up and confiſcated to the Grand Seignior's Service. The two Venetian Ambaſſadors fearing alſo ſome violence to their Perſons from theſe diſorders, betook themſelves to their Ships, there to remain until Matters were a little 1680. pacified; and to make the buſineſs more eaſy, the Slaves (about whom was all the controverſie) were privately convey'd aſhoar: And a Search of the Ships ſubmitted unto by conſent, and Propoſal of the Ambaſſadors themſelves. The Vizier being a little mollified with this compliance, the Chiaus-baſhee (or Chief of the Purſuivants) with 200 Men were ſent aboard the Ships to make a ſearch, where being received without oppoſition, they left no corner of the Ships unſought and unlooked into, and none being found, the Chiaus-baſhee gave them a favourable report upon payment of 300 Chequins: After which the Bailos or Ambaſſadors returned aſhoar, referring a farther Accommodation of their Matters to Uſaine Aga the Cuſtomer, who was a moſt dexterous Perſon, both in raiſing Avanias or falſe Pretences, and in the Ways and Arts of compoſing them. And he accordingly ſo managed the matter, that with payment of Seventy purſes to the Vizier, and Ten to the Kaja, with other petty rewards to Uſaine Aga himſelf, and other inferiour Officers, which might in all amount to about 50000 Dollars, all Diſpleaſures were reconciled, the new Bailo was Friendly admitted to Audience, and the old one ſuffered fairly to depart: The Maſters loſt their Slaves, and the Vizier got the Money. But the Troubles of the Venetian Miniſters did not end here: For not long afterwards, ſome Deſturbances aroſe in Dalmatia between the Turks and the Subjects of that Republick, in which above a Hundred Turks, as was reported, being Cut off, the Vizier in a Rage ſent the Bailo Priſoner to the ſeven Towers, Threatning to put him to Death; but with the Atonement of 200.000 Dollars, the Vizier's gentle Heart was melted, and all things ſalved up and reconciled again once more. But the Republick of Venice to whoſe expences the Sum of 300.000 Dollars was charged, could not ſo eaſily digeſt this Extortion; and knowing that with the Turks there was no other remedy but patience until ſuch time as opportunity happened to revenge it, did in the interim ſhow their reſentment, by their diſpleaſure againſt Seignior Ciurani their Ambaſſador, whom they recalled ſpeedily from his Employment, and conſtituted the Secretary in his place; and afterwards levied a great part of the Money paid unto the Turks out of his Eſtate, and out of the Eſtate of Moroſini the old Bailo. Foſcari formerly Conſul at Aleppo was made Inquiſitor to examine the matter, who upon enquiry thereinto found, that the Goods which Ciurani brought were to the value of 60.000 Dollars, and others which had not paid Cuſtom at Venice, were in pena di contrabanda, condemned in 30.000 Ducats; ſuch ſucceſs

The Venetian Bailo Impriſoned.

1680.

ſucceſs as this have ſuch old Politians, who pretend to a craft and cunning above other Men. And thus we have given a Relation of the Treatment which the Vizier uſed towards the Venetians, in which we have been the more large, to inform the World of the beginnings and grounds of the War, which ſoon afterwards enſued, and the Reaſons which moved the Venetians to joyn themſelves in League with the Emperor againſt the Turk.

The next Foreign Miniſter which muſt taſt of the Vizier's kindneſs, was the Genoeſe Reſident. And tho' neither the Buſineſs, nor the Actions of that Nation did Adminiſter any ground of pretence to extort Money from them; yet, the Vizier made an Avania of 5000 Dollars upon them, for what cauſe no Man knows, nor do the Genoeſe themſelves declare any. It is conjectured he would not ſuffer their Reſident Seignior Spinola to depart without payment of that Sum, upon pretence that during all the time of his Reſidence, he had never ſeen the Grand Seignior.

The new Reſident who ſucceeded to Spinola, had been the Sopra-cargo of a Ship, and was rather a Factor than a Publick Miniſter; for the State of Genoua had refuſed to have any concernment in Turky: Howſoever, they lent their name to certain Merchants for 6000 Dollars a year, who in Conſideration of the Conſolage to be confirmed to them, were to maintain a Reſident at Conſtantinople, and a Conſul at Smyrna. After which the Camera was to know nothing of any expence, but all ſorts of Charges and Avanias were to be born by the Undertakers; who allowed their Reſident 1500 Dollars per annum, which with the benefit of making Strong-waters, and ſelling of Wine in his Houſe, and with ways of Thrifty living, was eſteemed a good ſubſiſtence for a Perſon of his quality.

The Dutch in Troubles.

The Dutch Miniſter which had for a long time eſcaped Troubles, and Avanias rather by good fortune than any good cunning, did at length, on occaſion of an unavoidable Diſpute with Uſaine Aga the Cuſtomer, fall within reach of the Vizier's Hand: And tho' the Reſident foreſaw the Miſchief, and would have avoided the Blow by ſubmitting every thing to the Judgment of the Cuſtomer himſelf; yet, to gain the Merit of bringing ſuch a Client before the Vizier, who could never depart from before his Tribunal without paying roundly for his Juſtice, he immediately preferred his Memorial againſt the Dutch Reſident; ſaying, That he would not be Judge and Party, leaſt he ſhould be overpartial to himſelf, but would reſt content and ſubmit to any Sentence which the Vizier ſhould pronounce in publick Divan. Accordingly a Boiardee, or Warrant was ſent by a Chiaus to cite the Dutch Reſident's Druggerman, or Interpreter to appear in Divan with the Capitulations; which being brought thither, were there detained after the manner of the Engliſh, on pretence that the Vizier would peruſe them; tho' as appears by the ſequel, his Intentions were to make them pay their Ranſom as our Capitulations had done before; which the Dutch objected againſt us, as a leading Card to them, and that our eaſineſs in yielding to ſuch an unparallell'd Extortion, had given the Vizier Encouragment to enterpriſe the like upon them. It was in the year 1610, when the Dutch firſt made their Capitulations with the Turks; ſince which time they were but once renewed, about Forty ſix years ago in the time of Sultan Morat; and then their Articles were not deſcribed at large in many Points, only in general it was declared, That they ſhould extend to all the Particulars as largely, and in as ample a manner, to all Privileges and Immunities, as did the Engliſh. The Vizier upon Conſideration of the matter, was not willing to find particulars in generals, nor to interpret Articles with ſuch vaſt Comprehenſions as divers & cætera's would imply; and therefore told the Dutch, That they muſt either receive their Capitulations back, with ſuch Conceſſions only, as were expreſſed in open Terms; or otherwiſe be contented with the expence of renewing of them, in ſuch an Explicite manner as might refer nothing to an interpretation out of Generals. The Dutch who were contented with their old Capitulations, and affrighted with the Charge of new ones, knowing how apt the Vizier was to inflame the Reckoning, kept off at a diſtance for ſome time, Arguing the unreaſonableneſs of ſuch a Conſtraint, and the validity of their preſent Articles, than which they deſired no others. Howſoever, the Vizier kept the Capitulations, and the Cuſtomer interpreted them after his own Sence, and in his own Favour. The Dutch had at that time ſeveral Ships under Convoy of their State's Men of War arrived at Smyrna, to which they gave Orders not to enter the Port, but to lie off without the Caſtle, as if they intended to break off all Commerce; and in caſe their Capitulations were not reſtored, to cauſe their Fleet to return back to the Ports from whence they came. But the Vizier and the Cuſtomer were not moved with this Bravade; for tho' they were not very well verſed in Maritine, or Mercantile affairs, yet they were not ignorant how far a Maſter of a Ship was obliged to deliver the Goods laden on his Veſſel at the Port, to which they were deſigned; nor did they unreaſonably calculate the Charge of returning the Convoy, 1680.

1680. voy, with the loſs and overthrow of their Voyage, to be far greater than the Bargain which was to be made for Reſtitution, or renewal of their Capitulations. Howſoever, the Dutch were of Opinion, That this Suſpenſion of Trade would mortifie the Cuſtomer, and incline the Vizier to better Terms; when after Fifty days hanging off, and that divers great Ships of their Convoy had lain almoſt all that time upon an expenſive and heavy demorage; at length the Reſident being ſooner weary thereof, than the Turks were ſenſible of the failure of Trade, became deſirous to Treat about an Accommodation. The perſon employ'd herein was the Vizier's own Jew Broker, (for all the great Men in Turky have one of this Race depending on their Families, who ſerve them for Setters and Pandors to their intereſt and pleaſures.) This Jew being dexterous in his myſtery of making Bargains, concluded with the Dutch to have their Capitulations renewed; and to have all the dubious Points explained and diſtended at large, in the ſame manner as the Engliſh are: And then in ſatisfaction, and return for ſo favourable an Indulgence, Fifty purſes of Money were to be paid to the Vizier, Ten to his Kaja, Three to the Reis-Effendi, or Chief Secretary, and Eight to Uſaine Aga the Cuſtomer: After which Orders were ſent to the Convoy to enter within the Port of Smyrna, which might have been done at firſt without expence or loſs of time; for certainly the detention of the Convoy ſerved nothing to the eaſier, and more ready Accommodation of this Affair. I have known many Examples of this nature in my own time in Turky; and could never find that the ſtopping Ships from entering into Port, did ever Operate upon the Turkiſh Officers, and only ſerved to increaſe our Expence, and add to the Afflictions of our other Aggrievances, which we received from the Turks.

Thus did the Vizier Treat all the Miniſters of Foreign Princes with a Scorn, and Contempt as became ſuch as were his Vaſſals, or Tributaries to his Maſter, neither ſhowing them Reſpect or Honour, nor affording them Juſtice: And when at any time an injured Ambaſſador asked of him the Reaſons why he was ſo ſeverely uſed, and what Crime he had committed, he would readily anſwer, Do you not Breath in the Grand Seigniors Air, and will you pay him nothing for it? Wherefore we may not wonder, that the Venetians on the Provocations before-mention'd, ſhould in ſo few years after the Concluſion of a long War, break out again with the Turk, and joyn with the Emperor againſt this Common Enemy, whom neither Articles, nor Solemn Promiſes could keep within the Bounds of Common Humanity. And when we conſider, how the juſt God doth humble the Proud, we may not wonder to ſee how manifeſtly, the Divine Providence hath appeared in Defence of the Chriſtian Cauſe, even to a Miracle againſt the Turks, who at that time had exalted themſelves to ſuch a pitch of Pride, and Opinion of their own Force, as if they had been Omnipotent and Invincible, and were minded to verifie their own ſaying, That God had made the Earth for their Dominion, and Enjoyment, and the Sea only for the Chriſtians. 1680.

Thus had Pride, Rapine and Avarice ariſen to their Zenith and higheſt Sphere unto which they could reach, and all thoſe Corruptions and Irregularities in Juſtice, which uſually overthrow Kingdoms and Empires ſeem'd now to be conſummated, and the Governors to have fulfill'd the meaſure of their Iniquity. Luxury and Laſciviouſneſs may weaken and enervate a People, but Tyranny and Injuſtice moſt commonly Subvert the whole Fabrick of Government. Avarice, which is the root of all Evils, and which provokes and incites to Tyranny and Violence, was the ruine of the Ottoman Empire; of which we ſhall produce a moſt pregnant Example in the Conduct of this Vizier, when we come to Treat of his Conduct in the ſucceeding War, before he laid Siege to the City of Vienna.

ANNO, 1681.

A. D. 1681. WE are entred now into another year, and ſtill the Viſier continues unchangeable in his violent Reſolutions of getting and amaſſing vaſt Sums of Money. He had for ſome time given a little reſpite to the Chriſtian Miniſters, from whom he had diverted his exactions to exerciſe them on the Turks themſelves; he laid an Impoſition of two Aſpers upon every Oke of Fleſh eaten within the City; of which an Old Man complaining, who was employ'd to buy Fleſh for the Janizaries, as being dear and bad, the Vizier turn'd him out of his Office, with a Reward of 300 blows on the Soles of his Feet.

An Oke is 2 l. ¼ Engliſh.

The Grand Seignior having built a Seraglio on Galata ſide, near the Boſphorus, many of the Workmen, and poor Labourers, both Turks and Chriſtians not being pay'd, gave a Petition to the Grand Seignior for their Money; the Grand Seignior readily gave them an Aſſignment under his own hand for their Payment, directed to the Teſterday or Lord Treaſurer; but he ſent them to the Vizier, who clap'd twenty three of them into Priſon, and next day in publick Divan, order'd them to be drubb'd; 1681. telling them, That if he heard more of their Complaints, he would ſend them to the Gallies.

But all theſe were petty Matters in Compariſon with that greater Deſign he had of raiſing Money; which was by laying a Tax on all Lands throughout the Empire, call'd the Sorſat, whereby it was propoſ'd to levy at leaſt fourteen thouſand Purſes, of which the Vizier made an account of at leaſt two thouſand for his own ſhare; (the Sorſat is the greateſt Tax the Turks impoſe on their People, being laid on every Acre of Glebe Land where the Plow goes.) The pretence for which was, the Grand Seignior's Removal to Adrianople, for adjuſting the Limits of Poland. But this Deſign was diſappointed by the contrary Faction of the Kuzlir Aga, and Solyman Kaja, who by the Queen Mother repreſented to the Grand Seignior, that this Journey being only of Pleaſure, and not deſign'd in order to a War, he could not without an oppreſſion of his People raiſe ſuch a Tax, which in former times was never Levied by their Wiſeſt Emperors, but on great Emergencies, and on occaſion of preſſing Exigencies; ſo the Grand Seignior, like a good Prince, gave anſwer to the Vizier, That he would ſpare his Subjects for the preſent, in regard that he, and the Valide Sultana, had ſufficient in the Treaſury wherewith to defray their own Expences.

Howſoever the Vizier ſtill inſiſted on this Point, arguing that the intent of removal to Adrianople was not a Journey of Pleaſure; but (if the Grand Seignior ſo pleaſ'd) in order to a War againſt the Emperor of Germany; for never was there a Conjuncture more favourable than at preſent, when the Rebels under the Command of Count Teckeley invited them to a Conqueſt of all that Countrey; and particularly of Raab, which having been formerly under the Dominion of the Turks, could not without diſhonour to the Empire, and ſcandal to Religion be relinquiſh'd, and ſuffer'd to remain in the hands of the Chriſtians, when it might without much blood or expence be recover'd. To which the Grand Seignior made anſwer, That Raab had not been loſt in his days, nor in the Reigns of his Father, or Uncle, and therefore that the recovery thereof did leſs concern him; and that for his own part, he had ſufficiently enlarg'd his Empire by the addition of Newhawſel, Candia, Caminiec, Ukrania, and the appurtenances thereunto belonging; the which Conqueſts had ſo haraſſed his Souldiers, and burthen'd his People, that he was reſolv'd to put an end unto his Wars, and give repoſe and eaſe unto his Dominions.

At preſent there was neither Peace with the Moſcovites, nor open Wars; the Treaties were in a manner ended, no great Preparations were making for the following year, but every thing remain'd in a kind of ſuſpenſe; and in this Condition of Affairs the Vizier adviſ'd the Grand Seignior to remove with his Court unto Adrianople in a Warlike poſture, which might alarm the Moſcovites, and incline them to better Terms and Articles of Peace. The Grand Seignior aſſented thereunto, and about the beginning of November arriv'd at Adrianople.

1681. Things doubtful with Moſcovy.

But before the Vizier was well ſetled in that City, he was forc'd for his own ſafety to cut off his belov'd Kaja, a Creature of his own, who was admirably fitted for his purpoſe; for he was grown ſo ſcandalouſly avaritious, and ſo publickly rapacious, without any fear or ſhame, that he was hated and deteſted by all Mankind. And here, if ever, the Curſe of David was really fulfill'd of him and his Maſter; Let a Wicked Man be ſet over them, and let Satan ſtand at his right hand. And tho' the Vizier had no great need of a Tempter to provoke or incite him to catch at his Prey, yet this Devil being moſt excellently Sagacious in finding out and ſtarting Game, and ſkilful in all the Arts of Intriguing, he was moſt intimate and dear to his Maſter, and eſteem'd the more uſeful Inſtrument, becauſe he was ſo bold as to be content to bear the diſgrace, and to ſtand between the Vizier, and the Clamours of the People; which were now become ſo common, and general by the out-cries of the multitude, that the Vizier to ſave himſelf, was forc'd to offer him a Sacrifice to their tumultuous rage. The occaſion was this.

The laſt Summer the Grand Seignior at the inſtigation of the Mufti, and of other Zealots of the Mahometan-Law, had iſſued out divers ſevere Edicts againſt Taverns, and Boza-Shops. This Boza is a certain ſort of Liquor made of that Grain which by us is call'd Millet, which is fumatick, and as inebriating as our ſtrongeſt Ale; and with which the Turks would be as drunk, and more quarrelſom and mutinous than if they had drank of the juice of the Grape; and therefore the Ulamah, or Expoſitors of their Law, gave their Opinions that it was as unlawful as Wine; for that ſince it was their Prophet's intention to prohibit Drunkenneſs, it was an illuſion of his Precept to forbid Wine, and at the ſame time to allow of other more intoxicating and inebriating Liquors; wherefore as often as the Grand Seignior renew'd his Decrees againſt Wine, he enjoyn'd the ſame Penalties againſt drinking Boza, which was a very heavy and grievous Leſſon to the People; for Boza-ſhops were become almoſt as common in Turkey, as Ale-houſes are in England, and to ſuppreſs them,

The Cauſe that mov'd the Vizier to cut off his Kaja.

1681. them, would be a like inconvenience. Wherefore upon return of the Grand Seignior laſt year unto Conſtantinople, the Boza-Houſekeepers made their Addreſſes to the Vizier for a Diſpenſation with the Sultan's Decree and License to ſell Boza publickly as before; the Kaja boldly enters into a Treaty, and concludes with them for ſixty Purſes, which ſo ſoon as the Grand Seignior was departed were paid, and the Licenſe given, and the Cape, or Chief of that Trade was with Ceremony veſted by the Chimacam, who came alſo into a ſhare of the benefit: But this matter could not long remain a Secret before it was made known to the Sultan by the contrary Faction to the Vizier, who having the good fortune to have Kara Kaja his Friend then preſent when the Complaint was made; at which he obſerving the Grand Seignior to grow very angry, immediately interpos'd in behalf of the Vizier, excuſing him as ignorant in the matter, and that none was guilty therein beſides Haſſan the Vizier's Kaja, who was the ſole Actor and Contriver of the Offence. The Grand Seignior, who had always been conſtant to his prime Miniſter, was willing to ſee him cover'd with ſuch a ſcreen, and without farther delay Sign'd a Command to take off the head of the Kaja, which was diſpatch'd away by the Salahor, or Chief of the Querries belonging to the Stables. Kara Kaja a very bad Man, who was Friend to the Vizier, diſpatch'd with all expedition this Advice unto him; which he having receiv'd, and fearing leſt his Kaja ſhould be carried away alive to the Grand Seignior, and betray the whole truth of their Combination, not ſtaying for the Command, immediately order'd him to be ſtrangled. It was early in the Morning when the Letter came, and at the ſame moment the Vizier ſent for Ali Aga, who had been Talkiſhgee to the late Vizier, (that is the Officer who carries Meſſages to the Grand Seignior) and then Agent at the Port for the Tartar Han, and bid him go to Haſſan Kaja and take his Place. Ali Aga ſurpriz'd and confus'd with this direction, went as he was order'd, and whilſt he was ſpeaking to Haſſan, and telling him that he did not well underſtand the Vizier's Pleaſure, in came the Maſter of the Ceremonies with a Veſt, with which (after the Turkiſh faſhion) he Cloathed Ali Aga, bidding Haſſan to retire into the inward Chamber; where being entred, two luſty Arnouts, who were ſelling Cimnels in the Streets, were brought up and order'd to ſtrangle him; the Cord was thrown down before him, which ſeeming ſtiff, and not prepar'd to ſlip eaſily, he deſir'd his Executioners to make uſe of his own Girdle. But before he dy'd, he inſtantly urg'd that it might be permitted him to ſee the Vizier, to whom he had many things of Importance to Communicate. But it would not be granted; and as the Cord was putting about his neck, he Curſed the Vizier, ſaying theſe laſt words; O Treacherous World, now I know thee! Being a ſtrong Man he was long in dying; and ſome few hours after his Execution being obſerv'd to move, the Vizier order'd the Principal Gaoler to watch him until he was Enterr'd. And ſo was the Grand Seignior's Sentence foreſtal'd, for he was in his Grave before that arriv'd. 1681.

The Viziers Kaja ſtrangled.

After his death, the next thing was to ranſack his Houſes, where great Riches were found, both in Furniture, Clothing, Jewels, and Money; he had four hundred and twenty Horſes in his Stables; to the Meri or Exchequer fifteen hundred Purſes of his Money were brought, but his Houſes and Lands were aſſign'd to pay his Debts, all which he had gain'd in the ſpace of three years. In one of his new Houſes he had encloſed forty thouſand Chequins within a Wall, which his Steward diſcover'd, and that he had murther'd the poor Maſons whom he had employ'd in the Work. When this Vizier was Chimacam, (as he was for ſeveral years) this Man was once his Kaja, but he was ſo ſhameleſs a Villain, that his Maſter drubb'd him, and turn'd him out of his Service. Howſoever, being now Vizier, and knowing that he had need of ſuch an Inſtrument, he took him again into the ſame Office; and calling to Mind that when he was Paſha of Siliſtria, in the time of Old Kuperlee, he ſav'd himſelf by cutting off another Kaja, he reſerv'd this Rogue for the ſame purpoſe.

The new Kaja was a much better Man, and therefore little confided in by the Vizier, and conſequently made no great Figure at his Court; his Chief Confident now was the Reis-Effendi, or Principal Secretary, by whoſe hands all Treaties and Negotiations paſs'd. In ſhort, by theſe Arts and Means the Vizier kept up his Credit with his Maſter, and in deſpight of the Faction which was againſt him, he ſtood firm on his Baſis, ſuch was the favour and conſtancy of the Sultan to his prime Miniſters.

On the twenty third of November, Caplan Paſha, who had for ſome years been Capitan Paſha, and of whom we have had occaſion to make mention often in our former Hiſtory, died at Smyrna, being grown almoſt to a Dotage; he had juſt ſuch another Kaja as the Vizier had, who miſerably pillag'd and oppreſs'd the poor Iſlanders in the Archipelago, from whom he extorted two hundred Purſes; ſuch another Sum would totally have ruin'd them.

4

A Page of the Grand Seignior's, who was Seliſtar-Aga, or Sword-bearer ſucceeded in the great charge of Capitan-Paſha, or High Admiral of the Naval Forces, he was a Creature of the Viziers, and Born in the ſame Town with him; by whom his Party was ſtrengthen'd againſt the contrary Faction.

The Vizier deſigns a War on the Emperor.

At this time the Vizier was meditating a War againſt the Emperor; but having differences with Poland and Moſcovy on his Hands, as yet not decided, there being neither an open War nor a declar'd peace as yet with either, he reſolved ſo ſoon as poſſible to bring Matters unto an Accommodation with them both: And having made Peace with all the World, and ſuper-induced a calmneſs over the Face of all the Ottoman Empire, he might then have a pretence to break out into a new War againſt the Emperor; to which tho' he might meet an averſion in the Grand Seignior for the Cauſes before mention'd, and in the Mufti, and Viziers of the Bench, upon the Truce which wanted Two years of being expir'd; yet having ſuch a favourable conjuncture of Affairs to offer, than which nothing could be more inviting, he aſſur'd himſelf that he ſhould prevail with the Grand Seignior and his Chief Miniſters; and herein he miſſed not his aim, for laying before them the Succeſſes of the Malecontents in Hungary, who were powerful and ſtrong, and had of themſelves worſted the Emperor's Forces in all their Battels and Skirmiſhes: And that theſe People declar'd their intentions to throw off their Obedience and Allegiance to the Emperor, and offer'd themſelves Subjects, and Tributaries to the Grand Seignior, on the eaſy and reaſonable Condition only of affording them his Aſſiſtance, and granting them his Protection: So that to let ſlip this favourable opportunity, on the Nice point of a Truce not yet expir'd, were, ſaid he, to give up the Mahometan Cauſe; the advance and increaſe of which were a ſufficient ground to hallow any thing, which may ſtand in oppoſition to it. There were other things alſo alledg'd, in reference to ſecret Encouragements given from France, which tho' they carried not ſuch weight with the Council, ſo as to depend on them, yet they ſerved for probable inducements to incite forward unto a War. With which Reaſons the Grand Seignior and the Council being convinced, a War was determin'd, and great preparations made in order thereunto. And now in regard we are come to a Criſis of time, which gave a turn to the ſucceſſes of the Turks, and hath ſhaken and almoſt ſubverted the whole Fabrick of the Ottoman Empire; it may not be an impertinent digreſſion to look back to the Troubles of Hungary, which were the Cauſes and Original of that War, which hath prov'd fatal to the Turks, and brought the Kingdom of Hungary under the entire and abſolute Dominion of the Chriſtian Emperor: We ſhall therefore give a ſuccinct Account of the beginning of thoſe Troubles, as reported by the Author of that Tract called Vienna Oppugnata, adjoyned at the end of the Hiſtory of Iſthuanus formerly Vice-Palatine of Hungary, whoſe words are to this purpoſe.

The Original of the Troubles in Hungary.

The Turks having in the Month of Auguſt 1664. received an Overthrow with the Slaughter of 10000 Men near St. Gothards, a Town in Hungary, by the Imperial Army, under the Conduct and Command of Raymond Montecuculi, a Peace or Truce rather was immediately concluded thereupon, to continue for the ſpace of Twenty years: During which time the Kingdom of Hungary long haraſſed with War, might have recover'd its priſtin happy Eſtate, had not certain Miſcreants, the barbarous and degenerate offspring of that Country, diſturbed the Tranquillity and Quiet thereof; and by Machinations and Plots againſt the Life of their Sovereign, drawn upon themſelves that deſtruction which they deſign'd for others. But God be praiſed, their Treaſon was detected, and the chief Conſpirators, namely, Francis Count Nadaſti, Chief Juſtice of Hungary, Francis Marquis of Frangipani, and Peter Serini a Count of Croatia, all of them Eminent both for Arms and Letters, were taken, arraign'd, and being found Guilty were put to Death, and their Goods and Eſtates confiſcated to the uſe of the Emperor. But ſo ſoon as this Rebellion was ſuppreſſed, another of more dangerous conſequence was raiſed, being fomented by the Nobility, and Perſons moſt conſiderable for their Eſtates and Power in Hungary, of which Emericus Count Tekeli was declar'd the Chief; the Cauſes and Grounds of which they deliver'd under theſe Heads.

Firſt, That contrary to the Laws and Conſtitutions of the Kingdom, a Palatine had not been conſtituted to ſupply the vacancy of the former deceaſed.

Secondly, That the Hungarians were excluded from all Offices and places of Truſt, and Strangers introduced into their ſtead.

Thirdly, That the German Troops were forcibly quarter'd upon them, and the numbers daily increaſed: And all the Forts, Caſtles, and places of defence garriſon'd by German Soldiers, and no Truſt or Confidence repoſed in the Hungarians, to the great oppreſſion and diſcouragement of that People.

Fourthly, That by the Counſel and Advice of the Jeſuits, the free exerciſe of their Religion was not only taken from them, but they were alſo ejected out of their Churches and places where they worſhipped God: For which

Reaſon

1681. Reaſon they deſired, that the Jeſuits might be baniſhed out of Hungary.

And tho' the Emperor did in his Wiſdom fore-ſee all the miſchiefs which did enſue, and with a gracious Clemency endeavour'd to apply thoſe Lenitives, which might appeaſe the Spirits of his diſcontented Subjects; and in order thereunto called a Diet to be held at Caſſovia, where he offer'd to condeſcend unto all the Propoſitions which the Malecontents did demand: And afterwards ſummoned another Diet to be held at Presburg, at which, before the Coronation of the Queen, he aſſiſted and preſided in Perſon, and there made new offers to grant Liberty of Conſcience, and a free exerciſe of Religion to all Proteſtants, and to reſtore to them their Churches taken from them, with as many other Privileges and Favours as could be deſir'd: So that there was all appearance imaginable of Peace and a fair Accommodation. But matters were permitted to go too far before they received a Check: For the Malecontents were engaged with the Turks beyond any power of retractation: And having received Aſſurances from them of Aſſiſtances which were daily expected, and Promiſes (as it is ſaid) of Money from the French, all thoughts of accommodation were laid aſide, from whence that terrible War hath enſued, fatal to the Turks and pernicious to Chriſtendom.

All this is a ſhort Epitome of the Troubles and Unquietneſſes in Hungary, for the ſpace of about Eighteen years, which having been the occaſion of the great War, which hath alter'd the ſtate of the whole World; We ſhall not content over ſelves with this ſhort Relation, but ſhall proceed to render an Account of the riſe of theſe Troubles, the continuance of them, with the ſeveral Succeſſes, until the Entire conqueſt of Hungary by the Emperor.

The People of Hungary are naturally of a mutinous and unquiet Temper, complaining of War, and not well contented with Peace. The Emperor towards the end of the Campaign 1664. had gain'd a Victory (as is ſaid) over the Turks, and made the good uſe thereof, as with that opportunity to clap up a Peace. The Hungarians who before that time, and even during the War with the Turk, bad been unſeaſonably incenſed by many Inſults and Outrages committed on them by the German Soldiers; but more ſenſibly touched by having their Churches taken from them by the Counſel, and advice of the Jeſuits and Clergy of Rome; were not content with the Peace made by the Emperor with the Grand Seignior: Alledging that they ought to have been made Parties to the Treaty, it being their Country which was chiefly concern'd: That after ſo Signal a Victory, better and more advantageous Articles might have been obtain'd from the Turk, and perhaps Newhawſel it ſelf might have been Surrender'd and Reſtored, but by default hereof their Condition was render'd far worſe than before, for by vertue of the new Articles lately concluded: The Paſha of Newhawſel pretended to bring all the Villages on the Frontiers of Moravia under Contribution; and to add unto the new Conqueſts all the Country and places on this ſide the Danube, which are nearly adjoyning to Gran, Alba-Regalis and Kaniſia, wherein was comprehended the greateſt part of the lower Hungary: Which they exclaimed againſt as Terms ſo diſagreeable unto them, that a War had been much better; and therefore to prevent and diſappoint all farther proceedings thereon, they ſeized on the Secretary of the Imperial Reſident then remaining with the Vizier, on the way as he was carrying the Articles of Peace to be Ratify'd by the Emperor, and took from him his Horſes and Money with his Diſpatches, which they for ſome time detain'd, and reſtored not without much difficulty. 1681.

The Emperor being inform'd of this Affront, cited the Chief Lords of Hungary to appear at Vienna: Where the Prince Lukovitz Preſident of the Imperial Council told them, That the Conditions of Peace which his Maſter the Emperor had concluded with the Turk, were not ſo diſadvantageous as they imagin'd; for that the firſt overture of Peace came from the Turks themſelves, with whom it was agreed and concluded, that Tranſilvania was to continue in its ancient Liberty, and not ſubjected to the Government of a Paſha in nature of a Mahometan Province. That the Counties of Zatmar and Zamboliſh, which were anciently eſteem'd dependencies on Tranſilvania, were to be transferr'd into the power of the Emperor. That the better to ſecure the Frontiers of the upper Hungary, and to prevent the Incurſions of the Turks on the other ſide of the Danube, It was provided in the Capitulations, that the Emperor might Build Forts on each ſide of the River Waagh; which would very much annoy and reſtrain the Turks of Waradin and Newhawſel from making Depredations, or Incurſions on that ſide of the Country. Now conſidering that this Peace was thus advantageous, as well to Hungary as to the Hereditary Dominions; his Imperial Majeſty judged it convenient to embrace ſo fair an opportunity; expecting that the Hungarian Lords would likewiſe concur with him in Confirmation of the Treaty, and reſtrain their Soldiers from committing farther Outrages on the Frontiers. That his Imperial Majeſty as to his part, was reſolved to withdraw all his German Regiments out of Hungary; Provided, That they themſelves would take care to furniſh, and ſupply thoſe Garri- ſons

1681. ſons with Soldiers of their own, and at their own charge repair the Fortifications of Levents, Schentra, Neutra, Schella and Gutta, which are Neighbouring places to Newhawſel, and to furniſh them with all ſorts of Ammunition, and Proviſions neceſſary for their Maintenance and Defence.

The Hungarian Lords returned no preſent anſwer to this Diſcourſe; having not Authority ſo to do, until they had firſt conſulted with the Nobility of the Upper Hungary, who had often proteſted that they would never agree to any thing, which was concluded without their conſent, and revenge themſelves on their Palatine, in caſe he ſhould engage them in matters without their Privity or Concurrence firſt obtain'd.

In fine, after Conſultations had with the Eſtates, an anſwer was giving in Writing to this effect. That to conclude a Peace without the Privity and Concurrence of the Eſtates, was againſt the Statutes, and Privileges of the Kingdom. That in caſe they could flatter themſelves ſo far, as to believe that true Tranquillity and Eaſe would be the effect, and conſequence of the late Truce made with the Turk, which would be the greateſt bleſſing that could befal a Nation, (which above all the People in this World had been haraſſed with War:) Yet it was difficult, and almoſt unpracticable for them to build the Fortreſſes intended upon the Waagh, and in the mean time reſtrain the Turks from their Incurſions; and let them do what was poſſible for them, yet ſtill Hungary would lie open, and expoſed for at leaſt 60 Leagues ſpace to the Incurſions of the Turks, and to the extortions and inſolences of the German Soldiers: In ſhort therefore, they reſolved to Ratify nothing; they would neither exchange the Garriſons nor Build new Forts, nor Repair old ones; but leave every thing to his Majeſty to provide what was neceſſary for the defence, and conſervation of that miſerable and unfortunate Kingdom.

This memorial being given in with a kind of ſad and a diſcontented behaviour, deſpairing (as it were) of the welfare of their Country; the Hungarians were retiring from the Emperor and his Council, when the Prince Lubkovitz reaſſum'd in a calm and ſober manner his former Diſcourſe, which he preſſed on them with new and perſwaſive Inſtances: Telling them, That he could not imagin upon what Grounds or Reaſons they did deſire a continuance of War, the Stage and Theater of which was to be their own Country. That out of a ſence of thoſe Miſeries which were to enſue, and from a pious and gracious regard he conceived for the repoſe of Hungary, the Emperor had concluded a Peace with the Turk, which he was contriving to ſecure againſt all violences and irruptions of the Enemy. And that entire ſatisfaction might be given to the Hungarian Lords, his Imperial Majeſty declar'd, That he would build thoſe Forts upon the Waagh, which were deſign'd to reſtrain all Incurſions from the Garriſon of Newhauſel, at his own expence and charge: That he would withdraw the German Troops from burdening the Country, and quarter Hungarians in their places; That whileſt theſe Forts were in Building, the Guards thereunto belonging ſhould conſiſt of Huſſars and Heydukes: That all places of Truſt and Profit, both Civil and Military, ſhould be put into the Hands of Hungarians. And that they might at their own will and pleaſure, put what Forces and Commanders they pleaſed into the Garriſons of the Mountain Towns and other places. 1681.

The Emperor's Grant to the Hungarians.

Theſe Conceſſions from the Emperor being ſo gracious and free, as nothing could be deſir'd more ample and ſatisfactory; the Hungarian Lords acquieſced and ſigned the Treaty with the Turks: So that all things began to put on a Face, and clear aſpect of Tranquillity and Repoſe, as well in reference unto Foreign Wars, as to civil and inteſtine differences: And thereupon the Crown, wherewith the Hungarian Kings were uſually Crown'd, and which the Lords had removed from Presburg, to prevent the Emperor from taking it upon him with Right of Inheritance, was again return'd by them, and reſtor'd to its former place.

But theſe fair promiſes and aſſurances given by the Prince Lubkovitz in behalf of the Emperor, proceeded no farther than to words, for neither were their Churches reſtor'd; Nor the German Forces recalled out of the Country; Nor the Towns of Nitria and Levents, lately taken from the Turks deliver'd into their Hands, as was promiſed: But inſtead thereof, German Garriſons were put into Tokai, Zatmar, Kalo and Onod, Towns which are bordering on Tranſilvania, and were belonging to Prince Ragotski.

In ſhort, nothing being perform'd as was promiſed, the Spirits of the Hungarians were ſo exaſperated, that they deſponded of any good from the Imperial Court, but rather beheld it as a Cabal, contriving and meditating only to bring them under an Arbitrary power, and an unſupportable Slavery. And this general Humour of diſcontent, ſo ſpread it ſelf in the Minds of the People; that they grew Sullen, and Angry in an Inſtant; and both the Roman Catholicks and Proteſtants, and all ſorts of Religions in that Nation became ſo concern'd for the Liberty and Privileges of their Country; that they freely and openly declar'd, That they would rather ſubject themſelves to the Turks, than become the Slaves of the Germans.

The conſequences of which War have been ſo diſmal, and even the Imperial Victories gain'd at the expence of ſo much Blood and Treaſure, as all Germany as well as Hungary, has felt the fatal effects of it: So that Men are apt to look back with Indignation on the Authors of theſe Troubles, and to think them worthy of the extreameſt Puniſhments, that have brought their Country to ſuch Ruin and Deſolation. The greateſt part of which Cenſures will without doubt fall upon the Proteſtants, whoſe Arms have wanted even Succeſs; that popular juſtification, and whoſe Cauſe labours under two ſuch fearful appearances, as a defection from their Prince, and the joyning with the Common Enemy of Chriſtendom, tho' perhaps a conſidering Man will be apt to reflect on that Cruel ſeverity, which forc'd them to take ſhelter in the Arms of an Infidel; at leaſt he will ſee a fatal inſtance, of the unhappy Conſequences of driving Men to Deſpair, by ſubverting their Laws, Liberties and Religion. I ſhall therefore give an impartial Account of the Cauſes, that exaſperated the Proteſtants of Hungary to this degree; and leave them to the Readers judgment, either to be condemn'd or acquitted. And therefore let us hear what Account the Proteſtant Writers give of this matter; when the Proteſtant Religion began firſt to inſinuate it ſelf into Hungary, under the Reign of Anno. 1523. King Lewis, it met there with the ſame fate it did in other Countrys, (viz.) Oppoſition and Perſecution. But this King unhappily engaging himſelf in a War againſt the Turks, fell in Battle, and leaving no Heir Male, the Hungarian Nobility were divided in the choice of a Succeſſor; one part Electing John Zapolya Vaivode of Tranſilvania, and the other Ferdinand the firſt. But John dying ſoon after his Election, Ferdinand remain'd in ſole poſſeſſion of that Kingdom; who the better to gain the affection of his Subjects, granted free exerciſe of Religion to Caſſovia, Bartphia, Eperias, Leuchenia and Libinia; the five free Towns of upper Hungary, and afterwards to ſeveral of the Towns of lower Hungary, beſides the ſame Privileges which he gave to divers of the Nobility. Notwithſtanding which, there being ſeveral Commotions and Diſturbances on account of Religion, ſtill remaining in the year 1606. at the Pacification of Vienna, made between Rodolph Emperor and King of Hungary, and Stephen Botſcai-Kis-Maria; in the firſt Article it was ſaid, That as to the buſineſs of Religion, that notwithſtanding the firſt Conſtitutions, and the laſt Article of the year 1604. according the Reſolution taken by his Imperial Majeſty: All the Inhabitants and Perſons of what Order or Condition ſoever within that Kingdom, as well the great Lords, as the Cities and Privileg'd Towns immediately belonging to the Crown, or upon the borders of that Kingdom; as likewiſe all the Soldiers of Hungary, ſhall have free and entire Liberty of Conſcience, without being troubled or moleſted: Nevertheleſs without prejudice to the Roman Catholick Religion, ſo that that Clergy, the Churches, and the Temples of the Catholicks may remain in the State wherein they are, without Violation or Moleſtation: And that thoſe which had been taken by one ſide or other, ſhould be reſtor'd to their lawful owners. Afterwards the Emperor Matthias himſelf explain'd that Clauſe, (nevertheleſs without prejudice to the Rom. Cath. Religion) by aſſuring them, That it was put in upon a good deſign, and that it only meant that neither Party ſhould be diſturbed in the exerciſe of their Religion. This liberty was afterwards often confirm'd, as you may ſee in the Grievances preſented to the Emperor, which are affix'd to the end of this Hiſtory. The now Reigning Emperor Leopold ſolemnly confirm'd this Article at his Coronation; Vide the ſixth Condition in the Imperial Patent running thus: Ordered, 'That the exerciſe of Religion granted to the States of Hungary, according to the Conſtitution of Vienna, and thoſe Articles eſtabliſht before our Coronation ſhall remain entirely free, as well for the Barons, Lords, Gentlemen, as free Cities; and all Orders and States of the Kingdom of Hungary; as likewiſe for the Towns, Villages and Hamlets that will accept of it, ſo that no Perſon of what Condition ſoever, ſhall be hinder'd in the exerciſe of his Religion, in what manner, or under what pretence ſoever. Given in the Royal Citadel of Poſonium, June the 25*th*, 1655.

In deſpight of all theſe Edicts made in favour of the Proteſtants; the Clergy, eſpecially the Jeſuits, had ſo much intereſt in the Court of Vienna, as to get a Manifeſt publiſh'd there; and Entitled, Truth declared to all the World, or a Treatiſe wherein is proved by three Argument, that his Cæſarean Majeſty is not obliged to tolerate the Lutheran, or Calviniſt Religion in the Kingdom of Hungary: Writ by George Barzon titular Biſhop of Waradin, Prieſt of the Society, and Councellor to his Sacred Majeſty. The firſt Argument was drawn from three Conditions, under which the liberty of Religion was granted at the Pacification of Vienna. The firſt, "That it ſhould be without prejudice to the Proteſtant Religion, which Condition being impoſſible ought to paſs for nothing. The ſecond, "That the Clergy, and the Catholick Churches ſhould remain in their former Condition without being toucht, which was viola-

" ted

1681.

“ted by Bethlem and Ragotski. The third, “That what was taken either by one ſide “or the other ſhould be reſtor'd, which the “Proteſtants had not perform'd. To this was anſwered, “That it did by no means “follow, that if one Condition or Clauſe “was lookt upon as impoſſible, and ſo null, “that the whole Treaty ſhould be ſo alſo; and “beſides, that the Emperor Matthias himſelf “had explain'd the Condition by declaring, “that it was not to be made uſe of for “the ruining of that liberty which was “granted. That whatſoever Bethlem or “Ragotski had done, this Liberty was not-“withſtanding confirm'd by the Edicts and “Ordinances of the Emperor: That if it “had been ſo, that Proteſtants, who being “daily provok'd by the Papiſts, had gone a “little too far, yet the innocent ought not “to ſuffer. That the Deſtruction of Tem-“ples, which were made uſe of during the “Troubles only regarded thoſe, that Bot-“ſkai had taken in the War, and not ſuch “as had been for a long time in their “Hands. The ſecond Argument is, “That “this liberty was not eſtabliſht by the “unanimous conſent of the States of the “Kingdom, to whom it belongs to make “Laws with the Conſent and Approba-“tion of his Majeſty, and conſequently “that thoſe Articles ought to be aboliſht. “But it was urg'd, that this was extreamly “injurious to thoſe Kings, who had con-“firm'd and ratify'd them, and who no “queſtion were not ſo ignorant of the rights “of the Kingdom of Hungary. That when “this Affair was manag'd at Lintz 1645. “That the Arch-Biſhop of Strigonium, George “Lippai, and ſome Seculars oppoſed it, yet “Count Palfy Preſident of the Chamber, “and divers Catholick Lords conſented, not-“withſtanding that oppoſition; ſo that the “Affair, being extreamly hindred by that “Arch-Biſhop and his adherents, the Pro-“teſtants were upon the point of complain-“ing to his Majeſty, had they not been “ſtopt by the Declaration that was made, “that they voluntarily ſubſcribed to the “Articles of the Pacification of Vienna, “which they called the Foundation of the “Kingdom: So that this Edict of Lintz “was ratify'd and inſerted in the Articles “of the year 1647 with this Clauſe, Not-“withſtanding the oppoſition of the Clergy “and other Seculars, which ſhall have no “force or vigour for the future. Beſides the “Subſcription of the Pacification of Vienna, “made by all the States both Eccleſiaſtick “and Civil, runs thus: We underwritten do, with common conſent, in the name of all the States and Orders of the Kingdom of Hungary, and the places annex'd to it, promiſe freely and voluntarily, &c. The third Argument was, “That if the Luthe-“rans and Calviniſts muſt be tolerated, then “thoſe only muſt be tolerated, which “are of the Confeſſion of Ausbourg, and “the Confeſſion of the Swiſſes: But “both one and the other had abandon'd “thoſe Confeſſions; and they inſtanced in “ſeveral Articles from which they had de-“viated. But this laſt ſeems only a frivolous ſhift, and ſhews the Reſolution the Clergy had taken to oppreſs the Proteſtants; and indeed this they had always done, when they thought themſelves the ſtronger, and notwithſtanding, that this Liberty was often confirm'd, as particularly in the Treaties with Botskai, Bethlem and Prince Ragotski; yet the Roman Catholick Lords and Gentlemen, and eſpecially the Arch-Biſhops and Biſhops, perſecuted them with Fire and Sword, maſſacr'd them in their Churches; and uſed all manner of Cruelties towards them, as far as their Power and Authority could reach; ſo that there remain'd ſcarce any place of Reſt, or Security for the Proteſtants, but in the free Cities, and thoſe too quickly after were involved in the ſame misfortune: For Nadaſti, Serini, Frangipani, and other Catholick Lords taking part with Prince Ragotski againſt the Emperor, in the year 1670. the Auſtrian Troops entr'd Hungary and carried all before them, and with them Troops of Biſhops, Arch-Biſhops and Jeſuits, whoſe Actions out-did the Fury of the Soldiers; and took this opportunity of diſpoiling the Proteſtants of their Goods, Churches, Miniſters, and conſtrain'd a great part of the People to change their Religion: The Proteſtant Lords were tax'd at immenſe Sums, Soldiers quarter'd upon them, and by theſe means ſeveral forc'd to turn Catholicks. In ſhort, all Upper and Lower Hungary with all the Free Towns, fell into the Hands of the Catholicks, whoſe Severities and Cruelties, as they found nothing to oppoſe them, ſo they ſuffer'd nothing to eſcape them: And this miſerable Kingdom labour'd at once under the Licence and Rapine of the German Soldiers, and the Rage and Fury of the Jeſuitical Converters. The Proteſtants were hang'd up at their Church Gates, and ſeveral of their Towns burnt. One John Backi a Miniſter, was burnt a live at Comarin, and the Widow of Laurent le Sur, who was of the ſame Profeſſion, had her Head cut off in the ſame Town: And multitudes of both Sexes, and all Ages and Conditions were baniſh'd.——To Authorize theſe Cruelties, at leaſt to give them a fair gloſs, they conſtituted a Chamber of Juſtices at Poſon, compos'd of Eccleſiaſticks and Seculars, all ſworn Enemies to the Proteſtants; where 1681.

1681. it was firſt order'd, That the moſt conſiderable Perſons ſhould be cited to appear, and clear themſelves of the Crime of Rebellion laid to their charge. They began with thoſe of the Nobility, which they thought the eaſieſt to be wrought upon. They which made their appearance were thrown into Priſon, without being judicially heard, condemn'd to great Fines, and were each minute ſolicited to change their Religion. A Declaration was preſented to thoſe whom they found moſt firm and conſtant, whereby they were required, that to ſatisfy his Imperial Majeſty of their Loyalty and Obedience, they ſhould no longer protect their Miniſters, and ſhould promiſe not to hinder the Prieſts from ſaying Maſs in their Churches, or performing other Eccleſiaſtical Functions, till they were enlightn'd from above, ſaw their Errors, and were converted to the Catholick Church.

But the greateſt Storm fell upon the Miniſters, at whom they chiefly aim'd; and that they might get rid of them the better, they eſtabliſh'd three Courts of Judicature: One at Tirnavia for thoſe of Poſon, and two at Poſon for the reſt of Hungary: Nor were they all cited for fear of making too much noiſe, but a few and thoſe of the Ausbourg Confeſſion, to try what ſucceſs they were like to expect from the Proſecution of the reſt: And, becauſe they chiefly deſign'd to ruin the Proteſtant Religion, under pretence of Rebellion, they preſented thoſe that appear'd theſe following Articles to ſign. 1ſt, "That all the Miniſters of both Confeſſions, School-Maſters, Readers, Students, &c. to eſcape the Puniſhments which they had incurred for their Rebellion, ſhould promiſe under their Hands to renounce all their Functions both publick and private, and paſs the reſt of their Lives peaceably and quietly, upon pain of Death if they diſobey'd. Or 2ly, "That they ſhould be baniſh'd for ever, with promiſe never to return to their Country, or to any of the Hereditary Lands, or other dependencies on the Empire, nor yet to go over to their Enemies. Or 3ly, "That they ſhould change their Religion, which his Majeſty chiefly wiſh'd and deſign'd, and which would be moſt agreeable both to him and to the Courts of Juſtice.

The 25*th* of September 1673. Some Miniſters to the number of 32 or 33 appear'd, and being threatned to be ſentenc'd to die, if they ſign'd not the foregoing Articles; ſome conſented, others choſe to be baniſh'd, and one chang'd his Religion. This lucky beginning encourag'd them to proceed, and finding fear to be the ſtrongeſt motive to work upon them; they cited all the Miniſters, Regents, School-Maſters, &c. of Hungary to appear before them, which cauſed a ſtrange conſternation amongſt them, and produced very different effects; ſome of them the Nobility would not ſuffer to appear, others fled, ſome again abandoned themſelves to the care of Providence, made their appearance at Poſon, to juſtifie their Innocence from theſe horrible Calumnies, with which they were black'd, to teſtifie their obedience and ſubmiſſion to the Magiſtrate, and to ſatisfie their Churches, who earneſtly begg'd of them not to forſake them in that calamitous Condition. There were 250 Miniſters that appear'd, and by their Tryals (two long to repeat) it appears, That their Religion was the chief Crime, and tho' other things were laid to their Charge; yet all was but pretence; they uſed all means to intimidate them, and to ſhake that great conſtancy which they ſhew'd for their Religion; they ſentenced them to death, impriſoned them, threatned them with the Gallies, and employ'd all the pernicious arts of torment and vexation, that a perſecuting ſpirit could contrive, to ſhake or ſurprize the Frailty of Man; dragged them into their Churches, forced them upon their Knees to adore the Hoſt and their Images, let looſe the fury of the Soldiery upon them, and encouraged them to torment them; in the midſt of this barbarous uſage, they would ſometimes pretend to ſhew a glimpſe of Pity, and endeavour to allure them by the promiſes of the Imperial favour and protection, offering them preferments, upon Condition they would change their Religion; at length finding them proof againſt all their arts, they ſtigmatiz'd ſeveral and ſold them to the Spaniſh Gallies, from whence afterwards they were redeem'd by the famous Ruyter, Admiral of Holland; others were thrown into vile, loathſome Priſons in which ſome periſh'd, the reſt who out-lived their misfortunes, were releaſed by the importunities of the States Ambaſſador at the Imperial Court. Theſe matters of fact are too publick to be denied, and the Reaſons that are given, ſeem by no means ſufficient to palliate ſuch Barbarities. Thoſe Letters in Cypher which were produc'd againſt them, to prove them Guilty of Treaſon are juſtly ſuſpected; but grant them true, they were but from particulars, and one or two Mens Guilt cannot render a whole body of Men liable to puniſhment. As for thoſe Accuſations which were laid upon them of being Murderers, Robbers, Raviſhers, &c. they were only alledged, not proved, and conſequently likely to be meer Calumnies. To conclude, that they were Rebels becauſe ſome fled from the Perſecutions they ſaw 1681.

1681. pouring upon them, ſeems to be no very good conſequence, and to ſhew not ſo much their guilt as their fear; at leaſt, this cannot be urg'd againſt thoſe that made their appearance; and that there were ſeveral which ſigned the Paper that was preſented them, argued, they indeed weak but not criminal; and the rigours that were uſed to bring them to ſign it, do extreamly diminiſh, if not abſolutely take away all the force of that Argument: So that I doubt not, but it will appear to the impartial Reader, that the conduct of the Popiſh Clergy has had too great an influence on theſe laſt Troubles, and that their perſecuting Maxims, are as ruinous to the intereſt of a State, as contrary to the Spirit of our Chriſtian Religion.

And from this Original began that War, which hath ever ſince continued with great effuſion of Blood, and ſtrange viciſſitudes of Fortune; which not only reduced Hungary to the pit of deſpair, but even Germany it ſelf to the brink of Deſtruction; until God was pleas'd to take the Cauſe into his own Hands, and avenge Chriſtendom from their Enemies, whoſe Sins (it ſeems) were more ripe for the Divine vengeance, than thoſe of the Chriſtian people. The diſcontents on both ſides grew ſo high, that the Emperor reſolved to perform nothing on his part, of what he had promiſed to his Hungarian Subjects, nor they any thing on theirs, which reſpected Duty and Allegiance to their Prince. Both Parties ſtood in defiance to each other; the Emperor would not loſe the benefit of the charge and expences he had been at, to fortifie the frontier Garriſons againſt the Turks: Nor would the Hungarians reſtrain themſelves from their uſual Incurſions, notwithſtanding the Treaty ſo lately ſign'd by them: By which the Emperor received frequent complaints from the Turks. So all was now private Machinations and open Defiances.

1665. It was now in the Month of September, That the three years were expir'd, at the end whereof according to the Statutes of that Kingdom a Diet was to be Aſſembled at Presburg, for redreſs of thoſe aggrievances of which the Subjects complain'd. It was uſual for the Emperor to be preſent there, but ſome jealouſies being whiſper'd of a Plot to ſeize his Perſon, his Majeſty refrain'd from making his appearance at that Diet; which being by that means put off, the Sovereign Chamber of the Kingdom, taking all matters into their Conſideration, ſent their Deputies to complain unto the Emperor, That Colonel Spaar Governour of Zatmar, had extorted Money from the Citizens, upon pretence of paying his Soldiers, tho' in reality to appropriate it to his own benefit and ſervice. That the German Soldiers were ſtill quarter'd in the Countries, notwithſtanding all the Promiſes and Engagements given to the contrary; the which aggrievances together with that of taking away their Churches, was ſuch a Scandal and block of Offence, as cauſed great Commotions in that Kingdom, whenſoever that matter came into diſpute. Hence it was, That the Proteſtants choſe three Leaders, or Chiefs of their Faction and Party; againſt which Prince Ragotski, and Apaſi oppoſed their Forces in favour of the Palatine Weſſelini; and Count Palaſſi Imbre appear'd as one of the Chief of the Malecontents; but having not ſufficient Force to ſuſtain his party and intereſt, he crav'd aſſiſtance and ſuccour from the Turks, to whom he offer'd his Son for a Hoſtage, and the Town of Debin, with the dependences thereunto belonging, as a farther ſecurity for performance of Articles. 1681. 1666.

The Hungarians complain.

All was now divided into Sects and Parties: Count Peter Serini, of whom the Emperor had not the leaſt jealouſie, entertained ſecret conſults with the Malecontents; and with Nadaſti raiſed Forces upon pretence of giving a ſtop to the Turks, in their paſſage to Dalmatia; but with real deſign to ſeize the Perſon of the Emperor at Puttendorf, a place appertaining to Count Nadaſti; as he was Riding poſt with Prince Lubkovitz, Chief Steward of his Houſe, and with about 12 Gentlemen of his Retinue to meet the Empreſs; but that Plot took not effect, for their Ambuſcade miſſing the Emperor, he happily met the Empreſs on her Journey out of Spain.

This Conſpiracy being thus diſappointed, Count Nadaſti deſired the Emperor, that he might be made Palatine of Hungary, in the place of Weſſelini lately deceaſed: But the Emperor not being well ſatisfy'd of the Faith and Integrity of that Perſon, refuſed to confer it upon him or any other, until he ſaw the Tranquillity and Peace of that Kingdom better ſecur'd: At which Nadaſti being enrag'd, corrupted a Carpenter in revenge to ſet fire to the new Appartment, which was building in the Palace for the Empreſs Eleonora: In expectation that in ſuch an affrightment and confuſion, the Conſpirators might ſeize on the Perſon of the Emperor: But God conſerved his Imperial Majeſty, tho' that Plot was not detected until Nadaſti received the reward of his demerit. 1667.

1668. The Deputies of the upper Hungary made new Addreſſes to the Emperor, to have the Office of Palatine ſupplied according to the Conſtitutions of the Kingdom; but in thoſe times of Sedition and Diſcontent, his Imperial Majeſty not finding a Perſon equally grateful to the Hungarians, and loyal to himſelf, to whom he could confide that Important Charge; did for ſome time keep the Office in his own hands; which with the refuſal made to reſtore the Proteſtant Churches, was ſo generally diſpleaſing, that the Nobility deny'd to be preſent at the Coronation of the Empreſs, until they were a little mollify'd and appeas'd, by having the Revenue and Rents of their Churches releas'd to them.

Beſides the Office of Palatine, the Government of Carelſtadt became vacant by the deceaſe of the Count Averſperg, which being in Croatia, and lying commodious for Serini, he immediately made applications for it, by means of his Lady; who with her good air and addreſs, and the vivacity of her Spirit, and fluency of her Language, thought nothing difficult for her to obtain; but miſſing thereof, for Reaſons beſt known to the Emperor, who judg'd it not good policy to add greater Authority to a perſon who was Vice-King of Croatia, and poſſeſs'd already more Power and Intereſt than he could willingly afford him, the Lady was forc'd, much againſt her Nature, to acquieſs in a denial; but not being able to ſuppreſs the violent commotions of her Spirit, ſhe openly breath'd out her menaces againſt the Emperor; and finding an humor in the People generally inclin'd to a Revolt, eaſily perſwaded her Son-in-Law Prince Ragotski, and the other principal Nobles of Hungary to enter into an Aſſociation and Conſpiracy againſt the Emperor.

Count Serini's Lady diſguſted.

The Deputies make their Complaints to the Emperor.

The firſt thing they did, was to complain of the German Garriſon in Tokai; and being aſſembled at Zemblin, they ſent their Deputies to repreſent unto the Emperor, that according to the Laws and Privileges of that Kingdom, all their Forts and Places of Strength ought to be Garriſon'd with no other than Soldiers of their own Country. That the Proteſtants receiv'd all ſorts of ill treatment and diſcountenance, their Churches were taken away, and not reſtor'd, as was promis'd and agree'd; beſides ſeveral other Aggrievances which they laid before the Emperor, ſupplicating his Imperial Majeſty to grant them eaſe and redreſs therein, according to the Conſtitutions and Privileges of that Kingdom, which his Majeſty at his Coronation had Sworn to maintain. To all which, the gentle and ſweet temper of his Imperial Majeſty, and the ſenſe of his Conſcience was inclin'd to yield a benign and gracious Anſwer, had not Father Emeric a Jeſuit, and his Confeſſor, inſtill'd other Principles and Motives into his Mind; giving him to underſtand, that it had always been the Prerogative of the Kings his Predeceſſors, to diſpoſe Garriſons in all places of that Kingdom, conſiſting of ſuch Nations as he ſhould judge moſt for the ſafety and ſecurity thereof. And that whereas at preſent the Hungarians were inſpir'd with an humor of Rebellion and Revolt, there was no reaſon to truſt or confide in them, but in the Germans only, whoſe Loyalty and Duty was ſufficiently known, and approv'd by his Majeſty. Farther he added, that the Hungarians had in the late War againſt the Turk ſuffer'd Waradin to be loſt; and at the Battle of St. Gathards upon the River of Raab, had appear'd in ſuch ſmall numbers for defence of their Country, as if they had intended to have betray'd it; had it not been for the German and other Foreign Forces, the whole Kingdom had become a Prey to the Turks.

Emeric a Jeſuit hinders an agreement with the Hungarians.

The Deputies return with diſſatisfaction. The Evils thereof.

With ſuch Diſcourſes as theſe the Deputies were entertain'd, and diſpatch'd away without other ſatisfaction; at which the Nobles and People were ſo diſpleas'd, that they gave a ſtop to the Payments they had begun to make towards building the Forts, and cut all the Germans in pieces which they found quarter'd about the Country; and particularly they kill'd forty Soldiers of the Regiment of Spaar near Xants; the which piece of Blood and Slaughter was again return'd by the Germans, and Force repell'd again by Force. So that now all was open defiance, War, and Maſſacre.

The Malecontents aſſemble at Kivar.

To carry on the Great Deſigns in hand, the Malecontents aſſembled at the Caſtle of Kivar, upon the Frontiers of Tranſilvania, about two Leagues diſtant from Ghibania, where the Gold and Silver Mines ariſe. The Principal Perſons there preſent, were Ladiſlas Giulaf, Gabriel de Kende, Benedict Seredey, Jonas Verault, the Calviniſt Miniſter of Caſſovia; alſo Derus Banſi General of the Tranſilvanian Forces; Janos Betlem the Chancellor, Michael Talba Governor of the Frontiers, with ſome others; where a League was form'd between the Hungarian and Tranſilvanian Proteſtants, to drive and expell the Germans out of the Kingdom, to demoliſh Zatmar, and to arm themſelves in defence of their Religion. In this accord the Wife of Prince Apaſi appear'd extreamly zealous, being a Woman of a Maſculine Spirit, a fierce Proteſtant, and one who had a hand in all Matters, whilſt her Husband apply'd himſelf to Hunting, and to the Converſation of Learned Men.

Count Nadaſti Plots how to Poiſon the Emperor.

In the mean time Count Nadaſti having fail'd in his late Treaſon againſt the Emperor, contriv'd to Poyſon him at a Magnificent Banquet, which he had prepar'd for him; at which the Perſons preſent, were the Empreſs, the two Imperial Princeſſes, Prince Charles of Lorain, with all the Court. The fatal Diſh prepar'd for the Emperor 1681. was a Pidgeon Pye, which he extreamly lov'd; but God preſerv'd his Sacred Perſon, by means of the Lady to the Count; who being endow'd with greater Sentiments of Honour and Religion than her Husband, beſeech'd him on her knees to deſiſt from ſo black and ſo deteſtable a Wickedneſs; but not being able to prevail upon him, ſhe Order'd the Cook to ſet another Pye of the ſame faſhion before the Emperor, in the place of that which was poyſon'd; of which he having eaten without any hurt, Nadaſti apprehended the dealing of his Wife therein; and leaſt the Cook ſhould diſcover the Secret, he kill'd him the ſame day with his own hand.

Count Strini, tho' he was contriving all this time, yet it was not in Matters of ſo black a nature as theſe. He entertain'd ſeveral Conferences with Count Taſſembach, 1669. a Perſon of as Ambitious and unſetled an humor as any whatſoever, and ready to enter into any League and Conſpiracy with the other Malecontents. And in fine, after many Conſultations, he concluded it neceſſary to engage the Turks with them in the whole Enterprize. But leſt it ſhould come to be diſcover'd to the Emperor's Reſident at Conſtantinople, by the openneſs of the Turks, who can keep no Secret, it was reſolv'd that the Matter ſhould be Negotiated by the Tranſilvanians; who being already Subject to the Turks, and under their protection, might with leſs ſuſpicion propoſe this Treaty.

A Treaty held with the Turk.

The Turks hearken to the Hungarians.

This Overture being made to the Turks, they immediately embrac'd it, being an Offer which at the firſt ſight appear'd very advantageous; but then the next Condition requir'd by the Chimacam, who was Kara Muſtapha, (the Grand Vizier being then at the Siege of Candia) was, That in Conſideration of the aid and protection which the Grand Seignior was to give unto the Hungarians, they were to become his Tributaries, in the ſame manner, and on the ſame Conditions as the Tranſilvanians were. This Demand, tho it ſeem'd hard to the Hungarians, yet they reſolv'd to purſue their Deſign; and accordingly ſent their Agents to the Vizier at Candia, hoping by the lenity and moderation of his Nature to obtain more eaſie terms than thoſe demanded by the Chimacam; and in the mean time to notiſie their intention of Revolt unto all the World, they caus'd a Standard to be erected, with two Scymeters died with Blood, and a Creſcent or Half Moon over them.

The Grand Vizier at Candia diſmiſſes the Agents from the Rebels.

The Grand Vizier being then labouring at the Siege of Candia, and in a doubtful Condition of Succeſs, was not willing to entertain thoughts of a new War, until he had put an end to that which he had then in hand, and in which he was daily engag'd. 1681. Howſoever, not to ſeem diffident of his own Succeſſes, or negligent and cold in the entertainment of Propoſitions ſo apparently advantageous to his Maſter's Intereſt, thought not fit to diſmiſs them with a ſlight Anſwer; but cauſing their Propoſitions to be taken in Writing, and examin'd, he diſſpeeded the Meſſengers with fair Words and Promiſes, referring their Matters to be farther debated by the Officers actually preſent with the Grand Seignior, who had more time to conſider their Affairs than he had, who was daily engag'd in Batteries, and continual Aſſaults upon the City.

Conditions demanded of them by the Turks.

The Tranſilvanian Meſſengers being come to the Port, the Conditions requir'd of them by the Turks were very ſevere. For in the firſt place, they demanded of Ragotski, who was Chief of the League, that the five Towns in Hungary which belong'd to him ſhould be deliver'd up into their hands; That Count Serini ſhould cauſe Copranitz, an impregnable Fort in Croatia to be ſurrender'd to them; and that an Annual Tribute ſhould be pay'd for the Kingdom of Hungary.

The Commiſſioners for the Malecontents, who thought theſe Propoſals very hard, did yet endeavour to come as near an accord as was poſſible; for tho they were unwilling to ſurrender up their own Towns and Demeſnes to the Turks, yet they promis'd to fight for them, and deliver ſuch Towns and Fortreſſes as they ſhould take from the Emperor into their hands.

The Grand Vizier Kuperlee was by this 1670. time return'd Triumphant from Candia, having with the entire ſubjection of that City, and the whole Kingdom, put an end to the War with the Venetians. Howſoever tho' the Propoſitions offer'd by the Malecontents were of ſuch advantageous Conſequence as the like could not be expected, yet they were rejected by the Vizier; for whether it were out of a ſenſe of Faith to the Emperor, with whom he had concluded a Peace but five years before, and which he had no cauſe given him to break, or by reaſon of a War deſign'd againſt Poland; and ſome umbrages and Clouds of diſcontent, began with the Moſcovites; he was not of a mind to enter into a War ſo ſoon with the Emperor; howſoever he under-hand encourag'd it, and gave private Inſtructions to the Paſha's on the Frontiers to aid the Malecontents in ſuch ſort, as that their union and actings with them might not amount unto a Rupture, or breach of the Peace.

Kuperlee unwilling to break with the Emperor.

During all this time the Imperial Court had only ſuſpicions and jealouſies of what was Plotting, rather than any certain advice vice or knowledge thereof. And the Emperour's Reſident at Conſtanſtinople had as yet received but ſome obſcure Notions, of what was treating by the Tranſilvanian Agents, which afterwards came to a clearer Light, by the means of an Engliſh Gentleman as we have before declar'd in our preceding Hiſtory: And which being once made known, other things appear'd to put the matter out of all doubt or queſtion. And as a particular Evidence to diſcover this Truth; the principal Servant of Count Taſſembach, and one in whom he had repoſed the greateſt confidence, having been put in Priſon by him for Robbing him; this Traitor that he might be revenged on the Count and obtain his Liberty, diſcovered much of the Plot, by producing one of the original Papers, all written with the proper Hand of Taſſembach, which contain'd a Scheme of the whole method of their intended proceedings, as agreed and concerted between him and Count Serini, dated the 11*th* of September 1667. This Paper being Read in the Council at Vienna, ſerved to open the Eyes of the Emperor, and of the Government, and cauſed them to watch all the motions of Taſſembach, and of Serini and the other Accomplices.

1681.

A Plot diſcovered.

To evidence and farther confirm that there was a Plot, advices came from Schaketorno in Croatia, that Count Serini was in Arms and had levied ſeveral Troops. The original Letter alſo appeared which Serini wrote to Frangipani, giving him an account of the Reſolutions and Proceedings of Taſſembach; the which Letter (by what means is not known) was found with a Soldier belonging to Frangipani, who careleſly made uſe of it, for a ſtopper to his Powder-horn: Another Letter was intercepted from Frangipani, directed to one of his Captains in whom he repoſed his greateſt confidence: Signifying the offers which he had made to the Turks of ſubjection to them; that the Germans intended nothing more than to ruin their Country; and therefore, that he ſhould keep his Forces in a readineſs to oppoſe them in caſe of neceſſity.

Theſe and ſeveral other Evidences were a clear conviction of a Plot deſign'd; and a ground ſufficient for the Preſident of the Council of Grats, to ſeize the Perſon of Count Taſſembach, and commit him to ſafe Cuſtody. After which his Houſe was ſearched, where was found a conſiderable quantity of Powder and Ammunition: And his Papers being alſo ſeized and examined, it thereby appeared, that the Arms and Ammunition were deſigned to furniſh therewith 6000 Men, which he intended to raiſe: and upon farther enquiry into this matter, ſeveral queſtions being put to him; Taſſembach own'd the whole Deſign and Conſpiracy, and the Engagements which were between him and the Count Serini. Whereof Copies with the Proceſs being ſent to the Emperor, the whole Plot was diſcover'd, and no further doubt or queſtion made of a Rebellion, and General revolt of the whole Kingdom.

1681.

This diſcovery was ſeconded by advices of the conſtant intercourſe and correſpondences held between Serini, and the Paſha's of Buda, Boſna and Kaniſia: And more particularly by a Letter, which Marquis Frangipani Brother-in-Law to Count Serini wrote to Captain Tſcolnits, containing the whole ſecret of the buſineſs, and ſerved to demonſtrate the inveterane Malice, which the Marquis had conceived againſt the Emperor, and the whole German Nation. Tſcolnits, had at firſt entertained a correſpondence with the Malecontents, but making reflections afterwards on the perſons, with whom he was to engage; that they were raſh and heady, and Men of no ſolid Foundation or good Temper, he retracted from his former Engagements, and ſhow'd the Letter to the Emperor.

But matters were proceeded too far, to be wholly ſuppreſſed or defeated: For thoſe in the upper Hungary appeared openly in the Field under Ragotski, who threatned to take Mongatz, where his Mother held her Court of Reſidence, and to ſeize on the Treaſure, which his Father had amaſſed during the time, that he was Prince of Tranſilvania.

1670.

The time being come in which the Malecontents had appointed to draw their Forces into the Field, on pretence of enterpriſing ſomething againſt the Turks: For we muſt note, that in times of Peace, it is allowable for both ſides either Turks, or Chriſtians to make Incurſions upon each other, to Rob and drive away Cattle, and to fight in the Field with ſtrong Parties both of Horſe and Foot, provided that the numbers of them do not exceed 5000, and that no Cannon be brought into the Camp. Such is the miſerable Condition of that unfortunate Kingdom: The Malecontents, I ſay, having with this pretence drawn their Forces into the Field; convened a Diet at Caſſovia, without the knowledge or authority of the Emperor; where the Nobility and the Deputies of the ſeveral Towns, and Cities in the lower Hungary were Aſſembled; to the end, that they might have an underſtanding together, how to raiſe Money, and how to manage the War.

A Diet at Caſſovia.

The Emperor, tho' not ignorant of all theſe Motions and Conſults; yet wanting a ſufficient force to ſuppreſs theſe firſt beginnings of Rebellion, thought fit to temporize and uſe Lenity for a while; tho' in the mean mean

1681. The Emperor declares againſt it. 1670. The Chiefs are cited to Newſol.

mean time he declared againſt the illegality of the Diet; which the Malecontents excuſed, and diſguiſed under the colour of an Aſſembly, in which nothing more was intended, than only to raiſe 8000 Foot and 4000 Horſe, to oppoſe the continual Depredations and Incurſions of the Turk. But the Emperor ſaw farther into the manner of their actings, than to believe their words; for Princes have juſt cauſe to ſuſpect the Loyalty of their Subjects, who take up Arms without the Privity and Conſent of their Sovereigns: And therefore to try, and prove the Sincerity of their intentions, the Emperor cited the Chief of the Malecontents to appear at Newſol, there to render an account of their Actings to his Commiſſioners appointed to examine thoſe matters, namely the Count of Forcatz, the Arch-Biſhop of Strigonium, Zitzchi, who was Preſident of the Royal Chamber, and Nadaſti, who had not as yet declared himſelf of the contrary party, which he under-hand encouraged and countenanced. The Malecontents yielded no obedience to this Citation, and refuſed to make their appearance; and inſtead thereof 13 Counties entred into an Aſſociation, and raiſed Soldiers, which were commanded by Ragotski, who thereunto joyn'd 2000 Men of his own, whom he leavied and maintain'd at his own expence.

Count Staremberg Impriſoned.

Ragotski, who thought it now time to caſt off his Diſguiſe, invited Count Staremberg to Dinner, and in the mean time inveſted the City of Tokai, of which he was the Governour, with 8000 Huſſars; but the place was ſo well defended by the watchfulneſs and valour of the Lieutenant Governour, that his Men were repulſed with a conſiderable loſs. Nor was he more proſperous in his attempt upon Mongatz, which, at the news of his approach, was defended by his Mother, who cauſed the Bridges to be drawn and the Cannon levelled againſt him, preferring the Loyalty towards her Prince before the natural tenderneſs to a Son, to whom ſhe ſent thoſe Reproaches of his Treachery, as became a Lady of that great and generous Vertue.

1670. The Malecontents offer their aggrievances to the Emperor.

In the mean time the Malecontents in deſpight of the Emperor held their Meeting, which they called a Diet at Caſſovia; and having concerted all their matters, and agreed on a Scheme of their Affairs, they drew up a Remonſtrance of their chief Aggrievances, which they offered to his Imperial Majeſty, deſiring that the Churches taken from the Proteſtants might again be reſtor'd to them: That all their Towns and Fortreſſes might be freed and eaſed of German Soldiers, and that in place of them, their Garriſons might be ſupplied with Hungarians: And Laſtly, That they might have liberty to make War on the Turks, with their own Men, and at their own expence. Theſe Propoſitions were rejected by the Emperor at the inſtigation of his Chief Officers and Miniſters of State, who ſwallowing in their deſires all the Riches and Poſſeſſions of the Hungarians, hoped to force them into a Rebellion, by which their Lands and Eſtates might be forfeited to the Emperor, that they might beg them for their own benefit and enjoyment.

Serini irreſolved.

The Emperor communicated all theſe matters to the Diet at Ratisbon, giving them to underſtand how neceſſary it was to ſuppreſs theſe Diſturbances and Inſurrections in their beginnings: And immediately before he ſent his Forces into the upper Hungary, he thought fit to cauſe Major General Spankau to March into Croatia againſt Serini with 6000 Men. Upon the news of the approach of theſe Forces, Serini was greatly ſurprized, and in ſuch a conſternation that he knew not what to reſolve. He was diſappointed of Money to pay his Army, with which Ragotski had promiſed to ſupply him out of his Father's Treaſury at Mongatz, but that failed as we have ſhow'd before. The Valachians had likewiſe deſerted him, and adhered to Count Herberſtein Governour of Carolſtadt. Nor was the time as yet come, that the Malecontents had appointed to ſtir in the upper Hungary; in the mean time his own Forces were weak and inconſiderable, not exceeding 2000 Morlaques in his City of Chiacatorno, and thoſe ill provided either with Money, Ammunition or Victuals to maintain a Seige. What then was to be done? Why, nothing but ſubmiſſion to the Will and Clemency of the Emperor; which being reſolved, Father Forſtal an Auguſtin Friar, and an intimate Friend of Serini, was employ'd to Vienna to manage this Accommodation: Where being arrived, he apply'd himſelf to Prince Lubkovitz, the Emperor's principal Miniſter of State, to whom having imparted his Meſſage; it was received by him with much kindneſs and joy; and was the more acceptable, becauſe Serini was his Kinſman, and nearly ally'd to him: And therefore frankly told him, That two things were expected from Serini. Firſt, That he ſhould ſend his Son for a Hoſtage to Vienna: And Secondly, That he ſhould ſubſcribe a blank Paper, ſignifying, that he would accept of ſuch Conditions as the Emperor ſhould be pleaſed to impoſe upon him: Both which being performed, (as is here propoſed) Prince Lubkovitz did promiſe in behalf of the Emperor, that Serini ſhould not only receive a General Pardon, but ſhould alſo conſerve his Liberty, Places and Offices of Truſt, Dignities and Privileges

He ſubmits to the Emperor. 1670.

Offers made by Prince Lubkovitz to Serini.

only in caſe the Emperor ſhould think fit to remove him from the Office of Vice-King of Croatia, he promiſed that in lieu thereof he ſhould have the Government of Carolſtadt conferr'd upon him, or ſome other of equal importance. And farther, this Prince, to demonſtrate his concernment and reſpect to this Family (of which he was a Member) offer'd out of his own Eſtate to pay the Debts thereof, which amounted to 400000 Florins, and for ever to eſpouſe the intereſt of Serini, and of thoſe related to him. Father Forſtal returning with this Diſpatch, received at the Hands of Count Serini, his only Son to be carried for an Hoſtage to the Emperor, with a blank Paper ſigned, promiſing to receive German Soldiers into all his Garriſons.

But before Forſtal could finiſh his ſecond Journey to Vienna, Spankau arrived with the Imperial Army before Chiacatorno. And tho' Serini ſent him forth a Meſſage, acquainting him of his Accommodation with the Emperor, and his Treaty now in hand negotiated by Forſtal; yet General Spankau, having received no ſuch advices or directions from the Emperor, purſued the Tenure of his firſt Commiſſion, and accordingly beſieged Chiacatorno, and ſo ſtreightly preſſed it, that Serini and his Brother-in-Law, the Marquis Frangipani, were forced to eſcape and abandon the City, and leave it with all that was dear and precious to them for 1670. a Prey to their Enemies. And ſo iſſuing forth by a ſecret Sally Port, with about 30 other Perſons of quality, with intention to ſubmit, and lay themſelves at the Feet of his Imperial Majeſty, they unfortunately committed themſelves to the guidance and direction of Count Keri, who pretending great Friendſhip to them, received them into his Caſtle with 5 or 6 Servants, pretending that he could not receive, or entertain a greater number for want of Furniture, or Conveniences fit for their better Accommodation. So ſoon as theſe two Lords with their Servants were within the Walls of the Caſtle, Keri cauſed the Bridge to be drawn up, and his Soldiers to ſtand to their Arms, and placed Guards in all parts and avenues of the Caſtle. The two Counts tho' very ſenſible of the Treachery of Keri; yet diſſembled their reſentments thereof, and ſuffer'd themſelves to be carried Priſoners without any reſiſtance to Vienna; where they were at firſt Lodged in the Suburbs, in the Convent of Auguſtin Friars, from whence they were carried to the Swan Inn, where they ſtay'd until towards night, and then were ſeparated, and carried to divers places; Serini was conducted to the Houſe of Baron Ugart, Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiment then in Garriſon at Vienna; and Frangipani to the Houſe of Count Daun Major of the Town, where they were both ſo civilly treated, that they were not ſenſible of being under any reſtraint; being viſited by all the Perſons of Note and Quality in Town; but by degrees the crouds of Viſitants became thin, and addreſſes faint and cold, which were ſure Indications of ſome thing evil intended againſt them. For tho' his Imperial Majeſty, out of his natural Clemency, was graciouſly diſpoſed to have pardoned them; yet having his Spirit exaſperated by ſuch as had a mind to enter into their confiſcated Eſtates, Proceſs was made againſt them, and things carried on to the higheſt Severity.

Serini eſcapes out of Chiacaterno.

Are made Priſoners.

In the mean time Count Herberſtein Governour of Carolſtadt, ſeized on all the places belonging to Serini and Frangipani without much difficulty or oppoſition; only at Coade, the Governour refuſed to ſurrender upon Summons, but inſtead thereof diſplay'd two Bloody Flags on the top of a high Steeple; and return'd anſwer, That he would be buried in that place before he would tamely yield it up, and betray the charge committed to him; which accordingly follow-ed the ſame Evening, for by that time Herberſtein had by Force of Arms made his Entry into the Town and Caſtle, where taking the Governour and ſeven other Officers, he hanged them up wrapped in the ſame Red Flaggs, which they had ſo lately diſplay'd.

Preparations for a War made by the Emperor.

Thus were the meaſures of the Malecontents broke for ſome time, and the whole Party diſcourag'd. The Emperor on the other ſide prepares for War, and raiſes a conſiderable Army. The Duke of Brandenburg offers himſelf to ſerve in Perſon againſt the Rebels; the Duke of Saxony had already Commanded 600 Horſe, 400 Dragoons, and a thouſand Foot to march for the Service of the Emperor, under the Command of the Great Marſhal Chriſtian Erneſt, a Captain in thoſe days of great Reputation. The Count de Vaudemont offer'd moreover to contribute to his aſſiſtance with ſeveral Troops of Lorrainers; but his Imperial Majeſty being provided with a ſufficient force of his own Subjects, civilly refuſed their offers, intending to reſerve the ſame for times of extream and more preſſing difficulties; for 'tis the policy of Wiſe and Cautious Princes never to admit Stranger Forces into their Dominions, without a violent neceſſity; to which the Emperor was not reduc'd, becauſe as yet the Turks had not joyn'd their Forces with the Armies of the Malecontents. Howſoever both ſides were in motion, and big with Deſign one againſt the other. Ragotski was preparing to Beſiege Tokai and Zatmar, and the Imperia- liſts were making a Bridge of Boats near Presburg, to open a paſſage into the upper Hungary. Count Sporke in the mean time with ſome Troops of Horſe defeated a Party of 2000 Hungarians, killing 300 on the Place, and taking ten Colours, with the loſs only of nine Men.

1681.

Ragotski labours to make his Peace with the Emperor.

Ragotski alſo receiv'd a Repulſe before Tokai and Zatmar, which tho' blockt up by him for ſome time, yet having receiv'd late Recruits both of Men and Proviſions, they refus'd to ſurrender at his Summons, which put him out of all hopes of prevailing againſt thoſe Places. And with theſe, and the like Succeſſes, the Spirits of the Malecontents becoming more low and debaſed, Ragotski the Chief of the Aſſociation entertain'd thoughts of ſubmitting to the Emperor; and to make his way more eaſie thereunto, he freely ſet Count Staremberg at Liberty, with the other Officers whom he had detained Priſoners, deſiring them to interceed with his Imperial Majeſty for his Pardon. And farther, to evidence a true Repentance for his late defection, and real intentions to return to his due obedience, he rais'd the Siege from before Tokai, and caus'd his Forces to march into Tranſilvania; and particularly he employ'd Count Colonitz, who had been his Priſoner, with others, to Negotiate in his behalf at the Court of the Emperor. But this Count not being able to obtain other than ambiguous and general Anſwers from the Emperors Council, it was not thought ſafe for Ragotski to rely on thoſe terms and methods which had before fail'd in the Caſes of Serini and Frangipani. And therefore the Princeſs his Mother, to play a ſurer Game, and to take off all jealouſie, engaged, in the name of her Son, that he ſhould receive into all places of his juriſdiction ſuch Garriſons as the Emperor ſhould pleaſe to impoſe upon him, and maintain them at his own Charge.

Thus did the Troubles of Hungary ſeem to incline towards a Compoſure, caus'd indeed by the evil directions of the Emperor's Council, who to introduce an Arbitrary Power into a Free Kingdom, and to make that Crown Hereditary which was Originally Elective, and to force a Religion on them contrary to their Principles, and Conſciences, had taken away their Churches and places where they aſſembled to ſerve God, and compell'd them to receive German and Foreign Garriſons into all places and Fortreſſes of ſtrength within that Kingdom. So that if any thing may be ſaid in defence and excuſe for a People who rebel againſt their Prince, certainly the Hungarians had all thoſe Arguments which might be deduced from the Topicks of Law, Natural Liberty, and Self-preſervation to plead for them.

1670.

1681.

The Loyal Hungarians Petition the Emperor.

But notwithſtanding this ſubmiſſion of Ragotski to the Emperor, by which the Troubles ſeem'd in ſome meaſure to abate, and the Malecontents to lay their Arms and Pretenſions down, yet ſtill the Animoſities were high, and the minds of thoſe who were Loyal and well-affected to the Emperor, griev'd and afflicted to ſee their poor Country over-run and haraſs'd with German and Foreign Souldiers; wherefore in a ſenſe thereof, they ſent their Deputies to the Emperor, repreſenting their Fidelity and conſtant Allegiance to his Majeſty, from which they had never ſuffer'd themſelves to be ſeduc'd; and therefore they humbly pray'd that they might not be number'd with the guilty, nor their Towns and Lands made a prey to the Liberty and Licentiouſneſs of Soldiers. In caſe any of their Country-Men had offended, they ought to be legally Cited before the Tribunals of Juſtice; but to make his Loyal Subjects equally noxious with the Diſobedient, was a Severity unagreeable to the known Clemency of his Imperial Majeſty. But all the moving Language which the Deputies could uſe in behalf of their Principals avail'd little; for General Sporke being recruited with a conſiderable Army which General Heiſter had brought out of Bohemia, was Commanded with all expedition to march into Hungary; the appearance of which not only troubled the Hungarians, but alarm'd the Turks, who aſſembling in great numbers about the Quarters of Kaniſia, diſpatch'd ſeveral Meſſengers one after the other to Vienna, to know and to be ſatisfy'd of the Reaſons and Cauſes which mov'd the Emperor in a time of Peace, to ſend ſo conſiderable an Army to lodge and encamp on the Frontiers of the Grand Seignior's Country. In like manner the Paſha's of Newhawſel and Agria being alarm'd with the near approach of this Chriſtian Army, prepar'd for a Defence; and withal ſent a Chiaus to General Sporke to aſſure him, that the Grand Seignior had reſolved not to aſſiſt or afford Aid unto the Malecontents, nor to enter on the Emperor's Lands, or to do any thing to the infringment, or violation of the Truce ſome few years before concluded: And on the other ſide, the Chiaus told General Sporke, that the Grand Seignior did conjure him to let him know the Cauſes, and deſign which moved the Emperor to appear with a Force ſo conſiderable, and in the times of Peace ſo unuſual on the Frontiers. To which the General returned anſwer, That the Emperor his Maſter had no deſign, or intention to paſs the Limits of his Dominions, or to act any

The Turks alarm'd at the coming of German Forces on the Frontiers.

General Sporke's Anſwer to the Turks.

1681. thing towards a Rupture, or to the Infringement of the Peace between him and the Grand Seignior; and that the Commiſſion he had received from the Emperor, was only to ſuppreſs the Rebellion of his own Subjects, who had taken up Arms againſt him: And thus much he ſuppoſed to be lawful, without any concernment of the Grand Seignior therein. With theſe aſſurances the Chiaus departed, and Suſpicions and Jealouſies ſeem'd to clear up on the ſide of the Turks. And herewith did the Clouds in all quarters ſeem to diſperſe for a while: For Ragotski, who was chief of the League being brought into favour by the interceſſion of his Mother, and all things accommodated by a Treaty which he held with the Prince of Holſtein and General Heiſter, a Paſſport or Writing of Safe Conduct was ſent him by the Emperor, and all the Offences and Crimes which were paſt, were pardoned and forgiven to him. And Ragotski on the other ſide, that he might make a Return agreeable to ſo much Goodneſs and Clemency of the Emperor, publiſhed his Edicts in all parts of his own Dominions, forbidding his Subjects to Riſe in Arms, or to favour the Cauſe of the Malecontents, either directly or indirectly, upon pain of loſing their Noſes or Ears, or being more ſeverely proceeded againſt, by Puniſhment of Death.

Ragotski Pardoned.

1670. Ragotski had thus wiſely made his peace with his Sword in his Hand; whil'ſt poor Serini, and Frangipani had partly by their own Fears, ill Conduct and Treachery of others, fallen into the power of their Enemies: With whom at firſt they received a kind Treatment, and hopes of being ſet at Liberty with reſtitution to their Eſtates, Dignities and Privileges: But afterwards, time diſcovering many private Practices, which at firſt were unknown and lay concealed, the Chief Miniſters of State, for the Reaſons before mentioned, and to make ſome Examples of the Emperor's Indignation for the late Revolt, perſwaded his Cæſarean Majeſty to proceed againſt them by Impeachment of High Treaſon; which when Serini perceived, he wrote an Expoſtulatory Letter to the Emperor to this purpoſe.

Serini juſtifies himſelf.

That tho' the Hungarians had much to ſay for themſelves in regard to their Laws, and their Country, which Nature and Religion obliged them to defend: And tho' the Provocation was high, when the Houſe of Auſtria labour'd to make that Kingdom Hereditary, which was originally Elective; and to ſubvert the Laws and Liberties of the People, who were by their Conſtitutions free as any Nation of the World, and to introduce upon them Tyranny and Oppreſſion, with the loſs of their Privileges and Religion; yet he would not juſtifie himſelf upon any of thoſe Topicks, but rather inſiſt on his Innocence, and Avow that he did never Enter into any League with the Turk, nor take up Arms againſt his Sovereign; againſt whom, neither by himſelf, or his Subjects he had committed any act of Hoſtility; but to the contrary had blindly obey'd the Commands of his Imperial Majeſty, the which appear'd by the Negotiation of Father Forſtal in his behalf; by whom he ſent his only Son for a Hoſtage, and with him a blank Paper, that the Emperor might inſcribe therein what Articles and Conditions he judged fit; moreover, that he had enjoyned his Son-in-Law, Prince Ragotski, to ſubmit unto the Emperor, at a time when he was at the Head of an Army, and poſſeſſed the Narrow paſſes leading to the Mountains, and other advantageous places of great importance. He deny'd all Intercourſe and Correſpondence with the Turks, unleſs it were with intention to betray them; and that when they tempted his Faith and Fidelity to the Emperor with large offers of reward, he diſcover'd all to the Count of Rothal, to whom he Read the very Letters which were ſent to him; and held no Treaty with any, but what he had made known to his Imperial Majeſty. He highly inſiſted on the promiſes made him by the Baron Oker Lord Chancellour, who aſſured him that the Diſgrace into which he was fallen, ſhould ſerve to raiſe him to higher Dignities; and that Prince Lubkovitz had, in the preſence of Baron Oker, promiſed him great rewards, in caſe he could take off Prince Ragotski, his Son-in-Law, from the diſaffected Party: Which he had accordingly done, and ſo well ſucceeded therein, that immediately upon the Receipt of his Letter, Ragotski had ſet Count Staremberg at Liberty, and entirely ſubmitted himſelf with all his Forces to the Will and Devotion of his Majeſty: After all which and much more, that he could alledge in juſtification of himſelf, he might reaſonably hope, that his Majeſty, who was a Prince of unparallell'd Clemency, would deal with him after the generous Example of Julius Cæſar, who burnt the Letters of Pompey and Scipio without Reading, tho' thereby he might have diſcover'd the Names, and Plots of all the Conſpirators againſt him: And tho' he could not hope for, or deſire ſuch an implicite manner of proceeding; yet he expected ſo much Juſtice, as to have his Cauſe try'd before Wiſe and Impartial Judges. 1681.

Nadaſti betrays Serini.

This Leter had much availed with the Emperor, had not Count Nadaſti, Brother-in-Law to Serini, inſinuated to the Council, the Fictions and falſe Colours contained therein: To which diſcovery even Prince Ragotski his Son-in-Law much contributed, by reſigning into the hands of the Emperor's Miniſters, all thoſe original Letters written to him

1681. him by his Father-in-Law, by which all the methods and meaſures of the Deſign were plainly laid open and expoſed: And his Enemies ſupply'd with ſufficient Crimes to lay unto his Charge, and to fill an Endictment againſt him. Such is the falſity of this World, in which there is no Faith either amongſt Friends or Relations. In the mean time the General of the Imperial Army advanced his Forces againſt the Malecontents, who ſtill ſtood out, and entertained thoughts of Retiring with their Families into the Dominions of the Turks: To prevent which he march'd with 15 Regiments againſt Padock, Mongatz and Erſchet, places belonging to Ragotski: In the firſt of which the Princeſs Ragotski, going before, prepar'd a Magnificent Banket for General Sporke, to whom, after the Entertainment, ſhe deliver'd the Keys of the place, and preſented him with a Horſe and Furniture rated at the value of about Eleven thouſand Roman Crowns: And having here placed a Garriſon, as alſo in Padock, Czalos, Serentz and Mongatz, Lieutenant General Heiſter Marched to Erſchet, where many and the moſt conſiderable of the Malecontents were retir'd, and refuſed to receive any Garriſon, either from the Emperor or the Prince Ragotski, until firſt a Pardon or act of Oblivion were given them in due form and manner; and herein they ſo reſolutely perſiſted, that they levelled their Cannon againſt the Imperial Forces, by which the Landtgrave of Heſſe had his Horſe killed under him; and would have maintain'd their Poſt to the laſt extremity, but that General Sporke being more willing to uſe Lenity than Rigour, ſent to the Beſieged a blank Paper, promiſing, on Condition of Surrender, to yield unto all the Articles that they ſhould write therein; which being accepted, and the Capitulations drawn, the Town was deliver'd. The City of Caſſovia following the Example of Erſchet, open'd their Gates to the Imperialiſts, and promiſed to give Free quarters to the Soldiers, provided they might have and enjoy a free exerciſe of their Religion: This City of Caſſovia, ſince the time it had acknowledged the Auſtrian Family for their Soveraigns, had never been violated, or ſaw entrance forcibly made thereinto: For which Reaſon, the General was pleaſed to make a Triumphant Entry, and to paſs with his Army through the midſt of its Street with Trumpets, Hautboys, and all ſorts of Warlike Muſick; and having left a ſufficient Garriſon therein, he proceeded to take in other Towns and Countries, which for the moſt part ſubmitted to the prevailing Power; tho' with much Regret and Diſpleaſure to ſee themſelves ſubjected by Foreign Forces, and by Garriſons ſtronger than the Inhabitants; eſpecially the County of Zemplin highly contended, and ſeemed reſolved to oppoſe themſelves againſt ſuch maſterleſs Gueſts, until General Sporke threatned to give them no Quarter, and in caſe of reſiſtance, to enter their Country with Fire and Sword. 1681.

Erſchet ſtands out.

Surrenders on Conditions.

Caſſovia yields.

Zemplin refuſes to take German Garriſons.

Baſſory, and other Chiefs of the diſcontented Party, being affrighted with theſe Menaces, deſired Apaſi, Prince of Tranſilvania, to grant them Protection and Refuge within his Dominions: But he being forbidden by the Turks to receive their Perſons, or own their Cauſe, abſolutely refuſed to grant them quarters or ſafety within his Country: Upon which denial they fled into Moldavia and Valachia, where they diſperſed and concealed themſelves, until a more proper time preſented to aſſert their Liberty.

The Malecontents fly into Moldavia.

Thus was all Hungary entirely ſubjected to the Command and Power of the Emperor; excepting only Muran, which was the City and Seat of the late Palatine Weſſellini, and which was then guarded and defended by his Widow; and was, as believed, the place where the Conſultations were held, and where the Plots and Factions were carried on. To take in this place Prince Charles of Lorrain appear'd before it, with a conſiderable party both of Horſe and Foot, againſt which the Counteſs being not able to make any long reſiſtance, yielded the place upon honourable Conditions. Amongſt other Malecontents which were there ſeized, Nagiferents who had been the Chief Confident of the late Palatine Weſſellini, and Secretary of the League, was there ſecur'd with all his Papers, which made a diſcovery of the whole Plot, and of the Names of the principal Actors therein. Theſe Papers were contain'd in five Cheſts, conſiſting of Letters, Inſtructions, Treaties, Acts, &c. which being ſent to Vienna and there examined, it plainly appear'd thereby, what part Count Nadaſti was to perform, and how far he was engaged: It diſcover'd farther, all the proceedings both of Serini and Frangipani, and furniſhed their Enemies with Articles againſt them: And ſeveral Letters were intercepted, which made the Counteſs of Weſſellini to be one of the Complices, and concerned in the Conſpiracy. Nadaſti had all this time diſſembled his Party, and ſeemed zealous for the Emperor againſt the Malecontents, keeping himſelf quiet, and retired within his Caſtle of Puttendorf. But ſo ſoon as he underſtood, that the Secretary with his Papers was ſeized, his Conſcience ſmote him, ſo that he provided for his Eſcape, intending with 500 Horſe to make his way for Venice; but before he could prepare to be gone, his Caſtle was Inveſted by the Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiment of Heiſter, and he himſelf Muran yielded.

Nagiferents ſeized.

Nadaſti diſcovered to be in the Plot.

himſelf ſeized in his Bed and carried to Vienna; where by order of the Emperor, he was lodg'd in the Common Houſe belonging to the Nobility of Hungary, where after he had remain'd 3 days he acknowledged his Crimes, and humbly beg'd the mercy and pardon of the Emperor; but his Crimes were too black, and wrote in too large and plain Characters to deſerve a remiſſion. And beſides, he was poſſeſs'd of vaſt Riches, having eight Millions of Livers in ready Money by him; which being a Prey that the Chief Miniſters of State might vouchſafe to ſtoop unto, they colour'd his Actions with a dye more black than thoſe Accuſations which were objected againſt Serini, or Frangipani. Whilſt theſe things were in agitation, and the Indictments drawing up againſt theſe three great Perſonages, the Aſſembly of Hungarians met at Leuſch, repreſented unto the Emperor, That it was their undoubted Right according to the Conſtitutions of that Kingdom (to the obſervation of which the Emperor had religiouſly Sworn) to be the Judges themſelves of the Nobles, and others of their Country who were accuſed of Treaſon, or other Crimes; and therefore they deſir'd that a ſpeedy day might be fix'd for the Tryal of thoſe three Counts, whoſe Cauſe was only to be heard before the Palatine and Deputies of that Kingdom. Moreover they preſum'd to repreſent unto his Imperial Majeſty, That it was one of the Fundamental Laws and Conſtitutions of their Country, to have the Office of Palatine ſupply'd ſoon after the vacancy; which having now been void for a conſiderable time, all thoſe Acts which have paſs'd ſince, ought to be eſteem'd null, and of no effect.

His Pardon deny'd.

The Aſſembly at Leuſch require a maintenance of their Privileges

The Emperor who was well enough ſatiſfy'd within himſelf that what was here alledg'd, was the true and undoubted Right of the People of that Kingdom (to obſerve which he had Sworn at his Coronation) was inclinable to gratifie his People with a conceſſion of theſe juſt Privileges; but his Chief Miniſters and Councellors diſſwaded him from it, alledging that ſuch a Condeſcenſion as this, would raiſe again the Spirits of the Malecontents to ſuch a degree, as would blow up the fire of Rebellion into a flame: That it was improper and incongruous to put the Tryal of the three Counts into the hands of thoſe who were Conſpirators and Complices in the ſame Plot with them: That the People of Hungary had forfeited all their Charters and Privileges by their Rebellion and Revolt, having ſought for aid and protection from the Turks, who are mortal Enemies both of the Emperor, and all Chriſtendom. That Serini, and Nadaſti, were actually Officers and Servants of the Emperor; the firſt being Vice-King of Croatia, and the other Preſident of his Majeſty's Privy-Council; and for that Reaſon could not decline the Juriſdiction of that Court, which his Imperial Majeſty ſhould erect for their Tryal.

The Reaſons why the Emperor denies to allow them.

Theſe Reaſons being given to the Aſſembly at Leuſch, little reply could be made thereunto, nor knew they well how to proceed in other Matters; in regard that being compos'd of different Religions and Intereſts, their Meeting broke up abruptly without any Concluſion.

It will not be neceſſary in this place to enlarge upon the ſeveral Tryals of the Counts, Serini, Nadaſti, and Frangipani; as alſo of Count Taſſembach, and Nagiſerents Secretary of the League; let it be ſufficient for us, to ſay that they were all Judicially Arraign'd, and receiv'd Puniſhments agreeable to the blackneſs of their Crimes; only we ſhall add, that Nadaſti was Executed at Vienna, and the ſame day Serini and Frangipani at Newſtadt. The Emperor out of his innate Clemency and Mercy reſtor'd their Eſtates in Land to their Children, with Orders only to change their Arms, and Names. And accordingly, the Children of Nadaſti, which were eleven in number, took the Names of Creuzemberg, and the Son of Serini was call'd Gadé, who was a Gentleman of ſuch Integrity, and of that Loyalty to the Emperor, that when his Father was living, and would have given him for a Hoſtage to the Turks, he refus'd to ſubmit unto ſuch a diſhonourable Character, proteſting that he would continue uncorrupt in his Allegiance to his Prince. Howſoever afterwards being provok'd, and reſenting highly the death of his Father, he deſerted thoſe Principles, and in revenge joyn'd himſelf with the Malecontents in their defection. Taſſembach us'd ſuch Arts and Subterfuges, ſupported by the intereſt of powerful Friends, as conſerv'd his Life for ſeven Months after the death of the aforeſaid Lords, tho' afterwards he was forc'd alſo to ſubmit unto his Fate.

The three Counts are put to death.

1670.

Their Children change their Names.

Notwithſtanding all this Care and Severity of the Emperor, the fire of diſcontent could not be ſmother'd, but in other places under different Heads and Leaders burſt forth into a flame. Count Tekeli the Father was one of thoſe who appear'd openly in the Field; declaring, That tho' he had ever own'd all Fidelity and Allegiance to the Emperor, yet he deſir'd to be number'd amongſt thoſe good Patriots, who were oblig'd both in Honour, Conſcience, and Religion, to maintain and defend the Rights, Privileges and Liberties of their Country.

Count Tekeli the Father Rebels.

Count

Old Tekeli dies.

1681. Count Tekeli to maintain this Cauſe, fortify'd himſelf in his Caſtle of Kus, with a Garriſon of 800 Heyducks, and caus'd all his Subjects with the Morlaques to take up Arms for his defence. Col. Heiſter with a conſiderable Force was diſ-ſpeeded to ſuppreſs this Party, which was the only open Enemy then appearing in the Field; but whilſt preparations were making to Beſiege this Caſtle Count Tekeli died therein, and reſign'd up his Cauſe and Country to be maintain'd by his Son; who afterwards was the grand Incendiary that again kindled the fire of War, which continu'd for many years; and in concluſion miſerably waſted the Kingdom of Hungary, and prov'd fatal to the Ottoman Empire. And tho' in courſe of time the Turks were driven out of that Kingdom, and the Emperor gain'd an abſolute Dominion therein, as of a Conquer'd Country, yet it was done with ſuch an effuſion of Chriſtian blood, and with the loſs of ſo many brave Captains, and valiant Soldiers, that the price or purchaſe thereof ſeems to have been gain'd at a dear rate.

His Caſtle is ſurrender'd.

In fine, I ſay, Count Tekeli the Father dy'd in his Caſtle, which being hardly preſs'd by the German Forces, was Surrender'd to Count Paul Eſterhaſi General of the Kingdom. But young Tekeli, together with his Kinſmen, Kizir de Paragozi, and Petrozzi, made their eſcapes, and retir'd to Licoüa; but being alſo purſu'd unto that place, which could not long ſtand out, theſe young Lords made a ſecond eſcape from thence by night, and fled to Huſſe a very ſtrong Caſtle in Tranſilvania, but Paragozi was taken Priſoner in his way thither, and carried to Vienna, and Licoüa was Surrender'd.

Fears from Apaſi.

1681. Apaſi maintains the Cauſe of the Malecontents.

1671. Thus whilſt all Commotions ſeem'd to have been appeas'd and quieted in Hungary, and that Eſterhaſi, the General, with Colonel Heiſter, were return'd to Vienna, freſh Advices were brought to the Emperor, that the Chiefs of the Malecontents with great numbers of People were fled into Tranſilvania, under protection of the Turks, and that Prince Apaſi by Order of the Port, had given them aſſurance of Safety within his Dominions; upon condition that as Subjects, they ſhould pay Carach, or Pole-Money, to the Grand Seignior. But what Adminiſtred the greateſt apprehenſion, was the rumour that Apaſi had been at Conſtantinople, and there concerted and agree'd upon the methods of War; and that upon his return the Malecontents had held long Conferences with the Paſha of Varadin, and with the Ambaſſadors of Tartary, and the Agents from Moldavia, and Walachia; and that all the Troops which were in their Quarters near Adrianople had Orders to march into Hungary, where the Garriſons were to be reinforc'd, and the Stores and Magazines repleniſh'd. 'Tis certain that Apaſi being of the Proteſtant Religion, was affected with much compaſſion towards the poor Hungarians, who for that Reaſon, and for maintaining the Liberties and Privileges of their Country, were forc'd to yield up their Lands, and abandon their Habitations; and therefore it will not be ſtrange, in caſe we find him abetting that Party, and uſing all his endeavours and intereſt with the Turks to engage them in this Quarrel.

1671.

The Emperor alarm'd hereat, treats his Subjects more mildly.

The Turks refuſe to aſſiſt the Malecontents.

1671.

The Reaſons why.

The Emperor on the other ſide alarm'd with theſe Preparations, ſends ſtrict and ſevere Orders, enjoyning all the Officers and Commanders of his Forces on the Frontiers, carefully to abſtain from Incurſions within the Dominions of the Turks: And a little to aſſwage the exaſperated Spirits of his diſcontented Subjects, he reſolves to treat them with more kindneſs, and gentle uſage than formerly. And in the mean time, for fear of the worſt, and to provide againſt the dangers ſo imminently hanging over their heads, he gave Orders that a Survey ſhould be made of all the Magazines and Arſenals on the Frontiers, and an account taken of the Cannon and Arms. But the Emperor remain'd not long in theſe doubtful apprehenſions, before he receiv'd Intelligence from his Envoy, lately diſpatch'd to Conſtantinople to ſound the minds and intentions of the Vizier, that the Grand Seignior did not deſign a War againſt the Emperor, and that he had refus'd to hear or receive any Propoſitions made by the Malecontents. For whether it was, that this Vizier out of a Principle of Juſtice deny'd to ſide or joyn with Rebels againſt their own Prince, or out of a ſence of Honour to that Peace which he himſelf having made, did eſteem Sacred. Or whether it was, that he thought a War againſt Poland at that time would be more Honourable and Advantageous to the Empire; or perhaps all theſe Conſiderations together might divert him from deſigns againſt Hungary. The War was reſerv'd for another Vizier, and until the ſpace of ten years afterwards, of which diſmal effects we ſhall diſcourſe in their due places.

The Emperor ſends Preſents to the Grand Seignior.

In the mean time the Emperor diſpatch'd Secretary Perez with Preſents to the Grand Seignior, and Grand Vizier, to confirm the Peace, and renew the Truce (for ſo it may be call'd, rather than a Peace) of twenty years longer; the which Preſents were accepted, and all matters eſtabliſh'd to the ſatisfaction of both Princes.

Now had the Emperor time to ſeize on the forfeited Eſtates of the three Counts, who were lately Executed for High Treaſon; ſon, ſo their Jewels and Plate which were very valuable, together with the Treaſure of Nadaſti, who was Richer than all the others, were carried on 8 Waggons to Vienna, and the Caſtle of Puttendorſ, with the Gardens and Houſes of Pleaſure belonging to Nadaſti, were given to General Montecuculi. Nor were the moveables of Tekeli the Father lately deceas'd, together with his Rich Furniture, Jewels, Plate, and Horſes of high price, leſs conſiderable than thoſe of the afore-mention'd Lords, all which were converted to the uſe of the Emperor.

1681.

The Eſtates of the three Counts converted to the uſe of the Emperor.

1671.

Conditions made with Prince Ragotski

The Prince Ragotski, who (as we have ſaid before) proceeded more warily than his other Aſſociates, had ſeaſonably made his peace with the Emperor, and obtain'd his Pardon, on Condition that he ſhould renounce his right of Sovereignty over the Town of Trenſchin; That he ſhould ſend 200000 Florins to that Town for payment of the Garriſon there, and ſhould ſend a like Sum to the Emperor's Coffers at Vienna, and that he ſhould out of his own Revenue maintain 500 Soldiers in the upper Hungary, and ſupply them with Ammunition, and all things neceſſary for the War.

The Inhabitants and Soldiers of Caſſovia Fight.

About this time the Inhabitants and Soldiers of Kalo, and Tokai, fell at variance together about their Quarters and Proviſions; and at Caſſovia the Citizens Conſpir'd to make a Maſſacre in one Night of all the German Soldiers; but the Plot being diſcover'd, both ſides came to an open Fight together, which continu'd long; but at length the Soldiers gain'd the advantage, having kill'd and made Priſoners almoſt all the Citizens.

A Diet at Presburg.

This Accident made but an ill preparation for a Diet, which the Emperor had Summon'd to meet at Presburg on the firſt day of the enſuing year, and call'd thereunto by eſpecial Writ all the Nobility and Deputies of the upper and the lower Hungary. But when the time came, there was but a ſmall appearance; moſt of the Deputies declaring that they abſented themſelves, by reaſon that they would not concur with their own conſents to the abrogation of their ancient Laws and Privileges of their Country, which the Emperor deſign'd to reduce to the ſame Conſtitution with that of his Hereditary Dominions.

The Deputies afraid to meet.

Other Deputies refus'd to appear without Letters of Licenſe, or ſafe Conducts and Pardons from the Emperor for what was formerly done by them in the late Commotions. But this Act of Grace and Clemency being deny'd, by reaſon of that conſtant Correſpondence which the Malecontents held with the Turks; the Emperor's Commiſſioners, namely the Count Rothal, who was Chief Plenipotentiary, the Archbiſhop of Gran, and others, proceeded to open the Diet upon the 24th of January, to which time the Aſſembly was adjourn'd; but neither then, nor on the 3d of February, to which time a farther adjournment was made, not one of the Deputies of the upper Hungary making their Appearance, his Majeſty being deſirous to provide for the ſafety of his Subjects, even againſt their own wills, made this following Declaration; which we have thought fit to inſert, for better underſtanding of this Hiſtory, and contracted for brevity thereof.

1681.

LEOPOLD, by the Grace of God Emperor of the Romans, &c. This is to make known unto all Men, that having happily extinguiſh'd the Fire of Rebellion in this Our Kingdom of Hungary, and puniſh'd thoſe ungrateful Perſons who were the Chief Incendiaries; and who growing wanton with thoſe Benefits which We had heaped upon them, violated their Bonds of Allegiance to Us, and ſeducing to their Party many of the Nobility, with divers Towns, and all the Eſtates of this Kingdom, call'd Strangers to their aid and aſſiſtance, and rais'd an Army to oppoſe Our Power and Dominion. In purſuance whereof, they Beſieg'd Tokai, where We had plac'd a Garriſon, kill'd great numbers of Our Soldiers, taken the Convoys which we had ſent for ſupply of Zatmar; fought againſt that Army which We had ſent to ſuppreſs the Troubles of Hungary; and to abate and diminiſh Our Authority, ſeveral unlawful Aſſemblies were held for contriving and carrying on a War againſt Us; by which Councels Our good Subjects being diſturb'd, the Turks Invited into Our Dominions, Our Royal Treaſury pillag'd, Incurſions made into Auſtria, Stiria, Moravia, and other Our Hereditary Dominions, and at length a Conſpiracy was made againſt Our Life, which was prevented by the Divine Providence of God Almighty. And now whereas it is a Duty incumbent on Us to provide for the ſafety of thoſe People which God hath committed to Our Charge; and that Chriſtendom and Hungary may not for the future be expos'd to the like Diſorders, We have by Our Abſolute Power and Imperial Authority made an exact Regulation of the Military Quarters; allotting the number of Soldiers which every County is to maintain; and the Orders and Decorum which Soldiers are to keep, that they may not moleſt or trouble the Inhabitants where they are Quarter'd. And We require all Perſons concern'd, without Excuſe, Delay, or Conditions whatſoever, to ſubmit unto that power which God hath given Us over them;

which

1681. which We have been compell'd to maintain by force of Arms, and which We ſhall continue ſo to do. And therefore We give notice to all Our Subjects, that they peaceably ſubmit unto Our power, leſt Our Clemency be turn'd into Severity; and that contrary to Our Nature, being provok'd by ſo many Injuries, Treaſons, and Rebellions, We be enforc'd to execute Our Wrath on thoſe who have abus'd Our Indulgence, and cauſe them to taſte the direful effects of Our Rigour.

Given at Vienna the 21ſt of March, 1671.

The Declaration enforced.

The Emperor to eſtabliſh and confirm this his Remonſtrance by force of Arms, cauſed his Regiments which were in Bohemia, Sileſia, Moravia and Auſtria to march with ſpeed into Hungary, with Cannon and all the Train of Artillery: Which when the Malecontents perceived, and conſider'd their ill Fortune and Succeſſes, having in every place been worſted in all the Fights and Reencounters againſt the Emperor's Forces, and that the Grand Vizier had forbidden Apaſi Prince of Tranſilvania, and all the Paſhas of Hungary to yield Aſſiſtance or Protection to them: They began then to think they had taken falſe Courſes againſt their Sovereign Prince; and reſolved for the future to ſubmit with blind obedience to the Commands and Decrees of the Emperor, ſerving themſelves only of Prayers and Petitions to obtain his Pardon, and a remiſſion of his Rigours and Oppreſſions. But it was now too late, for his Imperial Majeſty being highly provok'd by their frequent Rebellions, was ſo far from granting their Requeſts; That beſides their uſual Taxes and Impoſitions, he laid a farther charge on them of maintaining an Army of 30.000 Men, which were quarter'd in their Cities and Towns, and upon their Lands and Eſtates of Inheritance.

The Hungarians repent, but too late.

1672.

The Emperor alters the Government of Hungary.

With theſe Succeſſes, and the Deſtruction and Death of the Chief Leaders of the Malecontented Party: Hungary was conſider'd by the Imperialiſts as a Conquered Kingdom, and therefore to be ſubjected unto ſuch Laws, as the Emperor ſhould pleaſe to impoſe upon them. The great Office and Dignity of Palatine, who was always a Perſon of the nobleſt Deſcent and higheſt Degree; was by the ancient Privileges of that Kingdom elected at a Diet, conſiſting of the ſeveral Orders of the Nation: But now the Emperor aſſumed this Power unto himſelf, pretending that the ſame was forfeited to him by the Revolt of the People; and ſo in the lieu of Palatine, he thought fit to Govern by ſuch a Perſon as he himſelf ſhould chuſe, and impoſe without the Concurrence of the States, by the Name and Title of Vice King: And in lieu, and by way of reſemblance of a Diet, he erected a Sovereign Chamber, or Council conſiſting of a Preſident, Chancellor, and two Secretaries, one a German and the other a Hungarian, with about ſix or ſeven Councellors, or ſo many as his Imperial Majeſty ſhould think fit to add, to whom the Adminiſtration of all the Affairs of that Kingdom was committed. The Perſon deſtinated and appointed for this conſiderable charge, was John Gaſper Ampringhen Prince of the Empire, and Grand Maſter of the Teutonick Order, which was an Office ſo conſiderable, that the late Arch-Duke Leopold, Uncle to the preſent Emperor, did not diſdain to own; this Prince being an Hungarian by Birth, and qualified with many Vertues, and having perform'd many brave Actions and Atchievements, was eſteemed worthy of this Auguſt honour. His zeal for Religion, and advancement of the Chriſtian Cauſe was well known to all the World; having in the year 1664 brought two Regiments, one of Horſe and the other of Foot to the Imperial Army, commanded by the Cavaliers of his own Order, and maintained at his own expence during all the time that that War laſted. After which, and that the Turks renew'd their War again in Candia, he ſent a conſiderable body of Foot, Commanded by ſeveral Cavaliers of his own Order, into the Service of the Venetian Republick; and afterwards went himſelf in Chief to Command them within the beſieged City, where he perform'd ſuch noble Actions of Chivalry, as obtain'd the acknowledgement of the Senate, and procured likewiſe a Brief from the Pope with ſuch obliging Expreſſions, as denoted the ſingular eſteem he had of his Perſon and Merits. In fine, ſuch were the deſerts and qualifications of this Grand Maſter, that the Emperor remain'd entirely ſatisfied with his Abilities, as being agreeable and every ways ſuiting with this Honourable Promotion; to which being called, he appeared at Vienna, attended with a great and an expenſive Equipage, and with many Knights of his own Order.

1681.

The character of the Grand Maſter of the Teutonick Order.

ANNO 1673.

This new Vice-King having taken his Inſtructions, and Leave from the Emperor departed from Vienna, and made his Entry into Caſſovia on the 22d day of March, with Acclamations and univerſal Contentment of the People. Great was the expectation which the World conceived of the wiſdom and good conduct of this new Vice-King, as the only perſon who was able to appeaſe the Diſturbances, and compoſe the Diſorders of that Kingdom. And indeed he ſo well behaved himſelf, together with the Sovereign Council over which he preſided, that Juſtice took its courſe, the Poor were relieved from the Oppreſſion of their unmerciful Lords, and a ſtop given to the proceedings of thoſe wickedneſſes, which in the Licentious times of War had paſſed without puniſhment: All orders of Men began now to yield due obedience to their Superiours, Innocence was protected and Offences puniſhed; the Soldiers lived under the good Diſcipline of their Officers, and the Citizens in good Correſpondence with the Soldiers. Many wholſome Laws were made for the benefit of the People, and for their Security from the violence of the Army, eſpecially in their Marches. And above all the Vice-King endeavoured to reconcile the affections of the Malecontents by his gentleneſs, and moderation towards them.

The good Government of the Vice-King.

The Clergy diſturb the quiet of the Country.

But what the Civil Magiſtrates acted in order to a compoſure and ſetlement, was diſturbed and over-thrown by the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, whoſe buſineſs being to extirpate Hereſie (as they called it) thy proceeded by methods agreeable thereunto, which were to take away their Churches, Seize and Impriſon their Paſtors and Teachers, and proſecute the People with the ſeverity of their Courts: The which Perſecutions ſo exaſperated the Spirits of the Proteſtants againſt the Emperor and his Government, that the Fire of War, which had for ſome time been cover'd with Embers, was ready to break out into a more violent Flame than before: For now the Proteſtants were encouraged by an Alliance they had made with the Tranſilvanians, and by the Protection which the Turk had promiſed to give them within his Dominions, notwithſtanding the aſſurances formerly made to the Emperor by the Vizier to the contrary. The Tranſilvanians pretended a quarrel for recovery of the Counties of Zatmar and Zambolich belonging to their Principality, which the Prince Ragotski had without right yielded to the Emperor. The Turks declared themſelves offended, by the daily Hoſtilities committed by the Imperialiſts, who purſuing the Malecontents within their Dominions, did not abſtain from thoſe Violences, which are uſually practiſed in an Enemies Country; and by ſuch Actions as theſe, both Nations were ready to break forth into an open Rupture.

A War breaks out.

With theſe hopes and encouragements, the Malecontents betook themſelves again to their Arms under the Command of Erdedi, Petrozzi, Succhai, Kende, Zepeti, and ſeveral other Lords, and Perſons of power and intereſt in their Country. The time appear'd favourable and advantageous to their enterpriſe, for the Walls of moſt of the Towns were then beaten down, and the old Works ſlighted, with deſign to Rebuild, and make them ſtronger according to the new way and manner of Fortifications. Proviſions were alſo wanting in moſt of the Garriſons, and the German, as well as the Hungarian Troops were in Mutiny for want of pay. And this was the time, which the Malecontents choſe to put themſelves in Arms, and renew the War.

The time choſen for the War.

1673.

Colonel Soyer defeated.

At the beginning whereof being 12000 ſtrong, they gain'd the Paſſage of Teyllas, and advanced as far as Caſſovia, which they blocked up, and Defeated five Troops of Dragoons, under the Command of Lieutenant Colonel de Soyer, and by the advantage of a dark and a rainy Night cut them to pieces, the Lieutenant Colonel only with ſome few of his Soldiers making an eſcape into Caſſovia. After this Succeſs they proceeded to Eſperies and took it without much loſs, by the Cowardice of the Officer which Commanded it; and in divers other Skirmiſhes worſted the Imperialiſts.

The Imperialiſts revenge themſelves.

The Emperor having received advices of this new Inſurrection, immediately diſ-ſpeeded General Kops with an Army of 10.000 Men into Hungary, to which were 4 or 5000 Men more joyned under the Command of Count Eſterhaſi, and Valentine Balaſſi, compoſed almoſt all of Horſe, and of Men true and loyal to the Emperor's intereſt. Such an Army as this could not remain long without Action, both Parties deſiring to come to an Engagement, which ſoon afterwards happened at the Paſſage of Branitza; where Colonel Smith and Count Palſi, who led the Van-guard charged the Malecontents who defended ſome narrow Paſſes with ſo much valour, that they killed a 1000 of them on the place, beſides many others who were wounded and taken Priſoners, with the loſs only of 15 or 16 Soldiers.

1673.

After this Defeat, the Malecontents marched by the way of Serentz, about two Leagues diſtant from Tokai, and inveſted Zatmar; but a Sally being made out of the Town by Lieutenant Colonel Staremberg, who Commanded there in Chief, they were forced to raiſe their Siege, with the loſs of ſeveral Colours and many Priſoners: Likewiſe General Kops and Spankau purſued them ſo cloſely at the Heels, that with great loſs and difficulty they were enforced to paſs the Theyſs. Divers places at the ſame time ſurrender'd, as the Caſtle of Meges, and the Town of Nagibania, the which places were diſmantled, and their Walls thrown down: And as the Imperialiſts were towards the end of the year, returning to their Winter quarters, they met a party of 500 Horſe belonging to the Malecontented party, of which they killed 300 on the place, and took divers Priſoners, one of which was the Son of Succhai, one of the Chief Leaders of the Rebel party.

The Roman Clergy ſeize on the Proteſtant Churches.
1673.

A Bloody Outrage committed.

It is revenged.

Thus whil'ſt it went ill in all places with the Malecontents, the Popiſh Clergy took courage to aſſert their right to divers Churches and Chapels, which they pretended to belong unto them, and to thoſe of their Religion, and by force of Arms took poſſeſſion of them, which they held until ſuch time, as that the Proteſtant party became ſtrong enough to eject them, and executed this deſign without much oppoſition in all the Counties of Nitria, Trenſchin, Turoz, Stranian, Lippovia, and in ſeveral Towns and Villages of the Mountains; where they ſet up and exerciſed the Popiſh Religion, with all the Rites and Ceremonies, to the great Scandal and Diſpleaſure of the Hungarians. Particularly in the Month of June, at a Town called Senetz, the Curate of the Pariſh was zealous to celebrate in a publick, and ſolemn manner the Feſtival of Corpus Chriſti, and to carry the Sacrament in Proceſſion: Which Feaſt happening to be on a day, when a Fair was held at that Town, which brought a great concourſe of People thither, the Prieſt fearing ſome affront from the Multitude, deſired the Governour of Branitz to afford him a Serjeant and 12 Soldiers to accompany the Sacrament, and defend it from the violence and prophaneneſs of the Hereticks. Which being granted, as the Prieſt was carrying the Sacrament in Proceſſion, he was aſſaulted by the People, and killed by them, together with the 12 Soldiers which were ſent for his Guard. So ſoon as Count Staremberg had news of this Sacrilegious Murder, he marched to the Town with his own Regiment, and ſeveral Troops of German Horſe, for puniſhment of the Authors of this abominable wickedneſs; which he executed with all the Rigour and Severity imaginable, for he pillaged and burned their Houſes, and put every one to the Sword, excepting thoſe who ſaved their Lives by eſcaping into the Woods.

The obſtinacy of the Malecontents.

After all theſe Defeats and many others given to the Malecontents, and this vaſt effuſion of Blood, it might well be imagin'd, that an end would have been put to this War, which had neither a ſetled Council, nor a Fund of Money, nor an Intereſt of great Men to ſupport it. Howſoever, ſuch was the force and power, which the Preachers uſed in their Sermons to the People, inciting them to a Defence of their Religion, the Exerciſe of which the Emperor (as they ſaid) had determined to take from them, that they reſolved to die in the maintenance thereof; being perſwaded that their Friends and Companions, who had already ſacrificed their Lives in that Cauſe, were real Martyrs, and had obtained the Crown which was laid up in Heaven for them. Nor were the Proteſtants only in the mind to Wage a War, but even the Roman Catholicks alſo, who being moved by another Principle of defending the Privileges and Freedom of their People, thought it their Duty to riſe up and aſſert the Cauſe of their native Country and Nation. For tho' they owned all Duty and Obedience to the Emperor, yet being but an Elective King, and one to whom the People had ſworn Allegiance on Condition that he ſhould maintain them in the ancient Rights, and Prileges of that Kingdom, they held themſelves no longer obliged thereunto, after he had violated all their Laws, and abſolutely ſubverted the ancient Fabrick of their Government, which he had apparently done in three inſtances. Firſt, In quartering German Soldiers in the Country and Towns, with intent to over-awe and govern them by an abſolute and an arbitrary Power. Secondly, By impoſing a Vice-King upon them, conſtituted ſolely by the Imperial Commiſſion, in lieu and place of a Palatine, who according to the ancient Conſtitutions was to be elected by a Diet, compoſed of the ſeveral Eſtates of that Kingdom. And Thirdly, Inſtead of ſuch a Diet the Emperor was pleaſed to erect a Sovereign Council conſiſting of ſuch Members, as he himſelf did think fit to nominate and appoint, over which the Vice-King was as Chief Commiſſioner to preſide. And thus the Parties of both Religions being diſguſted and animated to Fight pro Aris & Focis, for their Laws, their Country and Religion; Fury and Deſpair ſerved them in the place of Counſel, Money, and other Nerves and Sinews of War: So that when one party was cut off, another aroſe in greater numbers, and like Hydra's increaſed the more by being deſtroyed.

The aggrievances of the Hungarians.

Cruelties exerciſed on both ſides.
1673.

Amongſt which appear'd a bold Fellow nam'd Striſiniski, who pretended to be ſent by the Governors of the Mountain Towns, calling himſelf Duke John, and with his own name ſigned and iſſued out Commiſſions, and diſperſed them every where, as if he had been the Sole and Sovereign Prince of that Country. Many perſons adher'd to him, and followed his Standard, looking on him as a bold and a daring Fellow, who ſeldom gave quarter to any, much leſs to Jeſuits and Prieſts, to whom he never ſhowed mercy, whenſoever any of that character fell within his Power. The which was again revenged by Count Strazoldo, in ſuch cruel manner without diſtinction of perſons, either of guilty or innocent, that the Imperial Council taking notice thereof, ſent their Orders to him to uſe better moderation in his future actings, and to treat the Hungarians with more gentleneſs; which tho' he obſerved in reſpect to the Sword of his own Souldiers, who were forbidden to Maſſacre, or ſhed their Blood; yet being directed to take and bring them before the Courts of Juſtice, by which a ſpeedy Sentence was paſſed, and ſome were condemned to be hanged, ſome be quarter'd, others to be empaled, this way of proceſs ſeemed much more cruel and ſevere, than a ſpeedy Execution by the Sword of the Soldiery.

ANNO, 1674.

The Turks underhand aſſiſt the Malecontents.

Tho' the Grand Seignior had not as yet publickly own'd the cauſe of the Malecontents; howſoever the Paſha's and Officers had receiv'd private Inſtructions to countenance and favour their Cauſe, without open denunciations of a War, and many Turks in hopes of Plunder and Booty habited themſelves in the Hungarian faſhion, and joyn'd with their Troops; and ſeveral parties of Turks in great numbers, pretending that the Chriſtians in a Hoſtile manner had made Incurſions within their Territories, came openly to revenge them, and march'd as far as Schentha, from whence they carried away an Hungarian Gentleman with 7 Soldiers. Upon this Advice, Lieutenant Colonel de Soyer with his Dragoons, and Huſſars, Sallied out of the Town to the reſcue of the Priſoners; but being ſurpriz'd by 5 Companies of Turkiſh Foot, who iſſued out of an Ambuſcade, where they had conceal'd themſelves, Soyer himſelf was kill'd, with 2 Lieutenants, 1 Enſign, 4 Serjeants, and 80 common Soldiers.

The Garriſon of Newhawſel encourag'd with this Succeſs, continu'd their Incurſions along the River of Waagh, and made ſome depredations; but being purſu'd by the Huſſars, and Heydukes of Comorra, they were forc'd to ſurrender 200 Head of Cattle, together with all the Booty and Plunder they had taken.

Other Cruelties performed.

Thus whilſt Matters ſucceeded with various Succeſſes, but moſt commonly in favour of the Emperor, both Parties acted their Cruelties upon each other, the Malecontents as often as the Prieſts fell into their hands, they us'd them but very ſcurvily; they buried one of them alive, of others they cut off their Noſes and Ears, and hanged or ſtrangled others. In puniſhment of which, the Emperor Order'd the Vice-King to drive the Proteſtant Miniſters out of his Dominions, and to ſeize upon all their Churches to the uſe of the Catholicks; and not to ſuffer them to meet or exerciſe their Religious Worſhip therein. In purſuance of theſe Orders, the Biſhops of Colonitz, and Javarow ſeiz'd upon all the Churches, Schools, Livings, and Benefices whatſoever belonging to the Proteſtant Clergy within their Dioceſſes. And the Archbiſhop of Strigonium, Primate of that Kingdom, cited all the Proteſtant Miniſters to appear before him, and put many of them to the Queſtion, forcing them to confeſs who thoſe were who for the two laſt years were the chief Incendiaries of Seditions, and Authors of the Rebellion.

The Popiſh Biſhops ſeize the Livings of the Hungarian Clergy.

Nor were the ſmaller ſort of the Malecontents only perſecuted, but ſome of the great Men and chief Miniſters in the Emperor's Court were ſuſpected, and accuſed of correſpondence and intelligence with the Rebels. The Prince Lubkovitz Preſident of the Council was ſuſpected and accus'd; but whether that jealouſie aroſe from the near alliance in Blood he had with the Family of Serini, or from malicious Informations is uncertain; howſoever his Secretary by Order of the Emperor was put to the Torture; and tho' therein he confeſs'd nothing which could accuſe or reflect on his Maſter, yet he was treated as a guilty perſon, and all his Eſtate real and perſonal in Auſtria and Bohemia were ſeiz'd, and confiſcated to the uſe and benefit of the Emperor.

The Prince Lubkovitz ſuſpected, and his Eſtate ſeiz'd.

Count Souches had the like miſfortune to have his Fidelity and Loyalty ſuſpected, but in regard nothing could be prov'd againſt him, he was commanded to leave the Court, and retire to his Government of Waradine, or ſome other part of his Eſtate. The Son alſo in reſentment of this hard uſage of his Father, abandon'd the Court, and all the Offices he enjoy'd therein.

ANNO, 1675.

The Turks joyn with the Malecontents.

At the beginning of this year the Turks began more openly to aſſert the Cauſe of the Malecontents, making their Incurſions as far as Freyſtadt within the Neighbourhood of Presburg; forcing the People to do Homage, and pay Contributions to the Grand Seignior; and for default thereof, they burnt many Villages, and committed other acts of Hoſtility. The Malecontents at the ſame time defeated a great part of a Croatian Regiment, under the Command of Colalto. By which, and the Advices that the Turks were aſſembled in a Body of 14000 Men, within the Neighbourhood of Newhawſel, the Emperor fearing leſt they ſhould joyn with the Malecontents, convened the chief Lords and Gentlemen of Hungary at Presburg, to which place he ſent

The Emperor aſſembles a Diet at Presburg ſent Count Siaki to tender them Conditions of an accommodation, of which Prince Apaſi frankly offer'd himſelf to be the Mediator.

‘At this Aſſembly ſome of the more moderate Men, who were deſirous to bring Matters to a good underſtanding, repreſented unto their Companions the ruine and deſtruction which muſt neceſſarily enſue from a Civil War; and tho' the exerciſe of their Religion ought to be dearer to them than their Lives, and to be preferr'd before all earthly benefits; yet the ſame Religion taught them not to rebel againſt their Prince, or make Wars for the ſake thereof, whoſe foundation and deſign was peace; much leſs could they juſtifie the engaging the Turk therein, unleſs whilſt they profeſs'd themſelves Proteſtants, they acted like Mahometans.

1675.

The People poſſeſs'd with Zeal to their Religion.

But theſe and many other things were ſpoken in vain to Men who were poſſeſs'd with a Zeal for their Religion, and with an Opinion that they were Martyrs who died in defence thereof. And in regard thoſe of them who were in Hungary were not able to keep the Field, they were forc'd to flie and ſeek refuge in Tranſilvania, to the number of 5000. from whence they ſent one Fabian to Conſtantinople to Sollicit for aſſiſtance from the Grand Seignior; but the Affairs of the Turks not being as yet in a ſtate for anſwering ſuch demands, Fabian return'd with fair words, and with Orders to Prince Apaſi to give protection, and to aſſign Quarters to as many Malecontents as ſhould ſeek for refuge within the Principality of Tranſilvania, to which Country tho' the chief Heads and Leaders of that party were retired, yet there were ſeveral flying Troops in Hungary which infeſted the Country, and drove away Cattle from parts near unto the Gates of Zatmar, and burnt all the Villages round, which would not aſſent to pay the contributions they demanded of them.

A Treaty renew'd at Presburg.

In the mean time the Grand Maſter of the Teutonick Order, now Vice-King of Hungary, together with the Archbiſhop of Gran, and other Chiefs of the ſeveral Eſtates, having had divers Conferences about the Condition of that Kingdom, and of the manner how they might raiſe a conſiderable Sum of Money towards maintenance of the Troops which for conſervation of the Peace were ſent into that Country; but not being able to agree thereupon, nor upon what Fund the ſame might be levied, they went to Presburg with deſign to renew the Treaty with the Malecontents; that coming to a good underſtanding with them, a Tax or Impoſition might be equally charged by the common conſent and agreement of the Eſtates; and which coming with that Authority would be paid frankly without ſcruple, or oppoſition of the People. To bring Matters to this happy condition, the Vice-King offer'd in the Name of the Emperor, to grant a General Act of Pardon unto all thoſe who would lay down their Arms, and ſubmit to the Emperor's Authority; promiſing that they ſhould be reſtor'd to their Lands and Eſtates, and to a free exerciſe of their Religion; but in regard they were oblig'd to receive German Soldiers into all their Fortreſſes and Towns; all offers ſeem'd grievous and of no force, in reſpect of the oppreſſion they muſt find by ſuch unruly Gueſts, under whom they could promiſe themſelves no enjoyment or ſecurity; and being by theſe propoſals become more bold and deſperate, they appear'd before Zatmar with about 7000 Men; upon whom the Governor of that place adventuring to make a Sally, was beaten back with great loſs.

Apaſi ſeeks a quarrel.

Prince Apaſi who had at all times underhand favour'd the cauſe of the Malecontents, and granted them protection within his Dominions, did now begin openly to ſeek a quarrel on his own ſcore with the Emperor, demanding the Counties of Kalò and Zatmar to be deliver'd to him, with the Fortreſs of Tokai, to which he pretended a Right by a grant from Prince Ragotski his Predeceſſor. To which Anſwer was made, That thoſe Counties were of the Ancient Demeſnes belonging to the Kings of Hungary, and ſince confirm'd to the Emperor by ſeveral Treaties; and particularly by the laſt made with the Ottoman-Port.

Howſoever, not to irritate Prince Apaſi over-much, and to keep Matters from an open rupture at a time when the Emperor had many Enemies to deal with, it was Order'd that theſe Demands ſhould be referr'd to the Examination of Commiſſioners; and in the mean time an Envoy was ſent to the Vizier at Adrianople, to complain of thoſe exorbitant pretenſions. But Apaſi not attending an Anſwer, entred with a formidable Force into Hungary, and having defeated General Spankau, he laid Siege to Zatmar; but the Seaſon of the Year being far ſpent, and a Valiant Reſiſtance made, they were forc'd to raiſe the Siege, and retire.

The Malecontents hold a Conference together.

About the 15*th* of September, the Winter approaching, the Malecontents held a Conference at Sombro, a place in Tranſilvania, to reſolve in what manner to manage the next Campagne, and how they might beſt engage the Turks in their Defence and Quarrel, without which they could not hope for any 1675.

Acts of Hoſtility.

A new Vizier arrives at Buda.

Applications to the Port,

And to Prince Apafi without effect.

The Forts of Schella and Scheinau give offence to the Turks.

any great Succeſs. After which meeting they entered the County of Zipt, and there ſet Fire to many Towns and Villages, and took above 500 Priſoners; About the ſame time the Garriſon of Newhawſel, both Horſe and Foot made an Incurſion as far as Preſburg, and burnt ſeveral Villages depending thereupon, and ſurprized a Caſtle guarded by the Heydukes, whom they put to the Sword, without ſparing ſo much as one Perſon. Whileſt theſe things were acting, a new Vizier arrived at Buda, where the Turks were making great Stores, and laying in Proviſions both of Victuals and Ammunition: On which occaſion the Emperor ſent Meſſigni, his Interpreter, to Complement the Vizier upon his happy arrival at Buda, and to carry him the accuſtomed preſents; with inſtructions to diſcover underhand the deſigns and intentions of the Turks, who every day under pretence of Contributions committed a thouſand Acts of Hoſtility: Of which, tho' complaints were made, and no ſatisfaction given thereunto; yet the Emperor thought fit to ſeek redreſs for theſe violences, rather by applications to the Port than by Repriſals, leaſt the Turk ſhould be provoked thereby, and furniſh'd with juſt Cauſes to commence a War. To prevent which, all caution and tenderneſs was uſed towards the Turks, and endeavours made by Cardiati one of the Emperor's Council, who was ſent to Prince Apaſi to Treat, and propoſe ways of an Accommodation: But theſe labours were all fruitleſs, for notwithſtanding the regard was had not to moleſt, or provoke the Turk, a Chiaus arrived at Vienna from the Paſha of Buda, to complain of the Fort of Schella, which the Emperor was making on the Banks of the Waagh, to ruin which the Turks had raiſed a Battery juſt over againſt it, on the other ſide of the River; but in deſpight thereof the Work went on, and the Fortification was finiſh'd: And ſo was the Fort of Scheinau, upon which a thouſand Men were daily employ'd, guarded with a conſiderable party of Horſe and Foot, ſufficient to repulſe the Enemy that ſhould attempt to diſturb the Work: Of which when complaints were made by the Paſha of Buda, requiring that they ſhould be demoliſh'd; and that a new Aſſignment ſhould be made of the Limits of the Empire, in which all the places as far as Presburg ſhould be included, and the Inhabitants thereof now Subjects to the Emperor, commanded to pay homage to the Grand Seignior: To which unreaſonable demands, general anſwers were only given, with intent to prolong the unhappy day, and ſtave off the Turks, as long as was poſſible from an open War.

The Turks grow proud with conceſſions.

But neither this, nor other Acts of Grace nor the Orders given to the Governor of Raab, to ſet ſeveral Turkiſh Priſoners at Liberty without Ranſom, (which the Garriſons of this place, and the Heydukes of Veſprin had taken) did not ſoften or ſatisfie the Turks, who at the ſame time kept many of the Emperors Subjects in Priſon, without thoughts of making the like generous Returns: And likewiſe the Malecontents proceeding in their uſual Hoſtile manner, defeated ſome of the Emperor's Troops, and plunder'd many Waggons laden with Merchandize coming from Molda Fair, and killed all the Guard which convoy'd them: And thus ended this troubleſome year.

ANNO 1676.

Debrezin taken by Count Strazoldo.

The Turks much enraged thereby.

Diſowned by the Emperor.

The Heats and Troubles of the People of Hungary increaſed with ſome; and as years paſſed, ſo the quarrel grew higher. Blood had been drawn ſo frequently, that one would think the Spirits of Hungary might have been evacuated by ſuch vaſt effuſions. The Malecontents had provok'd their Sovereign beyond hopes of Pardon; and had no expectations of ſafety but in the Turk; with whom tho' the Emperor had no mind to break, nor yet the Turks on the other ſide, during the Government of the Vizier Kupriogli, who being as yet engaged in a War againſt Poland, thought it not ſeaſonable to come unto an open Rupture with Germany: Yet ſo unhappily were the Affairs of the Malecontents interwoven with the concernments of the Turks, that it was impoſſible to be avenged of one, without irritating and diſturbing the other. For ſo it was at the beginning of this year, when the Count Strazoldo took Debrezin, a Town into which great numbers of the Rebels were retreated, and there held their Cabals: But in regard it was a place which paid Tribute to the Port; the taking thereof put all the Turkiſh Governors and Officers into an Alarm, and to ſo loud an Outcry of an open breach of the Peace, that tho' this Act was perform'd by Order of the Emperor; yet he was forced to diſown it, and cauſe Strazoldo to Surrender up the ſame into the hands of the Turks, and to take away all jealouſie, to retire over the Theyſſe with his Forces; and after all this to divert the Storm, a Gentleman was diſpatched to the Paſha of Buda, to excuſe the matter, and teſtifie the high diſpleaſure of the Emperor for this Action, declaring that it was perform'd wholly without his Order. Tho' the Paſha of Buda ſeem'd indifferently well appeaſed with this addreſs, and ſatisfaction which was given; yet the Paſha of Newhawſel continued his Diſpleaſure; and 1681. on the pretence of Debrezin, grounded his Reaſons, why he would not ſet divers Priſoners at liberty, notwithſtanding the Ranſom which was paid for them, and treated very ſcurvily and unworthily many Perſons of conſiderable quality, who were in the number of thoſe Priſoners.

The Malecontents being much encouraged, by theſe miſunderſtandings between the Imperialiſts and the Turks, fell upon a body of 600 Cuiraſiers and cut them to pieces; And after another Fight between a party of Huſſars commanded by Count Eſterhaſi, and the Turks near Carolſtadt in Croatia, in which the Turks were worſted; and after many other Acts of Hoſtility, being well aſſured that the Peace could not continue long, refuſed to hearken unto any Terms or Conditions whatſoever, tho' again offer'd to them with advantage by Count Palſi, and the Biſhop of Agria. And indeed the Vizier himſelf, tho' inclinable in his own nature to conſerve the Truce which he himſelf had concluded in the year 1664, until the full Term of 20 years, had been expir'd according to the uſual Cuſtoms and Conſtitutions of both Empires: Yet finding how impoſſible in a manner it was, to remain unconcern'd, whileſt the Emperor purſued his Rebels within his Dominions; and that the Soldiers and Inhabitants of neither ſide being bred up to War, could be kept within any Rules or Government; he then clapt up a Peace with the Poles, that in caſe he ſhould be induced to declare War againſt the Emperor, and march into Hungary, he might have but one buſineſs, and one War on his Hands at the ſame time to manage.

The Rebells refuſe to Treat.

The Vizier makespeace with the Poles.

The Reaſons for it.

1676. The ſtate of theſe Affairs animated the Malecontents in ſuch manner, that they adventur'd to fall into the Head quarters of Colonel Colalto near Zatmar, where they cut three Companies to pieces, and took ſome Priſoners. And in the Month of June, a party of them conſiſting of 4000, encountring with the Regiment of Colonel Smith near Kalo, gave them a total Defeat, killing 300 upon the place. In the Month of July, two Parties of the Malecontents, one of 1500, and another of 600, pillaged and burnt all the places, and Villages near Zatmar and Caſchau, and defeated a Croatian Regiment under the Command of Count Palſi, with a Detachment from the two foregoing Garriſons. Another party of them burnt two Villages in the Upper Hungary, killed moſt of the Inhabitants, and carried away great plunder and booty with them: And being met by Count Strazoldo, who was deſirous to intercept them in their Retreat, he was defeated by them, and forced to fly with conſiderable loſs. Another party of them ſurprized the Caſtle of Balác in the Morning, juſt at the moment when the Gates were open'd, and killed, and made Priſoners all the People that were in it. The ſame party defeated Colonel Scheveling, and killed many of his Huſſars upon the place; they took and pillaged the little Town of Newtra, and intercepted all the Merchandice, which was carrying to the Fair of Stoez. And with ſuch Succeſſes as theſe, the Malecontents being greatly puffed up and exalted, they demanded a Contribution of 14000 Florins from the Inhabitants of the plain Countries, and took Hoſtages, as a ſecurity for payment thereof.

The Malecontents have ſucceſs againſt the Imperialiſts.

1681.

They grow proud therewith.

Nor were the Turks in the mean time idle, or unactive on their ſide, for from the Garriſon of Buda, they ſent a very ſtrong party to joyn with thoſe of Newhawſel, with deſign to take and demoliſh the Fort of Schella; whileſt the Malecontents attended the motions of the Imperialiſts with 8000 Men, and the Tranſilvanians marched towards the Frontiers of their Country with 10000; but by the care and vigilance of the Emperor's Soldiers, the deſign was prevented.

Theſe misfortunes were followed by others of worſe conſequence, for the Generals, Smith and Baragotzi, were defeated by the Malecontents in divers Incounters. The Towns of Oedembourg, Zaltach and Dowar were plunder'd and burnt by them; and ſo greatly they increaſed in their numbers, that Strazoldo with 3000 Men durſt not appear in the Field againſt them.

Smith and Baragotzi defeated.

And now that the fate of War might be determined, advices of the Death of the Grand Vizier Achmet Kuprioglì were brought to Vienna, by which all expectations of Peace failed: For by the Anſwers he had made to the Malecontents, who ſollicited for aſſiſtance, and to the Imperial Miniſters, who labour'd to continue a good underſtanding, he evidenced an averſion to this War, for Reaſons which we have formerly declar'd: And perhaps becauſe at that time becoming Sick and Craſy, his Spirits were low and his Thoughts rather inclining to Eaſe and Quietneſs, than to the buſtles and buſineſs of an active and raging War. But now Kara Muſtapha ſucceeding into his place, a Perſon of that Temper, which we have before deſcribed, the Imperialiſts deſpair'd of a Peace, and accordingly provided for a War; and indeed, conſidering the Temper of the Man, and the conjuncture of the preſent Times; being invited into Hungary, and the way open'd into Germany by the Malecontents; and (as the Common Rumor will have it) puſhed on by Encouragements and Promiſes from the Advices of the Death of the Grand Vizier Achmet Kuprioglì.

Kara Muſtapha made Vizir reſolves upon a War.

French Court, but more eſpecially by their own Fate, the Dice of Fortune were caſt, and a War determin'd, tho' contrary to the Inclinations of the Grand Seignior, the Mufti, and other Councellors of State.

ANNO, 1677.

War not as yet denounced, and why.

But to carry on a War of ſuch weight and conſequence, preparations were to be firſt made; Money was to be provided, which was amaſs'd, and gather'd by ſuch means as we have before related; Forces were to be call'd from the moſt remote parts of the Empire, and great ſtores of all ſorts of Proviſions and Ammunition were to be lodg'd in Belgrade, Buda, and the Frontier Garriſons, all which requir'd ſome years to effect. And in the mean time, as a prelude to this devouring War, the Malecontents were to be encourag'd, their hopes kept up, and the Paſhas of Hungary allow'd to ſuccor them as occaſion requir'd; which they acted with ſo little regard to the Peace, that nothing was heard over all that Kingdom, but daily Slaughters, Battels, Plundrings, Firing of Towns, and all the other direful effects of War.

The Paſhas of Hungary Order'd to aid the Malecontents.

Incurſions made by the Turks.

Accordingly, to begin this Year, ſix thouſand Turks paſſed the Raab over the Ice near Furſtemberg, which gave an alarm to all the Province of Stiria. About the ſame time another party of them belonging to the Garriſon of Caniſia, made a Sally from thence, with deſign to ſurprize the Iſland of Serini; but being diſappointed in that Enterprize, they put all the Country of Croatia into a confuſion, and forc'd Contributions from the People by Military Executions; burning and plundring all thoſe Towns and places which refus'd to comply with the payment of ſuch Taxes as they impos'd upon them. And likewiſe another party from Newhawſel, made Incurſions to the very Gates of Freyſtadt.

New Overtures made to the Malecontents.

Theſe ill Succeſſes, and the fears of a more dreadful War impending, moved the Imperial Councel to thoughts of Accommodation with the Malecontents on any terms whatſoever, being almoſt droven to a neceſſity of making peace. In purſuance of which Reſolution, General Baragotzi, who for his Services was lately made a Count of the Empire, and one of the Lieutenant Generals of the Armies, was diſpatch'd to the Malecontents with new Overtures of Peace, the ſum of which was this: That beſides the Act of Oblivion, and Pardon formerly offer'd, the Emperor was pleas'd farther to condeſcend, that in every County the Proteſtants ſhould have two Churches allow'd them, one for the Lutherans, and another for the Calviniſts, with full Liberty to exerciſe the Religion they profeſs'd; and that they ſhould be indifferently admitted into all Offices and Places of Truſt either Civil or Military, together with the Roman Catholicks, without any diſtinction whatſoever, unleſs with reſpect to the ability and quality of the perſon. This Generous Offer, tho' it affected and inclin'd about 1500 of that party to abandon the intereſt of their Aſſociates, yet there were above 10000 others whoſe Spirits were exaſperated and heated above the vertue and power of any lenitive, whom nothing could appeaſe nor ſoften but revenge, tho' at the dear price of their Countries ruine, and the loſs of their own Lives. And this Opinion was foſter'd and kept up by ſome ill Men, who perſwaded the Commonalty that there was no ſecurity nor Faith in the Emperor's promiſes; which would no longer continue, than until ſuch time as he ſaw them diſarmed, and his Enemies at his feet. Howſoever, not wholly to reject the terms of peace, Commiſſioners were appointed on both ſides to meet at Eſperies, to offer and receive the Propoſitions; which Treaty continu'd during the whole Month of March, and at laſt concluded without any conſiderable effect; only Count Palaſſi Imbre became ſo touch'd with a ſenſe of his Duty, that he embrac'd the Pardon, and accepted the gracious Offers made him by his Imperial Majeſty; and afterwards had a Command given him in Hungary, under Major General Baragotzi; in expectation that by his Example others would be brought to Obedience.

Their Obſtinacy.

A Plot againſt Apafi.

But in Tranſilvania the diſpleaſure of that Prince grew higher, upon diſcovery of a Plot againſt his Life, carried on by thoſe who had more Zeal than true Underſtanding of the Emperor's Intereſt; which cauſed Apafi, not without ſome reaſon, to declare himſelf more than formerly in behalf of the Malecontents. And ſo high were the Spirits of both Parties exaſperated againſt each other, that the Huſſars purſuing a flying party of the Malecontents as far as Rima, now a Town belonging to the King of Poland, in the Palatinate of Cracovia, could not contain their fury againſt their Enemy with any reſpect to the Prince or Dominion unto which they were fled; but in the heat of their purſuit ſet fire to the Town. Which raſh Act was ſo far reſented by the King of Poland, that it had cauſed a War between the two Crowns, had not ſome other Conſiderations cemented the difference, and the common ſafety united the two Princes againſt their powerful Enemy, as will appear ſome years after. Howſoever, in the mean time, the King of Poland touch'd with a ſenſe of this 1681.

The King of Poland gives leave to ſome of his Troops to ſerve the Malecontents.

this Diſgrace, gave Licenſe to ſome of his Troops (of whoſe aſſiſtance he had not much farther occaſion, after the Peace concluded with the Turk) to joyn with the Malecontents, and ſerve againſt the Emperor, under the Command of Count Boham.

The Poles March into Tranſilvania.

Theſe Polanders to the number of 6000, departed from Seratin on the 25*th* of September, taking their March directly towards Tranſilvania; to which Country this Count Boham had diſpatch'd his Major General Frebual before, to adviſe the Prince and Nobility of his coming. The which News was ſo welcom, that 500 Horſe, and 800 Foot were Order'd from a Caſtle appertaining to Weſſellini to meet them on their way, and joyn in a Body with them. Theſe Troops conducted by Frebual, met the Poliſh Forces at the Village of Nemet, on the Banks of the Theyſſe, about four Leagues diſtant from Mongatz; and having paſs'd that River, they Encamp'd near the Village of Nimelſi, about 2 leagues from Zatmar, where they attended the coming of Weſſellini, the Hungarian General, with his Forces, to joyn with them. Whilſt they remain'd in this poſt, the parties which they ſent abroad had taken ſeveral priſoners; by whom they were inform'd, that Major General Smith was advancing from Zatmar, with a conſiderable Body of the Imperial Army, much ſtronger than that of the Poles, and that he march'd with Cannon; upon this Intelligence Boham call'd a Council of War, at which it was agreed to re-paſs the little River Battor, and the inclos'd Country adjacent, and to poſt themſelves on a Ground of more advantage, that they might the ſooner joyn with their own Troops not as yet come up, and alſo attend the Attack of the Enemy in a faſt and a ſecurer place.

Two Poliſh Gentlemen Revolt.

But before the Camp remov'd from Nimelſi, two Poliſh Gentlemen, with a Servant, revolted over to the Enemy; and inform'd Smith then at Zatmar, that the Poliſh Forces, together with the Tartars of Lipka were inconſiderable, very much haraſſed with a long March, and weaken'd with want of Food and Neceſſaries to ſuſtain them; in which ſtreightned Condition they were ready to Mutiny, and would ſoon change their ſide, in caſe Letters were wrote to ſome of the Chief of them, giving them aſſurance of good Quarter, and a kind Reception. Letters were accordingly wrote, and diſpatch'd by the Servant of the Poliſh Gentlemen who arriv'd the ſame Night at Nimelſi, where the Treachery of the two Gentlemen was diſcover'd, and the Letters intercepted, and publickly read, the ſubſtance of which was this;

Their Treachery diſcover'd.

1681.

The Subſtance of Smith's Letter to the Poles.

That Smith had a ſtrong Army well reſolv'd, and provided of all things neceſſary, againſt which in all probability their Forces were not able to ſtand: That therefore they ſhould in time provide for their own ſecurity and ſafety, by paſſing over to the Imperial Party, where they might aſſure themſelves of a kind Reception, and a hearty Wellcome; and it would make their Merit much the greater, in caſe they would ſeize the Papers, Money and Plate of all the Officers, and particularly of the perſon of Uladiſlaus Weſſellini, Son of the late Palatine of Hungary, and Nephew to the preſent General of the Malecontents. Farther adviſing ſuch, that were thus well diſpoſed, to bind Straw about their Caps, which ſhould be a Signal at the beginning of the Fight of their good Intentions. And that Smith might give them ſecurity that theſe promiſes ſhould be perform'd, he affix'd his Seal upon the Letter, with this Motto;

Per hoc aſſicurantur Domini Poloni.

A Fight between the Imperialiſts on one ſide, and the Poles, and Tartars, and Hungarians on the other.

No News being as yet come of Weſſellini, Boham had no ſooner provided for his own ſecurity, and well poſted his Forces, and put them in Battalia, before the Van-guard of the Enemy Charg'd the advanc'd Troops of the Poles ſo fiercely, that they put them to a Retreat, and wounded Koreski Colonel of the Tartars of Lipka; with which the Imperialiſts being encourag'd, preſs'd the Hungarians and Tartars with ſuch fierceneſs and vigor, that the Tartars began to give ground and fly; and were purſu'd by ſome Troops of ſwift Croats, who knew very well in what manner to make uſe of ſuch advantages, killing many, and taking ſome Priſoners. In the mean time Smith made ſuch haſt to come in to the ſuccor of his advanc'd Troops, that he left all his Infantry ſome Leagues behind, and March'd in the Front of 20 Squadrons of Horſe, much more ſtrong and numerous than the Poles; Teſtifying by his Countenance the great aſſurance he had of Victory. But when he was come near, and had receiv'd the fire from a Regiment of Dragoons Commanded by Major Zefold, and drawn up amongſt the Buſhes on the right hand of the Line; and obſerv'd the good Order and Reſolution of the Poles, he began then to be ſenſible of his temerity, and the Snare into which he was drawn, by the falſe Report of the two Fugitives.

The Tartars Rally.

The Hungarians and Tartars which were newly put to flight by the Vanguard of the Enemy, ſeeing at a diſtance the valour of their Companions, rallied again, and Charg'd with new Courage: ſo that the Imperialiſts being aſtoniſh'd and diſmay'd by the Clouds of Arrows, the continual

The Imperialiſts overthrown.

Fire from the Infantry and Dragoons, and the redoubled Blows of the Cut-laſhes and Scimitars, and the Multitudes of their dead Companions which covered the Field with their Bodies, began to give ground, and breaking in one upon the other, betook themſelves to Flight in the moſt confuſed, and ſhameful manner that can be imagin'd, and were purſued by the Enemy near two Leagues from the Field where the Battle was Fought.

The number of thoſe Slain were a Thouſand, beſides thoſe, who endeavouring to ſave their Lives by Swimming were Drown'd in the River. The Officers Slain were Count Hermeſtin, Colonel of Foot, and Governour of Zatmar, Colalto Colonel of the Croats, beſides many other Captains and Officers of Foot, whom Smith had perſwaded to leave their Companies, and attend him in this Enterpriſe, in which he judged himſelf moſt ſecure of Victory. Smith himſelf was wounded in the Hand, and was forc'd to quit his Horſe to ſave his Life, which was afterwards the prize of a Tartar, with the Saddle, Holſters and Hooſings embroider'd with Gold. The Poles took four Kettle-Drumms, and the greateſt part of their Trumpets, with all their Colours, and 800 Priſoners: And had not the night favour'd them, very few had eſcaped.

The praiſes of Boham and other Officers.

The Poles and Malecontents joyn.

On this occaſion Boham Signalized himſelf very greatly, and evidenced unto the World by his Valour and Conduct, how much he deſerved the chief Command of thoſe Troops: And indeed, all the Officers, as well Tartars as others, behaved themſelves like Soldiers and able Commanders: But Major General Smith, tho' inferiour to none in any thing which appertains to Martial Exerciſe; yet being betray'd by his own Credulity, was blam'd much at Vienna for his Raſhneſs and Precipitation. After this Succeſs, Boham having Refreſh'd for two days his Forces in the Field where the Battle was Fought, repaſſed the River of Battor, and the Incloſures, and joyned the Army of the Malecontents, which was 16000 ſtrong, under the Command of Count Weſſellini: So that now being a formidable Army, the Chief Officers at a Council of War agreed to Beſige Tokai; to prevent which General Kops, upon advice of the Enemies Motion, departed from Caſchau with the Imperial Army, intending to Attack the Enemy with the firſt Advantage: Which Weſſellini avoided until he had firſt ſecur'd a place of Retreat in caſe of any Siniſter fortune or diſgrace: But Howſoever, ſending Parties abroad, they Burnt and Plunder'd ſeven Villages near to Mongatz; and in regard the Imperial Army was marched at ſome diſtance from Caſchau, adventur'd to Burn ſeveral Villages alſo near to that Town; and had the Fortune to intercept a Convoy which carried both Money, Victuals and Ammunition from Vienna, for Payment and Maintenance of the Army under General Kops.

A Convoy with Money and Proviſions taken by the Malecontents.

1500 of the Imperialiſts revolt to the Enemy.

Kops his Cruelty.

This loſs of Money and Proviſions proved of ill Conſequence to the Emperor's Army, which wanting Pay and neceſſaries for ſubſiſtence, many of them, to the number of 1500, upon the Promiſes of Weſſellini to beſtow on every Officer 26 Ducats, with a command agreeable to his quality, and 10 to every private Soldier, who ſhould relinquiſh the Emperor's Service, were eaſily induced to Revolt, and take up Arms in favour of the Malecontents. Kops being highly incenſed hereat, reſolved on a quite contrary method of Action, ſuppoſing that he might effect the ſame with Rigour and Cruelty, which the Enemy had done by Allurements and Rewards; and that it was poſſible to terrifie, and affrighten the contrary party into their Duty and Obedience: Wherefore, to make an experiment hereof, he killed all the Priſoners he had in his hands, and empal'd ſeveral others: This piece of Cruelty againſt the Law of War and Nations, was in like manner retaliated by Weſſellini; who put the Priſoners to death, to the number of Sixty, which the Polanders had taken in the late Battle, together with Lieutenant Colonels, Majors and Captains, which occaſioned great Deſturbances, and Murmurings in the Imperial Army: And at Vienna this Conduct of Kops was highly blam'd, and Orders ſent him never more to exerciſe the like unhumane Practices; for that many Officers of good Note and Reputation, had abſolutely refuſed to ſerve the Emperor in a War, where no Quarter was to be expected.

For which he his blamed at Vienna.

Count Tekeli appears in the War.

About this time, Smith with his ſhatter'd Troops joyn'd with General Kops near to Butrack; two Leagues from whence the Malecontents were Encamped, and Reinforc'd by 2000 Tranſilvanians, conducted thither by Count Tekeli, who after the death of his Father (as before mention'd) had ſerved Prince Apaſi in the nature of his Secretary, or one who had a chief hand in the management of his Affairs; and now making this firſt entrance on the Stage, we ſhall have occaſion to mention him often hereafter, being the Perſon who is to make the greateſt Figure in this following Hiſtory, and to prove the moſt active General, after the deſtruction of many before him, and after various Succeſſes, of good and bad Fortune, and Honours and Diſgraces received from the Turks; we ſhall find him ſtill Boyant and above Water, even at the 1681. laſt extremity, when the Turks themſelves were beaten out of all Hungary.

The Imperial Army having been much diminiſh'd in numbers by the Sword and Sickneſs, was again in part recruited by ſome Additional Forces, under the Command of Count Warbenoren, and by 600 Men out of a Regiment in Sileſia: Howſoever, ſuch was the Misfortunes of thoſe Times, and the inauſpicious Stars which then reign'd, that the Imperialiſts were worſted in all Fights and Skirmiſhes, to the deſtruction almoſt of their whole Army: Whileſt the Forces of the Malecontents increaſed double to the numbers of the Emperors Army. And the Turks ſtill forwarded theſe Miſchiefs by their frequent Incurſions from Buda, Newhawſel, and all their Garriſons; which was a Courſe and Practice which this Faithleſs People uſed, to make War without declaring it.

The Malecontents increaſe in their Forces.

ANNO 1678.

The Emperor being ſenſible of his own weak and decaying Condition, and of the Strength, and increaſing Power of his mighty Enemies, labour'd to cure and remedy the imminent evils and dangers by Treaties, which could not be done by Arms: And in order thereunto he offer'd three Churches to the Malecontents in the Upper Hungary, with other Propoſitions more large, and extenſive than formerly: And Hoffman, the principal Secretay of State and War, was ſent to the Grand Seignior to make Complaints of the Succours, which the Paſhas of Hungary daily afforded to his Rebellious Subjects: But neither the one, nor the other of theſe Negotiations, had the ſucceſs deſired: For the Malecontents were ſo far from hearkening to any Accommodation with their Sovereign Prince, that they were contriving the manner, how they might abſolutely throw off his Authority, and acquit themſelves of their Allegiance: And to that end, they propoſed to Elect a King of their own Nation, and many caſt their Eyes upon a certain Count, who was of the Houſe and Family of Frangipani: But the different Intereſts, and variety of Opinions, obſtructed the Election, ſo that nothing was agreed, or concluded in that affair. Nor could much more be expected from the Negotiations of Hoffman at Conſtanſtinople; for the Vizier was ſo extravagant in his Demands, and ſo unreaſonable in his Propoſals, that it plainly appear'd, how far he was from any intentions of renewing the Peace, or any other deſigns than that of War. Only by force of the rich Preſents which Hoffman brought, he prevailed with the Vizier to ſtrangle the Paſha of Waradin.

The Emperor ſends to treat with the Malecontents, and with the Turks.

The Malecontents propoſe to Elect a King of their own.

1681. Howſoever, things ran not ſo ſmoothly in Tranſilvania, nor with the Malecontents, but that they met with other difficulties and Enemies, beſides the Emperor. For a certain Perſon, a Boyar of that Country named Pedipol, being ambitious of Government, offer'd Money to the Grand Vizier for the Principality of Tranſilvania, alledging that Apaſi had Ruled there much beyond the time of other Princes: The Vizier, whoſe buſineſs was Gain, enter'd into a Treaty with Pedipol, made the bargain, took his Money and ſold him the Principality; and procur'd the Grand Seigniors Hatteſheriff, or Royal Signature to conſtitute him Prince, and to diveſt, or depoſe Apaſi. When Pedipol came with this Authority to take Poſſeſſion of the Government, the People refuſed to receive him, and Apaſi to Surrender: Whereupon Pedipol with his Party endeavoured to make good his Title, and Eſtabliſhment by Force of Arms. The Vizier upon the news hereof, to prevent thoſe Diviſions, diſpatched an Officer into Tranſilvania to decide the Difference, by taking off the Head of that Perſon, who ſhould be found diſobedient and averſe to the Grand Seignior's Commands: But before this Order could arrive, the diſpute was determin'd by the Fortune of War; for the Malecontents being ſenſible of the Obligations they had to Apaſi, and of what concernment his continuance in that Station would prove to them, offered him all the aid and aſſiſtance they were able, to which the Poles likewiſe joyning their Forces, over-threw Pedipol in the Field, and cauſed him with ſome of his Adherents to Fly into Valachia: Where raiſing new Forces, he marched again towards Tranſilvania, with intention to make a ſecond Attempt: But being met in his way by the Paſha of Waradin, he was commanded by him in the Grand Seigniors name, to quit his Pretentions to the Principality, and to content himſelf in a private Condition: For the Vizier having got his Money, little cared what became of Pedipol, whether he were a Prince or Paiſant; only he thought it neceſſary at that time to conſerve Peace between the Friends, and Allies to the Port, which was more eaſily done by ſupporting the intereſt of Apaſi, who was old and experienced in that Government, rather than by ſetting up Pedipol, whoſe Circumſtances were very diſagreeable, both to the Tranſilvanians and the Malecontents.

Pedipol procures a Commiſſion to be Prince of Tranſilvania.

He is oppoſed by Apaſi and overcome.

Howſoever, theſe differences contributed little to better the Condition of the Emperor, who of late had been worſted in all the Conflicts, and Engagements againſt the Enemy: As for Inſtance, a Party of 1681.

The Emperor's ill Succeſſes.

Five hundred Horſe, under the Command of Azos Benas, being advanc'd as far as Erlaw, belonging to the Lands and Demeſnes of Count Tekeli, were aſſail'd by the Turks, and their whole Body defeated, and cut in pieces. Another Party alſo conſiſting of two hundred Men, Commanded by Colonel Wolping, were overthrown by a Detachment of Turks belonging to Newhawſel.

Repreſentments of the Aſſembly at Altembourg.

Theſe ill Succeſſes in War, inclin'd the States of Hungary, then Aſſembled at Oedembourg, to conſent that all the Churches taken from the Proteſtants, ſhould with many other advantageous Propoſitions be conſigned and granted to them. And another Aſſembly at Altembourg did repreſent unto the Emperor, that the Change made in the Government of Hungary, was the cauſe of all the late Troubles and Wars in that Kingdom; to appeaſe which, they were of Opinion that it was abſolutely neceſſary to re-eſtabliſh the Charge and Office of Palatine, according to the Ancient conſtitution of that Nation; and that a General Diet ſhould be conven'd to that purpoſe. But when the Imperial Miniſters of State, as well Eccleſiaſtick as Civil, came to Debate upon theſe Points, they offer'd many Qualifications: As that the Authority of Palatine ſhould be limited, and reſtrain'd: That the Emperor's Writs or Letters ſhould be Imperative, rather than Mandative; that is, that they ſhould be penn'd in ſuch a Stile, as that they might appear rather Aſſertive of the Abſolute and Imperial Power, than to condeſcend unto more moderate Terms anciently us'd in that Kingdom. And when they came to the Article about reſtitution of the Churches (which was the main point on which the Malecontents inſiſted) they Treated with ſuch Niceties, and with ſo many Proviſoes and Savings, that the Deputies believ'd that the Imperial Miniſters came to ſpeak for Colours, and Subterfuges, to evade and illude an Accommodation, rather than with true and ſincere affections to heal the breaches, and compoſe the differences of the Nation.

The Emperor's Council qualifie them.

Weſſellini his death.

Is ſucceeded by Tekeli.

Whilſt theſe Matters were in Negotiation, Count Paul Weſſellini, who was Brother to the late Palatine, and General of the Malecontents, died, and then the Command of the Army was committed to Count Tekeli; who (as we have ſaid) had gain'd ſuch great Reputation in the Court of Prince Apaſi, that he made him his principal Miniſter of State; and tho' he was a young Man, of about twenty four or twenty five years of Age, yet he ſo diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by his Valour, Prudence, and Induſtry, that the eyes of all Hungary were upon him, as a Perſon in every reſpect agreeable to the preſent great Undertakings.

1681.

Tekeli being now at the head of twelve thouſand Fighting Men, well appointed, and fitted with all Neceſſaries, and a Train of Artillery of about twelve pieces of Cannon, and four Mortars, look'd on himſelf as in a Condition to undertake ſome great Enterprize. And having joyn'd with the Forces of his Couſin Count Tekeli, and ſupply'd himſelf with ſome of the Emperor's Money out of the Mint at Nagibania, he held a Council of War, and propos'd to Beſiege either Caſchau, or Kalo.

Tekeli's firſt deſigns.

He is in Love with the Princeſs Ragotski.

Howſoever, the Inclinations he had for the Daughter of Count Serini, Widow of the late Prince Ragotski, directed him in the firſt place towards Mongatz, that he might (if poſſible) come to a ſight of that Lady for whom he had ſo great a paſſion. But upon the approach of theſe Troops, her Mother-in-Law, who was zealous for the Intereſt of the Emperor, gave Orders to the Forces which were rais'd within her State, to fall upon Tekeli, whoſe Quarters were not far diſtant from Mongatz. The Fight was bravely maintain'd on both ſides; till at length the Troops of the Princeſs were forc'd to give way, and 200 of them being ſlain on the place, and many Priſoners taken (amongſt which the Count Serini was one) the reſt were put to flight, being entirely defeated. With theſe Succeſſes the Army of the Malecontents daily increas'd; to which an additional Force of eight or nine thouſand Tartars being added, the Emperor thought it neceſſary to recruit his Army with a Regiment of Horſe, under the Command of Count Stirum, and with ſome other Troops which were in Bohemia, and Stiria.

Tekeli defeats the Troops of the Princeſs Ragotski Dowager.

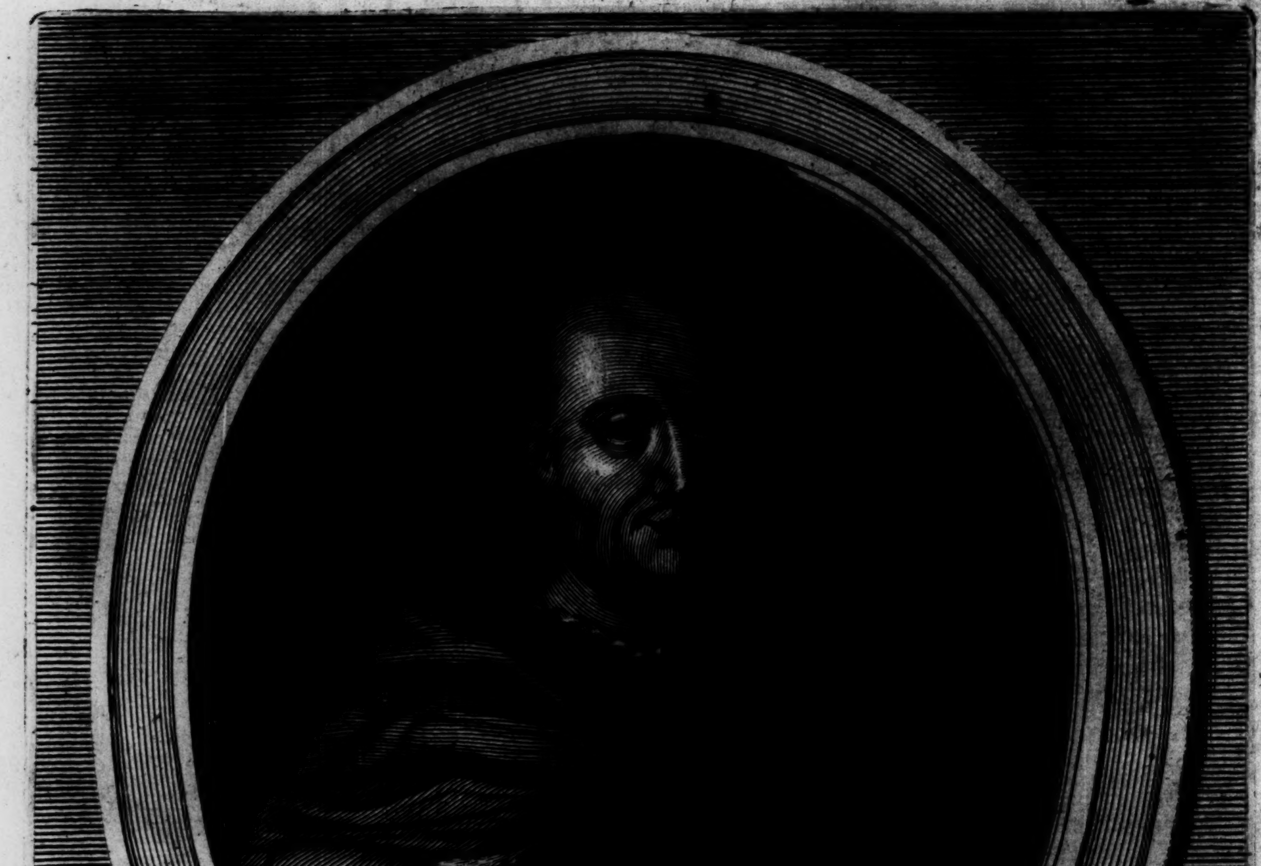
And now to make it appear that God had deſtin'd a War with the Turk, for Ends beſt known to his Divine Omniſcience, a party of the Imperialiſts unadviſedly fell upon the New Paſha, as he was going to his Government of Newhawſel, and defeated his whole Party, conſiſting of 200 Horſe. Which Action, tho' pretended to have been done by way of Repriſal, or Revenge for ſomething of the like nature perform'd by that Garriſon; yet the Paſha of Buda highly reſented this Breach of the Peace; threatning not only to acquaint the Grand Seignior therewith, but in the mean time to revenge the ſame by all the Acts of Hoſtility that he was able. And accordingly, drawing ſome Forces out of the Garriſons of Erlaw and Waradin, he caus'd them to March towards Sando, near Butrac, pillaging and plundring all in their way, and afterwards they return'd with

The Imperialiſts fall on the Paſha of Newhawſel.

It reveng'd by the Paſha of Buda.



M. Vander Gucht Sculp.

EMERIC DE COMTE TEKELI.

p 44

two hundred Priſoners. Which Action the Paſha of Buda own'd to have been done by his Special Order and Command, by way of repriſal, and ſatisfaction for the late Breach, and Act of Hoſtility. To which allegation, there being nothing which in reaſon or ſenſe could be reply'd, Count Wourmb, who was General in thoſe parts, was highly blam'd by the Emperor, and many Miſcarriages of the like nature attributed to his ill Conduct, and want of prudence, as if his Intentions had been to provoke the Turks unto a War. For which Reaſon, he was recall'd by the Emperor from that Employment, and Count Leſly ſent to Command the Forces in his Place.

Count Wourmb blamed.

The Emperor perceiving that he was very unable to reſiſt the Forces which were now in open Field, and in defiance againſt him, had his Recourſe to the Old Project of making New Propoſitions, and Offers of Peace to the Malecontents. But this was always ſo unluckily managed, and with ſo ill a grace, that it was no wonder if it found no better Succeſs. But now, as if it were intended to make things more plain and ſatisfactory to the World, without Diſputes, or Qualifications, a Manifeſto was publiſh'd by the Emperor's Command, Granting and Indulging unto all a General Act of Pardon and Oblivion, a Reſtoration to their Eſtates, a Free Exerciſe of Religion, and a Right and Privilege of being equally admitted into Places of Truſt, and Offices of Court with the Germans, and others of the Roman Catholick Religion; provided that within the ſpace of three Months they lay down their Arms, and ſubmitted to the Clemency of his Imperial Majeſty. And as to thoſe who ſhould ſtill ſtand out, and obſtinately perſevere in their Rebellion, he requir'd the States of Hungary, and all his Loving Subjects of that Kingdom, to joyn their Forces unto his, for the ſubjection of ſuch Rebellious Perſons, who were Enemies to himſelf, and to their own Country.

The Emperor publiſhes a Manifeſt.

Tekeli offers new Aggrievances.

Paſports given to meet at a Diet.

But leaſt theſe fair Offers ſhould Operate any thing on the Minds of the People, Tekeli at the ſame time, to make the Embroils more confuſed, ſent a Liſt to the Emperor of freſh Aggrievances, for which he deſir'd ſome Remedies might be conſider'd. All which the Emperor referr'd to the Examination of a Diet, which was ſuddenly to Aſſemble. And in Order thereunto, the General Baragotzi ſent Paſſports to the Chief of the Malecontents, that they might freely come to the Diet, and return without moleſtation; Inſinuating unto them, that their Government by a Palatine ſhould be reſtor'd, and whatſoever they could expect to gain by force of Arms, ſhould now be more eaſily yielded, and granted by Covenants of an Amicable Agreement. But all theſe Hopes and Expectations were overthrown by the heats which aroſe between the Emperor's Miniſters at Vienna, and the Deputies appointed by the Malecontents to Treat and prepare Matters againſt the Meeting of a Diet. For one day, when the Differences were in debate, it happen'd that the Chancellor Oker unadviſedly ſaid, That the Hungarian Nation had always been Faithleſs and Rebellious againſt their Prince. Which words being immediately catch'd at by the Great Chancellor of Hungary. It is unjuſt (ſaid he) to Charge the Crime of ſome particular Perſons on the whole Nation. To which Oker with more paſſion than before, made this Reply; That it would be happy for the Emperor, if one in twelve were found that truly and ſincerely adher'd to his intereſt. At theſe words, Count Palſi the Treaſurer of Hungary, not being able to contain himſelf longer, burſt out into a paſſion, and call'd the Chancellor Traytor, Knave, and Raſcal. And Count Harcani, another of the Deputies, as Gouty as he was, made a ſhift to get upon his Legs, and perſwade his Companions to break up the Aſſembly and be gone, to avoid the noiſe of ſuch Ribaldry, and affrontive Language. And as they were going out of the Room, the Chancellor of Hungary, and Count Forgatz added, Know (ſaid they) that we have never betray'd our King, nor pleaded for our Kindred, who were found guilty of baſe and perfidious Actions. Conſider that we have not forgot how far you Countenanc'd the Governour of Freibourg. To all which Oker made no Reply, but return'd to the Emperor, to give him an account of what had paſs'd at this Conference.

The Diet diſappointed, and how.

The Proceeding and Actions of Tekeli.

In the mean time Tekeli thinking of nothing leſs than Peace, or means of Accommodation, burnt the Suburbs of Caſſovia; and having receiv'd a Recruit of four hundred Horſe, which the Brother of Baragotzi, who Revolted to his Party, had brought over to him, he ſeiz'd on the Citadel of Zeilaverd, where were found ſixteen pieces of Ordnance. He then deſigning to paſs the River of Tourna, to re-take the Fortreſs ſo call'd, which the Enemy had lately gain'd, he found the Paſſage obſtructed by a Party of the Imperialiſts on the other ſide; but bringing four pieces of Cannon to play on the Enemy, they clear'd the way, and kept them at a diſtance; by which means a Regiment of the Poles firſt paſſed, and after them the whole Army. Thus Fortune favouring the Malecontents, a hundred Soldiers of the Imperial

Some of the Imperialiſts revolt.

Imperial Troops revolted over on this Occaſion to the Enemy, ſuch prevalence hath Succeſs always on the Minds of Mankind; the which facilitated alſo the taking of Tourna, which was Surrender'd at diſcretion.

After this, Tekeli March'd towards Chiacatorno, and in his way he took Zerenetz, and Melkaſſo, which yielded alſo at diſcretion, without any reſiſtance; but Podrach ſtanding out was taken by force, and all the Garriſon put to the Sword, except ſome Officers, who were conſerv'd, and made Priſoners of War.

Tekeli Maſter of the Field.

Whilſt theſe Succeſſes attended the Malecontents, Tekeli remain'd Maſter of the Field; ſo that the Count de Wourmb neither durſt remove his Encampment from before Eſperies, nor Count Leſley adventure on a March to joyn with him; until Tekeli removing from thoſe parts towards Strigonium, and to make himſelf Maſter of Leventz, the Imperial Forces found an opportunity to March as far as the River of Waagh, where they joyn'd with the Regiments of Dunewald, Holſtein, Maſſigni, Caraffa, and Strazoldo, which came lately out of Sileſia; and tho' theſe Forces were joyn'd together, with thoſe alſo of Count Leſley, yet they were not ſufficient to withſtand the Army of Count Tekeli, which conſiſted of at leaſt twenty thouſand effective Men, beſides Garriſons, and ſeveral Detatchments.

Tekeli writes Letters.

Tekeli being thus ſtrong, and having made himſelf Maſter of Leventz, Wrote circulary Letters in his own Name to all the Inhabitants of that Country: Repreſenting before them the ill Treatment, which all Hungary had received from the Germans, and the Slavery they lay under by a Foreign Yoak. That he was reſolved with the chief of his Party, to defend the Liberties and Privileges of Hungary with his Life and Eſtate: Exhorting all others to joyn with him in this good Cauſe; and Threatning ſuch, who either out of Cowardize, or Coldneſs towards the wellfare of their Country, or favour to the Emperor, ſhould place themſelves in the Condition of a careleſs Neutrality.

Tekeli takes Eſperies, and Arva.

No ſooner had Count Wourmb raiſed his Camp from before Eſperies, to joyn with the Sileſian Troops; but Tekeli obſerving his motion Inveſted the place, and took it in three days: The like he did to the Caſtle of Arva, which Surrendred even in the ſight of Count Leſley, his Forces not being ſufficient to give aſſiſtance or relief thereunto. At this time Weſſellini falling Sick and Dying, the Command of the Hungarian Troops was given to Tekeli; Boham was Chief of the Auxiliaries, and Tekeli himſelf Generaliſſimo of all; ſo that the whole management of the War, was now in the Hands of theſe three Leaders. The Tartars as Flying, and Independant Troops acted by themſelves; they pillaged Newſtadt, and burnt all the Country round within three Leagues of Leopolſtadt; and afterwards made their Paſſage over the River Waagh near Trenſchin, which the Counts Forgatz and Eſterhaſi being not able to oppoſe, the People of Moravia were ſo affrighted, that taking what Goods with them they could, in ſo ſuddain and diſtracted a fear, they fled to the Mountains for refuge.

The Tartars Plunder, and Burn.

Count Leſley overthrown.

Tartars in Moravia.

Duke John.

Colonel Joſua.

Boham and Tekeli underſtanding that Count Leſley was quarter'd near to Zatmar, they marched to Attack him; which when Leſley underſtood, he divided his Troops into three Bodies, with a ſeeming reſolution to Engage the Enemy; but ſo ſoon as they came near, they ſhow'd ſome ſigns of Irreſolution, and a deſire as it were to make a handſome Retreat: But being purſued by Tekeli with ſix Battalions, he engaged them near Leutſch, and Killed, or made Priſoners the greateſt part of that Body. Boham in the mean time totally defeated another Party, of which Four hundred Horſe only eſcaped. The third Body ſaved themſelves in the Mountains, and other faſt places. After this Victory Tekeli ſent a Detachment of his Forces to joyn with the Tartars in Moravia, who took Barin, the capital City thereof; which gave an Alarm to all the Hereditary Countries: And at the ſame time one Colonel Joſua, otherwiſe call'd Father Joſeph, who had been a Friar, but now turn'd Proteſtant, and a Soldier, ſuch another kind of a daring Fellow as Duke John before mention'd, joyn'd with the Malecontents, and enter'd Auſtria with Six thouſand Fighting Men, raiſed at his own Charge, which put all thoſe Countries into ſuch a Conſternation, that the People abandoned their Towns, and Villages and fled unto Vienna, for their place of Refuge. The courage and experience of this Colonel Joſua, was ſo well known to the Arch-Biſhop of Strigoniam, that he perſwaded the Emperor, to take him off from the Malecontents, and engage him by Promiſes of reward to his own Party: This Office was committed to the Management and Conduct of Count de Wourmb, becauſe Count Leſley remain'd Sick at Caſſovia; but ſuch was the conſtancy of this Martial Friar to his Cauſe and Principles, that nothing could avail with him to change his Party: Suſpecting perhaps, that when once the Arch-Biſhop ſhould get him into his Power, he would immure him within the Walls of his Convent, and oblige him to the performance of his Vow: But he rejected all the offers, which were made him,

and

1681. and reſerved himſelf for greater Exploits, which happened the year following.

Such is the fury of Civil Wars, much more active and violent than Foreign, that few days paſſed without Fights, or Skirmiſhes in one place or other. Count Wourmb, having received all the Recruits that he could expect, marched directly towards Tekeli and Boham, and engaged with them early in the Morning, in a Fight which continued until three a Clock in the Afternoon, with ſuch equal Fortune, that the Malecontents being ſenſible of the valour, and reſolution of the Imperialiſts retreated with good order under the Cannon of Alſol, a Town Situate on the River of Gran, between Newſol and Kremnitz. In the mean time twenty Squadrons of the Rebels endeavouring to paſs the Mountains, were repulſed by Colonel Reyters, who at the Head of his Regiment defended the Paſſages, and drove them back to their Camp, having killed Five hundred of them on the place. But this loſs was the next day revenged by Tekeli, who took Biſtrick by force of Arms, with much Blood and Slaughter of the Inhabitants. This Biſtrick is a Town Situate in a Plain, encompaſs'd about with little Hills, famous for the golden Mines, and the Country well planted about it with pleaſant Vineyards; the Governours thereof would neither declare themſelves at firſt either for the Emperor, or for the Malecontents: But when the Imperialiſts with their Army drew near to them, they could no longer conceal their Affections, and good Wiſhes, but broke their Neutrality, and declar'd for the Emperor: Soon after which Tekeli making himſelf Maſter of the place, put ſix of the Chief Inhabitants to death, in puniſhment of their Infidelity, and breach of Promiſe.

A Fight near Alſol.

Biſtrick taken.

But before the end of this year, the Imperialiſts had their changes of good Fortune, as well as the Malecontents, a Party of which the Garriſon of Filek entirely defeated: Filek is Situate in the Road-way from the Mountain Towns in Hungary leading to Tranſilvania and Caſſovia, and lies about five Leagues Northward from Agria. This Succeſs was ſeconded by another Rout, which Count Eſterhaſi the Pope's General gave to a party of Five hundred Spahees, and Two thouſand Janiſaries near Veſprin, who were deſign'd to make Incurſions into the Emperor's Countries. But leaſt this Action ſhould be ill repreſented to the Grand Seignior, and become the Cauſe of a Rupture, the Emperor diſpatched away an Expreſs to Conſtantinople, to give a true account of the Cauſe, and Reaſons for this Engagement. And now being come to that Seaſon of the year, when Armies draw into their Winter-quarters. Both Parties being in cooler temper began to Treat; ſo that a Ceſſation of Arms was agreed, and the place appointed for the Conference was Oedembourg, where all the Chief Lords of Hungary had agreed to Aſſemble. The perſon who was to preſide for the Emperor, was the Prince of Swartzembourg, and Count de Noſtiz manag'd the Treaty, applying himſelf with much Zeal and Diligence that this Negotiation might be happily concluded. 1681.

Filek.

Eſterhaſi defeats a Body of the Turks.

A Ceſſation of Arms, and a Treaty.

ANNO 1679.

This Treaty with a Ceſſation of Arms continu'd till the end of the year, with hopes that the beginning of the next would make that poor Kingdom happy with a Peace. But the Emperor having as it were ſecur'd a Peace with France (which was one of the greateſt fears he had upon him, in caſe of a War with the Turks) refuſ'd to yield unto the ſame terms which he had frequently offer'd in former times to the Malecontents. It was now reſolv'd that the Office of Palatine ſhould for ever hereafter be extinguiſh'd and made void, and that Kingdom govern'd by a Vice-Roy, who was ſolely to be conſtituted by Commiſſion from the Emperor. 2*dly*, The Proteſtants were not to have Churches in Towns or Cities, but to content themſelves with ſuch as ſhould be allotted them in Villages. 3*dly*, As a Preliminary to all the reſt, the Malecontents were to diſmiſs the Foreign Troops entertain'd in their Service, before the Treaty upon any other Conditions and Articles ſhould commence. The very noiſe of this alteration in the Emperor's Councils, put a ſtop to all proceedings of a Treaty, and an end to the Truce and Ceſſation of Arms. And indeed the Malecontents were by this time ſo engag'd with the Turks, that on their part alſo they had put themſelves out of all poſſibility of Accommodation without their concurrence, and concernment in the Treaty.

The Emperor falls off from his former Offers. 1679.

An end put to the Truce.

The Aſſembly at Oedembourg being diſſolv'd, the Malecontents held a Diet of their own at Coloſwar, alias Claudiopolis, whereunto Prince Apaſi, and the Neighbouring Paſhas reſorted, to treat and agree upon the meaſures which were to be taken for the enſuing year, in order to carrying on the War. Whilſt they were upon this Treaty, a Meſſenger arriv'd from the Grand Seignior, who brought a Scymitar to Prince Apaſi, which was a certain Signal of the Sultan's favour, and acceptance of his Services, which was much to the joy of all Perſons there preſent; for that it was doubtful before, how far the Grand Seignior nior would abett the Cauſe of Pedipol, to whom (as we have mention'd) he had given his Commiſſion to be Prince of Tranſilvania, with excluſion of Apafi. Nor was the News of leſs concernment to them brought at the ſame time, that the Grand Seignior was upon concluſion of peace with the Moſcovites, by which the whole Ottoman Empire would be at leiſure to employ all their Troops againſt the Germans. And with the ſame occaſion the Paſhas of Hungary were Commanded to joyn with Apafi, and to aſſiſt the Malecontents with ſuch Forces as they ſhould deſire; of all which the Emperor having certain Intelligence from his Reſident at Conſtantinople, Order'd three Regiments to be ſent into Hungary, for recruit of the Forces under Count Leſley, of which the Malecontents having Advice, took the Field, and paſſing the Theyſſe, pitch'd their Camp near Debrezin, to cover and relieve as occaſion ſerv'd the Caſtle of Kovar. This City of Debrezin, or Debrechim is ſituated between Tokai, and great Waradin, and is very Rich and Populous. It was a Free Town, and conſerv'd it ſelf in a Neutrality during the late Revolutions; but after Zolnock and Caſſovia were reduc'd, the Magiſtrates thereof deſir'd his Imperial Majeſty to take them under his protection; with which, and by payment of a Tribute to the Port, the Inhabitants liv'd quiet and free, until the year 1676. when it was taken by Count Strazoldo, upon pretence that it was become the place of Sanctuary and common Refuge of the Malecontents; tho' afterwards, upon complaints from the Turks, the Emperor withdrew his Forces from thence, leaving them free, and in their former Condition of Neutrality.

A Diet at Coloſwar.

The Turks joyn with the Malecontents.

Debrezin.

Tekeli revolts to the Emperor.

In the mean time Tekeli falling in love with a Daughter of the Princeſs Ragotski Dowager, who was extreamly zealous (as we have mention'd before) for the Emperor's Cauſe, refuſ'd to beſtow her Daughter upon him, unleſs he would firſt Relinquiſh the Intereſt to which he had adher'd. The paſſion which Tekeli had for the young Lady, was more powerful than his Inclinations to the diſcontented Party; ſo that firſt ſeeming cold in his Old purſuits, and declaring his Mind freely in open Diſcourſe, his Troops began to ſuſpect his Fidelity, and left him, and put themſelves under the Command of Weſſellini. Tekeli endeavour'd to perſwade Palfi Imbre to joyn with him in his Revolt; but not prevailing, he ſingly with ſome few Servants went over to Vienna. Coming thus alone to the Emperor without his Troops he was the leſs welcome; and indeed he was ſo little regarded, and his Merit ſo ill accounted on, that when he made applications to the Emperor for Reſtitution of his Eſtate which was Confiſcated to the value of two Millions, thoſe who enjoy'd the benefit of ſo great Riches, obſtructed his Requeſt; Repreſenting unto the Emperor, that the return to his Duty after a long continuance in Rebellion, only in his own Perſon, and without his Troops, deſerv'd nothing, nor was it to be judg'd a ſatisfaction or an atonement for the many miſchiefs and diſſervices that he had already done; and that to recover the Emperor's favour, there was ſomething elſe to be done beſides a bare ſurrender of his Perſon: Howſoever fair words were given him for ſome time; of which, and of tedious Addreſſes and frequent Applications, Tekeli growing weary, he return'd to his Old Friends again, with whom he was receiv'd, and admitted to the Command of his deſerted Troops.

It ſlighted.

He return'd again to the Rebels.

Young Count Serini reſtor'd to his Eſtate.

About the ſame time the young Count Serini, Son of Nicholas Serini, who was kill'd in Croatia, and not of Peter Serini who was Beheaded for High-Treaſon, being now of years able to bear Arms in Service of the Emperor; made his humble Petition that he might be reſtor'd to the Eſtate of his Father, which was ſeiz'd and ſequeſter'd by the Collectors of the Emperor's Revenue, for the Lands and Demeſnes of Peter Serini the Unkle, whoſe Goods were confiſcated for High-Treaſon. The which Requeſt being conſider'd in the Privy-Council, it was judg'd highly reaſonable, and juſt that this young Count ſhould be reſtor'd to his Eſtate, and ſo it was accordingly Ordered.

Tekeli takes Kremnitz.

Tekeli being now return'd to his former Command, that he might both aſſure his Aſſociates of his Fidelity towards them, and reproach the Imperialiſts for ſo lightly eſteeming a Perſon that was able to ſerve them, he ſurpriz'd Kremnitz with three hundred Men under his Command, and ruin'd and burnt all the Works and Store-Houſes belonging to the Silver-Mines, which with much Charge had been erected by the Emperor; and afterwards retir'd into the Turkiſh Dominions.

A Fight between Count Strazoldo, and Colonel Joſua.

Count Strazoldo having receiv'd Intelligence that Colonel Joſua was advanc'd with eighteen hundred Men, to ruine certain Powder-Mills, purſu'd after him with four thouſand Horſe; and had the fortune to attack him, juſt at the time that he was thinking to draw off. Howſoever Joſua according to his uſual Bravery Charg'd the Enemy, and Diſputed the Fight for ſeveral hours; until at length having his Horſe kill'd under him, he was forc'd to retreat, which he did in good Order; being again re-mounted, tho' he was much incommoded by a Wound which he had receiv'd in this Engagement.

Col. Joſua revenges himſelf.

But ſoon after this loſs, Colonel Joſua to revenge himſelf, taking the Opportunity whilſt General Dunewald (who Commanded in the Place of Count Leſley, then lying Sick at Caſſovia) was in his Quarters, ſurpriz'd two hundred Men belonging to thoſe Recruits which were brought out of Sileſia, and cut them to pieces, allowing Quarter unto none, but only to a Lieutenant, and four other Officers.

The Emperor makes new Offers to the Malecontents.

Col. Joſua falls off to the Emperor.

A Plague at Vienna.

Col. Joſua gives Teſtimonies of his Loyalty

His death.

Thus when the Imperialiſts obſerv'd the ill Succeſſes which daily for the moſt part attended the War, they began again to change their Meaſures, and to eſteem Peace much more eligible than an unfortunate War. And notwithſtanding the late refuſal to grant any thing that was formerly offer'd; the Emperor was reſolv'd now to condeſcend unto any thing that the Malecontents ſhould demand, and that no heavier burdens ſhould be laid upon them, than ſuch Taxes and Duties only as were impoſed on the Subjects of his Hereditary Countries. Count Leſley being recover'd of his Indiſpoſition, found an Opportunity to Diſcourſe theſe Matters Perſonally with Colonel Joſua; and ſo affected him with the Juſtice and Reaſonableneſs of the Propoſitions; that being abſolutely convinc'd how much a Peace made on ſuch Conditions, was to be preferr'd before a War in Conjunction with the Turks; he Wrote unto Tekeli, ſignifying his full and entire ſatisfaction in what was offer'd by the Emperor, and that thoſe Conditions were a ſufficient ground for a ſecure and a laſting Peace. But the Anſwer hereunto was retarded, by reaſon of a Plague which beginning to rage at Vienna, caus'd the Imperial Court to remove thence with much fear and haſt unto Prague; and the Negotiation being then laid aſide for ſome Months afterwards, time had ſo alter'd the ſtate of things, that neither the Emperor was willing to ſtand to the former Offers, nor the Malecontents to receive them. Howſoever Colonel Joſua remain'd firm and fix'd to his point; and upon a Pardon granted to him in ample form and manner, he took a New Oath of Fidelity to the Emperor, and engag'd his own Troops to follow him in his Dutiful Allegiance; and that he might give ſome undoubted Teſtimonies of his true Converſion, by ſome Acts of Loyalty and Bravery, he perſwaded Semey the Governour of Tourna to Surrender up the Caſtle, and adhere unto the Cauſe and Intereſt of the Emperor. And afterwards Enterprizing farther with a Party of his own Horſe, he unfortunately fell into an Ambuſcade, which a Famous Officer of Tekeli's had prepar'd for him. After which, eſcaping to a ſmall Fortreſs not far from thence, he defended himſelf therein for the ſpace of two days; and being not able longer to maintain the place, he with much boldneſs ſet fire to the Powder, and blew himſelf up, with all thereunto belonging. And thus this Valiant one ended his days; whoſe Humor was much more agreeable to a Soldier than a Friar, and better fitted for a Camp than a Monaſtery.

A Plague at New-hawſel.

The People forſake the Town, and are cut off.

Nor did the Peſtilence only Rage within the Emperor's Dominions, but the Infection diſperſed it ſelf with ſuch violence and rage within the Territories of the Turks, that five hundred Families fled out of New-hawſel, to breath in a more free and healthful Air; but ſcarce were they remov'd a League from the Garriſon, before they were ſurpriz'd by a party of five hundred Huſſars and Heydukes, who kill'd ſome of them, and pillag'd and robbed the others of all the Goods and Monies which remain'd to them for a poor ſupport, and maintenance of Life. Such was the unhappy State of that miſerable Kingdom, where Men could neither be ſecure within the Walls of their fortified Towns, nor permitted to breath in the open air of the Country; but whilſt they fly from the Judgments of God, they fall into the cruel hands of mercileſs Men.

The Poles and Moſcovites ſend an Embaſſie to the Emperor.

And yet notwithſtanding theſe daily provocations given the Turk (I know not by what Fate) the Emperor was of Opinion, that it was ſtill poſſible ſo to ſalve up Matters with the Grand Seignior, that a War might be avoided. Upon which Opinion and Conceit ſo deeply rooted and fix'd in the Imperial Councils, the Emperor refus'd to joyn with the Moſcovites and Poles in a League offenſive and defenſive againſt the Common Enemy.

The Moſcovites ſend an Ambaſſador into Poland.

And another Ambaſſador to Conſtantinople.

There had been of late a great talk in the World of a Peace concluding between the Turks, and the Moſcovites, grounded upon an Embaſſie which the latter had diſpatch'd to Conſtantinople; when at the ſame time another Ambaſſador was ſent by them into Poland, and there Treating with that King to enter into a League offenſive and defenſive with them; offering to defray a great part of the Charge of the War, provided that the Armies of the two Nations might joyn and act together in the next Campaign. The Poles neither ſeem'd to accept nor refuſe the Offer, but referr'd the Agreement and Concluſion to the enſuing Diet. In the mean time another Ambaſſador of theirs arriv'd at the Port, to try and diſcover the intentions of the Turk towards them. The Grand Vizier, who had already been adviſ'd of their Embaſſies, diſpatched into Poland, and Germany; was deſirous to diſcover the ſubſtance and intent of the Meſſage before he would admit the Ambaſſador to his Audience; to get a knowledge whereof, he employ'd ſome Grave Kaloires or Greek Monks (for whom he knew the Moſcovites had great reverence and reſpect) to fiſh out if poſſible the meaning and purport of the Commiſſion; but the Ambaſſador kept his Buſineſs ſecret, and with ſome Indignation told the Kaloires that the Embaſſie from the Czar his Maſter was not to them, but to the Grand Seignior; and that the ſubſtance of his Buſineſs was contain'd in the Letter, which he hop'd to preſent unto the Sultan with his own hands. When the Letter was opened, and read, the Contents thereof was to this purpoſe. That the Great Czar of Moſcovie did offer to make Peace with the Grand Seignior, provided that the Turks would Surrender Czechrim unto him, with all the other Places in the Ukraine, which the laſt year they had taken from him.

Their Negotiations with the Turk.

Thus had the Moſcovites three Treaties on foot at the ſame time; one with the Turk for Eſtabliſhment of a Peace; and in caſe of ſuch failure, then they propos'd to provide themſelves with two ſuch ſtrong Allies, as the Emperor of Germany, and the King of Poland. Such was the Policy of this Northern People.

ANNO, 1680.

Treaties between Turks, Poles, and Moſcovites.

The greateſt part of this Year paſſed in Treaties and Negotiations between the Poles, the Moſcovites, and the Turks; none of the three remain'd in perfect good underſtanding with each other. The Poles had not as yet ratify'd their Peace with the Turk, having according to their uſual Cuſtom deferr'd it to the determination of a Diet, which was purpoſely delay'd, until it appear'd how Matters would ſucceed in Hungary. The Moſcovites entertain'd a Treaty with the Poles, propoſing a League Offenſive and Defenſive with them, with deſign to create a Jealouſie in the Turk; in expectation thereby to Conclude their Peace on better Terms; and when they found the Turks inclining and condeſcending towards them, they then ſeem'd cold towards the Poles, and more remiſs and indifferent in their Negotiations with them. The Turks likewiſe play'd their Game between both theſe Parties; not determining with which to cloſe, becauſe Matters did not in all Points agree with their expectations. The Moſcovites acted doubly, and with reſerve, but the Poles were more open and free in their Propoſals, and Action; they were ſenſibly touch'd with the loſs of Caminieck, which was the Fortreſs and Bulwark to their Kingdom. Nor were the Dependances or Country thereunto belonging as yet ſet out or limitted, which were at preſent as large and extenſive as the Turks were pleaſed to make and aſſign them; they were Judges in their own Cauſe, and had power ſufficient in their own hands to make good whatſoever they ſhould determine.

The Moſcovites make a Peace with the Poles.

The Poles during theſe Negotiations, Treated with the Sword in their hands, and prepar'd for War; and ſo far preſs'd the League with Moſcovy, that in fine it was concluded, which had been a great ſecurity for Poland, in caſe the Moſcovites had kept their Faith with any regard, and reſpect to their League ſo lately agreed.

They fall off from it, and agree with the Turk.

But whilſt Couriers with Diſpatches paſſed and repaſſed between the Courts of Poland and Moſcovy, the Turks having got notice of this Negotiation, preſently made ſuch Offers to the Moſcovite Ambaſſador reſiding at Conſtantinople, that the Terms were accepted, and a Peace clap'd up between the Czar, and the Grand Seignior, which might have tended to the utter ruine of Poland, had not the Deſign againſt Hungary (which the Turks had meditated for a long time) diverted the ſtorm and fury of a War ſo much expected and dreaded by them. Nor was the Moſcovite Ambaſſador in Poland much out of Countenance, when he was reproach'd with the breach of Faith; for that Nation was never eſteem'd in the World to have been eaſily touch'd with a tender ſenſe of Honour, or ſcruples of thoſe Matters which are call'd Faith, or Honeſty; but rather have made ſuch inconſiderable Trifles as thoſe to become ſubſervient to their greater intereſt and advantages.

An Ambaſſador ſent to ratifie the Peace.

But leſt the Turks ſhould repent them of the Bargain they had made, and ſtrike up with the Poles, who had juſt reaſon to leave the Moſcovites in the lurch, the Czar diſ-ſpeeded with all haſt an Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Port, together with the uſual Preſents; ſuch as two thouſand Sable Skins, twelve Hawks, and other Curioſities; ſignifying by his Letters, that his aim and intention of that Embaſſie, was only to ratifie thoſe Articles of Peace which were offer'd and agreed in a late Treaty. The Ambaſſador was receiv'd with ſuch an unuſual Wellcome, that he was ſurpriz'd at the ſtrange Careſſes which were ſhown him; which not only aſſur'd him that the former Conditions would moſt certainly be granted; but he wiſh'd his Maſter had given him Inſtructions to demand ſomething of a higher and more important important Nature from the Turk. In ſhort, when the Ambaſſador came to Treat upon Particulars, he found that this extravagant kindneſs was like the Embraces of a Strumpet, falſe and vain; and that the Turks were ſo far from an Agreement, that they would ſcarce grant or make good any one of thoſe Propoſitions which they ſo lately promis'd; ſo the Ambaſſador was oblig'd to return as he came, without eaſe in any thing, unleſs of his Preſents, of which the Turks took care to take off the burthen from him. With this piece of Policy had the Turks out-witted the Moſcovites, and expos'd them to the diſdain and reproach of the Poles; who could not very ſpeedily be perſwaded to believe that either their Faith or Friendſhip was worth the trouble of another League or Contract. Nor could the Moſcovites, as dull and ſtupid as they are, have the face to offer at another Treaty with the Poles, which they had ſo lately rejected and violated for the ſake of their falſe Friend.

The Turks fall off from the Moſcovites

Other Ambaſſadors ſent from Moſco to the Port.

When the Ambaſſador was return'd to Moſco, he found all that City and Country in great Combuſtions, caus'd by the two Brothers contending for the Government, after the Death of the Czar their Father: But ſo ſoon as thoſe Troubles were appeas'd, by agreement of the Brothers to participate equally of the Sovereign Power, and joyntly to Rule, they diſpatch'd other Ambaſſadors to the Port with new Inſtructions. Where being arriv'd, their Preſents were again kindly receiv'd, and their Perſons Treated in ſuch a ſoft and gentle manner as the Turks commonly practiſe, when they intend to delay and protract the iſſue of an Affair to an uncertain time. For tho' the Turks were reſolv'd to carry on the War in Hungary, yet the time was not fix'd when the ſame ſhould be denounc'd; the term thereof depending upon preparations and proviſions of vaſt Sums of Money, and other Uncertainties neceſſary thereunto. And for that Reaſon the Moſcovite Ambaſſador was ſtill kept in hand, and detain'd at the Port.

But in fine, when it was reſolv'd that the War ſhould be carry'd into Hungary, (which Reſolution was firſt taken in the Year 1681.) then the Vizier concluded a Truce with the Moſcovites for twenty Years, upon Conditions which the Czars ſent by way of their Ambaſſador reſiding at the Court of the Tartar Chan, call'd Baucha Saral, whoſe chief Buſineſs there, was to Redeem and Exchange Priſoners; the which Letter directed to the Grand Vizier, was to this effect.

AT the inſtance of the Tartar Chan We have wrote to the Czars, that he would be pleas'd to grant you a Peace, as deſir'd by you. In anſwer unto which, he hath given us to underſtand, that he will conſent thereunto; provided, that beſides Kiovia, you renounce all Title and Pretence to Tripol, Staiki, and Vaſikow, which have always been Dependences thereupon. And that you farther promiſe, that your People ſhall not Inhabit, nor hold Fairs, Commerce, or Markets on our ſide of the Nieper; but that all that Country ſhall remain deſert, and waſte as it is at preſent. And that from the Towns of Tripol, Staiki, and Vaſikow, to the Iſles of the Coſacks Zoporoges, you renounce all your pretenſions unto us. This is what we demand, and without theſe terms we ſhall conclude nothing with you.

The Vizier accepts of the Conditions offerd by the Moſcovites.

The Vizier having reſolv'd on a War againſt the Emperor, receiv'd theſe Propoſitions with full ſatisfaction; and immediately return'd Anſwer thereunto, in a Letter wrote to the Czars, full of their uſual ſublime Expreſſions, and of high and fulſom praiſes of their Wiſdoms and Grandeur. Signifying that in the Name of the Grand Seignior he did accept and confirm all the Conditions propos'd; deſiring him to ſend an Extraordinary Ambaſſador to confirm the Treaty. But leſt the Czars ſhould refuſe to ſend a new Ambaſſador, before the other then reſiding was return'd; the Vizier about ſix Weeks afterwards gave Licenſe for his Departure, and accompanied him with Preſents of greater value, than thoſe which the Grand Seignior had formerly beſtow'd upon the Czar.

Of all theſe Particulars, Kaunitz, who Reſided at Conſtantinople, in the Place of the Secretary Hoffman lately there Deceas'd, gave Intelligence to the Emperor; ſignifying alſo, that after the Moſcovite Ambaſſador was arriv'd with Ratification of the Peace, the Grand Seignior would ſoon afterwards remove to Adrianople; in Order as was moſt probable, and in all appearance to a War againſt Hungary.

This Matter was acted in the year 1681, which we have anticipated, that we might not abruptly break off the Treaty with Moſcovy, the nature of which may be beſt underſtood, when it is carried forward in one Piece; which having done, we muſt look back again to the year 1680. and to the Actions of the Malecontents.

1681.

Tekeli and Weſſellini Fight for Command.

Tekeli was very active all this time in Recruiting his Army, and preparing for War; and having compos'd a Body of four thouſand Tranſilvanians, he march'd with them to the General Rendezvous, intending as he had done the year before, to take upon him the Command of the Army. But when he came thither he was ſtrangely ſurpriz'd to find the ſame refus'd to him by Count Weſſellini, Son of the late Paul Weſſellini deceas'd; who ſo reſolutely contended for the Chief Command, that nothing could decide it but the Sword. In ſhort, both Parties drew out into the Field, and charg'd each other; and after a long Diſpute Tekeli got the Victory, and put Weſſellini and his Forces to the Rout; and having purſu'd them with a Detachment of his Forces, the Competitor Weſſellini was taken, and brought Priſoner to Tekeli; who cauſing him to be tied on his Horſe, ſent him to Prince Apaſi in Tranſilvania; after which, Tekeli without a Rival took upon him the ſole Command of the Army.

1680. The Paiſants in Bohemia riſe in Arms.

The Emperor beſides a War againſt his Rebel Subjects, was under great Mortifications, and Troubles; his Imperial Palace at Vienna was burnt, the Plague Rag'd violently in his Hereditary Countries, and in his Army, of which the Baron de Kaunitz, and other principal Officers died. And at the ſame time nine hundred Paiſants of the Circle of Braſlaw in Bohemia aroſe in Arms againſt the Counts Galas, and Bredaw their Lords, pretending that they were treated like Slaves, and refus'd to pay the Contributions which were demanded for the Emperor.

Howſoever, to make the Juſtice of their Cauſe appear, they ſent four Deputies to Prague, to make known unto his Imperial Majeſty their many Aggrievances, which were ſo Tyrannical and Burthenſom as could not longer be ſuſtain'd; and therefore they deſir'd that Council might be aſſign'd them to plead their Cauſe againſt their Lords at the Bar of Juſtice. But inſtead of hearkning to the Petition of theſe diſtreſſed Paiſants, the Deputies were Impriſon'd; and to ſtifle this Tumult in the beginning, two Regiments under the Command of Count Piccolomini were ſent to reduce them; upon the appearance of which, the Mutineers diſpers'd, and fled every Man to his own home.

But this Combuſtion was not long ſuppreſs'd, before it burſt forth again in a more violent and outragious manner than before; for four thouſand of theſe diſcontented Paiſants were got together in a formidable Body, Conducted by ſeveral Reformed Officers, with Colours flying, and Drums beating, and with Mottos on their Enſigns, which ſerv'd to incite others to joyn in their Rebellion. They at firſt attempted a Caſtle belonging to the Count de Thun, (who was Envoy about that time in England, for the Emperor) where they expected to find Arms; but miſſing thereof, they proceeded on other Deſigns, but were interrupted, and ſtop'd by Count Piccolomini, who was ſent with Forces to reduce them to Obedience. Whereupon theſe Rebels made a ſecond Experiment, of ſending their Deputies to repreſent their Aggrievances, who were as before clap'd into Priſon. But Advices coming, that ſome other Counties were up in Arms in like manner, and for the ſame Cauſe, the Deputies were ſet at Liberty; and a General Pardon Granted to all thoſe who would lay down their Arms, and remit their Pleas to be Treated at the Tribunals of Juſtice. Upon this Declaration, five thouſand ſubmitted, and return'd to their own Habitations. And the Emperor himſelf, upon hearing the Cauſe between the Lords, and the Paiſants, did determine that the Paiſants ſhould be oblig'd only to Labour three days for their Lords, whereas formerly they were conſtrain'd to the Service of five Days in the Week; having but one ſingle Day allow'd them for the Care and Support of their Family.

The Emperor accommodates the Matter between the Lords, and their Tenants.

The Poles preſs to have a Treaty Signed.

In the mean time, the Reſident for the King of Poland, at Vienna, preſs'd very inſtantly to have the League between his Maſter, and the Emperor againſt the Turk to be Compleated, and Sign'd; to which at length this Anſwer was given. That ſo ſoon as the Poles had drawn the Moſcovites into an Union with them; and that the Turks had alſo declar'd a War, that then the Treaty which was already drawn, ſhould immediately be Sign'd.

The Emperor refuſes to Treat with Tekeli.

Tekeli on the other ſide, offer'd New Propoſitions of Peace, and in the mean time deſir'd a Ceſſation of Arms. Upon which, the Emperor having call'd his Council, it was Reſolv'd by them, that all Treaties with him for the future, ſhould be abſolutely deny'd; in regard, that by experience he had always been found falſe, and perfidious in every Treaty, having broken his Faith and Promiſes whenſoever it ſerv'd his turn not to perform them. Beſides, it was well remember'd in what manner he had formerly made uſe of Ceſſations of Arms, to debauch the Minds of the Emperor's Soldiers, and to ſeduce and divert them from their Loyalty, and Allegiance. Moreover, the Propoſitions now tender'd, were of the ſame nature and temperament with 1681. thoſe which had been ſo often rejected, and which tended to the diminution of his Imperial Majeſty's Authority. As namely, the Emperor was to ſuffer the People to make Choice of a New Palatine, according to the Ancient Conſtitutions: That the Eſtates of the Malecontents which had been Confiſcated for their Rebellion ſhould be reſtor'd; and that the German Garriſons ſhould be withdrawn out of all the Towns of Hungary, and Troops of that Nation admitted into their Places. Theſe being the Old and Stale Points ſo often controverted and rejected; it was concluded that Tekeli did not again repeat and make offer of them, in hopes of an accommodation, but to amuſe the minds of the People, and to ſerve ſome purpoſe, which he deſir'd to conceal.

And the Reaſons why.

At the ſame time Count Serini, to whom his Eſtate Confiſcated had been lately reſtor'd; had by ſome ſecret Informations fallen into ſuſpicion of keeping a Correſpondence with the Malecontents; for which Reaſon he was taken into Cuſtody, and his Papers ſeiz'd; and ſeveral other Hungarian Gentlemen committed to Priſon for Complices with him in the ſame Plot; and were all afterwards carried to Prague, where Orders were given to take the Informations, and draw up the Indictment againſt them. Accordingly the Examinations were made, and a cloſe inſpection into certain Letters wrote in Characters to Count Tekeli, which gave juſt Cauſe of Jealouſie and Suſpicion of an unlawful Correſpondence. Howſoever, when the Letters came to be Decyphered, and nothing found to be therein contain'd, but Arguments and Perſwaſions unto Tekeli to accept the Offers made by the Emperor; the which he urg'd and enforc'd by aſſurances in ſuch Caſe, of being inſtrumental in the Marriage with his Siſter the Princeſs Ragotski (for whom he knew that Tekeli conſerv'd a Paſſion) Serini was then acquitted, and reſtor'd again to his Eſtate, after a Months Impriſonment; and Licenſe given him to Viſit his Siſter the Princeſs at Mongatz. At his Arrival at this Court, he was joyfully Wellcom'd by all thoſe who had a tenderneſs for that Family; and the Princeſs her ſelf receiv'd a ſeaſonable Conſolation from the Company of her Brother; being then in Mourning, and in Affliction for the Death of her Mother-in-Law, the Princeſs Dowager; which Occaſion Count Tekeli took to paſs the Complement, by an expreſs Meſſenger of Condoleance with her.

Count Serini ſuſpected, and Impriſoned.

He is cleared, and ſet at liberty.

1681. Tekeli being now Recruited with conſiderable Numbers both of Turks, and Tartars, divided his Army into three Bodies; the one Commanded by himſelf, and the other two by Petrozzi, and Palaſſi-Imbre, with intent to enter into the Hereditary Countries by three ſeveral ways. Againſt which Forces the Emperor ſent Count Staremberg Governour of Vienna, and Major General Haran, with all the Troops belonging to Moravia, Stiria, and Auſtria. Staremberg had the fortune to Encounter one Party of them as they were breaking into Moravia, and gave them a Repulſe; howſoever in their Retreat they took a Redoubt, which was built upon the Waagh, in which were three hundred Soldiers, whom they totally Defeated. In Revenge of which, Count Dunewald Routed another Party of the Malecontents, conſiſting of five hundred, of which, three hundred were killed upon the place, and fifty Officers and Soldiers taken Priſoners, with four Colours, on which was this Inſcription.

Tekeli divides his Army into three Bodies.

The Imperialiſts have ſeveral Succeſſes.

Comes Tekeli qui pro Deo, & Patriâ pugnat.

Count Caprara with ten thouſand Men advanc'd as far as Erlaw, to obſerve the motions of Tekeli; Count Staremberg attended Palaſſi-Imbre, whoſe Deſign was to enter into Moravia, and by a Detachment from his Army, overthrew three thouſand Men Commanded by Petrozzi, who with much difficulty made his eſcape.

The Emperor being ſenſible that his Enemies increas'd, and that frequent loſſes enfeebled and abated his Army, caus'd ſeveral New Regiments to be rais'd, the Officers of which were all choſen and put in by Father Emeric the Emperor's Confeſſor, and Abelé the Chief Secretary of State, by which two the good Emperor was entirely directed, and govern'd, which General Montecuculi having obſerv'd, and how Men were preferr'd by favour only to Great Commands, who were neither Soldiers, nor capable of thoſe Truſts, he took the freedom to adviſe the Emperor, that in the choice of his New Officers, reſpect was had to Favour, rather than unto Merit; and that little good Succeſs could be expected from ſuch unable and improper Inſtruments. The Authority of ſo Wiſe a Miniſter of State, and ſo Old a Captain, prevail'd ſo far with his Imperial Majeſty, that the former Commiſſions granted by Recommendations of Father Emeric were call'd in, and others iſſued, unto ſuch who were Warranted and Montecuculi's Counſel to the Emperor.

Vouch'd

1681.

Various Succeſſes, and Chances of War.

Vouch'd by more competent Judges of Military Affairs.

Towards the end of this Campaign, Fortune ſeem'd to favour both ſides with various Succeſſes; what the Emperor gain'd in one Place, the Malecontents recover'd in another; ſo that all Countries were fill'd with Blood, and Ruine, and Deſtruction of the People, without any hopes or proſpect of coming to a concluſion. Upon conſideration of which, the Pious Emperor commiſerating the Afflictions of his People, reſolv'd to make one Trial and Eſſay more, to ſee if it were poſſible to bring Matters to an end, by way of an Amicable Agreement; and to that purpoſe, he conven'd a Diet at Oedemburg, where the Malecontents gave in theſe Grievances, made in Tranſilvania, and Written Originally in Latin.

1681.

Overtures of Peace made by the Emperor.

Gravamina

GRAVAMINA

Binarum Superioris Hungariæ Regiarum ac Liberarum, Caſſovienſis & Epperienſis, Civitatum Articularium, quibus ibidem degentes Univerſi Cives & Incolæ Trium Nationum Evangelici, partim in negotio Religionis Evangelico, partim Libertate Civili-Politica, contra 25, 26, & 41 Articulos Diætæ Sopronienſis Anni 1681. graviter injuriati eſſent, cum adjunctis eorum Poſtulatis.

Quoad Negotium Religionis.

1681. PRIMO, Nemo ibit inficias, præattacto 26 Articulo Sopronienſi ſpeciali ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ Gratia, per expreſſum hiſce formalibus verbis, In aliis vero locis, juxta benignam ſuæ Majeſtatis Reſolutionem loca pro ædificandis Templis, Scholis, & Parochiis erigendis, pro commoditate eorundem Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ Confeſſioni addictorum, per certos Commiſſarios deſignanda decernuntur, Sancitum eſſe, ut Evangelicis, ademptorum templorum, ſcholarum, & parochiarum loco, per ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ deſtinatos certos Commiſſarios, loca commoda, & congrua, & quidem citra aliquam locorum exterorum reſtrictionem, in ipſis civitatibus ſuperioris Hungariæ, juxta genuinum & literalem dicti Articuli itæ ſonantis Clauſulæ ſenſum, Ac tandem in liberis ac Montanis Civitatibus, &c. ac in Superiore Hungaria omnibus itidem civitatibus ſimiliter loca pro ædificandis templis, ſcholis, & parochiis aſſignanda conceduntur, Deſignentur & aſſignentur; tantum tamen abeſt ut initio menſis Januarii Anno adhuc, 1687. dudum tranſactis in ſuperiorem Hungariam clementiſſime ordinata Excelſa Commiſſio Regia huic ſuæ Majeſtis pientiſſimæ reſolutioni expreſſiſſimæq; & claræ menti ejuſdem articuli ſatisfeciſſet, ut potius maximo horum cum abuſu perplacentiq; ſua interpretatione, & evidentiſſima liberi ejuſdem Exercitii Evangelici, è meditullio memoratarum civitatum, eliminatione, loca incommoda & dedecoroſa, extraq; dictas civitates, nulla ſuburbia habentes, adeo remota exiſtentia campeſtria, iiſdem Evangelicis deſignaſſet.

Proinde & ſanctiſſimæ eatenus declaratæ ſuæ Majeſtatis reſolutioni, & expreſſiſſimis allegati Articuli verbis; Firmiter inſiſtentes, virtute horum commemoratorum deſignatorum inconvenientium locorum totalem Ceſſationem, aliorum verò commodorum & congruorum à quibuſlibet cenſibus & contributionibus Civilibus ad mentem Articulorum 8, 1647. & 12, 1649. Annorum, eximendorum in memoratis civitatibus, earundemq; mæniis, ita citra ullam ambiguitatem ſenſus, innuente Artic. præcitato 26. interiora Civitatum loca, non verò exteriora involvente, ſibi, ceu veris legitimis Patriæ civibus, tam immerita è meditullio Civitatum relegatione haud dignis deſignandorum juſtiſſimam conceſſionem, & benigniſſimam aſſignationem humillime exorarent. 1681.

Secundo: Innegabile etiam eſt articulo antecedenti 25 æque ad benigniſſimam ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ Reſolutionem Clariſſimis his verbis, Omnibus & ubiq; per regnum (nullis ſcilicet Regnicolis Evangelicis, cujuſcunque tandem ſtatus & conditionis exiſtentibus, ſed nec ullo regni loco exceptis) juxta artic. 1. Anni 1608, ante Coronationem editum, liberum Religionis ſuæ exercitium in genere permiſſum; ac inſimul ut nullus regnicolarum in libero religionis ſuæ exercitio in poſterum quoquomodo (ſub ſevera alioquin pœna attacto 26 Artic. Sopronienſi expreſſe allegata) turbetur, Cautum eſſe: Eo tamen nihil penſi ducto, ubi iidem Evangelici Caſſovienſes & Epperienſes diplomatico hoc eorundem exercitii jure, quo ab antiquo ſemper publice uſi fuiſſent, de cætero quoq; intra eaſdem civitates earumq; mænia (tanquam loca, ut præmiſſum, articularia primituſq; etiam ſolita & conſueta) vel in privata etiam domo ritu ſuo cum actibus ſuis miniſterialibus, congrua item iuventutis Scholaſtica informatione, aliiſq; libere uti & frui idemq; continuare voluiſſent; per magiſtratum & clerum locorum, nullatenus ſunt admiſſi, verum ſevere prohibiti & interdicti; iiſdem ceu alienigenis, communiumq; regni libertatum incapacibus, ad ſupra ſpecificata incompetentia loca, impræſentiarum uſq; relegatis & amandatis.

Quare hic quoq; nixi benigniſſima ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ Reſolutione & Articulari indultu legalem omnino liberi religionis Evangelicæ exercitii, ad mentem citati articuli 1. An. 1608. priori ſuo ſtatui, intra mænia nimirum dictarum civitatum fiendam reductionem & reſtitutionem ſtabilemq; & firmam conſervationem:

1681. ſervationem: ad uſq; verò commodam & opportunam erectionem & ædificationem novorum templorum, ſcholarum, parochiarum (cum iiſdem pro nunc ob ſummam pauperiem, & graves portionum, bellicarumq; contributionum penſiones non ſufficerent,) ejusdem exercitii ibidem interea in certis privatis commodis ædibus ex integro cum convenienti Juventutis ſcholaſticæ hactenus imperturbata inſtitutione, imperturbati uſus & fruitionis æquiſſimam permiſſionem, & gratioſiſſimam facultatis attributionem dimiſſiſſime implorarent.

Tertio: Certum pariter campanarum & ſepulturæ præprimis communem & indifferentem uſum ſæpe attacto 26 Articulo Sopronienſi, expreſſis verbis, Uſu Campanarum & Sepulturæ pro Catholicis ibidem degentibus, æq; ac ipſis (ſcil. Auguſtanæ ac Helveticæ Confeſſioni addictis) libero relicto, æque Evangelicis atque Catholicis ubilibet liberum eſſe admiſſum & relictum: Evangelicis nihilominus Caſſovienſibus & Epperienſibus per Magiſtratum Catholicum, & clerum locorum ſimpliciſſime eſt denegatum, denegaturq; adhuc dum Funerum porro eorundem intra mœnia præfatarum civitatum cum ſolitis ſuis cantibus, aliiſq; conſuetis ceremoniis, condecens & publica deductio & ſepultura, æque contra clementiſſimam ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ inclytis ſtatibus & ordinibus Regni, publica in Diæta Sopronienſi, 1681. die decimo menſ. Decemb. gratioſiſſime alias datam reſolutionem, iiſdem ſevera cum comminatione cavetur, & plane non admittitur.

Hinc, in eo etiam Articularem Campanarum communem uſum funerumq; Evangelicorum tam intra, quam extra civitatum mænia, juxta pientiſſimæ ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ Diætaliter, ut attactam datæ Reſolutionis confirmitatem, publice & imperturbate deducendorum, antea quoq; ſolitam & conſuetam admiſſionem inſtantiſſime paterent.

Quarto, Manifeſtum quoq; vi ſimiliter ſæpius citati Artic. 26. ad finem adjectæ generalis clauſulæ, Salvis ſemper eatenus legibus Regni Diplomate Regio firmatis, Quoad ulteriores Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ Confeſſioni addictorum legitimarum prætenſionum ſuarum promovendarum Acquiſitiones, ablatorumq; repetitiones, conditas leges Regni, ſalvas & illibatas relictas, conſequenterq; quoſlibet Potentiarios actus prohibitos eſſe, adeoq; nullo etiam (lege jure naturæ, 206. A. de Reg. Jur.) ut contra ductum naturæ, cum alterius detrimento & injuria fieri debeat locuples, admitti his nihilominus non curatis, præattactorum utrorumq; locorum Civilis Magiſtratus Catholicus & Clerus, propria duntaxat licentia omnia Caſſovienſium & Epperienſium Evangelicorum pia legata, & certa dona poſſeſſionaria, ex pio Evangelicorum zelo ad Eccleſiarum & Scholarum ſuarum neceſſitates 1681. & uſus teſtamentaliter ordinata & collata, cætum præciſe Evangelicum concernentia, (Caſſovienſibus ſiquidem quatuor domos, intra mœnia ejuſdem Civitatis ſituatas, quarum unam dictus loci Magiſtratus egregio Michaeli Dómeczki judicatus ſui in Officio jam vendidiſſet, & abalienaſſet: Unum adhæc hortum, & certas terras arabiles in territorio ejuſdem Civitatis exiſtentes; prout & unam vineam, alias Varghaſzóló dictam, in promontorio Tokayienſi adjacentem: Epperienſibus vero certas itidem vineas, diverſis in promontoriis partium ſuperioris Hungariæ ſituatas, una cum reditibus & proventibus) via facti & potentiæ occuparunt, & ad ſe pertraxerunt, quæ de facto violenter tenerent, uſuarent, & majori ex parte in prophanos uſus contra ſenſum Articulorum 11 & 14 Anno 1647. ſumma cum Evangelicorum injuria & damno converterent, nec ipſi reſtituerent.

Quotirca hoc in caſu etiam ad præſcriptam legem & Conſtitutiones Regni provocantibus, præmiſſorum violenter ademptorum, occupatorum, & tentorum omnium piorum legatorum & bonorum poſſeſſionariorum Evangelicorum, (ſua, non aliena, repetentium) cum ſuis reditibus, & proventibus, ex dictamine etiam communis juſtitiæ, unicuique ſuum tribuentis, effectivam & realem rehabitionem & reſtitutionem jure merito impenſe ſollicitarent.

Quinto: Conſtat ſimiliter, quoad ſolutionem Catholicorum Plebanorum & Miniſtrorum Evangelicorum non ſolum ſæpedicto 26. Artic. Clariſſimis verbis, Interea nec Catholici Miniſtris Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ Confeſſioni addictis, nec vero horum ſequaces Plébanis Catholicis ſolvere obligentur: Sed ad mentem etiam ibidem citati 11 Artic. 1647 anni, Ne Evangelici ſtatus Catholicis Plebanis, & è converſo ſtatus Catholicus Evangelicis Miniſtris ad ullas ſolutiones pendendas ſint obligati, Satis evidenter proviſum eſſe, Immo ſubſequenti 12 Artic. dicti Anno 1647, quoad Actuum Miniſterialium quoſlibet uſus expreſſa per hæc verba, Ubi vero parochias non haberent Auditores Evangelici, ſolutionem pendant ſuæ Religionis Miniſtris, cujus videlicet Miniſterio, ſeu opera, uſi fuerint, ſicut & Catholici parochis Catholicis: Ubi autem hactenus auditores Evangelici non ſolviſſent plebanis Catholicis, impoſterum etiam ad nullas ſolutiones præſtandas ullo ſub prætextu cogantur ad ſolvendum, prout nec Catholici Evangelicis.

Quoad ſtolarium vero proventuum ſolutiones, vigore ejuſdem Artic. 11, ſubſequentium verborum tenore, Stolares autem proventus, ſeu

1681. ſeu ſolutiones, in quibuſvis locis Plebani Catholici & Miniſtri Evangelici à ſuæ Religionis auditoribus totaliter percipiant.

Poſitivam exſtare legem & conſtitutionem, ut Evangelici Evangelicis, & Catholici Catholicis ſolvant : His tamen non obſtantibus, ad ſolvendum præciſe Catholicis Plebanis aliiſque, inviti coguntur Evangelici : Dum non ſolum ſalarium hebdomadale cum aliis accidentiis, ex publico civitatum ærario, (in quod Evangelici numero & frequentia Catholicis triplo Majores ac plures, ut plurimum inferunt) per Magiſtratus locorum Catholicis Plebanis continue penditur, ſed & ſtolares etiam proventus præciſe pro iiſdem vendicati & attracti ipſis ſolvuntur : Evangelicis vero Eccleſiæ Miniſtris & Scholæ docentibus maxima cum injuria denegantur.

Eapropter quoad æqualitatem & æquitatem ſalariorum hoc in paſſu quoque non citra legalem rationem, uti Catholicis Plebanis, aliiſque, ita etiam Evangelicis Miniſtris & Scholæ docentibus, ex communibus proventibus, publicoque civitatum ærario, parem & coæqualem, citra ullam difficultatem pendendam exſolutionem : Secuſne utri partium adminiſtrandam ſolutionem, verum ad mentem præcitatorum articulorum, ut quilibet ſtatus ſuos interteneat & exſolvat ſibi ſervientes, iiſque etiam ſuos pendat ſtolares proventus, clementiſſimam, juſtitiæque & juri conſonam Conſtitutionem efflagitarent quam ſubjectiſſime.

Sexto : Cuilibet in propatulo publicum eſt, vi Artic. 25 Prædicantibus & Scholarum Magiſtris non ſolum liberum in regnum reditum, liberamq; in Regno manſionem, ſed & liberam Religionis ſuæ profeſſionem & exercitii functionem conceſſam : Adhæcq; in partibus Hungariæ ſuperioribus vi ſubſequentis 26 Artic. inter ceteras Regias ac liberas Civitates Caſſovienſem quoque & Epperienſem Civitates pro locis Articularibus, libere & publice ibidem Religionem Evangelicam exercendi, conſtitutas, & ſtabilitas, adeoque, ut poſthac nullæ exercitii turbationes ab utrimque, ſub pœna in Artic. 8 Uladiſlai Decret. 6. expreſſa fiant, definitum eſſe. Civitatis nihilominus Epperienſis Magiſtratus eo proceſſit licentiæ, quod omnes trium nationum Evangelicos Miniſtros, citra alicujus promeritæ cauſſæ ſignificationem, vel alicujus benigni ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ mandati productionem prætextuoſo ſolum ut inauditum, titulo Dominii terreſtris (quod nullum omnino vel in civiles, ſemper pari cum eodem Magiſtratu communi civili libertate gaudentes, nedum ſpirituales, ſpeciali libertate exemptas Eccleſiaſticas perſonas haberet, ſed nec etiam quoquomodo ſibi vendicare poſſet, anniverſario, eoque ambulatorio Officio gaudens) auſu proprio & privato, maxima ſuæ Cæſareo Regiæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ Authoritatis cum diminutione, præſpecificatorumque articulorum vilipendio, eadem Civitate, ejuſdemque territorio ipſo feſto S. Bartholomæi Apoſtoli Anni præteriti 1688, ſummo cum dedecore expulerit Articularemq; eccleſiam Epperienſem Evangelicam ſuis Miniſtris, maximo ejuſdem in ſpiritualibus exercitiis cum defectu & damno orbaverit & privaverit.

Ob id inſontium & innocue exturbatorum exulantium Miniſtorum Evangelicorum Epperienſium ad priora eorundem defungenda munia Eccleſiaſtica, realem & effectivam reſtitutionem, nullamque amplius quorumcunque admittendam expulſionem : Quin, qua horum Epperienſium, qua Caſſovienſium etiam Eccleſiaſticorum Miniſtrorum Scholæ docentium Evangelicorum, uti præſentium, ita & futurorum, vi juris patronatus ſemper vocandorum, in domiciliis & reſidentiis ſuis, ſive propriis, ſive conductitiis, intra mœnia earundem civitatum habentibus & habendis, ſecure & imperturbate ſemper permanendi & habitandi, benigniſſimam conceſſionem, eorundemque perpetuam protectionem, devotiſſimis ſupplicarent precibus.

Quoad libertatem porro Civilem-Politicam.

Septimo : Nemo niſi legum expers negaverit, initio ſpecificato 41 Artic. Diætæ Sopronienſis, gratioſiſſima Regiarum ac liberarum Civitatum Communium libertatum ac privilegiorum Confirmatione, deſuperq; ibidem allegatarum, ac paſſim etiam conditarum legum & Articulorum Regni renovatione expreſſe conſtitutum eſſe. Ut eædem leges & articuli tam per Cameras, quam Officiales bellicos, ac alios quoſcunque ſtrictiſſime obſerventur ; neque (eædem ſcil. liberæ ac Regiæ Civitates) in libero Electionis Magiſtratus Civilis jure ac aliis Privilegiis, ipſorum longo uſu roboratis, à quopiam quoquo modo turbentur.

Adhæc tamen moderans memoratarum Civitatum Magiſtratus, ingeſſione inclytæ Cameræ Scepuſienſis Artic. 83.1647 anni, alias prohibita, tantam ſibi vendicavit pro lubitu agendi licentiam, ut jam omnes Caſſovienſes & Epperienſes Senatores, alioſque Officiales Evangelicos ad publica officia & dignitates civiles gerendas bene meritos & aptos, ex mero duntaxat privato affectu ergu Religionem, contra manifeſtas præfati Artic. ibidemque citatorum ſignanter vero Artic. 13. 1608 ante Coronationem 44. 1609 & 12. 1649. annorum conſtitutiones, apertiſſimo, communium libertatum & privilegiorum civilium cum præjudicio, notabili verò Evangelicorum civium oppreſſione à publicis dignitatibus & honoribus, officiiſque civilibus degradaverint & removerint : horumque loco aut minus idoneos aut negotia civitatum nihil intelligentes, magiſque privata curantes cives Catholicos, ſumma dictarum civitatum cum ruina damnificatione, & interitu, ſurrogaverit & conſtituerit, Quamobrem Primo : Liberi 1681. Magiſtratum & Communitatem civiles eligendi juris, hactenus diverſimode, contra præſpecificatas leges Regni poſitivas, per inclytam Cameram Scepuſienſem interturbati, ac ex parte Evangelicorum penitus everſi, unice & mere penes eaſdem Civitates, earundemque utriuſq; Religionis Catholicæ & Evangelicæ juratos cives permanendi priori ſuo ſtatui admittendam reductionem ſolidamque conſervationem, nulloque amplius modo ejuſdem, à quopiam ſub pœna alioquin renovatorum, ſuperiuſque annotatorum Articulorum intentandam interturbationem.

Secundo: Civilis mutuæ concordiæ conſervandæ, nocivarumque diſſenſionum & ſimultatum fomitum reprimendarum gratia eorundem Magiſtratuum & Communitatum civilium, abſque ullo Catholicæ & Evangelicæ Religionis diſcrimine, ex honeſtis, benè meritis, iiſque aptis juratis civibus, fiendam liberam Electionem officiorumque, & quarumvis aliarum dignitatum civilium, ad mentem præſpecificatorum Articulorum 13. 1608. ante Coronationem, & 44. 1609. annorum indifferentem & coæqualem collationem & diſtributionem, mutuamque ad honores civiles publicos promotionem.

Tertio: Obſervandæ alternatæ æqualitatis, bonique civitatum publici cauſſa, judicatus & Tribunatus officiorum, juxta præcitatorum & 12 Artic. 1649. anni ſenſum, alternatim & mixtim annualiter gerendorum, gratioſiſſimam annuentiam & permiſſionem, profundiſſima animorum cum humilitate rogarent & poſtularent.

Prærepetitarum Liberarum ac Regiarum Caſſovienſis & Epperienſis Civitatum Univerſi Cives & Incolæ trium Nationum Evangelici.

Gravamen Regiæ Liberæq; Civitatis Carponenſis Evangelicorum.

NOn ſine gravi animi dolore ſuæ Majeſtati Sereniſſimæ repræſentandum quoque duxerunt Regiæ ac liberæ Civitatis Carponenſis univerſi Nobiles pariter & ignobiles, Præſidiarij item, ſeu Confiniarij utriuſque ordinis ſtipendiarij milites, incolæ ſimul & cives Evangelici: Quod dum juxta benigniſſimam ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ reſolutionem, Artic. 26, Sopronienſis Diætæ Anni 1681. clementiſſime inſertam, inter alia inclyti Regni Hungariæ loca, pro ædificandis novis Templis, Scholis, & Parochiis erigendis, pro commoditate Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ confeſſioni addictorum per Commiſſarios deſignanda, per expreſſum nomine tenus his verbis: In Generalatu Antemontano, Levæ, Carponæ, & Fulekini, &c.

Eadem civitas pro Articulari loco, libere, & ex integro ibidem Religionis Evangelicæ exercitium uſuandi & fruendi fuiſſet, eſſetque declarata, & ſtabilita; excelſa, nihilominus Commiſſio Regia anno præterito 1688, ad montanas Civitates ordinata ad memoratam quoque civitatem deveniens, neſcitur quibus ex rationibus, ubi ad mentem præcitai Articuli & clementiſſimæ ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ ibidem contentæ reſolutionis & declarationis loco ademti templi, ſcholæ, & parochiæ Evangelicorum pro commoditate præſpecificatorum ibidem exiſtentium & commorantium Auguſtanæ Confeſſioni addictorum, alia loca omnino commoda & apta ad mentem Articuli 19. 1647. deſignare & ordinare, eoſdemque in pacifico uſu ejuſdem exercitij imperturbatos relinquere debuiſſet, remotis potius in contrarium ab Officio ejuſdem Eccleſiæ Evangelicæ Miniſtris, & Scholæ docentibus, univerſos nobiles pariter & ignobiles, quæ præſidiarios, qua incolas & cives Evangelicos à continuo libero eorundem uſu & exercitio, à memoria hominum ibidem practicato & habito, in eodemque uſu reali, ut præmiſſum, articulariter relicto, certo licet eum reſpirio, ad ulteriorem nimirum ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ benigniſſimam reſolutionem, & gratiam, maximo tamen exercitij ſpiritualis, nullam moram patientis, cum præjudicio, optimique ejuſdem juris Articularis verbo & indultu Regio firmati cum derogamine, ſevera ſub comminatione inhibuit, & penitus abſtinere coëgit. Inhærendo proinde firmiſſime Regio huic & articulari indulto, peterent inſtantiſſime, ſibi in eadem civitate, ejuſdemque mœniis, non ſolum loca ædificandor. Templi, Parochiæ & Scholæ commoda & idonea per quos intereſt, deſignari, & exſcindi, verumetiam articulare eorundem liberum Religionis exercitium cum communi & indifferenti Campanarum & ſepulturæ uſu, ita dictante etiam præallegato 26 Artic. Sopronienſ. ſuo priſtino ſtatui & ordini reddi, reduci & reſtitui. 1681.

Gravamina regiarum & liberarum Veterozolienſis, Breznobanienſis & Libethbanienſis Civitatum Evangelicorum.

ÆQue lamentabili cum querimonia exponunt quoque earundem Regiarum & liberarum Civitatum univerſi Evangelici afflictiſſimam & infeliciſſimam ſuam in negotio Religionis ſuæ ſortem, ut qui tenore genuini & ſani ſenſus Articulorum Sopronienſium libero Religionis ſuæ exercitio omnibus & ubique per Regnum degentibus, juxta claram & evidentiſſimam Artic. 1. ante Coronationem 1608. editi, inque 25 Artic. Sopron. confirmati explicationem (nullo Regni ſtatu, minus quarto, qui Regiæ & liberæ Civitates Regni, qua peculia ſacræ Coronæ, indifferentèr eſſent Excluſo) benigniſſimo indulto & reſolutione Regiis, alias conceſſo & admiſſo, vel in privato ſaltem peragendo, privari minime potuiſſent, ſed nec debuiſſent; immo vero virtute ſubſequentis 26 Artic. Sopron. generaliter de civitatibus loquentis, ac non niſi in exemplum ex utroque ordine tam Montanarum binas, quam liberarum civitatum ſimiliter binas adducentis & denominantis, pro ſe quoque erigendorum novorum templorum, Parochiarum & Scholarum, loca commoda & convenientia, ab ordinata Anno 1688. Regia Commiſſione obtentum & aſſignatum iri, certo ſperaſſent; horum tamen nihil conſequuti, in majorem ſui aggravationem, & Religionis ſuæ apertiſſimum exterminium, amotis, & exturbatis per eandem Commiſſionem Regiam, omnibus ordinariis Evangelicæ Eccleſiæ eorundem Miniſtris, totali libertate exercitij Religionis privati & prohibiti eſſent: Univerſis actibus Miniſterialibus Eccleſiaſticis alibi locorun apud Evangelicos uti volentibus, ſevere interdictis; è converſo omnibus ſtolaribus Proventibus, ſicut & aliis ſolutionibus Evangelicos Miniſtros præciſe concernentibus, pro introductis Plebanis, paucos omnino in Veterozolienſi & Breznobanienſi, Libethbanienſi vero Civitatibus noniſi unum cives & incolas Catholicos habentibus contra expreſſam annuentiam Articulorum 11 & 12. Anno 1647. invitis Evangelicis, inconſuete, viaque facti vendicatis & attractis, adhæc quoque Inhabitatores & cives, ſine diſcrimine, ac potiſſimum opifices & Mechanicos Evangelicos ad Cæremonias Religioni ipſorum contrarias compellere omnimode conantibus, nec de facto deſiſtentibus. Ob id, pro Articulari liberi exercitij beneficio, pariterque ceu aliis ita his quoque civitatibus, pari libertate cum iiſdem gaudentibus, nec hoc in paſſu deterioris eſſe conditionis valentibus, locorum novis templis, ſcholis, & Parochis erigendis, & ædificandis omnino commodorum & idoneorum gratioſiſſima admiſſione & per quos intereſt exciſione, ſicq; integrali eorundem reſtitutione, quam demiſſiſſime inſtarent.

Gravamina Liberarum ac Regiarum Civitatum Sancti Georgij, Bazingæ, Tyrnaviæ, Szakolizæ, Kúſzegh, & Ruſzt.

LAmentabiliter deplorant & exponunt iſtæ liberæ & Regiæ Civitates afflictum & turbatum Religionis ſuæ ſtatum, adeoq; infelicitatem, ubi quamvis juxta genuinum ſenſum articulorum Sopronienſium in hac Religionis Materia conditorum libero Religionis exercitio omnibus & ubique per Regnum degentibus, &c. conceſſo & admiſſo exiſtente, eo magis clariori hujus Articuli 25. explicatione in confirmato ibidem Anno 1608. Artic. 1. ante coronationem contentæ, ne quidem hæ Civitates libertate hac exercitij vel in privato ſaltem peragenda, privari poſſent ac deberent: imo beneficio articuli ſubſequentis 26. Sopron. generaliter de Civitatibus loquentis, loca templis, Parochiis & Scholis apud ſe erigendis ſibi aſſignatum iri omnino ſperaſſent, nihil tamen præmiſſorum obtinuerunt: quin potius pro majori ſui aggravatione, & extrema Religionis ſuæ internecione totale exercitium Religionis ſuæ inhibitum: Miniſtri ipſorum amoti & exturbati, ita ut ne Civitates quidem iſtas iis ingredi liceat. Frequentatio talium locorum, ubi adhuc Religionis exercitium vigeret, Baptiſmatumque, & aliorum Eccleſiaſticorum rituum ibidem uſus & acceptatio abſolute graviſſimis ſub pœnis inhibita, adeoque ad infirmos ſuos, & in agone conſtitutos admiſſio Miniſtrorum Evangelicorum in totum vetita, generaliter vero totale exercitium Religionis ſuæ contra ſenſum præſcriptorum articulorum denegatum, ex adverſo vero Inhabitatores Evangelici ad cæremonias contrarias compelluntur. Pro cujus exercitij liberi articulari beneficio, ſimulque ad inſtar aliarum Civitatum locorum erigendis Templis, Parochiis, & Scholis commodorum admiſſione & exciſione (cum una libertate gaudentes cum aliis, ne in hoc quidem ſequior ipſorum conditio eſſe debeat) humillime ſupplicant.

Gravamina Liberarum ac Regiarum Trenchinienſis & Modrenſis Civitatum.

DOlenter ſane conqueruntur hæ duæ liberæ & Regiæ Civitates, quod quidem beneficio Articuli 26 diætæ Sopronienſis, loca ædificandis templo, Parochiæ & Scholis iiſdem exciſa & aſſignata per Dominos Commiſſarios eſſent, atque liberum exercitium Religionis ſuæ permiſſum; circa hujus tamen nonnulla Eſſentialia requiſita & neceſſaria ipſos plane extra articulariter, imo contra genuinum ſenſum eorundem articulorum per eoſdem Commiſſarios eſſe circumſcriptos & coarctatos. Et primo quidem circa Miniſtros ſuos, ſeu prædicantes, qui ad certum numerum eſſent reſtricti: imo ut defuncto, & è vivis excedente eorundem aliquo, expoſt alterum in ejus locum introducere non liceat. Vicinorum & circumjacentium locorum Evangelici (quibus etiam vi præcedentis 25 Artic. generalis clauſulæ, Omnibus & ubique per regnum degentibus, &c. liberum etiam exercitium conceſſum fuiſſet) ne Miniſterio & ſacris eorum uti audeant & talia loca frequentent ſerio interdictum. Ipſis denique Miniſtris viſitatio infirmorum extraneorum & in agone conſtitutorum, ſtrictiſ-

1681. ſime inhibita. Opifices & Mechanici contra ſimiliter mentem dicti Artic. 25. ad cæremonias ſibi contrarias, proceſſiones quippe, & ad has conſuetorum vexillorum comparationem ſub gravi mulcta compelluntur. Baptiſmata, & alij ritus Eccleſiæ circumjacentibus Pagis adminiſtrari vetiti. Plebano catholico ex publico proventu Civitatis ſalarium ordinatum, Evangelico vero ex propria auditorum pecunia, ſicut & Scholæ Rectori, ut ſolvatur. Scholæ ſimiliter triviales tantum, id eſt, aliquantum legere & ſcribere tradentes conceſſæ: ſuper cujuſmodi circumſcriptionibus, ſiquidem præſcripti Articuli omnino ſilerent, ſingulas tales difficultates & gravamina ſua ad genuinum ſenſum eorundem articulorum & aliorum per hos confirmatorum, accommodanda & reducenda, humillime inſtant.

Gravamina ſuperioris Regni Hungariæ, Zemplinienſis, Abavyvarienſis, Unghvarienſis, Saaroſſienſis, Thornenſis, &c. Comitatuum inſimulque oppidorum ſubmontanorum, in Dominio Rákocziano exiſtentium Nobilium & Ignobilium Incolarum Evangelicorum.

C*Um maxima ſui oppreſſione repræſentare coguntur iidem Evangelici ſuæ Majeſtati Sereniſſimæ, quod quamvis ſua Majeſtas Sereniſſima, in Artic.* 26. Sopronienſis diætæ, duobus in locis, primum quidem tenore ſubſequentium expreſſiſſimorum verborum, In aliis verò Comitat. veluti in Szalodienſi, Veſprinienſi, Jaurienſi, Comaronienſi, Abavyvarienſi, Saaroſſienſi, Zemplinienſi, Ugoczienſi, Bereghienſi, Thornenſi, Honchenſi, Neogradienſi, Szolnock & Heves, nec non Peſth, Pilis & Soldt unitis, item Szubolczenſi, Ungh & Szathmarienſi, ſiquidem de præſenti eſſent in actuali uſu omnium fere templorum ibidem habitorum, ideo eadem pro actualibus eorundem poſſeſſionibus uſuanda relicta ſunt. Expoſt verò ſubſequentis ſimiliter Articularis clauſulæ; Templa demum, in quorum actuali poſſeſſione iidem Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ Confeſſioni addicti de facto ſunt, modo prævio præ manibus eorundem, una cum Parochiis & Scholis, proventibus que eorundem propter bonum pacis, ut nimirum quietè & pacificè vivant, relinquuntur, ſeſe benigniſſime reſolvere dignata fuerit, præviis in comitatibus univerſa Templa, Parochias & Scholas cum ſuis proventibus propter bonum pacis, unionis, internamque tranquillitatem Regni publicam præ manibus ibidem exiſtentium & degentium Evangelicorum actualiter relinquenda & pacifice uſuanda, poſitiva lege clementiſſime conſtituerit: eo nihilominus non obſtante, in Comitatibus ſignanter Abavyvarienſi, Saaroſſienſi, Zemplinienſi, Thornenſi & Ungh exiſtentia Evangelicorum templa potiori ex parte per eoſdem Evangelicos aut fundamentaliter erecta, aut ex imis ruderibus re-ædificata, Scholæ item & Parochiæ, una cum eorundem proventibus, ſimiliter per Evangelicos teſtamentaliter collatis & applicatis, nec unquam per dominos Catholicos poſſeſſis, contra apertiſſimum ejuſdem articuli Sopronienſis ſenſum, gratioſiſſimamque ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ, occaſione etiam & beneficio noviſſimæ Poſonienſis diætæ in conſolationem ſtatus Evangelici renovatam & ratificatam reſolutionem, in dominio præſertim Rakocziano, oppidis Comitatus Zemplinienſis, nominanter Szantho, Thallia, Môd, Keretzthur, Tarczal, Liſzka, Benye, Toleſcua, Ughelly, Patak, Borſſy, (quæ quidem oppida tum tempore conditi præſpecificati Articuli Sopronienſis, quam expoſt etiam in actuali pacifico dominio Templorum, Parochiarum & Scholarum ſuarum fuiſſent, ac ulterius etiam vigore ejuſdem articuli imperturbate perſiſtere debuiſſent) prout & confinio Tokay (alias per eundem articulum in dominio ſui templi per expreſſum relicto & denominato,) pagiſque quamplurimis in eodem dominio exiſtentibus, ipſis Evangelicis per inſpectores eorundem bonorum Manifeſta vi adempta ſunt.

His accederet, quod contra apertiſſimum Sopronienſis ſimiliter Articuli 25 ſenſum, præſpecificatorum oppidorum in attacto comitatu Zemplinienſi exiſtentium Incolæ tam nobiles, quam alterius etiam conditionis poſt memoratam occupationem templorum, apud privatas domos quoque continuatum Religionis ſuæ exercitium, alia virtute Artic. 1. Anno 1608. ante Coronationem editi, ad quem ſe idem 25. Sopronienſis diætæ articulus manifeſtè referret, tam in Fiſci Regij, quam aliorum Dominorum Baronum ac Magnatum bonis liberum relictum, ſeveriſſimis ſub minis ſeponere tam hactenus coacti ſunt, quam de præſenti etiam coguntur.

Prædicantes verò eorum benigniſſima ſuæ Maieſtatis Sereniſſimæ reſolutione, vigore præſcripti 25. Artic. ab exilio revocati, intra præfixos jam aliquot vicibus terminos, ſub amiſſione bonorum & capitis, è dominio eodem aut exire, aut reverſalibus ad nulla umquam munia Eccleſiaſtica ibidem exercenda ſub eadem cautione ſeſe obnoxios reddere coguntur.

Præter hæc, quamvis præcitati Articuli Sopronienſis, & quidem 25. ne Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ confeſſioni addicti ad cæremonias religioni ſuæ contrarias quoquo modo compellantur: Articulus verò 26. ne Catholici Miniſtris Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ confeſſioni addictis, nec verò horum ſequaces Plebanis Catholicis ad mentem Artic. 11. 1647. ſolvere obligentur,

1681. obligentur, manifeſte declararent; tamen in utroque, & præſertim in ſolutione Plebanis Catholicis ſienda, militari quoque brachio aſſumpto, in contrarium coguntur.

Quin utut tenore ſæpius allegati Artic. 26. uſus ſepulturæ & campanarum indifferenter, uti Catholocis ita & Evangelicis eſſet liber relictus, nihilominus exſanguia Evangelicorum corpora contra ipſum jus Chriſtianitatis in ſolito ſepulturæ loco terræ mandari impediuntur. Sed nec uſus campanarum per Evangelicos licet comparatarum, & fieri curatarum, ipſis admittitur. Imo, quod manifeſtam omnino perſecutionem Evangelicorum ſaperet, ipſis quoque Nobilibus certa bona quamvis exemptitia, & jure etiam Regio confirmata intra corpus præattacti dominij Ragotzkiani poſſidentibus, ac alterius etiam conditionis hominibus, niſi profeſſioni ſuæ Evangelicæ reſenſerint, ac renunciaverint exterminatio & excluſio de Bonis iiſdem, in eodem dominio habitis, per inſpectorem bonorum Rakotzkianorum identidem minitatur. Non abſimiliter in Comitatu Abavyvarienſi proviſor bonorum Regeczianorum in bonis iiſdem per certas ſuas literas Evangelici exercitij cultum interdixit, ac intra quotuordecim dies Parochis Evangelicis migrationem è bonis iiſdem ſub amiſſione bonorum & capitis intimavit, vel ſi ad modum privatorum ſecularium ibidem remanere vellent, ſtrictiſſimis Reverſalibus ad nulla umquam munia Eccleſiaſtica ibidem ſub amiſſione pariter bonorum & capitis exercenda ſeſe adſtrictos reddere deſideravit, ac actu etiam templa in poſſeſſionibus Fony & Bodokáuyfalu una cum appertinentiis occupavit.

Pariter in ejuſdem Comitatus Abavyvarienſis oppido Sepſſy dicto, ubi nullis ſub prætextibus templum à poſſeſſoribus Evangelicis occupari potuiſſet, proventus decimales ex territorio ejuſdem oppidi Parocho Evangelico provenire ſoliti, ad intimationem inclytæ Cameræ Scepuſienſis per Triceſimatorem Sepſſienſem ſunt occupati, qui de facto etiam in ſequeſtro tenentur.

Æque in Comitatu Unghvarienſi in oppido Nogymihali, pagiſque Vinna & Sztara: ſicut & in Comitatu Saaroſſienſi, in poſſeſſionibus Tolczeck, Aſguth & Soovar, Evangelicorum templa, Parochiæ & Scholæ, cum univerſis appertinentiis præallegato Articulari modo actualem in uſum & poſſeſſionem Evangelicis relicta, per dominos Catholicos via facti ſunt adempta.

Denique in Comitatu Thornenſi, in poſſeſſione Somogy, medietas proventus, per certam conventionem jampridem initam Parocho Evangelico cedens, pariter adempta eſt.

Quæ omnia contra benigniſſimam ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ mentem & articularem reſolutionem adverſus ſupramemoratos Evangelicos, maxima optimorum jurium ſuorum Articularium cum injuria & everſione actu ipſo attentata exſtitiſſent, eadem uti firmiſſime crederent, cum reali & effectiva violenter ademptorum reſtitutione, ſuique redintegratione, adhæc introductorum abuſuum ſublatione clementiſſime remedenda, in paternum ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ ſinum humillime effuderunt. 1681.

Iidem præcitatorum Comitatuum ſuperioris Regni Hungariæ ac Oppidorum in dominio Rakocziano exiſtentium incolæ profeſſionis Evangelicæ.

Par ratio eſt Comitatuum Articularium Szalodienſis, Veſprinienſis, Jaurienſis, Comaronienſis, Bereghienſis, Szolnock, & Heves, Szatmarienſis item ac Peſth, ac Soldt unitorum.

Gravamina Univerſitatis Evangelicæ Nobilium in Comitatibus Lyptovienſi, Thurocʒienſi, Arvenſi, Trenchinienſi, Zolienſi, & Honthenſi exiſtentium, pro evidenti remonſtratione eorum, in quibuſnam iidem contra Articulos Sopronienſes in Negotio Religionis læſi & turbati eſſent: Quibus immediate ſubjunguntur etiam humillima Poſtulata eorundem, æque pro dictis Articulis conformitalium Gravaminum ſuorum mitigatione, reductione, & complanatione.

ET ſiquidem Lyptovienſis, & Thuroczienſis, Arvenſis, Trenchinienſis & Zolienſis Comitatuum Gravamina & querelæ in omnibus fere punctis ac difficultatibus conciderent, ac æqualiter procederent, brevitatis ergo hic etiam conjunguntur. Et hi quidem Comitatus manifeſte & merito in eo ſe injuriatos & turbatos querulantur, quod per illuſtriß. D. Comitem Georgium Ardody, qua Commiſſarium, & reliquos penes ſe habitos, contra genuinum ſenſum & tenorem dictorum articulorum Sopronienſium Miniſtri, ſeu Prædicantes eorum Evangelici, qui poſt occupationem in his Comitatibus univerſorum templorum vi articuli 26. Sopronienſis libero exercitio Religionis ad Reſidentias & Domos privatas Nobilium tranſlato exiſtente, vocationem & munia ſua taliter longo tempore peragebant omnes (præter duos inarticulariter denominatis locis relictos) extra Comitatum & locum, ubi tum manſiſſent, ſub quindena ſunt proſcripti & relegati; vel ſi eorum ali-

1681. quibus emigrare non placuiſſet, talibus Reverſales ſuper ſimplici abdicatione Miniſterii contra expreſſam in Artic. 25. ſimilium ceſſationem ſubſcribendæ propoſitæ, nec ſecus tolerandos ſtricte & ſub incaptivatione eorundem demandatum eſſet.

Scholæ non aliæ quam triviales vel ſicuti eadem Commiſſio explicaret, aliquantulum legere & ſcribere docentes, ac eæ quoque in locis ſaltem duobus Articulariter, ut præmiſſum denominatus permiſſæ: Cæteræ omnes clauſæ & interdictæ, ac Rectores paſſim exturbati, cum interim Artic. 25. tam Prædicantes, quam hos Officiis ſuis in integrum reſtituiſſet. Cultus & exercitium Religionis in domibus & reſidentiis Nobilium, oratoriis item & capellis, quales plurimæ darentur in dictis Comitatibus per Miniſtros Evangelicos peragendus ſtrictè prohibitus, miraque ſane circumſcriptione ita limitatus, ut ſiquis Nobilium in ædibus ſuis cultum Dei peragere velit, non alium quam unum ex duobus illis relictis Miniſtris accerſere, & eorum opera uti præſumat, idque pro ſua ſolum & famulitij ſui neceſſitate.

Solutiones qualeſcunque (extra ſtolares duorum ſaltem in quovis Comitatu aſſignatorum locorum) omnes Plebanis Catholicis exſolvendæ decretæ: Imo jam paſſim ubique militari aſſiſtentia mediante per Plebanos ab eo tempore extorquentur.

Villani, ſeu ruſtici, ab exercitio ſuæ Religionis, Baptiſmatum, Copulæ, Introductionum, Sepulturæ, ac Sacramentorum ſuo ritu percipiendorum uſu, frequentatione item Articulariter aſſignatorum locorum abſolute arcentur, & inhibentur: E contra verò ad Cæremonias ſibi contrarias per vim & fortia compelluntur.

Inſuper in Comitatu Thuroczienſi erunt templa in poſſeſſionibus Bella, Zaturcza, & Pribacz, Evangelicorum ſumptibus ædificata, & ante conditum Articulum non reconciliata, non habito tamen reſpectu articularis exceptionis ſub initium Artic. 26. appoſitæ, indiſcriminatim omnia ſunt occupata. Campanarum item & ſepulturæ uſus, niſi cum præſcitu & exſolutione Plebanorum permittitur.

In Comitatu Honthenſi verò, qui juxta Artic. 26. Sopronienſem Univerſa Templa (tamquam quæ tempore conditorum eorundem Articulorum præ manibus Evangelicorum fuiſſent, ac vi illius Articuli de cætero etiam uſui relinquenda innueretur) libere & pacifice poſſidere debuiſſent illuſtriſſimus D. Comes Volffgangus Kohary ejuſdem Comitatus ſupremus Comes ex delegatione (uti ſe declaravit) illuſtriſſimi D. Comitis præfati Georgij Erdodi, adjuncto ſibi vicecomite Comitatus, occupavit, excepto unico exili in contemptiſſimo pago Drieno dicto, non pridem per Evangelicos ædificato. Miniſtris præterea Evangelicis omnibus ſerio præcepit, ut Parochiis ac locis, ubi hactenus manſiſſent, actutùm excedunt, niſi incaptivari velint. Nobilibus quoque inhibitum, ipſos vel in privato quoque tolerare ullo modo audeant. Cum tamen Comitatus iſte nomine tenus in Articulo præſcripto in eo tum actualiter habito uſu templorum adtunc poſſeſſorum, ulterius etiam confirmaretur, ac ſtabiliretur. 1681.

Humillima eaque Articularia præmentionatorum Comitatuum Poſtulata hæc ſunt.

QUandoquidem ſua Majeſtas Sereniſſima tam per Confirmationem dictorum 25. & 26. Artic. diætæ Sopronienſis, in noviſſimà diæta Poſonienſi Artic. 21. 1687. editam, quam etiam rurſus in perſonali audientia Ablegatis præſcriptorum Comitatuum elargitam reſolutionem, prædictos Artic. in omnibus punctis & clauſulis ſe obſervaturam, & per alios quoque ſerio obſervari facturam verbo ſuo Regio reſolviſſet, juxta ſimpliciſſimum proinde & clariſſimum eorundem Articulorum ſenſum in ſequentibus ſeſe accommodandos, redintegrandos, reſtituendos, & per expreſſam expeditionem, ſeu decretum, confirmandos præfatorum Comitatuum Evangelici humillime implorant.

Ut juxta mentem 25 Artic. dictæ diætæ Sopronienſis omnes ipſorum Miniſtri, ſeu Prædicantes, & Rectores, libere in medio ſui remanere, ac profeſſionis ſuæ exercitium, atque munia extra quamvis limitationem peragere valeant: Cum hoc ipſum idem Articulus (tam Prædicantes, quam Scholarum Rectores, illos etiam qui ante proſcripti fuerunt, caſſatis ipſorum Reverſalibus priori libertati & vocationi reſtituens) per expreſſum permitteret, ita ut ſiquidem omnes tales Prædicantes ad duo loca exciſa, & in Artic. 26. denominata reſtringi & collocari non poſſint, relaxata & ſublata juxta uberiorem ejuſdem 26. Artic. ſenſum & indultum, in oratoriis Arcenſibus & Reſidentialibus Dominorum, Magnatum & Nobilium exercendi Religionis exercitii inhibitione, ſimiles extra parochiales Prædicantes ibidem in privato accommodari valebant.

Templa & Capellæ non reconciliatæ, perque Evangelicos ædificatæ, ex mente ſimiliter dicti Artic. 26. pro exercendo cultu Religionis noſtræ, ubicunque in dictis Comitatibus reperirentur, nobis relinquantur, & reſtituantur.

Similiter ex Conſtitutione & decreto toties fati Artic. 26. quatenus præſcriptorum Comitatuum Evangelici ab omni prorſus ſolutione (juxta expreſſa Articuli verba, & aliorum ibidem confirmatorum) Parochis Catholicis præſtanda liberi maneant, & immunes, ac tantum ſuos Miniſtros exſolvere ſint obligati.

Ultimatè, ut omnibus ſui in medio exiſtentibus cujuſcunque ſtatus & conditionis hominibus Religionis ſuæ exercitium maneat & ſit liberum, non excluſis etiam Ruſticis juxta paragraphum Artic.25. Omnibus & ubique, &c. & aliorum ibidem confirmatorum; nec ullus ad contrarias cæremonias compelli præſumatur. Generaliter verò quatenus in omnibus dictorum Articulorum beneficiis & indultis conſerventur, nec una pars alteram ſub pœna ibidem appoſita quoquomodo turbare expoſt audeat.

Comitatus porro Henthenſis extra præmiſſa cum ceteris Comitatibus ſibi Communia Poſtulata peculiari, eoque Articulariter per expreſſam ſui denominationem eidem attributo jure, pro reſtitutione etiam occupatorum templorum, in quorum videlicet actuali uſu & dominio tempore conditi Artic. fuiſſet, humillime inſtat.

Gravamen Oppidi Gyongyôs.

QUerelatur idem oppidum in eo, quod dum juxta Artic. 26. Sopronienſis Diætæ expreſſam conceſſionem, ad verba: In aliis verò Comtatibus, veluti Szaladienſi, Veſzprinienſi, &c. & Heves (in quo oppidum hoc ſitum eſſet) ſiquidem de præſenti, &c. Item, Templa demum, in quorum actuali poſſeſſione iidem Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ confeſſioni addicti de facto ſunt, &c. in actuali poſſeſſione & dominio Templi, Parochiæ & Scholæ, ſuorom Helvetico Evangelicorum, (ex quo in horum actuali etiam uſu & poſſeſſione ante, ſub, & poſt Diætam Sopronienſem uſque ad infraſcriptum tempus pacifice perſtitiſſent) imperturbate relinqui debuiſſent, maximo regij & Articularis hujus indulti, optimique juris ſui cum præjudicio ex mandato & Commiſſione Rev. D. Archiepiſcopi Strigonienſis Georgij Szechenti, & illuſtriſſimi D. Comitis Georgij Erdody, per egregios Johannem Almaſſy Heveſtienſis, & Franciſcum Schútter Peſthienſis Comitatuum Judices Nobilium, violenta aſſumtorum armatorum plebeiorum hominum invaſorum manu, primum Templo, perrupta medio Zingari ejuſdem feneſtra, eodemque immiſſo, ac ſic ab intus violenter penetrato, adaperto, & potito, ex poſt Parochia & Schola, in nobilitatibus alias fundis per Evangelicos propria pecunia comparatis, ædificatis, tandem verò omnibus horum appartinentiis, undecim nimirum vineis, quinque molendinis, uno macello, domo ſimiliter una partim teſtamentaliter per Evangelicos collatis, partim propriis eorundem pecuniis conquiſitis, exindeque reſultantibus proventibus, omnino Evangelicis, die 21 Maij 4. proxime præterito 1688. via facti occupatis, privatum, Prædicante adhæc & Scholæ Rectore in exilium pulſis, libero Religionis exercitio, vel in privata etiam domo Articulariter uſuando, ſeveriſſime inhibito, ſepultura in locis competentibus, & campanarum propriarum uſu inſimul interdictis; funeratione verò demortuorum Evangelicorum (niſi Plebani Catholici eatenus, prout & Baptiſmatum, Copulationum, & Sacramentorum Officio, ritu, & opera uti vellent) ad diſrepectuoſa quadriviorum & compitorum campepeſtrium loca amandata totali & integro actuali Articularis Eccleſiæ Helvetio Evangelicæ beneficio eſſet orbatum: quare plenariam ſui, præmiſſorumque occupatorum, ablatorum, & prohibitorum omnium realem reſtitutionem & redintegrationem vi præſpecificati Articularis indulti, jure merito expeterent. Par ratio Oppidi Jaſzbrinij. Oppidi Comarom.

Non ſine animi dolore conquererentur quoque cives & incolæ, ſtipendiarij item Milites Hungarici Confinij Comaromienſis Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ Confeſſionis: Quod poſteaquam vigore Articuli 26. Diætæ Sopronienſis, ubi idem Confininm perexpreſſum denominaretur tam liberam publicæ Religionis exercitij praxin, quam Templorum etiam ac Scholarum & Parochiarum pacificam adepti fuiſſent, ac in iis imperturbate, & ſine læſione Catholicæ Religionis perſtitiſſent, utque dum Artic.1683. ob fatales belli tumultus, & inſperatam Oppidi Conflagrationem Miniſtris eorundem Evangelicis una cum civibus hinc inde diſperſis tale liberum Religionis exercitium quodammodo intermitti contigiſſet; jamnunc annis & fatis clementioribus ſupervenientibus, ubi virtute præſcripti Articuli 26. idem publicum Religionis ſuæ exercitium reaſſumere, & Miniſtros ſuos Eccleſiaſticos reducere voluiſſent, intervenientibus Excellentiſſimi D. Comitis à Hoffkircher, dicti Confinii Commendantis, & loci Cleri contradictionibus id effectuare in præſens uſque nullatenus permiſſi, imo de die in dies gravioribus minis abſterriti totali Religionis ſuæ exercitio inhibiti, privati ſunt, pro uti talem inhibitionem ulterius quoque præattacti D.D. Catholici practicaturi tribus abhinc menſibus circiter ad pulſum tympani per plateas Confinij factum, etiam ad circumjacentia loca egreſſum Evangelicis pro peragenda devotione ſua, ſub incaptivatione, & aliis gravibus pœnis, ſeveriſſime interminati ſunt, prohibitis etiam precibus in privatis alias ædibus peragi ſolitis. Hinc non abſimiliter pro Articulari ſui, præmiſſorumque reſtitutione & redintegratione ſupplicarent. His accederet, Inferioris Hungariæ Poſſeſſionis Hodos nuncupatæ Prædicantem Evangelicum Samuelem Riczkey dictum, non obſtantibus Protectionalibus ex intimo Conſilio Bellico eidem Poſſeſſioni gratioſe elargitis, binis vicibus, per homines Celſiſſ. & Rever. D. Archiepiſcopi Strigonienſis eſſe expoliatum & omni ſupellectili

1681. lectili domeſtica privatum, ultimum etiam in perſona 22 præteriti menſis Martij captum, Poſoniumque ad ædes Archiepiſcopales in carceres deductum, ubi dire & dure tractatur, & nonniſi ſicco pane & ſqualida aqua emaceratur.

Similiter ſuperioris Hungariæ Poſſeſſionis Totthſalu Prædicantem Evangelicum per Naghybæniarenſis Reſidentiæ Patrem Jeſuitam, Ravaſz vocatum, captum, vinctumque ad carceres Szatthmarienſes deduci curatum, ubi etiamnum detineretur, & miſerrime tractaretur.

Diætæ Poſonienſis, Ann. 1687.

Articulus XXI. In negotio Religionis renovantur Articuli 25 & 26 Ann. 1681. cum interjecta Declaratione.

L*Icet quidem in Negotio Religionis Auguſtanæ & Helvetiæ Confeſſioni addicti Articulis* 25 & 26 noviſſimæ Diætæ Sopronienſis oppoſitam iiſdem per reclamationem ſuam abutentes ipſo facto eorundem beneficij participes eſſe deſiiſſent: propter bonum nihilominus domeſticæ unionis & pacis, internumque Regni tranquillitatem, cum ſua Majeſtas Sereniſſimæ ex gratia & clementia ſua præcitatos Articulos adhuc ratos fore benigniſſime reſolviſſet, eoſdem ſtatus quoque & ordines ad mentem Paternæ reſolutionis (Cleri & aliorum ſecularium Catholicorum contradictione non obſtante) pro renovatis & priori firmitati reſtitutis cenſendos, acſi & in quantum hactenus ineffectuati, vel verò per aliquos abuſus ab una aut altera parte medio tempore introductos, violati fuiſſent, ſuæ debitæ executioni, & tempore eorundem conditorum Articulorum, vel expoſt occupatorum, aut reoccupatorum impendendæ reſtaurationi, utprimum demandandos eſſe ſtatuerunt.

THE

GRIEVANCES

Of the two Imperial and Free Cities of Upper Hungary, Caſſovia, and Epperies; wherein are Contain'd the Injuries done to all the Proteſtant Citizens and Inhabitants of the three Ranks, as well in their Civil Liberties, againſt the 25th, 26th, and 41ſt Articles of the Diet of Sopron, An. 1681. together with their Demands.

1681. FIRST, It muſt be allow'd that in the 26*th* Article of that Diet, by the Special Favour of His moſt Sacred Majeſty, 'twas expreſly Ordain'd in theſe very Words: But in other parts 'tis Order'd according to His Majeſty's Gracious Reſolution that Places be appointed for the Building of Churches and Schools, and Erecting Pariſhes for the Conveniency of thoſe of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausbourg.

That inſtead of the Churches, Schools, and Pariſhes taken from the Proteſtants, there ſhould be Aſſign'd them by Commiſſioners appointed from His Majeſty, commodious and convenient Places, and that without any Reſtriction, even in the Cities of upper Hungary, according to the literal and genuine ſenſe of the Clauſe of the ſaid Article, which ſaith, Furthermore in the Free and Mountain Cities, as alſo in all the Cities of upper Hungary are Places to be allow'd for the Building of Churches and Schools, and Erecting Pariſhes.

Nevertheleſs in the beginning of January, in the year 1687. His Majeſty's High-Commiſſioners appointed with ſo much Clemency in upper Hungary, were ſo far in their proceedings from ſatisfying either His Majeſty's pious Reſolution, or the true and clear intent of the Article, that even in contempt of them all, and in compliance with their own falſe Gloſſes, they did aſſign to the Proteſtants inconvenient and undecent places without the ſaid Cities, which have no Suburbs, and conſequently very remote in the Fields, to the evident exterminating of the free Exerciſe of our Religion from the ſaid Cities.

Wherefore we do conſtantly inſiſt on the moſt Holy Reſolution of His Majeſty, as it is declar'd in the expreſs'd words of the Article before alledg'd, and by vertue thereof, do humbly implore, that inſtead of the inconvenient appointed Places ſuch others (as ſhall be both commodious and free from all Civil Taxes or Contributions, according to the intention of the 8*th* Article, An. 1647. and the 12*th*, An. 1649. in the above-mentioned Cities, and within the Walls of the ſame, without any Ambiguity, ſince the before-cited 26*th* Article includeth the inward, not the outward parts of the Cities) be granted and aſſign'd to us the true and lawful Citizens, and in no wiſe deſerving ſo unjuſt a Baniſhment from the midſt of the Cities.

Secondly, 'tis alſo undeniable, that in the 25*th* Article, immediately foregoing, the Gracious Reſolution of His moſt Sacred Majeſty is declar'd in theſe very words: To all and every one through the Kingdom (no Proteſtant Inhabitant of whatſoever State and Condition, or in whatever part of the Kingdom excepted) according to the 1ſt Article in the year 1608. publiſhed before the Coronation, a free Exerciſe of their Religion in general is granted, and alſo that none of the ſaid Inhabitants ſhall any wiſe be diſturbed for the future in the free Exerciſe of their Religion, on the ſevere puniſhment that is expreſly ſet down in the 26th Article of the Diet of Sopron.

Notwithſtanding which, when the ſaid Proteſtants of Caſſovia and Epperies would have freely us'd and enjoy'd their Right Eſtabliſh'd by His Majeſty's Warrant, and continu'd their way of Worſhip, as alſo the Inſtruction of their Youth within the ſaid Cities, and their Walls (as places provided by the above-mention'd Articles, and formerly us'd and allow'd) they were not only not admitted, but ſeverely prohibited and hindred by the Magiſtrates and Clergy of theſe Cities, nay ſent away and 1681. Baniſh'd till this time, to the fore-ſpecified places in no wiſe convenient for them, as if they were Strangers and wholly incapable of the Common Liberties of the Kingdom.

Wherefore in this Point alſo Relying on the Gracious Reſolution of His moſt Sacred Majeſty, and the Articles he has been pleaſed to make with us, We do moſt Humbly implore a lawful Reſtitution and firm Eſtabliſhment of the free exerciſe of our Religion in its former State, according to the ſaid Article 1ſt Anno 1608 (viz.) within the Walls of the ſaid Cities. We alſo ſubmiſſively beg, that till we have a convenient opportunity of Building and Erecting new Churches, Schools and Pariſhes (which by reaſon of our great Poverty, and the vaſt Taxes and Contributions to the preſent War, we are not able now to perform) it be graciouſly granted to us, that we may anew freely enjoy the ſaid exerciſe of Religion in certain private and convenient places, and have Schools for the Inſtruction of Youth.

Thirdly, Though the indifferent and common uſe of Bells and Burials was every where permitted, as well to the Proteſtants as Catholicks by theſe expreſs words, of the 26*th* Article of the Diet of Sopron : The free uſe of Bells and Burials is left to the Catholicks of thoſe places, as well as to thoſe of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausbourg.

Which nevertheleſs, the Catholick Magiſtracy and Clergy of Caſſovia and Epperies have fully deny'd, and do ſtill deny the ſaid free uſe of Bells and Burials to the Proteſtant Inhabitants of the ſaid Cities, forbidding them with moſt ſevere Threats, to perform the uſual Ceremonies of Burials, within the Walls of the ſaid Cities; notwithſtanding the gracious reſolution of His moſt Sacred Majeſty, made to the illuſtrious States of the Kingdom, in the Diet of Sopron, December the 10*th*, Anno 1681.

So that we earneſtly deſire the common uſe of Bells and Burials for the Proteſtants, as well within, as without the City Walls, free from any moleſtation or diſturbance, conformable to the Pious Grant of His moſt Sacred Majeſty.

Fourthly, It is evident alſo, that by Vertue of the general Clauſe inſerted in the end of the ſo often mention'd 26*th* Article in theſe words : Provided always, That the Laws of the Kingdom confirm'd by the Royal Charter be not hereby prejudiced.

The ſtanding Laws of the Kingdom concerning the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues of thoſe of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausbourg were left in force, and conſequently any Arbitrary proceedings forbidden, eſpecially ſuch as againſt the inſtinct of Nature, tend to the enriching of ſome Perſons, to the Damage and Wrong of others.

Nevertheleſs, the Roman Catholick Magiſtrate and the Clergy of Caſſovia and Epperies, by their own Authority, and by Force have taken and appropriated to themſelves, all the pious Legacies and Gifts left by Will, through the pious zeal of the Proteſtants, for the uſe of Proteſtant Churches and Schools, (viz. in Caſſovia, four Houſes ſtanding within the Wall of the ſaid City, one of which the Magiſtrate has ſold, and alienated to the illuſtrious Michael Domeczki ; a Garden and certain Plow Lands lying in the Territory of the ſame City; as alſo a Vineyard formerly called Varghaſzóló, lying in the Territory of Tokai. And in Epperies certain Vineyards likewiſe lying in ſeveral Territories of Upper Hungary, together with their Revenues) actually retaining the ſame for their own uſe, and for the moſt part turning them into prophane uſes, againſt the 11*th* and 14*th* Articles of the year 1647, to the great injury and damage of the Proteſtants.

Wherefore in this Caſe alſo, the Proteſtants appealing to the aforeſaid Laws, and Conſtitution of the Kingdom, do lawfully require, that all the pious Legacies and Church Lands (violently taken away and retain'd from them, who are the right Owners) be reſtor'd together with their Revenues, according to that Rule of Common Juſtice, Render to every one his own.

Fifthly, It is certain likewiſe, that for the paying of the Proteſtant Miniſters, and of the Catholick Curates, it was evidently enough provided, not only by the often mentioned 26*th* Article in theſe words : Nevertheleſs, the Catholicks ſhall not be obliged to pay any thing to the Miniſters of the Proteſtants, nor the Proteſtants to the Curates of the Catholicks.

But alſo by the 11*th* Article of the year 1647 in theſe words ; Let no Proteſtant be obliged to pay any thing to the Catholick Curates, nor the Catholick to the Proteſtant Miniſters.

Nay, in the following 12*th* Article of the ſaid year 1647, are contained theſe words : Concerning any uſe whatever of the Miniſterial Functions ; but where the Proteſtants have no Pariſhes, let them pay the Miniſters that they employ, as the Catholicks are to pay their Catholick Curates ; and where hitherto the Proteſtants did pay nothing to

the

1681. the Catholick Curates, they ſhall not be obliged hereafter to pay any under any pretence whatſoever, nor the Catholicks to the Proteſtant Minſters.

Which words, together with theſe of the ſame 12*th* Article concerning the Revenues of Schools; but in any place whatſoever, the Catholick Curates, and the Proteſtant Miniſters ſhall receive the Revenues of Schools, from their reſpective Followers only. Eſtabliſh this poſitive Law and Conſtitution, that the Proteſtants pay the Proteſtants, and the Catholicks the Catholicks: Notwithſtanding this, the Proteſtants are forced maugre themſelves, to pay the Catholick Curates, whilſt not only a Weekly allowance, together with other perquiſites, is conſtantly paid to the Catholick Curates by the Magiſtrate out of the publick Purſe (wherein the Proteſtants put moſt, being three for one Catholick;) but alſo, the Revenues of Schools are adjudged,and paid to the ſame Catholick Curates, and with the greateſt injuſtice deny'd to the Proteſtant Miniſters and School-Maſters.

Therefore they demand with all Submiſſion and Juſtice, that the Proteſtant Miniſters and School-maſters, be allow'd out of the publick Purſe, a Salary equal with that of the Catholick Curates, or that neither of the Parties be paid out of that Fond, but each by their reſpective Followers, according to the intention of the before mention'd Articles.

Sixthly, Every body knows that by Vertue of the 25*th* Article, not only a free return and ſtay in the Kingdom is granted to the Baniſht Miniſters and School-maſters, but alſo a free exerciſe of their Religion and Profeſſion, and by Vertue of the following 26*th* Article it is Order'd, That amongſt the imperial and free Cities of Upper Hungary, Caſſovia and Epperies ſhall be appointed, and eſtabliſh'd places for the publick and free exerciſe of the Proteſtant Religion; and that hereafter, no Subject ſhall be diſturb'd in the free exerciſe of his Religion, under the pain expreſſed in the 8*th* Article, of the 6*th* Decree of Uladiſlaus. Nevertheleſs, the Magiſtrate of Epperies, on the very Feſtival Day of St. Bartholomew the Apoſtle, in the Year 1688 laſt paſt, dar'd deprive the Proteſtant Church of Epperies, eſtabliſh'd by the Articles of their Miniſters, and with great diſhonour expel all the Proteſtant Miniſters of the three Nations, out of the ſaid City and its Territory, without letting them know any cauſe of ſo injuſt an uſage, or ſhewing them any Warrant of His moſt Sacred Majeſty for it; pretending only an unheard of Title of Lord of the Manor, 1681. (which cannot be admitted among Civilians, ſince they enjoy equaly with the Magiſtrate the common civil Liberty, nor amongſt Clergy Men, who enjoy a ſpecial Liberty, nor can it in any wiſe be taken by Magiſtrate, whoſe Office is but for a year) to the great diminiſhing of His moſt Sacred Majeſty's Authority and the Contempt of the before mentioned Articles.

Wherefore they humbly beg, that the innocent and unjuſtly Baniſh'd Proteſtant Miniſters of Epperies be reſtor'd, and may perform as before their Eccleſiaſtical Duties, and that both the Proteſtant Miniſters of Caſſovia, and thoſe of Epperies, employ'd either in Preaching, or in Teaching Schools, preſent or to come (being always preſented by the right Patrons,) may live quietly and ſafely in their own or hir'd dwelling places, which they have, or ſhall have within the Walls of the ſaid Cities.

Seventhly, No body that knows the Law will deny, but in the beginning of the aforeſaid 41*ſt* Article of the Diet of Sopron, where the Common Liberties and Privileges of the imperial and free Cities are confirm'd, and beſides the there mention'd Laws, and Articles of the Kingdom made in ſeveral places are renewed, it is expreſly ordain'd: That the ſame Laws and Articles be ſtrictly obſerved, both by the Chambers and the Officers of the Army, and by any other perſon whatſoever, ſo that they (viz. the ſame imperial and free Cities) be no way diſturbed by any one, in their free right to chuſe a Civil Magiſtrate, nor in any other Privilege.

Nevertheleſs, the modern Magiſtrate of the ſaid Cities, againſt the Prohibition contain'd in the 83*th* Article of the Illuſtrious Chamber of Scepuſium, in the year 1647, out of meer private hatred againſt our Religion; was pleaſed to take upon him ſuch a Power, as to degrade, and turn out of their publick Dignities, and Civil Employments all the Senators of Caſſovia and Epperies, and ſeveral other Proteſtant Officers well deſerving, and qualified for publick Offices and Civil Dignities, againſt the evident Conſtitution of the aforeſaid Article, and of thoſe that are cited in it; but eſpecially of the 13*th*, before the Coronation in the year 1608, of the 44*th* in the year 1609, and of the 12*th* in the year 1649, to the moſt evident prejudice of the Common Liberties, and Civil Privileges, and to the conſiderable oppreſſion of the Proteſtant Citizens; and in the room of the ſaid Senators and Proteſtant Officers, the ſaid Magiſtrate has put Catholick Citizens either leſs fit, or wholly unacquainted with the Affairs of the ſaid Cities, and more minding their private concerns, to the damnifying and even undoing of the ſaid Cities. Wherefore we require with the deepeſt Humility, Firſt, That the free right of chuſing the Civil Magiſtrate, and other Officers (which hitherto has been ſo diſturbed, and wholly taken away from the Proteſtants, againſt the poſitive Laws of the Kingdom, made in the Illuſtrious Chamber of Scepuſium) belonging properly and only to the Sworn Citizens of the ſame Cities, and as well to the Proteſtants as to the Catholicks, be reſtor'd and maintain'd in its former State, and in no wiſe any more diſturbed by any one, under the pain mention'd in the renewed and aforeſaid Articles.

Secondly, That in order to maintain a civil mutual Union, and put out any Fewel of Diviſion and Hatred, a free Election be made of the ſame Magiſtrate, and other Officers out of the well deſerving, and well qualified Sworn Citizens, without any difference of the Catholick and Proteſtant Religion; and that the Employments, and any Civil Dignities whatſoever be indifferently, and equally conferr'd and beſtowed, ſo that the Catholicks and Proteſtants promote mutually one another to publick, civil Honours, according to the intention of the aforeſaid 13*th* Article, of the year 1608 before the Coronation, and of the 44*th* of the year 1609.

Thirdly, That in order to obſerve a juſt equality of Turns, and procure the publick good of the Cities, it be graciouſly granted, that the Offices of Judge and Tribune be by Turns, and promiſcuouſly exerciſed for a year, according to the intention of the aforeſaid Articles, and of the 12*th* in the year 1649.

All the Proteſtant, Citizens, and Inhabitants of the three Nations, of the Free and Imperial Cities, Caſſovia and Epperies.

The Grievance of the Proteſtants of the Free and Imperial City of Carpona.

IT is not without a great deal of Grief, that all the Noblemen and Gentlemen, all the Auxiliary Forces, and hired Soldiers of both ſorts, and all the Proteſtant Inhabitants, and Citizens of Carpona, think it their Duty to Repreſent to Your moſt Sacred Majeſty; that altho' according to Your moſt Sacred Majeſty's Reſolution, inſerted in the 26*th* Article of the Diet of Sopron, Anno 1681. Among the places of the Kingdom, which were to be appointed for the Building of new Churches and Schools, and Erecting Pariſhes for the conveniency of thoſe of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausbourg; the ſame City of Carpona is particularly named, and eſtabliſhed to be one of the places, where the free exerciſe of Religion ſhould entirely and quietly be enjoyed, as it may be ſeen in theſe words: In the Diviſion before the Mountains at Leva, Carpona and Tulekin.

Nevertheleſs, Your Majeſty's High Commiſſioners appointed in the year 1688 laſt paſt in the Mountain Cities, being come to that of Carpona (whereas, according to the intention of the aforeſaid Article, and of Your Majeſty's Gracious Reſolution, and Declaration contain'd in it, inſtead of the convenient Churches and Schools and Pariſhes which were from the Proteſtants of the Confeſſion of Ausbourg, they ſhould have appointed other convenient and fit places, and left the Proteſtants in the quiet Poſſeſſion of them, according to the intention of the 19*th* Article in the year 1647,) did on the contrary turn the Proteſtant Miniſters and School-maſters out of their Offices, and with ſevere Threats forbid both all the Proteſtant Noblemen and Gentlemen, all the Soldiers of the Gariſon, as well as all the Inhabitants and Citizens, to continue the Exerciſe of Religion (which had been enjoy'd in the ſame place from time out of Memory, and was confirm'd by the Articles as we have already ſaid) till Your Majeſty's further Reſolution were known, to the great prejudice of a Spiritual Exerciſe, which ſuffers no delay, and to the diminiſhing of the Right granted to the Proteſtants by the Articles, and confirm'd by Your Majeſty's Favour.

Therefore they do wholly Rely on the Articles, and Your Majeſty's Grant, and Humbly beg, that not only convenient and fit places, within the Walls of the ſaid City be appointed to them, for the Building of Churches and Schools, and Erecting Pariſhes; but alſo, that they may have a Free Exerciſe of Religion, together with the common and indifferent uſe of Bells and Burials, according to the aforeſaid 26*th* Article of Sopron, and as they had formerly.

The Grievances of the Imperial and Free Proteſtant Cities, Veterozolium, Breznobania and Libethbania.

ALL the Proteſtants of the ſame Imperial and Free Cities, ſet forth their moſt lamentable Caſe in reſpect of Religion, 1681. that whereas they ſhould not be hinder'd to enjoy at leaſt in private the free Exerciſe of Religion granted by the Articles of Sopron, to all and every where in the Kingdom (without excepting any part of it, and leſs the fourth State, which comprehends all the Imperial and Free Cities of the Kingdom, belonging properly to the Crown) through His Imperial Majeſty's Favour, according to the clear and evident explication of the 1*ſt* Article made before the Coronation, in the year 1608. and confirm'd in the 25*th* Article of Sopron, but rather by virtue of the following 26*th* Article of Sopron (which ſpeaks in general of the Cities, and by way of inſtance names only two of each ſort; viz. of the Mountain Cities, and of the Free Cities) His Majeſty's High Commiſſioners appointed in the year 1688. ſhould alſo have appointed them commodious and convenient places for the building of new Churches and Schools, and erecting Pariſhes, yet they have obtain'd nothing: On the contrary, the Miniſters have been turn'd at and expell'd by the High Commiſſioners, and the Proteſtants have been moſt ſeverely forbidden by the ſame to exerciſe their Religion in private, or to go to any Neighbouring place where their Religion is Exerciſed Moreover againſt the expreſs grant of the 11*th* and 12*th* Article in the year 1647. maugre the Proteſtants and by force, the ſaid High Commiſſioners have aſſign'd and appropriated all the proper Revenues of Schools and Churches to the Catholick Curates which they have brought in, and have very few Followers in the Cities of Veterozolium, and Breznobania, and but one in Libethbania. In fine, the ſaid High Commiſſioners did by all means, and do ſtill compell without diſtinction, all the Proteſtant Inhabitants and Citizens, eſpecially the Trades and Handy-craft-men to Ceremonies contrary to their Religion; therefore the ſaid Proteſtants humbly beg the ſame Liberty of Religion as is granted in the Articles, and enjoy'd in other Cities, ſince theſe in no wiſe deſerve a worſe caſe; and that there may be aſſign'd them convenient places for the building of new Churches, and Schools, and erecting Pariſhes.

The Grievances of the Free and Imperial Cities St. George, Bazinga, Tyrnaw, Szakoliza, Kuſſegh, and Ruſt.

THeſe Free and Imperial Cities do alſo lament and ſet forth their deſolate Caſe, and great Unhappineſs in reſpect of Religion; that (whereas according to the genuine Senſe of the Articles of Sopron, made in the behalf of Religion, its free Exerciſe is granted to every one, and every where in the Kingdom) they ſhould not be hinder'd to enjoy, at leaſt in private the ſaid free Exerciſe of Religion; but by Virtue of the 26*th* Article of Sopron, which ſpeaks in general of the Cities, Places ſhould have been appointed them for the Building of Churches, and Schools, and Erecting Pariſhes, yet they have obtain'd none of the premiſſes; but on the contrary, have been forbidden to exerciſe any way their Religion, their Miniſters have been expell'd, and forbidden to come any more into the ſaid Cities; it is prohibited under the ſoreſt puniſhment to frequent the places where there is Exerciſe of Religion, to go thither, to have Children Baptiz'd, or to receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and to ſend for Proteſtant Miniſters to Sick and Dying Perſons; in a word, the whole Exerciſe of the Proteſtant Religion is forbidden, againſt the ſenſe of the aforeſaid Articles, and the Proteſtants are compell'd to Ceremonies contrary to their Religion; therefore they humbly beg that they may enjoy the ſame Benefit as is granted in the Articles, and have places appointed them for the Building of Churches, and Schools, and Erecting Pariſhes, as well as the other Cities; ſince that Privilege is equally granted to all; and therefore the caſe of ſome, ought not to be worſe than that of others. 1681.

The Grievances of the Free and Imperial Cities, Trenſchin, and Modra.

THeſe two Free and Imperial Cities complain with a great deal of Sorrow, that by Virtue of the 26*th* Article of Sopron, the Lords Commiſſioners did indeed aſſign to them places for the Building of Churches and Schools, and erecting Pariſhes, and grant them the free Exerciſe of their Religion; but with ſuch Limitation and Reſtraint as take away many things eſſentially requiſite and neceſſary for the ſaid exerciſe of Religion, and are directly contrary to the genuine intention of the Articles; as,

Firſt, The Lords Commiſſioners did leſſen the Number of the Proteſtant Miniſters, and forbid others to be put in their room after their Death.

Secondly, They did forbid all the Proteſtants (to whom a free Exerciſe of Religion is granted, by Virtue of that General

1681. neral Clauſe of the 25th Article, to every one, and every where in the Kingdom) to frequent the Neighbouring Churches, and perform in them any duty of Religion.

Thirdly, They did forbid the Miniſters to Viſit the Eſtrangers, were they never ſo Sick.

Fourthly, They did Order that the Handy-craft-men, and common ſort of People ſhould be compell'd under ſevere puniſhment to Ceremonies contrary to their way, viz. To walk with the Catholicks in Proceſſion, and carry proceſſional Trophies.

Fifthly, They did forbid the Proteſtant Miniſters to go and Adminiſter Baptiſm, or perform other Ceremonies in the Neighbouring Towns.

Sixthly, They did appoint that there ſhould be no petty Schools, but ſuch where Children could Learn only to Read, and to Write.

The Grievances of the Counties of Upper Hungary, Semlin, Abavivar, Unghwar, Saraz, Tornaw, &c. and of all the Proteſtant Noblemen and Gentlemen living in the Mountain Towns of the Principality of Tokai.

THe ſame Proteſtants are forc'd to Repreſent to Your Moſt Sacred Majeſty, that although in the following words of the 26th Article of Sopron, but in other Counties, as in thoſe of Salawar, Veſprim, Saraz, Moramoruſs, Abavivar, Sellia, Semlin, Ugoza, Bodrogh, Tornaw, Komarra, Barzod, Sachſag, Novigrad, Zolnock, Hewecz, Peſth, Pelicz and Soldth united, Chege, Unghwar, and Zatmar, ſince the Proteſtants are in poſſeſſion of almoſt all the Churches there, the ſame Churches are left for the uſe of the actual Poſſeſſors of them.

And in the following Clauſe of the ſaid Article : Finally the Churches which are actually poſſeſſed by thoſe of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausbourg, ſhall be ſtill for their uſe as before, together with the Pariſhes, and Schools, and their Revenues, that they may live in peace, and quiet.

Your moſt Sacred Majeſty tending the peace and general quiet of the Kingdom, has been Graciouſly pleas'd to Ordain, that in the foregoing Counties, all the Churches, Pariſhes, and Schools, together with their Revenues, ſhould be left for the uſe of the Proteſtants. Nevertheleſs, the Churches ſtanding in the Counties of Abavivar, Saraz, Semlin, Tornaw, and Unghwar, (which for the moſt part have been built from the foundation, or repair'd from the loweſt ruine by the Proteſtants) as alſo the Schools and Pariſhes, together with their Revenues (left to them by the Proteſtants in their Wills, and never before poſſeſs'd by the Roman Catholicks) have been taken by force from the Proteſtants, as well as the Churches, Pariſhes, and Schools, ſtanding in the Dominion of Rakocz, in theſe Towns of the County of Semlin, Zantho, Thalia, Mod, Kerethur, Tarazal, Liszka, Benny, Toleſwa, Ughelly, Patak, Borſſy, (which at the time of the Articles of Sopron, and after, were poſſeſs'd by the Proteſtants, and left to the ſame by the ſaid Articles) in ſeveral Towns of the Principality of Tokai, and in Tokai it ſelf; altho' the Church of Tokai was left, and expreſly confirm'd by the Articles in the poſſeſſion of the Proteſtants.

To this may be added, That againſt the evident ſenſe of the 25th Article of Sopron, the Proteſtant Noblemen and Gentlemen of the aforeſaid Cities of the County of Semlin, have been, and are ſtill forc'd to forbear exerciſing their Religion in private; which Liberty they had enjoy'd ſince the ſeizing of their Churches, and was granted to them by the firſt Article made before the Coronation, in the year 1608. and confirm'd by the ſame 25th Article of the Diet of Sopron.

Likewiſe the Miniſters (call'd back from their Exile through Your moſt Sacred Majeſty's Favour, by Virtue of the aforeſaid 25th Article of Sopron,) are forc'd to oblige themſelves under pain of death, and the forfeiture of all their Goods, to go out of the ſame County, or by ſtrict Deeds of reverſion to renounce for ever under the ſame Penalty, to perform any Eccleſiaſtical Duty in the ſaid County.

Moreover, although the 25th Article of Sopron evidently declareth that none of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Auſbourg ſhall be compell'd to any Ceremony contrary to his Religion; and the 26th, that the Catholicks ſhall not be oblig'd to pay any thing to the Miniſters of the Proteſtants, nor the Proteſtants to the Curates of the Catholicks, according to the intent of the 11th Article, in the year 1647. yet they are forc'd even by Military Execution to do both, and eſpecially to pay the Catholick Curates.

Although by vertue of the often-mention'd 26th Article, the free uſe of Bells and Burials is equally left to the Catholicks, and to the Proteſtants, nevertheleſs the Proteſtants are not ſuffer'd to bury their

Dead

1681. Dead in the uſual Burying-places, which is againſt Chriſtianity it ſelf, they are not permitted neither to uſe the Bells though made through their care; nay the Noblemen and Gentlemen of the aforeſaid Dominion of Rakotz are threatned to be diſpoſſeſs'd and exterminated out of their Eſtates, if they do not abjure and renounce the Proteſtant Religion, which is a down right perſecution of the Proteſtants. In the like manner the Proteſtants of Abavivar are forbidden by the Purveyor of that County to exerciſe their Religion; and the Miniſters are commanded under pain of Death, and the forfeiture of all their Goods to go out of it, or (if they be willing to continue there as Secular private perſons) by moſt ſtrict deeds of reverſion to renounce for ever under the ſame penalty to perform any Eccleſiaſtical Duty; conſequently the Proteſtant Churches, together with all their Appurtenances have been ſeiz'd upon by the ſaid Purveyor.

Likewiſe in a Town called Sepſſy of the ſame County of Abavivar, where the Church could under no pretence be taken from the Proteſtants, the Tythes of the Territory of the ſaid Town which us'd to belong to the Proteſtant Miniſter are ſeiz'd, and kept in Sequeſtration by the of Sepſſy, by vertue of an Order of the Illuſtrious Chamber of Scepuſium.

In the Towns of Nogymihali, Vinna, and Iztara, in the County of Unghwar, and in the Towns of Tolzeck and Aſgath, in the County of Saraz, the Churches, Schools, and Pariſhes left by the Articles for the uſe of the Proteſtants, are by force taken and kept from them by the Catholick Lords of thoſe Mannors.

Laſtly, In the Town call'd Somogy in the County of Torna, a moiety of the Revenue belonging to the Proteſtant Miniſter by a Convention made formerly is taken from him.

All which having been attempted againſt Your Majeſty's Gracious Reſolution, and the Articles made in the behalf of the Proteſtants, they preſent the ſame to Your moſt Sacred Majeſty's Conſideration, with ſtrong perſuaſion that it will be Graciouſly Remedied; and that not only they ſhall be re-ſetled in the poſſeſſion of what is taken from 'em; but alſo that all the introduc'd abuſes ſhall be taken away.

The ſame Proteſtant Inhabitants of the aforeſaid Counties of Upper Hungary, and of the Towns ſtanding in the Dominion of Rakoczia.

The ſame is done by the Counties of Salawar, Veſprim, Saraz, Moramoruſs, 1681. Novigrad, Zolnock, Hevecz, Peſth and Soldth, united, which are all comprehended in the Articles.

The Grievances of all the Proteſtant Noblemen of the Counties of Liepze, Thurocz, Arva, Trenſchin, Zolnock, and Sachſag; wherein are contain'd the Injuries and Troubles they have ſuſtain'd upon the account of Religion, againſt the Articles of Sopron; together with Humble Requeſt for the Redreſſing of the ſame.

SInce the Grievances and Complaints of the Counties of Liepze, Thurocz, Arva, Trenſchin, and Zolnock agree in all reſpects, for ſhortneſs ſake they are put together here; the ſame then juſtly complain that they have been injur'd and diſturbed, in that the Proteſtant Miniſters (who perform'd the Duties of their profeſſion in the Noblemens places of Reſidence, where the free Exerciſe of Religion was transferr'd, by Virtue of the 26th Article of Sopron, ſince the ſeizing of the Proteſtant Churches in theſe Counties) have all been Baniſh'd (except two, left in two places named in the Articles) within a fortnight, out of the County and place where they liv'd; or if any deſir'd to continue in it, he was requir'd to oblige himſelf by ſtrict deed of Reverſion never to perform any Eccleſiaſtical Duty, and forbidden to remain on any other term, under pain of Impriſonment.

No Schools are permitted but the Petty (or as the Commiſſioners term it, ſuch where Children learn only to Read and to Write) and but in two places mention'd in the Articles; all the others are generally ſhut, and prohibited, and their Maſters turn'd out, although the 25th Article had reſtor'd both theſe, and the Miniſters in their reſpective Offices.

It is ſtrictly forbidden that the Divine Service and Exerciſe of Religion be performed by Proteſtant Miniſters in the Houſes and places of Reſidence of Noblemen, or in the Oratories and Chappels belonging to them, but with this admirable Limitation; That if any Noble-Man will have the Divine Service done in his Houſe, he ſhall employ no other Miniſter than one of the two left in the County, and that only for themſelves, and their Family.

All the Payments whatſoever (except thoſe which belong to the two Schools appointed in each County) are adjudg'd to

the

1681. the Catholick Curates, and are generally wreſted by the ſame with the help of the Soldiers.

The Peaſants are abſolutely forbidden to Exerciſe their Religion in the uſe of Baptiſm, Marriage, Confirmation, Burials, and of the Lord's Supper, as alſo to frequent the places appointed by the Articles for the Divine Service, and are compelled with all poſſible violence, to Ceremonies contrary to their way.

Moreover, in many Towns of the County of Turocz, as in Bella Zatureza and Pribocz, there were Churches Built at the Charges of the Proteſtants, whoſe Members had not reconciled themſelves to the Church of Rome, before the Article was made; yet without any regard to the Exception contain'd in the beginning of the 26th Article, all thoſe Churches have been ſeized upon, and the uſe of Bells and Burials is granted no more to the Proteſtants, unleſs they ask and pay the Catholick Curates for it.

In the County of Sachſag, the Proteſtants ſhould freely and peaceably have enjoyed all the Churches, which were in their Poſſeſſion when the Article was made, and were left for their uſe by the ſame Article; yet the Illuſtrious Wolffgang Earl of Kohary, (Supreme Earl of the ſaid County, by Deputation (as he has declar'd) of the Illuſtrious George Earl of Erdedy,) with the aſſiſtance of the Vicount of the ſame County, has ſeized the ſame Churches, except a very ſmall one, which ſtands in a moſt deſpicable Village called Drieno, and has not been Built by the Proteſtants: Commanding withal all the Proteſtant Miniſters to go out of their reſpective Pariſhes, and places of abode under pain of Empriſonment, and forbidding all Perſons of quality to entertain them any way even privately; altho' the Proteſtants of this County had been eſtabliſh'd, and confirm'd in the free uſe of all the Churches, which were in their Poſſeſſion when the Article was made.

The moſt Humble and Lawful Demands of the aforeſaid Counties are theſe.

SInce His moſt Sacred Majeſty both by the Confirmation of the 25th and 26th Articles of the Diet of Sopron, made in 21ſt Article of the Diet of Presburg, in the year 1687, and by the Reſolution declar'd to the Deputies of the ſaid Counties in their Audience, has engaged his Royal Word, not only to obſerve the aforeſaid Articles in all their Points and Clauſes, but alſo to cauſe the others to obſerve the ſame; therefore the Proteſtants of the aforeſaid Counties Humbly beg, that according to the moſt ſimple and evident Senſe of the ſame Articles, they may be Redreſſed, Re-eſtabliſh'd, Reſtor'd, and by an expreſs Decree confirm'd in the following particulars.

That according to the intention of the the 25th Article of the Diet of Sopron, all their Miniſters and Rectors may live freely among them, and perform the Duties of their Profeſſion, without any Limitation, ſince the ſame Article Grants thus much, reſtoring both the Miniſters and School-Maſters, even thoſe which were Baniſh'd, annulling their Deeds of Reverſion.

That as many Churches and Chappels, (whoſe Members are not reconciled to the Church of Rome, and have been Built by the Proteſtants,) as ſtand in the ſaid Counties be reſtor'd to us, to Exerciſe our Religion in them, according to the intent of the aforeſaid 26th Article.

That according to the intention of the ſo often mention'd 26th Article, the Proteſtants of the ſaid Counties, be diſcharg'd from paying any thing to the Catholick Curats, and oblig'd only to entertain their own Miniſters.

Laſtly, That any Proteſtant of whatſoever State and Condition, not excluding the Peaſants (according to theſe words of the 25th Article, to every one and every where,) may freely Exerciſe his Religion without being compelled to contrary Ceremonies; and that neither of the Parties preſume to diſturb any way, the other under the pain mention'd in the ſaid Article.

Beſides, the foregoing Demands wherein the County of Sachſag joyns with the other Counties, by a particular Right granted in the Articles, the ſame County of Sachſag requires, that all the ſeized Churches be reſtor'd to the Proteſtants, which were in their Poſſeſſion when the Article was made.

The Grievance of the City of Gyongyos.

THis City complains, that whereas according to the expreſs Grant of the 26th Article, of the Diet of Sopron in theſe words: But in other Counties, viz. in thoſe of Salavar, Veſprim, &c. and Geves (in which this City ſtands) ſince the Proteſtants are actually in Poſſeſſion of almoſt all the Churches there, &c. Item, Finally the Churches, which are actually poſſeſſed by thoſe of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausbourg, ſhall be ſtill for their uſe, &c.

It

1681. It ſhould have been left in the actual Poſſeſſion, and uſe of all the Proteſtant Churches, Pariſhes and Schools which were quietly poſſeſſed by the Proteſtants, before and after the Diet of Sopron to the Date underwritten; yet to the great Contempt of His Imperial Majeſty's, and of the Article's Grant, and to the great prejudice of the Proteſtants Right, by Order and Commiſſion of the moſt Reverend Archbiſhop of Gran, and of the Right Honourable George Earl of Erdody, not only the Churches, but alſo the Schools and Pariſhes with all their Appurtenances (conſiſting in Eleven Vineyards, Five Mills, One Butcher's Stall, and a Houſe which had all been given by Proteſtants in their Wills, or Purchaſed with the Proteſtants Money,) were ſeized by force on the 21ſt of May, in the year 1688 laſt paſt, by the Honourable Jean Almaſſy of Heves, and Francis Setuitter of Peſth, Judges of the ſame Counties; moreover the Proteſtant Miniſters and School-maſters were Baniſh'd, the Free Exerciſe of Religion even in private Houſes is forbidden, as well as the uſe of Bells and Burials in proper places, the Proteſtants being ſtrictly Commanded to Bury their Dead in remote High-ways and Commons, where all the Filth of the Towns is carried: Therefore they lawfully Demand a full Reſtitution of all that has been taken from them, and an exact Execution of the aforeſaid Article.

The Grievance of the City of Moramoruſs.

THe Proteſtant Citizens and Inhabitants, together with the Militia of Moramoruſs complain, that altho' by Vertue of the 26th Article of Sopron, (wherein the ſame City of Moramoruſs is expreſly named,) they had obtain'd the liberty of exerciſing publickly their Religion, and of having Churches, Pariſhes and Schools; and have quietly enjoyed the ſame without giving any offence to the Catholicks, until the fatal breaking out of the Wars in the year 1683, and the unexpected Burning of the Town, which occaſion'd an interruption of the ſaid Exerciſe of Religion, the Miniſters and their Pariſhioners having been forced to diſperſe themſelves up and down; yet ſince the Troubles are appeaſed, they deſire in vain to reaſſume their publick exerciſe of Religion, and to call back their Miniſters, being hinder'd from the ſame by the Earl of Hoffkirchen Governour of this Territory, who every day growing ſeverer, forbids with greater Threats, the total Exerciſe of the Proteſtant Religion: Nay, three Months ago the Roman Catholicks did Proclaim with the Beat of Drums, that no Proteſtant ſhould preſume to go out of the Territory of Moramoruſs, to any Neighbouring, to perform the Duties of his Religion; nor Exerciſe it in his private Houſe under pain of Impriſonment, and of other ſevere Puniſhments. Therefore they Humbly beg, That this their Grievance may be redreſſed, and they re-eſtabliſhed in the Privilege granted by the Article. 1681.

It may be added to the foregoing Grievances, that one Samuel Bizkey, a Proteſtant Miniſter of a place of Lower Hungary called Hedes; notwithſtanding the Protection granted to him by the Council of War, has been Plunder'd twice of all the means of Life, Clothes, Books and Furniture, by ſome Emiſſaries of the Archbiſhop of Gran; and at laſt on the 22d of the laſt Month of March, was taken and carried to Presburg, into the Priſons of the Archbiſhop, where he has nothing allowed him, but dry Bread and dirty Water.

Likewiſe, the Proteſtant Miniſter of Tottfalu in Upper Hungary, has been taken by a Jeſuit called Father Ravaſz, reſiding at Naghybania, and carried in Fetters into the Priſons of Zatmar, where he is ſtill detain'd and moſt barbarouſly uſed.

The XXI. Article of the Diet of Preſburg, in the year 1687, in the buſineſs of Religion, the 25th and 26th Articles of the year 1681, are renew'd with the inſerted Decleration.

ALthough they of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausbourg, by their proteſting againſt the 25th and 26th Articles, of the late Diet of Sopron, have unworthily abuſed the ſame, and thereby forfeited ipſo facto, the benefits granted in them; nevertheleſs ſince His moſt Sacred Majeſty tending the Union, and the general quiet of the Kingdom, through his great Favour and Clemency, has moſt Graciouſly reſolved, that the ſaid Articles ſhall yet be in force; the States have Order'd, That the ſame ſhall be lookt upon as renewed and reinforced, (notwithſtanding the oppoſition of the Catholick Clergy, and other ſecular Perſons,) and that as far as they have hitherto been infringed through Abuſes, introduced by the one, or the other party, they ſhall forthwith be put in Execution.

To theſe Agrievances the Emperor returned a very Gracious Anſwer, and made ſeveral Propoſals tending to a Peace.

And Firſt, He offer'd a General Pardon unto all, even to Tekeli himſelf, provided he would perſonally appear to make his Submiſſion.

Secondly, That every Perſon ſhould be reſtor'd to his Lands, and Goods confiſcated again reſtor'd.

Thirdly, That free exerciſe of Religion ſhould be allowed; but the manner how, and the Regulation thereof ſhould be determined at a General Diet, which was judged of abſolute neceſſity for the repoſe, and quiet of Hungary.

Fourthly, That all the vacant Offices, Governours and Balliages of that Kingdom, ſhould be indifferently conferr'd upon Hungarian Gentlemen, who were capable by their Natural parts, and Abilities to Merit and Diſcharge ſuch Preferments.

And Laſtly, That his Imperial Majeſty would vacate the Office of Vice-King, and return to the ancient conſtitution of a Palatine, whoſe Election ſhould be free according to the uſage of former times.

How the Treaty was broken off.

The Plague which ſtill Raged in Auſtria, and Hungary prevented the proceedings of this Treaty, which might have taken effect ſome time before, and anſwer'd all the Demands of the Malecontents; but now ſo much Blood had been drawn in all Parts, and Corners of that unhappy Kingdom, that it was paſt the Art of Man to ſtanch the Bleeding: And beſides, Tekeli and his Malecontents were ſo nearly adjoyn'd, and engaged in ſecret Leagues, and Alliances with the Turk, that it was almoſt impoſſible to deſtricate, and diſentangle themſelves from the invitations they had made, and from the Aſſurances, and Pledges they had given to the Turks. Howſoever, the Emperor not to leave any means unattempted, until all was become deſperate, diſpatched Count Eſterhaſi into Hungary in quality of his Plenipotentiary, to put thoſe Overtures into Execution which had been fram'd, and debated in the Emperor's Council. But whilſt theſe things were in agitation, they received another Impediment, by a diſcovery made of a Correſpondence, which ſeveral Principal Officers held with the Maleconts; upon which Filek, and two other Councellors, and Mannagers of the Revenue of Hungary were Arreſted, and accuſed of having moved, and promoted an Inſurrection in divers Counties.

Kaunitz Treats with the Grand Seignior.

Towards the end of this year, when the Armies were drawn into their Winter-quarters, new Treaties were ſet on foot. The Baron de Kaunitz the Emperor's Reſident at Conſtantinople labour'd to continue, and renew the Truce; but the Grand Vizier would not agree thereunto on any other Terms, than that it might be allowable for the Grand Seignior to afford aid, and aſſiſtance to the Malecontents: But this was to cure a Soar with a greater Evil, and what was inconſiſtent with Reaſon, to make a Peace, and yet to continue a War.

Tekeli and others offer Conditions.

When the Emperor believed all Accomodation with the Malecontents impoſſible, at leaſt far diſtant; Behold on a ſuddain, and much unexpected, the Counts Tekeli, Peſtrozzi and Weſſellino in deſpight of their Engagements to the Turks, offer'd to make Terms by themſelves; and to abandon their People and their Cauſe, in caſe they aſſented not thereunto; The Conditions were to have all their Churches reſtor'd, with their Goods and Eſtates, which had been Confiſcated: To which the Emperor readily aſſenting, there never appear'd at any time a greater probability and likelyhood of an Agreement, than upon this overture: But whereas to eſtabliſh and confirm ſuch an Accomodation, it was neceſſary to convene a Diet, which by reaſon of the preſent Contagion could not be done, a Ceſſation of Arms was in the mean time concluded: But whilſt in order thereunto a Conference was held at Tokai, Count Caprara unluckily march'd out of his Quarters with a conſiderable force towards that place; upon which the Malecontens were ſo Allarum'd, that they Sallied out of their Winter quarters in great numbers, leaving the Treaty imperfect, and the Ceſſation of Arms broken and violated.

It again broken.

ANNO 1681.

Notwithſtanding the unlucky Accidents which had happen'd to hinder, and diſappoint the Progreſs of the aforeſaid Treaties; Yet at the beginning of this year new overtures were made to the Malecontents by the Biſhop Sebeſtini: And tho' ſome of the moſt conſiderable Perſons of the Hungarian party, refuſed to hearken to any Offers which the Emperor ſhould make them; yet Tekeli, and others, formerly the moſt averſe to all Accommodation, did now at leaſt in a ſeeming manner favour the Methods which tended towards Peace; and in order thereunto, did not only diſpatch Deputies as far as to Lintz, to Treat thereupon with the Imperial Miniſters; but likewiſe entertain'd a perſonal Conference with Count Caprara, and agreed with him to continue a Truce until the reſultof a Diet ſhould be known, which was to convene in the Month of Febuary.

Tekeli and other chiefs ſend Deputies to Lintz.

That which in all appearance was moſt probable to adminiſter the greateſt difficulty, and cauſe of diſpute, when a Diet ſhould aſſemble, was the reſtitution of the Churches, Schools, and other Foundations which the Malecontents challenged as their own, and upon the Right, and Title of having Erected, and Built them at their own charge and expence. They were alſo very poſitive to have their ancient Government by a Palatine reſtor'd, and all the German Garriſons withdrawn out of Hungary, at leaſt, that the Officers placed over the German Forces ſhould be Hungarians, the better to keep the Souldiers within ſome Terms of Moderation, and Good Behaviour towards the People of the Country.

A Plot to ſeize Tekeli during the Truce.

How it was prevented.

Eſterhaſi and Forgatz make offers of Peace.

The time appointed for the Diet to meet being come, the Emperor remov'd to Newſtadt, to be nearer to the place of Treaty. But it being the Fate of that poor Kingdom to be unhappy, ſomething or other ſtill intervened to prevent and diſappoint the Endeavours of Peace; for whilſt ſome labour'd in that good Work, others made it their buſineſs to impede and divert it. And ſo it was at preſent; for whilſt Tekeli was delighting himſelf at a Houſe of Pleaſure, a Plot was laid to ſurprize and take him during the Truce; of which Tekeli having notice, he countermined the Plot by an Ambuſcade; which being opportunely diſpoſed in the way where they were to paſs, the Party which came to ſeize him was totally defeated. This, and other Artifices of the like nature, fomented jealouſies and diffidences between the Parties, that nothing was acted clearly, and with a free Spirit, but with ſuch Caution and reſerves, as eaſily preſaged the little hopes of an accommodation by way of Treaty. Howſoever, ſome Zealous Men, ſuch as Eſterhaſi, and Forgatz, who were paſſionate for the peace of their Country, travel'd from County to County, exhorting the People to lay aſide all Animoſities, and return again unto that Allegiance and Duty which they ow'd unto their Prince; upon aſſurance that the Emperor would reſtore the State of Hungary to the ſame Condition in which it was in the year 1662. and grant almoſt all the other Propoſitions which the Malecontents did demand; provided that the States of that Kingdom would declare the Arch-Duke Joſeph, Son to the Emperor, King of Hungary.

To this Propoſal the Malecontents were ready alſo to condeſcend; on Condition, that at the ſame time the Kingdom were declar'd Elective, and ſome Acts repeal'd, which in the year 1664 had made it Hereditary.

Notwithſtanding this difficulty, and divers others which were daily ſtarted, diſpleaſing to the Emperor, the Meeting of a Diet at Oedemburg was ſo warmly preſs'd, that the Emperor's Commiſſioners, and fourteen Deputies from the Malecontents Aſſembled in the Month of February, as was agreed, tho' Tekeli refus'd to be there preſent, alledging that the late Treacherous Deſign againſt his Perſon, was a ſufficient and a juſt Excuſe for his Abſence. This, and ſome Diſpute about the place of Meeting (which the Imperialiſts deſired might be at Preſburg) occaſion'd a Prorogation of the Diet until April next following. In the mean time the Malecontents held their Conſultations in Tranſilvania, concerning the Meaſures and Methods they were to take in the next Campaign; and made uſe of the ceſſation of Arms, to fortifie their Garriſons, and ſupply them with Proviſions.

The Diet prorogued until April.

The Clergy of Hungary finding in the Emperor a Spirit ſo inclin'd unto Peace, that he was ready to condeſcend unto all the Demands of the Malecontents; and with the reſt, to grant and yield unto them all the Churches, of which they had been depriv'd; they being touch'd with a ſenſe of the miſchief which might accrue to themſelves thereby, ſent their Deputies to Vienna before the Convention of the Diet, to repreſent unto the Emperor the great prejudice, damage and ſcandal he would cauſe to the Catholick Religion, by delivering up the Churches, which were already Conſecrated, and Hallowed to the Service of God, to be prophaned by Impious and Heretical Worſhips. This, and ſuch like Speeches ſerv'd to trouble and diſtract the Mind of the good Emperor with a thouſand new Scruples. Howſoever, being deſirous to appeaſe the Troubles in Hungary, and not diſappoint that Auguſt Aſſembly, His Imperial Majeſty (a full Month before the Convention) remov'd to Newſtadt, to be near, and on all Occaſions to be aſſiſtant to the Diet; which, notwithſtanding the former Diſputes to the contrary, was to be held at Oedemburg. But whereas the Emperor was attended with three Regiments for his Guard, the Appearance ſeem'd ſo extraordinary on ſuch an Occaſion, that the Malecontents refus'd to ſend their Deputies, fearing to be over-aw'd in their Debates and Votes by a Military power; unleſs the Arch-biſhop of Strigonium, and other German Lords were firſt deliver'd into their hands for Hoſtages, and Security of fair and faithful Dealings.

The Clergy endeavour to diſturb the Diet.

The Deputies jealous of the Emperors Guards.

But to remove this difficulty, the Emperor diſcharged his Regiments; and with a Guard only of ſix hundred Hungarians, made his Entry on the two and twentieth of May into Oedemburg, where he was receiv'd between the double Files of Hungarian and German Soldiers, and Conducted to the Lodgings prepar'd for him by the Commiſſioners and Deputies there preſent.

The Emperor enters into Oedemburg, and holds the Diet.

The Diet, over which Count Swartzemburg preſided in the Name of the Emperor, had ſat ſeveral days before his Majeſty's Arrival. And on the firſt day of the Seſſion, before they would enter upon any other Buſineſs, the Election of a Palatine was propos'd, and three Perſons were Nominated thereunto, viz. Eſterhaſi, Palſi, and Erdedi; and accordingly were offer'd to the Emperor to make choice of the Perſon which he thought moſt worthy, and agreeable to that high Employment, and Office of Truſt. But whereas this Prince was entirely in the hands, and poſſeſs'd by Father Emeric, lately made Arch-biſhop of Vienna, and Abelé the Secretary, he refus'd to determine the Choice, until ſuch time as he had conſulted with theſe two Confidents thereupon.

A Palatine offer'd.

By this Retardment, all other Matters mov'd ſlowly, tho' the Diet ſate eight hours every day. The leaſt point Adminiſter'd matter of Diſpute, and what at the firſt appearance ſeem'd eaſie and of little importance, was render'd difficult and intricate, by reaſon of the Spirit of Diſſention and Bitterneſs with which that whole Aſſembly was poſſeſs'd. And moreover Father Emeric excepting againſt every Perſon which the Diet propos'd for Palatine, gave a ſtop to all Proceedings, that the Aſſembly was upon diſſolving; and Prince Swartzemburg became ſo tired and wearied with the many unprofitable and fruitleſs endeavours, that he deliver'd up his Commiſſion to, Count Capeliers, Superintendant of the Council of War, to preſide in his Place.

Affairs obſtructed.

And ſo reſtleſs were the Soldiers, and difficult to be reſtrain'd from breaking out into Acts of Hoſtility, that during the Ceſſation of Arms, a Party of the Malecontents fell upon a Regiment of the Imperialiſts and cut them in pieces.

Howſoever the Diet ſtill continued, and the Emperor at length, with the Advice of his two Favourites, pitch'd upon Count Eſterhaſi to bear the Office of Palatine in Hungary; to whom having adminiſter'd the Oath of Allegiance, and Fidelity, he return'd back again to Newſtadt. The next day following, the Diet receiv'd a Letter Signed by Count Tekeli, and ſix others, ſignifying their Reſolutions to accept the Pardon, and ſubmit to the Emperor: Provided that they might have a free exerciſe of their Religion granted, their Churches and Eſtates which were confiſcated, reſtor'd; and the Money which they had engaged to pay the Turk, ſupply'd, and paid for them by the Emperor. And that for performance of the Articles, ſome means and expedients ſhould be found out for a ſatisfactory Security. This Letter was immediately diſpatched to the Emperor, who with his Council, conſidering thereupon, abſolutely rejected the new Article relating to the Turks, to whom it was reſolved to make no payments of Money: Of which anſwer Tekeli being inform'd, he diſpatch'd a Meſſage immediately unto Count Caprara, giving him to underſtand, that he was no longer able to contain his Soldiery within the Rules, and Laws of the Truce, and ſo without farther delay ſeized upon two Paſſes between Caſſovia and Tokai: And to put Matters yet more backwards; the Deputies who repreſented the Malecontents at the Diet, made a Petition to the Emperor, requeſting him, that he would be graciouſly pleas'd, to remove out of his Councils and Offices of Truſts all ſuch, as have had any hand, or been inſtrumental in promoting thoſe Troubles and Civil diſſentions, which had now near the ſpace of Twenty years infeſted and oppreſs'd that unhappy Kingdom: But to this Demand the Emperor made no other anſwer, Than that he would conſider it. By theſe motions and ſteps in the Diet towards a Peace, the Turks conceiv'd a Jealouſy, that Tekeli was diſpoſed and inclined to an Accommodation with the Emperor: To prevent which a Paſha was order'd to diſcourſe and tamper with him, and offer him the Principality of Tranſilvania after the Death of Apaſi: And entertaining alſo frequent Conferences with him and other Leaders of the Malecontents, the Paſha ſo mannaged his Diſcourſe with them, by declaring the many advantages, they would receive by covering and ſhrouding themſelves, under protection of the Grand Seignior; that he prevailed upon them to make an offer of Eighty thouſand Crowns, in caſe the Grand Seignior would promiſe to aſſiſt them with a Puiſſant and Royal Army. The Emperor upon notice of this private and perfidious Treaty with the Turk, was highly incenſed, and commanded that neither Tekeli, nor any of thoſe who were concern'd in this Conference, ſhould be admitted as Members into the Diet: And giving it now for granted, that a War would enſue with the Turk, the Marquis of Baden was ordered to Fortify Raab, and Count Staremberg to finiſh the Fortifications of Vienna, from the Arſenal of which place great quantities of Granadoes, Bombs, Powder, with Arms, and heavy Cannon were tranſported down the Danube, to ſupply that Important Fortreſs of Raab.

Count Eſterhaſi made Palatine.

A new Propoſition made by Tekeli.

1681. The Turks jealous of Tekeli.

Their offers to him.

Tekeli forbid the Diet.

Notwithſtanding all which, the Deputies continued to labour in the Diet, and to examin the Aggrievances of the Malecontents; and the Palatine Eſterhaſi made frequent Journies between Oedemburg, and Newſtadt to render an Account of all Paſſages, and Tranſactions to the Emperor: And that a 1681. conclusion might be put to all matters in queſtion; the Archbiſhop of Vienna went to the Diet, to agree certain differences ariſen between the Clergy and the Laity of Hungary, touching the Title to ſome Lands and Demeſnes, which was ſtill depending in a Law Suit between them.

Acts made at the Diet.

After this Point was agreed, the whole Reſult of the Diet was drawn up in Writing, and ſent to Tekeli; the Subſtance whereof was this, That all the Churches which the Proteſtants had Built at their own charge and expence ſhould be reſtor'd; with free Licenſe to Erect and Build more, in any part of the Kigdom, and therein to exerciſe their Religion, and publickly to Preach: That a conſiderable Sum of Mony ſhould be paid to the Turks for once and no more, but not by way of Tribute: Provided that the Truce made in the year 1664, be again renewed for twenty years longer, under the ſame Articles and Conditions: And farther, ſeveral expedients and means were agreed for raiſing Monies for payment of the Troops, and defraying the charges of the Kingdom, during theſe times of trouble. To confirm all which Tekeli was deſired to appear at the Diet (notwithſtanding the late Prohibition) and to concur with the other Deputies by Signing theſe Articles:

Tekeli called to the Diet.

And leſt he ſhould make the inſecurity of his Perſon an excuſe for his Non-appearance, the Son of Count Eſterhaſi the Palatine, was offer'd for a Hoſtage.

1681.

Theſe Propoſals were carried to Tekeli by the Secretary to the Palatine, who return'd from him in the Month of July, unto the Diet ſtill Sitting at Oedemburg; with an anſwer to this effect;

Tekeli's Anſwer.

That Tekeli would not be ſatisfied with leſs, than an entire reſtitution of all the Churches: That one ſingle Sum of what value ſoever would not content the Turks, who requir'd an Annual Tribute of 40.000 Rix Dollars, without which they refuſed to reſtore to the Malecontents their Wives, and Children which they had given in Hoſtage: And moreover, this Meſſenger gave them to underſtand, that Tekeli abſolutely refuſed to appear at the Diet, and that He, and his Party were not ſatisfied with the Election of Eſterhaſi to be Palatine. This anſwer was the cauſe of much Debate and Diviſion in the Diet; and their Minds and Councils were farther diſturbed upon the News, that the Forces of the Malecontents being joyn'd with a conſiderable Body both of Turks and Tranſilvanians, were become 15.000 ſtrong; that the Paſha of Waradin kept ſo cloſe a Correſpondence with the Malecontents, that it was more than probable, that their intereſt and alliances were ſo firmly united, that neither Party was at liberty to make Terms, or Articles of Peace without the Aſſent, or Concurrence of the other. The truth of which ſoon appear'd; for Tekeli not long afterwards marched near the Confines of Belgrade, where he joyned with a Body of 20.000 Turks; and thereby gave evident Demonſtrations of his Reſolution to maintain the War, and that his former propoſals, and ſteps towards Peace, were all falſe and feigned, with deſign to Amuſe the Minds of the Emperor and the Diet.

1681.

Tekeli joyns with the Turks.

The Turks had not as yet declar'd a War, for their Forces and Troops from the remote parts of Aſia were not in a readineſs, nor on their March; till which time the Emperor was to be amuſed with Treaties, and the appearance of that great Body of Turks near Belgrade, was with pretenſion only to reſtore Tekeli to the Poſſeſſion of his Lands, Houſes, and Eſtate, of which he had been unjuſtly deprived by the Emperor, and his Favourites.

The Emperor finding it now abſolutely neceſſary to conclude an Accommodation with the Malecontents, amongſt whom new difficulties daily aroſe, returned in Perſon from Newſtadt to the Diet at Oedemburg, where the Malecontents thought it reaſonable, that the Tribute which they had engaged to pay unto the Turks, ſhould be charged and levied on the Eſtates of thoſe, who had been the cauſes of the Troubles, and Confuſions in that Kingdom. This motion had ſo little ground, and was ſo unlikely to ſucceed, that it put all things backwards; and induced the Emperor to limit the Seſſion of the Diet to the 16th of Auguſt, hoping within that time to agree on all Points with ſuch, who continued conſtant in their Loyalty and Allegiance to him; and for particular Aggrievances, they were to be compoſed by a Select Committee appointed for that purpoſe. But all this while moſt of the Proteſtants refuſed to come to the Diet, by reaſon that the Points about Religion were poſt-poned, by the endeavours of the Archbiſhop of Strigonium, which they in the firſt place, and before all other Matters deſir'd to have decided.

This Point being laid aſide, the Diet fell to debate on the Propoſition ſent by Tekeli, relating to a Tribute demanded by the Turks; and as an expedient, and by way of Equivalent for that, it was propoſed to reſign into the Hands of the Turks three Counties, viz. Kalo, Zatmar and Liptpow; to which the Turks ſeemed with ſome reaſon to claim a Title, in regard, that no longer than ſince the year 1660, they had been disjoyn'd from the Principality of Tranſilvania. But an end was ſoon put to this 1681.

Con-

Controverſie; for both the Hungarians themſelves were unwilling to have a Peace purchaſed from the Turk at the price of their Country, by diſmembring three Counties from that Kingdom; at the mentioning only of which the People were ſo enraged, that fearing leſt the Emperor ſhould privately conclude ſome Article with the Turk in reference thereunto, they would not be ſatisfied until he had permitted them to joyn one of their Confidents with Caprara, the Emperor's Reſident at Conſtantinople, who might be privy to all the Treaties, and Negotiations with the Turk; nor would the Turks accept thereof in ſatisfaction for renewing the Truce, but raiſed new and greater Demands, as they found the Emperor inclinable to yield and condeſcend: For now the Grand Vizier required to have Leopolſtadt demoliſh'd, on pretence that it had been Built, and Fortified contrary to the Articles of the late Treaty: And declar'd likewiſe the Grand Seignior's reſolution, to give aid and aſſiſtance to the Malecontents, until ſuch time, as he had put them into a capacity of paying the Annual Tribute, for which they were engaged.

The Turks raiſe their Demands.

New difficulties were every day ſtarted at the Diet, ſo that the Emperor was deſirous to diſſolve it, ſo ſoon as was poſſible; but yet he thought not fit to do it abruptly, or to break it up in diſcontent; but that ſomething might be done in matters of Religion, on which the Proteſtants moſt inſiſted: In order unto which it was agreed, to grant them a hundred Churches, with Money to build others, in places moſt convenient.

The Emperor Grants ſeveral matters.

That all Cities and Towns, ſhould enjoy a free exerciſe of their Religion: And that all Hungarian Soldiers in the Frontier Garriſons ſhould do the like.

That all Churches which ſince the year 1670, had been in the Poſſeſſion of either Party, ſhould ſo remain.

That Lutherans and Calviniſts might build Churches in any Town, or City where they were wanting, and Lords and Gentlemen might build Chappels, or Oratories in any of their Houſes, or Caſtles.

That in caſe any Points of Difference ſhould ariſe relating to Religion, or the Matters preceeding, they were not to be decided by the Sword, but by the Sentence of the King of Hungary. And that all People of what Perſwaſion ſoever might live amicably, no Perſon was to Revile the other on account of his or their Religion, or to utter injurious or unhanſome Terms thereof.

Theſe particulars with ſome additional Regulations, being at laſt agreed in the Diet, and ſign'd by the Emperor; The next great work was, in what manner the Malecontents might be reſtor'd to their Eſtates, and to their Goods which had been confiſcated: And how the German Troops, and ſtranger Soldiers might with ſafety and eaſe be removed out of their Garriſons, and all parts of Hungary; which next to the buſineſs of Religion, was the greateſt concernment of the Diet. The next Aggrievance was the Chamber of the Kingdom, which Office, contrary to the will and approbation of the Deputies of the States, was executed by the Biſhop of Newſtadt, whom they conſider'd as the Chief Author, and Fomenter of all the Troubles of that Kingdom: But herein, the Emperor was not willing as yet to gratify the Diet. Nor could the Deputies agree amongſt themſelves of the manner, how to make thoſe things practicable, which they in the moſt earneſt manner deſir'd: And ſuch were the Diviſions amongſt them, that what the Seculars agreed upon in the Morning, was diſturbed, and undone by the Clergy in the Afternoon; which the Emperor well conſidering, and how Men of ſuch different intereſts perplex all Councils; was pleaſed to diſmiſs the Archbiſhop of Strigonium, and the Biſhop of Newſtadt, as alſo the Count Capliers, a great ſtickler for the Rights of the Church, from their attendance on the Diet; ſo that the Imperial Commiſſioners were reduced to three Perſons, namely the Prince of Swartzemburg, the Count of Noſtiz, and Oker the Chancellour. And farther, to ſatisfy the Malecontents in their pretenſions, the Biſhop of Newſtadt, was put by his Office of Vice-Preſident of the Chamber of Hungary, and the ſame was conferr'd on Count Erdedi, a Perſon much more acceptable to the People. This gracious Clemency and Compliance of the Emperor, was ſo ſatisfactory to the Proteſtants, that they wholly ſubmitted that point about the confiſcated Goods to the favour, and benign inclinations of his Imperial Majeſty, who not to abuſe that confidence which his Subjects repoſed in him, did freely, and of his own accord, give order, that the Goods, and Eſtates of the Counts Serini, Nadaſti, and Frangipani, with thoſe of ſeveral other Lords, that had been confiſcated for High Treaſon, ſhould be reſtor'd again to their Children or Heirs. And the States on the other ſide to demonſtrate the Gratitude and Duty which they profeſſed unto their Prince, did in Teſtimony thereof, make a Preſent unto the Empreſs of a Purſe of Gold, containing 2000 Ducats, which her Majeſty graciouſly received; and beſtow'd the ſame towards Reparations of the Catholick Churches, 1681.

Aggrievances conſidered.

The Emperor ſatisfies the Malecontents.

which

1681. which by reaſon of the Wars, and other Troubles of the Kingdom, were become ruinous and decayed: Which if the Proteſtants had fore-ſeen, 'tis probable, they would have employ'd the Money rather for Reparation of their own Churches, than to thoſe of their Adverſaries. Thus the chief Points of Difference being amicably concluded, and ſign'd by the Emperor, the Diet was diſſolved the 29*th* of December 1681. after which the Emperor with his Court return'd to Vienna.

The Diet diſſolved,

But theſe Treaties and Agreements were ſo imperfect and ſo little obſerved, by reaſon of the Wars with the Turks, Parties and Factions breaking out every day, and continual Skirmiſhes diſannulling the Arcles concluded; nothing could be built hereupon, nor the Agreement take the leaſt effect, nor ſo much as regarded, until the year 1689. when the Turks Suing for a Peace, the Proteſtants made the following Addreſs to His Imperial Majeſty as followeth, The which I have inſerted here for the ſake of the Reader, and the eaſineſs in underſtanding this Hiſtory. 1681.

Sacratiſſima Cæſarea Regiaque Majeſtas Domine Domine Clementiſſime.

Licet firmiter omnino ſupponeremus ab Anno jam integro & medio Articularem medelam Gravaminum Religionis noſtræ Evangelicæ humillime ſupplicantibus, & ſubinde plenius ac plenius tam injurias contra Articulos Sopronienſes 25 & 26. Anno 1681. nobis illatas, quam etiam claras, & omni obſcuritate carentes eorundum Articulorum Conceſſiones pro baſi & fundamento legitimæ Inſtantiæ noſtræ adducentibus nobis, Juſtiam Cauſæ & Poſtulatorum noſtrorum Majeſtati Veſtræ Sereniſſimæ, ac paſſim omnibus Auguſtiſſimæ Aulæ ſuæ Miniſtris uſque adeo innotuiſſe, ut ulteriori dictæ inſtantiæ noſtræ recrudeſcentia & commemoratione non niſi rem actam agere videamur.

Quia verò non raro id circumferri nunc etiam intelligimus, vel quod Commiſſiones Regiæ per Hungariam anno præterito, ac ante inſtitutæ, nihil contra dictamen præſcriptorum Articulorum Sopronienſium inſtituerint, vel quod plura nos petamus, quam iidem Articuli nobis permitterent.

Pro utriuſq; proinde præmiſſæ dubietatis ſublatione, ac item clare ſatis inſtantiæ noſtræ placidatione (vel eo magis, quod ſæpe ſæpius per meritiſſimos Majeſtatis Veſtræ Sereniſſimæ Auguſtiſſimæ Aulæ Miniſtros deſuper aſſecurati fuerimus, quod, quæ in præſcriptis Articulis Sopronienſibus clara eſſent, circa ea nos citra quamvis difficultatem & procraſtinationem expeditos & comſervatos iri:) Operæ pretium exiſtimavimus nos facturos ſi membratim tam dictorum Articulorum formalem Contextum, ac in iis radicatam, immediateque verbis Articulorum ſubnexam inſtantiam noſtram, quam prædictarum Commiſſionum Regiarum, vel & eorundem hominum, aliorumque ingerentium, ſub ſchemate prætextu effectuationis Articulorum præjudicioſas & exquiſitas interpretationes, ac deſuper inſtitutas deciſiones, hic, ſeu in Tabella quapiam è diametro ſibi ad invicem oppoſuerimus, hacque ratione & præſcriptorum Articulorum per nonnullos factam Convulſionem, & articulariter luculentæ Inſtantiæ noſtræ æquitatem, ſimulac multiplices injurias, ad oculum quaſi, profundiſſima Homagialis fidelitatis cum ſubjectione demonſtraverimus. Et quidem

ARTICULUS XXV. Hæc formalia habet.	Proceſſus, ſeu Concluſiones, Commiſſionum Regiarum Articulis Sopronienſibus omni ex parte adverſantes.
Et quia propter bonum Pacis, tranquillitatemque Regni publicam in Negotio Religionis quoque ſua Majeſtas ſeſe benigne reſolvere dignata eſſet: Ideo eandem etiam Reſolutionem Articulis Regni Status & Ordines inſerunt. I.° Ac	Contra membrum ex adverſo poſitum Primum Excelſæ Commiſſiones Regiæ, vel per ſe, vel per homines privatos in complurIbus Liberis ac Regiis, Montaniſque Civitatibus; ſignanter in Sancto Georgio, Baziniſ, Tyrnaviæ, 1681. Tyrnaviæ, Szakolizæ, Schemnizij, Veterozolij, Carponæ, Libethbanyæ, Breznobanyæ, Bahabanyæ, Belobanyæ, Vibanyæ, Kuſzeghini & Ruſzt, quæ alias eſſent Liber idemque quartus ſtatus, tale liberum exercitium (quod nimirum conſiſteret in cultu divino per verbi Dei prædicationem, Cantionum, Orationum, Baptiſmatum, ſacoæ Euchariſtiæ, Copulæ, Sepulturæ, & aliarum pro ritu ſuo ſuſceptarum Ceremoniarum uſum & adminiſtrationem, adeoque per Miniſtros Eccleſiaſticos fieri & exerceri aſſoleret) non admittendo, imo ſevere inhibendo: Patet ex eo, dictas Commiſſiones in præſcriptis locis taliter totale Exercitium contra dictum Articulum ſuſtuliſſe. Siquidem ubi hæc talia non exercentur, id nec exercitium dici poſſet. Non abſimiliter Oppida, Villas, & Ruſticos (vi præjudicioſæ illius in apertiſſimum exterminium Liberæ Religionis Evangelicæ, ac etiam Evangelicorum tendentis adjectæ & inſertæ Clauſulæ: Salvo jure Dominorum Terreſtrium) contra tenorem confirmationis allegati Articuli 1. Ann. 1608. in omnibus Comitatibus libero Exercitio taliter privaſſe.

I. ‘Ac imprimis quidem, cum liberum Religionis exercitium jam antea in Anno 1606. vigore Pacificationis Viennenſis conceſſum, his motibus à parte nonnullorum interturbatum fuiſſet: Ideo confirmato hoc loci Articulo 1. dictæ Pacificationis, idem Exercitium omnibus & ubique per Regnum, (ſalvo tamen Jure Dominorum Terreſtrium) juxta Articulum primum Anno 1608. ante Coronationem editum, liberum permittitur. 1681.

[Hinc ex his Articuli verbis legitime inſtamus, ut idem exercitium quod Annis prioribus, ſeu ſub iis motibus, à parte nonnullorum turbatum fuiſſet, nec aliter ante dictos motus, quam per Miniſtros Evangelicos, ſeu Prædicantes, exercebatur, Omnibus & ubique per Regnum (quod ex vi præcitati Articuli 1. Anno 1608. ante Coronationem editi, per expreſſum omnes etiam Liberas Civitates, qua quartum Statum in ſe comprehenderet, adeoque ad Oppida & Villas etiam evidentiſſime ſe extenderet) liberum permittatur.]

Contra II. Dictæ Commiſſiones paſſim ubique per Regnum & Comitatus duobus ſolum Prædicantibus in ſingulo Comitatu, ac uno vel altero in quibuſdam liberis Civitatibus permiſſis, reliquos omnes alibi intra quindenam, alibi intra triduum, uti in Comitatibus Lyptovienſi, Arvenſi, Thuroczenſi, Howhenſi, Zolienſi, aliiſque, extra Comitatum relegare præſumſerunt: Vel ſi quibus in Comitatu manere placeret, ab iis ſtrictas Reverſales ſuper Miniſterij renuntiatione eo facto exigendas præceperunt. Scholas etiam Triviales, ſolum aliquantum legere & ſcribere inſtituentes permitti determinarunt. Qualiter porro libera illa Religionis ſuæ Profeſſio & Exercitium Miniſtris noſtris per nonnullos ſervata ſit, teſtantur tam ſcripta complurimorum extra Comitatus relegatio, quam Miniſtrorum quoque Evangelicorum Epperienſium è Civitate, loco alias Articulariter denominato, per Magiſtratum Catholicum prætexentem, hanc fuiſſe Majeſtatis Veſtræ Sereniſſimæ ſeriam voluntatem ac Mandatum, licentioſe ſane intentata exturbatio, adeoque Prædicantium & Scholarum Rectorum, etiam in Dominio Rakocziano ſuperiorum Regni Hungariæ partium, miſere alias degentium, aut ſub amiſſione bonorum & capitis è Dominio eodem migrandorum, aut ſeveriſſimis Reverſalibus ſub eadem cautione ad nulla umquam munia Eccleſiaſtica ibidem exercenda ſemet obſtringendorum, per Officiales ejuſdem Dominij intimata violenta Compulſio: & magis quatuor Prædicantium per Emin. Principem Cardinalem à Kollonich in Arce Ledniezenſi facta incarceratio, à quibus ſimiliter præjudicioſæ Reverſales ſubſcribendæ in ſui eliberationem exiguntur.

II. ‘Ac Prædicantibus quoque & Scholarum Magiſtris, alias vel proſcriptis, vel propter certas Reverſales munia ſuæ profeſſionis exercere non valentibus, liber in Regnum reditus, liberaque Religionis ſuæ Profeſſio & Exercitium, caſſatis eatenus etiam ipſorum Reverſalibus, conceditur.

[Hinc quoque legitime lucidiſſimeque ſequitur, Prædicantes, & Scholarum Magiſtros ab exilio ad Profeſſionis ſuæ munia & exercitium reſtitutos, libere in Regno, univerſis item Civitatibus, Oppidis, & Villis ſubſiſtere, & Religionis ſuæ profeſſione Exercitium ac munia peragere poſſe: Neque ulterius aliquas Reverſales jam taliter Articulo tenus damnatas & caſſatas ab iis exigi convenire.]

Contra III. Iſthoc eſt, ſuper quo cum gemitibus conquerimur, nos tam per ipſas Commiſſiones, quam privatas quaſque perſonas, paſſim turbatos eſſe: Nec verba ſufficiunt exprimere, quot modis ſubinde turabati fuerimus, tam nos, quam Miniſtri noſtri, ac etiamnum turbantur, ac turbamur. Pro exemplo ſolum brevitatis cauſſa (ne reiterare videamur

III. ‘Et nullus Regnicolarum in libero ſuæ Religionis Exercitio à modo impoſterum quoquomodo turbetur.

[Iſta nullitas clariſſime concludit, nec Eccleſiaſticas, nec ſeculares Perſonas, adeoque nec Nobilem, nec Civem, nec Ruſticum in libero Religionis ſuæ exercitio turbandum. Id verò ut dicatur Exercitium

1681. Liberum cauſſas & inſtrumenta, per quæ exercetur, Miniſtros videlicet deneceſſe requiri, nemo negabit.]

1681. mur præmemoratos Comitatus, & plurima Comitatus Zemplinienſis in attacto Dominio Rakocziano ſuperioris Hungariæ exiſtentia Oppida, horumque Miniſtros) præmemorata Civitas Epperies in ſuperiore Hungaria, & in inferiore, præter Poſonium, Sopronium, Modram, Cremniczium, Neozolium, omnes cæteræ Civitates cum ſuis Evangelicis Miniſtris, ſicut etiam Prædicans Hodoſſienſis in Inſula Czalokóz, qui omnibus vitæ mediis, veſtitu, libris & ſupellectili per Secretarium D. D. Archiepiſcopi Strigonienſis, & milites penes ſe aſſumtos privatus eſt: quam ſortem alij quoque quamplurimi patiuntur, & aut ſpeciali Dei providentia, aut mulctarum penſione, vel verò medio Reverſalium, eliberationem ſui conſequi poterunt, in continuis viciſſitudinibus miſeram ac inopem vitam ducentes.

IV. ‘Sed neque Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ Confeſſioni addicti ad Cæremonias Confeſſioni ſuæ contrarias compellantur.

[Hæc generalitas quoque confirmat priora, id eſt, nec Nobiles, nec Ignobiles, nec Cives, nec Ruſticos quoque compelli debere.

Contra IV. Commiſſiones Evangelicos in Civitate Trenctrinienſi, & aliis paſſim ad vexillorum Proceſſionalium comparationem ac ipſas Proceſſiones cogendos, uti & in confinio Comaromienſi pronuntiarunt, adeoque & Ruſticos Evangelicos ubique ad frequentationem Templorum Catholicorum compellendos jubent. Imò omnes liberas Civitates Exercitio Evangelico carentes ad Actus Miniſteriales ritui ipſarum contrarios adigere mandant.

ARTICULUS XXVI.

V. ‘AD hæc Templa quoque per Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ Confeſſioni addictos ædificata, & ritu Catholico necdum reconciliata, per certos Commiſſarios eiſdem aſſignanda.

[Hinc quoque legitimè inſtamus Capellarum & Templorum non reconciliatorum, quales Capellæ darentur complures in Lyptovienſi, Thurazenſi, & aliis Comitatibus, nobis fiendam Ceſſionem & Aſſignationem.]

Contra V. Nullo habito reſpectu præſcriptæ Articulariter decretæ locorum non reconciliatorum nobis fiendæ aſſignationis, eædem Commiſſiones omnia Templa & Capellas in Lyptovienſi; Arvenſi, Thuroczenſi, Zolienſi & Honthenſi Comitatibus occuparunt; licet quidem in Thuroczenſi per Evangelicos ædificata, & ritu Catholico non reconciliata in Pribocz, Bella & Zathuriza fuerint. In Comitatu verò Lyptovienſi Capellæ ſimiliter per Evangelicos & Dominos terreſtres talium fundorum ædificatæ in Kiraly, Lehota, Potornya & Vicbicze, ac alibi reperirentur, ab harum tamen uſuatione, ingreſſu & ibidem peragendo cultu ſtrictiſſimè inhibiti, ac ad duo ſaltem loca, ubi Templa ædificari permiſſa ſunt aliquot mille hominum incapacia, imo propter diſtantiam, incongrua, periculoſa, & difficilia, relegati.

VI. ‘In aliis verò locis juxta benignam ſuæ Majeſtatis reſolutionem loca pro ædificandis Templis, Scholis, & Parochiis erigendis, pro commoditate eorundem Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ Confeſſioni addictorum per eoſdem Commiſſarios deſignanda decernuntur.

[In hoc etiam legitime & legaliter inſtamus pro locorum commodorum & congruorum, & vel maxime Liberis & Regiis Civitatibus Caſſovienſi, & Epperienſi in ſuperiore Hungaria, quibus contra hujus Articuli expreſſum tenorem, in locis inconvenientibus, incommoda ac minus decentia deſignata eſſent loca intra mœnia Civitatum (innuentibus id memorati Articuli ſubſequenter Puncto 9. allegandis clariſſimis verbis,) ubi commoda & capacia haberentur loca, adeoque etiam aliis omnibus ſimili jure gaudentibus Civitatibus, gratioſſime impertienda exciſione.]

Contra VI. In Liberis & Regiis Civitatibus Partium Hungariæ ſuperiorum alibi Commiſſio Regia, alibi verò Officiales Cameratici, imò privati quoque homines, ſicut Caſſoviæ, & potiſſimum Epperieſſini plane extra deſerta ac deſolata ſuburbia in locis longe diſſitis Campeſtribus, iiſque Contumelioſis, erigendis Templis, Parochiis & Scholis pro qualibet trium Nationum Communitate incommoda & obſcæna loca, (quo ab ſacrum etiam finem ſanctiſſimo Deo dicanda Templa Chriſtianis hominibus ædificare nefas ac piaculum omnino eſſet) maximo Evangelicæ Religionis cum deſpectu deſignarunt.

VII. ‘In aliis verò Comitatibus, veluti in Szaladienſi, Weſzprimienſi, Jaurienſi, Comaromienſi, Abavyvarienſi, Saaroſſienſi, Zemplinienſi, Ugocchienſi, Beregienſi, ; Thor-

Contra VII. Commiſſiones Regiæ tamen in Comitatibus plurimis, uti etiam Honthenſi, qui unus eſſet ex præſcriptis enumeratis, omnia Templa mediante Vicecomite illius Comi-

1681. tatus occupari, & Prædicantes amoveri ſecerunt. Pariter ſecerunt in Abavyvarienſi, Zemplinienſi, Bereghienſi Comitatibus, in Bonis, ut præmemoratum, Univerſis Rakoczianis Officiales ejuſdem Dominii, ac in Oppido Gyóngyós, quod ipſum potiorem partem Comitatus Heves conſtitueret, nonnullæ privatæ perſonæ Templum Helveticæ Confeſſioni addictorum occupare, Miniſtros removere, imo totale exercitium Religionis ſuæ iiſdem ſerio inhibere præſumſerunt: Nec abſimiliter etiam in Oppido Jaſzbreny & confinio Legrad proceſſum. Eſto, quod hi recenſiti Comitatus eſſent de numero illorum, qui juxta Articulum in poſſeſſione omnium præ manibus habitorum Templorum relicti ſunt.

‘Thornenſi, Gómórienſi, Korſodienſi, Hon- 1681.
‘thenſi, Neogradienſi, Szolnock & Her-
‘ves, necnon Peſth, Pilis & Soldth unitis:
‘Item Szabolczenſi, Ungh & Szathmarienſi;
‘Siquidem de præſenti eſſent in actuali
‘uſu omnium fere Templorum ibidem habi-
‘torum, ideo eadem pro Actualibus eo-
‘rundem Poſſeſſoribus uſuanda relicta
‘ſunt.

[Hic etiam legitimè petimus, quod, ſiquidem tempore conditi Articuli in enarratis Comitatibus Evangelici omnia fere Templa, quæ jamnum iiſdem majori ex parte contra ſancitum violenter ademta eſſent, præ manibus habuiſſent, ac expoſt Articulariter in Poſſeſſione eorum relinquendi decelarati eſſent, ita eoſdem imperturbatos debuiſſe ac debere relinqui.

Contra VIII. Comaromij interim privati ſaltem homines Exercitium Evangelicum totaliter inhibuerunt, prouti talem inhibitionem ulterius quoque practicaturi proximè ad pulſum Tympani, non ſolum intra Confinium illud, ſed etiam ad circumjacentia loca egreſſum pro peragenda devotione ſua Evangelicis ſub incaptivatione eorum, & aliis gravibus pœnis ſeveriſſimè interminati ſunt. Similiter Carponæ per Regiam Commiſſionem, & Thokaini per Deputatos, locis licet Articularibus nomine tenus ſpecificatis inhibitum exercitium, & Templa occupata.

VIII. ‘Præterea in Confiniis Regni, &
‘quidem in Generalatu contra Caniſam in ‘Szenegroth: In Generalatu Jaurienſi, in ‘Tihany, Vaſony, Papa, Veſzprim, Jaurini
‘& Comoarmij. In Generalatu Antemontano,
‘Levæ, Carponæ & Fúlekini. In Generalatu
‘ſuperioris Hungariæ in Putnok, Onod, ‘Szendró, Thokay, Kalo & Szathmar.

Vi conceſſionis iſtius Comaromij, Carponæ, & Thokaini Confiniis ſicut & aliis determinatis, exercitium liberum una cum Templis ibidem habitis, & eo tum poſſeſſis, relictum fuiſſe, evidentis eſt ſequelæ.]

Contra IX. Commiſſiones Regiæ, vel & Deputati homines ejuſdem extra Trenchinium, Modram, Cremniczium, & Novizolium, in reliquis inferiorum partium Regni Civitatibus, nulla loca excidiſſent, quæ ſiquidem omnes una eademque libertatis præragativâ gauderent, Conditio etiam unius præ alterius deterior eſſe non deberet. In ſuperiori porrò Hungaria qualianam loca exciſa forent, ac ubi contra ſanam mentem evidentiſſimi hujus Paragraphi, in Civitatibus, adeoque earum mœniis, non verò extra eaſdem exciſionem locorum fiendam apertiſſimè declarantis, ad punctum 6. ubi commoda & convenientia, obque ſacrum finem Deo dicanda loca exſcindenda innuerentur, iſteque Paragraphus eo ſe reflexivè haberet, remonſtratum.

IX. ‘Ac tandem in liberis & montanis
Civitatibus, utpote Trenchinienſi, Modrenſi, Cremniczenſi & Novizolienſi, ac in ſu-
‘periore Hungaria, omnibus itidem Civi-
‘tatibus ſimiliter loca pro ædificandis
‘Templis, Scholis & Parochiis aſſignanda conceduntur.

[Quid ex his verbis directius & clarius inferri poteſt, quam quòd in liberis Civitatibus, quales ſunt Caſſovia, Epperies, Leuſchovia, Bartpha, Cibinium, Keſmarkimera, Nagybanya, Poſonium, Tyrnavia, Szakoliza, Bazinium, Modra, Sancti Georgij, Kúſzegh & Ruſt, & Montanis, quales itidem ſunt Novizolium, Veterozolium, Carpona, Schemniczium, Cremnizcium, Libethbanya, Breſznobanya, Bakabanya, Belabanya, Uybanya, & aliæ, (pro quarum modalitate præmiſſa quapiam diſtinctione, & diverſitate, proque exemplo ex utroque ordine tam videlicet Montanarum binæ, & Liberarum ſimiliter binæ recenſentur,) ſimiliter loca commoda, & quidem citra aliquam locorum exterorum reſtrictionem in ipſis Civitatibus, id eſt, in medio ipſarum Civitatum, juxta genuinum & literalem ſenſum præallegatorum verborum dicti Articuli, pro ædificandis Templis Scholis & Parochiis aſſignanda venirent.]

Contra X. Commiſſiones vero, uti præmiſſa 7. difficultate attactum, in nonnullis Comitatibus, qui omnino tempore conditi Articuli in actuali Templorum poſſeſſione fuerunt, contra dictamen hujus Articuli Templa talia una cum omnibus appertinentiis occuparunt, uti in Comitatu

X. Templa demum, in quorum actuali
‘poſſeſſione iidem Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ
‘Confeſſioni addicti de facto ſunt modo
‘prævio, præ manibus eorundem una cum
‘Parochiis & Scholis, proventibuſque eo-
‘rundem, propter bonum Pacis, ut nimirum
‘quiete

‘quiete & pacifice vivant, relinquuntur uſu Sepultnræ & Campanarum pro Catholicis ibidem degentibus æque ac ipſis libero relicto.

[Hoc quoque membrum clariſſimè confirmare comperitur, præſcriptum punctum 7. & innuere id, quod in quorum Templorum poſſeſſione actuali protunc Evangelici erant, ulterius etiam illis, unà cum proventibus, parochiis & ſcholis relinqui debere, uſu inſuper Campanarum & Sepulturæ communi utrimque manente.]

Comitatu Honthenſi & Oppido Gyógyós. Præterea in eodem Oppido Gyongyós nonnullæ privatæ perſonæ omnes proventus, & pia legata ab Evangelicis abſtraxerunt, Sepulturas in locis competentibus inhibuerunt, adeo ut complures in Cellariis demortuos ſuos longo tempore aſſervare neceſſitati fuerint, ad funerationem deſpectuoſam quadriviorum & compotorum relegati exiſtentes. Campanarum etiam liberum uſum fere ubique per Regnum eædem Commiſſiones Evangelicis interdixerunt. His ſimilia æque in Comitatu Zemplinienſi, ac ſignanter in præmentionati Dominij Rakocziani Oppidis, Thalia, Mád, Szantho, Kereſzthur, Tarczel, Liſzka, Bennye, Tolezva, Patak, Vyhally, Borſſy & Tokai, nominatis, Officiales ejuſdem Dominii patrarunt, quippe qui Univerſis dictorum oppidorum Templis (in quorum actuali Dominio tam tempore conditi hujus Articuli, quam expoſt etiam fuiſſent, de cæteroque præ poſſeſſione eorundem ad mentem Articuli imperturbatè relinqui debuiſſent.) cum eorundem proventibus per Evangelicos collatis, Parochiis item ac Scholis violenter occupatis liberum Religionis eorundem exercitium, vel in privata etiam domo uſuandum ſeveriſſimis ſub minis inhibuerunt, ac etiam Campanarum per eoſdem Oppidanos Evangelicos fieri curatarum, prout & Sepulturæ communem uſum planè non admittendum interdixerunt ; ſic Epperienſis & Caſſovienſis civitatum Evangelicis quoad proventus Eccleſiaſticos omnia pia legata per Magiſtratum loci & clerum ſunt via facti erepta ; quibus inſimul Campanarum & Sepulturæ communis uſus abſolutiſſimè denegatur. Funerum porro intra mœnia Civitatum cum ſolitis cantibus & ceremoniis conveniens & publica deductio ſevera cum comminatione cavetur & non admittitur.

XI. ‘Interea verò nec Catholici Miniſtris Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ Confeſſioni addictis, nec verò horum ſequaces Plebanis Catholicis ad mentem Articuli 11 An. 1647. ſolvere obligentur.

[Clariſſima ſunt hæc verba Articuli, & ex ſuperabundanti elucidantur per confirmationem 11 Artic. 1647. qui ſic habet: ‘Nec Evangelici Status Catholicis Plebanis, & è converſo Status Catholici Evangelicis Miniſtris ad ullas ſolutiones pendendas ſint obligati. Et per ſubſequentem Articulum 12. ejuſdem Ann. explicatius per hæc verba: ‘Ubi verò parochias non haberent Auditores Evangelici, ſolutionem pendant ſuæ Religionis Miniſtris, cujus videlicet Miniſterio, ſeu opera uſi fuerint, ſicut & Catholici Parochis Catholicis: Ubi autem hactenus Auditores Evangelici non ſolviſſent Plebanis Catholicis, impoſterum etiam ad nullas ſolutiones præſtandas ullo ſub prætextu cogantur ad ſolvendum; prout nec Catholici Evangelicis. Ad hæc, quoad Stolarum proventus & penſiones, tenore expreſſarum allegati 12 Articuli 1647. continentiarum: ‘Stolarum autem Proventus, ſeu ſolutiones in quibuſvis locis Plebani Catholici & Miniſtri Evangelici à ſuæ Religionis auditoribus totaliter percipiant. Quorum Articulorum evidentiſſima conſtitutione ab omni prorſus ſolutione Catholicis Plebanis fienda Evangelici liberantur & eximuntur, huicque tamquam poſitivæ legi firmiter inhærere volumus.]

Contra XI. Commiſſiones verò ubique in Comitatibus Plebanis Catholicis omnes ſolutiones addixerunt. In Civitatibus autem, ut ex Fiſco, ſeu Communi Civitatis ærario (ad quem reſpectu pluralitatis & majoris numeri Evangelicorum Catholici minimum quantum contribuerent) Plebanis ſolutio fiat, præſcripſerunt Nos, ut noſtratibus tam Miniſtris, quam Scholæ docentibus, extraordinariè ex propriis proſpiciamus, manifeſtè tam contra præſcriptos Articulos, quam etiam mentem Sacræ Scripturæ, laborantibus ſolum mercedem tribuentis ; non laborantibus verò nec manducare debere inventis, invitos cogendo. Officiales identidem ſæpe allegati Dominij Ragocziani in ſuperiori Hungaria, aſſumto quoque brachio Militari, ad ſolutionem Plebanis Catholicis in eodem dominio pèndendam citrà diſcrimen, Nobiles pariter & ignobiles incolas Evangelicos omni conatu adigunt.

XII. ‘Omnibus porro Magnatibus & Nobilibus in Regno degentibus in Arcibus & ſolitis Reſidentiis ſuis, pro ritu cujuſvis Profeſſionis, Oratoria & Sacella ædificare & donare liberum ſit.

[Hac in parte legalis eſt noſtra inſtantia, ut in ſolitis Reſidentiis Nobilium pro ritu cujuſque profeſſionis Oratoria & Sacella

Contra XII. Commiſſiones verò in pleriſque Comitatibus, ſignanter autem Lyptovienſi, Thuroczenſi, Zolienſi, Arvenſi, & aliis (licet à tempore occupatorum Templorum in uſu & praxi talis exercitij in Reſidentiis Nobilitaribus Articulariter permiſſi longo tempore præfuiſſent) abrogarunt, & ſub pœna militaris invaſionis reſidentiæ ſimilis nobilis, inhibue-

1681. runt. Prouti expoſt in Comitatu Lyptovienſi Domini Plebani ibidem per milites Likavienſes aliquot talium Nobilium domos invadi & expilari feciſſent. Et proximè in Trenchimienſi Comitatu Nobiles familiæ Noſdroviczky Prædicantem in reſidentia ſua pro adminiſtratione exercitij ſui intertenentes ſimiliter per milites Regiminis Morſſiani damnificati, & idem Miniſter ad carceres Arcis Lednicze raptatus nunc quoque ibidem detinetur. In inſula Czaloköz Nobiles Hodoſſienſes & circumjacentium locorum ſimiliter à reſidentiali Religionis ſuæ cultu prohibiti ſunt, & Miniſtri ibidem exiſtentis eo tum omnes res direptæ ſunt. Quam injuriam inferiorum quoque Hungariæ partium Nobiles Evangelici non ſine lamentis querulantur.

1681. habere liceat, prouti poſt factam Templorum occupationem id in uſum & praxin in Compluribus Comitatibus deductum fuerat.]

Utinam Concluſio hæc obſervaretur, & ad deſumtionem à Contravenientibus deſignatæ pœnæ Articularis procederetur, pacificam omnino & imperturbatam noſtri in libero Evangelico Exercitio permanſionem nobis polliceri poſſemus, tollereturque formidine pœnæ omnis fomes diſcordiarum. Quod ut fiat concordibus apprecamur votis & animis.

XIII. Poſthac verò nullæ Templorum, Scholarum & Parochiarum occupationes, vel Exercitij turbationes ab utrimque, ſub pœna in Articulo 8. Uladiſlai decreti 6. expreſſa, fiant.

Ex quorum Articulorum Sopronienſium, & per eos confirmatorum modalitate prævia membratim facta Deductione, ſiquidem & eorum claritas, & huic innixa Inſtantiænoſtræ æquitas, econtra verò Excelſarum Commiſſionum, aliorumq; in effectuatione eorum admiſſi abuſus & deformitates luce meridiana eluceſcunt, palpabileſque redduntur. Majeſtatem Veſtram Sereniſſimam per pretioſiſſimam Chriſti mortem, & glorioſiſſimam Reſurrectionem humillimis exoramus precibus, ut cognitis jam tandem ac Regio cordi admiſſis legitimis Poſtulatis noſtris, eadem per quoſcunque ulterius retardari non patiatur; quin potius (ſiquidem ea poſt tam longum tempus unà cum aliis tractatibus hic eatenus iſtitutæ Commiſſionis jam Majeſtatis Veſtræ Sereniſſimæ & intimo Conſilio reportata, imo certum Punctum dictorum Tractatuum, uti informamur, non tamen noſtrum, per D.D. intimos Conſiliarios revolutum & examinatum eſſet, verendum verò nobis veniret ne fors expoſt etiam aliud diverſum, & huic Inſtantiæ noſtræ inæſtimabilem moram nectens, reaſſumatur, ſicque nos eo majori adhuc temporis cum protractione, & jam exhauſtorum gravium ſumtuum diſpendio, animi pendentes ulterius adhuc detineamur,) juxta Majeſtatis Veſtræ Sereniſſimæ ante jam de anticipando & eximendo puncto Religionis Celſiſſimo Principi ſupremo Aulæ Præfecto gratioſiſſimè præbitum, ac nobis etiam per ſuam Celſitudinem ſignificatum, benigniſſimum Regium aſſenſum, præ aliis hanc animarum ſalutem tangentem Religionis inſtantiam per D.D. intimos Conſiliarios reaſſumendam, tractandam, & determinandam, quam propenſiſſime ordinare & committere, ac taliter cum numquam intermoritura Regalis ſui Regiminis ad normam glorioſorum Prædeceſſorum ſuorum fama, Nos in hac libertate Religioſa ſtabilire, ſtabilitoſque & expeditos primo quoque tempore ad Principales noſtros dimitti curare clementiſſimè dignetur. Gratiam hanc Cæſareo-Regiam Deus ex altis Majeſtatis Veſtræ Sereniſſimæ omnigena felicitate retribuet, Majeſtatis Veſtræ Sereniſſimæ.

Exhibita ſuæ Majeſtati Sereniſſimæ ad Capellam Arcenſem prodeunti Viennæ die 24 Menſis Aprilis Ann. 1689.

Humillimi perpetuoque fideles ſubditi,
Comitatuum, Civitatum, Oppidorum & Confiniorum Partium Regni Hungariæ Superiorum & Inferiorum à parte Evangelicorum in Negotio turbatæ Religionis ſuæ Ablegati Nuncij.

Diætæ Poſonienſis, Ann. 1687. Articulus XXI.
In negotio Religionis renovantur Articuli 25 & 26 Ann. 1681. cum interjecta Declaratione.

Licet quidem in Negotio Religionis Auguſtanæ & Helveticæ Confeſſioni addicti Articulis 25 & 26 noviſſimæ Diætæ Sopronienſis oppoſitam iiſdem per reclamationem ſuam abutentes ipſo facto eorundem beneficij participes eſſe deſiiſſent: propter bonum nihilominus domeſticæ unionis & pacis, internamque Regni tranquillitatem, cum ſua Majeſtas Sacratiſſima ex gratia & clementia ſua præcitatos Articulos adhuc ratos fore benigniſſime reſolviſſet, eoſdem Status quoque & Ordines ad mentem Paternæ reſolutionis (Cleri & aliorum ſecularium Catholicorum contradictione non obſtante) pro renovatis & priori firmitati reſtitutis cenſendos, acſi & in quantum hactenus ineffectuati, vel verò per aliquos abuſus ab una aut

altera

1681. altera parte medio tempore introductos, violati fuiſſent, ſuæ debitæ executioni, & tem- 1681.
pore eorundem conditorum Articulorum, vel expoſt occupatorum, aut reoccupatorum impendendæ reſtaurationi, utprimum demandandos eſſe ſtatuerunt.

Pacifications Viennenſis Ann. 1606. Articuli Primi Continentia hæc eſt.

QUantum itaque ad Religionis Negotium attinet, non obſtantibus prioribus pro tempore Conſtitutionibus Publicis, ſed neque Articulo poſtremo Anno 1604. (cum is extra diætam, & ſine Regnicolarum aſſenſu adjectus fuerit, & propterea etiam tollitur) deliberatum eſt; Ut juxta Sereniſſimæ Cæſariæ, Regiæque Majeſtatis priorem Reſolutionem, ad quam ſe Regnicolæ in ſua Replicatione referunt, nimirum: Quod omnes & ſingulos Status & Ordines intra ambitum Regni Hungariæ ſolum exiſtentes, tam Magnates, Nobiles, quam liberas Civitates, Oppida Privilegiata, immediate ad Coronam ſpectantia: Item in Confiniis quoque Regni Hungariæ Milites Hungaros in ſua Religione & Confeſſione nuſquam & numquam turbabit, nec per alios turbari, aut impediri ſinet; Verum omnibus prædictis Statibus & Ordinibus Regni liber Religionis ipſorum uſus & exercitium permittetur, abſque tamen præjudicio Catholicæ Romanæ Religionis, & ut Clerus, Templa & Eccleſiæ Catholicorum Romanorum intacta & libera permaneant, atque ea quæ hoc diſturbiorum tempore utrimque occupata fuere, rurſum eiſdem reſtituantur.

Anno 1608. Articuli Primi ante Coronationem editi de Ne Negotio Religionis tenor talis eſt:

QUantum itaque ad Primum Conſtitutionis Viennenſis Articulum attinet, deliberatum eſt per Status & Ordines Inclyti Regni Hungariæ, ut Religionis Exercitium tam Baronibus, Magnatibus & Nobilibus, quam etiam Liberis Civitatibus ac Univerſis Statibus & Ordinibus Regni, in ſuis & Fiſci bonis, item in Confiniis quoque Regni Hungariæ Militibus Hungaris ſua cuique Religio & Confeſſio, nec non Oppidis & Villis eam ſponte ac libere acceptare volentibus, ubiq; liberam relinquatur, nec quiſquam omnium in libero ejuſdem uſu ac exercitio, quoquam impediatur. Quin imo ad præcavenda inter Status & Ordines aliqua odia & diſſenſiones, ut quælibet Religio ſuæ Profeſſionis ſuperiores ſeu ſuperintendentes habeat, ſtatutum eſt.

N. B.

Ut utpoſterior hic Articulus primus Ann. 1608. *Ann*1618. Articulo 77. renovatus, Ann. 1622. tempore Ferdinandi II. Imperatoris Regio diplomati, per Generales Regni Conſtitutiones, Conditione 6 clariori ſenſu inſertus, Ann. 1625. Artic. 22. *Ann.*1630. Artic. 33. Ann. 1635. Artic. 29. *identidem tam idem Articulus, quam etiam prædeclarata Conditio ſexta, ſuo vigori reſtituti, Ann.*1638. memorata Conditio 6. diplomatis Regij Ferdinandi II. ſimiliter diplomate Regio Ferdinandi III. Imperatoris, æque Conditione 6*ta per expreſſam de verbo ad verbum confirmata, Ann.* 1647. Artic. 5*to novo diplomate Regio Pacificationis cum Illuſtriſſimo Principe Tranſylvaniæ Domino Georgio Ragoczy conditæ, diverſiſque aliis ſubſequentibus, uti,* 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 & 14. Articulis, quod ad diverſos caſus, ſtabilitus, Ann. 1649. Artic. 10. & Ann. 1655. Artic. 18. qua præattacta pacificatio Rakocziana, qua præſpecificati Articuli Anno 1647. pariter ratificati. Denique Anno 1659. moderni Imperatoris Leopoldi Regio inſimul diplomate, Publicis quoque Regni Conſtitutionibus Articulo 1. indito, Conditione ſimiliter 6*ta per omnia, ut in prioribus Ferdinandorum* II & III. Imperatorum diplomatibus, Verbo Regio ratihabitus eſſet, his nihilominus non obſtantibus, omnes prævij hi Articuli & Conditiones diplomaticæ omni ſua firmitate privati ſunt, Exercitio Religionis Evangelicæ contra omnes Sanctiones Articulares & publicas Regni Conſtitutiones, ſacra item Regia diplomata, in ipſiſimo Exterminio jamnum effective verſante.

Moſt Sacred, Imperial, and Royal Majeſty:

Moſt Gracious Sir,

1681. ALthough we have already made it appear to Your moſt Sacred Majeſty, and to the Miniſters of Your moſt Imperial Court, that many Injuſtices were done to us in the Year 1681, againſt the clear and evident Grants of the 25th and 26th Articles of Sopron, Humbly ſolliciting this full Year and a Half the Obſervation of the ſame, and the Redreſſing of the Grievances of our Evangelical Religion; yet, becauſe it is daily Reported, that by Virtue of Your Majeſty's Commiſſions appointed laſt Year, and before through Hungary nothing was Ordered, againſt the full intent of the ſaid Articles, and that we deſire more than is granted in them: We thought it our Duty to juſtify both our Complaints and our repeated Requeſts, (the reather becauſe the Worthy Miniſters of Your Imperial Court have often aſſur'd us, that without any delay or difficulty, we ſhould be maintain'd in the clear Grants of the ſaid Articles of Sopron,) in order to which we ſhall ſet down here, as in a kind of Table, the very words of the ſaid Articles, together with our Requeſts, againſt the Miſintepretation of the ſaid Articles, either by Your Majeſty's Commiſſioners, or by other Perſons under pretence of fulfiling the ſame, and the Deciſions made thereupon, by that means we ſhall ſhew Evidently that the ſaid Articles were Infring'd to our great prejudice, and that our Requeſts are moſt Juſt. 1681.

The XXV ARTICLE runs thus:

AND becauſe his Majeſty intending the Peace and general Quiet of the Kingdom was pleaſed alſo to come to a Gracious Reſolution upon the buſineſs of Religion, therefore the States of the Kingdom inſert the ſaid Reſolution in the Articles.

I. 'And Principally, whereas the free 'exerciſe of Religion (granted in the year '1606. by virtue of the Peace of Vienna) 'has been diſturbed in part during theſe 'Troubles; therefore (the firſt Article of 'the ſaid Peace being hereby confirm'd) the 'ſame free exerciſe of Religion is granted 'to every Perſon, and every where in the 'Kingdom; according to the firſt Article 'made before the Coronation in the year '1608. Provided that the Privileges of 'Lords of Manors be not hereby prejudiced.

Hereupon we require in the Article's own words, that the ſame free exerciſe of Religion (as was diſturbed in part during the Troubles, and before the Troubles did include Evangelical Miniſters or Preachers) be granted to every Perſon, and every where in the Kingdom, not excepting the free Cities, Towns and Villages, which make the fourth State, ſince they are expreſly comprehended in the aforeſaid Article made before theCoronation in the Year 1608.

Proceedings of the King's Commiſſioners contrary in every particular to the Articles of Sopron.

A*Gainſt the oppoſite firſt Article. The King's high Commiſſioners, or other private Perſons employ'd by them, have forbidden ſuch a free exerciſe of Religion, as could conſiſt in the Service of God through Preaching, Singing, Praying, Adminiſtring the Sacraments, bleſſing Marriages, making Burials, and uſing other wonted Ceremonies, which were perform'd by Eccleſiaſtical Miniſters, in many free Royal Cities and Mountain Towns, namely in* St. George, Bazinium, Tyrnaw, Zakoliza, Schemnizium, Veterozolium, Carpen, Libeten, Breznow, Bakaw, Bela, Vibania, Kuſſeghin and Ruſt; whereby it appears, That in thoſe places the ſaid Commiſſioners have ſuppreſt the whole exerciſe of Religion againſt the oppoſite Article; for where there is no Liberty for the above mention'd Acts of Religion, there can be no exerciſe of Religion at all. They have likewiſe depriv'd the Inhabitants of all the Towns and Villages in the Counties, of the free exerciſe of their Religion, by Virtue of that Clauſe inſerted for the deſtroying of our Religion, and of the Goſpel too (provided that the Privileges of the Lords of Manors be not hereby prejudiced) againſt the Confirmation of the Article made in the Tear 1608.

II. 'A free Return in the Kingdom, and a 'free exerciſe of Religion is granted alſo to 'all the Miniſters and School-maſters, that are 'either

Againſt the II. The ſaid Commiſſioners have Licenſed but two Miniſters in each County, and but one or two in ſome Free Cities all over over the Kingdom, Baniſhing all the reſt out of the Counties, ſome within a Fortnight and others within Three days; as in the Counties of Lypeze, of Orowa, of Owat, of Sachſag, of Zolnock and in others, or requiring ſtrict Deeds of Reverſion from the ſame, if they would continue in the ſaid Counties. They have alſo appointed, that there ſhould be no petty Schools, but ſuch where Children could learn only to Read and to Write. But what kind of Liberty it is, that hath been granted to our Miniſters to profeſs their Religion; appears 1ſt, By the Recorded Baniſhment of a great many of them out of the Counties. 2ly, By the Caſe of the Miniſters in Eperies, that have been turn'd out by a Roman Catholick Magiſtrate, under pretence that it was Your Majeſty's Pleaſure and Command, altho' that Town be particularly named in the Articles. 3ly, By the violence that the Official has done to the Miniſters and School-maſters, that liv'd but miſerably in the Dominion of Tokai in Upper Hungary, intimating to them under pain of Death, and the Forfeiture of all their Goods, to go out of the ſaid County, or by moſt ſtrict Deeds of Reverſion, to renounce for ever under the ſame penalty to perform any Eccleſiaſtical Duty in the ſaid County. 4ly, By the Confinement of ſeveral Miniſters, who are kept Priſoners in the Fort of Ledniche, by Order of his Eminence the Cardinal of Kolocza, and can obtain their Liberty on no other Condition, but that of ſubſcribing pernicious Deeds of Reverſion.

'either Baniſh'd or Kept out of their Employments, by reaſon of certain Deeds of Reverſion, the ſame Deeds being hereby made void and of no effect.

From thence it follows evidently, that the Miniſters and Schoolmaſters are to be reſtor'd from their Exile to their reſpective Profeſſions, and may live freely in any City, Town or Village of the Kingdom, performing the Duties of their Religion and Profeſſion, and that no more Deeds of Reverſion can be requir'd from them, ſince ſuch Deeds are condemned in the Article.

Againſt the III. Here our Sighs interrupt our Complaints, nor can we find words to expreſs how variouſly and miſerably our Miniſters and we have been, and are ſtill diſturbed every where, either by the ſaid Commiſſioners, or by other private Perſons. As for inſtance in ſhort, (not to repeat the abovemention'd Counties, and many Towns of the County of Semlyn, in the aforeſaid Dominion of Tokai, and their Miniſters) the above-mention'd City of Epperies in Upper Hungary, and in the Lower all the Cities beſides Preſburg, Sopron, Modra, Cremnicz and Neozolium, with their Evangelical Miniſters. As alſo the Miniſter of Hodoſſia in the Iſle of Shut, who had all the means of Life, Clothes, Books and Furniture taken from him by the Secretary of the Archbiſhop of Gran, and by the Soldiers which he brought along with him, which is the Fate of a great many others, that lead a moſt miſerable Life in perpetual Changes, owing their Liberty to a Special Providence of God, or having obtain'd it after they had paid great Fines, or made pernicious Deeds of Reverſion.

III. 'And no Hungarian Subject ſhall be diſturbed any way hereafter in the free Exerciſe of his Religion.

Theſe words, no Hungarian Subject exclude undoubtedly any Exception; the meaning plainly is, that no Eccleſiaſtical or Civil Perſon, no Nobleman, no Citizen, nor Peaſant ought to be diſturbed in the free exerciſe of Religion, and no Body will deny, but that an exerciſe of Religion can in no ſenſe be term'd free, unleſs there be Miniſters that officiate in it.

Againſt the IV. The ſaid Commiſſioners have Order'd, that the Evangelicks ſhould be made to bring their Proceſſional Trophies, and to Walk in Proceſſions, that the Evangelick Peaſant ſhould every where be forc'd to frequent Catholick Churches; and that in all the Free Cities where there is no publick exerciſe of our Religion, the Evangelick ſhould be obliged to Miniſterial Offices contrary to their way.

IV. 'None of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausburg, ſhall be compelled to any ceremony contrary to his Religion.

The generality of theſe words, confirms the foregoing i.e. that no Nobleman, nor Gentleman, no Citizen nor Peaſant ought to be compelled.

The XXVI. ARTICLE.

Againſt the V. The ſaid Commiſſioners having no regard to the Aſſignation appointed in the oppoſite Article, have ſeiz'd upon all the Churches and Chappels in the Counties of Lypcze, of Arva, of Turocz, of Zolnock and

V. 'Moreover the Churches (that have been Built by thoſe of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausbourg, and whoſe Members are not yet reconciled to the Catholick Church) ſhall

1681. ‘be aſſign'd to them by certain Commiſſioners.’

Hereupon we require, that thoſe Chappels and Churches be deliver'd and aſſign'd to us, whoſe Members are not yet reconciled to the Catholick Church, of which ſort many would be found in the Counties of Lypcze, of Owar, &c.

1681. and of Sachſag, although the Churches of Pribocz, Bella and Zathuriza, in the County of Turocz have been Built by the Evangelick, who were never reconciled to the Catholick Church; there are likewiſe Chappels in Kiratilehota, Potornia, Vicbicz, &c. in the County of Lypcze, that were Built by the Evangelicks and the Lords of thoſe Manors; nevertheleſs, they are ſeverely forbidden to make any uſe of them, either Eccleſiaſtical or Civil, being ſent to two very remote inconvenient and dangerous places, where they have only liberty to Build ſuch Churches as cannot contain the Congregation by ſeveral Thouſands.

VI. ‘It is order'd alſo, according to his Majeſty's Gracious Reſolution, that in other places the ſame Commiſſioners, aſſign places to build Churches and Schools, and erect Pariſhes for the conveniency of thoſe of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausbourg.

Hereupon we require, that inſtead of the inconvenient and undecent places, which are aſſigned out of Caſſovia and Eſperies in Upper Hungary, others be appointed within the Walls, as alſo in all the Free and Royal Cities, where there is convenient and large eſpaces, ſince thus much is ſignifi'd by the words which will be ſet down lower Fig.9.

Againſt the VI. No Convenient places for Churches, Pariſhes and Chappels have been aſſign'd in any free Royal Town of Upper Hungary, but here the Commiſſioners, there the Officials of the Chamber, and elſewhere private Perſons, as in Caſſovia and Epperies, have appointed places for Churches, Pariſhes and Schools, which are at a great diſtance in the Fields, out of Deſert and Deſolate, Suburbs; and which are for any Common uſe of the Three Nations, which rendreth them ſo inconvenient and naſty, that to dedicate Churches to the moſt Holy God in ſuch places, were a moſt deteſtable Crime for any ſort of Chriſtians.

VII. ‘But in other Counties, as in thoſe of Salawar, of Veſprim, of Saraz, of Moramoruſs, of Abavivar, of Sellia, of Semlyn, of Ugoza, of Bodrogh, of Tornaw, of Komorra, of Barzod, of Sachſag, of Novigrad, of Zolnock, of Hewecz, of Peſth, Pelicz and Soldth united, of Unghwar, of Chege and of Zatmar; ſince the Evangelicks are actually in poſſeſſion of almoſt all the Churches there, the ſame Churches are left for the uſe of the actual poſſeſſors of them.

Hereupon we require, that the Evangelicks may recover and undiſturbedly poſſeſs all the Churches, which were poſſeſſed by them in the aforeſaid Counties when the Article was made, and which for the moſt part are now taken from them againſt the ſaid Article.

Againſt the VII. In many Counties as alſo in that of Sachſag, (which is one of the aforenam'd) the King's Commiſſioners have cauſed all the Churches to be taken from the Evangelicks, and their Miniſters to be turn'd out by the Vicount of that County; the Officials have done the like in the Counties of Abavivar, of Semlyn, of Ugoza, and in all the Towns of the Dominion of Tokai, as we have already mention'd; and ſome private Perſons have preſum'd to ſeize upon the Church belonging to thoſe of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausbourg in the Town of Gyongyos, (which Gyongyos maketh the moſt conſiderable part of the County of Hewecz) to put out their Miniſters, and even forbid the Evangelicks to exerciſe any way their Religion in that place. The like has been done in the Town of Jaſzbreny, and the Frontiers of Legrad, although the abovemention'd Counties be named in the Article, whereby the Evangelicks are left in the Poſſeſſion of all thoſe Churches, which they had in the ſaid Counties when the Article was made.

VIII. ‘The ſame is granted in the Frontier Towns of the Kingdom, viz. to thoſe of Zentgrod in the diviſion near Caniſa; of Tyhany, Vaſony, Papa, Veſprim, Raab and Comorra, in the diviſion of Raab; of Leva, Carpen and Tuletin, in the diviſion before the Mountains; and of Putnock, Onod, Zendro, Tokai, Calo and Zatmar, in the diviſion of Upper Hungary.

By

Againſt the VIII. In the Town of Maromaruſs, and in the places round about it, private Men have forbidden the whole exerciſe of Religion, charging with Beat of Drums all the Evangelicks, to go and exerciſe their Religion out of that Frontier under pain of Impriſonment, and other ſevere Puniſhments. After the ſame manner the King's Commiſſioners in Carpen, and the Deputies in Tokai have forbid- forbidden the exerciſe of Religion, and ſeiz'd upon the Churches, although both theſe places be particularly named in the Articles.

By vertue of this Grant, the Evangelicks that live in Maromaruſs, Carpen, Tokai, and in any other abovemention'd Frontier Town, ought to enjoy the ſame free exerciſe of Religion, and uſe the ſame Churches as they did in thoſe Towns when the Article was made.

Againſt the IX. The ſaid Commiſſioners, or their Deputies have appointed places for Churches, Schools and Pariſhes out of Trenſchin, Modra, Cremnicz and Novizolium, and none at all in the reſt of the Towns of Lower Hungary; now why ſhould the Caſe of ſome be worſe than that of others? ſince all have the ſame Priviledge of Liberty in Upper Hungary. They have likewiſe appointed ſome places for Churches, Schools and Pariſhes not in, but out of the Cities, againſt the true meaning of the oppoſite part of the Article, which moſt evidently declareth, that thoſe places muſt be appointed within and not without the Walls of the Cities, or elſe they could not be ſuch as are appointed Fig. 6. i. e. convenient and fit to be conſecrated for the publick ſervice of God.

IX. 'Furthermore, in all the free and 'Mountain Towns, as in Trenſchinmodra, 'Cremnicz, Novizolium, and in all the Cities 'of Upper Hungary, places ſhall be aſſign'd 'likewiſe for Churches, Schools and Pariſhes.

What more direct and clear can be concluded from theſe words, but that in the free Cities, ſuch as are Caſſovia, Epperies, Leuſchovia, Bartpha, Cibinium, Keſmurkim, Nagybania, Presburg, Tyrnaw, Zakoliza, Bazinium, Modra, St. George Kuſſegh, Ruſt, and in the Mountain Towns ſuch as are Novizolium, Veterozolium, Carpen, Schemninizium, Cremniczium, Libeten, Breznow, Baka, Bela, Vibania, &c. (for the modifying of which, two of each ſort, viz. of the free Cities, and of the Mountain Towns, are brought as inſtances with a certain diſtinction, or ſpecification uſed before) convenient places for Churches, Pariſhes and Schools, muſt be aſſigned not out of the Walls which were to reſtrain the Article, but in the very middle of the Cities and Towns, according to the genuine and literal meaning of the words of the aforeſaid Article.

Againſt the X. In many Counties, and particularly in that of Sachſag, and the Town of Gyongyos, the King's Commiſſioners have taken ſuch Churches together, with their Appendages as were poſſeſſed by the Evangelicks, when the Article was made, which we have hinted in the foregoing fifth Grievance. Moreover in the aforeſaid Town of Gyongyos, many private Perſons have taken all the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues, and Pious Legacies from the Evangelicks, forbidding them withal to Bury their Dead in the uſual places, which has made many keep Corps in Cellars a long time, rather than Bury them in Carfax and Croſſways as they were appointed. The Commiſſioners have alſo deprived the Evangelicks of the uſe of the Bells almoſt every where; the Officials have done the like in the County of Semlin, and particularly in theſe Towns of the aforeſaid Dominion of Tokai, Thalia, Mod, Zantho, Kerethur, Tarezal Liſzka, Benny, Tolezva, Patak, Veyelly, Borzi and Tokai ſeizing upon all the Churches, Schools and Pariſhes, (which at the time of and after the Treaty were poſſeſſed by the Evangelicks, and left to the ſame by the ſaid Article) together with the Revenues that have been given to them by the Evangelicks, forbidding with moſt ſevere threatnings the free exerciſe of our Religion even in private Houſes, and hindering the Evangelicks from the common uſe of Burials and Bells, though made at their own care and charge. Likewiſe the Magiſtrates and Clergy Men of the Town of Caſſovia and Epperies, have taken by force all the pious Legacies left to our Churches, and forbidden abſolutely the common uſe of Bells and Burials, Threatning with the moſt ſevere Puniſhments thoſe that would make publick Burials within the Walls, with the uſual Singing and decent Ceremonies.

X. 'Finally, the Churches which are 'actually poſſeſſed by thoſe of the Helvetian Confeſſion, and of that of Ausburg 'ſhall be ſtill for their uſe as before, together with the Pariſhes and Schools and 'their Revenues, that they may live in 'peace and quiet; but the ſame free uſe of 'Bells and Burials is left to the Catholicks 'in thoſe parts as to them.

This confirms evidently the above written ſeventh Point, and ſignifieth that the Churches which the Evangelicks were actually poſſeſſed of, ſhould remain for their uſe, together with the Revenues, Pariſhes, and Schools; the Bells and Burials remaining common for the uſe of both Parties.

XI. 'Nevertheleſs the Catholicks ſhall not be obliged to pay any thing to the Miniſters of the Evangelicks, nor the Evangelicks to the Curates of the Catholicks, according to the meaning of the 11*th* Article Ann. 1647.

This cannot be clearer, nor better Commented upon than by the confirmed 11*th* Article which runs thus: 'The Evangelicks ſhall not be obliged to pay any thing to the Catholick Curates, nor the Catholicks to the Evangelick Miniſters': And by the following 12*th* Article, yet more plainly in theſe words; 'But where the Evangelicks have no Pariſhes, let them pay the Miniſters that they employ, as the Catholicks are to pay their Catholick Curates; and where hitherto the Evangelicks did pay nothing to the Catholick Curates, they ſhall not be obliged hereafter to pay under any pretence whatſoever; Nor the Catholicks to the Evangelick Miniſters. Add to this the words of the aforeſaid 12*th* Article in the year 1647, concerning the Revenues and Penſions of the Schools; 'But in any place whatſoever the Catholick Curates, and the Evangelick Miniſters ſhall receive the Revenues of Schools, and Penſions from their reſpective followers; by which moſt evident conſtitution of the Articles, the Evangelicks are freed and diſcharged from paying any thing to the Catholick Curates; and to this poſitive Law we deſire to adhere.

Againſt the XI. Every where in the Counties, the Commiſſioners have adjudged all the Payments to the Catholick Curates, and Ordered in the Cities that they ſhould be paid out of the common Purſe, wherein the Catholicks could contribute but little, they being but few in number in compariſon of the Evangelicks; thus they have forced us maugre our ſelves, to be at extraordinary Charges out of our own States, for the maintaining of our Miniſters and School-maſters, not only againſt the right intention of the aforeſaid Articles, but alſo againſt the plain Senſe of the Holy Scripture, which allows a Salary for ſuch as Labour, and even nothing to Eat for ſuch as Labour not: After the like manner the Official of the abovementioned Dominion of Tokai in Upper Hungary, do all their endeavours to make both Noble and Ignoble Evangelicks, pay without diſtinction the Chatholick Curates.

XII. 'All the Peers and Noblemen that live in the Kingdom have Liberty to Build and Endow Oratories, and Chappels according to their reſpective profeſſion of Religion in their uſual places of Reſidence.

Hereupon we require, that Noblemen may have Oratories and Chappels according to their reſpective profeſſions of Religion in their uſual dwelling places, as the ſame was practiſed in many Counties after the taking of our Churches.

Againſt the XII. In many Counties, viz. in that of Lypcz, of Turocz, of Zolnock, of Arva, &c. the ſaid Commiſſioners have ſuppreſſed and forbidden, under pain of Military Execution the exerciſe of Religion, which is granted to Noblemen in their places of Reſidence, and which they had enjoy'd long ſince the Churches were ſeized accordingly in the County of Lypcze, the Clergy Men have cauſed ſome ſuch Noblemen's Houſes to be aſſaulted, and plunder'd by the Garriſon of Likavia, and in the County of Trenſchin, the Noble Family of Noſdroviſky which did keep a Miniſter, for the Exerciſe of Religion in its place of Reſidence, has been much damnified alſo by the Soldiers of Merſia's Regiment, and the Miniſters put into the Priſon of the Fort of Ledniche, where he is kept to this day; likewiſe the Noblemen of Hodoſſia, of the places round about in the Iſle of Shut, have been deprived of the free exerciſe of Religion in their places of Reſidence, and the Miniſters that lived there then, have been Plunder'd of all their Goods, which Injuſtice the Evangelick Noblemen of Lower Hungary do alſo complain of.

XIII. 'Hereafter no Churches, Schools and Pariſhes ſhall be ſeized, nor Exerciſe hinder'd on either ſide, under the pain expreſſed in the 8*th* Article of the 6*th* Decree of Uladiſlaus.

Would to God that this Concluſion were obſerved, and the Puniſhment hinted in the Article inflicted upon the Oppoſers thereof; then we might promiſe our ſelves to enjoy quietly, and undiſturbedly the free exerciſe of our Religion, and then the fewel of Diviſions would be extinguiſhed, and taken away for fear of being Puniſh'd, which, that it may be done is our Hearty Prayer and Deſire.

Now having lay'd before Your Sacred Majeſty the Articles of Sopron, and the Abuſes committed in the executing of them, it is as clear as the Sun, that we require nothing but what is granted in them; We humbly beſeech Your moſt Sacr'd Majeſty, through Chriſt's Precious Death and Glorious Reſurrection, that having known and laid up in Your Royal Heart our lawful Requeſts, Your Sacred Majeſty ſuffer no longer the ſame 1681. to be hinder'd by any Perſon whatſoever, but rather (ſince after ſo long time they have been Reported before Your moſt Sacred Majeſty, and before Your Privy Council, together with ſome Treatiſes of the appointed Commiſſion; Nay, being inform'd that a certain Point of the ſaid Treatiſes (that doth not concern us) has been examin'd by the Lords of the Privy Council; it makes us fear, leſt ſomething elſe be taken into conſideration, whereby an Anſwer to our Requeſts may be occaſion'd, and we yet longer detain'd here under the inconveniency of Doubt, of Delay, and of continuance of the vaſt Charges we have already been at) according to Your moſt Sacred Majeſty's Gracious Conſent (given to the moſt High Prince Preſident of the Court, and intimated to us by his Highneſs) to diſpatch firſt the Buſineſs of Religion, that Your Sacred Majeſty be graciouſly pleaſed to appoint and commit our Requeſts, which ſo narrowly concern the Salvation of our Souls, to be conſider'd again, and determin'd by the Lords of the Privy Council, ſo to Eſtabliſh us in the Liberty of Religion, to the Immortal Fame of Your Royal Government, after the Example of Your Glorious Predeceſſors; that being reliev'd We may ſpeedily Return to our Principals, and God will recompence this Imperial, Royal Favour with all ſort of Happines from above. 1681.

Deliver'd to His Sacred Majeſty at Aix la Chapelle, upon his going to Vienna, the 24*th* day of April, in the year 1689.

Your moſt Sacred Majeſty's moſt Humble and Faithful Subjects, the Deputies of the Evangelicks in the Counties, Cities, Towns and Frontiers of Upper and Lower Hungary, about the Buſineſs of their diſtreſſed Religion.

The Firſt Article of the Peace of Vienna in the Year 1606.

AS to the Buſineſs of Religion, notwithſtanding the former publick Conſtitutions, and the laſt Article of the Year 1604, (which was made without the Diet, and the conſent of the Subjects, and therefore is annulled,) it is granted, That (according to his Imperial Majeſty's former Reſolution, to which the Subjects refer themſelves in their replying) all and each State of the Kingdom of Hungary, as well the Peers and Noblemen, as the free Cities, and the Privileged Towns belonging immediately to the Crown, and all the Hungarian Soldiers in the Frontiers, ſhall any where, and at any time profeſs and exerciſe their Religion without any Diſturbance, either from His moſt Sacr'd Majeſty, or from any Perſon whatſoever; a free exerciſe of Religion being hereby granted to all the ſaid States of the Kingdom. Provided always, That the Roman Catholick Religion be not thereby prejudiced, That the Roman Catholick Clergy, Churches and Chappels remain free and unmoleſted, and that what has been taken from them in theſe Troubles be reſtor'd.

The Firſt Article made before the Coronation in the Year 1608. concerning Religion.

COncerning the firſt Article of the Treaty of Vienna, it is reſolv'd by the States and Orders of Hungary, that the Exerciſes of Religion ſhall be left free, not only to the Noblemen, and to the Inhabitants of the free Cities, but alſo to the Hungarian Soldiers in the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Hungary, and to all the Farmers and Peaſant that will freely accept the ſame; nor ſhall any of 'em be diſturbed in the free Exerciſe of Religion, but to prevent any effect of hatr'd and diſſenſion between Roman Catholicks and Proteſtants, It is Order'd, That each Party ſhall have a Superior, or Superintendant of his own Profeſſion.

Although this laſt firſt Article of the Year 1608, was renew'd in 77*th* Article of the Year 1618, inſerted in the General Conſtitutions of the Kingdom by Order of the Emperor Ferdinand the Second, in the Year 1622, reſtor'd to his Force by the 22*d* Article of the Year 1625, by the 33*d* Article of the Year 1630, and by the 29*th* Article of the Year 1635, confirm'd in the 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14*th* Articles of the new Treaty of Peace made with George Ragoczy, Prince of Tranſilvania in the Year 1648; Ratifyed both in the aforenamed Articles of 1649, and in the 10*th* Article of the Year 1649, and in the 18*th* Article of the Year 1655 made at Rakoczia; and laſtly, confirm'd again and inſerted in the Conſtitutions of the Kingdom, by Order of Leopold the preſent Emperor, in the Year 1659; yet notwithſtanding all theſe, the ſaid Article remains without Force, and the Exerciſe of the Proteſtant Religion is wholly exterminated againſt the Articles, and the publick Conſtitutions of the Kingdom, as well as againſt the Sacred Imperial Letters Patent.

1681. And yet all this contributed little towards a Peace, for the Reſults of this Diet concerned none but the good and quiet Men, and ſuch as were zealous for the Settlement and Peace of their Country: Whileſt Tekeli and others of that Spirit, whoſe Minds were poſſeſs'd with virulent Malice and Ambition, were plotting and contriving the means to ſet up their own Authority, and give themſelves into the Hands of the Turks, rather than to the Power of their Sovereign Prince, of whoſe natural Clemency thô they were well aſſur'd; yet they ſuſpected and fear'd his Councils, which being chiefly influenced and directed by Jeſuits, and the Spirit of the Clergy could never be reconciled in any tollerable manner to the Proteſtant profeſſion.

Tekeli beſieges Kalo.

Thus whileſt things were Negotiating in the Diet Tekeli beſieg'd Kalo, which ſurrendr'd at diſcretion with little or no reſiſtance; and Prince Apaſi joyning with ſome Parties of the Malecontents laid Seige to Zatmar, with an Army compoſed of Tranſilvanians, Moldavians, Turks and Malecontents of Hungary, all which acted in four ſeparate Bodies, being well provided with Cannon, and all ſorts of Ammunition and Proviſions; ſo ſoon as Apaſi had form'd his Siege, he put forth a Manifeſt or Declaration, which he cauſed to be privately ſtolen into the Town, and there diſpers'd, ſignifying, that out of Chriſtian piety, and compaſſion to the miſerable ſtate of that Kingdom, he had left his Country and Dwelling with no other intent, than only to cauſe their Churches to be reſtor'd to them, with a free Liberty of Conſcience and Exerciſe of Religion; and that their Eſtates which had been confiſcated for the ſake of their Religion, and defence of their Rights, and Privileges might be again reſtor'd to them:

Apafi's Declaration.

To which he added many Solemn Proteſtations, that he had no other end, nor intention than the welfare and happineſs of the Kingdom. Farther alſo he ſaid, that he had a power ſufficient for this Enterpriſe, being well ſeconded by the Grand Seignior, and acted by his Commiſſion, and that the Succeſſion to the Principality was promiſed unto his Son; to whom, beſides the Forces with him, he had left a Guard of 20.000 Men.

Apafi inveſts Zatmar.

Having made thus much known to the Inhabitants of Zatmar, he vigorouſly proceeded in the Siege, having received a Recruit of 8000 Men from the Paſha of Buda, being a Detachment from 40.000, which were Encamp'd before the place whereof he was Governour: And thô with theſe Forces the Town of Zatmar was taken; yet Serini who Commanded the place retiring into the Caſtle or Citadel, he ſo well defended the ſame, that Apaſi was forc'd to raiſe the Siege and march away; burning ſeveral Towns, and taking a Thouſand Priſoners in his Retreat. 1682.

The Siege raiſed.

The raiſing of this Siege was variouſly interpreted, and ſo ill taken by the Turks, that Complaints were made thereof againſt Apaſi at the Port. But it was no time now to make alterations, or diſturbances in Tranſilvania.

The Empreſs Crowned Queen of Hungary.

Towards the end of this year, the Emperor being deſirous to Crown the Empreſs at Oedembourg, ſent a Convoy of 500 Huſſars, 100 Heyduks, and 500 Cuiraſſiers to fetch the Crown of St. Stephen from the Caſtle of Presburg, where it is always lodg'd, which being brought thither the Empreſs was Crown'd Queen of Hungary with great Solemnity: And that this Ceremony might be performed with the more order and ſecurity, a Ceſſation of Arms was agreed with Tekeli for ſix Moths. And to make appear, how propitious this day of Coronation was like to be, Count Caprara fell on the Rear of Apaſi's Forces, as they were retiring into their own Country, took all their Baggage, and entring into Tranſilvania burn'd five Caſtles and divers Villages; and thus ended the Campagne of this year.

ANNO, 1682.

With this year the Scene of War began to open, and the Turks to declare their Reſolutions bent all their Forces againſt Hungary. 1682. Nor would the Malecontents maintain the Truce made by Tekeli, or be reſtrain'd from committing many Acts of Hoſtility.

The Malecontents and Turks intercept the Corn and Soldiers Cloths belonging to the Emperor's Army.

For thô the Ceſſation of Arms was again confirm'd and renewed, yet in deſpight of this Treaty, and contrary to the Faith given, the Malecontents ſeiz'd on all the Grane, which the Emperor had bought on the Frontiers of Poland, as it was carrying to the ſeveral Stores and Granaries, where it was to be lodged: And about the ſame time the Turks took many Carts laden with Soldiers Coats, as they were carrying to the Imperial Army.

Tekeli received at Buda.

Howſoever, Tekeli pretended to keep and conſerve the Faith and Promiſes which he had given; and during that Vacation made a Journey to Buda with a Guard of 3000 Men, where he was received by the Paſha of that Place, at the Head of his Janiſaries, and conducted with great Magnificence and State to the Palace; where the Paſha took off Tekeli's Cap, and placed on his Head another after the Turkiſh faſhion richly Embroider'd, and beſet with Precious Stones and Herons Feathers, which ſome call a Diadem; and ſay, that with that Ceremony he was by the Turks 1682. created King of Hungary. Howſoever it was ſo carried, that the Emperor underſtood it not in that manner, or at leaſt would not ſo interpret it; for at the ſame time he received a Meſſenger from Tekeli, who came to deſire his Majeſty's conſent, that he might take the Widow of Prince Ragotski to Wife; to which the Emperor readily aſſented, knowing that the Marriage would ſucceed in caſe he refuſed, and ſo making a Virtue of neceſſity, he hoped by ſuch a Gracious condeſcention, to regain the Heart of Tekeli, unleſs it were become obdurate beyond all poſſibility of being won, either by Generoſity or Compulſion. Having thus gain'd the Emperor's Aſſent, he ſpeedily made a Journey to Mongatz, where he conſummated the Marriage with the Princeſs with great Joy and Solemnity, and took Poſſeſſion of all the Towns, and Caſtles belonging to that Lady.

The Emperor aſſents to the Marriage of Tekeli with the Princeſs Ragotski.

Their Marriage.

She was bred up by her Mother in the Roman Catholick Religion, but her Huſband converted her, and made her a Proteſtant. During the Life of her Mother ſhe was reſtrain'd from this Marriage, but after her Death, ſhe became an admirer of 1682. Tekeli's Bravery, and yielded to the Ambition and Flatteries of being a Queen, which was whiſper'd to her by her Huſband; who told her, that the Cap which the Paſha of Buda had put upon his Head, was no other than a Diadem after the Cuſtom and Faſhion of the Turks. The Emperor, who was a Stranger to theſe Matters, believing that ſome uſe might be made of this Alliance, whereby to gain the Mind of Tekeli, employ'd Count Serini to his Siſter the Princeſs, to compaſs this Deſign; but ſo far was Serini from anſwering the expectations of his Imperial Majeſty, that he enter'd into the Combination and Conſpiracy with Tekeli himſelf.

1682. About the beginning of the Month of July, Count Albert Caprara, Brother of General Caprara, who reſided for the Emperor at Conſtantinople, adviſed, That at length he had been admitted unto Audience with the Grand Vizier, who declar'd, That he would neither continue the Truce longer, nor yet renew it, but on theſe following Conditions.

The Turks offer Conditions ſhameful for the Emperor.

That Hungary ſhould be reſtor'd unto the Condition, in which it was in the year 1655.

That the Kingdom ſhould pay the Annual Tribute of Fifty thouſand Florins every Year unto the Grand Seignior.

That the Fortifications of Leopolſtadt, and Gratz ſhould be demoliſhed.

That Neutra, Schultz and Eckoſ, with the Iſland of Schultz neer Presburg, and the Fortreſs of Muran be deliver'd, and ſurrendred up into the Hands of Count Tekeli.

That a General Pardon be given to the Malecontents, and that they be reſtor'd to their Goods and Eſtates, and to all their Privileges and Immunities, in ſuch manner as if none of theſe Wars or Diſturbances had happen'd. But theſe Conditions were ſo hard, and ſhameful to be impoſed on any but a conquer'd People, that it was adjudged by the Emperor's Council, that an honourable War, was much rather to be preferr'd, before ſuch an Ignominious and Scandalous Peace.

The time for the Ceſſation of Arms being expir'd, to which the Malecontents had yielded only to gain time, whileſt the Turks were preparing their formidable Army, Tekeli ſurpriz'd the Caſtle of Zatmar, and put all the Garriſon conſiſting of Eighty Men, to the Sword; and turning afterwards his Cannon on the City, it was Surrender'd to him at Diſcretion. Thence he Marched to Caſſovia, and laid Siege to it, and at the ſame time the Tranſilvanians and Moldavians joyning with the Paſha of Buda, laid Siege to Filek. Whileſt Tekeli lay before Caſſovia, he received a Recruit of Fourteen thouſand Men, which were ſupply'd to him by his Wife the Princeſs, out of thoſe Troops which were levied in her own Country; and the Paſha of Agria came with Four thouſand Horſe more to his aſſiſtance. The Town was notwithſtanding bravely defended for ſeveral days by Lieutenant Colonel Lamb; but being out of hopes of all Succours it Surrender'd at Diſcretion: Many of the Garriſon revolted to the Malecontents; but Four hundred of them endeavouring to Retire, and having given no intimation of a Mine, which afterwards was Sprang with great loſs and hurt of the Beſiegers, they were all put to the Sword: The Governour was made a Priſoner of War, and the Inhabitants to ſave themſelves from Pillage and Plunder, paid the Sum of 50.000 Crowns. The Inhabitants of Eſperies being affrighted at the misfortune of Caſſovia, Surrender'd it ſelf on Conditions without ſtriking one Stroak; the German Garriſon being Two hundred in all, were permitted to March out with their Baggage, and had a ſafe Conduct as far, as to the Frontiers of Poland, and from thence Licenſe to March into Sileſia, nor were the Prieſts and Roman Catholicks permitted to remain in the City. After which, Tekeli by advice of the Paſha of Buda demoliſhed the whole Town, not being obliged to maintain a Garriſon for it's defence. In the mean time the Paſha of Waradin laid Siege to Filek, and took it in deſpight

Succeſſes of Tekeli at Zatmar.

Caſſovia and Filek beſieged and taken

Eſperies yields.

And is demoliſhed.

1682. deſpight of Strazoldo, who left the Villages of the Mountains, and marched with Three thouſand Horſe and Four thouſand Foot for its Relief; as alſo to the ſame end, Count Caprara paſſed the River Waagh with Six thouſand Men, whileſt Count Staremberg defended the Paſſage with Four or Five thouſand Men, and the Palatine Eſterhaſi was coming on the other ſide with Six thouſand Men more; yet notwithſtanding the Art and Bravery of ſo many Generals, the Town was taken in their own Sight, as if they had only come with deſign to be Spectators of the Succeſs, and Victory of their Enemies. The Hungarian Souldiers, who were in the Garriſon took part with the Turks; but the Germans were made Priſoners of War, and all the Women and Children were carried away Captives, and the place it ſelf was razed and demoliſhed. Leventz and Neutra followed the like Example, and Surrender'd to the Turks; of all which Acts of Hoſtility, when Complaints were made by the Emperor to the Paſha of Buda, no other Anſwer was return'd, Than that thoſe Actions were not to be eſteemed as Breaches of the Truce, in regard they were only made in purſuit of Thieves and Robbers who had Infeſted the Countries, and took Refuge and Sanctuary in thoſe Cities.

1682. After theſe Succeſſes, Tekeli made Incurſions into the County of Sepoſo, where he Plunder'd and Burnt Sobora and Saſtzin, Towns belonging to Prince Lubomiski Great Marſhal of Poland; which was the Cauſe (as we ſhall afterwards underſtand) why Six thouſand Poliſh Horſe joyn'd themſelves to General Schultz, under the Command and Conduct of that Prince

ANNO 1683.

1683. ALL hopes and expectations of Peace being now laid aſide, the Vizier being advanced with his Troops as far as Belgrade, the Emperor notwithſtanding to leave nothing undone which might tend to a Peace, diſpatched Saponara to Belgrade, to Sollicite once more for more eaſy Conditions than what had been offer'd to Count Albert Caprara at Conſtantinople: But becauſe Matters were gone too far, to expect any fruit, or benefit from ſuch Negotiations; and becauſe it was not probable, but rather impoſſible that the Vizier, who would not accept of the Conditions offer'd him by the Emperor, before he removed from the Port, would now after a long March to Belgrade, and after he had raiſed all the Militia and Power of Aſia, and been at a vaſt expence in the Preparations of War; ſhould now condeſcend, or remit theſe Demands which had formerly been requir'd: Wherefore as I ſay, The Emperor expecting no farther benefit from a Treaty, than only to ſatisfy himſelf and the World, that he had done every thing in his Power, which might produce a Peace; he provided for War, and in the firſt place employ'd Count Martinitzion on an Embaſſie to the Pope, and other Princes of Italy to obtain from them Aid, and Succours both of Men and Money. 1683.

Saponara ſent to Belgrade.

1683.

Forces raiſed.

The Emperor's Forces towards the end of the laſt year, and at the beginning of this, conſiſted of 20.000 Men; to increaſe which, Orders were given to all Colonels, and Officers fully to Compleat their Regiments, and Troops againſt the end of May. Commiſſions were alſo given out to raiſe Six Regiments of Horſe, and one of Foot, beſides Four Regiments of Croats: And the Regiment of Prince Charles of Loraine, being fully recruited was divided into two Bodies: And to raiſe Money for maintenance of theſe new Levies, and for the War, the Hundreth Peny was laid on all Rents of Lands, and Revenue or Income from Offices, by which it was ſuppoſed, that a vaſt Sum might be raiſed: And moreover Four Millions were borrowed; for ſecurity of which a Mortgage was given to Count Swartzemberg, and other Miniſters upon the Demeſnes of the Dutchy of Trinchin and Sileſia. The Fortifications of Vienna were continued with greater diligence, and numbers of Men than formerly; and the Suburbs were order'd to be demoliſhed, and the Cellars to be filled up with Earth; thô the Inhabitants being deſirous to continue in their Dwellings, ſo long as was poſſible, deferr'd to abandon their Houſes, until ſuch time as they were aſſur'd of the certainty of a Siege intended.

1683. Money raiſed.

Vienna fortified.

Count Albert Caprara recalled.

The Emperor being by this time farther aſſur'd, that the Turks deſign'd nothing leſs than a Peace, having made all the Steps and Preparations neceſſary towards a War, diſpatched his Orders to Count Albert Caprara, to take his laſt Audience of leave, and ſo depart from the Ottoman Court: But that Licenſe would not be granted to him; it being the Cuſtom of the Turks in all their Wars, to carry the Perſon of the Ambaſſador of that Prince with them in their Camp, againſt whom they wage War, with intention to make uſe of his Service, in caſe the Succeſs of Affairs ſhould at any time incline them to a Treaty. The Baron of Kaunitz was ſent to the Elector of Bavaria, and Count Windiſgratz to the Princes of the Circles of Lower Saxony and Weſtphalia, moving them to enter into ſuch Meaſures and Councils

1683. cils with the Emperor, as might tend to the Conſervation of Hungary,

Germany allarm'd by the Turks.

All Chriſtendom now Allarum'd by the vaſt preparations of the Turks, whoſe Force appear'd ſufficient, not only to over-ſpread Hungary, but to over-run all Germany in one Summer; ſo that the Common ſafety ſeem'd now to be in danger: The Diet at Ratisbon was then Sitting, and Conſulting for the Common Welfare and Security, for which the Emperor was ſo much concern'd, that he reſolved once to have been preſent there in Perſon; but that his Deputies who reſided for him, gave his Imperial Majeſty ſuch aſſurances of the zeal, and care the Diet had for conſervation of the Empire; that were his Majeſty there in Perſon, nothing could be more done than what was reſolved, and then acting by that Diet.

Saponara privately Treats with Tekeli.

Count Walleſtain ſent into Poland.

His Negotiations there.

Saponara not being able to Prevail any thing upon the Vizier at Belgrade, was Order'd to try what he could work upon Tekeli, to draw him off from the Turks. In purſuance of which he went to Mongatz, where Tekeli lay Sick of a Fever, and being his antient Friend and Acquaintance, was ſome time during the intermiſſion of his Fits admitted into his Chamber, where in the Emperor's Name, he offer'd to him a Sovereignity over all thoſe Places of which he was Maſter in the Upper Hungary, with ſeveral other Demeſnes appertaining thereunto, and to hold the ſame on the very Conditions which were given to Boſcai, who raiſed Arms againſt the Emperor in the year 1605. Beſides which, ſuch Conferences paſſed, as are uſual with Sick Men, who are commonly relenting, and deſirous of God's Glory and the publick Peace: But when Tekeli grew better, and return'd to his perfect ſtate of Health, he then confeſſed plainly, that his Circumſtances were ſuch, and his Union with the Turks ſo Knit and Engaged, that it was impoſſible for him to ſeparate, or deſtricate himſelf from their Intereſt and Party. With which Anſwer Saponara being convinced, that nothing was to be done on this ſide, return'd to Vienna to give his Majeſty new aſſurances thereof. Wherefore now to proceed in the proviſions for a War, Alliances were to be cultivated; and in the firſt place, the Treaty with Poland was rather to be renewed than begun, for (as we have before mention'd) the Poles had preſſed the Ratification thereof with much earneſtneſs; but in regard the Emperor was entertain'd conſtantly with hopes and a proſpect of Peace, he deferr'd the Concluſion thereof for the laſt Reſerve, to help and conſerve him, after all other Negotiations proved vain and fruitleſs. Count Walleſtain was the Perſon appointed to perform, and compleat this great Work; and accordingly having received a Commiſſion, and Inſtructions for ſo great a Management, he made a Journey to Warſaw in Poland, where he found the Diet then Sitting, but embroil'd in a thouſand difficulties, and differences amongſt themſelves, (as is uſual in all ſuch great Councils and Aſſemblies,) repreſenting Aggrievances, and accuſing great Men. The buſineſs of the high Treaſurer of that Kingdom was then in Agitation, and his Accounts and Adminiſtration of that Office were under Examination; upon which many of the Nobility were ſo intent, that when Count Walleſtain arrived with Inſtructions, and Plenary Power from the Emperor, to conclude a League offenſive and defenſive with Poland; they oppoſed his admiſſion to Audience, until ſuch time as they had compoſed their own inteſtine Differences, and provided in the firſt place, for the ſafety of their own Kingdom: And ſo far had ſome angry and turbulent Spirits preſſed this Matter, that the Diet was in danger of being Diſſolved without any Concluſion, either in reference to their own Affairs, or League with the Empire. But the King, and principal Nobility joyning their endeavours with thoſe of Cardinal Pio, Nuntio of Pope Innocent the 11*th*, and of the Emperor's Ambaſſador, repreſented unto the Diet in General, the neceſſity of a ſpeedy Union againſt the Common Enemies; declaring the Turks and Tartars, were ready on the very Confines to over-run all Poland, Hungary and Germany: And becauſe, that notwithſtanding all that could be ſaid, there were ſtill certain Spirits unſatisfied; it was the care of the King, and of the others to deal with them in private, and conjure them to give no ſtop, but to concur with them in this important Negotiation: Thus whole Nights were ſpent in pacifying the Spirits of the Poliſh Nobility, who love to exert their Authority, and to have Applications and Addreſſes made to them; and at length they were ſo prevailed upon, that remitting the Affairs of the Grand Treaſurer, and of other Aggrievances to the conſideration of the next Diet; they reſolved to Treat on no other for the preſent, than what related to the making ſuch Confederacies, as tended to the ſecurity and ſafety of the Kingdom. And in regard the ſeveral Points, and Articles with Moſcovy were intricate, and requir'd time to debate; it was agreed, without deſcending to other particulars in that Treaty, to renew the Truce for three years longer, and during that time to enter into a League Offenſive and Defenſive 1683. with the Emperor and King of Poland, againſt the Common Enemy of Chriſtendom. Thus with much Labour and Aſſiduity, the Providence of God aſſiſting the Chriſtian Councils, as he did afterwards their Arms; the League was concluded and ſign'd on the 18*th* of April, being the Day of the Feſtival of Chriſt's Reſurrection; with which the Diet was Diſſolved to the General ſatiſfaction of that whole Aſſembly: The News hereof which filled all Chriſtendom with an Univerſal Joy, was immediately diſpatched to Vienna by an Expreſs, who moving with the Wings of Meſſengers, who carry ſuch pleaſing Tydings, arrived in a very ſhort time at the Emperor's Court, to the unexpreſſible Joy of the whole Empire.

The League concluded between the Emperor and King of Poland.

1683.

The Chief Heads of the Treaty were theſe.

Firſt, That the League Offenſive ſhall continue until ſuch time, as that the Emperor, and King of Poland ſhall make Peace with the Common Enemy, but that the Defenſive ſhall continue for ever.

Secondly, That this Alliance ſhall be ſworn unto by Cardinal Pio in behalf of the Emperor, and by Cardinal Charles Barberini at Rome, in the name and behalf of the King of Poland.

Thirdly, That the Emperor ſhall Renounce, and quit claim to all Debts and Sums of Money which were due to him from Poland, on occaſion of the Succours, and Aſſiſtances he gave unto that Kingdom, when it was Invaded by the Swedes*: And that the great Seal whereby the Emperor is impowred to nominate, and make choiſe of a new King be Cancelled and Surrendred.*

Fourthly, That no Peace be made with the Turks without the privity, conſent, and concurrence of both Parties; and that the Heirs and Succeſſours of them be equally obliged to maintain, and confirm the preſent League.

Fifthly, That this League be limited, and underſtood of a War againſt the Turk only, and not againſt any other Prince or Potentate whatſoever.

Sixthly, That during this War, the Emperor be obliged to maintain 70.000 Men in the Field; beſides 20.000 in Garriſon: And that the King of Poland ſhall conduct an Army of 40.000 Men, and March at the Head of them in Perſon.

Seventhly, That the Emperor ſhall act with the groſs of his Army in the Lower Hungary againſt the Turk*; and with another Army in the Upper* Hungary, conſiſting of Six thouſand Germans, and as many Auxiliaries, whoſe buſineſs ſhall chiefly be to ſubdue the Rebels, and recover the places which they have taken: And that the King of Poland ſhall endeavour to recover Caminiec, and other places unjuſtly uſurped by the Turk in Podolia, Ucrania and Volhinia. 1683.

Eighthly, That the Emperor ſhall lend unto the King of Poland 300.000 Dollars, and the payment thereof to be ſecur'd on the Tythes of that Kingdom, which the Pope hath lately granted to the King for carrying on this preſent War.

Ninethly, That in caſe other Chriſtian Kings, or Princes ſhall deſire to enter into this Alliance, their admiſſion thereinto ſhall be with the knowledge and approbation of both Crowns; and that the Czars of Muſcovy be particularly induced to joyn in this Alliance.

On theſe Terms was this League concluded, ſo much the more to the comfort and ſatisfaction of all Chriſtendom, by how much it had been uncertain and doubtful before; in regard the Diviſions in the Diet it ſelf were grown ſo high, that it was believed no place could be allowed for the Debates of Foreign Matter, which did not immediately concern their own differences; and that the reſentment which the King of Poland conceived againſt the Emperor, for not cloſing with the Alliance formerly offer'd, and importunately urged, would have been invincible obſtacles againſt this Union, of which all the World deſpair'd: But God who directs all things to that end which he deſigns, had ſo temper'd and qualified the Animoſitis of the Poles one againſt the other, that to the Joy of all Chriſtendom, that neceſſary and happy Alliance was concluded.

The Grand Vizier (as we have ſaid) being arrived at Belgrade, where he attended the Aſiatick Troops, and with him Count Albert Caprara the Emperor's Reſident, (whom he reſerved according to antient Cuſtom in the Camp,) for an inſtrument to move and forward Treaties, in caſe any ſiniſter ſucceſs ſhould befal the Ottoman Forces: But this Vizier fearing nothing leſs than ill fortune, and repoſing a confidence in his Arm of Fleſh, which he thought impoſſible to be ſubdued, did eaſily and with ſome ſcorn comply with the inſtance which Count Albert Caprara made to him for Licence to return to his Maſter at Vienna: And in order thereunto he was committed to the care, and conduct of the Bei of Alba Regalis, who was then Marching with his Men towards thoſe parts. Howſoever, a ſtop was put to his departure for ſome few days, to the end, that he might be Spectator of the magnificent reception of Count Tekeli by the Vizier, which when he underſtood, he preſſed his departure with more earneſtneſs, that his Eyes might not be offended with the ſcandalous ſight of a 1683.

Count Capara licenſed to return to Vienna.

Rebel

He refuſes to behold the Reception of Tekeli, and others.

1683. Rebel promoted to Honour and Grandure, for Treaſon and Perfidiouſneſs to his Sovereign. And when he heard that he came accompanied with many of the Hungarian Nobility, who were Roman Catholicks, and particularly with the Count of Homonai, to the great ſcandal of the Goſpel, and the Chriſtian Profeſſion, he was ſo tranſported with Diſdain and Indignation, that he openly declared, in caſe the Vizier delayed to grant him Licenſe to depart, only becauſe he would give him the Mortification to behold an Object ſo ungrateful to his Eyes, that he would cloſe them rather, or ſhut himſelf up in ſome Retirement, where he might neither ſee or hear any of theſe Matters: Of which the Vizier having notice he gave him free liberty to depart, and accordingly he ſet forward on his Journey on the $\frac{12}{2}$ of June, in company with the Bei of Alba Regalis, who having attended Caprara as far at Moatz, he was thence recalled by the Vizier; and the Bei of Albania appointed in his place, with a Guard of about a Hundred Men, who continuing their Journeys from day to day, happily arrived at Buda on the 20th. of June, not without great danger of falling into the hands of Tartars, who not conſidering the Perſons, or Offices of Ambaſſadours, nor yet the Subjects of the Grand Seignior, whether Chriſtians or Turks, put all to Fire and Sword, which they could not carry with them, not regarding either Age or Sex, but miſerably deſtroyed all, whereſoever they could become Maſters.

Tho' C. Albert Caprara was well treated at Buda, as to his own Perſon, yet he was uneaſie and impatient of his ſtay in that City, fearing leſt the Barbarity of the Turks, upon any ill Succeſs, ſhould vent their Rage and Revenge upon him and his Attendants; but more ſenſibly was he affected with the daily ſight of poor Chriſtians enſlaved, and led before him in Chains; and with the news of the Surrender of diverſe Cities and Towns by Tekeli into the Poſſeſſion of the Turks, according to the Articles made between him and the Grand Seignior; and which were ſo to remain, until a total Conqueſt was made of all Hungary, and were afterwards to be reſtored again to Tekeli with the abſolute Sovereignty and Dominion of that Kingdom.
1683. But how uneaſie ſoever C. Caprara was in his aboad at Buda, he was conſtrained to continue there in regard to his own Safety, all the Ways and Paſſages being obſtructed by Tartars and Free-booters, who had no reſpect to any thing but themſelves and their own Prey and Benefit; ſo he remain'd there until the coming of the Vizier, and with him followed the Camp to the Siege of Vienna, from whence he was permitted to depart, and attend his Imperial Majeſty then at Lintz, as we ſhall declare hereafter. 1683.

Preparations for War.

But before we proceed farther, let us look back to the Preparations, and Fore-runners made in the Winter to the bloudy War, which was ſhortly to enſue. The Turks in the Month of February, entred into the Iſle of Serino in Croatia, and committed great Diſorders; in Buda vaſt ſtores were making of all ſorts of Ammunition and Proviſions for War, with ſuch Timber and Materials as were fit and proper for making Bridges: And in the mean time, Tekeli's Forces beſieged or blocked up all the Emperor's Towns in the Upper Hungary: And yet for all this, Tekeli ſent to acquaint the Deputies of thoſe Counties, which remained firm and loyal to the Emperor, with the earneſt Paſſion he conceived to conſerve the Peace of his Country, which he ſhould certainly have done, had his Imperial Majeſty granted him any tollerable Conditions, and ſhould have given undoubted Teſtimonies to the World of his Loyalty and Obedience to his Sovereign, againſt whom he took not up Arms out of any Animoſity, but only to free his Country from Tyranny and Oppreſſion; and in this good Humour he gave liberty unto 200 German Priſoners, and to Count Herberſtein upon his Parole, and proteſted unto the Emperor, that he had diſpatched two of his principal Miniſters, namely Fagon and Sirmai, unto the Grand Seignior, to continue and prolong the Truce, and gave the ſame Aſſurances to the Diet, which he had convened at Coſſovia. In the mean time, the Imperial Troops being ill paid, daily deſerted the Service, and revolted to the Malecontents, with whom they hoped to improve and better their Condition.

Tekeli's Proteſtations.

Toward the end of this Month, the Turks, by a Detachment out of the Garriſon of Newhauſel, made an attempt to paſs over the Ice to the Iſle of Schults, under command of an Hungarian Renegade; but the Ice breaking, many of them were drowned.

The Emperor's Camp.

In the Month of March the Turks placed a Guard of 15000 Men to defend the Bridge of Eſſeck, from being burnt by the Chriſtians: And the Emperor on his ſide cauſed his Troops, which were quartered near the Rhine, to march towards Hungary, as alſo the Regiment of Count Taaf then in Bohemia; and all the other Troops were ordered to draw towards Presburg; and were near thereunto encamped in the Plain of Kitzee by Count Rabata, that the Emperor might there make a Review of all his Forces, deſigned that Year againſt the Turk.

1683.

He takes a review of all his Army.

On the 7th. of May, the Emperor entered into the Field, attended on the Right-hand by the Duke of Bavaria, and on the Left by P. Charles of Loraine, and followed by a numerous train of Nobles and principal Miniſters: The Army was all ranged in Batalia, at the front of which, was Count Staremberg, General of the Artillery, with 72 great Pieces of Canon, and 15 Mortar-pieces for throwing Bombs, all guarded by the Gunners, and Attendants on the Train of Artillery. The main Body of the Army was compoſed of 14 Regiments; namely, Staremberg, Mansfelt, Diepenthal, Baden, Grana, Straſoldo, Souches, Heiſſer, Bech, Wallis, Schaffemberg, Newberg, Thime, and Wirtemberg: The which Body was flanked on each ſide with a Regiment of Cuiraſſiers, and 12 Regiments of Horſe; namely, Rabata, Gondola, Halleweil, Palſi, Dunevalt, Caprara, Montecuculi, Saxolunemburg, Taaff, Goz, Dupigny, and Mercy, with 3 of Dragoons, Stirum, Caſtelli, and Herbeville, and 4 Companies of Croats commanded by Riccardi; all of them well armed, and mounted, and moſt of them ſelect and veterane Soldiers: To theſe were adjoined a Body of Hungarians and Huſſars, being Horſe and Foot, under the Command of Count Heſterhaſi, Palatine of that Kingdom, to the number of about eight Thouſand with 14 Pieces of Cannon; about a Thouſand whereof were armed with long Lances, the number of all which, as ſome Authors report, amounted unto 70 .740; thô as yet the Forces of Alſatia, with thoſe of the Circles of the Rhine, were not come up; but others perhaps with more reaſon make this whole Force to conſiſt of no more than forty three Thouſand Men in all, beſides ſix Thouſand Poliſh Horſe, which the Emperor had hired with his own Mony, under the Command of Prince Lubomiski, to which were adjoyned great numbers of Gentlemen, and younger Brothers, who came to adventure and make their Fortunes in this War.

The number of the Forces.

Duke of Loraine feaſts the Court.

After the Emperor had heard Maſs, which was celebrated by the Arch-biſhop of Strigonium, and ſang with Muſick, the Arch-biſhop read with a loud Voice the Bull of Indulgence, which the Pope had given unto all thoſe who ſhould fight the Chriſtian Battles againſt Turks and Infidels; after which, he gave his Benediction to the Emperor, and the Nobility, and to all the Army, who received it with much Humility, and Devotion on their Knees; which Ceremony being ended, the Emperor took a View of the whole Army, greatly to his ſatisfaction: After which he was conducted to a magnificent Tent, raiſed on the Banks of the Danube, where he was ſplendidly treated by the Duke of Loraine, together with the Empreſs, the Arch-ducheſs, the Elector of Bavaria, the Prince of Newbourg, (Coadjutor of the Grand Maſter of the Tutonick Order) the Prince Lewis of Baden, and the Duke of Saxelawemburg. After which magnificent Entertainment, the Emperor and the Court returned that Night unto Presburg. Such being the force of the Emperor's Army; let us alſo take a View of the formidable numbers of the Turks, which were ſufficient, like Locuſts, to over-ſpread the face of all Hungary. But firſt we ſhall obſerve the Motions of the Emperor's Army, which being now in it's Vigour and Strength, and encouraged with fifty Thouſand Florins, which his Imperial Majeſty was pleaſed as a Donative to diſtribute amongſt the Soldiers; it was agreed by the Generals of the Army, for the Reputation of their Forces, that ſome Enterpriſe ſhould be undertaken, before the Grand Vizier, with the groſs of his Army, was advanced farther, which according to their Conjectures, was believed could not be in leſs than in the time of two Months. The Places nominated for to be attack'd, were Gran and Newhauſel; the firſt ſeemed the moſt eaſie in reſpect to the weakneſs of the Fortifications; but Advices being come that the Turks were forming a Camp of 40 .000 Men near Buda, whereby the Imperialiſts might be cut off from all Communication with Comorra; it was reſolved to change the Deſign, and to march towards Newhauſel. Accordingly the Troops were commanded to march, and on the ſecond of June, ſome Battalions of the firſt Brigade poſted themſelves near the Neker, about Cannon-ſhot diſtant from the Town; in two or three days afterwards the whole Army being come up, they too poſſeſſed themſelves of the Suburbs, and of a Palanca, which covered the Gate towards Buda ſide, and lodged within a Hundred Paces of the Ditch; and on the 6th. and 7th. of this Month the whole Town was ſurrounded, and the Platforms raiſed to receive the Cannon for Batteries, and all things put into a condition of a formal Siege. But whilſt Matters were carrying on in this poſture, the Duke of Loraine received Orders from the Court at Vienna to deſiſt from that Enterpriſe, for that the Turks were far advanced into Stiria, and the Grand Vizier, with a vaſt Power of the Ottoman Force, as far as Eſſeck: Hereupon a Council of War being called, and the Orders communicated to them, the Siege which was laid the 3d. of June, was raiſed on the 10th, and the Army marched towards Raab and Comorra, to reinforce thoſe Garriſons, and from thence to obſerve the Motions of the Enemy. Many were the Reflections on the Enterpriſe of 1683.

1683.

Newhauſel beſieged.

New-

1683. Newhauſel; it ſeeming ſtrange, that ſo wiſe a Captain as the Duke of Loraine, ſhould commence ſo difficult an Enterpriſe at the beginning of a moſt perilous War, in which it was hardly poſſible for him to ſucceed, there being at the ſame time an Army of 40 .000 Turks encamped under the Walls of Buda, which was not many days March diſtant from Newhauſel; and the Groſs of the Turkiſh Power,not inferiour to the greateſt of their Armies, (of which Hiſtories recount ſuch prodigious numbers) were then marching under the command of the Grand Vizier, between Eſſeck and Alba Regalis, or Stultweſſemburg. But we ought not to impute any thing to the ill Conduct of ſo great a General, whoſe Succeſſes having crowned all his Actions; nothing can ſeem Raſh or void of Council, where Fortune hath always led him by the hand, and made him Victorious, as we ſhall (God willing) make appear in the ſequel of this Hiſtory.

The Grand Seignior at Belgrade.

1683. But before we proceed farther, we muſt add what before was omitted, that about the beginning of April, the Grand Seignior being deſirous to ſhow himſelf in his Army, began to move towards Belgrade, where he arrived with his beloved Soltana, (who would not leave his Company) and with a ſplendid Court, on the 2d. of June. The groſſeſt part of the Army being by this time come to that place appointed for the general Rendezvous, the Grand Vizier, was willing to give the Grand Seignior a Survey of all his Forces, to let him ſee how he had employed his Treaſure, and with what hopes of being repaid with Kingdoms, and with Spoils of the richeſt Dominions in Chriſtendom: And ſo the Grand Seignior being placed in a high Scaffold erected for that purpoſe, all the Soldiers in their ſeveral Ranks and Degrees, according to their Countries and Nations, paſſed in their ſeveral Orders before him. And in the firſt place, Numbers of the Turkiſh Army.

The Forces of Meſopotamia all on Horſeback,	Numb. 13000
Thoſe of Aſſyria and Babilon, as far as Balſora,	14000
Other Aſiatick Troops, comprehending the Provinces
Of Sias, Amaſia, Maras, Buſſia, &c.	30000
The Militia of Judea, Egypt, &c.	18000
The Militia of Caramania,	8000
Turks out of the parts of Greece,	16000
The Militia of Armenia; Capadocia, &c.	24000
The remaining Aſiatick Troops were from Georgia, and the conquered Countries thereabouts, all which were the Forces out of Aſia, and Horſe,	28000
After theſe marched the Janiſaries of Europe,	12000
Next followed the Tartars, ill Armed and worſe Clothed,	14000
Laſt of all marched the moſt flouriſhing part of the Turkiſh Army, conſiſting of the Sons and Servants of Paſhas; alſo of the richeſt Spahees, and other young Men, all richly cloathed and armed,	35000
Pioniers and others with Shovels, Spades, &c.	12000
Gunners, and other Attendants on the Train of Artillery,	13000
Attendants on the Waggons of Ammunition and Proviſion,	14000
Other Attendants on the Tents and Baggage,	13000
All which formidable Forces amounted unto,	264000

According to a Calculation made by ſeveral Italian Writers; but as to my own Opinion, I cannot believe that Aſia could furniſh half thoſe numbers, and therefore do rather follow the Computation of the Aſiaticks, according to this Account:

Muſtapha Paſha, Grand Vizier,	15000
Emir Paſha of Adana,	500
Huſaein Baſha of Bolu,	330
Kara Mahomet Paſha of Diarbeker,	1500
Muſtapha Paſha of Siliſtria,	1080
Halil Paſha of Sivas,	530
Ahmet Paſha of Maras,	710
Huſaein Paſha of Aleppo,	950
Oſman Paſha a Sangiac under him,	510
Huſaein Paſha of Damaſcus,	2300
Haſſan Paſha of Armit,	500
Bei of Gran Cairo,	3000
Baſha of Tokai on the Borders of Perſia,	340
Bekir Paſha,	500
	27750

This Computation may very well agree with the Forces of the firſt Year's Expedition out of Aſia; to which being adjoyned the ſeveral Chambers of Janiſaries, with all the European Forces both Horſe and Foot, as alſo the Tartars, Tranſilvanians, Moldavians and Valachians, with the Hungarian Rebels; we may without Romance account the Ottoman Force to conſiſt of a Hundred eighty Thouſand effective fighting Men, beſides Miners, Pioniers, Sutlers, Gunners, Attendants on the Train of Artillery, Attendants and Servants belonging to the Tents, with a vaſt number of Raſcals, and Rabble following the Camp, which may very well be Calculated to amount unto at leaſt 40 .000 more: For the Turks above any Nation in the World have their Camp peſtered with the Incumbrances of Baggage; ſo that if we conſider this vaſt number of 220.000 Men, it will not ſeem incredible what we find reported, that they ſpread the Country eight Leagues in length.

1683.

The Report of this formidable, and as to human Appearance, invincible Army, cauſed the Duke of Loraine to haſten with all ſpeed poſſible the Fortifications of Raab, which he deſigned to enlarge on ſome riſing Grounds near to the Town, and to defend them with the whole Body of the Army; or at leaſt by the Infantry, which having a Communication with the Garriſon, might be able to oppoſe that great force of the Enemy, and weary them out by a lingring Siege in a Country, which was already become deſolate, and without Forage for above twenty Miles round.

The Grand Vizier at Alba Regalis.

But the Duke of Loraine having received Intelligence, that the Grand Vizier on the 1ſt of July was entred into Alba Regalis, and certainly reſolved to Beſiege Vienna, and to ſtop at no other place on their March thither; He then changed his Meaſures, and having reinforced Raab, with the three Regiments of Baden, Grana and Souches, and given the command of the Place to Colonel Wallis; and having alſo reinforced Comorra and other Places with ſtrong Garriſons, his whole Field-Army became reduced unto 24.000 Men only: And fearing leſt with ſo ſmall a number, he ſhould be ſurrounded by the multitudes of the Enemy, he once reſolved to encamp himſelf under the Cannon of Vienna.

He publiſhes a Manifeſt.

In the mean time Tekeli having made a Viſit to the Grand Vizier in his Camp at Alba Regalis, perſwaded him to publiſh a Manifeſt, ſignifying unto the People, That the Grand Seignior did take under his Protection all the Hungarians, who ſhould joyn themſelves to the Male-contented Party, and that he would maintain them in their Priviledges, Liberties, Eſtates, Laws, and Religion: And that ſuch, who refuſed to accept this gracious Offer, were to expect no Quarter, but to be puniſhed with Fire and Sword. This Manifeſt being divulged by Tekeli at his return from the Vizier to Caſſovia, ſo operated on many of the Hungarians, that the Towns of Papa, Tot and Veſprin accepted of the ſame, and opened their Gate to Tekeli and his Party: And ſuch was the Conſternation of all Hungary, that many other Counties and Towns, declared to the Emperor's Commiſſioners, that they would open their Gates to Tekeli at the firſt Summons, rather than expoſe themſelves to Fire and Sword, where was no hopes or expectations of Relief. This Declaration of the People, giving the Emperor juſt cauſe to fear, leſt Neutra and the Mountain Towns ſhould follow the ſame Example, Orders were given to Count Schultz, Governour of Neutra, to demoliſh that Fortreſs, and bring the groſs Cannon, with all the Ammunition from thence; and the like Command was given to the Officers of the Mountain Towns, where the Mines of Silver were, it being impoſſible to relieve them, becauſe Tekeli was Maſter of all the Paſſes which led thither; which Orders were readily obeyed by the Officers, Prieſts and Religious Men, who fled to the Camp of General Schultz on the Banks of the River Waagh: Where Schultz having joyned with the ſix Thouſand Poliſh Horſe, under the Command of Prince Lubomiski, he had the fortune to meet a Party of the Malecontents joyned with ſome Tartars, and to give them a total Defeat, killing and taking two Thouſand of them, with ſeveral Colours, and all their Baggage.

1683.

Neutra demoliſhed.

In the mean time, whilſt the Duke of Loraine was in this dubious Condition, not knowing what courſe was beſt to be taken, he reſolved once to retire under the Cannon of Vienna, and there to govern himſelf according to the Motion of the Enemy; but the Turks came on ſo faſt, their Van appearing on the Banks of the River Raab, followed by the whole Body of their Army Marching in Batalia, that there was no time for any thing but a Precipitous Flight; nothing was now to be put to a hazard, for the leaſt Defeat might cauſe the abſolute loſs of Vienna, and open the Enemies way into the Hereditary Counties. In this exigency, all the Foot was Tranſported over into the Iſland of Schultz, under the Command of the Count de Zely; and all the Horſe being about Nine thouſand five hundred in number, Marched away about Midnight, and pitched their Camp near to Altembourg. The Infantry being in the Iſle of Schultz, Marched without danger of the Enemy, and were in the way either to Communicate with Raab, or to give Succour to Vienna, according as they ſaw the Enemy bend their Courſe, for they were in a Condition to move faſter than the multitudes, and groſs Bodies of the Turks. In a few Days it appear'd, that the Turks aimed at the Capital City of Vienna, and to leave all the other Fortreſſes behind them, as being places which would fall of themſelves, and follow the Fate of the Imperial Court. The News of all which being carried from the Duke of Loraine by Count Caprara to the Emperor; and alſo, that the Baggage of the Duke of Saxelawenburg, of Prince Lewis de Baden, and of the Counts Caprara, and Montecuculi were all taken by the Turks, and their Convoy defeated; and that the

The Chriſtian Infantry in the Iſle of Schultz.

The great conſternation at Vienna.

The Emperor and Court remove to Lintz.

1683. Horſe in great diſorder had abandoned the Infantry, and left them to ſhift for themſelves in the Iſle of Schultz, and were Marching with great Diſorder to Vienna: No ſooner was this Intelligence arrived, than the Tartars appear'd at the ſame time within two Leagues of the City, and ſet Fire to all the Villages round about, the Smoak of which aſcending upwards, gave viſible demonſtrations of the truth of theſe Reports, and put all the Court and City into a diſtracted Conſternation. The Emperor after the coming of this News, made no delay to depart away with the Empreſs, the Arch-Ducheſs, and all the Court for Lintz: There was now no time to ſpare; and Fear added Wings as well to the Poor as to the Rich; the great Perſonages whoſe Offices obliged them to an attendance on the Court, were to be excuſed from remaining behind in Defence of the City, the Duty they owed their Maſter diſengaging them from ſhowing their Bravery in the Face of the Enemy: And indeed ſuch were the Preparations of all ſorts of People to haſten out of the Town, as if none had intended to ſtay in Defence of it: The Court which at other times would have requir'd at leaſt fifteen Days preparations for ſuch a removal, was now confined to five or ſix Hours; ſo that without a larger Deſcription of this Affrightment, we may imagin and figure to our ſelves, the Confuſion there was in Vienna upon this Departure. Every Man before he could leave his Home, had ſomething or other to order and diſpatch; for which Reaſon the Emperor at Night had very few, or none to ſerve and attend him; and what will be thought moſt ſtrange in times hereafter, he had no Guard, or Convoy to Defend his Perſon, through the many Perils and Hazards he was to paſs, it being neceſſary to leave all the Soldiery behind for Defence of the City. We may then conceive with what Terrour this ſad and trembling Court did travel, being continually allarum'd by reports of Tartars, who had Plunder'd and Pillaged, and Burnt all the Parts round, the terrible Marks of which appear'd in the Night, and ſerved by the Flames to direct them in their way: And had not the Providence of God, carried that rude and barbarous Nation into Parts more Remote, the Emperor and all his Court, with the Ladies, and Chief Nobility had fallen as a Prey into their rapacious Hands: But God having diverted ſo great a miſchief and ſhame to all Chriſtendom, the Imperial Court arrived at Lintz, more terrify'd with the continual Allarums, then tyred with the Journey; the Attendants followed the Court ſo faſt as they were able, as did the Women, Citizens, and thoſe who were not Men of the Sword; 1683. the ways were filled with Coaches, Carts, Waggons and Horſes, the preſent trembling condition adminiſtred unto the flying Multitude, matter of diſcourſe, ſo that as they journied along their Talk was concerning the ill management of the publick Affairs, which were reduced to that unhappy State by the evil Councils of the Jeſuits, who had too great an Intereſt, and prevailing Power in the Cabinet of the Emperor: Had it not been for them, ſaid they, and for the Clergy, the Proteſtants had not been diveſted of their Churches, nor deprived of their Liberties and Properties, whereby they were provoked to take up Arms againſt the Emperor: Nay, how often was the Imperial Clemency well inclined to grant Pardon, and Terms of Peace to Tekeli, and his Malecontented Subjects; which would have diverted this Storm from the Turks, which now purſues us, but that the governing power of the Clergy ſtill cheriſhed, and fomented the Differences, until they had brought them to this ultimate precipice of our Deſtruction? Some there were, who being well diſpoſed towards the French Faction, blamed the Councils of the Emperor, for not accepting the Propoſitions of France made for relief of the Empire: For thô ſuch a remedy might be dangerous, yet it could not be worſe than the Diſeaſe, nor nothing ſo bad as the preſent impending Evil; it were better to put our ſelves into the Hands of the French, than into the power of Turks and Infidels.

The Court continued not long at Lintz; for ſo ſoon as Intelligence came that Vienna was Beſieged, the Emperor removed to Paſſau, which is a City about 30 or 40 Miles farther into Germany; and was a Biſhoprick, which with Straſbourg was once in the Hands of the Arch Duke Leopold William. Two days after the departure of the Emperor from Vienna, the Confuſion ſtill continued day and night, cauſed by Carts and Horſes, employ'd to carry away the Goods and Houſholdſtuff of thoſe who as uſeleſs Perſons were permitted to remove out of the City.

Good Orders and Rules eſtabliſhed.

At length, upon arrival of the Duke of Loraine the Confuſion ceaſed, and the Inhabitants and Soldiers affrightned before by the timorous multitude which were fled, began to return again into their Wits, and become capable to receive Orders, and ſolid Councils for the better defence of their City, Eſtates and Lives. The Courage and good Conduct which appear'd in the Generals, operated the like effect in the Minds of the Soldiery, who now with undaunted Reſolution attended the approach of

1683. of the Enemy, who had in their March received a Repulſe before the Fortreſs of Raab, which gave no little encouragement to the Garriſon. The ſame day that the Duke of Loraine and Count Staremberg enter'd into Vienna, being the 13*th* of July, 1683. the Infantry which were before paſſed over into the Iſland of Schultz, were come up to the reſt of the Army: The firſt thing ordered by theſe Commanders was, to repair the Paliſadoes, and finiſh ſome Works as well as could be poſſible in ſo ſhort a warning; and the Inhabitants of the Suburbs being retired within the Town, were willingly employ'd with their own Hands, to ſet Fire to their own Dwellings, to deveſt the Enemy of all Succour, or Shelter therein.

The Forces put into Vienna.

The ſame Night the Duke of Loraine cauſed all the Foot, excepting only eight Batalions, which he reſerved to defend his Camp, to enter into the Counterſcarp of the Town; and in two Nights after being the 14*th* and 15*th*, the Powder and Bullet, which was expected from Lintz were brought in, and lodged in the Arſenal of the City. After which the other eight Batalions were alſo brought into the Town, which with thoſe in the Counterſcarp made Twelve thouſand Men. But for better underſtanding the State and Condition of the Garriſon, we have here ſet down the particulars of all the Forces therein, that thoſe worthy Perſons, who have ſo ſignalized themſelves by their Bravery in this Famous Siege, may not be forgotten in future Ages.

The number of the Forces brought into Vienna.

Count Staremberg Governour.

Regiments of

Staremberg Commanded by Geo. Maurice of Ketlin.	2000 Men.
Half of Keiſerſtin's Regiment under Wolfargſchenek,	1000
Mansfeld Commanded by C. Alex. Leſly,	2000
Souches by Charles Lewis Colonel of Souches, Son of the Famous General Radwight,	2000
Schaffemberg, and Bercks two Regiments,	4000
Seven Companies of Newbourg,	1200
Half of Heiſter's Regiment, under Baron Heiſter,	1000
The other half of this Regiment was ſent to Lintz, for Guard of the Emperor's Perſon.
Five Companies of Dimik, an antient Commander,	0600
Dupignis Regiment of Horſe,	0600
Three Companies of the Garriſon belonging to the City,	1200

1683. Theſe Regiments when full amounted in all unto 15600 Men; but ſo many of them had been Killed and waſted with Sickneſs, that ſcarce Ten thouſand of them enter'd into Vienna; to which being added the Trained-Bands of the City, conſiſting of 2717, the whole Garriſon might be well computed with Volontiers, and Officers at near 13000 Men.

The Chief Officers were.

Count Staremberg Governor, Count Daun, Lieutenant Governor, Marquis Ferdinand Obizzi Major, John Count Serini Aſſiſtant to the Count Daun; The Counts Souches and Schaffemberg Aſſiſtants to the Lieutenant Governour and Major.

Volontiers were

Count Trotmandorf, who had been a Colonel many years in Flanders, Count Five-Kerk Captain of the Provincial Circle of Auſtria, the Count of Salzbourg, who was Colonel of a Regiment of Croats, but being come to Vienna to be Cur'd of a Diſſentery, which he had got in the Army, and the Siege happening before his perfect Recovery, he offer'd to ſerve in nature of a Volontier. The Baron of Kilmenſec Great Foreſter to the Emperor, defended the Court-baſtian for three days with eighty of his Foreſters, who being excellent Marks-Men, and uſed to their Guns, which they charged with an exact proportion of Powder and Bullet, did great Execution upon the Turks, ſeldom miſſing their Shot, and the Baron himſelf killed a Turk at 300 paces diſtant; who was afterwards known to have been one of the Turks principal Canoniers. The Count Vignacourt a French Gentleman, formerly employed by his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, in quality of an Ambaſſador to Ferdinand the Third, Father of the preſent Emperor, and to other Princes of Germany, was, an other of the Volontiers: As were alſo the Count de St. Micaele a Venetian, Erneſt Sigiſmund de Zeternz, of an antient Family in Sileſia, Cornelius Rummingken, a Perſon of Sixty two years of Age, and tho' much afflicted with the Gout, yet being an experienced Soldier, his Councils were more available to the Governour than his Bodily Services. And laſtly, There was Sigiſmond de Reitoffar a Gentleman of Moravia, who had formerly been a Major General, who ſhewed himſelf at all times daring, and active in the Execution of ſuch Orders, as he received from Count Staremberg the Governour.

This was all the Force which was lodged in Vienna, to defend it againſt that Formidable midable Army, then ready to encompaſs it on all ſides: But whom God will ſave are always well protected, and then there never want Proviſions nor Councils, nor Courage in the Soldiery.

1683.

The Biſhop of New-ſtadt's Treaſure.

The Count of Kollonitz, who was Treaſuerer of Hungary, did moſt ſeaſonably furniſh the Biſhop of Newſtadt, with Five hundred thouſand Florins for ſupply of the Garriſon during the Siege, with Three thouſand Meaſures of Wine; which this Biſhop, who was a Knight of the Great Croſs of Malta, and had been in the Siege of Candia, did with good mannagement lay up in ſeveral Cellars in the Town, and diſtributed to the Soldiers in time of the Siege; as alſo the Money, which was paid out with ſuch order, and on ſuch occaſions, as were requiſite and neceſſary, to appeaſe all complaints which might ariſe for want thereof. But above all, care was taken to eſtabliſh a Council in the Town during the Siege: The Perſons thereunto nominated and appointed were,

The Council appointed for Government of Vienna.

Count de Capliers Counſellor of State, and General of the Ordnance; Count de Molard, Grand Marſhal of Auſtria, Baron de Belchamp, Councellor of the Emperor's Houſhold, and the Chancellor Hoffman. The Governours under Count Staremberg were the Counts of Thun and Serini; and after them Souches and Schaffemberg, Baron de Beck, the Prince of Wirtemberg, and Baron Heiſter, who were all Colonels of Regiments which ſerved in Vienna.

1683.

The firſt appearance of the Turks.

By this time being the $\frac{14}{4}$ of July, the Duke of Loraine having given all the neceſſary Orders for conſervation of the City; the Turks began to deſcend by the Hill of St. Mark with their Horſes, Waggons and Camels laden with Baggage, ranging themſelves in form of a Creſcent or Half-moon round the Town: Upon appearance whereof, and the News of the near approach of the Great Vizier; the Duke of Loraine on the 15*th* at night drew off all his Horſe, and Dragoons, to the other ſide of the Bridges, and there Encamped: He had once entertained ſome Thoughts of conſerving a part of the Foot in his Camp; but conſidering the great Force of the Enemy ready to ſurround the City, the largeneſs of the Works which were to be maintained, the diſtance of the Forces which were deſigned for its Relief, and the daily decay, and diminution of Soldiers in a long Siege; were ſufficient inducements to this Wiſe Commander, to ſupply the City with all the Infantry without any reſerve unto himſelf. Howſoever, he had once ſome Thoughts of poſting ſome of his Cavalry in the Tabor, to keep a Communication with the Town; but upon a true ſurvey thereof, the Water was found to be Shallow in many places, and Fordable that Man and Horſe could March into it in Rank and File, ſo that the Water being of no ſecurity to a Camp, the place was deſerted: The Tabor is an Iſland in the Danube, of about a Mile and half in length, planted with Trees and Orchards, and full of Gardens, Fountains and Houſes of Pleaſure.

The Tabor.

The Duke of Loraine puts all his Foot into Vienna.

The Tabor being judged no place for the Cavalry to Lodge in; the Duke of Loraine paſſed the Danube, leaving the Bridges to be defended by the Dragoons of General Schultz. By this time the Van-guard of the Turks were advanced, and great numbers of Tents pitched round the City: And the Vizier with the Groſs of the Army was Marching to the Siege, having left the Paſha of Buda with Twelve thouſand Men to block up Raab, where he remained until ſuch time as he was Relieved by Apaſi Prince of Tranſilvania, with ſome of Tekeli's Forces, and then he proceeded to the Siege of Vienna. On the 16*th* the Vizier enter'd the Camp, highly raiſed, and puffed up with aſſurances of finding the Gates of Vienna opened unto him, or at leaſt to run over the Walls without much Oppoſition. His numerous Force gave him a confidence of Succeſs, and his natural Pride ſuggeſted to him an Impoſſibility of being Overcome: The Country People nouriſhed this Opinion in him by Reports, that all the Chriſtian Infantry were ſhut up in the Iſle of Schultz; that there was no force in the City, and the diſorder and Confuſion ſo great therein, that upon the firſt Summons they would open their Gates: Nor was the Report ill grounded; for at that time the whole Garriſon of Vienna did not conſiſt of above Six hundred Men, of which the Vizier was well adviſed, and knew, that if he made but ſome more than ordinary haſt with his Army, or detached a formidable Body to appear in ſight of the Town, before the Duke of Loraine had Re-inforced the Garriſon, and put all things into a Poſture of Defence, the Gates might eaſily have been opened, and the City become the Prey and Reward of the Ottoman Soldiers. But this was not the Vizier's buſineſs, his deſire was to gain and appropriate all the Riches unto himſelf, which was to be done only by Articles and Conditions of Surrender drawn, and agreed in the time of a formal Siege; and therefore he would neither haſten his Troops to take Poſſeſſion of the City, before it was Reinforced, nor yet incourage his Men to Enter the Town by meer Force and Dint of Sword; which in the Opinion of the Soldiery, he might have done if when he Stormed the Works, he had puſhed forward his Men to the utmoſt of their Mettle; ſo that here we may obſerve, that his accurſed Avarice, which had been the Ruine of ſo many Perſons, was now the Cauſe of his own Deſtruction.

The Vizier in the Camp before Vienna.

The Vizier began to open his Trenches, about fifty Paces diſtant from the Counterſcarp in the Suburbs of St. Ulric, or the Garden of Madam Spina, where the riſing of the Walks by the obſcurity of the Night, gave them an advantagious ground for raiſing ſome Batteries; and in the Morning two Spahees were commanded to throw a Writing in a Linnen Bag into the Counterſcarp, which they performed, running full ſpeed with their Horſes. The ſubſtance of which was this.

His Summons to the City.

Theſe Preſents are to make known unto you, the Generals, Governour, Soldiers and Noble Citizens of the City of Vienna, That according to the Orders, we have received from the moſt Happy, moſt Powerful, moſt Invincible and moſt Mighty Emperor of the Univerſe, our Maſter, who is the true Image of God living on the Earth, and who by the Grace and Favour of the Almighty, following the Example of our Prophet Mahomet Muſtapha, to whom be Glory and Honour, and Bleſſing, is by a Multitude of Miracles become the Greateſt Sovereign both of one, and the other World, and the Supreme Emperor of all Kings and Princes; hath ſent hither his Armies which are without number, to the intent that they ſhall take Vienna, and there Eſtabliſh the Worſhip of our True Religion. And whereas it is a Principle of our Religion, above all things to Propagate the Muſſelmin Faith, as is expeſly Commanded by the Law of our Holy Prophet; We do inſtantly exhort you, before we Unſheath our Terrible Cymiters to Embrace our Holy Religion, and to ſuffer your ſelves to be inſtructed in the Myſteries thereof, by which you will find Salvation to your Souls. And in caſe you will Surrender up the City, whether you be Young or Old, Rich or Poor, We aſſure you, that you ſhall with all ſecurity Live therein: And in caſe any of you ſhall deſire to go forth, and Live in any other place, he ſhall have Permiſſion and Licence ſo to do, and ſhall be convoy'd forth with his Goods and Subſtance, with his Wife and Children. And as to thoſe who ſhall deſire to remain behind, they may Live in the Town in ſuch manner as they did before. But in caſe you are obſtinate, and conſtrain us to take your City by Force, then will we ſpare no Perſon whatſoever: And we Swear by the Creatour of Heaven and Earth, who never had nor never ſhall have an Equal, that we will put all to the Sword, as is Commanded by our Holy Law, and will take your Goods and Eſtates, and carry away your Wives, and Children into Captivity. Pardon is only for them, who obey the Divine Ordinances.

Given at the Emperor's Camp before Vienna, the 8*th* of the Moon Regeb, and in the Year of the Prophet's Tranſmigration, 1094.

To theſe Summons no other Anſwer was Return'd, than by Cannon and a Vigorous Defence, and by a Bloody Conflict in the Suburbs in which the Turks were greatly worſted. The Courage of the Beſieged, which was evidenced during all the time of the Siege was moſt eminently Signaliz'd at the beginning thereof; when the Scotch Convent of Benedictin Fryers, (which was a very ſtately Edifice) took Fire, and endangered the Arſenal, which was near adjoyning thereunto, and where Two thouſand Barrels of Powder were lodged; but by the diligence of Young Staremberg, and the Officers of the Artillery, the Powder was all carried to ſome Remoter place: And it pleaſing God by his Gracious Providence, to cauſe the Wind to blow the Flames to other Quarters, the Arſenal was preſerved and all the Ammunition therein, tho' ſeveral great Edifices, and Palaces thereunto adjoyning were conſumed before the Fire was extinguiſhed. The Original of this Fire was attributed to the Treachery of a Youth of 16 Years of Age habited in Girls Cloathing; whom the People in their Fury tearing to pieces, prevented the Diſcovery of this Treacherous and Horrid Plot. The Turks all this while with much Joy beheld the Flames aſcending from the City, and ply'd their Cannon and Bombs towards that part, which at firſt broke in the Air without other Execution; and the better to prevent the accident by Fire, Count Staremberg order'd the Roofs off all thoſe Houſes to be taken off which were cover'd with Shingles, and apt to take Fire with the leaſt Spark. This was a terrible beginning of a Siege, and ſuch as was ſufficient totally to diſmay the Spirits of the Defendants, but that they were ſupported with more than ordinary Courage inſpired into them by the Providence of Heaven.

A Fire in Vienna.

All this while the Cavalry maintained their Stations at the Foot of the Bridges, to keep a Communication ſo long as was poſſible with the Town, and hinder the Paſſage of the Turks into the Iſles of Leopolſtadt, the which Action the Duke of Loraine committed to the Care and Conduct of General Schultz, and Prince Lubomiski, whileſt he with the greater part of the Army retir'd to Langenzendorf: But the Turks, and Tartars with a very great number coming to force the Paſs, carrying the Foot on their Horſes behind them, and Wading over the Water, which was Foardable on all ſides, were received with ſuch a wela wel-

1683. a Welcome as coſt the Lives of moſt of thoſe, who were the moſt forward to gain the Paſs; but the numbers of the Enemy encreaſing, the Christians found themſelves not able to ſuſtain the ſhock, and therefore having burnt and deſtroyed all the Houſes thereabouts, they orderly retired to the Army, having broken the Bridges to prevent the more haſty purſuit after them.

The Chriſtians forced from the Bridges.

The Turks batter the City.

The Turks having by this time encompaſſed the whole City with their numerous Camp, and Tents of diverſe colours, advanced their Trenches within thirty Paces of the Counterſcarp, on the ſide of the Baſtions of the Court and the Lobel, and continually ſo plyed that Quarter with their Cannons and Morters, that they entirely ruined the Emperor's Palace, with the Houſes and Churches thereunto adjoyning. Whilſt Count Staremberg was buſied in all places to give neceſſary Orders, and provide againſt every Misfortune which might happen, he was unluckily wounded by the Blow of a Brick upon his Head, which had been carried by the ſtroak of a Cannon-ſhot, which confined him to his Chamber for three Days, and the Count Daun, one of the Deputy Governours was ſick at the ſame time of a Fever: However the care of the Counts Serini, Souches and Scaffenberg was ſuch, that the Enemy gained no advantage by the abſence of thoſe Governours.

Staremberg wounded.

C. Leſlie ſent to Krembs.

Whilſt Matters were thus acting in the City, Count Leſlie was ſent to Krembs to convoy the Train of Artillery thither, and attend the coming of the Auxiliary Troops of Bavaria, Saxony and Franconia, and the Regiments which were marching from ſeveral other Places of the Empire; and alſo to reſtrain the Incurſions of the Tartars into Auſtria, who with much Violenee and Cruelty laid all Places, whereſoever they came, in Bloud and Aſhes, thô many of them were cut to pieces in divers Conflicts, there being a Hundred and fifty of them killed by the Peaſants, who were felling the Trees about Vienna, to hinder and diſturb the March of the Enemy. But why the Tartars ſhould deſtroy all the Villages and Proviſions near to Vienna, whereby they deprived the Turkiſh Army of all Proviſions and Subſiſtence from parts near unto their Camp, and cauſed their Horſe to fetch Forage at twenty Miles diſtance, no ſound Reaſon can be given, unleſs it be, that thoſe People having always been uſed to Spoyl and Deſtruction, have it not in their Power, and nature to leave any thing unblaſted, and not conſumed in the Country of an Enemy whereſoever they paſs. Some Troops belonging to General Schultz had the fortune at the ſame time to take a conſiderable Convoy of the Turks, conſiſting of above three Hundred Waggons, killing on the place about ſix Hundred and fifty, and taking two Hundred Priſoners. 1683.

The Diſpoſition of the Turkiſh Force.

The Turks had drawn two parallel Lines, one on the ſide of the Court-Baſtion, and another on the Lobel-Baſtion, with a Line of Communication between both; and here they raiſed their Batteris of thirty Pieces of Cannon: And thô Vienna was fortified with eleven Baſtions, yet three of them only were attacked, ſo that the whole Force of the Town was drawn that way for its Defence. The Grand Vizier took his Station on the ſide of the Ravelin, and with him the Janiſar-Aga, or General of the Janiſaries, named Kara Muſtapha, and his Kahia or Lieutenant, and alſo the Paſha of Romelia, who was killed with a Cannon-ſhot. The Attack of the Court-Baſtion on the Right-hand of the Vizier was committed to Chuſaein, Paſha of Damaſcus, who thô he was a ſtout Man, and a good Soldier, yet he had been unfortunate, having formerly been beaten by Prince Ragotski in Tranſilvania, by Count Souches, at Leventz (as we have at large deſcribed in the former part of our Hiſtory) and by the King of Poland at Coczim. The Baſtion of the Lobel on the Left-hand of the Vizier was committed to Achmet, Paſha of Temeſwaer, who died on the 3d. of September of a Diſſentery; he had formerly executed the Office of High Treaſurer, and after his deceaſe, Huſaein Paſha, who alſo had been Treaſurer, was promoted to his Place. In deſcribing this Siege, it will not be neceſſary to recount all the particulars of the Traverſes, Mines, Countermines, and other minute Actions, provided (as we intend) we do not omit any conſiderable Paſſage, or Feats of Arms, which were moſt memorable thrô the whole courſe of this Siege.

The Beſieged make a Sally.

Count Staremberg obſerving that the Turks worked continually in their Lines, reſolved to obſtruct them by a vigorous Sally; for which the Beſieged having now loſt all their Fears, were very forward to do: The Sally was managed by one Sampſon Steimbach, a Captain in the Regiment of Manſfeldt, and Count Guy of Staremberg, who ſignalized themſelves with ſuch Valour and Succeſs, that they killed many of the Miners, and brought in a Priſoner alive, who diſcovered many Particulars then acting by the Enemy.

On the 23d. of July, the Turks taking the advantage of a ſtrong Gale of Wind, which blew towards the City, to throw diverſe Bombs thereinto, one of which beat down the Spaniſh Embaſſador's Houſe, with little other damage to the Town. The ſame day in the Afternoon the Turks ſprang a Mine near the Lobel Baſtion, but it taking vent, reverſed on themſelves, damaging only a corner of the Baſtion, and over-turning ſome Paliſadoes, which were repaired again in the Night; howſoever the Turks took this opportunity to make a furious Aſſault upon that Baſtion, but were valiantly repulſed, with the loſs of two Hundred Men killed, and three taken Priſoners.

A Meſſenger from the Duke of Loraine.

About the ſame time, a Meſſenger from the Duke of Loraine having ſwam four times over the Water, with his Letters in a Bladder hanging about his Neck, with much difficulty got into the Town, which brought them the happy and encouraging News of being ſpeedily relieved; for that all the Troops of the Circles, and of the Emperor's hereditary Countries, came daily to the general Rendezvous at Krembs; and that the King of Poland with his Army was come as far as Olmutz. Nor were the Troops of the Duke of Loraine idle all this time during the Siege, but making Incurſions and enterprizing ſome Deſign or other every Day, brought many Priſoners into the Camp with their Horſes and other Booty: But the joy of theſe Succeſſes were not a little damped by the News that the City of Presburg with Timavia, Emdemburg, Prekalla, Leita and Haiſentat, being diſmayed by the formidable Force of the Vizier, had ſubmitted themſelves to Tekeli, and to his Protection. Howſoever conſidering Men reflected, that ſuch Accidents as theſe were to be expected, where a mighty Army predominated; and were as eaſily reverſed by the turn of a contrary Fortune, and that they would follow the Fate and Succeſs of Vienna.

Debates about the Relief of Presbourg.

The 25th. of this Month, the Duke of Loraine receiving Intelligence, that Tekeli had formed an Army of 20 .000 Malecontents, and eight Thouſand Turks under the Command of the Paſhas of Waradin and Peſt, and deſigned to Beſiege the Caſtle of Presburg; which being a Place of conſiderable Conſequence, was a Matter of long Debate, whether in that Conjuncture it was to be relieved in deſpight of all the Difficulties and Obſtacles which appeared to the contrary. For in the firſt place it was alledged, that the Ways thither were rocky, woody, and incloſed, that the Forces of the Enemy were much ſuperior to theirs in number; and that the Army ought not to be put into any hazard of being Defeated, at a time when the Relief of Vienna was the main and ultimate Deſign. To theſe Arguments it was urged, that in caſe the Caſtle of Presburg was ſurrendred to the Enemy, it would facilitate a Communication between their two Armies, and hinder the conjunction of the Poliſh Army with the Imperial, unleſs they took a large compaſs about, which would both harraſs the Men by a long March, and defer the Relief of Vienna; the Extremities of which required nothing more than Haſt and a ſpeedy Succour. Theſe laſt Reaſons prevailed above the former, it being eſteemed of abſolute neceſſity to conſerve the Caſtle of Presbourg, the which was wavering, and ready with the other Towns to accept and embrace the Protection of Tekeli. In purſuance of this Reſolution, the Duke of Loraine paſſed the Danube with his Horſe and Dragoons, namely, the Regiments of Palſi, Caprara, Rabata, Gondola, Taff, Merci, Hallewiel, Montecuculi, Veterani and Gots, which were all Horſe, to the number of eight Thouſand; and of Dragoons, thoſe of Stirum, Schultz and Herberviller, making in all an Hundred thirty ſix Troops and Companies, beſides the Poles under Lubomiski, which made about two Thouſand Men more. In the Night Prince Lewis of Baden and the Baron of Merci, were Commanded in the Van to ſecure the narrow Ways and Paſſages; and being come upon certain Hills, where they ſee round about, they diſcovered the Enemies Fires and Lights below in the Plains, and two Camps at ſome little diſtance one from the other; of which, Advice being given to the General, Prince Lewis of Baden was ordered to Attack the Suburbs of Presbourg, where ſome of the Malecontents were quartered; upon this Surpriſe, the Malecontents flying into the Town, made way for the Imperialiſts to enter without much Reſiſtance: The City being in a ſuddain conſternation, upon ſight of the Imperial Army at their Gates, ſurrendred upon Summons, as did alſo the Caſtle; the Garriſon whereof, whilſt the Town was in Treaty, eſcaped out to ſeek for Refuge in the Camp; but many of them were intercepted in their Paſſage, and cut to pieces.

The Duke of Loraine ſecures Presbourg.

This happy ſucceſs in ſight of the Enemy was an evidence of their Weakneſs and want of Courage, and animated the Chriſtians to give them Battle: The Prince Lewis of Baden with his Dragoons, was hereupon as ordered, drew up in the Vineyards and Gardens adjoyning to the Suburbs, and extended his whole Body to the right and left, along the Danube to the foot of the Hill, the better to ſecure C. Caprara, whilſt he with his Horſe deſcended down by the Vineyards, and had drawn up in Batalia.

The Malecontents are put to flight.

The Enemy made a ſhow as if they intended to fight, and detached ſome Parties to begin a Skirmiſh, but the Duke of Loraine would not Engage, until all his Forces were drawn up; upon appearance whereof the Malecontents changed their Minds, and inſtead of advancing, the Imperialiſts perceived, by a great Duſt riſing on one ſide and the other, that the Enemy retired: The advanced Parties of the Enemy, which were to begin the Battle, finding themſelves abandoned by the main Body, turned their backs and fled; and were hardly purſu'd by the Imperialiſts and Poles, with much loſs and ſlaughter, until they came to a great Wood, with a ſtream of Water running by it, where they made a Stand; but a detached party of Poles, with ſome Squadrons of Germans, and ſome of the Regiment of Palſi charged them with ſuch Vigour and Bravery as put them to a Rout, ſo that they killed about five or ſix Hundred of them, and took about twelve Hundred Waggons of Baggage, and purſued them ſo hotly towards Tirnau, that many of them ſaved themſelves in the Woods, and others threw themſelves into the Danube; the Affrightment and Diſorder was ſo great through the whole Army, that they recovered not themſelves until they had paſſed the Waagh.

Diſcontent between the Turks and Tekeli.

Tekeli having Intelligence of the March of the Imperialiſts, by the Party which had been beaten the Evening before; he retired in the Night-time, with a great Body of his own Horſe and Foot, (leaving very few of his Men with the Turks) and reſolved to attend the Duke of Loraine's coming, and to fall upon him; which occaſioned that Quarrel and Miſunderſtanding between the Malecontents and the Turks, that they ſeparated each from other, and acted apart, until they were reconciled, and again united by Mediation of the Vizier, as appeared by certain Letters, which were intercepted.

A Mine ſprung by the Beſieged.

Several of the Chriſtians killed.

But to return again to the Siege: In the mean time, whilſt theſe things were acting abroad, there was continual firing and ſhooting on both ſides; and on the 26th. the Turks deſigning to make a furious Aſſault, cauſed all their warlike Muſick, ſuch as Flutes, Cymbals, and braſs Trumpets, which give a ſhrill Sound, to play with their higheſt Notes, to encourage their Soldiers to make the On-ſet; but juſt as they were beginning, the Beſieged gave Fire to a Mine, which made many of the Turks to take capers and friſks in the Air, according to the Meaſures of their Muſick. But the Turks not diſmayed hereat, preſt hard to gain that Ground which the Mine had laid open, but were valiantly repulſed by thoſe who had the Guard of that Place: Howſoever, the Matter was long in diſpute, until Count Serini, and St. Croix Lieutenant Colonel of Dupigni's Regiment of Horſe came in with ſome Granadiers to their Relief, and forced the Aſſailants back again into their Trenches, leaving many of their Companions dead upon the place, whoſe Heads the Chriſtians afterwards fixed upon Poles, and expoſed 'em to the View of the Turkiſh Camp. Howſoever, this Action was not performed without ſome loſs and hurt to the Beſieged, for Count Guy of Staremberg and Count Souches were wounded: George Miſnier, General of the Artillery, had his Arm broken by a Shot, of which he died in a few days afterwards, to the great Sorrow of the whole City, which could not but miſs a Perſon ſo excellent in his Art, having been Ingenier at the Siege of Philipsbourg, in the Troops of the Marqueſs of Baden: In this Action alſo were killed Baron Walter, Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiment of Wirtemberg, and William Schemnitz, a Captain in the Regiment of Staremberg; as alſo Baron Dubski, who was ſhot through both his Buttocks with a Muſquet Bullet; and the Governour, Staremberg himſelf, was again wounded in the Hand with the ſtroak of a Stone, as he had before been in the Head.

A Letter ſhot into the Town.

The Turks having this Day intercepted a Letter, which the Governour had ſent by an expreſs Meſſenger to the Duke of Loraine, to give an account of the ſtate of the Town; the Vizier, that he might give notice thereof unto Staremberg, he cauſed the ſame Paper to be faſtned to an Arrow, and ſhot into the Town, with an additional Letter from the Vizier, wrote in Latin to this Effect: That it was to little purpoſe for the Beſieged to write in Characters unto the Duke of Loraine to render him an account of the ill Condition of their Town, ſince the ſame is ſufficiently known to the Beſiegers, without any Key or Explanation of the Cypher. Howſoever the Grand Vizier, out of compaſſion to the Creatures of God, had already offered them his Mercy; but that being rejected by the Beſieged, he thought fit to let them know, that the time was now come, in which they were to feel the rigour of the Divine Indignation, which would cauſe them, tho' late, to repent of this their inflexible Obſtinacy. This Letter being read among the Officers, moved Laughter, rather than occaſioned Fear.

A Body of Tartars defeated.

As the Beſieged continued ſtill in good heart within the Town, ſo the Duke of Loraine's Camp received a double Encouragement from two happy Succeſſes: The firſt was, That the Bano, or Lord Lieutenant of Croatia, had conſerved that People in their Loyalty and Devotion towards the Emperor, and for Security thereof, had made them to enter into a ſolemn Oath: But that of a greater Importance, was, That General Dunewald had again defeated a Body of two or three Thouſand Tartars, with the ſlaughter of about thirteen Hundred killed upon the place, and many Priſoners taken, beſides all their Baggage and Booty which they had plunder'd in Hungary and Auſtria. Within the Town they were forming and contriving all Ways and In-

Inſtruments for their Defence; and amongſt the reſt, they had forged a certain Weapon in manner of a Scyth of about ſix Foot in length beſides the Handle, which proved of excellent Uſe and Effect againſt the Scymeters, and would cut off a Man at the middle without much difficulty, and ſome times take off four or five Heads at a ſtroak.

A mine ſprang by the Turks.

The 28th. the Turks attempting to make themſelves Maſters of the Counterſcarp, on the ſide of the Court-Baſtion and Lobel, ſprang a Mine, which they had prepared on that Quarter; but it being not far enough advanced, it reached not the Paliſadoes, howſoever, about twenty Soldiers were killed, beſides ſeveral wounded.

The Turks repulſed.

The 29th. about five a Clock in the morning, the Beſieged fired ſixty Pieces of Cannon upon the Enemy, which they modeſtly anſwered with one ſingle Gun; but in the Afternoon they ſtormed the Paliſadoes with great fury, but were repulſed with much loſs; in which Action, the new-invented Scyths were very ſerviceable, and did great execution on the Aſſailants, amongſt which Kara Mahomet Paſha of Meſopotamia was wounded in the Thigh, as alſo the Gebegee Baſha, who is chief of the Armourers, and the Vizier's Kahya or Deputy was killed and buried at the entrance into his own Tent.

On the 30th. Count Staremberg fired a Mine, which as believed did great execution on the Enemy, for that they employed the whole Day following in repairing the Damage which that Mine had cauſed.

The 31ſt. the Turks advanced their Trenches ſo near to the Counterſcarp, that the two Parties could ſpeak and diſcourſe one with the other, and fight at Arms end, and with the Stakes of the Paliſadoes, which they had plucked up; but the Defendants with their long iron Crooks, ſuch as we uſe for pulling down Houſes, in the time of Fire, caught up the Bodies of Men, and drew them over the Walls, and with one cut of their Scyths would Mow off three or four Heads at a ſtroak.

The Turks cover their Trenches.

The Turks finding themſelves greatly incommoded in their Trenches by the Bombs and Granadoes, which were ſhot from the Town, contrived ways to cover them with Beams of Timber, over which they laid Sacks of Earth, which kept off all Fireworks, Cannon and Muſquet-ſhot; and in many places of the Trenches they made Pavements of Brick, which were ſo commodious and ſecure, that the Grand Vizier, and many of the principal Officers and Paſhas lodged therein, with as much convenience as in their own Houſes.

Auguſt 3d. On the 3d. of Auguſt the Turks having raiſed their Trenches much higher than the Counterſcarp, began a Fight againſt the Defendants with Muſquets and Arrows, which they continued for a long time, and relieved their Men often, with new Supplies, but were always bravely repulſed by the Chriſtians. Towards the Evening, the Turks endeavoured to gain the Counterſcarp of the Court Ravelin by Aſſault; and with much Bloud, after a vigorous Defence, they took it: The Paſha of Damaſcus was killed in this Action.

4th. The Turks, encouraged with this Succeſs, the next Day purſued their Fortune with redoubled Force, and attacked the Counterſcarp, at the Gate of the Lobel-Bulwark, with ſuch fury, that with the loſs of four Hundred of their Men, they became Maſters of it.

5th. And then on the 5th. they threw into the Ditch of the Ravelin, ſuch quantity of Faggots and Sacks of Earth, as ſerved to fill it up; but yet the Turks poſſeſſed not long this ſpot of Ground, for that very Night they were driven from that Poſt with great loſs by the Valour of the Defendants, and Diligence of the Governour, who was all that Night upon the Works, and took no repoſe until four a Clock in the Morning.

6th. On the 6th. about nine a Clock in the Morning, the Turks ſprang a Mine, which opened the Earth very much in the Counterſcarp, towards the Court-Baſtion, and therewith began a terrible Fight, which continued for the ſpace of five Hours; during which time the Chriſtians loſt about a Hundred Men killed and wounded, amongſt which was Count Leſlie, Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiment of Mansfelt, and Brother of General Leſlie, who at firſt being wounded in the Arm maintained his Ground, not retiring ſo much as to be dreſſed, but ſtill continued the Fight, until being ſhot in the Breaſt with a Muſquet Bullet, he died under the Walls of the City with much Glory; but notwithſtanding all this Valour of the Defendants, the Turks crouded on their Soldiers in ſuch multitudes with continual Supplies, that like a violent Torrent, not being to be withſtood, they became Maſters of the Ditch of the Counterſcarp of the Court Ravelin, at the coſt of the Lives of ſix Hundred and Seventy of their Men, and that Day in all were a Thouſand Turks killed, and about a Hundred and eighty Chriſtians.

C. Leſlie the younger Slain.

The Turks gain the Counterſcarp.

7th. On the 7th. the Centinel, that was placed on the top of the Steeple of St. Stephens, gave notice, about five a Clock in the morning, that he diſcovered a great Smoak ariſing on the farther ſide of the Danube, which continued until eight that Morning, and afterwards vaniſhed; the Governour rightly 1683. conjectur'd, that the Smoak was cauſed by ſome Fight between the Chriſtians and Turks: The truth of which was the next day brought by a Raſcian, (who was of that Province which produces excellent Spies) and he related, That the Turks having detached a Party of about Three thouſand Horſe, to make a Diſcovery of the State of the Duke of Loraine's Camp, and ſee what numbers were come in from Saxony, Suabia and Franconia. Upon advices of their March an Ambuſcade was laid for them, into which they unwarily falling, the greateſt part of them were ſlain, and an Aga, and Tekeli's Secretary, an Hungarian Count, were made Priſoners: And alſo, That they had taken many of the Enemies Waggons laden with Ammunition and Proviſions, and that upon this Succeſs, divers of the Malecontents had deſerted their Party, and were gone unto the Emperor. The ſame day the Turks Sprang a Mine on the ſide of the Lobel Baſtion, which reverſed on themſelves, with the ſame loſs and hurt which they deſign'd for the Chriſtians.

A Party of Turks defeated.

8th. On the 8*th*, the Chriſtians thunder'd their Cannon from the Curtain of the Carinthian Bulwark, which ruined ſome of the Works of the Beſiegers, and Diſmounted their Cannon: Howſoever, the ſame Day the Turks Sprang a Mine, juſt at the Point of the Court Baſtion, by which twenty three Chriſtians were killed. But what in this matter is ſtrange and worthy to be remembred, a certain Gunner was toſſed up into the Air by force of this Mine, and thrown into the Ditch of the Town without any hurt, to the great wonder of all thoſe who were Spectators thereof. The Turks ſeconded the Mine with an Aſſault, and began to remove the Earth under the Ravelin, and to cover the Galleries with Beams and Earth, by which they deſcended into the great Ditch, without receiving any damage either by Cannon or Granados; ſo that the Governour judging it impoſſible to defend that Ravelin, cauſed the Cannon to be withdrawn from thence: Howſoever, the Counts of Daun, and Souches (the Governour being Sick of a Dyſſentery) made a Sally that Night at the Head of Three hundred Men, and Charged the Enemy ſo Vigorouſly, that they drove them out of their Galleries, and burnt all their Works.

A Sally from the Town.

9th. On the 9*th*, the Turks fired a Mine on the ſide of the Ravelin, which killed five Soldiers, and over-turned ſome Paliſadoes; but a greater damage was thereby done to the Turks, who by a reverſe loſt Thirty two of their own Men, and the Paliſadoes were again repaired in the Night.

10th. On the 10*th*, a ſtrong Party of Horſe under the Command of the Count Sarau their Colonel, defeated Two thouſand Malecontents belonging to Budiani, near Friſtenfelden, killed Four hundred and eighty upon the place, took above Three hundred Priſoners, with five Colours. In like manner a Party of Germans belonging to the Garriſon of Raab, under Colonel Heiſler, meeting with a Body of Turks and Tekelites near Altemberg, which were Convoying Waggons laden with Ammunition and Proviſions to the Turkiſh Camp before Vienna, Charged them ſo furiouſly that they totally Defeated them, and put them to Flight, and in the Purſuit killed them with great Slaughter; an Hundred and eighty Waggons were taken; but thoſe which were laden with Powder, and Fire-works were blown up, rather than they ſhould become a Prey to the Enemy, and be made uſe of againſt themſelves. The ſame Day the Turks Sprang a Mine at the Point of the Lobel Baſtion, which toſſed three Chriſtian Soldiers into the Air; and ſet them down again in the ſame place upon their Legs without any hurt: But it proved of much greater miſchief to the Turks by its reverſe upon themſelves. All that Day many Cannon ſhot were fired on both ſides; and the Beſieged threw many Bombs out of their Morter-pieces into the Enemies Trenches, which did conſiderable Execution.

A Party of Turks and Malecontents defeated.

The Scholars of the Univerſity in Vienna, whoſe Motto might be Tam Marti quam Mercurio, finding this no time for Books, apply'd their Minds to the War, for preſervation of their Lives, City and Chriſtian Religion, againſt the Common Enemy of the Faith: And forming themſelves into a Body, made two or three very good Companies. The Merchants alſo of the Society of Netherlanders following their Example, raiſed a Company of Two hundred and eighty Men, all Armed with Fire-locks, which they maintained at their own coſt and charge; and being uſed in their Common exerciſes to ſhoot with Guns, they became excellent Marks-men; and from the upper Rooms of the Emperor's Palace, where they were commonly Quarter'd, they did good Service, annoying the Turks greatly with their Shot; nor were the Scholars leſs expert than the Merchants, for one of them having ſhot a Janiſary dead with his Muſquet, he drew his Body within the Paliſadoes with one of the long Hooks, and cut off his Head, which at the end of a Pike he carried through the City; and having ript open his Stomach, he found there ſix Ducats in Gold, which he had ſwallowed; ſuppoſing that part to be the moſt ſecure, and the moſt private Purſe, free from the Robbery either of his Friends or Enemies: It ſeems, it was known afterwards, that this

The Scholars and Merchants become Soldiers.

1683. this was the Common way of Concealment of Gold amongſt the Turkiſh Soldiers; which when the Imperialiſts diſcover'd, they made it a common practice to dive into the Entrails, of as many as they took: Examining their Bowels like the antient Augurs, who Inſpected the inwards of Beaſts, to make their preſages of good, or bad Fortune.

11th. On the 11*th*, the Turks Sprang two Mines without any great effect; howſoever it ſerved them for a Signal to make an Aſſualt; but the Defendants making uſe of their ſmaller Guns, or Field-pieces planted on the Walls, charged with Chain and Partridge ſhot, with Spars and pieces of old Iron, which together with Hand-Granadoes made ſuch a Slaughter amongſt the Turks, as cauſed them to Retire. Howſoever, Forty of the Defendants were killed and wounded.

12th. The next day the Turks about Noon fired another Mine, which blew up one of the Flankers of the Ravelin, with ſo much noiſe and thunder, as gave an Allarum to the whole Town, and cauſed the Officers, who were than ſat down at Table to ariſe and leave their Dinner, to ſee what the matter was. The Turks were ready hereupon to have made the Aſſault, but finding that the Breach was not wide enough, they retired again within their Trenches.

13th. Howſoever, ſtill continuing their Works, they at length on this day blew up the whole Ravelin; howſoever the quantity of Powder being very great, the Mine reverſed upon themſelves with ſuch Execution, as abated the Courage of the moſt bold Aſſailants.

14th. On the 14*th*, having ſunk their Trenches nine Foot deep, they endeavoured to penetrate a Way into the Ditch, and about ſix a Clock in the Evening they Sprang another Mine on the right Hand of the Ravelin, with as little ſucceſs as the Day before.

The Chriſtian Camp increaſes.

In the mean time the Chriſtian Camp daily increaſed to ſuch numbers, as were judged ſufficient to give Battail to the Ottoman Army; but to make the Game more ſecure, it was judged neceſſary to attend the coming of the King and Army of Poland: To haſten which, diverſe Meſſengers were ſent, to deſire his Majeſty to expediate and quicken his March, leſt he ſhould come too late for the Relief of Vienna, whoſe Forces every Day diminiſhing by continual loſſes, could not poſſibly hold out long, thô they were well aſſured, that the utmoſt Extremity would be ſuſtained, before the Defendants would yield to a Surrender. The Poliſh King being ſenſible hereof, promiſed to haſten his March, ſo as to be at Krembs on the 28*th* of the Month.

1683. 15th. and 16th. The 15*th* and 16*th*, the Turks continued to Batter, and to throw Bombs into the Town, and Sprang ſeveral Mines, thô not with much Execution; and were in divers Aſſaults vigorouſly repulſed. Howſoever, all this was done at the expence of much Blood, and with the diminution both of the numbers and ſtrength of the Garriſon, which by hourly loſſes on the Breaches, on the Works, and by Sickneſſes cauſed by the want of good Diet, was much decayed, and the Defendants were reduced to that low Condition, that they could not long ſuſtain the violence of ſo forcible an Enemy. And thô the Turkiſh Camp was not free from Diſeaſes and Mortality, yet they were leſs ſenſible of their loſſes by their numbers, and the daily Recruits which they received. To make known the true ſtate of the City to the Duke of Loraine, ſome crafty and bold Men undertook to be the Meſſengers, ſome of which were intercepted, and others eſcaped; amongſt the reſt one Francis Koltchizki alias Kotlenski, who was Interpreter to the Levant or Eaſtern Company, being perfectly practiſed in the Turkiſh Language, undertook to carry unto the Duke of Loraine, not only Letters but alſo by word of Mouth, to inform him of the true State and Condition of the Town. Accordingly Kotlenski having diſguiſed himſelf in the Turkiſh Habit, ſilently paſſed through the Paliſadoes, and enter'd into the Camp, where with much Confidence he ſet up his Throat, and began to Sing with the higheſt Notes of the Turkiſh Air; no Man ſuſpected him in the leaſt kind, and an Aga obſerving a Fellow paſs ſo merrily by his Tent, called him in, and for his good Humour entertain'd him with Coffee. After which without any Examination he proceeded on his way, and paſſed the Mountain of Kulemberg; and being deſcended down to the ſide of the Danube, ſome of the Chriſtian Soldiers Fired at him from an Iſland, but having made it known to them by certain Signs, that he was a Meſſenger ſent from Vienna, he was kindly received, and conducted with expedition and ſafety to the Duke of Loraine, to whom with great ſincerity, he gave a true and exact Relation of the State of Vienna; and delivered his Letters, one of which of the 4*th* of the Month, was from the Deputies of the Council of State; two of the 8*th* from the Counts de Staremberg and Capliers; and one of the 12*th* from Capliers; all which gave an Account of the Siege, and of the advances of the Enemy upon them, and the neceſſity of the place, with a Liſt of thoſe who were killed and wounded, concluding with earneſt deſires for ſpeedy Relief; that

A Meſſenger ſent to the Duke of Loraine.

The Duke of Loraine receives Letters from Vienna.

1683. that Count Staremberg was very Sick, and weakned by a Diſſentery, and that they began to be in want of Granadoes.

Anſwers returned.

The Duke of Loraine was very careful to inform the Emperor, the King of Poland, the Electour of Saxony, and all Perſons concerned, of the Condition of Vienna: And diſpatched Count Caraffa to the King of Poland, praying him to order the March of General Sinariski, who with ſome advanced Troops had been ſix days in Sileſia. And that Vienna might not in the mean time languiſh for want of hopes, and information of the care which was taking to Succour and Relieve them; the Duke of Loraine having commended the reſolution of the Meſſenger, and promiſed him a Reward agreeable to the hazard of ſuch an undertaking, ſo ſoon as the City ſhould be delivered from the Siege, he diſpatched him away with a full Anſwer to all Demands. Kotlenski return'd with the ſame Confidence, as before to the Turkiſh Camp; and privately ſtoal into the City through the Paliſadoes, where he was received with all the Joy, which diſtreſſed Men could expreſs to one, who brought them the comfortable hopes of a ſpeedy Deliverance. Many Queſtions (we may believe) were put to him by all ſorts of People, and in all places and Companies where he was; and in all of them he infuſed Heart and Spirit, by the Relations he gave of the increaſe of the German Army, of the Preparations which were making, and of the near approach of the King of Poland. Kotlenski was not abſent above four Days before he return'd; and what Intelligence he gave, was confirm'd by the Letters he brought from the Duke of Loraine to Count Staremberg, ſignifying that he had defeated Tekeli near Presbourg; and taken a Convoy with all ſorts of Ammunition, and Proviſion deſigned for the Ottoman Camp, and that the King of Poland was upon his March for Relief of the City. This News was entertain'd with a General Joy, certify'd by Ringing of Bells, and Firing all the Cannon of the Town, and Vollies of ſmall ſhot upon the Enemy; and for a Signal to the Duke of Loraine that his Letters were come to Hand, Three Rockets were fired from the top of St. Stephen's Steeple.

The Turkiſh Camp in want of Forage.

The Tartars had deſtroy'd all the Countries round, that the Turkiſh Horſe were almoſt Famiſhed for want of Forage: Nor was there any to be procured within two or three days Journey of the Camp; but the neceſſity was ſuch, that the Vizier detached a Party of Four or five thouſand Horſe, to fetch in Provender from Parts far Remote: And it is ſaid, That ſo great was their want, that they were forced to ſtrip the Trees of their Leaves, for the preſent nouriſhment and ſuſtenance of their Horſes, for which they were beholding to their Friends the Tartars. 1683.

A Mine fired.

17th. On the 17*th*, the Turks raiſed a new Battery of three Pieces of Cannon, againſt the Baſtion Lobel, but they were ſoon diſlodged: Howſoever, between ſeven and eight a Clock in the Evening, the Turks fired a Mine under the Breach of the Ravelin, intending to make an Aſſault, but it was too hot work, the reſiſtance being great, they were droven back into their Trenches.

Another Mine ſprung.

18th. On the 18*th*, the Defendants conſulted how to diſpoſſeſs the Turks, of the Quarters they had taken at the Foot of the Ravelin: But whilſt they were conſidering thereof, the Turks Sprang a Mine under the Ravelin, which carried away all the Front of it towards the ſide of the Town; and immediately planted twelve Colours on the Ruins, with Reſolution to make an Aſſault: To prevent which Count Dupigni with Sixty Men made a Sally, but preſſing too forward into the Enemies Works, he was ſhot into the Belly with a Muſquet Bullet, of which he died on the place, with Twenty four of his Soldiers and eight wounded, and alſo the Marquis of Chauville was killed. The Governour to relieve this ſmall Party, appointed a Sally of Three hundred Men; which having paſſed without the Works, perceived a formidable Body of Turks ready to Attack them, at which being diſmaied they refuſed to advance, and crouding back at the Sally Port, where but one Man could enter a-breaſt, they were in ſuch diſorder that the Turks killed many of them, and had made a far greater Slaughter, had not Count Schaffemberg with thoſe few that were with him, covered and defended the Retreat; in this Action the Turks loſt Four hundred Men, and the Defendants about Forty five.

A Mine ſprung by the Defendants.

19th. and 20th. On the 19*th*, the Defendants Sprang a Mine, which totally over-threw all the Enemies Works on the ſide of the Ravelin, and buried many Turks in the Ruins. The ſame day the Duke of Loraine received other Letters from Vienna, written by Staremberg, and Capliers giving an Account of the decaying State and Condition of the Town. To which Anſwers was made on the 20*th*, informing them, that the Auxiliary Troops were advancing towards Vienna; and that the next day, he would take a view of the Coutry, for ordering the March of the Army; that they ſhould ſpeedily be relieved, and in the mean time, that they ſhould be of good Courage.

The

1683. Other Mines Sprung. The 21*ſt*, very early in the Morning the Turks ply'd all their Cannon very hotly upon the Town, and about eight a Clock, they ſet Fire to a Mine under the Lobel Baſtion, but with little effect; and in the Evening about ſix a Clock they Sprang another with like Succeſs.

22th. The next day the Defendants to make an agreeable return to the Turks for their kindneſs the day before, Sprang a Mine under the Ruins of the Ravelin; which threw ſo much Earth into the Traverſes of the Enemy, as buried many of their Labourers and others, who being ſunk up to the very Shoulders in Earth, were drawn out by their Companions: All the remainder of the day was ſpent in Fighting, the Turks labouring to gain the Ravelin, and the Chriſtians to defend it. Towards the Evening, the Beſieged threw divers Earthen Pots filled with Pitch, and Sulfur into the Ditches of the Court-Baſtion, and of the Lobel, to burn the Enemies Traverſes; the Flame of which could not be extinguiſh'd, until the Matter was totally conſumed, and in the mean time it ſerved the Chriſtians for a Light, to ſee the Enemy when they approached near the Paliſadoes.

Whilſt the Relief of Vienna was delay'd, the Imperial Troops not to remain Idle and without any Action, Colonel Huſeler with A Party of the Turks defeated. Two thouſand Horſe, and Schultz with as many more, with ſeveral other Troops under other Captains, fell upon ſome Auxiliaries coming to Reinforce the Camp before Vienna, and defeated them, and likewiſe a Party of Turks endeavouring to paſs the Danube were repulſed. At length Three thouſand five hundred of them having Ferried over the River in Boats, were attacked by the Imperialiſts, and beaten back with the loſs of Eight hundred and ſeventy Men; and many of them endeavouring to ſave themſelves eſcaped in Boats, but others truſting to the Waters, and to Swim over, were drown'd, to the number as is ſuppoſed of Fourteen hundred Men, amongſt which were two Paſhas, and the Son of the Tartar Han was there wounded. Next Morning were brought in unto the Generals divers Colours and Standards, with Turkiſh Drums and Timbrels, and many Priſoners of Quality and Note. The Grand Vizier having received this News, Ordered Tekeli to repair immediately to the Siege of Vienna with all his Forces: But Tekeli having received Information of the great Army which was almoſt in a readineſs to March to the Relief of that place; and fearing leſt upon ill Tekeli refuſes to come to the Turkiſh Camp. Succeſs, the Vizier ſhould Reak part of his Revenge upon him, he excuſed himſelf by pretence of the great urgency of Affairs, which required the utmoſt of his Force, and attendance in the Upper Hungary. 1683.

23d. The Turks this day having carried on their Galleries to the very Foot of the Ravelin, Aſſailed it with all their Fury, and after a long Fight they poſſeſſed themſelves of a third part of it, and lodged therein: But the Chriſtians who were Intrenched and Fortifyed behind the Breach, kept ſtill Poſſeſſion of the other two thirds of that Work. It being obſerved from the Town, that the Turks were very buſy in removing Earth, the Chriſtians feared, as it was their common Diſcourſe, that the Enemy was making their way Under-ground into the Cellars of the Emperor's Palace: And tho the Governour gave not much Credence to this Report, yet he Ordered the Yeomen of the Guard, who were armed with Halberts, and left behind for preſervation of the Court, to ſet their Centinels in the Cellars, and to relieve them from time to time; and to be very Vigilant, and Attentive to hearken to the noiſe of Workmen, labouring under Ground. The ſame day one Kimpler a very ingenious Ingenier, working at a Counter-Mine under the Gate of the Caſtle, chanced to open his Way into a large Vault encompaſſed with Walls; and therein he found a round Box of Tin, which he at firſt took for ſome Urn, or Coffin of a Dead Body; A Treaſure found. but having open'd it, he was ſurprized with a Treaſure of Gold and Silver, and ſearching farther into it, he found a Parchment at the bottom with theſe words, written in Old Characters.

Gaudebis
Si inveneris, Videbis, Jacebis,
Sed
Orabis, Pugnabis, Adificabis.
Non Hodie
Nec Cras, ſed Quia.
Univerſus Equus.
Turris Erecta & Armata.
Diverſa Ordinata Arma.

Subſcribed
Rolland. Hung. Mog. poſuit.

Or, Rowland Hunn an Inhabitant, or Citizen of Mentz, who was the Perſon that had depoſited it in that place. Some are of Opinion, That this Rowland had buried this Caſe or Box, with a certain Spirit of Divination, as if he had Prognoſticated that this Treaſure ſhould be found during the Siege of Vienna: And as if this Rowland Hunn ſhould ſay to Kimpler, if it prove thy fortune to find this Treaſure, thou ſhalt rejoyce, behold it and ſay nothing; but give Thanks and Pray to Almighty God, and Fight. Thou ſhalt Build, but not to Day, not nor to Morrow, but hereafter; thou ſhalt Erect Churches, when thy Country is freed from it's Enemies, but not now while the Ottoman Horſe encompaſs you, and that the Towers are Armed, and a Formidable force Beſiege you. This was the Interpretation, which ſome paſſed on this Writing.

The Beſieged comforted with hopes of Relief.

24th. The 24th, the Turks Sprang another Mine, but with little effect, more than the caſting up of great quantities of Earth: But that which adminiſtred the higheſt Comfort, and Joy imaginable to the Defendants, was the entrance of a Meſſenger into the Town with the News of the great preparations making, and aſſurance that the Town would be relieved in eight hours time. The ſame day the Great Vizier detach'd a Party of Five hundred Horſe to paſs the Danube, to Spoil and Burn ſome Villages on the other ſide; but being encountred by Colonel Heiſler, they were defeated, and many of them in their Flight drowned in the River.

25th. The 25th, the Chriſtians made a Sally with ſuch Reſolution and Fury, that they drove the Turks out of the Ditch, overthrew their Galleries and Gabions, ſpiked ſix Pieces of their Cannon, and diſcharged one of their Mines of the Powder, which was ready to be fired, which a German Miner had luckily diſcovered in the Ditch.

26th. The 26th, the Turks fired two Mines under the Ruins of the Ravelin, with Reſolution to make an Aſſault; but were ſtill bravely repulſed by the Defendants, one Cannon ſhot having carried away five Turks Heads at once.

27th. The Turks fired their Cannon and Mortar-pieces with continued Peals for ſome hours; during which time in the Morning, Three hundred Muſquetiers, and Fifty Horſemen of the Regiment of Dupigni, deſcended by certain Subterranean Vaults into the Ditch of the Court Baſtion, where they ruined the Traverſes of the Enemy in ſuch manner, that they required three days time to be repaired; which was of higheſt concernment to the Defendants, to whom nothing was ſo neceſſary and important, as to put the Enemy backwards in the Approaches, and Preſſures they made upon them. In this Action one of the principal Officers of the Turks was ſlain, as appeared by the Conflicts, that were made to regain his Body, for which there was a Diſpute that laſted a whole hour; the ſame day the Turks fired two Mines, one on the left ſide of the Ravelin, and an other under the Counterſcarp which joyns to the Court Baſtion; and immediately, mounted on the Ruins, intending to poſſeſs themſelves intirely of the Ravelin; but they were repulſed by Count Scaffemberg with great Slaughter. At the cloſe of the Evening, Forty Rockets were fired from the top of St. Stephen's Steeple, to give notice unto the Duke of Loraine of the great diſtreſs of the City, and of the daily advances the Enemy made upon them, and the hourly diminution of the Garriſon.

28th. The nex day to confirm theſe Signals, the Duke of Loraine received Letters from Staremberg and Capliers, repreſenting the ſad and extreme miſery of the City, which could not hold out much longer, but muſt (if not ſpeedily relieved) be yielded to the Beſiegers: Howſoever, they concluded with a Reſolution to defend themſelves to the laſt drop of their Blood.

29th. The 29th, the Turks fired the greateſt Mine of any they had yet done, but to ſo little purpoſe, that they durſt not adventure to ſecond it by an Aſſault, as they had formerly done.

30th. This day about three a Clock in the Afternoon, a Mine of the Turks over-threw a great part of the right Flanker of the firſt Retrenchment of the Ravelin, which was ſtill defended by the Imperialiſts, thô the outward Retrenchment was poſſeſſed by the Turks. The Chriſtians loſt only two Men by this Mine, who were buried in the Earth; but the Turks preſſing forward, were repulſed with loſs of twenty of their Men who were killed.

31th. The Turks to conclude this Month, fired their Cannon and Mortars ſo inceſſantly, that it was believed a General Storm would follow: And having fired a Mine in the Morning, they hoped to have become Maſters of the Ravelin, now as it were at its laſt gaſp, and Aſſaulted it with ſuch Fury, that it ſeem'd ready to yield: But the Chriſtians fought with ſo great Reſolution, that they kill'd Sixty Janiſaries upon the Ruins, and recover'd all the third, and part of the firſt Retrenchment. And thô the Defendants were well aſſur'd that they ſhould be Relieved in very few days; yet not knowing what Accidents might occur which none could foreſee, they with all diligence made another Retrenchment at the Foot of the Court Baſtion, and at other places. Towards the Evening it was diſcovered, that the Turkiſh Miners were at work under the Ravelin; in which to diſturb them, it was agreed the next day to make a briſk Sally, and to burn the Galleries by which they paſſed to the Mine.

Spet. 1ſt. The next Day being the firſt of the Month, the Sally was accordingly performed by three Hundred Men, who deſcending into the Ditch of the Court-Baſtion, advanced as far as to the Galleries, intending to burn and deſtroy them with Granadoes and diverſe ſorts of Fire-balls; but the Works being deep, and the Janiſaries preſſing on them in great numbers, the Defendants were 1683. forced to retire with the loſs of about twenty Men, thô with many more on the Enemy's ſide. Towards the Evening, the Fight was again renewed by a freſh Aſſault of the Janiſaries, purpoſing with full reſolution to become entire Maſters of the Ravelin; but the Chriſtians being ſpirited with the hopes of ſpeedy Succour, ſo valiantly oppoſed them, that at length they were forced to retire with great Slaughter: Immediately after which, the Beſieged made another Sally with about four hundred and fifty Men, burnt their Galleries, and ruined thoſe Works, which they could not repair again in leſs than three Days. In this Action the Citizens behaved themſelves with much Bravery and Dexetity in the execution of their Fire-works; and thô this Sally coſt them Ninety Men, yet it was attended with the death of above three Hundred Janiſaries.

The Duke of Loraine meets with the King of Poland.

The Day before was remarkable for the Encounter of the Duke of Loraine and the King of Poland; the firſt going to Olbrun to meet his Majeſty: So ſoon as they came in ſight of each other, about the diſtance of twenty five Spaces, the Duke deſcended from his Horſe, as did alſo the King; and coming near they embraced. The King in very affectionate Terms demanded after his Health, and commended his Valour and Conduct, by which he had ſuſtained ſo long the force of ſuch powerful Enemies. Then he preſented to him his Son, Prince Alexander, whom, he ſaid, he had trained up betimes in War, to ſerve the Emperor; and did not doubt but he would improve much more by the Guidance and Example of ſo great a General. To which the Duke rerurned anſwer, That his Majeſty had not only amazed him with the heroick and generous Act of ſo long and tedious a March, but had aſtoniſhed him with the exceſs of his Favour and obliging Expreſſions towards him: That next to the Service of the Emperor, he deſired to live, that he might perform ſomething acceptable to his Majeſty, and to all his Relations: That as to the Forms and Rules of War, no Perſon alive was ſo well verſed in them as his Majeſty, from whom all the Generals and Captains of the World might without diſcredit not be aſhamed to learn the Leſſons of Military Diſcipline: After which, the Generals of the Army, the Nobility and Vice-Chancellor of that Kingdom, came and paid their Reſpects to the Duke of Loraine. And then, being mounted on Horſe-back, the King having the Duke on the Right-hand, and the Prince on the Left; they enter'd into Diſcourſe concerning the State of the War, and continued the ſame, until they came to the Camp, where, in the King's Tent, a ſumptuous Supper was prepared at a long Table; the King ſate in the middle; on his Right-hand the Duke was placed, and on his Left the Prince of Poland; after which the King ordered all the Nobility, who came with the Duke of Loraine to ſit alſo. The Supper being ended, at which various Diſcourſes paſſed, but moſt relating to the preſent Enterpriſe; the Duke of Loraine returned to his own Camp, much ſatisfied with the Courteſie and Reſolution of the King, who diſpatched Meſſengers with all diligence to the General, who brought up the Rear, to haſten the March of the Army, with all convenient ſpeed. And the next day the King dining with the Duke of Loraine at his Tent, reſolved to meet the Emperor at Krembs on the ſecond of September, where the Interview was appointed, and there it was where all things were to be concerted about the Paſſage over the Danube, and Conjunction of the Armies. Whileſt theſe things were projecting, Count Sciamburg came from Nayburgh, bringing Advice, That the Elector of Saxony, with his Forces, could not be at Krembs until the third or fourth of this Month, upon which it was computed, that the Relief of Vienna could not poſſibly be until the 12th. 1683.

The order of their Supper.

Intelligence of all theſe Matters being carried to the Emperor, the Preſence of his Imperial Majeſty was judged neceſſary at Krembs, where the place of general Rendezvous was appointed, both to animate and inſpirit the Army, and to accommodate, compoſe and ſilence ſuch Quarrels and Punctilio's as might ariſe amongſt ſo many Princes of different Countries, concerning Place and Precedency; but the Emperor in his way thither, being taken ill of ſome Indiſpoſition in his Health, proceeded no farther than Lintz, where he remained until he received the happy News of the Relief of Vienna, and the Confuſion of his Enemies.

A meeting at Edendorf.

In the mean time, a general Council of War being held at Edendorf, at which the Elector of Saxony was preſent; the Duke of Loraine, by his Prudence, ſo ordered and diſpoſed Matters, that no Queſtions about Place or Precedence came into competion. For ſo it was order'd, That at a long Table the King of Poland ſhould ſit in the middle, on his Right-hand the Elector of Saxony, and next to him all the Generals of the Empire; and on the Left, the general Officers of Poland: Over-againſt the King, the Duke of Loraine took his Place, who was to be chief Speaker at that Aſſembly, in regard he was beſt able to render a true Account of the State of the War. The Council being ſate in this form, it was laid down as a general Rule, That all Colonels, with the Concurrence of their General Officers, ſhould give

A Council of War held there.

1683. in writing to the King of Poland a true State of their reſpective Regiments, and of the Places where they were Quartered; and that from his Majeſty they ſhould receive Rules and Inſtructions for their March to the Relief of Vienna. It was farther agreed, after ſome debate, That the Conjunction of the Army, with the Auxiliary Troops, ſhould be on the 5th. of September in the Plains of Tuln: That the Army of Poland ſhould paſs the Danube at the ſame place with the Emperor's Army: That the Forces of Saxony ſhould paſs the River, by way of the Bridge at Krembs: And that all the Bavarian Forces which lay encamped with ſome German Troops, under the Command of Count Leſly, ſhould March directly towards Tuln, to joyn with the Imperial and Poliſh Forces.

The execution of theſe Deſigns was deferred until the 7th. when the King towards the Evening began to paſs the River, and was forthwith followed by the Duke of Loraine at the Head of the Imperial Army; having firſt made a Detachment of three Regiments, which were to joyn with three Thouſand Poles to cut off all Communication of the Turks and Malecontents, with the Vizier's Camp. Colonel Heiſler with his Regiment of ſix Hundred Horſe was ordered to take his March by the way of Cloſſen-neuburg, and to make Fires upon the Hills of Kalemberg, to give notice unto the Beſieged of their approaching Relief, which was the Signal agreed between them. But before we come to this glorious Atchievement, let us ſee what was acting for Defence of the Town, and Difficulties to which the Beſieged were reduced.

Sept. 2. In the Morning of this ſecond day, the Point of the Court-Baſtion was overthrown, which gave the Turks occaſion to carry their Galleries farther, to the utter ruin of that Fort. Count Staremberg believing that the remaining part of the Baſtion could not be longer defended, gave Order to Huiternian, a Captain of his Regiment, whoſe turn it was to mount the Guard that Night, to abandon the Ravelin in caſe he found himſelf over-preſſed by the Turks, and under covert of the dark Night to make his Retreat. But this ſtout Captain having taken this Poſt with fifty Men, ſo bravely defended the remains of the tottering Fortreſs, that thô the Turks burnt the Paliſadoes which were his chief Fortification, yet he repulſed them by the Fire of his Muſquets, with loſs of twenty of his Men, and remained on the place until the Morning, having killed two Janiſaries with his own Hands.

3d. Next day the Governour finding it impoſſible to maintain that Poſt any longer, gave order to the Guards to retire, and abandon it to the poſſeſſion of the Turks, who had little more to boaſt of, than the acquiſt of that Ravelin, after an Attempt of ſix Weeks continuance made thereupon. 1683.

4th. The fourth was a bloudy day, both to the Chriſtians and to the Turks; for the latter had ſprung a Mine under the Court-Bulwark, which not only opened a Breach of ſeven Geometrical Paces, but ſhook the whole City with the violent concuſſion of the Air. Five thouſand Turks, immediately with Cemyters in their Hands, mounted the Breach, and ſheltring themſelves under ſome Sacks of Wool, which they carried before them, they mounted the Breach with their Cries, Allah, Allah, and planted four of their Standards thereupon. But notwithſtanding all this Fury of the Turks, they were repulſed with equal Bravery by the Chriſtians. The Fight continued the whole day, in which the Generals, Captains, and common Soldiers performed the Offices and Parts of valiant and ſtout Defendants, who fearleſs of the Enemies Cannon, ſmall Shot, Bombs, Granadoes and Mines, thô twenty of them were killed that day by one Bomb, and thirty by the Mine, yet ſtill they remained reſolute not to grant one Palm of Ground to the Enemy; but what they gained with the Lives of thouſands. The Chriſtians loſt in this day's Conflict one Hundred fifty four common Soldiers, beſides ſome Officers; but this Loſs was recompenſed with the ſlaughter of twelve Hundred Turks, whoſe Bodies filled up the Ditch, amongſt which 'twas believed that diverſe were Men of Quality, becauſe their Corpſe were carried off with much diligence and hazard by thoſe, who attended them at their fall.

A bloudy Fight.

5th. The Turks, enraged with theſe Repulſes, fired their Batteries inceſſantly againſt the Walls of the Town; and towards the Evening a terrible Fight began in the Ditch, at the foot of the Court-Baſtion near the Breach, in which the Turks were beaten off with much Bravery by the Defendants, who not only repaired the Breach, but retrenched themſelves ſo ſtrongly, that the Turks durſt attempt them no more on that ſide. This day Arms were given into the Hands of four Hundred Inhabitants, who had not as yet been engaged on the Walls, having been employed in other Services.

6th. On the 6th. the Turks fired two Mines, one of which was under the Lobel-Baſtion, and being extreamly deep, it over-threw a great part of the Wall, opened a Breach of nine Paces wide, and blew up twenty four of the Defendants, Howſoever, the Turks did not immediately proceed to an Aſſault, becauſe the Mines had thrown up ſuch vaſt quantities of Stones and Earth, as had almoſt fil-

A Mine fired.

1683. led up their Trenches, and buried many of their Soldiers. Howſoever, having breathed and conſidered a while, they advanced to an Aſſault with their uſual Multitudes, which continued for two Hours; till at length the Turks finding it impoſſible to prevail, with-drew from the Breach, and fled with ſuch fear, that not regarding the way they took to avoid the Enemies Shot, many of them came within reach of the Ravelin, called Molk; where they were ſo received by Cannon and Granadoes, filled with Nails and old Iron, and by ſmall Shot from behind a Redoubt placed in the Ditch, that whole Chambers of Janiſaries were deſtroyed in the Fight, and greater numbers killed than had been in any of the Aſſaults; the Loſs having been computed at the leaſt two Thouſand Men.

Two thouſand Turks killed.

With this Succeſs, and with the daily hopes and expectations of Relief, the Spirits of the Defendants were raiſed and exalted; as the Courages of the Enemy, with the many Slaughters ſuſtained in the Siege, and apprehenſions of the approach of a vaſt and formidable Army againſt them began to abate and decline.

Signals of the Succours coming.

And as a fore-runner of the expected Succour, five Rockets were diſcovered that Evening in the Air, from the Mountain of Kalemberg, which was the Signal agreed upon in that caſe; and as a Token, that they were ſo underſtood by the Town, five Rockets more from the top of St. Stephen's Steeple were returned in anſwer. This day was the laſt that the Turks made their fierceſt Attacks, being well aſſured, that what was not then obtained could not afterwards be effected, but by a total defeat of the Chriſtian Forces; ſo that the Vizier did little more the day following being the 7*th*, than continue their Batteries without hope of much execution; and expecting every day to be Aſſaulted by an Army not much inferiour to his own, he drew out his Troops to take a review of them, and to ſee in what Condition they were to encounter ſo formidable an Enemy. The Army being drawn out, every Beglerbeg, Paſha or Sangiac gave in a Liſt of the Men which remained under his Command; the numbers of which being caſt up into one total Sum, amounted unto One hundred ſixty and eight thouſand Men; which probably might have been the full account of the whole Army, when they firſt ſurrounded the Walls of Vienna:

Account of the Turk's Forces.

What were killed at the Siege.

Afterwards during the Siege, thoſe which were ſlain or died by Sickneſs were computed at Forty eight thouſand five hundred and forty four, as appeared by a Liſt found in the Grand Vizier's Tent after the Siege was raiſed; ſo that then the Turkiſh Army was reduced unto One hundred and nineteen thouſand four hundred and fifty ſix fighting Men, beſides Camel-drivers and Attendants on the Camp; and with this vaſt Force the Turks ſhamefully turned their Backs and Fled, as we ſhall ſhortly ſee in a few days following.

8th. On the 8*th*, there was an appearance of Smoak aſcending from Mount Kalemberg, which gave an undoubted aſſurance to the Beſieged, of the approach of ſome advanced Troops deſigned for their Relief: And with this joyful Spectacle the Defendants beheld the Turks loading their Camels, and preparing to pack away with their Baggage. Howſoever, they continued ſtill to fire great quantities of Bombs, and Granadoes into the Town, and to dig their Mines; one of which they fired this day under the Baſtion of the Lobel: By which they blew up part of the Wall, which as believed would be ſeconded by a General Aſſault; and accordingly expected by the Defendants, who in fear thereof remain'd all day in Arms on their Guard, and with them the Regiment of Horſe commanded by Dupigni, all ſerving on Foot, armed with their Helmets and Coats of Mail; but inſtead hereof the Turks only made a ſmall Attempt with about Three hundred Men, with which they had the fortune to beat the Chriſtians out of the Trenches of the Paliſadoes, which united the Communication between the Lobel and Town: But Santa Croce, Lieutenant Colonel to Dupigni, with Fifty of his Regiment, armed as aforeſaid, coming in to their aſſiſtance, repulſed the Turks from thoſe Trenches, and again poſſeſſed themſelves thereof: In which Action the Lieutenant Colonel was wounded in the Leg, as was alſo one of his Captains called Grove, and Sixteen of his Souldiers killed and wounded; beſides Twenty five Foot Soldiers belonging to other Regiments; but ſtill good fortune ſo favoured them, that they met with a Mine of the Enemy furniſhed with Twenty eight Barrils of Powder, which was ready to have been fired that Night, had they diſcharged it, and filled the vacancy again with Earth.

9th. The Turks having News of the near approach of Relief, reſolved to make their ultimate Effort on the Town, which they thought was now reduced to the laſt Gaſp and Extremity, and that they muſt carry it now or never: Upon which accordingly they fired their Cannon, and Mortars double to what they had done on other days: But this was but like a lightning (as they ſay) before Death; for preſently in the Afternoon the Turkiſh Camp began to move, and their Cavalry to Ride from one ſide to another in a confuſed manner: Their Servants and Attendants were taking down their Tents, and loading their Camels with 1683. their Baggage; all which was in order to the removal of their Camp, and pitching it in another place more commodious for Engagement, and Fighting with the Enemy. Howſoever, thoſe who were left behind to ſecure the Trenches, and make good the Siege, ſtill proceeded in their Subterranean Works, and this day fired nine ſeveral Mines under the Curtain, which was between the Court and Lobel Baſtion, without much execution.

10th. On the 10*th*, a Diſcovery was made of three other Mines, which the Enemy had opened under the Curtain between the ſaid Baſtions; to defend which, all the Cannon on that ſide were brought to that place, and behind them ſo many Trenchments, Retrenchments and Paliſadoes were made and erected, that it was almoſt impoſſible for the Enemy to advance ten Paces, without meeting ſome difficult Paſs, or Fortification to overcome: And indeed the Turks had already found by good experience, that one ſpan of Earth had coſt them the lives of a Thouſand Men to purchaſe it. Notwithſtanding which the place was reduced to its laſt extremity, and to a ſenſible want of all Proviſions and Ammunition; and nothing could keep up their Courage and Reſolution, but the hourly expectation of Relief, which they ſignified to the Duke of Loraine, by the continual firing of Rockets and other Fire-works; giving him thereby to underſtand that the Town was in it's laſt Agony, and the ſaving thereof, and of all their Lives depended only on ſome few Moments of time.

11th. On the 11*th*, the Turks plied their Cannon and Mortar-pieces, as violent as at any time before, tho' the Fury of them continued not above three Hours; for the noiſe of the approach of the Chriſtian Army began to ſilence the Roaring of Cannon, and turned their Thoughts from the offenſive part, to a care of providing for their own ſecurity. In the Afternoon appeared three ſeveral Smoaks on the Mount of Kalemberg, which was the certain Signal of the approaching Succour; at the ſight of which, the Defendants full of Hopes and Courage, prepared to make a Sally on the Enemy: The People full of Joy run to the Ramparts which were leaſt expoſed to danger; the Women and others who were Feeble and Sickly left their Beds, and betook themſelves to the Tops of Houſes, to behold the pleaſant Spectacle of their long deſired deliverance; ſome of which were ſtill deſponding with fear, and conceiving that the numerous Troops of the Turks ſo Valiant, and ſo well Intrenched were almoſt invincible: Others preſaged ſome wonderful Slaughter to inſue; others of more ſanguine and chearful Temperament, beheld the Turks as loſt, and figured unto themſelves their ſhameful and ignominious Flight. In ſhort, all People were full of Prayers and Vows to his Divine Majeſty, that he would be pleaſed at length to Reſcue, and Deliver them from the many Dangers with which they were encompaſſed: Their Prayers were heard, and towards five a Clock in the Evening, ſome advanced Troops appeared on the Mountain near the Monaſtery and Caſtle of St. Leopold, between whom and the Turks ſome Shot were exchanged; but Night coming on, the darkneſs put an end unto a farther Engagement, which was reſerved for the day following. 1683.

12th. This being the day appointed by Heaven for Relief of this expiring City, which could not have held out twenty four Hours longer, the Imperial and Poliſh Army with the Auxiliaries joyned at the Foot of the Mountain of Kalemberg, which before the Armies began to aſcend, it was judged fit in the firſt place to take a Survey of the Ground, and the ſeveral Poſts therein. The Marquis Parella, a Gentleman of illuſtrious Birth and clear Courage, repreſented the Ground in an exact Map to the Generals, and offer'd with his own Perſon and Followers to poſſeſs himſelf of the Caſtle Leopold, and the Monaſtery, which were very advantagious Poſts on this occaſion. The Enterpriſe ſeemed ſo hazardous to the Duke of Loraine, that he commended the generous offer, which the Marquis had made, but judging it a more fit undertaking for Soldiers of leſs note, he drew out a Party of Sixty Granadiers under the command of a Lieutenant, to whom he committed this dangerous Service: The Duke having alſo in Perſon by night taken a more exact Survey of the place, and judging it to be of great importance, reinforced it with Three hundred Soldiers more; after which he returned back to the King of Poland, to inform him of the diſpoſition of the Army. After which all the Forces were ranged in form of Battail, and began to March over the Mountain of Kalemberg: The utmoſt part of the right Wing was committed to the Conduct of the King of Poland.

The Numbers of the Chriſtian Forces were as follow.

Imperial Horſe in Twelve Regiments conſiſted of,	8200 Men
Imperial Infantry in Forty two Companies,	6400
Dragoons of the ſame in Forty Companies,	2400

Cravats

1683.

Cravats Nine hundred, Poles under Lubomiski, Fifteen hundred,	2400
In all	19000
Poles Twelve thouſand Horſe and Two thouſand Foot, Commanded by himſelf in perſon, and under him by his Great General Jablonski,	14000
The Bavarians Commanded by Baron de Gonfeld, were Three thouſand Horſe, and Seven thouſand five hundred Foot, in all	10500
Duke of Saxonies Forces Commanded by himſelf, were Two thouſand Horſe and Dragoons, and Seven thouſand Foot	9000
Franconia, Commanded by Prince Valdeck, Horſe Two thouſand five hundred, and Foot Six thouſand five hundred,	9000
	61500

Order of the Chriſtian Army.

To which being added the ſeveral Princes, Volontiers with their ſeveral Attendants which followed them; this whole Army was computed to amount unto Sixty five thouſand Men, which were now Marching to Engage the Turkiſh Army, which after after all their loſſes, had ſtill remaining (as we ſaid before) 119456 fighting Men; in this March over the Mountain of Kalemberg, the Prince of Saxelawemburg General of the Cavalry, with eight Regiments of Horſe, two of Dragoons, and one of Cravats belonging to the Emperor, with all the Cavalry and Dragoons of Bavaria and Franconia, were placed on the Right Wing, next to which Marched the King of Poland with his Army. The Infantry of Bavaria and Franconia were drawn up in the third place or middle, Commanded by Prince Waldeck; near unto whom all that day was the Elector of Bavaria, who pretended to ſerve as a Volontier, it being his firſt expedition in the War. All the Emperor's Foot, and that of Saxony commanded by Prince Herman of Baden, were drawn up on the left Hand, and Marched directly along the Danube, and towards the Monaſtery of St. Leopold. Next to theſe on the left Wing marched Count Caprara with ſeven Regiments of the Emperor's Horſe, to which the Poles, under Lubomiski were joyn'd, with all the Cavalry and Dragoons of Saxony, commanded by the Elector himſelf in Perſon. In this Order the Army mounted the Hill, with a ſlow pace, to attend the Motion of the Artillery, which tho conſiſting of ſmall Pieces; yet the Ways were ſo Rough and Rocky, that with double Teams of Horſes, they aſcended ſlowly to the Top of the Hill.

1683.

The Turkiſh Camp opened.

And now both Armies with opening of the Morning began to take aview of each other: The Stars were not with drawn from the Sky, when the Chriſtians heard the Alah, Alah ſound from the Turkiſh Camp, which are the Lauds or Praiſes which they ſing to God in their Prayers. The Fires and Lights in their Camp diſcover'd the excellent ſymetry, and order in the diſpoſition of their Tents and Troops; which had been the moſt pleaſing Spectacle in the World, had it not been of Enemies and Infidels, who came to deſtroy the Chriſtian Religion, and the German Empire. From hence it was that the King of Poland, and the Duke of Loraine taking a view of the Enemies Forces, did conceive that the orders in which they were placed, did look as if they intended to diſpute every Foot of Ground between each Army; which they might have done with great advantage, in caſe they had poſſeſſed themſelves of the Woods in the Foreſt of Vienna, and of Ambuſcades, which according to the nature of the Ground might be pleaced to hinder the deſcent from the Mountain. Wherefore the King deſired of the Duke of Loraine Two thouſand German Foot to Flank his Horſe at the entrance out of the Wood, and to ſupport them in the deſcent down the Craggy Hill, and accordingly four Batalions were granted for that ſervice.

Count Leſly, who was General of the Artillery, had received Orders to Raiſe a Battery at the coming out the Wood, for better ſecurity of the Army in their March over the Hill, which he almoſt effected with one nights work; but before he had quite finiſhed it, the Turks made a diſcovery of what was there doing, and were put in mind thereby of what they themſelves ſhould have done to impeſe the Enemies paſſage that way: But certain it is, they were ſo confident of their invincible ſtrength, that they thought it too mean for them to take the advantage of Poſts, or Situations againſt an Army, of which they conceived ſo low an Eſteem: But finding themſelves at laſt deceived in thoſe imaginations and Councils, they detached early in the Morning ſome Forces to demoliſh the Work, which Troops came very near, and poſted themſelves behind certain Trees which were felled, and Planks, which ſerved for Barricadoes againſt the Shot of the Battery.

The Duke of Loraine obſerving from the Monaſtery of St. Leopol, the motion of the Turks againſt the advanced Troops, Ordered ſeveral Batalions under Command of the Duke of Croy to ſupport them, which coming ſeaſonably to their Aſſiſtance cauſed the Imperialiſts to enlarge their Front in that Line, and gave them Reſolution to Attack the Enemy, who were drawn up behind certain Banks, and charged them with ſo much Gallantry, that they forced them to retire into their main Body. In this Action the Duke of Croy being wounded in the Shoulder by a Muſquet Shot, was carried out of the Fight, and his place of Command ſupplied by the Count of Fountaine.

The Duke of Croy wounded.

The whole Body of the Turkiſh Army beginning now to move, the Duke of Loraine gave Orders to his left Wing to advance, and to Prince Waldeck, and to Duke Saxelawemberg to Sally out of the Woods, and fall upon the Enemies Front at the Head of their Encampment. In the mean time the King of Poland was advanced as far as to the Chappel of St. Leopold, where he heard Maſs with great Devotion, which was celebrated by Father Mark Aviano, a Capuchin and Confeſſor to the King, which being finiſhed, the Bleſſing was given to him and all his Army: And then the King Cry'd with a loud Voice, Now we may March with entire aſſurance that God will give us Victory; And then mounting on Horſe-back, he Road in amongſt the Ranks of his Army, and made this Speech to them as follows.

Generous Poliſh Cavaliers: 'Tis not only the Work of this Day to maintain the Glory which your Anceſtours have acquired, and your own Courage hath Atchieved by paſſing to the Succour of the Invincible Bulwark of Chriſtendom againſt the Ottoman Troops: Nor is it our Aim only to Defend our own Country, which in caſe Vienna were loſt, would lie miſerably expoſed to the Invaſion of thoſe Enemies againſt whom we Fight at preſent. But our chief deſign is, to defend the Cauſe of God, and ſave the Weſtern Empire which hath done us the Honour to have recourſe unto our Arms; an Honour which our Anceſtors never durſt to hope for, and which is reſerved, as a Reward of your Valour: Whefore reſolve to Conquer, or to Dye nobly in this Cauſe, in which Martyrdom is held out for the Prize and Recompenſe. Behold therefore your King, who Fights at the Head of your Battalions: And be confident that the God of Hoſts, whoſe Cauſe we are going to maintain, will Fight on our ſide.

The Turks play with their Cannon on the Town.

The Turks give ground.

The Poles charge the Turks.

The Mountain of Kalemberg, and the Woods of the Foreſt of Vienna reſounded by this time with the Ecchoes from the Peals of Cannon, and Vollies of ſmall Shot, which called the Inhabitants of Vienna to the Tops of their Houſes, and of the Rampires to behold the long wiſhed for Sight of their approaching deliverance: Howſoever they were not ſo much taken up in ſeeing, and admiring, as to neglect their Guards and Watches on their Fortifications; but on the Contrary, they plied all their Cannon, Small ſhot and Granadoes, againſt the Enemy in their Trenches, with much profuſeneſs, knowing that the time of their deliverance being come, they might the more laviſhly beſtow their Ammunition on their Enemies: The like quantities of Cannon, Fire-works, Bombs, &c. were returned from the Turks on the Town, and in greater abundance than had been at any time ſince the beginning of the Siege; and all the Mountains, Plains and Places round the City were filled Fire, Smoak and Noiſe: In the mean time the King of Poland continued his March down the Hills, as did the Regiments of Dragoons of Heiſler and of Saxony, which were poſted on the left Wing, near the Chappel of St. Leopold: The like Orders were given to all the Imperial Army to advance towards the Enemy, who began now to ſhelter themſelves under Rocks, and behind Trees, and in rough places: The right Wing alſo moved at the ſame time, and all with equal paces. The Turks made ſome reſiſtance as yet, but ſo faintly as was not able to withſtand the Fury of the Chriſtians; and the ſeveral Shelters unto which they began to have recourſe, ſhowed plainly their intentions to quit the Field. The Devotions which the King of Poland uſed this Morning, retarded his March for the ſpace of a full hour, during which the whole Chriſtian Army made a Halt near to Neudorf, until the Poles were come up into the Line equal to the reſt of the Forces. The left Wing of the Imperialiſts without much reſiſtance, poſſeſſed themſelves of the Poſt which the Turks poſſeſſed at Holſtadt, and the Prince Waldeck cauſed the Enemy on the other ſide to give way. The appearance of the Poles on the Top and on the ſide of the Hill, looked very formidable to the Turks. The King, who marched at the Head of his Army, detached ſeveral Troops of his Huſſars to Skirmiſh with the Front of the Enemy; but being over-powred, were forced to Retire to a place where Prince Waldeck had very ſeaſonably cauſed ſome Batalions of Bavaria, and of the Regiment of Merci to advance, which gave a ſtop to the purſuit which the Turks made after them. The King upon this diſorder of the Huſſars cauſed the firſt Line of his Army to advance, which charged the Turks with ſo much Fury, as cauſed the Groſs of their Body to Retire unto the Top of a Hill, where ſome of their Foot were drawn up, and ſeveral Batteries of Cannon planted. And now all the Poliſh Army moved, the Enemy oppoſing them in divers ſcatter'd places, from whence they fired Vollies of Muſquets, with much damage to the Poles; but as yet they were not broken, but ſtill advancing gained Ground on the Enemy.

The King of Poland enters the Turkiſh Camp.

In the mean time the Duke of Loraine being far advanced with the left Wing towards the Enemy; the Turks to avoid the Effort which was making on their Right, drew themſelves into Batalia before their Line of Circumvallation, and fortified themſelves with ſome Pieces of Cannon, as if they intended to have made a ſtrong reſiſtence; but their Reſolution continued not long before they gave way, and abandoning that Poſt, opened a way to the Chriſtians into their Camp, without any oppoſition. Then it was, that the Duke of Loraine commanded all the left Wing to Wheel about unto the Right, taking in the whole compaſs of the Turkiſh Camp, without breaking their Ranks, or falling upon the Plunder of the Enemies Baggage, or Tents which they had left Standing. The King of Poland, and Prince Waldeck with their ſeveral Troops, enter'd the Turkiſh Camp about ſeven a Clock in the Evening: And the Duke of Loraine about half an hour after made himſelf Maſter of the Counterſcarp, and Suburbs of the City; the Janiſaries who were lodged in thoſe Quarters eſcaping by favour of the Night, with much leſs Slaughter than if it had been Day; and indeed they behaved themſelves with much more Valour, than others of the Turkiſh Militia: The Darkneſs put an end to the Battail, in which the Chriſtians had gained a compleat and an undoubted Victory. And now the Duke of Loraine had leiſure to ſend to complement the King upon this fortunate Succeſs, a great part of which Glory, he attributed to the Valour and good Conduct of his Majeſty and his generous Cavaliers: The King returned an Anſwer on the other ſide, with like obliging expreſſions, confeſſing, that thô every Nation and Battalion in the Army did their parts; yet much of the Honour of the Succeſs of this Day, was due to the Bravery of the Germans, who were the firſt to enter into the Camp and Trenches of the Enemy.

Thus were the Chriſtians become Maſters of the Turkiſh Camp, where they lodged that Night in the ſame Form and Order, as the Turks had done the Night before, with Fires and Lights in all the Tents; only it was a more grateful Spectacle to the Beſieged, which they could behold with more Comfort and Security, than ever they had done the Nights before; for this was of Joy, and the others of Terrour.

The haſty Flight of the Turks.

In the Night the Turks paſſed the River at Sweker, with ſo much Fear and Precipitation, that they not only left their whole Camp ſtanding, but even the Standard of the Empire, which is the Sacred Banner of their Religion, with the three Horſe Tails, which are the Enſigns of the Vizier's Authority. Moreover, they abandoned to their Enemies all their Tents, Baggage, Ammunition and Proviſions, with all their Cannon and Artillery, being One hundred and eighty Pieces; and ſo ſpeedy were they in their Flight, that before the next Day in the Evening, the Van of their Army had paſſed Raab.

The Vizier's Tents fall to the lot of the King of Poland.

Next day early in the Morning Count Staremberg attended with his Son, and ſeveral of the principal Commanders of the City, went out to return Thanks to his Benefactors for ſo great deliverance, and to Congratulate with them their Fortunate Succeſſes and Triumph, which would appear Glorious over all the World: But the firſt thing which the Duke of Loraine did that Morning by break of Day, was to Order all his Army to put themſelves into a readineſs to March, whilſt he conſulted with the King of Poland, how, and in what manner they might purſue the Enemy, and improve the Victory. But the King ſeemed ſo well ſatisfied with the advantage already gained, and with the Prey and Booty of which he was poſſeſſed, ſitting Maſter in the Vizier's Tent, with all the Appurtenances and Accommodations thereunto belonging, that he excuſed all farther Proceedings at preſent; ſaying, That his Army was much Haraſſed, and required Repoſe, and not in a Condition to purſue an Enemy, whom they beheld at a far diſtance advanced in their way before them, by the Fires and Smoak which aſcended upwards; for as the Turks fled they burnt all the Villages through which they paſſed. And now in the Chriſtian Camp, and in the City was time for Joy and Triumph. Count Staremberg having paid his Reſpects, and made his Complements to the King of Poland, and the Duke of Loraine, he conducted them into the City, with a numerous attendance of Nobility and Gentry, who had ſerved in the late Siege; all the Forces were drawn up on both ſides of the Streets, between which they paſſed with loud Acclamations of Joy, unto the Church of the Auguſtin Fryers, where in the firſt place, as was moſt juſt, Te Deum was Sung, and Thanks returned to God with Sincere Devotion: Thence they went to the Houſe of the Governour Count Staremberg, where he received the Applauſe and Praiſes of the King of Poland, and the Duke of Loraine, which were due to his Conduct and Valour; and the like Commendations were beſtowed by them upon all the Officers and Souldiers of the Garriſon, who had every one ſignalized themſelves during this Siege, by ſome

Action

The Joy at Vienna.

Action, or piece of Service or other which was Remarkable and worthy of Obſervation: Afterwards theſe welcome and long-deſired Gueſts were entertained with a ſumptuous Feaſt at the Governour's Houſe; after which, towards the Evening, with the like Joy and Feſtivity they returned to their reſpective Quarters and Tents in the Camp. In the mean time, the Beſieged Inhabitants, who had long been pent up and incloſed within the Walls of the City, were not only deſirous to breath in a more open Air, but were carried with a Curioſity to ſee the Approaches, which the Enemy had been making on them, and how near they had entred to the Heart of the City, that it may be doubtful, whether it was more pleaſant to Men, lately delivered from the extremity of a periſhing Condition, to behold how near they were to the devouring Enemy, and yet to eſcape; or to ſurvey, with an amazed Curioſity, the Tents, Batteries, Trenches and Approaches, which the Turks had formed againſt them with wonderful Art and Induſtry.

The Vizier's Tent allotted to the King of Poland.

The Face of all things was now changed, Want and Famine into Plenty, Fears and Anguiſh into Joy, and War into Peace: In the Vizier's Tent, of which the King of Poland was poſſeſſed, the rich Veſtments, Jewels, and Mony there found, were valued at a Million, and became the Prey and Booty allotted to his Majeſty, which no Man envied conſidering the generous and heroick Action of that Prince, for whoſe Merit no Reward ſeemed too great: Amongſt other things in that Tent the Standard of Mahomet was found, which the King ſent to Pope Innocent the XI. by his Secretary Tulenti.

The Emperor's Entrance into Vienna.

Interview between the Emperor and King of Poland.

On the 14th. the Emperor, with the Electors of Bavaria and Saxony, entred into the City of Vienna, which he beheld with Eyes of Compaſſion and Tenderneſs; for ſeeing the Deſolation, which the Enemy had made, and conſidering the Slaughter of many of his truſty Citizens and valiant Soldiers, he could not refrain from Tears of Sorrow, mixed with Joy for the Deliverance and Safety of the ſurviving Party. Being entred within the Gates, he went directly to the Cathedral of St. Stephen's, not on Horſe-back, or on a Triumphal Chariot, but humbly and meekly on Foot, carrying a Taper in his Hand, in a kind of penitential manner, went to the great Altar to pay his Duty, and offer up his ſolemn Thanks to Almighty God, according to his uſual Devotion, for the wonderful and miraculous Deliverance of that City. And having thus in the firſt place complied with his Service towards God, he went in the next to viſit the King of Poland, whom he overtook at Sweket, a Village about a League diſtant from Vienna, as he was proceeding on ſome farther Enterpriſe againſt the Enemy: Upon notice of the Emperor's Approach, the King, whoſe Army marched in the Van, made a ſtop; and the German Army being in the Rear, the Emperor placed himſelf at the head of them; and the Poliſh Army facing at the ſame time about, the King appeared at the head of his; and ſo between the two Armies theſe two great Princes, attended with a numerous Train of the chief Nobility and Gentry belonging to each Court, met and embraced each other, and with very affectionate Complements, and Expreſſions of Kindneſs and Friendſhip; having entertained Diſcourſe together for the ſpace of near half an Hour, after ſecond Embraces, they departed. Never was there a more heroick and generous Action performed in the World, than was this of the King of Poland, who, after a long and tedious March, ſo valiantly expoſed his own Perſon to Hazard, and his Army in the face of an Enemy, which to human Appearance was Invincible; and all this to bring Relief and Succour to an Ally, and to maintain the Bulwark of Chriſtendom againſt Infidels, and Enemies to the Chriſtian Cauſe; 'tis ſuch a piece of Bravery as cannot be parallelled with all its Circumſtances in any Hiſtory of paſt Ages; and therefore with much Reaſon and Juſtice were his Praiſes celebrated over all the Chriſtian World; and the Poets, and other refined Wits in diverſe Countries, and different Languages, exerciſed their Pens in Panegyricks and Elogies, ſtriving to out-vy and ſurpaſs each other in the Exceſſes of Praiſe, which how Hyperbolical ſoever could never reach to the imputation of Flattery. We ſhall repeat one, which was compoſed at Rome by Guicciardin Procur. Gen. of the Celeſtines :

ELOGIUM
JOANNI SOBIESCO
Dominatione Polonico, Lituanico,
Liberatione Auſtriaco, Pannonico,
Profligatione Ottomanico, Tracico,
Religione Chriſtianiſſimo,
Pietate Cattolico,
Zelo, & obſequio Apoſtolico,
Inter Reges Præſtantiſſimo,
Inter Duces Invictiſſimo,
Inter Imperatores, citra fabulas,
Solo nomine tremebundo,
Solo aſpectu Hoſtes profliganti
CUI
Gloria Militaris Regnum peperit,
Clementia firmavit,
Meritum perennabit.
QUI
Raro Probitatis, & Religionis exemplo,
Propria deſerens, Aliena defendens,

1683.

Docuit, quo pacto, ſacra Fœderum Jura
Incantur, Colantur, Perficiantur.
OttomanicamLunam,fulgentiſſimo CrucisVexillo,
Æternam Eclypſim Minitantem,
Adeo proprie, fortiterq; è Chriſtianorum finibus eliminavit.
Ut unum, & idem fuerit;
VENISSE, VIDISSE, & VICISSE.
Inter, igitur, Chriſtiani Orbis plauſus,
Inter vindicatæ Religionis,& Imperii lætitiam,
Inter cruentatæ Lunæ extrema deliquia,
Agnoſcant Præſentes, credant Poſteri,
Non tantum naſcenti Evangelio, quo promulgaretur,
Sed & jam promulgato, ne profligaretur;
Utrobique fuiſſe miſſum à DEO Hominem
CUI NOMEN ERAT JOANNES.

Del P. Maeſt. Guicciardini
Procur. Gener. Dei Cele[illegible]ni in Roma.

Which Noble and Heroick Action would have remained on the Records of Hiſtory to all Poſterity in honour of this King, had he not afterwards ſullied and tarniſhed the Glory thereof, by condeſcending and ſtooping to Actions as low, and mean, as this was Sublime, and only worthy of the Dignity of a Heroe, as we ſhall ſhow in the following Year.

But to return again from whence we have digreſſed; the Emperor and King having paſſed their Complements, Prince Alexander, Son of the King, whom his Father preſented with the Complement of having Enliſted himſelf early into the Service of his Imperial Majeſty. The young Prince, by order of his Father, had habited himſelf in the German Faſhion, and was admitted to Kiſs the Emperor's Hand, as were all the Perſons of Quality belonging to the Army, and Court of Poland.

The King after having viewed the Riches taken in the Vizier's Tent, which he aſſumed to himſelf as the Reward of his own Atchievements: Out of Complement, he ſent to the Emperor to make tender of one half of the Booty, accompanying the Meſſage with the Tugh, or Horſe-tayl on a Staff, with a braſs Knob on the top, which was one of the three Staves of Authority carried before the Vizier: Such another kind of Preſent like this, being Mahomet's Standard, he ſent to the Pope; which being Gifts of no great Value, more than for the Curioſity of them, he frankly and really offered; but as to half the Prey, it was generally believed, that his Majeſty was well informed beforehand, that the Emperor was of too generous a Nature to accept thereof; and would not have been ſo prodigal of his Offers, had he imagined he ſhould have been taken at his word.

1683.

The Croſs erected in place of the Half-moon.

But it is not here to be forgotten, that after the Biſhop of Newdorf had ſung Te Deum before the Emperor, and performed the other Ceremonies, which laſted for the ſpace of four Hours; at the Concluſion of all, when the Emperor was come out of the Church, the Arch-Biſhop of Vienna turned him about, and pointed to the Spire of the Cathedral Steeple: Behold, Sir, ſaid he, that Spar which iſſues from the Spire, at the end of which is a Star within the Creſcent or Half-moon; and conſider that that Monument was there fixed in the Year 1529, when Soliman Beſieged the City, and was ſo to remain by Compact with the Citizens, conditionally, That the Turks ſhould not batter the Steeple with their Cannon: And now whereas that Article was broken, by the continual Shootings, which the Enemy had made againſt it at the laſt Siege, it is but reaſon that the Creſcent ſhould be taken down; and in Memory of the preſent Deliverance, that a Croſs ſhould be erected in the place thereof; for which the Emperor having given preſent Orders, they were accordingly executed.

The Duke of Saxony returns home.

On the 10th. the Duke of Saxony returned home with his Troops, which ſpeedy departure ſo ſoon after the raiſing of the Siege, (which ſeemed too ſhort a time for Refreſhment of his Soldiery) was interpreted for a Sign of Diſcontent, perhaps to ſee the Poles Rewarded with the greateſt Spoils, and the Auxiliaries neglected, as if they had no Share or Merit in the Victory.

The Emperor finding his Palace much ruined and unfurniſhed at Vienna, ſtaid but few days there before he returned to Lintz, where he intended to remain until the Repairs of Court and City were made, and the Walls and Trenches cleared of the dead Bodies, which rendred the Air Unhealthful and Infectious: During the time of his ſtay at Vienna, he took delight to viſit the Retrenchments and Fortifications, which the Defendants had made behind the Walls and Baſtions, to diſpute every Foot and Inch of Ground, as occaſion had required: He alſo ſurveyed the Batteries, Trenches and Approaches of the Enemy, and ſaw the Stores of Ammunition and Proviſions which they had left behind them, which ſerved again to recruit and repleniſh the Arſenal at Vienna. The Liſt and Account whereof was as followeth: Six Thouſand five Hundred Tents, four Thouſand five Hundred Barrels of Powder, ſix Thouſand weight of Lead, 20.000 Granado Shells, eight Thouſand Hand-granadoes, 11.000 Shovels and Pickaxes, one Thouſand ſix Hundred weight of Match, two Thouſand five Hundred Fire-balls, 52 Hundred weight of Pitch, eleven Hundred weight of Oyl of Petolium and of Tar, and five Hundred dred Thouſand of Lincet-oyl, Ninety five Hundred of Salt-peter, five Thouſand one Hundred Pieces of coarſe Linnen, two Hundred Thouſand Hair Sacks for carrying Earth and Sand, eighty one Hundred weight of Barrs of Iron and Horſe-ſhooes, an Hundred Ladles for melting Pitch, two Hundred weight of Pack-thread, and Thongs made of Camels Hides, and Buffoloes Leather for binding, four Thouſand Sheep-skins, two Thouſand Halberts, four Hundred Scythes and Scycles, five Hundred and ſixty Barrels of Guns for uſe of the Janiſaries, Fifty two Sacks of Cotton and Cotton-yarn, one Thouſand five Hundred Wool-ſacks empty, two Thouſand Plates of Iron for covering Targets, an Hundred and twenty three Hundred weight of Greeſe and Tallow, two Hundred thirty Powder-horns, two Thouſand ſix Hundred Baggs for Powder, four pair of Smith's Bellows for a Forge, twenty one Inſtruments, or Engines for raiſing Carts when overturned, eight Thouſand Carts for carrying Ammunition and Proviſions, all empty, one Thouſand great Bombs, eighteen Thouſand Cannon-bullets, great and ſmall, an Hundred and ten Pieces of Cannon of all ſorts, as Culverin, Demyculverin, demy and whole Cannon, Sakers, &c. thirteen Mortar-pieces, mounted for ſhooting Bombs, ſix great Anvils, diverſe Sacks for uſe of the Ordnance, and many Ladders made of Cords. All which, as we have ſaid, were carried into Vienna, and laid up amongſt the Stores of that Arſenal.

1683.

After this Work was done, the next was to employ all the Labourers belonging to the City, with the captivated Turks, whom they made to aſſiſt in filling up the Trenches, Holes and Vaults which the Turks had made; ſome of which were ſo deep, that they ſeemed rather to be Caves and Dens than Trenches for covert and ſhelter for Beſiegers: So that had not the Turks buſied themſelves in ſuch fruitleſs Labours, they might have compaſſed that in half the time, which was not effected in the ſpace of ſixty two Days. Amongſt theſe other Works, ſeveral Vaults were found filled with dead Bodies, putrified and ſtinking, and all the Country round for many Leagues were ſtrowed with dead Carcaſſes; for Burying of which, or Burning, or caſting into the Danube, ſtrict Orders were given, and which with much diligence were executed, to prevent a Peſtilence, the Putrefaction of which began already to infect the Air. Amongſt the dead, the Bodies of many Women and Children were found, who had been made Slaves and Captives by the Turks, and Maſſacred by them, either out of Revenge, or becauſe they were an Incumbrance to them in their Flight; but to theſe Bodies ſome Reſpect was ſhown, being carried to Cimeteries, and there interred after the Rites of the Chriſtian Burial, with Croſſes erected over their Graves. Howſoever ſome Turks, who were Men of more tender Bowels than the others (for we muſt not figure them all to be of the like fierce and cruel Diſpoſition) did quit the Poſſeſſion of their Slaves with more gentleneſs, and ſet them at liberty with their Lives, of which moſt were Women and Children, the which the Germans and Poles took up and brought them back again to Vienna.

1683.

By this time, that the Trenches were filled without the City, and the Walls and ſome Houſes repaired, the News of the happy Deliverance of Vienna had ſpread it ſelf over all the Countries, from whence Proviſions of all ſorts came, and Boats laden with Corn, Wine, Fruits and Herbs arrived daily in, to ſupply the Wants of the City; the Face of which was totally changed, from Famine to Plenty, from War to Peace, and from Terror and diſmal Appreheſions to Joy, Triumph and Feſtivals.

The Spirits of the Imperialiſts and Poles being highly raiſed by theſe Succeſſes, ſome Parties purſued the Turks, who were as much dejected as the others were elevated; and thô they haſtened in a precipitous Flight, apprehending an Enemy juſt at their backs; yet many of them in the Arrear, appointed to conduct twelve Pieces of Cannon, and ſome Baggage were over-taken in the Purſuit, and brought back to Vienna, where theſe Captives, with their other Brethren, were ordered to work in Chains for filling the Trenches, which they had before opened, and repair of the Walls and Baſtions, which they had battered down with their Cannon, and blown up with their Mines.

The Grand Vizier haſtning his March, or rather his Flight, for (as we ſaid before) he actually Ran away and ſhamefully turned his Back with near 120.000 Fighting Men; meditating (as we may believe) of the Diſgrace, Ruin and evil conſequences of this Misfortune, ſought and endeavoured to clear his ill Conduct, and want of Courage by caſting it upon others, as is common to the Nature of Mankind. Accordingly he diſpatched away a Letter to the Grand Seignior, giving him an account of the unfortunate Succeſs before Vienna, cauſed by the Cowardiſe, or Treachery of ſeveral great Officers and Generals of his Army: Particularly he named the Vizier of Buda, to whom having given command to Charge the Enemy with a Body of Twelve thouſand Men, as they deſcended the Hill of Kalemberg; he, and his Soldiers inſtead of obeying theſe Orders, ſhamefully turned their Backs and put themſelves unto Flight; which when the reſt of the Army ſaw, they were ſtruck with a common Conſternation and Fear, ſuggeſted to them to ſecure their ſafety by following the Example of their Fellow-Soldiers: So the whole misfortune of the Day was attributed to the ill Conduct, and Cowardiſe of the Vizier of Buda, which was ſent to the Grand Seignior, then reſiding at Belgrade, and in hourly expectation of better News.

The Grand Vizier complaining to the Grand Seignior againſt the Paſha of Buda.

The Vizer of Buda writes to the Grand Seignior.

The Vizier of Buda, who had received Information by ſeveral Hands of the Diſcourſes with which the Grand Vizier entertained all the Officers concerning him, laying to his Charge the Loſs and Ruin which had happened; thought fit to diſculpate, and clear himſelf by a more faithful Relation of Matters in a Letter to the Grand Seignior; wherein he ſet forth, That by the unſkilfullneſs of the Grand Vizier, and his want of Reſolution in Military Affairs, this important matter had miſcarried: For had he fortify'd the Foreſt of Vienna, and erected ſome few Redoubts on the deſcent of the Hill of Kalemberg, the City by all the Force of the World, could never have been Relieved: Or had the Vizier ſpent that time, which he employ'd in ſinking Vaults and Caves for ſhelter, in bold Storms and Attempts, thô with loſs of half the Army, the importance of the place, and the conſequences of the Succeſs, would have largely paid for the effuſion of Blood; but uſing unneceſſary cautions of Mines, and formal Approaches, by which he hoped to have conſtrained the City to Surrender upon Articles, and hereby aſſumed to himſelf the Riches and Plunder of the place, which taken in Heat of Blood, and by Dint of Sword, would have become the Prey and Booty of the Soldiery; he gave occaſion to ſuch delays, as ſerved the Chriſtian Army, and turned to the Ruin and Miſcarriage of this whole Enterpriſe.

The Grand Vizier Strangles the Vizier of Buda, and other Paſhas.

The Grand Vizier being weary of ſuch Complaints as theſe, reſolved to Sacrifice the Life of the Paſha of Buda to his own Folly and Deſtiny; commanding him to be Strangled, together with the Paſhas of Eſſek and Poſſega, and the Aga of the Janiſaries, great Friends and Confidents of the Vizier of Buda, and the beſt and moſt experienced Officers of the whole Army, with above Fifty Officers and Soldiers more, whom he accuſed of Cowardiſe; but this Execution of Juſtice (as they call it) could not ſecure his own Life, but rather furniſhed his Enemies at Court, ſuch as the Kuzlir Aga and others, with inſtances wherewith to aggravate his Crimes to the Grand Seignior; and indeed there now offer'd a ſurpriſing occaſion to wreak their Malice on the Vizier, ſince it is almoſt impoſſible, for a Man to be unfortunate and yet to be eſtemed Innocent. Nor did the Vizier eſcape clear, with the remainder of his ſhatter'd Army to Buda; for being Attacked in the Rear by the Garriſon of Raab, he loſt Six hundred Men more: Howſoever, he proceeded in his March, and Reinforced the Garriſons of Newhauſel and Strigonium. The Death of theſe Paſhas, by which the Vizier hoped to have ſaved his own Life, raiſed ſuch Mutiny amongſt the Turks, as cauſed a greater Fluctuation of Rage in the Minds of the Soldiery, than they had lately endured of Fear from the Enemy; between which two Paſſions, there was nothing but Confuſion, Diſcontent and Diſcouragement in the whole Army: For the Paſha of Buda was popular, and well beloved by the Soldiery, and eſteemed the moſt Martial Man in the whole Camp: And the Aga or General of the Janiſaries was ſo well affected by that Militia, that they highly reſented his Death; for at no time, (much leſs in this) can they endure to have their General puniſhed or cut off, unleſs it be by themſelves, and in their own Mutinies.

Mutiny in the Turkiſh Army.

A Council of War.

In this confuſion were the Turks, when the Chief Captains of the Chriſtian Army conſider'd, that the preſent Relief of Vienna would be of little benefit to the Chriſtian Empire, unleſs the Victory were purſued, and improved by ſucceeding Enterpriſes: All the Princes and Commanders agreed hereunto, (except the Elector of Saxony, who as we have ſaid before return'd home) and wiſely judged, that the Turks having made a Retreat with a Body of near 120.000 Men, entire and whole, they might reaſonably be expected the next year to return again unto the Siege, unleſs advantage were taken of their preſent Conſternation, to break and confound them beyond a poſſibility of Recovery: At this Council, it was propoſed to Beſiege Newhauſel or Gran, and for enlargement of Winter-quarters, and Annoyance of Buda and Gran, that Peſt and Barcan ſhould be taken: In fine, after ſome debate it was concluded, That nothing could be reſolved at preſent concerning the manner of Proceedings, for that the Actions of War, were to be regulated according to the Motions of the Enemy; but that ſomething was to be undertaken ſpeedily, whilſt the Iron was hot, and the Spirits of the Turks cold, and ſtill under their late Conſternation: The King of Poland being of the ſame Mind, Commanded his Troops to advance towards Presbourg, which on the 18*th* Encamped near Ficken, together with the Imperial Forces, and came thither on the 19*th* where they were forced to continue until the 25*th* for want of a Bridge, which could not be finiſhed until that time.

Tekeli ſends a Letter to the King of Poland.

Whilſt the Bridge was framing, and the Army detained on the Banks of the River; a Meſſenger from Tekeli brought a Letter to the King of Poland, containing certain Propoſals in order to an Accommodation. The King having received a Character of Tekeli to be a Man of Intrigue, and Falſe, and who had frequently made Offers of Peace, but never obſerved any; admitted his Meſſenger to Audience in a manner of Coldneſs and Jealouſy, and yet with reſpect due to the Perſon from whom he was ſent: But before he would receive the Letter, he asked, Whether it was Dated before, or ſince the Raiſing of the Siege of Vienna: To which the Meſſenger making anſwer, That it was Wrote two days before that Succeſs: The King thereupon Replied with an angry Frown, Go ſaid he, and return the Letter to your Maſter again, and tell him, That he ſhould correct and amend the Stile, and change the Subſtance and Senſe thereof, according to the alteration of Times and Affairs.

Some Cities Revolt.

Budiani changes his ſide.

Such is the force of Succeſs and Proſperity of a Prince, that ſo ſoon as the News of the Relief of Vienna was divulged in the Upper Hungary, many Counties declared for the Emperor; and the Fortreſſes of Papa and Totis, were the firſt to give Examples of Obedience and Duty to other Cities. News alſo came at the ſame time, that the Count of Budiani, who upon the formidable appearance of the Turks, had deſerted the Poſt he maintained on the Paſſage over the Raab, and had taken Party with the Malecontents, and joyned with a Body of Turks and Hungarians, and had Fought againſt the Imperial Troops, and Burnt and Plunder'd ſeveral Villages on the Frontiers of Stiria; Had now with the turn of Fortune, changed his ſide and intereſt; and having Surpriſed, and Cut in pieces thoſe very Turks with whom he was Aſſociated, had united his Forces with thoſe of Count Aſpremont, and therewith troubled and infeſted the Turks in their Retreat.

The Bridge over the Danube being finiſhed, the Poles were the firſt to March over it into the Iſle of Schultz; and were followed by the Imperial Army: But the Troops of Bavaria and Franconia, remain'd ſtill Encamped near Vienna, for want of Orders to advance farther; but Letters were ſent to the Princes of that Circle, to continue the Aid of their Forces for ſome farther deſign; and a Meſſenger was diſpatched to the Elector of Bavaria, who by Reaſon of ſome indiſpotion of Health, was adviſed by his Phyſitians to go to Brin, for benefit of the Air, which was eſteemed more wholſom than that of Vienna.

Reſolved to Beſiege Gran.

But the year being now far advanced towards the end of September; to ſtay for ſuch Orders, and the March of theſe Auxiliaries, the Seaſon would be too far ſpent, to undertake any Action of great moment; wherefore the King of Poland, and the Duke of Loraine reſolved to advance with their Army to Comorra without the Reinforcement of the Allies. Being come to a place called Wiſmar, within an hours March of Comorra, Advices were brought, that Tekeli had diſpeeded a Detachment from his Camp before Levents to Bergſtadt, that the Vizier was at Buda, from whence he had Reinforced the Garriſon of Newhauſel with Four thouſand Men; but that in the Turkiſh Army were ſuch Diſcontents cauſed by the late ill Succeſſes, and by the Cutting off of the Paſha of Buda, and other great Men well affected by the Soldiery, that there was nothing but Mutiny and Confuſion in the Camp. Upon this Intelligence, it was reſolved at a Council of War to attempt Gran, and which to make the more Feaſible, it was concluded neceſſary in the firſt place, to take the Fortreſs of Barcan, which is a Palanca oppoſite to that City, and covers the Foot of the Bridge over the Danube, which makes a Communication between the two places. By this time Four thouſand Swediſh Infantry and One thouſand Horſe, with ſome other Auxiliaries (which by reaſon of the diſtance of the places, from whence they came, could not Arrive in time to partake in the Honour of relieving Vienna,) were all ſent with what expedition was poſſible down the Danube to Reinforce the Army, which was thereby become more numerous and flouriſhing, than before the Fight at Vienna.

The Chriſtians paſs the River.

The Poles advance before the Imperialiſts.

The firſt to paſs that Arm of the Danube, which is called the Waag, was the King of Poland with his Army; which was the work of the 4th and 5th of Octob. the Imperial Cavalry followed, but the Foot could not paſs the ſame day: The 6th they Marched to Moſe, two Leagues diſtant from Comorra, where Count Staremberg had Orders to March the Foot; and on the 7th to joyn the Army, which would ſtay and attend them at that place. But the King of Poland impatient of delay, contrary to expectation immediately mounted on Horſeback, and ſent to adviſe the Duke of Loraine that he was Marching towards Barcan. The Duke being ſurpriſed at this ſuddain Reſolution, returned Count Dunewald to his Majeſty, to repreſent unto him the neceſſity of taking the Foot with them, and the danger of dividing the Army, in a place ſo near to the Enemies Quarters, being between the Turks on the one ſide, and 1683. the Malecontents on the other. But the King being already mounted on Horſe-back, when Dunewaldt came to him, he anſwered, That he knew no Reaſon which might cauſe him to defer his Proceedings, having certain Intelligence, that the Detachment of the Turks near Barcan was very inconſiderable, and deſired that no time ſhould be omitted in following with the reſt of the Army. The Duke leaving only a Regiment of Cravats to ſupport the Infantry, Marched away with all the Horſe to attend the Poles: The King being come within an hour's March of Barcan, underſtood from the advanced Troops of his Van-guard, that they were in ſight of ſome Squadrons of the Enemy; which they having orders to Charge, the Turks gave ground, but being ſupported by a greater Body, the Van was forced to Retreat; to Succour and Support which, other Troops were commanded to Charge the Enemy; and at length, the King in Perſon with all his Cavalry was engaged. The Turks, who until now had concealed Seven or eight thouſand Men under covert of a Hill, began to appear, and Sallying forth, Charged the Poles both in the Front and Rear with ſuch Bravery, as that they killed Two hundred of them, with the Palatine of Pomerania, and put the reſt unto Flight, taking ſeveral of their Colours, Kettle-drums and ſome Baggage. Count Dunewaldt, who had Marched with the King of Poland, obſerving the Skirmiſh of the firſt Troops, ſent to adviſe the Duke of Loraine, that the Poles were Engaged with the Turks; upon which News he haſtned his March with all the diligence that was poſſible; and having paſſed certain narrow Ways and Buſhes, he eſpied at the opening of the Plain, the Turks in hot purſuit of the Poles: At the ſight whereof, he immediately took care to draw up his advanced Troops into Battalia, and gave order to Prince Lewis of Baden to do the like with thoſe Marching in the Rear. The appearance of the German Regiments, which ſtood firm and entire before the face of the Turks, cauſed them to deſiſt from their purſuit, and to return under Barcan. The Duke of Loraine thought not fit to follow them that Day, but rather to Rally and Fortify the Poles, and to enquire after the King, who was ſaid to be loſt; but at length his Majeſty appearing and found in ſafety, it alleviated ſomething of the ill Succeſs of that Day; which by that time that the Story was told, and Matters related in what manner things had paſſed, it grew towards Night, when it was thought fit to Encamp until the Morning.

The Poles put to Flight.

All that Night there was great diſturbance in the Poliſh Camp; the loſs ſuſtain'd by the Slaughter of ſo many of their Friends and Comrades, was ſuch a Grief and Diſcouragement to them, that they were deſirous that Night to yield the Quarter on the right Wing, which was neareſt to Barcan, unto the Germans, who had formerly challenged that place as their due: And towards Morning the principal Officers inſinuated unto the King the many Circumſtances, which preſented to render the Succeſs difficult, alledging that their Army was Galled, and ſoat of their Wounds and much Diſcouraged, and the Enemy fluſhed with Yeſterday's Fortune, and more numerous than was believed. The news of this Diſcontent and Wavering in the Poliſh Camp being brought to the Duke of Loraine, he immediately went to the King to keep him ſteddy to the former Reſolutions and Meaſures; and ſo well mannaged his Diſcourſe with him, producing many Reaſons why the Enemy could not be very ſtrong, and arguing the Probability and almoſt Certainty of Victory; that in fine he prevailed upon the King, his Senators, and chief Officers to make Tryal of next Day's Engagement. 1683.

The King of Poland unwilling to adventure another Engagement.

The Duke of Loraine having taken a full Survey of the Ground, and of the Situation of Barcan, gave a deſcription thereof uno the King; and offered the Honour of the right Wing unto the Poles, for which they had formerly contended; but being much taken off of their Mettle, they deſired to change their Station, and mix ſome of their Troops with thoſe of the Imperialiſts.

An hour before Day the Duke of Loraine cauſed to ſound to Horſe, and with the dawning of the Morning the whole Imperial Army was drawn into Battalia, conſiſting of Horſe and Foot, to the number of Sixteen thouſand two hundred Men, beſides the King of Poland's Army, and the Fifteen hundred Polanders under the Command of Lubomiski. Prince Lewis of Baden Commanded the right Wing, and under him Count de Gondola, and the Baron of Mercy. Count Dunewaldt Commanded the left, and under him the Counts of Palſi and Taaff; and the main Body of Infantry was conducted by Count Staremberg, the Duke of Croy and Count Serini. The Poles being expected in their Station, ſeemed ſtill tardy and backward to draw out, by Reaſon that the King had in the Night received Intelligence, that the Enemy was greatly recruited by a ſtrong Body, Commanded by Haſſy Paſha of Aleppo, and the Paſhas of Siliſtria and Grand Cairo; and that it was much to be doubted, whether the whole Turkiſh Army were not joyned with them. But the Duke of Loraine oppoſing unto theſe Doubts undeniable Reaſons,

The Orders of the Chriſtian Army.

The Poles deliberate again about fighting.

1683.

ſons, why it was not poſſible for the Groſs of the Turkiſh Army to be joyned with theſe Forces before Barcan; and yet on ſuppoſition, that they were yet conſidering the advantagious Ground on which the Army was drawn up, they needed not fear the whole Ottoman Force; of all which he made ſuch clear Demonſtrations, that the King was again confirmed in his former Reſolutions, and ſo with a Party of his Huſſars, and of his Infantry, and of the Flower of his Cavalry, he poſted himſelf on the right Wing, between the Imperial Cavalry and the Dragoons: And the great General Jablonski, with ſome of the Huſſars Foot and Cavalry marching on the left Wing, between the German Horſe and Dragoons, and the reſt of the Poliſh Army made a third Line. In this order they marched about half an hour, when about nine a Clock they diſcover'd the Enemy drawn up in Battalia upon the Plain, marching very ſlowly, and in ſuch manner, as that their Force ſeemed equal to that of the Chriſtians: The Armies being come very near, the Turks of the right Wing charged the left of the Chriſtians with much fierceneſs, as if they had had a particular ſpight, and aimed chiefly at the Poles: And at the ſame time, the Turks who were on the riſing of a Hill advanced, as if they intended to Charge the main Body of the Chriſtians. But being within half Muſquet ſhot of them, they on a ſuddain Wheeled about, and fell upon the left Wing; which when the Duke of Loraine obſerved, he croſſed the Line of the Cavalry on the left Wing; and with all the party of the firſt Line which had not been engaged, he in Perſon charged the Enemy in the Flank with ſo much Courage and Bravery, as put them to a General Rout, and into that Confuſion, that they were never more able again to Rally: Dunewaldt was Commanded to Purſue them, and with the Poles of the left Wing enter'd pell-mel with them at the very Gates of Barcan, at which place many of them were killed, and periſhed in the Marſhes of Gran.

The Fight begun.

The Turks routed.

And purſued.

Whilſt Dunewaldt purſued the flying Enemy, the whole Army advanced in Battalia towards Barcan; and in the way thither it was reſolved by all Parties to Aſſault the place in this heat of Action, whilſt the Enemy was Affrighted and in Diſorder; the King accordingly drew out ſome Troops of his Coſacks, and the Duke of Loraine five Battalions of Staremberg, Grana and Baden, which were appointed for that Service: Which Detachment was no ſooner order'd, than Information came, that the Bridge over the Danube by the Crouds, and Multitudes of the Turks preſſing over it was broken; and that Barcan it ſelf was ſo filled up with People, that they had ſcarce room to ſtir, and were ready to trample one another Under-foot. Prince Lewis of Baden with theſe Forces, and three Regiments of Dragoons, and three Pieces of Cannon aſſaulted the Fort, and took it by main force. The Slaughter which was there made by Fire and Sword was very Cruel and Bloody: But moſt, to avoid the Fury of the Enemy, threw themſelves head-long into the Danube; ſome endeavoured to ſave themſelves by Swimming, others by their Horſes, hanging on their Mains and Tails; others on Planks and Boards of the broken Bridge; in which Paſſage thô many ſaved themſelves, yet the greateſt part periſhed in the Waters; as appeared by the Bodies of Men and Horſes, together with their Garments, which cover'd the Surface of the River, in places where the Current ran not ſo rapid on the Sides and Banks, as in the middle of the Water. In fine, of theſe great numbers in Barcan none eſcaped, unleſs Seven or Eight hundred Men, who having betaken themſelves to a Redoubt belonging to that Fortreſs, obtained Quarter for their Lives on Condition of quiet Surrender. In this Action the Turks loſt their beſt Captains, and the Braveſt of their Soldiery; and ſo fatal was this Fight to them, that they never recovered their Courage and Spirits again, but ſuffer'd themſelves for ſeveral years afterwards to be beaten, and baffled by their Enemes: After which we ſhall find them ſtill decaying and giving Ground; and at length falling into Diſcords and Civil Diſſentions, the Ottoman Empire had nearly expired, had not the Chriſtians falling into Wars amongſt themſelves, (which have always proved advantagious to the Turks,) given new Life and growth again unto that People.

1683.

Barcan taken.

This Victory obtained, the King of Poland with his General and Senators, juſtly applauded the Wiſdom and Conduct of the Duke of Loraine, and Valour of the German Troops, to whom he acknowledged the whole Succeſs of that day was to be attributed: In the Quarters of the King Te Deum being ſang, and Thanks returned to Almighty God for ſo ſignal a Bleſſing; the Duke of Loraine took a Survey of the Fort of Barcan, to ſee in what manner it was poſſible to be put in a condition to offend Gran, which was Situate on the other ſide of the Water, juſt in oppoſition to it: But ſuch was the Fury of the Soldiers, that they burnt almoſt all the Paliſadoes, and ſet fire to part of the Town; and ſo ravenous were they after the Plunder of the Place, that the Germans and Poles had fallen into Civil Wars, amongſt themſelves, had not Count Staremberg put an end to the Scuffle, by commanding the Germans to with-draw;

1683. and leaving the Poles Maſters of the Place, they made all the Spoyl they were able, in revenge of the Loſs they had ſuffered the day before. Nothing could come more ſeaſonable, nor more advantagious to the Chriſtian Arms than this Victory; for beſides the Loſs (as we have ſaid) of the beſt of their Men, there remained not above two or three Thouſand alive of all that Army, which conſiſted of Fourteen thouſand of their beſt Horſe, and Twelve hundred Janiſaries, commanded by the new Paſha of Buda, Haly, Paſha of Aleppo, and ſix other Paſhas. Twelve hundred or One thouſand Priſoners were taken, and amongſt them the Paſhas of Aleppo and Siliſtria, with ſeveral other Agas. The Conſequences of which Victory were very happy to the Chriſtians; for beſides, that it adminiſtred new Courage to the drooping Spirits of the Poles, it totally diſmayed the Malecontents, and produced ſuch Diſorder in the Turkiſh Army, that the Great Vizier, with all the Authority with which he was clothed, was not able to contain them within any bounds or limits of Duty; but rather fearing to be Murdered by them than hoping to Appeaſe them, was forced to abſcond himſelf from their Rage in obſcure Retirement. By this Overthrow the Grand-Vizier loſt all the remainder of his Baggage, which had been ſaved at the Battle of Vienna, with Twelve Pieces of Cannon, which had been advanced ſome Hours on the way before the Siege was raiſed, and was employed by the new Vizier of Buda for the Service of this Camp.

Mutiny againſt the Great Vizier.

The Siege of Gran intended.

The Duke of Loraine purſuing the courſe of his good Fortune, was deſirous to conclude this Campaign with the taking of Gran, which was the glorious period to which the Emperor directed him, if poſſible, to advance his Affairs. In order hereunto the Duke of Loraine taking firſt (according to his uſual Methods) a judicious Survey of the ſituation of the Place, and the way thereunto; obſerved, that in the middle of the River, ſomething below Gran, there was an Iſland, in which was not only good Forage for the Horſe, but alſo an ancient Intrenchment, which, with ſome little Labour, might be made uſeful and defenſive againſt the Cannon of the Town: And from the farther ſide of that Iſland, with the help of a few Boats, the whole Army might find an eaſy Paſſage. The King of Poland approving this Deſign, Boats were ordered down from Comorra, for framing the Bridge: But whilſt this was doing, the late Succeſſes which had brought great Reputation to the Emperor's Affairs, had moved Tekeli to ſend the Count de Humanay in Behalf of the Malecontents, to offer Terms of Peace and Pacification. The Duke of Loraine, who had been long verſed in the Practices of Tekeli and his Aſſociates, was of opinion, That the Malecontents were not as yet reduced to ſuch Terms, as might render them fit and diſpoſed for a Treaty: Howſoever, at the deſire of the King of Poland, being admitted to Audience, they propoſed a Ceſſation of Arms, and an aſſignment for Winter-quarters: To which the Duke of Loraine reply'd, That ſuch Conceſſions at preſent were not agreeable to the Intereſt and Dignity of the Emperor, and took from hence occaſion to make ſome Diſcourſe of the Laws and Conſtitutions of their Kingdom, and to reproach them for their Rebellion, and want of Faith towards their Sovereign. In ſhort, he told them, That if they would hope to taſt of the Emperor's Clemency, they muſt without any previous Conditions lay down their Arms, and renounce all Alliance with the Turk, which was the firſt Preliminary or Step to a Treaty. With this anſwer the Deputies being retired, in a few days afterward, not only Papa and Totis (as we ſaid before) ſubmitted, but Weſpring and Levents received German Garriſons; and the Counties of Trinſchin, Tirnaw, Nitria and Levents declared againſt the Cauſe and Intereſt of the Malecontents, and received the Garriſons into their Caſtles and Fortreſſes, which were ſent thither by order of Count Caraffa to take Poſſeſſion thereof.

1683.

Tekeli ſends Deputies to the Duke of Loraine.

Several Towns and Counties ſubmit.

The Bridges being finiſhed by the 16th of this Month of October, and the Bavarian Troops come up to joyn with the Army; the Duke of Loraine deſired the King of Poland, according to his Place of Precedency, to lead the way with his Troops; but the King made ſome difficulty thereof, alledging, That a Survey ought firſt to be taken of the ſituation of the Place, and Enquiries made how well it was provided with Men and Ammunition, and how far the Vizier, with his Forces, was retired from affording it Relief, or diſturbing the Siege. Accordingly Two thouſand Horſe being appointed to take a View of the Country, they paſſed the Bridges without oppoſition or diſturbance, and ſo diſmayed the Turks, that they deſerted Thomas-burg, a Palanca not far from Gran, and ſet it on Fire, but was ſoon quenched, and Poſſeſſion taken by the Imperialiſts. Upon the appearance of a Party on this ſide of the River, two Hungarians of Totis brought Intelligence, that the Vizier was marched with his Army towards Eſſeck, having left a ſmall Force encamped near unto Buda. This News haſtned the Paſſage of the Chriſtian Army over the River, (tho' the Poles remained in their Camp, and moved not as yet) and gave Encouragement to the Generals to hope, that the

The King of Poland propoſes enquiries concerning the State of Gran.

Siege

1683. Siege would not be of long Continuance, or of much loſs of Time, or Men. The Horſe and Foot marched apace over the Bridges into the Iſland, and ſo by a ſhort cut, croſſed over another Bridge to the Banks of the Danube, ſomething above Cannot-ſhot below Gran. In the mean time, the Duke of Loraine, with the Chief Officers of both Armies, took a particular Survey of the Town, and of the Ground and Country thereabouts.

The Deſcription of Gran.

Gran is ſituate about ſix Hungarian, or thirty Engliſh Miles below Comorra; it was anciently called Strigonium, but now by the Hungarians it is named Gran; from the River Gran, which comes out of the Upper Hungary, and empties it ſelf in the Danube, juſt over-againſt the City. Under the Name of Strigonium, four Cities are comprehended, together with the Caſtle which is ſituate on the pitch of a high Rock hanging over the Danube, and over-tops the Cathedral Church, where Stephen the firſt, King of Hungary, a holy and devout Prince, lies interr'd. In the Year 1543, this City was firſt brought under the Turkiſh Dominion, by Solyman the Magnificent. In the Year 1594 it was Beſieged by Mathias, Arch Duke of Auſtria, but was not taken until the following Year by Count Mansfield, who in a bloody Fight totally defeated the Ottoman Force. The Turks eſteeming this Place of neceſſary Importance to the Conqueſt of Hungary, returned before it in the Year 1604; but finding a vigorous Reſiſtance, were forced to raiſe the Siege after Twenty three Days continuance. Howſoever, in the Year 1605, inveſting the Place with a more formidable Power, it yielded it ſelf into the Hands of the Turks, who have ſince that time remained Maſters thereof until this happy Year 1683.

The King of Poland declines the Siege.

The Imperial Army continuing its Paſſage over the Bridges, the Two thouſand Men of the advanced Troops took their Poſt on the 21*ſt* and 22*d* at Night, not doubting but that the King of Poland would follow with his Army in the Rear, as was before reſolved; but, contrary to all expectation, the Duke of Loraine received Advice, that the King, by perſuaſion of his Senators, had changed his Mind, and deſigned not to paſs the River, letting him know, that he ſhould continue his Camp for three or four Days longer; but after that he ſhould be conſtrained to March away. This alteration in the King of Poland's Counſels, was ſtrangely ſurpriſing to the Duke of Loraine; for tho he doubted not but in a ſhort time to become Maſter of the Place with the Imperial Forces only, without the Aſſiſtance of the Poles; yet conſidering that the News of the Separation of the two Armies, might encourage the Grand Vizier with his Army (which as yet was not far diſtant) to return to the Relief of the Town, and the Beſieged to a more vigorous Defence; and that the Malecontents might be induced to Poſt themſelves on the Danube, to intercept and interrupt all Communication between Comorra and the Camp: Which Matters were of ſuch high Importance, that the Duke of Loraine thought not fit to form the Siege, until ſuch time as he had firſt fixed the King in his former Reſolutions; unto which he ſent the Counts of Staremberg and Rabata, to preſs him with all the earneſtneſs imaginable, giving him to underſtand how difficult it was for the Imperial Army to retire from an Enterpriſe, to which all the Methods and Forms were already laid and prepared; and of which the Deſign appeared ſo promiſing, that in a few Days they might with good reaſon expect a happy Succeſs and Event thereof. Moreover the Emperor had given his Orders for inveſting Gran, and was already in expectation to hear that the Siege was laid, eſteeming it of high Advantage to the Reputation of his Affairs, to have the Campaign concluded with the ſucceſs of ſo glorious an Action: Yet whatſoever was or could be ſaid by theſe Officers did not prevail on the King, until the Duke of Loraine himſelf went in Perſon, to repreſent the great Inconveniences, and even Subverſion of the late happy Succeſſes, which would be the neceſſary Conſequences at this time of the Separation of the two Armies. In fine, he ſo managed his Diſcourſe with thoſe Reaſons, and in ſuch obliging Terms, that the King concurred with him, deſiring him to haſten the execution of this Enterpriſe, in which there was no time to be loſt, conſidering how near the Winter-ſeaſon was approached. 1683.

He is perſuaded to it by the Duke of Loraine.

The Diſpoſition of the Christian Army in the Camp before Gran.

The Siege being now in good earneſt reſolved, the Poliſh Army paſſed the Bridges with all the Artillery, Ammunition and Baggage; and the Duke of Loraine with the chief Officers taking a ſecond Survey of the Town, and the Ground round about it; the Approaches were ordered to be made, and the Army began to take their ſeveral Quarters, as directed by the General Officers. The Foot were encamped on the tops of ſome riſing Hills; the Croats and Dragoons, with a Party of Horſe on the ſide of the Danube. The Bavarians were poſted on the River above the Town, at the foot of the Bridge which paſſes over to Barcan, where a Battery was raiſed: The reſt of the Infantry was divided into two other Squadrons towards St. Thomas's Mount, where other Batteries were raiſed, all things proceeding with ſuch expedition, as the Seaſon of the Year, and other Circumſtances of 1683.

Their Approaches.

the Army requir'd. The Lines being drawn, which extended three Miles in compaſs, the Cannon, of which ten Pieces being twenty four Pounders, and eight Mortars were by force of Men drawn up and planted on the Top of the Hills of Marinberg, and Thomasberg, and on the 25*th* by break of Day in the Morning, they began to play upon the Town, and much Batter'd the Caſtle on that ſide of the Gate, which looks towards Buda, and all that Day Bombs were thrown, whilſt the Imperialiſts in deſpight of the Enemies Fire advanced to the very Ditch, and there lodged near to the Quarters of the Bavarian Troops. On the other ſide, which looks towards Barcan, about five a Clock in the Afternoon the Imperialiſts ſtormed the Lower Town, and without much reſiſtence made themſelves Maſters of it, with the loſs of the Major of Staremberg's Regiment, and ſeven Soldiers. The Inhabitants retir'd into the Caſtle, from whence they fired inceſſantly both ſmall and great Shot: Howſoever, that very Night the Chriſtians gained the Foot of the Hill, on which the Caſtle is Built, and began to undermine the Place, there being a wide Breach already opened in the Wall of the Caſtle, ſo that every thing ſeemed in a readineſs for an Aſſault; but before things were put upon that Extremity, the Duke of Loraine thought fit with the conſent of the King of Poland, to ſend a Summons to the Caſtle in his Majeſty's name, which was done by a Turkiſh Priſoner, offering them Conditions of ſafety for their Goods and Lives, provided that a Surrender were made that very Evening: But the Defendants deſiring until next Day to give their Anſwer it was deny'd them, and Attacks were made and the Ditch paſſed, and two Lodgments made on the ſide of the Hill, and another Mine began; of which the Defendants being ſenſible, and fearing to be taken by force of Arms, they returned an Anſwer by Eleven a Clock that Night, how that they accepted the Conditions.

The Beſieged accept Conditions.

In the Morning early, being the 27*th*, Hoſtages were exchanged for ſecuring the performance of the Conditions, which were theſe.

Firſt, ‘That all the Cannon, Ammunition, Proviſions, and all offenſive Arms, (excepting thoſe hereafter excepted) ſhould remain in the Caſtle.

Secondly, ‘That thoſe of the Garriſon might carry with them, as much Bread, Fleſh and other Victuals, as would ſerve them for two Days Proviſion.

Thirdly, ‘That the Duke of Loraine ſhould provide them with Carts, for carrying their Baggage to the Water ſide.

Fourthly, ‘That Boats ſhould be granted them for carrying away their Perſons and Goods, and that in caſe they could not be cleared away at one time, that then they might have Liberty to fetch them off at twice: And that in caſe the Boatmen were not ſufficient to carry away all the Goods, that the Proprietors might have Liberty to perform the ſame.

Fifthly, ‘That ſo ſoon as theſe Capitulations were Signed, that the Garriſon ſhall immediately quit the place, and reſign it into the Hands of the Chriſtians, who were to take entire Poſſeſſion thereof; and that the Carts and Boats being in a readineſs, they ſhould without delay lade their Goods and Houſhold-ſtuff.

Sixthly, ‘That the Priſoners taken during the Siege, be forthwith releaſed and ſet at Liberty.

Seventhly, ‘That the Defendants ſhall have Liberty to March away with their Wives, Children and ſmall Arms, and alſo with their Horſes, Camels, and other Beaſts of Burden. In fine, That theſe Articles be kept, and obſerved inviolably on both ſides.

The Caſtle Surrendr'd.

On the 28*th* of this Month of October, all the Garriſon, being in number about Three thouſand five hundred Soldiers, marched out of the Caſtle between the Regiments of Grana and Loraine drawn up in double Files; but before they would ſuffer them to depart, a ſearch was made after the Mines, which the Turks diſcovering to them, they were diſcharged of their Powder: The Garriſon marched forth without any Order, but mixed together with their Wives, Children and Families: Thoſe who deſigned for Buda, were embarked on Boats provided for that purpoſe; and ſuch as were willing to go unto other Parts by Land, which were about Eight hundred Perſons, were conveyed by Colonel Heiſler with One thouſand ſix hundred Horſe.

After all the Matters were paſt, and the Chriſtians in poſſeſſion of the Fortreſs, the late Governour thereof called Beker Paſha, and Oſlan Paſha his Deputy, the Commander in chief of the Janiſaries, the Sagargibaſhee and Samſongibaſhee, who are Major Generals of the Janiſaries, with many other Agaes and others, who had eſcaped out of the Battel of Barcan, deſired greatly to ſalute the Duke of Loraine; who willingly admitted them to his Preſence, and treated them with much Humanity: In their Diſcourſes with the Duke they told him, That the defeat which the Turks had received before Barcan, was ſeen from the Top of the Caſtle of Gran, by the Garriſon and Inhabitants therein; which ſad Spectacle made ſuch impreſſions of fear in their Minds, that they had no power or life remaining to reſiſt the Vigour, and ſpeedy proceedings which the Chriſtians ſhewed in the Proſecution of this Siege: The Arms and Ammunition found in this Fortreſs, were Sixty Pieces of Cannon, beſides Twenty two belonging to the City below the Caſtle, Six thouſand Barrels of Powder, Three Mortars, Match, Bullets, Granadoes, Bombs in great quantities, as alſo Flour, Barly, Salted Fleſh, Rice and all ſorts of Proviſions ſufficient to ſuſtain that Fortreſs in a Siege for many Months.

Thanks returned to God.

Thus was this City reduced in a far ſhorter time, and with much leſs loſs than was expected by the King of Poland and his Senators; for which Te Deum was Sung, and Thanks render'd to God Almighty in the Cathedral Church of that Archbiſhoprick, after it had remained a Mahometan Moſch, in poſſeſſion of the Turks for above One hundred and forty years: The Command of the place with a Garriſon of Two thouſand Men, was committed to the charge of one Carlovitz, Serjeant Major to the Regiment of Staremberg.

The Elector of Bavaria, who for the ſake of his Health, remained at Brin to take the Air by the preſcription of his Phyſitians, hearing of the Siege of Gran, haſtned thither to partake in the Triumphs of it: And coming into the Camp on the 26th of October, early in the Morning with a part of his own Cavalry, which was not employed in the Siege; he had the good fortune within the ſpace of Twenty four hours, to behold the form and manner of the Siege, a Treaty offered and the place Surrendred. Soon after which the Imperialiſts making their Incurſions into the Country, took two Caſtles, one called Scombeck Situate between Gran and Buda, wherein were Four hundred Turks, and four Pieces of Cannon with much Proviſions: And alſo another Caſtle called Sordeck, lying towards Alba, wherein were ſix Pieces of Cannon mounted, with abundance of Ammunition and Proviſions of all ſorts. The news of theſe happy ſucceſſes were poſted to the Emperour by the Count of Auſpurg, to the great Joy and Triumph of the Imperial Court.

The Chriſtian Army drawn into Winter-quarters.

In this manner the Campagne being glorioully concluded to the great Reputation of the Emperor's Affairs, and to the Diſgrace and Diſcouragement of the Turks; The next care and incumbence of the Generals was to provide Winter-quarters for the refreſhment and welfare of the Army, which had been much haraſſed by the Fatigues of many and great Actions. The Elector of Bavaria deſirous in like manner to provide for his own Troops, haſtned their march out of Hungary, together with the Marquis of Dorlach, who with Three thouſand Men which he had conducted out of Suabia, accompanied the Elector, having remained but one day in conjunction with the Imperialiſts. To regulate and aſſign the Quarters of the two remaining Armies, Commiſſaries were appointed: And thô according to the Articles of Treaty, the Emperor was not obliged to allow Winter-quarters to the Army of Poland, intending to reſerve all the upper parts of Hungary for the accommodation of his own; yet in regard Conditions were not too ſtrictly to be inſiſted on, with perſons unto whom great acknowledgments are due, Quarters were aſſigned unto the Poles on the other ſide of the Tibiſcus, in Parts near adjoyning unto Tranſilvania, which were the Quarters that the King declared he had deſired, from the time he firſt enter'd with his Forces into Hungary. Howſoever, when his Majeſty was on the place, the Prince of Tranſilvania paid unto him a Sum of Money on Condition, that his Army ſhould be removed from thence, after payment of which they marched into the three Counties of Eſperies, Cachan and Tokay, which were appointed to receive them, five of the Imperial Regiments being diſlodged from thence.

Leventz taken.

But as the German and Poliſh Armies were marching towards their Quarters, on the Banks of the River Gran in ſight of Leventz; they ſent their Summons requiring the Governour to Surrender the place into their Hands, which in few hours time was yielded, and the Garriſon permitted to march out. In the place were twelve Pieces of Cannon well mounted, and Proviſions and Ammunition in great quantities.

Eſſeghet, Probens, and other places taken.

The Croats found the like good fortune, having in their march taken the Caſtle of Raboniz, about ſix Engliſh Miles diſtant from Kaniſia, and the Town of Probenz, Situate on the River Drave; as alſo the Caſtle of Eſſeghet, and the City and Caſtle of Brevenitz, which was ſo near to Kaniſia, that it ſeemed already blocked up, if not almoſt beſieged: And here theſe generous Soldiers thought fit to fix their Winter-quarters, which they had conquered and won, as if they had ſcorn'd to abide in any place which was not opened to them by their own Swords.

The Forces of Lituania with the Duke of Loraine.

The Duke of Lorain being at Sequi, about an hours march from Leventz, and buſied in aſſigning Quarters for Twenty ſeven Regiments, was viſited by the General of Lituania, accompanied with the principal Officers, who gave him to underſtand, that they were come with an Army of Ten thouſand Men, which were Quarter'd in the Neighbouring Towns and Villages, and that they were marching to joyn with the other Troops of his Majeſty of Poland, and to follow his Orders and Inſtructions. The Duke after having courteouſly received them, preſcribed them the Roads which they were to take, and deliver'd into the Hands of the General a Letter for the King, perſwading him to employ that Army which was freſh, and not harraſſed with the Fatigues of War, upon ſome Enterpriſe, it ſeeming ſomewhat abſurd, and perhaps of ill report in War, for ſo conſiderable a Body of Soldiers, to take a long march out of Lituania into Hungary, and to perform nothing, but to return again. To this Letter the King made no other Reply, Than that for maintenance of his Winter-quarters, he ſhould have occaſion of thoſe Troops.

The King of Poland in his march towards Cackaw, (which with Eſperies and Tokai, were appointed for the Quarters of his Troops) paſſing near to the City of Sefzin, ſent his Son Prince Alexander with Summons to Surrender, which being refuſed, the Poles made an Attack in two places, with which the Defendants being affrighted, offered to Capitulate, and in that Amazement before the Articles were agreed, they opened their Gates and let in the Enemy, who being obliged by no Terms, made a miſerable ſlaughter of the poor Inhabitants, of which there were Two thouſand Turks, beſides Twelve hundred Janiſaries and Spahees; and on the Walls were twenty Pieces of Cannon mounted. A Garriſon of Germans being put into the Town, the King continued his march towards the Quarters deſigned for his Troops, where having refreſhed himſelf for ſome few Days, he paſſed on towards Cracovia, attended only with the Servants and Officers of his Court: And not long afterwards was followed by his whole Army into Poland; where we will leave them to their own Fortune, which ſeemed favourable to them abroad, whilſt they were directed by the auſpicious Conduct of the Duke of Loraine, and other the greateſt Captains in the World. But looking on them in their own Country, as we ſhall hereafter do, we ſhall find their Succeſſes much different from their late Triumphs and Glories: For being left to themſelves, and inſpired with French Councils and Intereſts, we ſhall hear of no great Atchievements afterwards gained upon the Turks, nor attemps made to recover Kaminiec, the Bulwark and Fortreſs of their Kingdom on that ſide: Of which the Turks being ſenſible, made but weak Preparations againſt them, leaving them to the Tartars, who (as things were then governed) proved a ſufficient match for their Neighbours the Poles. Notwithſtanding this ſeparation, and that the Polanders were withdrawn into their own Country; yet the Reputation of the Emperor was highly exalted, and his name terrible to his Enemies, ſo that every ſmall Caſtle and Fortreſs Surrender'd upon the firſt Summons; as the Caſtles of Jaſem, Zalabſtat, Sumſtom and Seramz, with other places all belonging to the Malecontents, of which divers Perſons of Quality returned to their Duty and Allegiance, and particularly the Count of Zabbor, the Commander in Chief under Tekeli, who by the Count Eſterhaſi, being introduced to the Preſence of his Imperial Majeſty, he was with his uſual Clemency received, and a gracious Pardon granted to him.

Setzin taken by the Poles.

The King of Poland and his Army return home.

Several Caſtles belonging to the Malecontents ſubmit.

Theſe Triumphs in Chriſtendom increaſed the Troubles, Diſcontents and Commotions in Turky, which are always attended with Tragedies and Deſtruction of their Chief Miniſters and Rulers. We ſhall begin with the fate of Kara Muſtapha the Grand Vizier, the Chief Author and Cauſe of all the Evils which are paſt, and thoſe which for many years following are to enſue. We have in the beginning of this Hiſtory, made mention how that the Valide Soltana which is the Queen Mother, the Kuzlir-Aga, who is the black Eunuch of the Women, and the Embrahore, who is Maſter of the Horſe to the Grand Seignior, were all mortal Enemies to this Vizier, and attended only an opportunity to deſtroy him, which was now very practicable, under the preſent Circumſtances of Affairs, eſpecially having the Widow of the Paſha of Buda, whom the Vizer had lately put to Death, and who was Siſter to the Grand Seignior, to joyn with them in their methods of Revenge. The Grand Vizier being ſenſible of his Danger from theſe Enemies, and from the ill ſucceſs of Affairs, which uſually prove fatal to the Generals or Commanders in Chief, marched away towards Belgrade with a great part of his Army, eſteeming it a Matter of higher Conſequence to his own ſafety, to purge himſelf from blame in the Opinion of his Maſter, than to return back to the Relief of Gran, being already advanced as far on his way to Belgrade as the Bridge of Eſſeck, where he received the firſt intelligence of the Defeat, of the ſeveral Paſhas before Barcan, and the Siege of Strigonium. Theſe misfortunes haſtned his proceedings to Belgrade, where being admitted to the preſence of the Sultan; he deſcribed the admirable order of the Siege before Vienna, and how near he was to have been Maſter thereof, and even of all Auſtria, and the Emperor's Hereditary Countries, as Appendages thereunto thereunto belonging, had not theſe fair hopes been defeated by the Cowardiſe, and ill Conduct of the Paſha of Buda, and ſeveral other Officers whom he had juſtly puniſhed with Death for their Treachery, and want of Courage. He alſo laid much blame upon Tekeli, and on the Princes of Tranſilvania, Moldavia and Valachia, for not performing their Duty, either out of Treachery or Fear, or ſome ſecret Correſpondences or Reſerves for the Chriſtian Intereſt, In fine, he ſo well mannaged his Diſcourſe, and juſtify'd all his Actions with ſuch Colours and appearances of Truth, that the Grand Seignior who was naturally conſtant to his Miniſters, and particularly favourable to this Vizier, who had often feaſted and treated him with Preſents, and brought great Sums into his Treaſury (no matter by what means) did accept of the Excuſes he had made as juſtifiable, and acquitted him of all the Crimes of Miſgovenrment which were laid to his Charge; and having received him to Pardon, and Grace, the Sultan beſtow'd the uſual Preſents on him in ſuch Caſes given, and bid him do better the next year, and ſo return'd to Adrianople, leaving the Grand Vizier at Belgrade; but notwithſtanding this new Re-eſtabliſhment in the favour of his Maſter, and tho' as ſome ſay, in Confirmation thereof, he obtained a Writing under the Hand of his Maſter, Promiſing and Engaging never to take off his Head upon any Inſtances and Addreſſes that could be made him: yet his Enemies were buſy in Contrivances to take him off; amongſt which the moſt irreconcilable of any was a Woman, the Grand Seignior's Siſter, Widow of the late Paſha of Buda, who perceiving that her Letters were not prevalent enough to obtain her deſir'd Revenge; ſhe undertook a Journey from Buda to Adrianople in Diſguiſe, not being known on the way, until ſhe diſcover'd herſelf at her Arrival at the Court; where being come, ſhe was entertained at the Entry into the Seraglio with the unhappy News of the Death of the Valide or Queen Mother, a Perſon much lamented by all, for her Piety and good Works, but eſpecially at that time by this Sultana, who hoped to have uſed her as the chief Inſtrument of her Revenge: Howſoever, ſhe was not a little comforted by the Kuzlir-Aga, or chief Eunuch of the Women, when he told her, that the Valide upon her Death-Bed, had charged him to tell her Son the Sultan, that his Affairs could never proſper, ſo long as they were in the Hands and Management of ſo vile, and unfortunate a Perſon as this preſent Vizier. But whilſt they and others of the ſame Faction, were meditating of theſe Matters; Tekeli, who had heard of the Complaints made againſt him by the Vizier, and that he was in part charged with the miſcarriage of the late Succeſſes; fearing his own ſafety, came and boldly preſented himſelf at the Feet of the Grand Seignior, and in diſcharge of himſelf, ſolely laid all the blame upon the Vizier, which he confirmed by ſo many particular Inſtances, and by ſuch Reaſons, that the Grand Seignior aſſented to all his Allegations: But howſoever, not thinking it ſeaſonable at preſent to ſtir greater Commotions by change of Officers, (to which he was never much inclined) he favourably diſmiſſed Tekeli with new aſſurances of his Protection, and of ſending him very conſiderable Forces, and Recruits againſt the next Spring.

The Grand Vizier excuſes his Misfortunes before the GrandSeignior.

1683.

And is acquitted.

The Queen Mother Dead.

1683.

Tekeli comes to the Grand Seignior.

This Addreſs of Tekeli had a little prepar'd the Grand Seignior's Mind to receive different Impreſſions, than what he had hitherto conceived againſt his Grand Vizier; which were ſoon afterwards ripened by new Commotions raiſed by the induſtry of the Faction amongſt the Janiſaries, who Tumultuouſly aſſembling ran to the Grand Seignior, and crying out, that the Vizier had Treacherouſly forſaken their Companions, and ſuffer'd them miſerably to Periſh in their Trenches before Vienna, and had Unjuſtly and without any Reaſon put their Aga or General to Death; for which Crimes, and many other Miſcarriages they demanded the Head of the Vizier. The Sultan (to whom nothing was ſo terrible as the Toleration of the Janiſaries) entertained them with fair Words and Promiſes, and by diſtributing Money amongſt them, for that time diſperſed this Tumultuous Meeting. But fearing the return again of the Rabble and this unruly Soldiery, a Divan or Council was called, at which the Mufti and all the Viziers of the Bench, with other Grandees of the Court were preſent: After a mature Conſideration of the State of Affairs in the Empire, it was concluded of abſolute neceſſity for appeaſing the Minds of the Soldiery, that the Grand Vizier ſhould Dye, who had been the Cauſe and Author of all the late Miſfortunes. Nothing could be more grievous to the Grand Seignior than this advice; but being again terrified with the Threats of next days Commotions, the Imperial Command was ſigned for the Vizier's Death, and the Execution thereof committed to the care of the Chiaous Baſhee, or Chief of the Purſuivants, and to the Kapigeelar-Kajaſee, who is Maſter of the Ceremonies; which two Officers, with ſome few Servants were diſpatched away Poſt to Belgrade. Theſe Miniſters of Death being near to the City, ſent privately a Meſſenger

The Janiſaries demand the Head of the Vizier.

His Death reſolved.

ger to inform the Aga, or General of the Janiſaries of their Buſineſs, requiring him in the Name of the Grand Seignior to be aiding and aſſiſting to them in this Work, that it might be performed with all the quiet, peace and ſilence imaginable. All things being diſpoſed by the Aga accordingly, both he and the two Executioners went directly to the Vizier's Apartment, who, ſo ſoon as he had caſt his Eyes on theſe new-come Gueſts, thô they were really his Friends, and had been his familiar Confidents formerly, yet he ſuſpected much the Import of their Meſſage; but being nothing ſurprized at what he had ſome time expected, he chearfully gave them the uſual Salams or Salutations, demanding of them their Buſineſs, which brought them to Belgrade: To which the Janiſar-Aga made anſwer, That the Sultan demanded the Seal from him. To which the Vizier reply'd, Moſt willingly; and putting his Hand into his Boſom, he took the Seal out, and reſigned it. What more, ſaid he, is it that you require? The Standard, ſaid the Aga; which was immediately produced and delivered. At laſt they produced the Command for his Head, which he having read, he ſaid, Oh Deceitful World! After my Death the Grand Seignior will remember me, and the whole Empire too late lament my Fall. He then after their uſual manner waſhed, kneeled down and prayed, and yielded his Head to the fatal Cord: Being dead, the Executioner cut off his Head, and the Skin being flead off, it was ſtuffed with Straw, and put into a Bag, and carried away in poſt to the Grand Seignior, and laid before the Gate of the Divan, on the 7*th* day of January, 168¾.

The Vizier's Death.

ANNO, 1684.

The Mutability of the Turkiſh Court.

IT is very ſeldom that a Grand Vizier falls into Diſgrace, or is put to Death alone, but all his familiar Friends, Confidents and Creatures, incur the ſame Fate, and either attend him to the next World, or are baniſhed into remote Parts; and ſometimes the whole Set of Officers and Miniſters of State are changed with him. This Man had a corrupted Court, and was ſerved by Inſtruments of the ſame Humour and Temperament like himſelf, and which were either naturally ill-inclined, or made ſo by his Example. With him died the Teſterdar or Lord Treaſurer, and ſeveral other Engines of his Rapine and Violence. The Eſtates of theſe Malefactors were ſeized and converted to the Grand Seignior's Coffers, which were eſteemed in all to amount unto 14 Millions of Dollars: to which Sum, and a far greater, it was believed, that Eſtate only of the Vizier would have amounted unto; but it is moſt certain he had diſburſed vaſt Sums of Mony in this Expedition out of his own Treaſure, hoping to have had a return tenfold out of the Eſtates and Spoils of the Chriſtians, inſtead whereof his own Riches became a Prey to his Enemies; all the Mony (which as ſome Report) amounted to above two Millions found in his Tent, were all his own, and as they had been Acquiſitions obtained by Force and Rapine, ſo they became the Booty and Spoil of the King of Poland, paſſing from the poſſeſſion of one Covetous Man into the Coffers of another. The ſublime Office of Great Vizier being now vacant, the difficulty of the preſent Affairs required to have it ſupplied with a Perſon of Valour, Wiſdom and Experience; this Office, for which many Candidates pretended in former times, did now appear ſo weighty and full of Thorns, that the moſt ambitious amongſt the Turks were willing to decline it, or at leaſt not ſeem to ſeek or affect it. The Selictar Aga, or Sword-bearer to the Grand Seignior, called Soliman Aga, an accompliſhed Perſon in Mind and Body, a Man of good Senſe, being always in the Eyes of his Maſter, and a Favourite, was pitched upon, as the moſt fit and proper of any for this Employment: But he excuſed himſelf to the Sultan with this Complement, That thô nothing in this World could be more deſirable to him than this Office, yet ſince the execution thereof muſt neceſſarily carry him from the adorable Preſence of his Maſter, under the Shadow whereof he deſired always to live, he could not withdraw himſelf from thence without much Reluctancy and Diſcomfort, and therefore deſired that the Seals might be conferred on ſome other Perſon, more worthy than himſelf. The Grand Seignior judging, that theſe Expreſſions proceeded from a Heart truly devoted to him, accepted of the Excuſe, and reſoved to conſtitute Ibrahim Paſha, then Caimacam with him at Adrianople, commonly known by the Name of Kara Kaia, in the Vizier's Office: He had formerly been Kaia, or Steward to Kuprioglee; and after his Death was made Embrahoſe, or Maſter of the Horſe: He was afflicted with a Diſtemper called a Serpentine or Cancer, which ſome Years ſince was cauſed by an Eryſipelas; ſome ſaid it was a politick Diſeaſe to excuſe himſelf from going to the War. He was a cloſe politick Man, and become very weary and cautious by the Dangers and evil Fate of his Predeceſſors: As one means to ſecure his Condition, he frequently called and aſſembled all the Officers of the Divan, and with them conſulted all of the Methods in what manner the declining Condition

Soliman Aga.

Kara Kaia made Vizier.

1684. tion of the Empire might be recovered; concerning which, ſpeaking his own Senſe, he often declared, That the Errors of the late Vizier were to be retrieved, and a quite different Courſe to be ſteered; for whereas he had contrary to the publick Faith broken the Truce with the Chriſtians, without juſt Reaſons, before the time was expired, for which the Muſſulmen had taſted the Diſpleaſure of the Divine Vengeance: They were now to appeaſe the Anger of God, by renewing the ſame Truce, which had been injuriouſly violated with the Emperor, and obſerving it for the future, with ſuch Faith as becomes the common Honeſty of Mankind. But this Propoſal was in no manner agreeable to the Mind of the Grand Seignior; for tho he was naturally a gentle and a peaceable Prince, and diſliked this War at the beginning: Yet like an unlucky Gameſter, he was unwilling to give over with an ill Hand, hoping that the Wheel of Fortune might once again turn in his Favour: He had alſo promiſed Tekeli conſiderable Aid and Aſſiſtance againſt the next Campaign, and was unwilling to forfeit his Promiſe and Reputation with him.

The Vizier propoſes Peace.

Diſliked by the Grand Seignior.

The Vizier finding a Diſpoſition in the Grand Seignior to continue the War, deſired to be releaſed from his Office, which the weakneſs of his Body rendred him uncapable to diſcharge; to which the Sultan reply'd, That he was one of thoſe, who had opened the Gate, by which much Diſhonour and Miſchief was entred into the Empire, and now would with-draw his Neck out of the Collar; but if he did not ſhut the Gate again, he would hang him in all his Divan Robes.

The Turks indeed were then very low, and reduced to ſuch diſtreſs for want of Soldiers, that from Selibrea, which is about thirty Miles from Conſtantinople, in all the Country of Romania, (except the Sea-coaſt) all that were capable of bearing Arms were ſent to the War; but being raw Country People, proved of little Force againſt a Veterane Army.

The Vizier finding himſelf diſappointed in this Contrivance, and ſenſible of the preſent Diſadvantages, propoſed that the War ſhould be managed on the defenſive part, rather than to adventure the whole Concernment of the Empire on the Hazards and Chances of War, which ſeemed to be governed by ſome evil Influences of the Stars, which at that time were not very propitious to the Ottoman Cauſe. This Council being generally well approved, it produced two Reſolutions, one was to divert the intended Deſign of the Grand Seignior's going in Perſon to the War; for in that Caſe nothing could become the awful preſence and appearance of the Sultan, but Fire and Slaughter, and direful Vengeance whereſoever his terrible Sword was drawn; it being agreeable to the Opinion which the Turks fancy and conceive of their Emperor, That he is Omnipotent, and that in one Hand he carries all the Riches and Honours of the World, and in the other Victory, and all ſorts of Delights for ever. But to draw this Caſe a little nearer to the Perſon of the Vizier himſelf; it was farther reſolved, That in caſe a defenſive War were to be managed, it were neither conſiſtent with the Reputation of the Grand Vizier, who was the Sultan's Deputy and Repreſentative; but more becoming a Sardar, with Title of Seraskier, or General to wage a War, in which the chief Art is to decline a Battel and all Engagements. Thus had this old and politick Vizier obtained his Point by ſitting at Home, and ſeeing others play the Game, which he could approve or diſapprove without danger, according to the Succeſſes: The Perſon appointed to be Seraskier, or General, was Kara Oglou Chiamacam of Conſtantinople, who had formerly been Captain Paſha, or Admiral of the Seas.

A defenſive War intended.

A Seraskier appointed.

1684.

The Grand Vizier remaining at home, had time to conſider and reflect, That the cauſe of the general Toleration of almoſt all Chriſtendom againſt them, did proceed from the Neglect, Contempt and ill Uſage which the late Vizier had put upon all the publick Repreſentatives of Chriſtian Princes, ſome Inſtances of which we have given at the beginning of this Hiſtory: To redreſs which, it was thought fit to cajole and ſoften a little the Foreign Miniſters from Chriſtian Princes, whom the late Vizier had ſo contemptuouſly uſed, and treated with Diſgrace, as had raiſed all Chriſtendom about their Ears; and ſo with much Complement the Ambaſſadors of England and France were invited to Adrianople by the Vizier, to ſit with him upon the Soffraw, according to the uſual Cuſtom and Priviledge of Ambaſſadors, which the Pride of the late Vizier would not allow them. The Lord Chandos, then Ambaſſador from his Majeſty of Great Britain to the Ottoman Port, being at that time Sick, excuſed his going, and perhaps alſo was deſirous to ſpare the Mony of the Turky Company, and not laviſh it out in an empty and fruitleſs Journey: But the French Ambaſſador, Monſieur de Guilleragues, for the Glory (as he thought) of his Maſter, made ſplendid Preparations at the Coſt of the Merchants, to enter Adrianople; where, being arrived, he was in a ſhort time received to Audience on the Soffraw, which Priviledge hath been reſtored to all other Ambaſſadors ſince that time.

The Soffraw granted to the Chriſtian Miniſters.

That which haſtned this Favour and Indulgence to Foreign Miniſters, was the apprehenſion of a War juſt then breaking out with the Venetians; for the Doge of Venice being newly dead, and his Place ſupplied by Seignior Marco Antonio Guſtiniani, the Senate ſent Orders to their Secretary at the Ottoman Port, called Seignior Capello, to declare War againſt the Turk, and their League and Alliance with the Emperor and Poland; and having ſo done, to make his Eſcape in the beſt manner he was able. Seignior Capello having complied with theſe Inſtructions, conveyed himſelf away in the Habit of a Seaman, upon a French Man of War called the Faithful, which was come to Conſtantinople for Convoy to ſome other Ships.

The Venetians declare War againſt the Turks.

The Moſcovites, who had for a long time plaid faſt and looſe (as we have formerly mentioned) in their Treaties of Peace with the Turks, became now more fixed and reſolved on a War, being animated thereto by the ſtrong Alliance and Confederacies made againſt them, and the croſs Fortune of the Turks, which ſeemed every day to decline. This Union and ſtrong Combination, as it made the Turks tremble, ſo the Senſe thereof ſoftned their Minds, and rendred them much more plyable and gentle to thoſe Chriſtian Ambaſſadors, who remained in Peace and Amity with them; and gave juſt occaſion to the Engliſh, and others trading in their Dominions, to applaud and own the Juſtice, Moderation, and eaſy Acceſs of the Turks, much different from that, which they practiſed in the time of their Proſperity, ſo that thô our Engliſh Merchants, in all their Letters, complained of the badneſs of Trade, and ill Markets, yet they praiſed and commended the preſent Security in which they lived, and the readineſs of the Turkiſh Miniſters to afford them redreſs upon all Complaints.

The Moſcovites inclinable to enter into the League.

The Treaty of Confederacy and Alliance being vigorouſly carried on at Vienna, by Seignior Contarini, the Venetian Ambaſſador to his Imperial Majeſty, by and with the Conſent and Aſſiſtance of the Pope's Nuncio, theſe following Articles were agreed between the Emperor, the King of Poland, and the Republick of Venice, and afterwards Sworn unto at Rome, at the Feet of the Pope, by Cardinal Pio in Behalf of the Emperor, by Cardinal Barbarini in the Name of the King of Poland, and by Cardinal Ottoboni for the Venetians.

The Articles are theſe.

1ſt. THat a League offenſive and defenſive be concluded between the Emperor, the King and Republick of Poland, and Republick of Venice; the which ſhall continue until the end of this War, and to be defenſive for ever.

2dly. The Protector and Guarantie, whereof ſhall be this Pope Innocent the XI. and his Succeſſors; and the Apoſtolical See ſhall ever be Moderator to judge and determine which of theſe Parties falls from his Faith, and fails in a due Performance.

3dly. That during the time that this League continues in Force, none of the Parties ſhall enter into Treaty, or accept of any Condition, thô never ſo advantagious without the Conſent, Privity and Concurrence of the other Allies.

4thly. That his Imperial Majeſty ſhall enter into this League, as King of Hungary, Bohemia, and Arch-Duke of Auſtria; as doth alſo the King, as King of Poland and Great Duke of Lituania, binding theſe their Dominions and Inheritances; as doth alſo the Republick of Venice, bind and oblige their Dominions and Territories to the performance of theſe Covenants.

5thly. By this League is underſtood only a War againſt the Turks, and againſt no other Prince or Potentate whatſoever.

6thly. The Emperor for his part, and the King of Poland for his, do promiſe to wage War againſt the Turks with very powerful Armies by Land; and the Venetians with a powerful Fleet at Sea, and with their Troops in Dalmatia to the utmoſt of their Force, until a Peace be concluded.

7thly. That in caſe either of theſe Parties be hard preſſed by the Enemy, ſo that the Aid and Aſſiſtance of the others be neceſſary, they ſhall leave their preſent Deſigns, and apply themſelves to the Relief of the Party oppreſſed.

8thly. That this War be carried on by way of Diverſion, that is, That the Emperor endeavour to conquer and ſubdue all the Forts and ſtrong Holds in Hungary, the King of Poland to recover Kaminiec, Podolia and Ukrania; and the Venetians the ſeveral Towns, Fortreſſes and Iſlands which they have loſt.

9thly. That ſo ſoon as theſe Articles are ſigned, that the ſeveral Covenants herein contained, be put into immediate Execution.

10thly. That all Chriſtian Princes be invited to enter into this League, and eſpecially the Czar of Moſcovy.

11thly. That this League ſhall not be underſtood to prejudice any other League made with any other Prince; particularly, That lately concluded between the Emperor and the King of Poland.

Thus did the Senate of Venice, after Mature Deliberation, (for that Republick did never act raſhly) enter into the Confederacy with the aforeſaid Allies againſt the Turks.

The

1684.

The Reaſons which the Venetians had to make a War.

The many Inſults and Avanias with which the Grand Vizier, and others did daily oppreſs them (of which at the beginning of this Hiſtory we have given ſome Inſtances) and the difficult Circumſtances they lay under by theſe hard Task-maſters, who were continually drawing, and forcing Mony from them upon falſe pretences, without which they always threatned War, were juſt Grounds and Reaſons for breaking that Peace, which was concluded with them after the loſs of Candia in the year 1668. This happy League was farther improved by Applications to the Czars of Moſcovy, who had not long before ſignified unto the Court of Poland, their inclinations to enter into this Alliance; to forward which the Baron of Zerowski was diſpatched into Moſcovy, and in his way thither, by Poland to take Blumſerg with him, being both Commiſſionated to Sollicite the Czars for their Aſſiſtance and Union with the other Confederates. The like Addreſſes were made to the Princes of Italy, who being encouraged, and warmed by the late proſperous Succeſſes, were ready to contribute all the Force and Aid within their Power. The City of Rome moved by the Exhortations, and Examples of the Pope, did chearfully Concur, and the Cardinals, Princes and Prelates did all Contribute immenſe Sums for carrying on this Holy War: And the Pope did not only Iſſue forth liberally Monies out of his own Coffers, but ſent Forces which were raiſed in his own Dominions and Territories, to joyn with the Imperial Army in Hungary: Thus did all things, according to the uſual courſe of Nature, Concur towards the Proſperity of the Chriſtian Affairs; for Mankind naturally ſides with the uppermoſt and ſtrongeſt ſide, and are ready to depreſs, and beat down the weak and dejected Party.

Aids from Italy.

Nor did the Emperor only endeavour to fortifie, and ſtrengthen his ſide by united Intereſts and Alliances; but to weaken his Enemies, by with-drawing from them the Malecontents, who were their Aſſociates, and the firſt Incentives to this War: The Succeſſes of the Emperor had damped the Spirits of the Malecontents in ſuch manner, that they began now to believe the Turks were vincible, and that they had put their Truſt in a feeble Arm of Fleſh, which could not Defend them, and engaged their Intereſt with a Party; from which they could promiſe themſelves no Security or Redreſs: Wherefore, ſeriouſly laying aſide their former ill Principles, many of the Counties and Cities began to Capitulate, and deſire to have their Aggrievances redreſſed, upon which they promiſed to ſubmit unto the Emperor's Pleaſure, and return to their Obedience: But this good Humour being not general amongſt all the Malecontents, but confin'd to ſome few Cities and Counties, no Capitulations or Articles were Signed or Concluded, ſo that notwithſtanding their good Intentions, the Imperialiſts made Havock of them in all Places; and the Turks hearing of their Inclinations to return again to their Obedience to the Emperor, and of the Steps they had made towards it, Treated them in all Places like Enemies, with Fire and Sword; ſo that miſerable was the State of this poor People, who were become Obnoxious to both Parties; they had been the Original cauſes of the Miſchief, and were likely to Periſh in it.

Some of the Malecontents fall off to the Emperor.

1684.

Their ill Condition.

A General Pardon.

But the Clemency of the Emperor Commiſerating their unhappy Condition, Publiſhed an Act of General Pardon to all the People of Hungary, who had been miſlead, and debauched from their Duty and Allegiance to their lawful Sovereign, Dated at Lintz in the Month of January 1684; whereby a Door was opened to a Treaty, and Pardon offer'd to all ſuch who were deſirous to return to the Protection of his Imperial Majeſty, and to renounce their dependance on the Turks: This Edict was affixed in all publick Places, as Church-doors, and the Market Croſſes, and diſperſed in all the Frontier Garriſons, being Written in the Latin and the Hungarian Tongues, that none might pretend ignorance thereof. The direction was in this manner:

To all the States and Orders, as well Prelates, Barons, Nobles, as to all Free and Royal Cities, Counties and People, and to all Perſons whatſoever (none excepted) within the Kingdom of Hungary.

In the firſt place, The ſad and deplorable Condition of that Kingdom being bewailed, cauſed by civil and inteſtine Diſcords, which evil and perverſe Spirits had raiſed, and by their evil Perſwaſions had deluded many Thouſands of poor Innocent Men, to Sacrifice their Lives and Fortunes to their Luſt and Revenge, and even to joyn and unite themſelves with the Turks, who were the ancient and irreconcilable Enemies to the Kingdom of Hungary, and the Chriſtian Religion. And tho' His Imperial Majeſty having been thus highly provoked by the Rebellions and Outrages of the People, and by the Power of his Victorious Arms might juſtly exempt, and reject them from all Pardon: Yet his gracious Clemency prevailing, he doth once again offer his Mercy, to as many as before the end of February next enſuing, ſhall renounce and abandon the intereſt and party of the Malecontents, and union with the Turks, and repair to Presburg, where Commiſſioners ſhall be appointed to receive them, and to deliver out Pardons to them, taking a new Oath of Allegiance

1684. Allegiance to their King, with aſſurances to remain for ever as good Subjects, in perfect Loyalty and Obedience to his Majeſty, which being perform'd, ſuch as are of the Nobility ſhall be reſtor'd to their Honours, Dignities and Eſtates: And in caſe any ſuch have formerly enjoy'd Honours, and Places of Truſt, their Caſe ſhall be conſider'd by the Commiſſioners, who are to make Report thereof unto the Emperor, who will be ready in ſuch Caſes ſo to Act, as ſhall be moſt ſuitable to the Royal Service. Such Soldiers as having been ſeduced by their Commanders to leave and relinquiſh the Imperial Army, ſhall return again to their Duty, and to their Colours, ſhall have the ſame Poſt allotted to them as formerly, and ſhall be received again into the Garriſons, or Regiments reſpectively. All Counties and Cities, who by their Deputies ſhall appear before the Commiſſioners, in order to ſuch Reconciliation, ſhall have ſafe Paſports to go, and return with all ſecurity. As to matters of Religion, the Worſhip of God, and Reſtitution of Churches, all the particulars agreed unto, and promiſed at the laſt General Diet held at Edemburg, ſhall be perform'd and inviolably maintained. As to the Statute made in the year 1655, concerning the Coronation of the King of Hungary, on which various Gloſſes and Interpretations have been put, which have cauſed great diſorders and diſturbances; the ſame ſhall be referr'd to the next Convention of the States to conſider thereof, and Decrees therein, what ſhall be moſt agreeable to the Fundamental Conſtitutions of the Nation. So that a true, and impartial Interpretation being put on all things as well in Religious, as in Temporal Matters, a good and laſting Peace, and right underſtanding may paſs between the King and his People. And as to thoſe, who ſhall not take hold of this Golden Scepter now held forth unto them with this opportunity, and within the time limited: It is declared, That they are excluded from Mercy, and are guilty of all the Miſeries, which ſhall fall upon themſelves and their Country; and ſhall be Proſecuted as Rebels, Outlawed and Felonious Perſons, and ſuch as are never more to be receiv'd into Grace, or Pardon.

To put this Commiſſion into Execution were appointed the Duke of Loraine, the Count Kinski Chancellor of Bohemia, the Baron of Abele, and Count Venceſlat of Altheim, who were to open the ſame at Presburg, on the 15*th* day of February. But in regard nothing was declar'd explicitely in this Decree, touching Liberty of Conſcience, the Exerciſe of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Conſervation of Privileges, it ſeemed ſo ſhort and narrow, and incomprehenſive of the Cauſe, for which the Malecontents had ſo long contended, that very few thought it worthy the acceptance: 1684. Howſoever ſome there were, who being convinced by the Succeſs of the Emperor, that they had engolfed themſelves in a deſperate Intereſt, embraced the offers of the Imperial Pardon, ſuch were the Baron of Baragotzi, who abandoning Tekeli's party, Fled with Three hundred Huſſars into his Caſtle of Zakwar. The Count Humanai, and ſome other Hungarian Lords followed his Example, and fortified themſelves in the Caſtle of Angwar: The Barons Ladiſlaus, Francis Baragotzi, Schieniſſi, Clebai and Malkai, intending a like Revolt were ſeized, and by Order of Tekeli were put to Death.

Several revolt from Tekeli.

With all theſe Misfortunes the Spirit of Tekeli being nothing abated, but rather raiſed with Rage and Deſpair; he Iſſued out a Proclamation of his own, in Imitation of that of the Emperor's, in which with an Imperial Stile, he declared Pardon to all ſuch as ſhould within a time limited, return to the defence of the Malecontented party, of which he had owned himſelf the Head and Protector: And for their better Encouragement he laid out a Project of conſtituting a Republick, by which all the Nobility, and many of the Commonalty ſhould come to bear a ſhare in the Government: And to puniſh thoſe who had Revolted from him, he marched with a Body of 10,000 Men of his own, and a conſiderable force of the Turks under the Command of the Paſhas of Buda, and Agria to Beſiege Count Baragotski in his Caſtle of Zakwar, of which Count Rabata having advice, he preſently marched with all his Forces againſt them, which Tekeli fearing, declin'd an Engagement, in a Seaſon when the Winter was ſcarce paſt; but on a ſuddain, turning his deſign on the Caſtle of Angwar, which was defended by the Count of Humanai, he took it by force in three Days time, and carried away the Count himſelf to Caſſovia, where he cut off his Head.

Tekeli puts forth an Act of Pardon.

Count Humanai put to Death.

To revenge theſe Inſults, the Lituanians, whom the King of Poland had left behind him in their Winter-quarters, made frequent Incurſions upon the Countries of the Malecontents, eſpecially into the County of Sepuſa, burning their Villages, and carrying away their Cattle. But this Militia remain'd not long in thoſe parts, before they were recalled by the King of Poland out of Hungary, either becauſe he was informed that his Soldiers deſerted daily, or elſe out of ſome pique, or diſcontent of being refuſed to be Mediatour, and Guaranty for the Peace with the Malecontents, for which Reaſon he declared, That he would not concern himſelf in a War againſt Tekeli and his Complices, but againſt the Turks only, to which the Articles of Alliance did oblige him, and to no other.

The King of Poland recalls his Forces.

1684.

Tekeli Writes to the Pope.

The Spring being now advanced, and Tekeli at Caſſovia, he Wrote a Letter from thence to the Pope, Dated the 12*th* of April, wherein he repreſented; That ever ſince the laſt year he was very deſirous to put an end to the Troubles of Hungary, upon thoſe Terms and Conditions, which were agreed with the Baron Saponara. And being not able to obtain from the Emperor a Grant to conſtitute the King of Poland Guaranty of this Treaty, he was forced to take new Meaſures, and to ſupport Himſelf and his Intereſt under Protection of the Turks, which his Enemies interpreted to be a Renuntiation of his Chriſtianity. But he ſacredly proteſted to his Holineſs, that he took up Arms for no other Reaſon and Cauſe, than the Defence of his Country, and to conſerve himſelf from entire Ruin, having had the experience of many years, that the Emperor was in no State or Condition to defend him. That He and his Party did not deſerve the Odious Name of Rebels, conſidering that the Arms they took up were in Defence only of the Liberties, and Privileges granted unto them by the ancient Kings of Hungary, and particularly by King Andrew the II. whoſe Letters are conſerved amongſt the Archives of the Vatican; which if his Holineſs would be pleaſed to inſpect and examine, he would eaſily find, that thoſe Articles have been ſo far from being performed, that they have been wholly laid aſide, and violated in every particular. That as to his own Perſon, he hath been deſpoyled of his Eſtate, and made an Exile in the very tender years of Youth, with others of the Hungarian Nobility, who could never obtain redreſs upon their complaints, but inſtead thereof received Sentence of Death by corrupt and partial Judges, without any regard to the formalities preſcribed by Law. And tho' in this Cauſe not only Proteſtants, but great numbers of Catholicks were concerned, amongſt which George Lippa Archbiſhop of Gran was one, a Perſon very Zealous for Reſtoration of thoſe Liberties, which the Emperor had Sworn to maintain, when in the year 1655 he had received the Crown of Hungary at Presburg; yet nothing could avail towards moderating the violent Proceedings of that Council, by which the Emperor was governed; ſo that having no other remedy, they were enforced as their laſt Refuge, to have recourſe unto their Arms, not with deſign to act againſt the Catholick Religion, or to the prejudice thereof, either in Hungary or elſewhere, but only to maintain thoſe Liberties which were eſtabliſhed by Law, and confirm'd by ſeveral Diets. In fine, He beſeeched his Holineſs to Judge of his Intentions by this Declaration, rather than by the Siniſter Reports of his Enemies, to whom he wiſhed a long Life, and a happy Pontificate.

1684.

The Pope having received this Letter aſſembled a Congregation of the Cardinals, at which the Miniſters of the Emperor, and the King of Poland were preſent to deliberate, and conſider what Anſwer was fitting to be returned thereunto.

The Seraſkier comes to Belgrade

The Seaſon of the year being now far advanced, both ſides prepar'd for War. The Seraſkier, called Kara Ibrahim, having taken his Farewel of the Grand Seignior and Great Vizier, departed from Adrianople in the Month of May, and arrived at Belgrade where he found a Body of 60.000 Men, of which he ſent one half to the Army deſigned for Poland, with which Recruit they became a Hundred thouſand ſtrong, and lay Encamped near the City of Nicopolis: With the remainder the Seraſkier marched to Buda, where he joyned with 20.000 more, and expected the Auxiliary Troops of Aſia, which amounted unto 30.000 effective Men; ſo that the whole Force this year of the Ottaman Army in Hungary only, amounted unto 80.000 Men, beſides 15.000 which were appointed for the Guard of the Bridge of Eſeck.

The Turkiſh Army.

Fears from France.

Nor were the Preparations leſs conſiderable at Vienna, tho a diverſion was much fear'd of the Imperial Forces, by the Jealouſies which the Arms of France gave in Flanders and upon the Rhine, and the Pretentions which the French Miniſters were daily making at Ratisbon, and in other Courts of the Empire, by which there was ſome appearance, as if a Check would be given to the ſmooth and proſperous proceedings of the Imperial Forces in Hungary. This ſurmiſe was cheriſhed by thoſe, who were deſirous to clap up a Peace with the Turk, alledging that it was impoſſible to carry on a War in Hungary, and at the ſame time reſiſt the formidable Force of France in Alſatia, and on the Confines, and perhaps in the very Heart of the Empire. But God, who by his Divine Providence Governs all things, was pleaſed out of his Compaſſion to Chriſtendom to incline the Heart of that King to be Chriſtian, and to Accord a Truce with the Empire for ſome years, that ſo he might take off the Scandal of being a Friend to the Turks, and of interrupting the Progreſs of the Chriſtian Arms againſt the Common Enemy to the Faith of Chriſt. In fine, The dread of a French War being vaniſhed, the whole Groſs of the Imperial Army came to refund it ſelf upon the Turks, and was in number and quality as follows.

That King makes a Truce with the Emperor.

The Infantry were in all Twenty ſeven Regiments,	55080
The Cavalry all armed with Back and Breaſt,	12800

Dragoons,	5800
Polanders hired and paid by the Emperor,	4000
Croats who were Horſe,	3200
One Regiment in Vienna,	1200
Twenty Independent Companies in Rab, Gran and Comorra,	3000
In all	84880

Beſides the Confederate Army under the Duke of Bavaria, which made about 20.000 Men, ſo that the whole Chriſtian Army this year compoſed a Body,

In all	104880 Men

But how numerous ſoever this Army ſeemed to be, yet after the Garriſons were out of it ſupply'd, and Forces ſent into Alſatia, and to the Rhine; and conſiderable Detachments into Croatia and Stiria, and Parts of the Upper Hungary, the main Body remaining with the Duke of Loraine, did not amount to above Forty thouſand Men, with which he deſigned the Siege of Buda.

The Siege of Buda intended.

This was an Enterpriſe becoming the Valour of ſo great a Captain, for the Town was Defended by a Garriſon of Forty ſix Chambers of Janiſaries, each conſiſting of One hundred and fifty Men, beſides Spahees and the Militia of Raſcia, which in all compoſed a Body of Twelve thouſand effective Men. The City of Buda it ſelf is raiſed on a Hill, and is naturally very ſtrong; under it there is another Town Built by the Turks, which is called the Lower Buda. But before Approaches could be made hereunto, it was judged neceſſary to ſecure the Navigation down the Danube, for carrying the heavy Cannon, and Proviſions neceſſary for maintenance of the Siege, which could not be done but by taking the ſtrong City of Vicegrade with the Caſtle, which ſo far commanded the River, that no Boats, or Veſſels could paſs down the Current without being infeſted by the Cannon of the Place. For Vicegrade is Situated on a Rock on the ſide of the Danube between Gran and Buda, but much nearer to the latter, and is fortified by a Caſtle erected upon a ſmall Hill.

Vicegrade.

This place hath been ſo conſiderable in former times, that it was the Reſidence of the Hungarian Kings, of which there remain great Ruins to this day of ſumptuous and magnificent Palaces. The Crown of the Kings of Hungary was anciently conſerved in this place; but as the Turks advanced in their Conqueſts, for better ſecurity it was removed to Presburg. This Crown is of a different Figure from that which other Princes uſe; for it is very low, with a Croſs on the Top, encompaſſed with four Leaves, of which one is larger than the other three.

The Crown of Hungary.

This Crown is held in great eſtimation by the Hungarians, being, as they ſay, brought down from Heaven by an Angel, and planted on the Head of their King St. Stephen. It being neceſſary (as we have ſaid) to take this place to make the way clear, and open unto Buda, the Duke of Loraine cauſed a Body of Horſe to paſs the Bridge of Gran; and becauſe the Country was full of Woods and Incloſures, all the Baggage and Incumbrances of the Camp were left under the Cannon of Gran, with a Guard of four Regiments of Foot, and a Detachment of Six hundred Horſe, beſides four Battalions of Count Kaiſerſtein, Commanded by General Hailewell; with the reſt of the Army the Duke of Loraine marched away, and having pitched his Camp about an hour's diſtance, or three Engliſh Miles from Vicegrade, he with ſome other Officers took a view of the place:

Hailewell.

And on the 16*th* day of June by break of day in the Morning, he raiſed his Camp, and by nine a Clock the ſame Morning the Foot and Dragoons had taken their Poſt upon a Hill, where they brought up ſome Mortar-pieces and Cannon, and began to Batter the Town:

Vicegrade battered.

But it being conſider'd, that this would be a long work, an Aſſault was reſolved, as the ſhorteſt and moſt expedite courſe to put an end to this Action. Count Erneſt of Staremberg diſpoſed and directed in what manner the Attack ſhould be made; and the Duke of Newburg commanded during the time of it's Execution. The Cavalier Roſne in deſpight of the Enemies Fire broak in at the firſt Gate, and being come to the ſecond, the Baron of Aſti with his Granadiers threw himſelf over the Walls into the City, by which time Roſne having broak in at the ſecond Gate, the Defendants began to give ground, and retreat into the Caſtle, but ſo precipitous was their Flight, that before they could croud into the Gate, many of them were cut off, and killed by the Enemy; after which the City was Sacked, and delivered up for a Prey into the Hands of the Soldiery.

And is ſtormed and taken.

The next day by three a Clock in the Morning, the Duke of Loraine took a view of the Caſtle, and deſigned to raiſe divers Batteries againſt it, for that the Bombs by Reaſon of the Figure of the Caſtle which was long and narrow, could not eaſily take place: But whilſt theſe Batteries were raiſing, the Duke ſent a Herald with a menacing Summons, that in caſe they ſhould refuſe to Surrender, he would deliver them up into the mercileſs Fury of the Soldiers. The Turks being 1684.

aſtoniſhed at the Reſolution and Bravery of the Chriſtians, were affrighted into a Treaty; and Hoſtages being given on both ſides, it was agreed, That the Beſieged ſhould have Liberty to March out with their Arms, Bag and Baggage, Wives and Children, leaving behind them all the Artillery and Ammunition belonging to the Place. The Soldiers were no more than Six hundred in all, who were tranſported in Boats into the Iſland of St. Andrew's, to paſs from thence to Walt: In the Caſtle were only ſix Pieces of Cannon, (on four of which were the Arms of the Emperor Rodolfus;) the Proviſions and Ammunition alſo was very ſmall and inconſiderable, which might be the true Cauſe of this ſudden Surrender; for otherwiſe the Caſtle was very capable of making a longer Defence.

The Caſtle is alſo ſurrendred.

As things were paſſing in this manner before Vice-grade, News was brought to the Duke of Loraine, that the Turks had made an attempt on the Baggage which lay under Command of the Guns at Gran, and that the Regiment of Rabata had been worſted; upon which News the Duke of Neuburg with his Horſe took the Allarum, and haſtned to their Aſſiſtance, and was followed alſo by the Duke of Loraine; but in their way thither, they received Letters, that the Diſpute was already decided in favour of the Chriſtians; for thô they loſt Eighty Men, which were killed, together with Major General Hailewell, who was run through the Body in two places with a Lance, and Baron de Kery, with a Lieutenant of the Regiment of Taff; yet the Turks having at length been beaten out of the Field in diſorder, and with a loſs of One hundred and twelve Men which lay dead in the Field, the Victory clearly appeared in favour of the Chriſtians: Count Rabata, Nephew to the General of that Name, was taken Priſoner, but was afterwards reſcued by two Horſemen, whom he well Rewarded for that great Service.

The Turks fall on the Baggage before Gran.

Are put to flight.

The Death of Major General Hailewell, a Soldier of long Experience and undaunted Courage, being lamented with ſuch Grief and Sorrow as Soldiers uſually expreſs in the time of War for each other; The Duke of Loraine ſupplied Vice-grade with a Garriſon of Five hundred Men out of the Regiment of the Duke of Neuburg, the Command whereof was given to the Baron d'Ambouche, Sergeant Major of that Regiment: The Duke of Loraine having refreſhed his Army for ſome ſhort time near unto Gran until the Troops were come from Vice-grade, he raiſed his Camp on the 20*th* of June, and traverſed the Danube over the Bridge at Strigonium, and by next Day in the Evening the whole Army, Cannon, Baggage, and every thing being paſſed over, they continued their March towards Peſt, where the Recruits of the Sileſian Forces were expected: The March thither was difficult through Woods and narrow Places, ſo that on the 27*th* they encamped near Witzen, in ſight of Fifteen thouſand Turks, under the Command of ten Paſhaes, and Eight thouſand Tartars, with their Officers, who were drawn up in Battalia on the ſide of a Hill; the Acceſs unto which was very difficult over Rocks and Buſhes, and broaken Ways: On their right Wing they had the Danube, and on the left a Bog or Moraſſe; the Imperialiſts immediately upon this appearance, put themſelves into a Poſture of Battle, with as much ſpeed as the difficulty of the Place would permit, having their right Wing towards the Danube, and their left towards the Mountain, extending very largely their Front, they marched cloſe and ſlow to paſs the rough and broaken Ways, which thô the Turks defended with four Pieces of Cannon, yet Prince Lewis of Baden forced through, as did alſo Count Staremberg, and gained the Paſs, bringing ſome Pieces of Cannon to make good their Poſt. The Turks began now to move, and to charge the Regiment of Taff, which was in the middle of the Line, with their uſual Cries of Ala, Ala: The Duke of Loraine who was in that part of the Army, which was the middle, ſo as to be more ready to relieve thoſe Troops, which he perceived moſt in diſtreſs, had his Horſe killed under him by a Piſtol-ſhot, as had alſo two other Cavaliers, who road near his Perſon; but they being again remounted, the Chriſtian Troops moved with a regular Order, keeping themſelves cloſe and firm like a mighty Wall: The Turks charged them three times, endeavouring to break into their Body; but being every time repulſed with ſome loſs, they began to give way and to retreat; but Rallying again, they made another Charge; but failing in the Attempt, and not able to break into the Enemies Ranks, the Chriſtians preſſed them ſo hard, and put them into ſuch Diſorder, that they fled and trampled one upon the other, leaving their Cannon, and the Janiſaries which guarded them, to ſhift for themſelves, who being ſurrounded with ſeveral Regiments, were all cut to pieces.

A Fight near Witzen.

The Turks are defeated.

In this Battle about Six or Seven hundred Janiſaries were killed, great numbers endeavouring to ſwim over to the other ſide were drowned in the Danube, and about Three hundred Priſoners were taken: The Turkiſh Cavalry for the moſt part ſaved themſelves in Peſt, by the ſwiftneſs of their Horſes, which thô not ſo ſtrong in Battle as the German, yet more nimble and uſeful in Flight. There were no more than ſix Pieces of Cannon taken, without other Spoyl either of Tents or Baggage; for this Force being only a Detachment ſent from Buda to give ſome Interruption, and ſtop to the Progreſs of the Enemy, they carried no Incumbrances with them, which commonly cauſe Camps to move ſlowly.

The Garriſon of the Fortreſs of Witzem, beholding from the top of the Caſtle the Succeſs of this Fight, were put into ſuch Conſternation, that upon Summons from Count Schaffemberg, they ſurrendred without Terms or Conditions, but at Diſcretion; all the Perſons therein, to the number of Fifteen Hundred, were made Captives, and put into the Emperor's Gallies, which row on the Danube, for the Service of the Army. The Duke of Loraine having in this manner ſecured the Paſſes, which obſtructed the Navigation of the Danube, he cauſed the whole Army to march towards Peſt, and upon the 30*th* of June, he encamped about three Engliſh Miles diſtant from that City; over which, in the Evening about Sun-ſet, appeared a great Fire and Smoak, which was judged to ariſe from the Town, and that the Turks themſelves intended to Burn it to the ground: By break of Day in the Morning, the Duke mounting on Horſeback at the head of his Cavalry, (ordering the Foot to follow him at leiſure) he approached near the Walls, and gave orders to a Detachment of Dragoons to make diſcovery of the State and Condition of the place, which was ſoon found to have been ſet on Fire and abandoned by the Turks, only a few remained, who had not time with the reſt to pack up their Baggage and be gon; theſe endeavouring to make ſome little Oppoſition were killed, and three Colours taken; thoſe who eſcaped fled over the Bridge, and broak off Fifty of the Boats to prevent the Purſuit of the Enemy, which floating down the Current, were taken up by the Chriſtians. The Duke of Loraine being come to Peſt, cauſed the Fire to be extinguiſhed, which had as yet Burnt but one third part of the Town, all the Stores of Ammunition and Proviſion being ſaved: The Works and Fortifications were ordered to be repaired, and Cannon to be mounted on the Walls; but the Place proved too hot for them, being ſo much incommoded by inceſſant ſhooting from Buda, that there was no-abiding for them there; for Peſt lies in a beautiful Plain, and gives Denomination to the Country round about, which is called, Comitatus Peſthienſis: From Buda it hath a ſumptuous Proſpect, by the appearance of the Towers on the old Walls, and Spires of the Moſchs, but is ſo overtopt by Buda, that all the Cannon there can ſhoot into it; ſo that the Imperial Army quitted the Place, until it ſhould fall into their Hands, and follow the Fate of Buda, as an Appendage or Dependance thereof.

Peſt ſet on Fire by the Turks.

The Chriſtian Army repaſſes the Danube.

The Troops being with-drawn from Peſt, they marched back to Witzem, where two Bridges of Boats were making to paſs the River at the Iſland of St. Andrew's, where the River divides it ſelf in two Branches, and makes the Ferry over much more ſhort and eaſy. The Paſſage over the firſt Branch or Arm was not very difficult; but that on the farther ſide of the Iſland was much more hazardous, by reaſon that the Stream was broader and more rapid; and the Turks with 20,000 Men encamped within three Miles from the Banks of the River; but nothing ſeemed now too hard or dangerous to a victorious Army, and an invincible Captain; for whilſt the Bridge was finiſhing with incredible Expedition, ſome Soldiers for Spyes ſwam over to the other ſide, where having obſerved, that the Turks lay with much Security within their Camp, and without any motion; (which was a ſtrange thing, conſidering that they might eaſily have defended the River, and made the Paſſage over impoſſible) Five thouſand Foot, with ſome Pieces of Cannon were ferried over in Boats, where being landed without any diſturbance, they intrenched themſelves, and raiſed a Battery, from whence they could ſhoot into the Enemies Camp, and ſecure the Paſſage of the Water for the reſt of the Army. On the 10*th* of this Month, the Bridge being finiſhed, the whole Army paſſed over the ſame Day, and joyned themſelves with the other Body already on that ſide.

July

The Seraskier Aſſaults the Chriſtians.

The Seraskier being informed, that only a part of the Army was got over, he advanced againſt them with all his Horſe, and eight Hundred Janiſaries, and two ſmall Field-pieces; with him were the Paſha of Buda, and thirteen other Paſhas, leaving the reſt of the Janiſaries, and all other his Foot, with the Cannon about the diſtance of an Hour's March: The Attack which the Turks made was ſo ſuddain, that the Chriſtians had ſcarce time to put their Forces into order of Battail; but howſoever ſuch was the readineſs of this Army, and the good Diſcipline of it, that every Regiment and Troop at the firſt ſound of an Allarum took their Places without the leaſt Confuſion. The Duke of Loraine, at the head of his Cavalry, undertook to lead the Van, and there with ſuſtained the firſt ſhock of the Enemy with Carbine-ſhot only, ſtanding ſo firm and reſolute, that no breach could be made into their Ranks; in which time, the reſt of the Army had opportunity to put themſelves into poſture of Battle, which, upon their 1684.

He is repulſed and flies.

July

their Motion, appeared ſo formidable, that the Turks began to make a diſorderly Retreat, and to fly as faſt as their Horſes could carry them, until they came to the Place where the Janiſarres and Cannon remained: Howſoever, being cloſely purſued by the Poliſh Horſe, many of them came ſhort home, and ſeveral Colours were taken; nor was this Action without ſome loſs to the Chriſtians, and particularly of ſome Perſons of Note and Quality, as namely, The Count de Velheim, Bernardino Scotti, a Gentleman of Milan, with ſome other Voluntiers of Heroick Courage, who preſſing too forward to ſignalize their Valour, ended their days with much Honour and Glory. The next day being the 11*th*, the whole Chriſtian Army advanced towards Buda, between which, and a Party of the Turks there happened a Skirmiſh, to the diſadvantage of the latter; with which, and with a conſtant Train of other ill Succeſſes, the Turkiſh Army being cowarded and diſmayed, with-drew themſelves out of the open Plains, to ſeek ſhelter under Hills and Mountains, and lodged themſelves near St. Gerard's Mount; whilſt Major General Staremberg, advancing near the City, began to prepare Matters neceſſary towards a Siege.

The 13*th* the Turks ſet fire to the lower Town of Buda, and retired into the upper, which was ſituate on a Hill, and defended by a ſtrong Caſtle. The Fortifications hereof were not very regular, but made of old Towers without Baſtions; but the Garriſon conſiſting of Eight thouſand Men, was the beſt of its Strength, Commanded by five Paſhaes, and well ſupplied with all ſorts of Ammunition and Proviſion; the Governour was the Vizier of Buda, and under him, as his Deputy-Governour, was Shitan Ibrahim, of whom we ſhall hereafter have occaſion to give a more particular Character.

The Siege of Buda formed.

The 14*th* a ſmall Attack was given, and deſigned purpoſely as a good Omen to the Soldiery, who ſtill retained in their Memories, that the ſame Day of the Year paſt, the Turks had formed their Siege before Vienna; and this very Day the Duke of Loraine had brought his heavy Cannon to the places of Battery, and had now perfected a formal Siege againſt the capital City of Hungary: The next day the Cannon beginning to play, they made themſelves Maſters of the Ditch, and of St. Gerard's Mount, which Commands the Town, and thereon a Battery was raiſed. The Seraskier finding that his Army was diſmayed, and neither for their Courage, nor Numbers, a competent Match for their victorious Enemy, retired three Leagues diſtant from Buda, intending often to trouble and infeſt the Beſiegers with continual Alarums.

1684.

The Paſha of Maroz overthrown

Whilſt theſe things were thus acting, the Duke of Loraine received Advice, that the Paſha of Maroz, who was appointed to guard the Bridge of Eſſeck, was advanced with Two thouſand Five hundred Men to Vitrovitz, a Place about a League diſtant from the Camp, expecting Four hundred Men more under Command of the Bei of Gradiſca, with deſign to force their way into Buda: To prevent which, the Duke detached Four thouſand Croats under the Command of Count Tranſmandorf to march againſt them, and ordered the German Forces to ſtand all Night to their Arms to avoid a Surpriſe. Tranſmandorf marched until ſeven a Clock in the Morning always a-trot; and having about that time met the Paſha of Marotz, he immediately engaged with him, and charged him ſo furiouſly, that after ſome ſmall Reſiſtence, the Turks fled; of whom about a Hundred were killed in the Purſuit, and ſeveral Priſoners taken. After which Succeſs, Tranſmandorf returning back to the Camp, fortunately Encountred the Governour of Gradiſca with his Four hundred Men, who, going to joyn with the Paſha of Marotz, (of whoſe ill Succeſs he had as yet received no Intelligence) was engaged and defeated by him upon the firſt Charge or On-ſet, and had all been cut in pieces, had they not been favoured by the ſhelter and thickneſs of ſome neighbouring Woods. On this Occaſion the Croats took fourteen Colours, with ſeveral of their Cymbals and Trumpets, and twenty Priſoners: They loſt only fourteen of their Men, and had the Pillage of the Camp, with great ſtore of good Proviſions, with which they feaſted themſelves, and nouriſhed their Horſes.

And now let us leave the Duke of Loraine for a while before this City, employed in an Enterpriſe, which could not be effected until two Years aferwards, thô all that time a conſtant courſe of ill Fortune ran againſt the Turks: And let us ſee what Preparations were making at Venice, and recount the Actions and Atchievements which this Republick carried on this Year againſt the Turks, purſuant to the Proclamation of War lately publiſhed.

1684.

The Venetians prepare for War, and nominate their Officers.

The Doge of Venice, called Marco Antonio Guſtiniano, who entred upon the Governmernt the 26*th* day of April of this Year, together with the Council, made choice of theſe General Officers for carrying on the War: Namely, Franciſco Moroſini Captain General, Dominico Mocenigo Proveditor General of Dalmatia, the Prince of Parma General of the Infantry, Aleſſandro Molino and Antonio Bembo Captains extraordinary of the Ships, Paulo Michiel, Matthew Piſani and John Moroſini Commanders extraordinary of the Galeaſſes; and General Strazoldo quitted ted the Imperial Service for that of the Republick.

The whole Venetian Fleet conſiſted of Sixteen Gallies, ſix Galleaſſas, and ſixteen Sail of Ships; to them were joyned five of the Pope's Gallies, and ſeven of Malta, and four Gallies belonging to the Great Duke of Toſcany. With part of this Fleet the Captain General Moroſini put to Sea from the Coaſt of Italy, on the 10*th* of June, for the Iſland of Corfu, where the general Rendezvous for the whole Fleet was appointed: At this Place a Council of War was called, where all the General Officers were preſent, together with the Proveditor General Cornaro, and General Strazoldo; and by them it was unanimouſly reſolved to Attack the Iſland of Santa Maura.

Rendezvous at Corfu.

This Iſland of Santa Maura was formerly joyned to the Continent of Greece, and reckned amongſt the Weſtern, as thoſe of the Archi-pelago were amongſt the Eaſtern Iſlands; it was anciently known by the Name of Leucas, and was part of the Kingdom of Ulyſſes. It was once a Peninſula, adjoyning to Epirus by a narrow Iſthmus of Land, but at the great Charge and Labour of the Inhabitants of Corinth, it was cut off from the Continent, and made an Iſland: It is near the Morea, at the entrance into the Gulf of Lepanto, where was fought that famous Battle in the Year 1571.

Santa Maura.

Sultan Mahomet, the Son of Sultan Amurath, took this Iſland from the Venetians in the Year 1457. But with the Aid and Aſſiſtance of ſome Veſſels from the Pope, King Lewis the 12*th* of France, and the Knights of Rhodes, it was, after a bloudy Fight, recovered out of their Poſſeſſion, in the Reign of Bajazet the II, in the Year 1499, Benedetto Peſaro being General. But the Year following a Peace being made, it was reſtored to the Turks, conditionally, That the Iſland of Cephalania ſhould remain to the Venetians for ever. This Iſland being the chief Harbour at preſent, and Refuge of all the Pyrates and Corſairs of Barbary, which much infeſted the Gulf, and rendred the Navigation very unſecure, and which hindred the Venetians from being the abſolute Maſters of thoſe Seas, this Enterpriſe was reſolved to be the moſt neceſſary and methodical in order to more important Adventures.

Accordingly, on the 19*th* of July, the whole Fleet, together with Tartanas and Felucas carrying Land-forces, ſet Sail from Corfu, and the next day arrived at Little-more, then Cannon-ſhot diſtant from Santa Maura, where they caſt Anchor, and landed their Forces, which conſiſted of two Battalions of the Pope's, and of Malta Six hundred Men each, and Eight hundred Men drawn out of other Troops: Amongſt thoſe of Malta were a Hundred Knights, who, clad in their Coat-armours of red Sattin, with the white Croſs of their Order, made a ſplendid Appearance. The next day the whole Fleet entred the Port of Demata, which lies to the Eaſtward of the Town, and is capable to receive great numbers of Veſſels, and the Captain General Moroſini went in Perſon on ſhoar, taking a view of the ſeveral Poſts, in which the Forces had lodged themſelves, and of that particularly called Chiche, which was a Houſe of Pleaſure belonging to the Aga's Son, poſſeſſed by Captain Manetta. But before Moroſini thought fit to commit any Act of Hoſtility, he ſent to Summon the Place; and in a Writing ſet forth the Cauſe and Reaſons which moved the Venetians to raiſe a powerful Army againſt the Turk, who had violated the Peace, by harbouring the Corſaires of Barbary, and practiſed other Hoſtilities againſt the Subjects of that State: And that in caſe they did not Surrender up their Town and Iſland, the next Morning he would proceed to force them, and make uſe of the Priviledge and Power of a Conqueror. To which the Governour returned no other Anſwer, Than that God would puniſh the Venetians for violating the Peace, and making an unjuſt War upon the Grand Seignior. Whereupon, the Admiral-Flag being ſpread, which was the Signal of Battle, the Gallies and Galleaſſes made above Twelve hundred Shot againſt the Town, which did great Damage to the Houſes and Fortifications, and entirely ruined one of the Moſchs. Nor were the Turks idle, but fired continually, tho with no great hurt; for their Cannon being mounted too high, did not hinder the Forces of the Pope, Malta and Toſcany from poſſeſſing themſelves of the Suburbs, nor the Batteries from raiſing, which by direction of Lorenzo Venier, plaid on the Walls with good Succeſs, and did great Execution, and the Bombs which were thrown into the Town put all the Defendants into a Conſternation. For, on the firſt of Auguſt, the Batteries had razed a Bulwark to the Ground, and widned the Breach, and diſmounted four Pieces of the Enemies Cannon, and the Bombs had ſet Fire to ſeveral parts of the Town; and ſo far was the Siege carried on, in order to a general Aſſault, that on the 6*th* of Auguſt the Turks hung out a white Flag, as a Signal that they would Capitulate: Accordingly a Treaty was had, and Hoſtages given, and at length an Agreement was concluded, That the Turks with their Families might have Liberty to leave the Town, with ſo much, and no more than they could carry on their Backs. The Garriſon being Seven hundred Men, towards Summons ſent to Santa Maura.

The Batteries.

The Turks parly and ſurrender.

1684. wards the Evening marched forth with Sword and Muſquet, and were ſhip'd and carried on the farther Shoar of an Arm of the Sea; all the Chriſtian Slaves were ſet at Liberty, on Condition to ſerve on Ships and Gallies of the Republick, in the Quality of Seamen and Soldiers. The Venetians entred the Town at the Breach; the Plunder whereof, which was conſiderable, was given to the Soldiers: In the Place great ſtore of Proviſions were found, with Eighty Pieces of Cannon: The Venetians loſt about Two hundred Men in the Siege: Moroſini immediately cauſed the principal Moſch to be Bleſſed, in which Te Deum was ſung, and dedicated to St. Saviour, becauſe it was the 6th of Auguſt, on which day is the Feaſt of the Traſfiguration, when the Turks hung out the white Flag of Surrender. The Command of the Place was given to Lorenzo Venier, a noble Venetian, one of whoſe Anceſtors was Commander in chief of the Venetian Army, when Selimus was entirely defeated at the Battle of Lepanto.

The Fortifications of Santa Maura being repaired, and a Garriſon left in it; General Moroſini ſet Sail to the Port of Petula, and thence to the Port of Dragonetta, where he caſt Anchor, and landed his Army, which conſiſted of Two thouſand Venetians, about One thouſand of the Pope's Auxiliaries, and about Fifteen or Sixteen hundred Greeks. This Army advanced on the Plains; upon approach of which, ſeveral Turkiſh Troops, which were employdd to defend Paſſages, retired without any Reſiſtance, which gave opportunity to the Chriſtians to Burn four or five Villages; which having done, they returned to the Fleet and re-embarked themſelves. At the ſame time General Moroſini with his Gally got ſight of Patras and Lepanto; and thence Sailing to the Port of Damata, a Council of War was called, and there it was reſolved to Attack Preveza, without which, Santa Maura could not be ſecured: Preveza is a Fortreſs which now ſtands in the place of the ancient Nicopolis of Epirus, the Situation of which is very Commodious, for it Commands the entrance into the Gulf, and was anciently the Royal City of Pyrrhus. This Enterprize being reſolved, General Moroſini diſpeeded five Gallies and ſix Galleaſſes to approach the Caſtles of the Gomenizza, which being diſcerned by the Turks from Preveza, they ſent back thoſe Soldiers which they had lately drawn from thence, on ſuppoſition that the Venetians would make all their Attempt upon Preveza; which happened according to the Deſire and Intention of Moroſini, whoſe Aim it was to divide their Forces. The Army in the mean time having left Damata, came to an Anchor on the 20th of September, at the entrance into the Gulf; and the next day Captain Manetta, with Twenty four Barks, and ſome Brigantines, entring the Gulf, landed part of his Forces, which the Turks in vain endeavoured to hinder by great and ſmall Shot; and next Morning, by break of Day, the Gallies (which had anchored under the Hill of Mahomet Effendi) appeared within Muſquet-ſhot of the Place, which gave a Diverſion to the Turks, who having drawn all their Forces to that ſide, gave opportunity to the Chriſtian Forces to land on the other without much Annoyance, under the Conduct of General Strazoldo, which Errour, ſo ſoon as the Turks diſcovered, Shaban Paſha the Governour immediately ordered Five hundred Spahees to ride full ſpeed to Attack the Forces before they were landed; but before they could come, they found the Chriſtians already drawn up in Battalia, upon whom having made ſome ſlight Charge, they retreated again in diſorder with the loſs of ſeveral of their Men. 1684.

Preveza attacked.

Thus did the Chriſtians advance, without much difficulty, and make themſelves Maſters of the Out-town, and of the Hill of Mahomet Effendi, which Commands the City; and at the ſame time the Gallies and Galliots approached yet nearer to Preveza, when Moroſini thought it ſeaſonable to Summon the Town, letting them know, that in caſe they deferred the Surrender, until the laſt extremity, he would grant no Quarter, nor any Conditions whatſoever: But the Officer who commanded in chief under Shaban Aga, (who was gone to head Four thouſand Men without the Town, and obſerve the Motions of the Enemy) refuſed to read or receive the Letter, but barbarouſly ſhot the Meſſenger who brought it, having a Confidence the Governour, whoſe Deputy he was, would ſpeedily return and raiſe the Siege. Whereupon Moroſini, having viewed the Poſts and Situation of the Place, cauſed his Cannon and Bombs to be landed, and raiſed his Batteries, which played with ſo good Succeſs, that ſeveral parts of the Town were fired, and moſt of the Enemies Guns diſmounted, and thoſe which remained on their Carriages were ſo ill managed, that they did little or no Execution, for there was as yet of the Chriſtians but one Soldier killed, and five wounded. The Breach by this time was found very conſiderable, and on the 28th a Lodgment was made in the Ditch, and a Mine being ready to be Sprung, Orders were given to prepare for an Aſſault; which the Turks fearing to expect, hung out a white Flag, and offered to capitulate, and to accept the ſame Conditions, which were given to Santa Maura: But at length it was concluded, 1684. that Thirty only of the moſt conſiderable perſons amongſt them, might march out with their Arms and Baggage, and the reſt without Arms, and with no more than they could carry about them; and that all the Chriſtian Slaves ſhould be ſet at Liberty. Accordingly the Day following the Turks to the number of Two hundred Men marched out at the Gate towards the Sea; and were Embarked on ſome Grecian Boats with a Convoy, and were Landed within four Miles of Larta, about Two hundred of the Inhabitants remaining in the place. The Town being taken the Standard of St. Mark was ſet up on the Walls, and all the Turkiſh Colours and Banners taken down, and ſent to the Admiral Gally. In the Town were found Forty ſix Pieces of Cannon, Eighteen of which were Braſs, and carried Fifty five pounds of Ball. The place was well Stored with all ſorts of Proviſion, and with Muſquets and Bullets, and Six hundred Quintals of Powder. This Town was very beneficial to the Venetians, for it put them into an entire Poſſeſſion and Dominion of the Gulf, and the places of that Coaſt, the Fiſhing Trade whereof is ſo conſiderable, that it yielded to the Turks a Thouſand Crowns every year ariſing on the Cuſtoms thereof.

Preveza Surrendered.

The Auxiliary and Venetian Forces return to their Winter quarters.

Thus ended this Campagne to the Honour and Reputation of the Venetian Arms: And the Auxiliary Gallies and Forces returned home, having been more diminiſhed by Fatigues, and making Incurſions into the Land, than by ſlaughter or loſs ſuſtain'd from the Enemy. The Venetians took their Winter-quarters in ſeveral Iſles belonging to the Republick. Molino, Captain extraordinary of the Ships, brought back his Squadron to Corfu; but General Moroſini wintered at Preveza, with deſign to render that place impregnable, and to engage the Greeks, who are a People of an unconſtant Humour, to remain ſteady in that Duty and Faith, which they cauſed them to Swear to the Venetian Republick; whilſt theſe things were carrying on, ſome matters of leſs moment were acted in lighter Skirmiſhes near Cliſſa, from whence the Turks carried away ſeven Priſoners; but being purſued by the Morlaques, they were again reſcued by them, and forced to quit their whole Booty, with the loſs of Fifty of their Men killed on the place. Seignior Antonio Zeno, Proveditor extraordinary of Cataro came to Peraſto, and pillaged, and burnt all the Towns and Villages near Caſtel Novo, and hinder'd the Turks from carrying in their Harveſt, and ſeized great Stores of Wheat, and other Corn which he carried to Cliſſa. To compleat the Succeſſes of this year a Galliot of Dulcigno was taken, Commanded by Solyman Reis a famous Corſaire. In the Fight Solyman himſelf with Twenty of Men was killed, and Twenty two Chriſtians were Releaſed and ſet at Liberty, whom this Pyrate was carrying into Slavery.

And now having given a Relation of the Venetian Succeſſes of this year, it will be time to return to the German Camp, which we left at the Siege before Buda.

The Vizier of Buda, ſlain. He is ſucceeded by Shitan Ibrahim.

The Siege, as we have ſaid, being compleatly formed, on the 12*th* of July a Mine was ſprung near the great Tower, which tho it had done great effect, yet it plainly appeared, That the Turks were too ſtrong as yet in the Town to be aſſaulted at the entrance of any Breach, until ſuch time as their numbers were more diminiſhed by a longer Siege. On the 14*th* the Vizier of Buda, called Kara Mahomet, died of a Wound, which he had received on his Face; he was one of the beſt Officers amongſt the Turks. Shitan Ibrahim ſucceeded him in the Government: He was a Perſon very well known to the Engliſh Nation, which had lived in Turky, to which he bore a ſignal kindneſs and reſpect, and particularly to that worthy Perſon Sir Jonathan Dawes, with whom he cultivated a Friendſhip, which was extraordinary and unuſual for a Turk towards a Chriſtian. When I came firſt into Turky he was then Teſterdar, or Lord Treſurer; whom I have ſeen when he was giving out the Pay to the Army to beſtow Mony on the Earl of Winchelſea's Pages and Servants, who being then Lord Ambaſſadour Extraordinary to the Grand Seignior, was returning from an Audience which he had had with the Grand Vizier. He was afterwards Married to the Grand Seignior's Siſter, and was ſent Paſha to Gran Cairo, which is an Office of the higheſt Degree amongſt the Turks; having remained three years in that Employment, which is the uſual time allowed to that Government, he was then recalled, and taxed at Six hundred Purſes of Money; he was forced to lay down one half in ready Money, and to pay the other Moiety in a few Days afterwards, upon Penalty of being committed to a Priſon, from whence he had never been delivered but by Death. He was afterwards made Paſha of Damaſcus, then of Aleppo, and with his Forces was engaged to paſs by Sea to the Siege at Candia. I remember him at Smyrna, when he embarked there, and then he told me, how grievous it was for him and his Men to leave their Horſes, (than which nothing was more pleaſing and dear) and to Embark on a Gally, and paſs the Seas to which he and his Soldiers had never been accuſtomed. Afterwards he was employed in many great Offices, to which he had been bred from his Youth, and in which he had deported himſelf with ſingular Reputation and Eſteem, being naturally of a frank and a generous Temper: He was then about Eighty years of Age, and nothing declined, but ſtill as Robuſt and Vigorous as if he were but Forty, when he defended Buda, and ſucceeded the Paſha who was killed on the Walls; and in this Condition we ſhall leave him for a year or two, until being involved in the Common Fate and Misfortunes of the Turks, he yielded to the Deſtiny which was provided for him.

The Character of Shitan Ibrahim.

Sallies from the Town.

On the 16th of Auguſt the Beſieged made a Sally, and were beaten back with ſome loſs; but the next day they had better Fortune, and killed many of the Chriſtians, as they did alſo in ſeveral other Sallies. But to encourage the Chriſtians in this Siege, ſeveral Deſerters eſcaped out of the Town, and to flatter the Party into whoſe Hands they were fallen, they told a thouſand Falſities concerning the diſtreſſes and wants of the Town. But notwithſtanding all their Reports, it was concluded neceſſary, to open the Breach in the Wall of Buda much wider than it was before; to which end the Cannon plaid continually upon that part of the Town, where the Aſſault was to be made. But in the mean time to diſturb theſe proceedings, the Seraskier Paſha with all the Force of the Ottoman Army, appeared often times in ſight of the Camp, which gave ſuch frequent Allarums, that the Duke of Loraine thought fit to draw out a great part of his Army to engage them, leaving all the left Wing in the Approaches, under Command of Count Staremberg, General of the Artillery, and with the remainder of the Infantry, and all the Cavalry he marched between the upper City, and Mount St. Gerard, to meet the Seraskier; and ſo ſoon as the Way opened into the Vally between Buda and Strigonium, he diſcover'd a great Body of Turkiſh Horſe upon a Hill oppoſite to the Army, upon view of which the Chriſtian Army drew into Battalia; and thô the way to an Engagement with the Enemy was rough, craggy and very ſteep; yet ſuch was the Spirit, which by frequent Victories had poſſeſſed the Chriſtian Soldiery, that with incomparable Valour, their right Wing moved over all the difficulties of the Ground againſt the left Wing of the Turks; but they fearing to ſtand the Shock, made their Retreat to another Hill within Cannon-ſhot of Buda, where their right Wing was drawn up: The Imperial Troops ſtill continuing to advance againſt the Enemy, detached Two thouſand of their choice Horſe, who making as if they intended to form another Line before the Front, poſted themſelves under the Walls of the City; during which time the main Body of the Turks ſtood firm, and kept their Ground, until the Chriſtians were come within Muſquet-ſhot; and then their formoſt Troops fell violently into the Trenches on the right Hand, whilſt a Sally was made out of the City by the Janiſaries on the left: And ſo Furious was the Charge they made, that they gained the firſt Poſt, which was maintain'd by Count Furſtemburg, Captain the Regiment of Grana, and paſſed to the ſecond Guard, defended by a Captain of the Regiment of Baden, and proceeded even to the third Poſt under one of the Batteries. But Count Aſpremont, and Colonel Bek, with two Battalions coming to their aſſiſtance, as did alſo the Battalions of reſerve under Staremberg and Souches, the Enemy was ſo vigorouſly repulſed by them, that they not only recovered the ſeveral Poſts which they had loſt, but gained a Fort from the Enemy, which was Situated on the Danube, and took four Standards from them, with the Slaughter of many Janiſaries.

A Fight before Buda.

A Sally from the Town.

At the ſame time the Enemies left Wing of Horſe was ſo warmly charged by the Imperialiſts, that they were put into a diſorderly Flight, and run over and trampled down their Foot; howſoever Rallying again they made a ſtand, as if they had intended to renew the Fight: But obſerving the right Wing of the Chriſtians to advance towards them, and the left Wing to come into their aſſiſtance, they durſt not adventure to ſtand the Shock, but fled in full Career; but ſuch as were worſe mounted, and truſted not to the Swifneſs of their Horſes, in a deſperate manner made their way into the City for Refuge. This enterpriſe of the Turks coſt the Chriſtians Three hundred Men; thoſe of Qualitie killed were the Counts of Fuſtemberg and Carlovitz, and the Counts Guido Staremberg, and Scalemberg were wounded, for which the Turks paid moſt dearly, leaving Seven thouſand of their Companions ſlain upon the place.

An Aſſault on lower Buda.

The Seraskier, and his Army being thus repulſed with great ſlaughter and much diſmayed; the Duke of Loraine reſolved to attempt the lower Town by the Breach which was made: The which was accordingly executed by the Baron of Aſti, who in deſpight of the Granadoes, and continual Vollies of the Muſquets ſurmounted the Ruins, and took poſſeſſion of the Breach; and being ſeconded by other Forces, he proceeded and made himſelf Maſter of the more inward Retrenchments, deſtroying the Paliſadoes and the Works in ſuch manner, that the Defendants had no other Shelter than their Houſes remaining to them.

1684.

The lower Buda and Caſtle taken.

By this time Count Tulli and a Captain of the Regiment of Mansfield were come to their aſſiſtance, and together with Aſti advanced to the Gate which opens to the Danube; where after a ſharp Fight, with much effuſion of Blood on both ſides, they forced open the Gate, and gave entrance to Colonel Culemfels with Five hundred Men, who being alſo followed by great numbers of Hayducks, they ſo overwhelmed the the Turks with their power, that they fled for refuge to the Caſtle: But being cloſely purſued by the Chriſtians, who were now mixed with them, thoſe in the Caſtle feared to open their Gates, leſt by giving entrance to their Friends they ſhould receive their Enemies; ſo that as many as were excluded out of the Caſtle fell by the German Sword; others betaking themſelves to their Houſes, barred their Doors, and hid themſelves in Vaults and Cellars: But there being no protection for the miſerable, Fire was applyed to the Houſes, whereby thoſe who had eſcaped the Sword, periſhed in the Flames.

Two parties of Turks Defeated.

Virovitz Surrendred.

In this Glorious Action it is ſaid, That 12.000 Janiſaries were Slain, with the loſs only of Seventy five or Eighty Chriſtians killed and wounded; after which the ſeveral Poſts, and Gates of the Town were well ſecured; and Orders given to Attack the Palanca and Caſtle of St. Gerards; which at the firſt ſight, and appearance only of an Attempt, the Defendants abandoned, carrying away with them all their Cannon and Ammunition. The lower Town being thus ſubdued and poſſeſſed by the Chriſtians, the very ſame Night Batteries were raiſed on St. Gerard's Mount, and Trenches and Approaches made on that ſide, whereby the upper City of Buda was more cloſely Beſieged, and the Enemy reduced within a more narrow Compaſs. Whilſt theſe matters were Acting, Count Leſly with a Body of Fifteen thouſand Men, made an Attempt upon the City and Caſtle of Virovitz, which is in Sclavonia, Situated on the Frontiers of Croatia, and is ſometimes called Berſeck. To Succour this place the Seraſkier cauſed ſeveral Troops to advance, who encountring a Detachment of Eight hundred Croats, they put them into Diſorder, and cauſed them to Retreat unto their main Body, with the loſs of three of their Standards; but purſuing them too far, their Career was ſtopt by the Army of Leſly, who vigorouſly repulſed them, and put them to Flight with the loſs of Five hundred of their Men, and Two hundred killed on the ſide of the Chriſtians. This good Succeſs was ſeconded by another happy Encounter which Count Trotmanſdorf, with a Party of Four thouſand Croats, had over a Party of Two thouſand Turks, deſigned by the Paſha of Marotz (who was appointed to Guard the Bridge of Eſſeck) to Succour the Town and Caſtle of Virovitz; for they were all defeated by him, as was alſo another Party of Fifteen hundred Horſe, who were marching with all diligence to joyn with the Two thouſand lately routed and diſperſed. Thus the Town and Caſtle having loſt all their hopes of Succour and Relief, they ſpread a white Flag on the Walls, which demonſtrated their intentions to Capitulate. Accordingly a Treaty being had, ſeveral particulars were agreed, and the places Surender'd: The Turkiſh Garriſon, which conſiſted of about One thouſand Soldiers, were permitted to march forth without their Arms, unleſs Fifteen of the principal Officers, who had liberty to go forth with their Horſes and Arms; the reſt were to have no more than what they could carry on their Backs. The Turks having quitted the City and Caſtle, the Chriſtians ſupplied it with a Garriſon of Two hundred Men, under the Command of the Baron of Schelardt. The News of the loſs of Virovitz, put all the Country thereabouts into ſuch Conſternation, that ſeveral places were abandoned by the Turks, and a way opened to General Leſly to march without any impediment to the Bridge of Eſſeck.

1684.

The Proceedings at the Siege of Buda.

The ill Condition of the Beſiegers.

In the mean time the Approaches, and Works before Buda proceeded with infinite diligence and labour, ſo that by the 26th Day of July, they were advanced within Sixty Paces of the Counterſcarp: Likewiſe other Batteries were raiſed of Twenty five Pieces of great Cannon, and Twelve Mortar-pieces, which fired continually; and on the ſide of Peſt, they annoied the Turks with long Guns, and ſmall Pieces of Ordnance, that they were not able to approach near the River for Water, of which there was great ſcarcity and want in the Town. The Batteries not doing the Execution which was expected, by Reaſon that the Walls were filled with Earth, endeavours were made to Under-mine a corner of the Counterſcarp; and on that ſide towards Strigonium to advance the Works within Sixty Paces of the Tower: In which Attempts One hundred and twenty ſix Germans were killed in one day and night. Within the Town they were induſtrious and brave, every Janiſary behaving himſelf, with Reſolution and indefatigable Labour: And on the other ſide, Without the Town the Soldiers were haraſſed, and tyred with continual Watchings and Pains; and the Pioneers and Labourers working beyond their ſtrenght, in the exceſſive heats fell into Malignant Fevers, and Diſeaſes of the Camp, by which the numbers of thoſe People being greatly diminiſhed, the Mines and Works advanced very ſlowly.

On

1684.

On that ſide towards Strigonium, the impediments and hindrances were as great, as on the other; for the Defendants continually Fired upon the Labourers, which obſtructed them in ſuch manner, that it was impoſſible to joyn their Trenches to the Wall of the Baſtion which Flanked the Curtain; and ſuch ſhowers of Granadoes, and Vollies of ſmall Shot were thrown amongſt them, that they were forced to deſiſt from their Work, and to proceed by Mining the Earth, which required much time, and retarded the Conqueſt of the place.

On the 30*th* of Auguſt, about Sun-riſing the Turks made a Furious Sally into the Trenches of the Germans, cauſing them to Fly, with the loſs of Forty or Fifty Men; but other Troops coming to their Succour, they were forced to Retire in much Confuſion and Diſorder, and endeavouring an Eſcape by the Breaches in the Walls, and narrow Avenues, they expoſed themſelves to the Swords and Fire Arms of their Enemies, who deſtroyed them with great Slaughter.

Sept.

At the beginning of September, the Rains fell in ſuch abundance, that the Soldiers in ſome of the Trenches remain'd a whole Day up to the middle in Water, which increaſed the Diſeaſes of the Camp, from which ſome of the Commanders were not freed; and particularly the Duke of Loraine, who became ſo indiſpoſed in his Health, that he was conſtrained to Retire unto Old Buda for eaſe and remedy, where he continued not above four or five Days, before he returned again to the Camp; during this time the Turks made other Sallies upon the Chriſtians, for ſeveral Days, to their great loſs and diſcouragement; for beſides Three hundred Common Soldiers, many principal Officers were killed and wounded; amongſt which thoſe of chief Note were the Marquis Cavalieri, Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiment of Gran, Count Tirheim a Captain of the Regiment of Baden were ſlain, and Major General Schaffemberg, and the Marquis of Parella, with ſeveral other Officers were wounded. But to ſuport the Spirits of the Chriſtians, which were not a little diſmayed by theſe loſſes, and the great difficulties which were yet to be overcome; the Bavarian Infantry fortunately came to their Succours, (tho thoſe of Franconia were Countermanded) which ſo enlivened, and cheared up the Hearts of the drooping Camp, That the Duke of Loraine ſent a menacing Meſſage to the Governour of Buda, giving him to underſtand, that in caſe he ſtood out longer and refuſed to ſurrender, until he was forced thereunto by a General Aſſault, which he was preparing to make, that then he would put all to the Sword, giving Quarter to none, nor ſparing Age nor Sex. To which Summons he returned this anſwer, That in ſuch Caſe he would neither demand Mercy, or Quarter for his own Perſon, nor for any of the Soldiers, or Inhabitants of that place: And on the other ſide he declared, That he would give no Quarter to the Beſiegers, but when they fell into his Hands, would treat them with the ſame uſage, which was threatned unto them: And to ſhew how much he was in earneſt, he cauſed Forty Chriſtian Priſoners to be brought before him on the Walls, and in Preſence of the Perſon who brought the Summons, he commanded them all to be put to Death; ſaying, That if it were in his Power to Maſſacre the whole Chriſtian Army, he would do it with as little Remorſe, as he executed his preſent Rage on thoſe miſerable Wretches: And it being farther told this Vizier, that the Duke of Bavaria had in Perſon, and with 30.000 Men reinforced the Army which encompaſſed the City: He made anſwer, That he knew very well what a Petty King of Germany meant, and that his Three thouſand Men which he had brought with him, could not terrify him who commanded a Place, where the Soldiers were many and brave, and where was no want of Ammunition and Proviſions.

Sallies from the Town.

Summons ſent to the Town.

The Viziers Anſwer.

His Cruelty.

On the 8*th*, The Chriſtians Sprang a Mine under one of the Towers, where the Turks had placed their principal Battery; and at Night Sprang three or four more under the Curtain, but not with ſo good effect as was expected: Howſoever, they had brought their Attacks to the very Ditches of the Town and Caſtle, and had made a Lodgment upon one of the Breaches.

On the 9*th* and 10*th*, Several other Mines were fired with ſuch Succeſs, that they overthrew a great part of the Wall, and opened ſo wide a ſpace, that four or five Carts might enter a-breaſt: Howſoever, it was not thought adviſable to make an Aſſault, by Reaſon that the Defendants had formed ſeveral Retrenchments within, and guarded them with many Troops and Batteries: And beſides, the Infantry were ſo weakned by Diſſenteries, and other Sickneſſes, that it was not thought fit to hazard them upon ſo deſperate an Attempt. Howſoever, having fired a Mine at Kulakupee with good effect, they ſeconded it with a furious Aſſault, but were again repulſed with much loſs, and great ſlaughter of the common Soldiers; and the Counts of Harach and Naſſau, and the Major of the Regiment of Mansfeldt were all killed; and the Counts of Staremberg and Auerſberg were amongſt the number of the wounded. Amongſt theſe Diſorders and Diſcouragements, five Chriſtians found means to make their their Eſcape out of the Town, and informed the General, that the Turks had raiſed two Batteries each of five Pieces of Cannon upon a Horn-work which was paliſadoed, and was guarded by another Tower behind this Work, and joyned to a more inward Wall made of Earth above nine Foot thick: That there was alſo a Ditch and Paliſadoes behind the Breach, and that there were ſtill 20 .000 Men within the Town, who were capable to bear Arms; and that the principal Officers upon hopes of being relieved by the Seraskier (as was aſſured them by ſome Soldiers lately come from Belgrade, and the Bridge of Eſſeck) had reſolved to maintain the Town to the laſt and utmoſt Extremity: Howſoever that there was ſome diviſion amongſt them; for thô the Inhabitants ſeem'd reſolute to ſtand out unto the laſt drop of their Blouds, fearing leſt they ſhould be treated like the Garriſon of Virovitza, yet the Janiſaries (who had no other Concernment in the Place, than their own Lives) proteſted that in caſe they were not ſpeedily relieved by the Seraskier, they would conſtrain the Governour to ſurrender upon Capitulations.

The Chriſtians make an Aſſault and are repulſed.

The ill Condition of the Leaguer.

If the Garriſon of Buda were in a bad Condition, the Imperial Camp in the Leaguer was not in a much better; for moſt of the Officers were either killed, ſick or wounded; and ſuch was the ſcarcity of all Proviſions, cauſed by the Obſtructions which the Seraskier had laid in the way to intercept the Convoys, which fetched them from far diſtant Places, that the proportion of Meat, and weight of Bread, diſtributed to every Soldier, was much diminiſh'd; ſo that the Siege had then been raiſed had not the Duke of Bavaria (as we have ſaid) come to the Camp on the 9th of September, with his Infantry, which gave new Hopes and Encouragement to continue the Siege; thô the Death of General Dunewaldt in his Tent, who had the Reputation of a valiant and an experienced Soldier, did very much add to the Sorrow and Diſcouragement of the Camp.

Sallies made by the Turks.

Still did the Turks continue to make their Sallies with much Bravery, in one of which they ſpiked or nailed three Pieces of Cannon. The Prince of Saxony Eiſenach had his Leg taken off with a great Shot, and General Kops fighting valiantly at the Head of his Men was wounded, and died ſhortly afterwards in his Tent. But it was very obſervable, how Forty ſtout Turks, naked to the Waſt, behaved themſelves with two-handed broad Swords, hewing and cutting down all before them; they advanced as far as to the River-ſide, and having covered the Ground with dead Bodies, they returned with the loſs of few of their number into the Town.

The Vizier's Orders to the Seraſkier.

The Duke of Loraine *Marches after the Se*raskier.

The Reinforcement which the Duke of Bavaria brought to the Chriſtian Camp, put the Turks into an Apprehenſion that the Town would certainly be taken, unleſs it were relieved by ſome ſignal Succeſs of the Seraskier's Army within the Lines of the Chriſtians; which the Turks ſpeedily deſigned ſo ſoon as they were reinforced by ſome Troops, which were daily expected. After ſome time, the Seraskier received a Letter from the Grand Vizier, that it was impoſſible for him to ſend any conſiderable Recruits; having been obliged to diſpeed ſuch Troops, as were with him, to the Dardanelles, Tenedos and Morea, to prevent the Landing of the Venetian Army, which had already made themſelves Maſters of Santa Maura. And that therefore he ſhould ſupply the want of numbers by his extraordinary Vigilance and Art, and to hazard every thing rather than ſuffer Buda to fall into the Hands of the Enemy. The Seraskier accordingly marched with about 25 .000 Men, or at moſt 27 .000 to Alba Regalis, and encamped before the Town, with intention very ſpeedily to diſturb the Siege; but hearing that the Duke of Bavaria was come thither with a very conſiderable Force, he altered his Deſign, and marched towards the Bridge of Eſſeck, to fight thoſe Troops which were ſent thither under the Command of Count Erdedi, the General of Croatia, and to hinder them from burning the Bridge, or taking the Forts which covered it. Count Leſlie in the mean time followed the Seraskier to obſerve his Motion, and aſſiſt Erdedi; which the Duke of Loraine conceiving not of Force ſufficient to oppoſe themſelves againſt the whole Turkiſh Army; he recalled all his Cavalry from the Frontier Towns, and thoſe which blocked up Newhauſel, and with three Regiments of Foot lately come from Moravia, and ſome of the Bavarian Forces, he departed from the Camp on the 16*th*, with reſolution to Engage the Seraskier, leaving the whole Conduct of the Siege to the Elector of Bavaria. But the Seraskier fearing to hazard the whole Affair on the fortune of a Battle, retired under the Cannon of Alba Regalis. Whereupon five Regiments of Horſe, and a Thouſand Foot, were ordered to Poſt and Fortify themſelves on certain Hills, by which the Turkiſh Army was neceſſarily to paſs, and could not move without being obſerved by them.

The Bavarians advance their Works.

In the mean the Batteries, which the Bavarians had raiſed, had begun to open a wide Breach; and on that ſide by the Water, their Works were advanced one third in length of the lower Town; and ſeveral Redoubts were perfected to impede and diſturb the Seraskier in his March from Alba Regalis, 1684. Regalis, towards the Siege of Buda: The Expectations were great of the coming of the Bavarian Horſe, and other Cavalry from the parts near Presburg, under the Command of Count Caraffa, and alſo of the Swediſh Infantry, which were now much wanted at this Siege.

The Rains which fell in ſuch great abundance on the 18*th* at Night, did greatly retard the progreſs of the Works which the Bavarians were making, thô their Batteries had good effect upon that Angle, which was contiguous to the Tower on the Caſtle ſide; but the Approaches appeared daily more difficult than before, and the Works on the River-ſide proceeded ſlowly, and on the ſide of the Curtain, the Miners were not able to advance above three Pikes in length.

The Duke of Loraine being returned to the Camp, the Bavarians who had the Attack by the River-ſide, ſprang a Mine under the Tower with ſo good Succeſs, that it overthrew a great part of the Wall, with one of the Gates: They alſo made a Line of Communication, which joyned their Attack with that of Count Maximilian de Staremberg: The Defendants at the ſame time made ſeveral Attempts to enter the Lines of Bavarians, but could not prevail, by reaſon that the Entrance was ſtrongly fortify'd; and farther, to defend themſelves, they made ſeveral Retrenchments within the Town, and pulled down ſeveral Houſes, covered the Streets with Beams to caſt off Granadoes, and hinder the Bombs from doing hurt and damage to the Houſes. The 20*th* of this Month the Defendants had the good fortune to ſeize a Boat laden with Proviſions, as it was going to the Imperial Camp, which cauſed much Joy in the City, whereby the Report which ſome Fugitives made of the ſcarcity and want of Proviſions in the Place, was clearly confirmed: And the ſame day a Party of Fifteen hundred Turks attacked ſome Foragers ſent from the Leaguer, of whom they killed ſeveral, and took ſome Priſoners, with the laden Waggons, the reſt making their Eſcape as well as they could.

The Beſieged take a Boat with Proviſions.

In fine, the Seraskier being reſolved once more to attempt the Relief of Buda, raiſed his Camp on the 21*ſt* from under the Walls of Alba Regalis, and began his March; of which the Duke of Loraine having Advice by a Polonian, who was eſcaped out of the Hands of the Turks, immediately drew out his Forces into the appointed Places, and with ſuch Order, as was lately agreed at a Council of War, where they attended all day for the coming of the Enemy; which not appearing, the Forces drew off towards the Evening into their ſeveral Quarters, having been greatly incommoded by the Rains, which had continued all that day to fall in ſuch abundance. Howſoever, the day following, Two thouſand Turks attacked the Lines in two places with much Reſolution, endeavouring to force their Paſſage into the Town; but finding great Reſiſtance, they were beaten off with conſiderable loſs, leaving two Standards in the Hands of the Imperialiſts. Whilſt this Attack was made, Fifteen Hundred Horſe and Foot made a Sally out of the Town, and cleared all the Trenches before them, and advanced to the very Batteries, killing about Two hundred Men; but ſome Squadrons coming to their Relief, forced them back with the loſs of Four hundred Men.

The Seraskier endeavours to raiſe the Siege.

1684.

A Sally out of the Town.

The Seraskier, who was retreated to his Camp about two Leagues diſtant from the Siege, kept the Chriſtians in a continual Alarum, and on the 23*d* made as if he would have attempted the Lines once more; but the Mettle of the Turks was not ſo warm and hot as formerly; howſoever, Four hundred of their Men wading over a marſhy Ground, up to the Armpits in Mire and Water, found a Way, which before that time, was eſteemed unpaſſable; and got into the Town, except ſome few, who, ſticking in the Mire, were birded off and killed with Muſquet-ſhot.

By this time the Bavarian Troops being come, with three German Regiments from Bohemia, the Duke of Loraine eſteemed himſelf in a Condition able to engage the Turkiſh Army, and ſo marching out of the Lines with a conſiderable Body, he followed the Enemy, and provoked them to a Battle; but the Seraskier having already performed his Deſign, by putting ſome Men into the Town, he declined the Fight, ſo that the Duke of Loraine without other Action returned again to the Siege; but before they entred the Lines, the Garriſon made a deſperate Sally both with Horſe and Foot, and with ſuch Succeſs, that they drove the Beſiegers out of their Trenches, filled up ſome of their Works with Earth, levelled one of their Batteries, and killed above Three hundred Men upon the Place; and after having routed the Bavarians, they fell in upon the Quarters of the Imperialiſts, who being leſs haraſſed than the others, gave them a Repulſe with equal loſs.

A Sally out of the Town.

On the 25*th* the Seraskier appeared a third time in ſight of the Leaguer, ſhewing as if he intended to offer Battle; upon appearance of which, the Chriſtians drew out of their Lines; but whilſt they were ranging themſelves into a poſture of Battle, a Detachment of Four thouſand Horſe were diſpeeded under covert of the Hills, and before they were diſcovered, aſſailed a Quarter of the Imperialiſts, which was defended only by two Regiments of Horſe, and two Battalions of Foot, whom charging by Surpriſe, they totally defeated, and killed above a thouſand Men, amongſt which were Count Tilly and ſeveral other Officers of Note. During this Conſternation in the Chriſtian Camp, a Thouſand Turks ſheltring themſelves under the ſhadow of the Hills, found a Paſſage into the Town.

A Defeat given the Chriſtians.

The Seraskier retires.

The Difficulties of the Siege.

The ill Condition of the Chriſtian Camp.

The Elector of Bavaria, and the Duke of Loraine being much heated and incenſed with theſe Succeſſes of the Enemy, reſolved with ſome Hungarian and Polonian Horſe, and ſome Regiments of Foot, to Attack the Turks in their Camp; but the Seraskier having done his Buſineſs by ſending Relief and Recruits into the Town, retired under the Cannon of Alba Regalis, and there fortified himſelf ſo well, having a mooriſh or fenny Ground before him, that it was impoſſible to force his Camp, or hinder the Alarums which ſeveral Parties detached from the Turkiſh Army, appearing ſometime on the Hills, and then again in ſight of the Leaguer, did daily give them, and diſturbed much the proceeding of the Mines and other Works. The Town it ſelf was raiſed in an advantageous Situation; the Walls were ſo ſtrong, and filled with Earth, that notwithſtanding the many Batteries, they could not make a Breach wide enough for four Men to enter a-breaſt; nor could it well be expected, that they ſhould be ſtarved or conſtrained by Famine to make a Surrender, during the ſhort remainder of this Year's Seaſon; for indeed this Governour of the Town, had ſo well husbanded the Proviſions, that there was no ſcarcity as yet of any thing neceſſary for Human Suſtenance; and beſides, the Defendants had ſome times the fortune to ſeize certain Boats laden with Proviſions, deſigned for the Chriſtian Camp; for it was not poſſible wholly to debar them from all Communication with the River: Wherefore there ſeemed no other way left to win the Town, but by a vigorous Aſſault, the which alſo had ſo much difficulty and hazard in it, that it ſeemed neither prudent nor reaſonable to be laviſh of the Lives of Men, in an Attempt ſo deſperate, that there ſeemed little or no hope of the Succeſs thereof. The Garriſon within, notwithſtanding their frequent Slaughters conſiſted of Ten thouſand Juniſaries and others, all reſolute and approved Men, as had been evidenced by many Proofs: On the other ſide, the Imperial Army was greatly diminiſhed; the Horſes for the moſt part were dead, or unfit for Service for want of Forage; all the Troops were haraſſed, weak and ſickly; the Duke of Loraine himſelf ill diſpoſed in his Health, and in danger of a Relapſe; the beſt Officers for the moſt part were either killed or wounded; ſo that conſidering all theſe Matters together, it was not to be expected that the Siege could long continue; beſides all which the Rains fell in ſuch extream abundance, that the Trenches were filled with Water, and all the Mines and Works ruined and deſtroyed. Howſoever the Bavarians being but lately come, and not ſo much haraſſed as the other Soldiers, on the 24th at Night advanced their Poſt near to the Wall at the Foot of the Caſtle-ditch. On the ſame day a Body of Two thouſand of the Enemy appeared in ſight of the Leaguer; who, thô they retired again without any Action, yet they cauſed an Alarum in the Camp, and ſeveral Troops were drawn out againſt them, which made a Diverſion, and retarded the Proceedings which were advancing againſt the Town.

The Bavarians being the moſt active of any, had made a Breach in the Wall near the Caſtle, which they ſtormed, and made themſelves Maſters of a Redoubt or Bulwark on the Wall; but the Turks being very ſtrong on that ſide, gave them not ſufficient time to ſhelter and ward themſelves, but forced them to diſlodge with the loſs of Three hundred Men.

Octob.

The Chriſtians receive a great Loſs.

On the 2d of October a Battery of Sixteen Pieces of Cannon of Twenty ſix Pound Bullet, on the ſide of the Imperialiſts, had entirely razed and beaten down a little Tower belonging to the Caſtle, and next day they endeavoured with Four thouſand Men to make a deſcent into the Ditch, and poſſeſs the Breach; but the Turks having with great induſtry and diligence Repaired it again with Earth, Faggots and Paliſadoes, defended it with ſuch vigorous Reſiſtance, that after a moſt bloudy and deſperate Fight the Chriſtians were droven thence with the loſs of Fifteen hundred Men, amongſt which was a Major, and ſeveral Captains and Officers belonging to the Bavarian Troops.

A Sally from the Town upon the Bavarians.

Howſoever the Imperialiſts and Bavarians not being diſmayed with all theſe Loſſes, continued to advance their Works at the Gate towards the River, and to make their Batteries on the Breach, which as yet, was not wide enough for two Men to paſs a-breaſt; but being a little more opened, the Bavarians ſtormed it for the ſpace of five Hours; and thô they were ſeveral times repulſed, yet they lodged themſelves on part of the Breach, from whence they diſcovered a Fort-Royal with four Baſtions, which the Turks had built in the middle of the Town, with intent to fly thither for Sanctuary, in caſe of the laſt Extremity; but that Hour was not yet come; for the Defendants, anima-

1684. ted with their late Succeſſes, made another Sally on the 14*th* inſtant with ſuch numbers, that they diſlodged the Bavarians from the Breach, drove them out of their Trenches, filled up part of their Works, and killed Two hundred of their Men; to Succour which the Elector coming himſelf in Perſon, repulſed the Enemy with a great Slaughter, and cauſed his Soldiers and Labourers to open their Works again, and repair to their former Stations. The Miners ſtill continued to Labour, but received conſiderable impediments by Springs of Water, which overflowed their Works.

The Seraskier kept the Chriſtian Camp in a continual Alarum until the Raiſing of the Siege: And whenſoever he came ſo near as to engage with the Enemy, the Defendants at the ſame time Sallied from the Town, and retired again with different Succeſſes, ſometimes with advantage and at other times with loſs. On the 24*th*, a general Alarum was given over all the Camp, that the Seraskier with all his Cavalry, and Eight thouſand Janiſaries drawn out from Alba Regalis and other parts, and Fifteen Pieces of Artillery, was come within two Leagues of the Lines; upon which Report, all the German Cavalry mounted on Horſe-back, and drew themſelves up into a Poſture of Defence; but it proved a falſe Alarum, and ſerved only to increaſe the Fatigues and weariſomneſs of the Soldiery. As the Spirits of the Beſiegers were Drooping and Fainting without, ſo the many Succeſſes of thoſe within, filled them full of hopes of a ſpeedy delivery; for they had lately taken ſo many Boats laden with Proviſions deſigned for the Chriſtian Camp, that their wants of neceſſary Suſtenance were ſupplyed. And on the 29*th*, Some Deſerters from the Chriſtian Camp diſcover'd to them ſeveral Mines which were preparing againſt them, by which intimation they opened the Earth, found and diſarmed them of their Powder, which was ſo great a diſappointment and diſcouragement to the Chriſtians, that it was eſteemed by the moſt experienced Commanders almoſt impoſſible to gain the Town, in regard the Seaſon of the Year was ſpent, and the Winter already enter'd.

Alarums given.

The difficulties of gaining the Town.

In Conſideration of which, the Duke of Loraine aſſembled a Council of War to deliberate concerning the Reſolutions, which were to be taken in the preſent Exigency and Conjuncture of Affairs: At which time Prince Erman of Baden, Preſident of the Council of War at Vienna, arrived in the Camp, having been diſpatched by the Emperor, with Commiſſion to Command the German Infantry, during the Sickneſs of the two Counts of Staremberg; and with Inſtructions and Orders alſo to the Duke of Loraine to raiſe the Siege, in caſe there was not a certainty, or at leaſt ſome probable hopes of reducing the Town in a very ſhort term of time; for that his Imperial Majeſty deſired not to conſume his Forces in a deſperate and fruitleſs Enterpriſe. The arrival of this Prince was very ſeaſonable at this time, both for the Meſſage he brought, as alſo for his ability and knowledge in War, being a wiſe Man and an experienced Officer: In whoſe Preſence matters were again taken into Conſideration, and the State of the Town within, and of the Camp without, was laid before the Generals and Field-Officers; ſome few adviſed to continue the Siege, until the Succeſs was tried and ſeen of certain Mines, which were ſtill forming in the Bavarian Quarters: But the greateſt part, repreſenting the ill Condition of the Troops, the want of all neceſſaries in the Camp, the extremity of the Seaſon, and the apparent hazard of a total Deſtruction to the whole Army, in caſe of a general Aſſault, were of Opinion, That the ſecureſt way were to raiſe the Siege in the beſt order poſſible, for ſaving and ſecuring the Army from Sallies from the Town, and Attacks by the Seraskier and his Army: But before this Point was concluded, the Duke of Loraine, the Elector of Bavaria and Prince Erman with ſeveral other Chief Officers, took a Survey of all the Lines and Quarters of the Camp, and having conſider'd, that the Defendants were ſtill Ten thouſand ſtrong, and well provided with Victuals and Ammunition, and that it was impoſſible without greater Force to debar them from all Communication with the Danube, from which they received daily Supplies; and that the Mines in which they had placed their greateſt hopes, had either been diſcover'd by the Enemy and diſarmed, or by the inexperience of the Workmen and Ingeniers, had taken vent, and reverſed without any Execution; It was then concluded, and fully reſolved to raiſe the Siege: A farther Motive whereunto were the Rains which continued to fall without intermiſſion. In the firſt place therefore, the Winter-quarters were agreed and aſſigned by the Council, ſo that the Troops might know, unto what Towns they were to march; then all the Heavy Cannon, Morter-pieces and Bombs were order'd to be carried away and ſecur'd.

1684.

Conſultations about raiſing the Siege.

On the 1*ſt* of November the Siege was raiſed, in which the Chriſtians had loſt 25.000 Men: And now to bring off the ſurviving part, and to fortifie the Rear againſt the Sallies of the Garriſon, and defend the whole Army in their march againſt the Seraskier, who being well informed of Nov. The Siege raiſed.

1684. their weakneſſes, and loſs of numbers, attended their Motion, was an Action wherein to employ the Art and Conduct of the wiſeſt, and moſt experienced Captain in the World. Wherefore all imaginable care, and caution was uſed in drawing off; the lighter Cannon and Field-pieces were placed ſo as to defend the Rear, as alſo the Flank and Wings; becauſe that moſt of the Horſe being Dead for want of Forage, the Men were forced to walk on Foot, in the Ranks of the Infantry which lay expoſed, and naked to the Cavalry of the Enemy. The Imperial and Auxiliary Troops, to the number of 30,000 took their march towards Gran: The heavy Artillery and Baggage, with Eight thouſand ſick and wounded Men, were embarked on ſeveral Boats to be carried up the River againſt the Stream; and ſuch as were moſt Sick and Weak, were with a ſmall Guard Tranſported to the Iſland of St. Andrews, which was deſigned for an Hoſpital to receive and Cure them: But the Tartars entring into the Iſland, killed above a Hundred of the wounded Men, before they could be removed, and pillaged the Baggage with the Equipage of Colonel Piccolomini, and ſo much as they could not carry away they burnt and deſtroied: A like Accident happned to ſome other Boats laden with the Bavarian Troops, which by ſome accident or other, being by the Winds, or breaking of their Ropes, or Cordage put on Shoar were ſuprized and taken by the Enemy, which to obſerve their Motion had laien concealed in the Flags and Oſiers, which grew by the Banks of the Danube. Great were the Murmurings and Diſcontents which aroſe upon theſe two unhappy Accidents, occaſioned as they talked by the neglect and ill Conduct of the Officers: Nor was the Reſolution of abandoning the City of Peſt leſs approved, thô the Fortifications were demoliſhed, the Walls and Gates Blown up, and the moſt conſiderable Bulwarks demoliſhed: Howſoever, thoſe who conceived another Opinion, alledged, That the Maſters of the Field would be able to maintain that Fortreſs, in deſpight of the ill Neighbours on the other ſide: And that it would be difficult, and a great loſs of Men and time to recover that place, whenſoever a fairer opportunity preſented to renew the Siege of Buda: Others of a contrary ſenſe produced oppoſite Arguments, all People blaming each other, as is uſual in Siniſter events, when matters ſucceed in an unlucky manner, different to the firſt conceived hopes.

The Tar*tars take the Iſland of St.* Andrews.

Ill Accidents after raiſing the Siege.

Winter-quarters aſſigned.

The Duke of Loraine before he would leave the Army, ſaw the ſeveral Troops diſpoſed in their reſpective Winter-quarters. The Imperialiſts were lodged in Comorra and the Parts adjacent, and as many as 1684. theſe places could not contain were ſent to Sileſia, Moravia and Bohemia. The Bavarians advanced into the Counties of Arva, Czepus, Lipze, Sarax and other places appointed for them.

The Seraskier having information of the ſeveral Quarters, and of the Troops which were lodged in them; gathered what Forces he was able, to the number of 18,000 Men, with which paſſing the River, he Sate down before Wazia or Vualtz; a place defended by Five hundred Soldiers belonging to the Regiment of Thaun, and Commanded by the Lieutenant Colonel only: The Fortifications were chiefly the Breaſts of the Soldiers, there being only an old Wall in many places Ruinous, and a few weak Paliſadoes unable and unfit for the leaſt Defence. The Turks encouraged with theſe advantages, ſtormed the place on all ſides; the Imperialiſts repelled their Force with Force, and defended themſelves with as much Bravery, as was poſſible to do, with ſuch unequal numbers: But finding it at length impoſſible, unleſs by Miracle, to ſuſtain ſo mighty a Force, without hopes of Relief; they agreed to Capitulate, and ſent Propoſitions of Surrender: The which being accepted, and the Articles ſigned, the Gates were opened, with intention that the Chriſtians might march out, and leave the Town to the Poſſeſſion of the Enemy; but inſtead thereof the Turks ruſhed in, and with their drawn Cymiters killed and maſſacred all before them: It was then to no purpoſe to call out, and revile them with the breach of Faith and violation of Articles, having the Seraskier's Commands not to obſerve them, or lend an Ear; nor did it much avail to uſe reſiſtance, the Enemy being already in the midſt of them; all that could be done, was to ſell their Lives at the deareſt rate. In fine, This Tragedy ended with the Slaughter and Butchery of this whole Party, which was much lamented at the Court of Vienna, as a loſs of the higheſt concernment, that Regiment conſiſting of old experienced and veteran Soldiers, Men of approved Valour, and long inured to Labour and Sufferings: This Misfortune alſo was become the common Diſcourſe of the Army, blaming the Officers for aſſigning Quarters at ſo far diſtance from other Succours, which was to ſacrifice the Lives of ſo many brave Men, without any regard to the Fury of the Enemy; and if Peſt which was a Walled and well Fortified Town, and capable of making Reſiſtance was to be Demoliſhed and Diſmantled only, becauſe it was eſteemed too far diſtant from Succours and Relief; how much rather ſhould Vualts, or Vualtz have been judged an improper and dangerous Quarter, which was but an open Town without other defence, than the naked Breaſts of the poor Soldiery ?

Vuazia Attacked.

Five hundred Chriſtians put to the Sword.

Thus ended this Campagne unluckily in reſpect to the Siege of Buda, and the Succeſſes which followed, thô in other Parts Fortune ſmiled on the Chriſtian Arms; for General Schultz took Barsfeldt, Situated on the Frontiers of Poland, after a Siege of three Days, thô it be a place encompaſſed with a deep Ditch full of Water, and good Walls, and Fortified with Towers, Redoubts and Ramparts. The Garriſon conſiſted of Four hundred Men belonging to Tekeli, of which Three hundred after the Surrender took up Arms for the Emperor, and One hundred which refuſed, were Convoyed as far as Ragowitz. Likewiſe General Schultz took the Caſtle of Stropko belonging to the Malecontents, by Surrender upon Compoſition ; therein were Eleven Braſs Guns, with Ammunition and Proviſions for War : He took alſo the Caſtle of Makovitz. Count Zober, who Commanded the Hungarian Troops at Neutra, Surprized the Caſtle at Suran, whilſt the greateſt part of the Garriſon was gone out to ſeek for Forage. But theſe ſmall advantages made but a poor amends for greater loſſes; the ſenſe whereof ſerved to move Anger, and deſire of Revenge in the generous Breaſts of the Soldiery, and to quicken the Imperial Councils to make Preparations againſt the next Campagne : And in regard Newhanſel was in the firſt place aimed at, as a Prize for the enſuing Year, General Heyſler was Ordered to enlarge his Quarters in all parts round the City, that ſo keeping it continually Blocked up, the Conqueſt thereof might be render'd much more eaſie, at that time, when the Seaſon of the Year ſhould make it convenient for an Army to make a nearer approach.

Barsfeldt taken.

And Stropko.

The King of Poland's Actions this year.

But before we conclude the Succeſſes of this Year, we muſt not omit and paſs by the Actions of the King of Poland, of whom we have Wrote, and declared ſuch Heroick and generous Enterpriſes, and Archievements in the Relation of the laſt Year's Wars : For being one of the Allies of the Empire, we are not to be ſilent of him ; but give him a place in this Hiſtory, as well, as we have already done unto our Confederates the Venetians : Thô we ſhall not need to be very Prolix in our Relations of his great Prowefs and Deeds, which fell very Flat, and in no manner agreeable to his firſt beginnings.

The King of Poland enter'd not the Field this Year until the middle of Auguſt, when on the 22d of that Month, he took a Review of his Army near unto Budziack ; and the next Day he Detached a conſiderable Party to Inveſt Jaſlowitz, a Town about two Leagues diſtant from the Camp; and towards the Evening marched thither in Perſon with the reſt of his Army. The next Day Summons were ſent to the Town commanding them to Surrender ; To which the Governour made this reply, That the Town was committed to him by the Grand Seignior, and accordingly he would defend the ſame unto the laſt Extremity : Hereupon Batteries were raiſed, and the Cannon having played upon the Town for the ſpace of two or three Days, the Defendants thought fit to Capitulate; and Hoſtages being given, the Town was Surrender'd on the 26th, when the Garriſon, to the number of Five hundred Men, marched out with their Arms and Colours Flying. After this the King marched to Swaniec, Situate on the Nieſter, over which having made a Bridge, he paſſed his Army ; but having received intelligence, that 30.000 Tartars had made their way into Poland, he return'd again back to the other ſide. And thô the Tartars are a ſort of People, who ſtay not long in a place, but are in continual Motion; yet the King had the good Fortune to meet with a Party of them, and Cut Four hundred of them in pieces; the reſt not being willing, as is their Cuſtom to adventure on a Battle, return'd into their own Country, as did alſo the King of Poland into his Winter-quarters, the Seaſon of the Summer being already ſpent.

Jazlowitz taken.

A party of Tartars defeated.

At the Actions and Succeſſes this Year of the Poles, the Turks at Conſtantinople made an open Scorn and Laughter; (and indeed their ſlothfulneſs in doing nothing deſerved no better) and made it their common talk and diſcourſe , That the French King, who was their only Friend amongſt the Chriſtian Princes , had with his Money and Preſents blunted the Sword of Poland, and laid all the Spirits of that Kingdom into a Sleep ; and that the young Prince, the eldeſt Son was Enchanted, and led away Captive by a French Lady : So that the Turks ſeemed to apprehend nothing of danger from Poland; againſt which they made no Preparations for the enſuing Year, making it the common Subject of their politick Reaſonings, and giving it, as it were for granted, That the Poles, Turks and Tartars had for ſome time entertained a friendly underſtanding between each other.

The Turks cenſure of the Poles.

And of the Venetians.

The Turks always made ſlight of the Venetians, as of an Enemy whom they could at all times, and at their pleaſure cruſh and ſuppreſs ; they regarded little, what they had done this Year at St. Maura, or in the Morea, or Dalmatia ; the Venetians having been more beholding for thoſe Succeſſes to the Albanians, and others of the Grand Seignior's Subjects, who revolted to them, than to the Power and Conduct of their own Arms; and whenſoever Fortune ſhall but a little change her Hand, they doubt not but to recover their Loſſes from the Venetians, without much Bloud, or perhaps but with asking for them. And indeed (if it be well conſidered) the Venetians, have trifled much in their Proceedings, amuſing themſelves, and the World, in taking ſmall and inconſiderable Places, in compariſon of greater Enterpriſes, and with diſlodging ſome Neſts of Pyrates, when as they might have a ſtroke at the very Heart of the Ottoman Empire, by entring the Dardanelli with a Fleet, againſt which the Turks were not capable to make any Reſiſtance, with leſs Force than that which was uſed in taking Santa Maura and Preveza; the Venetians improving the Advantage of the preſent Fear and Conſternation of the Turks, might have made themſelves Maſters of the Caſtles on the Helleſpont, and ſailed to Conſtantinople it ſelf, and deſtroyed or burnt it without any conſiderable Oppoſition. They might with this Opportunity have deſtroyed the whole Turkiſh Fleet of Gallies, which would have made them Maſters of all the Iſlands in the Archipelago, the yearly Tribute of which is very conſiderable. They might in all probability have taken twenty Sail of Ships coming from Alexandria, with Janiſaries and Merchandize to a conſiderable Value; which whilſt the Venetians were pedling about Santa Maura, arrived at Conſtantinople to the great Joy and Encouragement of that City.

The Paſha of Candia put to Death.

About this time the Paſha of Candia's Head was brought to Adrianople, and expoſed before the Gate of the Divan; all his Treaſure, which was conſiderable, according to the Cuſtom of the Turks, was confiſcated to the Grand Seignior; he was a bad Man, and unmerciful to all ſorts and Sects of People; he had ſtrangled the Metropolite or Biſhop of Candia, and miſerably tyrannized over the poor Chriſtians there; and yet for all that, the Crime alledged againſt him was, That he was too indulgent to the Chriſtians; that he had ſold them Corn, and held a good Correſpondence with the Venetians. The Paſha of Damaſcus called Ibrahim Paſha, incurred the like Fate; he had been Janiſar-Aga, and one of the greateſt Men in the Empire; but his Enemies taking advantage of his abſence from the Court, upon bare Suggeſtions, without fairer proceſs, took away his Life.

ANNO 1685.

The State of Chriſtendom.

The Elector of Bavaria Marries with the Emperor's Daughter.

BEfore we enter upon the Martial Affairs of this enſuing Year, let us take a ſhort View of the State of things in Chriſtendom, and in Turky, and the Preparations that were making on both ſides for carrying on a more bloudy War (if it can be poſſible) than that of the preceding Years. The Eyes of all Chriſtendom, and I may ſay, of the World too, were at a gaze to behold the Succeſſes of ths important War; and yet Europe for the moſt part was either engaged actually in War, or at leaſt in Fears and Jealouſies one with another. The Plenipotentiaries of France and Spain were at Variance concerning the Confines and Dependencies, and the Incroachments which the French King made on the Rhine; and Motions in Alſatia, cauſed ſuch Fears and Jealouſies in the Minds of the German Princes, that they with-held much of that Force, which they deſigned as Auxiliaries to be employed in Service of the Empire, which was then the common Cauſe and Intereſt of all Chriſtendom. Howſoever, the generous Elector of Bavaria, a valiant and active Prince, who had in the two laſt Campaigns improved his youthful Years with the Exerciſes of War and Military Diſcipline, was reſolved to employ his own Perſon, Armies and Fortune in proſecution of this Religious War againſt the Enemy of Chriſtendom. The Affections he had to the Welfare of the Imperial Hereditary Countries, and of all Germany were elevated and rendred more zealous and warm by the Love he profeſſed to the Arch-Ducheſs Maria Antonia, eldeſt Daughter of the Emperor, a Princeſs of great Vertues, whom he afterwards eſpouſed, and with her all the Intereſt of the Houſe of Auſtria in ſo zealous a manner, that he ſeemed to have contracted the ſame Deſires and Paſſions with the Emperor himſelf.

The Emperor's want of Mony.

Thô the laſt two Years Wars had conſumed both Men and Mony, yet had not the Emperor's Coffers been exhauſted, the warlike People of Germany would not have wanted Soldiers to fight in defence of their Country, nor the reſpective Princes a readineſs to compleat and recruit their Troops beyond the numbers, that, during this War, had appeared in Hungary. The Pope Innocent XI. had already contributed in ſo liberal a manner, that his Treaſure was ſunk to a low Ebb, and could not furniſh ſuch large Sums as formerly; The Arch-Biſhop of Strgonium, Primate of Hungary, an opulent Prelate, who had made large Contributions, died about this time, aged Ninety three Years; he had alſo ſupplied the Imperial 1685. perial Army with vaſt quantities of Corn out of his own Granaries, which gave a ſeaſonable Relief to the Soldiers before Buda, who were ready to famiſh in their Trenches for want of Proviſions.

Treaties with the Princes of the Empire.

But to promote the common Cauſe, Conſultations and Treaties were aſſiduouſly and warmly held at the Diet at Ratiſbone, by the Commiſſioners and Plenipotentiaries from the Emperor, and by the Agents ſent from the Duke of Bavaria to the other Electors, and by the Convention of the Circles held at Norimburg. Moreover, the Emperor diſpatched the Count de Thaun, and the Baron of Meyerſhein for his Envoys extraordinary, to repreſent unto all the Courts and Princes of Germany the preſſing exigency of Affairs, which did not only concern the Emperor and his Hereditary Countries, but did involve likewiſe the common Intereſt, Welfare and Safety of the whole Empire, and all Chriſtendom. Theſe Matters being well inculcated, and circulary Letters wrote, and diſpatched to the Cities of Saltzburg, Paſſaw, Ausburg, Cologne, Ratiſbone, Norimburg, Ulm and Francfurt, deſiring their Aſſiſtance with Men and Mony, with the uſe of their great Cannon for Service of the Army; in Compenſation for which, the like weight of Mettal, was offered, with ſo much Mony as ſhould pay the Charge of new Caſting the Guns, in regard that in the two laſt Years of War, moſt of the Emperor's Artillery had been conſumed, and the Touch-holes widned and blown, and to New-caſt the Mettal again, there was not time ſufficient before the Commencement of the following Campaign.

Auxiliaries of the Emperor.

The Pope gives Aſſiſtance.

Theſe Matters were ſo well repreſented and negotiated in the Courts and Councils of the reſpective Princes, that nothing almoſt was denyed which was demanded. The Houſes of Brunſwick and Lunenburgh furniſhed an Army of Ten thouſand fighting Men, all ſelect and veterane Soldiers, under the Command of experienced Generals and Officers; and what was of high Importance, they were ſo early diſpeeded, that they arrived at the Camp about the beginning of the Campaign. The Duke of Saxony was not leſs forward with his Army, which, thô inferiour in number, were yet well-diſciplined Soldiers, and conducted by Officers of approved Valour and Experience. The Arch-Biſhop of Saltzburg ſent unto the Emperor a Hundred thouſand Rix-dollars in lieu of his Quota, and of the Troops which he was obliged to ſend. The Elector of Brandenburg had promiſed to ſend an Army of 12,000 Men into Hungary, with a conſiderable Train of Artillery, and ſo to march with them in Perſon; but the Appearance of Troops from France on the Rhine, and in the Dukedoms of Cleves and Juliers, the Numbers of which ſtill increaſing, gave ſuch an Alarum to that Prince and his Neighbours of the Circle, that a ſtop was given to the Proceedings of his and their Forces; and a ſupply only ſent of Men and Mony according to the Quota in ſuch caſes agreed, and eſtabliſhed by the ancient Conſtitutions of the Empire: Notwithſtanding which, the Emperor's Forces in Hungary, contrary to the expectation of all Europe, much exceeded the general Calculation, and compoſed a better Army, than had during this War appeared on the Plains of Hungary. The Pope was not leſs ſollicitous than the other Princes in this Chriſtian Cauſe; towards the Advancement and Maintenance of which, as he had formerly, ſo alſo this Year he ſent ſupplies of Mony from Rome to Vienna, and granted unto the Emperor a full third of the annual Rents of all the Eccleſiaſtical Benefices within his Hereditary Dominions; to exact and raiſe which, Cardinal Bonviſi, Apoſtolical Nuntio, and the Biſhop of Newſtadt, were fully authorized and empowred by the Pope, with Inſtructions to Erect a particular Office, wherein it was Regiſtred how much was paid, and how the ſame was particularly employed and expended for the ſole Uſe and Advancement of this War. 1685.

The Turks prepare for War.

Nor were the Turks leſs ſollicitous and active on their ſide, in their Preparations for the War, which they ſtill reſolved to continue on their defenſive part; under which Notion, neither the Grand Seignior nor Vizier Azem were obliged to go in Perſon. Shitan Ibrahim Paſha, late Governour in Buda, during the Siege, (of whom we have already given a Character) was appointed Seraskier, or General of the Army. And thô the Grand Seignior minded nothing ſo much as his Sport of Hunting, to which he was ſo immoderately addicted, that he was ſcarce perſuaded to omit and decline it upon Fridays, and ſpent two whole Months entirely in it, within the Countries between Adrianople and Conſtantinople; yet the Grand Vizier, who was eſteemed one of the wiſeſt and moſt experienced Miniſters that ever had been in that Place, cloſely attended and followed the main Concernment, both for raiſing Mony, and levying Soldiers. As to the firſt, The Grand Seignior's Treaſury had already this Year been twice opened, and at each time, the Value of Four hundred thouſand Pounds Sterling had been taken out of it, all which came far ſhort of the neceſſary Proviſions which the War required.

The Naval Forces were very inconſiderable, conſiſting only of ſome few poor Gallies, The Turks Forces at Sea.

The Moſaip Admiral.

lies, commanded by the Moſaip or Favourite to the Grand Seignior, a Perſon of no great natural Talent of Underſtanding, and of no Experience in Maritime Affairs; nor were the ten Men of War, which they had for the two Years paſt been labouring to Equip, in any Poſture or Condition to make Sail this Summer; ſo ignorant and averſe are the Turks to all Matters, which belong unto the Seas, and ſo unable for any Naval Fight, that it ſeems a Complement or Compaſſion in the Venetians, not to have deſtroy'd them long before. This Moſaip or Favourite, who was Captain Paſha or Admiral of the Seas, had for a long time enjoyed the Air of his Maſter's Favour; his Priviledge was to be clothed in the ſame Habit with the Sultan, to Ride always on his Right-hand, to Converſe intimately with him, and ſometimes to ſit and Eat with him; and yet I never heard, that he was ever eſteemed for a Man of extraordinary Shapes or Beauty, or to be charming in his Diſcourſe, or to have had any great Talent of Wiſdom or Prudence: And therefore if Enquiry ſhould be made on this Occaſion into the Reaſons, Why Princes elect ſuch and ſuch for their Favourites, no true Cauſe in my Opinion can be aſſigned, unleſs finding in that Perſon, of whom they make choice for their Companion, a certain Harmony of Affections and Humour, they love him by Sympathy, and adore their own Image in him, without which, all other Qualities would be mean and contemptible.

Levies made in Europe and Aſia.

But to return to the Vizier, his greateſt Study and Application was to make Levies by Land, both in Europe and Aſia: Commands were diſpatched to that Purpoſe to Aleppo, Damaſcus, Diarbiquier and Gran Cairo, the remoteſt parts of the Empire; but thoſe being Countries ill Peopled, Levies were made with much difficulty; and ſuch as were conſtrained to go by reaſon of the far diſtance from the Rendezvous, came late; many ſickned in the March, and ſome ran away and deſerted; and diverſe of the European Troops, which had been haraſſed the laſt Year, retired into the Mountains, where they paſſed the whole Summer; and in the Winter came out from thence, and returned home, where they told Stories, as if they had been engaged in all the Sieges and Battles, which had happened that Year. The Grand Vizier finding the numbers allotted to be raiſed, to fall much ſhort of the Quota, and of a reaſonable Calculation, attributed the Default thereof to the negligence of the Muſſelims or Deputy-Governours to the Paſhas, for which ſome of them were puniſhed with Death; and others being affrighted, hereby uſed all the Tyranny and Force imaginable to compel the poor People unto the Wars; to which many of them going, with much unwillingneſs, ſtole aſide, and never came ſo far as the Camp. Howſoever, it was impoſſible, but that, out of ſo vaſt a Tract of Ground, as is the Ottoman Empire, conſiſting of many Kingdoms and Principalities, there muſt be ſome out of every part, who having Courage enough to ſacrifice their Lives for their Religion and Country, came in, and united themſelves with the Camp; and theſe, thô inferiour to the numbers deſigned and expected, yet compoſed an Army very formidable, and ſuch as was able to bid defiance to the Forces of Germany. Howſoever the Turks did not think fit to truſt ſo much to their Arms; but that they would firſt aſſay and try, if it were poſſible, to put an end to the War by a fair Accommodation: The Perſon appointed to manage this Treaty, was Shitan Ibraim, as yet Vizier of Buda, a Perſon (as we have before-mentioned) of refined Parts, and good Addreſs, and a Courtier fitted for ſuch a Negotiation. In purſuance of this Deſign, this Vizier wrote Letters of Complement to the chief Miniſters of State at Vienna, acquainting them of the Grand Seignior's Inclinations to a Peace. And thô it had never been the Cuſtom of the Sultans to be the firſt Promoters of Peace, or to ask it before it was offered or begged; yet ſuch was the Clemency and Compaſſion of this Emperor, and his deſire to ſtop the Effuſion of Human Blood, that contrary to the Dignity of his Sublime Station, raiſed above the Throne of earthly Kings, he would now condeſcend ſo low, as to be the firſt who ſhould make this Religious Motion; in order unto which, he deſired, that a Paſſ-port ſhould be ſent him for a Chiaus, who was an Armenian by Nation, and (as I think) by Religion a Chriſtian, freely to paſs and repaſs, and to carry the Propoſals, and to Treat thereupon: The Paſſ-port was accordingly ſent, and the Armenian conducted to Comorra, where, being taken rather for a Spy than an Ambaſſadour, he was ſo cloſely confined and guarded, that he complained of his Reſtraint to be contrary to the Laws of War and Nations; at length he was guarded to Vienna, where he was detained under Cuſtody, with as jealous and watchful an Eye, as when he was at Comorra: Howſoever, the reception of this Chiaus became the Subject of much Diſcourſe and Talk in the City, and gave occaſion to the World to cenſure, as if the Emperor had deſigned to make a Peace under-hand, without the Privity and Concurrence of the Allies. The Audience of this Chiaus was deferred for ſome time, until it was promoted and haſtned by the Envoy from the Prince of Tranſilvania, then reſiding at that

The Turks propoſe a Treaty.

A Chiaus ſent to Vienna.

He is ſent back.

that Court, and by him at length conducted to the preſence of the Preſident of the Council, to whom he delivered the Propoſals and Articles of Peace: The which after mature Examination, ſeemed to be projected with ſuch Sagacity and Subtlety, without ſincere and open Terms, that they were generally concluded to be Fallacious, and not to be Grounds for a faithful and laſting Peace: And ſo in fine, the Armenian was diſpeeded back with this Anſwer only, That the Emperor could not conclude a Peace without the Concurrence of the King of Poland, and the State of Venice, the true Allies and Confederates with the Emperor; by which Anſwer, the Miniſter from Apaſi Prince of Tranſilvania being aſſured of the Emperor's Reſolutions to continue the War, changed the Tenure of his former Memorials, and in his Maſter's Name, propoſed that he might remain in a Condition of Neutrality, thinking it more ſecure to remain as a Friend to both ſides, rather than by adhering to one, to riſe or fall according to the dubious fortune of War.

A miſerable Plague and Famin.

But if we look into the Winter-quarters before we Treat of the Feats of War, which were Actions moſt fit for the Summer Seaſon; we ſhall find the Imperialiſts and Bavarians ſo miſerably in want of all Proviſions, and of things neceſſary for the ſuſtenance of Human Life: That one would wonder, how it were poſſible for theſe Men to be ſo ſoon recover'd, and made fit for new Services and Fatigues. For ſuch was the Famine in the Lower Hungary, that the Inhabitants were forced to Abandon their Dwellings, and Fly for Bread into the Town of Buda; where they were entertained for Day-labourers to Repair the Fortifications, with the Wages of eight pence a Day, two pounds weight of Bread, and a pint of Wine. In the Emperour's Country, a Buſhel of Wheat, which in the times of Peace, was worth no more than ten Groats, was now advanced in price to Eighteen ſhillings. In Presbourg the Streets were cover'd with famiſhed and dying People; the Soldiers were either Dead or Languiſhing, or had deſerted their Colours: A Peſtilence, as is natural, followed the Famine, and Cattle died of the Murrain. The Iſland Schultz, which uſed to be the Granary of the Upper Hungary, was now in a Starving condition, and the Inhabitants forced to Eat Roots and the Barks of Trees: Nay, this Miſery and Deſolation extended even to Vienna it ſelf, where in the Garden of the Archbiſhop, two Women were ſeen to Eat the Raw-fleſh of a Horſe lately Dead. But for a remedy to this Epidemical Calamity, the Emperor, who is the Common Father of his People, cauſed great quantities of Corn to be brought from all the Neighbouring Countries round about; but the Ways were ſo broken by the great Rains and Marching of Armies, and heavy Carriages, that the People were brought to the laſt extremity before the ſupplies arrived. Notwithſtanding this great want of Proviſions, even to a Famin, and the Snows and Rains, which fell in abundance, with Cold Weather of the Winter; General Schultz with a Body of Four thouſand German Horſe and Dragoons, and ſome Companies of Huſſars, maintained a Blocade round Newhauſel. To Relieve which, Count Tekeli, and the Paſha of Agria were particularly encharged with the Commiſſion: Tekeli had 6000 Men which he had drawn from the Frontier Garriſon, and the Paſha had Four thouſand, which were all his own Troops. General Schultz being informed of their motion fell upon them with ſuch bravery, that he put them to a total Rout, without much loſs or fighting, and took moſt of their Proviſions and Baggage, which were deſigned for the Relief of that place. Howſoever, Tekeli made a ſecond adventure for the Succour of Newhauſel, and with a Party of Three thouſand Horſe, he made way for a Convoy of Three hundred Carts, laden with all ſorts of Ammunition and Proviſions, with as many Horſe, each carrying a Sack of Meal to enter into the Town: In the ſtrength and encouragement of which, the Garriſon made Incurſions at four and five Leagues diſtance, Plundering and Deſtroying all before them, which cauſed the poor Inhabitants to abandon their Dwellings, and ſeek for Succour and Refuge in fortified places. Not long afterwards a ſecond Convoy brought Two thouſand Sacks more of Meal into the Town, which with the former were good Preparations againſt a Siege; but to prevent the like for the future, Count Palſi, who commanded the Hungarian Troops, was order'd to joyn with Colonel Heuſler, who having but Two or Three thouſand Men, was ſo unable to guard the Avenues to Newhauſel, that the Blocade ſeemed of no importance: But Heuſler being thus conſiderably reinforced, he defeated a third Convoy which the Turks were ſending to the Town, conſiſting of Eighty Waggons, which carried Ammunitions and Proviſions, and Sixty more of Timber for Building and Repair of the Fortifications. A fourth attempt was again made to carry Succours into Newhauſel, of which General Schultz having intelligence, he lay in the way and intercepted them, killing Three hundred of the Enemy upon the place, and putting the reſt to Flight. Tekeli having notice of this Defeat, purſued after Schultz with a Reinforce-

Blocade of Newhauſel.

A Convoy brought thither.

Other Convoys.

1685.

Succeſſes of Tekeli.

forcement of ſome Turks, and having overtaken him in the Mountains between Soniati and Rozenau, he Charged him with ſuch Succeſs, that he killed Nine hundred of his Men, and took Four hundred Priſoners with all their Baggage. Afterwards meeting with a Regiment of Bavarians in their Winter-quarters at Neudorf, he entirely defeated them, and ſo returned to Newhauſel, which he again Relieved with another Convoy.

The Spring coming forward with the time for Action; the Emperor's Council calling to mind the Miſcarriages of the laſt Year, cauſed for the moſt part by extream Famine, and want of neceſſary Proviſions for the Soldiery, all poſſible care was taken to prevent the ſame for the ſucceeding Year; and ſuch quantities of Corn from the more remote parts of Germany, and from Poland it ſelf, which is a Country abounding with Wheat, and all ſorts of Grain, were brought and laid up in Magazines, as were judged ſufficient to ſuſtain the Army for the whole Year without ſuch wants, under which it lately labour'd.

Eſperies.

All the remaining part of this Winter was ſpent about Eſperies, or intercepting Convoys deſigned to Newhauſel. Eſperies is a Town of Hungary in the County of Sarax very well fortified, Situate upon the River of Tarbez towards the Mountains, and on the Frontiers of Poland; it hath always belonged to the Emperor as King of Hungary, until ſuch time as in the Year 1678, it fell into the Hands of Tekeli, from whom it was recover'd by force of the Imperial Arms in the Year 1685. Howſoever, at the beginning thereof, the attempt of General Schultz was fruitleſs, and of evil conſequence; for laying Siege to it in the Winter, the Cold and extream Weather, and want of all things neceſſary, enforced him to Riſe again with the loſs of Five hundred Soldiers killed and wounded, with ſeveral Captains and other Officers, who were all ſlain by the many briſk and deſperate Sallies which the Defendant made from the Town: And being upon his Retreat, Tekeli in perſon Charged him in the Rear at the Head of his own Men with ſuch Succeſs, that he defeated the whole Party, and Schultz with much difficulty ſaved his Cannon.

Gutta taken.

Towards the end of February Five hundred Janiſaries, and Three hundred Spahees belonging to Newhauſel, poſſeſſed themſelves of the Fortreſs of Gutta, after a Fight of nine Hours; the Garriſon conſiſted only of One hundred and fifty Huſſars, under the command of a Lieutenant, who with two Soldiers only eſcaped to Commorra, all the reſt being put to the Sword. This Town is Situate on the River Waagh; it was Built during the late Wars in a Mooriſh or Fenny place, between the Danube, the Waagh and Swartz; it is but * a Mile from Newhauſel, and may be ſeen from the Top of the Steeple of the great Church. The Turks having made themſelves Maſters of Gutta, were carrying away the Plunder with two pieces of Cannon to Newhauſel. Two thouſand Spahees, and Six hundred Janiſaries were giving Convoy unto Sixty Waggons laden with Ammunition for the ſame place, when Colonel Heuſler with ſeveral Detachments from Comorra, Papa, Veſprin and Leventz, endeavour'd to obſtruct their Paſſage by Ambuſcades which he had laid in their way: Of which the Turks having had notice, they alter'd their Courſe, and endeavour'd to fortifie themſelves in ſome advantagious Ground; but Heuſler joyning with Count Zabor, allowed them not time to ſecure themſelves, but attacked them near Weitzen with ſuch Bravery, that he put them all to Flight, and ſeized on their Waggons, with the Proviſions in them, which he burnt, becauſe he knew not in what manner to carry them off ſafe: He afterwards took Weitzen, and put all the Garriſon to the Sword; which having done, he received information that a Paſha with Five hundred Janiſaries appointed for Convoy to Five hundred Waggons, drawn by Five Oxen apiece, were retir'd within a little Fortreſs not far diſtant, where they concealed themſelves until the Enemy was retired; he immediately went and inveſted the place, where he killed the greateſt part of the Janiſaries, took the Paſha with many Priſoners, and all the Waggons, which he carried to Leventz.

Succeſſes of Colonel Heuſler.

A party of Malecontents defeated.

About the ſame time the Marquis Doria, and the Baron of Soyes having paſſed the Tibiſcus with a ſtrong Detachment of Bavarian Troops, and a Hundred Horſe belonging to the Regiment of Caraffa, defeated a Party of Five hundred Horſe belonging to the Malecontents, killed Four hundred of them, took twenty Priſoners with eight Colours, and a conſiderable Booty. But General Schultz was not ſo ſucceſful in his Attempt upon Ungwar, being forced to Retire from thence with conſiderable loſs.

The Paſhas Erla and Novigrad ſtrangled.

The Succeſſes of General Heuſler much troubled the Thoughts of the Vizier of Buda, and the Seraskier, in what manner to defend themſelves againſt the Complaints which Tekeli and the Paſha of Novigrade had made againſt them to the Grand Seignior: To prevent which, and ſtop theſe inſinuations from receiving credit, they cauſed the Paſha of Novigrade to be Strangled, with the Paſha of Erla, after which they diſpatch'd two Agas to the Port with all expedition to be before-hand with their Complaints againſt Tekeli, and the Paſhas, repreſenting that they had put the two Paſhas to Death for their Cowardiſe and evil Conduct, with ſome Reflections upon Tekeli, as if he entertain'd a ſecret Correſpondence with the Chriſtians. The Grand Seignior and Grand Vizier, being prepoſſeſſed with theſe firſt advices, applauded the care and juſtice of the Vizier of Buda, and Seraskier, adviſing them to be careful in the chocie of ſuch Men, who were to ſucceed them in thoſe Offices of Truſt.

---

* Five Engliſh Miles.

A Convoy ſent to Relieve Eſperies, taken.

Notwithſtanding the advantage which Tekeli had gained over General Schultz before Eſperies, and given it ſome Relief; yet the Town laboured under great want of neceſſary Proviſions, to ſupply which Tekeli ſent a ſtrong Convoy to ſupport the place with Grain Fleſh, Pulſe and all things required for a Siege: But Schultz recovering his Forces, and animated with deſire of Revenge, watched his opportunity to fall on the Convoy, which he charged with ſuch Vigour and Bravery, that he killed Three hundred on the place, took all their Carriages, with great quantities Tokay Wine.

Another Convoy defeated.

Thus did all matters proceed with various Succeſſes on both ſides; the Imperialiſts having it in their intentions, to open the Campaign with the taking of Newhauſel, made a Preparation thereunto by cutting off all Convoys, and Succours which were deſign'd for it's Relief: The Turks labour'd to ſupport it, and loſt many Men this Winter in the Enterpriſe; and more particularly remarkable was that Defeat which Colonel Heuſler (after having deſtroyed all the Country to the Gates of Newhauſel) gave unto a Party of Five hundred Spahees and Three hundred Janiſaries, aſſembled in the Neighbouring Villages, to give Convoy to great numbers of Waggons laden with Proviſions for ſupply of the Garriſon; the Fight was very warm, and doubtful for ſome time; but the Spahees at length turning their Backs, left the Janiſaries expoſed, who ſtill maintained their ground under the ſhelter of the Trenches, which they had haſtily caſt up, and the Covert of their Waggons with which they had encompaſſed themſelves: But being at length overwhelmed with numbers, they were entirely overthrown, Two hundred of their Men were killed with an Aga, and about Forty Priſoners taken, with all their Waggons to the number of Forty, laden with Proviſions: To compleat this Victory, the Imperialiſts loſt not above ten Men, and freed above Fifty Chriſtians out of Slavery; and of all this Detachment not above Two hundred Re-enter'd the Garriſon, the remainder being either diſperſed, or elſe had made their Eſcape to Novigrade.

The Turks ſlight the Poles.

The Poles and Tartars Treat.

The Great Vizier being informed of theſe Succeſſes, and thereby made apprehenſive of the danger of loſing Newhauſel, reſolved to bend the main Force of the Ottoman Empire againſt Hungary. The War on the Frontiers of Poland ſeemed not ſo formidable, as to need much Aid; the Tartars, who in times paſt were conſidered as Free-booters, and like Locuſts and Catterpillers, fit only for Rapin and Spoil, and to lay a Country Deſolate, were not ranked in the number of Martial and Well-diſciplin'd Troops, and eſteemed a match ſufficient for that Warlike Kingdom of Poland. The Tartars, who availed themſelves much on this late Opinion, which the World had conceived of them, began to ſtand on their Terms with the Poliſh and Ottoman Courts: The firſt offer'd them conſiderable rewards to accept of a Neutrality; and the latter fearing leſt this Mercenary People ſhould fall from their dependance on the Port, overcame their Minds with greater Sums, than what had been offer'd by Poland, together with a Conceſſion of all the Ukrain, to which the Grand Seignior would reſign his Title unto them, and annex it to their Dominions, provided they would recover it again by force of their own Arms. The Propoſals of the Sultan being accompanied with a certain Harmony of Affection and Religion, which is between the Turks and this People, were more charming than the faint Offers from Poland, and fixed them in their Reſolution to Live and Die, Stand and Fall with the Ottoman Intereſt.

The place of General Rendezvous.

The Seaſon of the Year being now well advanc'd, and the Weather become mild and fit for Action; the Imperial Troops from the Hereditary Countries, with the Auxiliaries and Bands of Voluntiers, compoſed of divers Nations, began to deſcend from Moravia, and with their Officers to march towards the place of General Rendevous, appointed in the Plains between Newhauſel and Barkan, being eſteemed the moſt convenient Situation for Atchieving any Enterpriſe, according to the Reſolutions of a Council of War. The Imperial Army conſiſted of Twenty four or Twenty five thouſand Men, but the Auxiliaries were above double the number: The Houſe of Brunſwick furniſhed 10.000 Fighting Men, Commanded by Prince George William, eldeſt Son of the Duke of Hanover, who marched in the Head of them. General Chawver commanded the Troops of the Prince of Zell. The Elector of Cologne ſent Six thouſand effective Men, and the City Six hundred, compoſed in all of Forty five Companies of Foot, Twelve of Horſe and 1685.

The Forces of the Circles.

Ten of Dragoons: All the other Electors and Princes of the Circle complied with their Quotas according to Agreement, Commanded by Officers of Experience and Bravery. The Archbiſhop of Saltzburg over and above the Money already mentioned, contributed to this Summers expedition, a conſiderable Train of heavy Cannon: So that the Quotas of the Empire according to the true Calculation, amounted unto Forty thouſand Men, beſides 16 .000 Bavarians, all veterane and experienced Soldiers, which were added as Recruits to the other Forces, already emploied in the War of the laſt Year. Count Rabata was appointed Commiſſary General for raiſing and amaſſing Proviſions wherewith to ſupply the Army; and for the more effectual performance thereof, it was recommended as a particular Charge to every Circle, to furniſh their Men reſpectively, with a ſufficiency of Victuals for the Campaign; by which means there was an abundance of all things in the Camp, and the Army freed of the miſery of Famine attended with Peſtilence; which two evils ruined all the deſigns of the laſt Year.

Care taken to ſupply the Army with Proviſions.

May.

About the beginning of May General Palſi was order'd to march into Hungary, and joyn with Colonel Heuſler at the Blocade of Newhauſel; which they ſo ſtreightned, that the Paſha Governour of that place, turn'd out all uſeleſs Perſons, out of the Town, who were not capable to bear Arms, and ſo many of the Chriſtian Slaves, as ſerved only to conſume and leſſen the Proviſions, and not defend the Town: By theſe Perſons the Commanders received information, that the Garriſon conſiſted only of Two or Three thouſand Janiſaries, of which a great number was Sick and Infirm.

Newhauſel ſtreightned.

The better to reinforce the Blocade, and ſtreighten the place in ſuch manner, that it might receive no Relief either of Men or Victuals, three thouſand Horſe, and as many Foot were ſent to joyn with Heuſler and Palſi, and with them many Carts and Waggons laden with all ſorts of Ammunition and Proviſions, by which there was no want of any thing neceſſary for the comfort, and encouragement of the Soldiery, that ſo with the more Strength and Vigour they might be ready to oppoſe a ſtrong Party which was preparing at Peſt, to Convoy Eight hundred Carts with Victuals, and to make way for them into the Town by Force of Arms.

At this time that Palſi and Heuſler were emploied in Blocking up Newhauſel, General Leſly departed from Vienna to Gratz, from whence he drew his Forces into the Field in order to march into Croatia, where he was to Command this Year, with a Reinforcement of Seven thouſand Men more than he had the laſt.

1685.

Ungwar taken.

General Schultz, who had newly diſtributed a Hundred thouſand Florins amongſt his Soldiers, finding them Couragious and in good Heart, was reſolved to begin the Campaign with the notable Exploit of laying Siege to Ungwar, a ſmall, but the Capital City of the County of Ung, in which Tekeli had placed a ſtrong Garriſon. So ſoon as he inveſted it, he took a Redoubt, and began to make his Approaches, and raiſe his Batteries, and throw Bombs into the Town; and having by his Cannon opened a ſufficient Breach in the Walls, he Stormed it, and with great ſlaughter and loſs of Men, he entred and took the Town; and without giving the Enemy farther reſpite, he Inveſted the Caſtle, and lodged his Soldiers in the Ditch, where in the ſpace of three Days he loſt Three hundred Men, beſides Twenty Officers killed and wounded. Upon this News, the Male-contents, with a great Body, came to relieve the Place; but General Schultz bravely encountred them, gave them a Repulſe, and took three of their Standards; and returning with this Succeſs back to the Siege, he was ready to give Fire unto a Mine, when News came that Tekeli having joyned himſelf to a ſtrong Body of Tartars, was marching againſt him, he raiſed the Siege with ſo much Haſt and Precipitation, that he was conſtrained to leave the greateſt part of his Artillery behind him, after he had loſt Nine hundred Men, which were killed, and Two hundred wounded; amongſt which was Count Strafoldo, who was ſhot through the Arm with a Muſquet-bullet, and Baron Arti his Lieutenant Colonel, was wounded likewiſe.

Schultz forced to leave the Town.

A Council of War called.

June.

It was now the beginning of June, when the Duke of Loraine, appointed General of the Imperial and Confederate Forces, with abſolute Power and Authority from the Emperor, came to the Army, which was encamped near unto Gran, where a Council of War was held, and therein diverſely debated, whether they ſhould begin this Campaign with the Siege of Novigrade, which would interrupt all Communication between Buda and Newhauſel; or return again to Buda, where the Fortifications were not as yet fully repaired, nor the Inhabitants totally freed from the dread and fear of their late Danger; but upon farther examination of this Matter, it was made to appear, that Buda was in a much better Condition than it was before the Siege; for that the Fortifications were all finiſhed, and made better and ſtronger than they were formerly; that the new Governour had demoliſhed all the Houſes, which had been ruined and defaced by the Bombs, and totally deſtroyed the Suburbs;

1685. burbs; that the Garriſon conſiſted of Ten thouſand Men, all ſtout and brave Soldiers; The ſtate of Buda. that the Seraskier, with the like number of Men, had encamped between Buda and Alba Regalis, and 12.000 more had paſſed the Bridge to joyn with a Body of Ten thouſand Tartars, ſo that impoſſible in a manner it was to lay a Siege, which was daily in hazard of being diſturbed by ſuch potent Armies. The Enterpriſe upon Novigrode ſeemed much more feaſible; but before any Reſolution would be taken therein, the Duke of Loraine, with General Souches, Scaffemburg, Colonel Beck, and ſeveral Officers belonging to the Artillery and Ingineers, thought fit to take a view of the Works and Situation of the Place. The Duke at the head of Three thouſand ſelect Horſe, commanded by Count Caprara, on the 25*th* paſſed the River Grana, on a Bridge of Boats, and foorded over the River Hippol, which, at that Seaſon of the Summer, was not deeper than the Bellies of the Horſes. The next Day before Noon they came in ſight of Novigrode, and by their Appearance, gave an Alarum to the Town and Caſtle, from whence they fired many of their Cannon, for a Signal to thoſe who were abroad, labouring in their Vineyards, or keeping watch over their Cattle in the Field, to haſten back and retire under ſecurity of the Fortreſs: The Report of the Guns warned every one of the Danger, ſo that the Guardians of the Cattle, as well as others, drove in their Herds from their Paſtures as faſt as poſſible; but could not make ſuch ſpeed, as to get them all into Security, before the Huſſars, a People uſed to that kind of Prey, came up with them, and ſeized a great ſhare of the Cattle, driving them away for Service of their own Camp: And thô a Party of Horſe ſallied out of the Garriſon upon them, endeavouring to regain the Spoil, yet being ſupported by a ſtronger Body, they retired within the Paliſadoes, where they were received by ſeveral Chambers of Janiſaries.

Novigrode. Novigrode is raiſed upon a high craggy Rock, fortified by Nature, and the Way ſo narrow as is not capable to receive above one Man a-breaſt, and encompaſſed with a Ditch of about Thirty four Foot deep; this Place was taken from the Chriſtians in the Year 1663. The Duke of Loraine, and the other Generals and Engeniers, having well obſerved the Situation of the Place, and all the difficult Acceſſes thereunto, ſounded a Retreat, and began their March back again to the Camp; the Rear-guard being committed to the Care and Conduct of the Count de Oſkirk, with whom were ſeveral Princes in Quality of Voluntiers, as the Prince de Conti, de la Roche Sur-yon, de Commerci & de Turenne. Upon 1685. this Retreat, a Party of the Turkiſh Cavalry ſallied out of the Town, ſeeming as if they reſolved to fall on the Rear, with deſign only to draw them into an Ambuſcade of Janiſaries, who lay hid in certain Hedges and Buſhes, not far diſtant from the open Road. The Stratagem ſucceeded in part; for theſe young Gallants thirſting after Glory, and deſirous of an Engagement with the Enemy, could not refrain from purſuing the Turks to the place of Danger, where in all probability they had moſt certainly been deſtroyed, had not the Duke of Loraine ſent ſome Troops ſeaſonably to their Relief. The next Day this Party being returned from Novigrode to the Camp, General Caprara, who lay confined in his Bed by a Fever, delivered into the Hands of the Duke of Loraine a Letter from diverſe poor Chriſtian Slaves, Greeks, Hungarians, and others in Newhauſel, miſerably complaining of their Servitude, and of the Famine of that Place, which was ſo great, that they were ready to Periſh for want of Food; ſo that in caſe he Falſe Letters delivered to the Duke of Loraine. would only appear with his Army before that Place, the Diſtreſs of it, by reaſon of Famine, was ſuch, as would cauſe them to Surrender without farther Violence or loſs of Time. The Particulars of the State of this Place, was again confirmed by a Turk, who carrying Letters from Newhauſel to Buda, was intercepted in the way, and brought to the Camp; where being examined before a Council of Officers, he there confirmed the Truth of what was related in the Letter, and that the Garriſon did not exceed Twelve hundred Men; ſo that the Paſha, an ancient Soldier, did much lament the Miſeries of the Place, which he could not maintain, and muſt either be forced to make a Surrender of it, or elſe Sacrifice his own, and the Lives of all the Inhabitants, to the Fury of the Enemy. This Report ſeconding the Letter wrote from the Chriſtian Captives, the Truth thereof was no longer doubted, ſo that without farther diſpute or demurr, it was reſolved, at a Council of War, to open this Campaign with the Siege of Newhauſel; thô in reality both the Letter was feigned, and the Report given by the Turk falſe, as will appear hereafter, before we make an end of the Siege of this Place: Howſoever, it ſerved for the preſent to alter the deſign from Novigrode, and The Siege of Newhauſel reſolved. turn it on Newhauſel, againſt which all Preparations were making, and Orders ſent to the Prince of Hanover to advance towards the Town, and cauſe his Men to provide themſelves with Faggots and Timber to make Gabions, with other Materials neceſſary for this Enterpriſe; and all the Boats, and Floats for Bridges, which lay below Comorra, Preparations thereunto.

ra, were ordered to be drawn up againſt the Stream: And leſt in the mean time, during this Siege, the Seraſkier thinking to make a Diverſion, ſhould lay Siege either to Strigonium or Vicegrade, the latter Garriſon was reinforced with Three hundred Men, and the former with Fifteen hundred, under the Command of Count Mansfeld, beſides ſeveral Troops of Huſſars, who were appointed to ſcower the Country round, and obſerve the Motion of the Enemy.

July.

All things being prepared in order to a Siege, on the third of July the Duke of Loraine Commanded the whole Army to raiſe the Camp, and March towards Newhauſel; and on the 6th they pitched at a Bog or Fenny place in ſight of the Town, being hindred from proceeding farther by the Storms and continual Rains, which gave great retardment and ſtop to their March: But to loſe no time, General Heuſler was appointed with a Party of Horſe to ſurvey the Fenns, and give an account of the Ways and Paſſages over it; and meeting with a Party of Horſe belonging to the Garriſon, which was commanded to prevent and ſtop his Paſſage, he charged them with ſuch vigour, as cauſed them to fly back to the Town, purſuing them to the very Gates thereof. After which, having well obſerved that the Fenns were not to be paſſed by the Infantry, it was ordered, That every Horſeman ſhould mount a Footman behind him; ſo that the Day following all the Army paſſed, and encamped by the Banks of the River Nitria or Neutra, about Cannon-ſhot diſtant from the Town.

Heuſler beats a Party of the Enemies Horſe.

At the appearance of the Chriſtian Army, the Turkiſh Garriſon being greatly diſmayed, they quitted the Palanca, which was raiſed at the Gate of Strigonium, and broke the Iſland-Bridge, cauſing all their Forces to be diſperſed without the Town in little Forts and Redoubts, to retire within, that being gathered into a Body, they might be the better enabled to make a valiant and an obſtinate Reſiſtance. The ſame Day the Paſha opened the Store-houſes of the Place, where Proviſions were laid up in ſuch abundance, that, being diſtributed with Frugality, and managed with good Husbandry, were ſufficient to conſerve and maintain the City for many Months without Famine.

The Town Surveyed.

But before the Siege was formed, the Duke of Loraine, with other Officers and Perſons of Note and Quality, took a View or Survey of the Town, to diſcover the parts and places where the Attacks might be carried forward with the beſt Advantage, and tryed where the River Neutra was fordable, as it was at that Seaſon of the Year in diverſe places. In the mean time, the Troops of Hanover and Zell, Commanded by the Prince of Hanover, and his Lieutenant General Chauvet arrived in the Camp, againſt whom the Turks ſpent many of their Cannon-ſhot without any Effect; which Troops being drawn up in open Field, made ſo good an Appearance in all Reſpects, as gave great Satisfaction to the Duke of Loraine, and the other General Officers.

On the 9th about Noon, the Bavarian Infantry advanced forward, commanded in chief by Count Serini.

On the 10th the Imperial Generals, with the Elector of Bavaria, and the Prince of Hanover, deſigned the place where the Town ſhould be firſt attacked; and Horſes were ſent, and Waggons to draw up the heavy Cannon which were arrived in Boats near to the Camp, and the places chalked out and deſigned where the Batteries were to be raiſed.

The Form of the Siege reſolved,

On the 11th a Council of War was held, and there reſolved by all the General Officers to open the Trenches, and to make the main Attack at the ſame place and ſide on which the Turks had done, when they took the Town in the Year 1663.

and deſcribed.

Great Labours were uſed on the 12th to enlarge the Trenches, joyning unto which there was a Vally, which ſerved for a Parade, wide enough to draw up Two thouſand Men, and therein to remain under Covert, and out of danger of the Enemies Shot. Two Lines alſo were drawn, one towards the Point of the Baſtion adjoyning to the Port of Strigonium, and another leading to the Baſtion which was contiguous to it; and on this part of the Town the chief Effort was to be made. The Bavarians maintained the Attack on the Gate-ſide, and the Imperialiſts the other; and a third Attack was intended on the ſide towards Vienna, on the Banks of the River Neutra, which was to be committed unto the Swedes, ſo ſoon as they entred into the Camp, as they did the Day following; and having formed their Trenches, they cut a Drain from the Town Ditch, where being a kind of declivity, the Water fell in abundance, and ran with a full Channel into the Neutra. To theſe ſeveral Attacks Three thouſand Men were every Day appointed to relieve each other, under Command of the General of the Artillery, two Sergeant-Majors of Battalions, two Colonels, and other ſubordinate Officers, which the Prince of Croy, Count Serini, and the Duke of Hanover were ſucceſſively to Command, according to their turns.

The Swedes come to the Siege.

The Trenches enlarged.

All the Day following was ſpent in opening and enlarging the Trenches, which were broad enough to contain three Men a-breaſt, and advanced unto Five or Six hundred Paces in length; and ſufficient Ground ſe-

1685. cured to lengthen them about One hundred and fifty Paces more, which would reach unto the ſide of the Ditch; all which was performed without any conſiderable loſs, notwithſtanding the continual Firings from the Enemy, both of ſmall and great Shot. At the end of every Line a Redoubt was raiſed, and a Parallel Line of Communication drawn from one Attack unto the other, with a place of Parade in the middle, about which three Batteries were raiſing, one behind the Line of Communication, which was to be the biggeſt, containing Seventeen or Eighteen Pieces of Cannon, becauſe it was to front and ſuccour the other Batteries on each ſide; the other two were to the right Hand, and to the left of five Pieces of Cannon, each to Flank the main Battery.

On the 14*th*, the Redoubts, the Parallel Lines of Communication, the Parade, and the Trenches were all perfected and ſufficiently opened, ſo that now the Siege was completely formed; and an Allodgment prepared on the brink of the Ditch; which tho' the Beſieged did endeavour to diſturb by conſtantly Shooting on the Workmen, yet nothing hinder'd to perfect the Allodgment which was made wide, and extreamly well fortified on all ſides.

The Siege formed.

The City of Newhauſel is Situate on a Plain with ſome little riſing Hills about it, and on the Banks of the River Neutra; it is not far from Comorra, and about a Days Journey from Strigonium; it is encompaſſed by ſix Baſtions, according to the manner of the modern Fortifications; the diſtance of the Curtains, and of the Flankers are of an exact equality, and the Form is a Sex-Agon, or Six-Angles. After the Turks had taken it in the Year 1663, they brought the Neutra round the Town and filled the Ditch with Water, and made it ſo Deep, that it was almoſt impoſſible to form any Mine under it.

Newhauſel

The preſence of the Duke of Loraine, who was always an Overſeer and director in making the Trenches, in which he for the moſt part remain'd until after Midnight, did very much contribute to the diſpatch of that Work: So that between the 14*th* and 21*th* all matters requiſite for the Siege were finiſhed, the Allodgment on the brink of the Ditch was more enlarged than before, the Water whereof being Fathomed, was found to be ſeventeen or eighteen Foot in Depth; and ſometime increaſed, notwithſtanding the Drain, by the exceſſive Rains, which not only ſupplied it with Water, but much incommoded the Soldiers in their Trenches. The Batteries continually plaid with good Succeſs, and not only had beaten down a great part of the Parapet, but had made a conſiderable Breach in the Baſtion it ſelf; which they intended to widen, and open yet more by the help of another Battery newly raiſed, conſiſting of eighteen Pieces of Cannon; but whilſt theſe things were in agitation, News was brought to the Duke of Loraine, that the Turkiſh Army began to march towards Buda and Alba Regalis, and that Six thouſand Turks and Tartars were advanced towards Vicegrade. Upon this intelligence General Leſly, who was appointed to watch the Motion of the Enemy, was Order'd to endeavour unto the utmoſt of his power to hinder and obſtruct the Paſſage of the Seraskier over the River Sava and Drave; and Colonel Heuſler with Two thouſand Horſe was diſpeeded towards Peſt, to get intelligence of the Deſigns of the Vizier: Soon after this Advices came, That the Seraskier was advancing with all his Forces towards Buda, and had made a Bridge not far from thence over the Danube; but that it was not yet known, whether he intended to attempt the raiſing of the Siege, or to Sit down before ſome Town whereby to make a diverſion: But to be better provided, and in a readineſs either to meet the Seraskier in the Field, or to defeat his Attempt againſt any fortified Place; The Duke of Loraine order'd a Detachment of a Regiment of Savoiard Dragoons, to joyn with ſome of the Bavarian and Lunenburg Troops, to the number of Three thouſand Men, and therewith to Reinforce thoſe Regiments, which guarded the Bridge of Comorra.

The Batteries make a Breach.

1685.

Leſly attends the Motion of the Seraskiers.

During the time that a conſiderable Force was employ'd to obſerve the Motion of the Seraskier, the Siege was carried on with all imaginable Courage and Reſolution; the Cannon continually fired from the ſeveral Batteries, and the Bombs and Carcaſſes were thrown into the Fortreſs with ſuch good Succeſs, that on the 22*d*, the Town appear'd to Smoak and Flame in three ſeveral places, which continued all Night, to the great Terrour and Labour of the Defendants: But at length by the great Rains which fell, the Fires were not only extinguiſhed, but the Chriſtians very much incommoded in their Trenches, and the Waters of the Ditch increaſed, as faſt almoſt as they were ſunk by the Drain: So that it ſeeming a long and tedious Work, before the Ditch could be emptied of it's Water; a contrivance was made to paſs a Miner over the Ditch in a Boat, and fix it to the Breach in the Wall; but the Boat receiving a Shot from the Town, was ready to ſink, and thoſe therein were ſo incommoded with ſhowers of Stones from the ſmaller Guns, and Petreras planted on the Walls, that they were forced to Retire, and give over that Deſign.

The Town on Fire.

On

A Sally from the Town.

On the 24*th*, the Defendants made a Sally on that ſide, where a Guard was appointed of Swedes and Suabians to defend the Drain, which was made to ſink the Water of the Ditch; and ſurprized them at a time, when they were overcharged with Wine, which they had unfortunatly gotten, and laid for the moſt part in ſo profound a Sleep, without ſo much as a Match lighted, that a Hundred of them with their Lieutenant Colonel, two Captains and two Lieutenants did never awake from their natural Sleep, but inſenſibly paſſed from it, into the laſt Sleep of Death. The Turks return'd back again into the Town without much harm; but with great Joy and Triumph, which they teſtified by the Muſick, which was heard from the Walls into the Trenches.

The Ditch filled with Rubbiſh.

But on the 25*th*, greater care was taken with the Guards on that ſide, and endeavours uſed to enlarge the Channel, which being perform'd, the Water in the Ditch ſunk eight Foot, ſo that the Faggots, Stones and Rubbiſh were prepar'd to fill it up; and that Labour ſo cloſely followed, that in one Night the Ditch was half filled up on that ſide, where the Imperialiſts were lodged: But on that of the Bavarians, they advanced little, by Reaſon that the Defendants fired ſo continually from the Parapet of the Baſtion, which was oppoſite to them, as diſturbed the Work, and hinder'd them very much in carrying Faggots and Rubbiſh, ſo freely as was done on the other ſide.

The difficulty of draining the Ditch.

The Work was now to fill the Ditch on each ſide, as well where the Imperialiſts, as where the Bavarians were Quarter'd: To prevent which, the Turks on the 27*th*, about Noon made a Sally by the Port of Strigonium; and ſtopped the Channel, by which the Water vented it ſelf out of the Ditch and ran into the River; but being oppoſed by Three hundred Bavarians they received a Repulſe, and made their Retreat back into the Town; the Bank being again opened, the Water fell ſo low, that the Imperialiſts diſcover'd a ſecret Paſſage, by which the wet and mooriſh Ground kept a Correſpondence with the Ditch, and ſupplied it with ſome Waters from thence; the Chriſtians endeavour'd to ſtop this Conveyance, and the Turks to open it, ſo that what one did by Day, the other deſtroy'd by the Night.

Galleries prepared.

The increaſe of the Waters in the Ditch, cauſed the Beſiegers to deſpair of being able to effect any thing by their Mines; but finding that their Batteries opened the Breach more and more, they reſolved to perform their work by the two Attacks, on the right and on the left Hand: The two Galleries were in a ſhort time advanced; that to the right, went drawing near to the Wall, being well cover'd, and flanked with Baskets, Barrels and Gabions filled with Earth, in which Action the Lieutenant Colonel of Count Souches was killed: The Turks labour'd with all poſſible Induſtry to keep off the Approach of theſe Galleries, which moſt certainly threatned the Ruin of the Town; to effect which, they threw certain artificial Fire-works upon the Galleries, compoſed of Sulphur and Bituminous matter, which burn'd ſo violently, that it was impoſſible to extinguiſh it, until it had laid all in Aſhes; and ſo forcibly did it burn, that it took hold of the next Battery, and ſet Fire to the Powder in it, with which divers of the Gunners, to the number of Forty Men were Blown up. Nor did the Gallery on the left Hand fare any thing better, for the Turks ſhot ſuch numbers of Arrows with artificial Fires into it, that nothing could reſiſt the violence of the Flames: All the Gallery took Fire, with the Parapet and Neighbouring Battery, and burn'd with ſuch fierceneſs, that it became too hot for the Guards, and diſmounted four Pieces of Cannon. The Duke of Loraine, came immediately in Perſon to the aſſiſtance of the place, and remained where the Fire was moſt impetuous, commanding the Officers to march their Troops to that place; and in the mean time employed all his Servants and Attendants, who were about him, even his very Pages to ſtop and extinguiſh the Fire. The Example of the General was ſo prevalent, that every one gave a helping hand, with ſuch diligence and vigour, that the Fire was extinguiſhed, and a great part of the Battery was ſaved, with the Cannon and Powder: Whilſt this Action was doing, all thoſe, who work'd about the Fire lay open to the ſhot of the Enemy, of which about Sixty Soldiers were killed, and twelve of them near to the Perſon of the Duke, who expoſed himſelf without fear to the utmoſt Peril of his Life.

They are burned.

The Galleries and Batteries burnt.

The Fire being extinguiſhed, Order was given to repair the Damage which the Fire had done; which accordingly was executed with ſuch diligence, that on the next Night following the Parapet was repaired, and the Cannon being remounted began again to Batter the Town; new Galleries were alſo making of ſuch matter, as ſhould not be ſo eaſily combuſtible as the former.

The Elector of Bavaria comes to the Camp.

The Diſorders being compoſed which were cauſed by theſe Fires, the Elector of Bavaria enter'd the Camp; and immediately repaired to that part where his Soldiers were lodged. The Duke of Loraine having made him a Viſit, and paſſed thoſe Complements which are due to his Perſon, and Character; he attended him abroad and ſhowed him all the Attacks, the Approaches, Batteries, and the whole Form of the Siege.

Whileſt matters were thus in Action at the Siege, Advices were daily brought of the Seraskier's motion, that his whole Army conſiſted of 60.000 Men, including the Tartars, and lay Encamped at the Foot of St. Gerard's Mount near Buda, with Twenty five Pieces of Cannon, ſmall and great.

The Turkiſh Army near Buda.

Their motions obſerved.

Strigonium beſieged.

The Order of the Chriſtian Army.

They are met by the Garriſon of Vicegrade.

On the 26*th* it was certainly adviſed, that they had paſſed the Danube, and that the Van-guard bended towards Vaitz, and the Rear-guard towards Vicegrade and Strigonium. Upon this intelligence it was almoſt certainly concluded, That the Turks intended with one part of the Army to lay Siege to Strigonium, and with the other to attempt the Relief of Newhauſel; to confirm which two Huſſars about the cloſe of the Evening, brought News, that the Turkiſh Army about Noon of the ſame Day, had pitched their Camp in ſight of Strigonium, and had made a Bridge at the Iſle of St. Andrew, for better Communication of their Troops. It being now out of all doubt, that the Turks would either Inveſt Strigonium or Novigrade; the Duke of Loraine with the concurrence of his Electoral Highneſs the Duke of Bavaria, reſolved to leave 16.000 Men under the command and conduct of Count Caprara to continue the Siege; and with the Groſs of his Army to march againſt the Seraskier; but before their departure they had the ſatisfaction to ſee the four Regiments of Infantry belonging to the Elector of Cologne, to come and joyn with them, all brave and ſtout Men well Armed and well Clothed. Colonel Heuſler, who with Fifteen hundred Horſe watched (as we have ſaid) the Motion of the Enemy, gave certain intelligence, that on the 30*th* of July, the City and Caſtle of Strigonium were Inveſted by the Seraskier, which cauſed the Duke of Loraine to haſten his march towards the Relief of that place, leaving all things belonging to the Siege in very good order. The News ſent by Colonel Heuſler, was confirmed on the 4*th* of Auguſt, by Report of the Cannon, which being carried by a favourable Wind, were heard at the Siege before Newhauſel: The Duke of Loraine being on his march, paſſed his Army conſiſting of 40.000 fighting Men over the Waagh on a Bridge of Boats, bending towards Comorra: On their way thither intelligence was given them, that the Night before, the Turkiſh Army had been Alarum'd by a Party of Huſſars which had fallen in upon their Baggage: Howſoever, they continued ſtill to force the Place, having given a fierce Aſſault upon the lower Tower Town, but were bravely repulſed. This News quickning the march of the Army, the next Day they paſſed the Danube upon two Bridges near to Comorra, and afterwards Ranged the whole Army into order of Battle: The Imperial Troops were divided in the firſt and ſecond Lines of the two Wings; with them joyned ſome Dragoons, and ſome Battalions of the Allies; the Elector of Bavaria Commanded the left Wing; the main Body of Bavarians and Swedes were comprehended in this Wing, and that of Franconia and Lunenburg in the Right; the Prince of Hanover and General Chauvet, Commanded at the Head of their own Troops, as the Marquis of Tutriac, and other Generals of the Allies at the Front of theirs. Count Rabata General of the Horſe, the Commiſſary General, Count Palſi and Baron Mercy, and other Chief Officers were of the left Wing; Prince Lewis of Baden, Count Dunewaldt, Count Taaf and Stirhaim, Major General, were added to the right Wing. Prince Waldeck and Count de Fontana, one of the Major Generals marched at the Head of their Troops, and Prince Lubomiski commanded the Cannon: In this order the Army marched, and on the 10*th* of Auguſt they Encamped within three hours march of Strigonium: And the next Day approaching yet nearer, the Report of the Cannon, and all Noiſe towards the Town ſeemed to ceaſe; ſo that it was concluded, that either the Town was taken, or the Siege raiſed. Whilſt they were in this ſuſpenſe, the Garriſion of Vicegrade came in ſight of the Camp, to the great ſurpriſe of the Generals, who until that time, had never been informed that the place had been Inveſted by any part of the Ottoman Army: It ſeem'd a little ſtrange to meet that Garriſon in the open Field, marching with their Arms and Baggage, with their Matches Lighted, their Drums Beating, and their Colours Flying; but this Wonder ceaſed, when the Officer in Chief acquainted the Generals, how that the Fortreſs of Vicegrade, had ſuſtained a Siege for the ſpace of ſixteen Days, againſt all the Force of the Ottoman Army; that the Tower which was adjoyning to the Caſtle was Blown up, which made ſo wide a Breach, that it was impoſſible to ſuſtain another Aſſault of the Enemy, having endured two Aſſaults before: And therefore, after a loſs of the greateſt part of the Garriſon, which was reduced from Three hundred and fifty to One hundred and thirty Soldiers, the Surrender thereof ſeemed excuſable, and not to be imputed to the Cowardize, or want of Conduct either in the Commander, or in the Souldiers. There was alſo ſomething more than ordinary in the behaviour of the Turks towards the Garriſon, when this place was Surrender'd: For they out of a Principle of hatred to the Chriſtian Religion, and of ſcorn and indignation againſt all People, but thoſe of their own Profeſſion, were commonly provoked to uſe their Victories with Pride and unlimited Inſolence; and to break their Faith and Engagements, to which they had obliged themſelves by Articles and Capitulations; did now contrary to their uſual practice, Treat the vanquiſhed of this Fortreſs with due reſpect and kindneſs; and leſt any thing ſhould happen, which might ſeem diſagreeable to their Capitulations in their march by Land, care was taken to Tranſport them in Boats, and to Land them as near as was poſſible to the Chriſtian Camp; and for the better ſecurity on the way, they were accompanied by three Turkiſh Officers, whom the Duke of Loraine treated with a Civility, correſponding unto which they had uſed towards the Garriſon.

The Turks Civility to that Garriſon.

The next Day being the 11*th* of Auguſt, the Chriſtian Army pitched their Tents at Almatz, about a League diſtant from Strigonium: From whence an Officer was ſent to Complement the Duke of Loraine, and the other Generals, with a Relation of what the Turks had acted in the late Siege: He told them, That one the 30*th* and 31*ſt* of the laſt Month their Approaches were begun (as were to be ſeen) on the ſide towards Comorra, at the Foot of St. Thomas his Mount, and were in two Days time, carried on to the Counterſcarp of the lower City, where they Sprang four Mines, and ſeconded them with as many Aſſaults, in which ſo many were killed, that the Ditch ſeemed to be levelled, and filled up with the dead Bodies of the Slain, and made equal with the Border of the Counterſcarp. In fine, About two Days before, the Turks having received certain Intelligence of the Approach of the Chriſtian Army for their Relief, had raiſed the Siege with ſo much haſt and precipitation, as gave Courage to the Defendants to make a Sally upon them at their departure; and falling on their Rear, took a Bloody Farewel of them, with the Slaughter of Three hundred of their Men. The Succeſs of Strigonium made ſome amends for the loſs of Vicegrade, and gave undoubted proofs, that where is any equality in Force, the Chriſtian Valour and Conduct, challenges Fortune to be of their ſide, and to favour and aſſiſt them.

A Relation of the Siege of Strigonium.

The Duke of Loraine having recruited the Garriſon of Strigonium with Five hundred Foot, and ſuccoured it with Ammunition, and Proviſions neceſſary for it's Defence; raiſed his Camp on the 13*th*, and marched away in queſt of the Seraskier, with reſolution to give him Battle, in caſe the mooriſh and fenny Grounds, which interpoſed between the two Armies, did not prevent the Engagement. The Day following, with riſing of the Sun was opened a clear Scene, repreſenting the whole Turkiſh Army, which having paſſed the Danube to joyn with ſome Tartarian and Turkiſh Troops, were Encamped on the farther ſide of a fenny or mooriſh Ground, which lies between Newhauſal and Senan, extending it ſelf from the Banks of the River to a certain riſing Ground, on which they had planted their whole Train of Artillery; the Appearance of which ſeemed very formidable, and not conſiſting of leſs than 55 or 60.000 fighting Men, which for the moſt part were experienced Soldiers, who had tried the Dint of the Enemies Sword, and often without fear beheld Death in the Face.

The two Armies in ſight of each other.

The fenny and mooriſh Ground, which interpoſed between the two Armies, was the Bar which reſtrain'd the Courage and Mettle of the Chriſtians; who otherwiſe, in deſpight of all diſadvantages, where had been any poſſibility of Engagement, would have broke through all to have cloſed and mixed with their Enemy. To perform which, the boggy Ground was tried and aſſaied on all ſides; but being found unpaſſable, the Generals feigned a kind of fear, and unwillingneſs to Engage, in expectation thereby to draw the Enemy to remove; ſo that raiſing their Camp, as if they had feared a Battle, the Turks carried on by their own Deſtiny, followed after them, leaving the place of a more advantagious Ground. The Chriſtians retreating at the diſtance of an hour's march, drew up in the Form and Order before mentioned, extending their left Wing towards the Danube, and their right towards the Hills of Saran. The Seraskier animated with this Retreat, as if it had been cauſed by his more formidable Force, which much exceeded the Chriſtians in their numbers, raiſed his Camp and followed the motion of the Chriſtians; and leaving a great part of the Infantry, with the heavy Cannon behind, on the riſing of the Hill; on the 15*th* and 16*th* Inſtant, he paſſed the mooriſh Ground, and marched towards the Enemy. At break of Day in Morning, ſo great a Fog or Miſt aroſe, that for ſome hours neither Army could diſcover the motions of the other; during which time the Chriſtians had the advantage to draw up their Army undiſcerned into a poſture of Battle, and to reinforce the left Wing with ſome Regiments, which were not as yet diſpoſed. No ſooner was the Army drawn up in its due Order, than the Fog diſperſed, and a bright Day appeared, which ſhowed the two Armies each to the other,

The Chriſtians Retreat.

And are followed by the Turks.

Both

A Battle begun.

both moving with a ſlow and regular Pace to joyn Battle. The Turks, who are of the more fiery and fierce Temper, cauſed their left Wing to March with ſome haſt to charge the right Wing of the Chriſtians; upon which they three times made an Attempt, but the Germans, who ſtood firm and unſhaken like a Rock, three times repulſed them with great Slaughter: The Duke of Loraine perceiving that the Turks preſſed the right Wing with their main force, cauſed his left Wing to move with a ſlow pace to their Succour: The German Foot were conducted by their Captains at the head of their reſpective Companies, with their Artillery in the Front; which being charged with Muſquet-bullets, were fired upon them ſo opportunely, and ſeconded by Vollies of ſmall Shot, that the Turks began to draw back at ſome diſtance. The Seraskier obſerving the diſorder of his left Wing, advanced with a ſtrong Body of Turks to charge the utmoſt part of the right Wing of the Chriſtians; to ſuſtain which, the Duke of Loraine redoubled the firing of the firſt Line, and commanded Count Dunewald to reinforce the firſt Line with ſuch Squadrons and Battalions of the ſecond Line, as were neareſt unto it. The Elector of Bavaria coming at the ſame time to their Aſſiſtance, put the Turks into a diſorder and confuſion, and afterwards forced them to make a Retreat, and draw a little off. The Hungarian Troops which were accuſtomed to the Turkiſh manner of Fighting, were order'd to charge them in the Rear; which having done, they wheel'd about and made a ſtand. So ſoon as the Turks were out of reach of the German Muſquets, they rallied again, and made another Charge as furiouſly as they had done the firſt; but the Imperialiſts maintaining their Ground, and not giving one Foot backwards, many principal Officers amongſt the Turks fell in this Charge at the head of their Squadrons, which cauſed a ſecond Diſorder amongſt them, and to turn their Backs; and being purſued ſlowly by ſome Troops, which continually fired upon them, they were put to the rout and fled. The right Wing of the Turks obſerving the Diſorder of the left, wheel'd about towards that ſide, not only to Succour the flying Party, but to joyn with them to make a ſecond Effort and tryal of their Fortune: To this Purpoſe a conſiderable Detachment advanced to charge the Chriſtians in the Flank; but being repulſed, the whole Army was put to flight, and being purſued by the Hungarians, Croats, and ſome Troops of Dragoons, fear ſo poſſeſſed many of them, that they took their Way, without any conſideration, over the Mooriſh or Fenny Grounds, where, ſinking up to their Middles in the Water, and their Horſes plunging in the Boggy places, above Two thouſand Men were loſt and periſhed in the Quag-mires. In the mean time, the right Wing of the Chriſtian Army having knowledge of the Paſſage over the Marſh, by the Turks, who led them the Way, purſued them beyond the ſoft Ground; and perceiving that the Turks began to rally on the top of the Hill, where they had left their Cannon with ſome Chambers of their Janiſaries; they made a ſtand until the Duke of Bavaria was come up with the left Wing. So ſoon as theſe two Bodies were joyned on the other ſide of the Mooriſh Ground, the Turks durſt not ſtand another ſhock; but leaving their Camp, Tents, Cannon, Baggage and Ammunition, they all betook themſelves to a ſhameful flight: Such was the general Fear and Conſternation amongſt them, that they fled by three ſeveral Ways; and the Janiſaries to Revenge themſelves on the Spahees, for expoſing and abandoning them upon the Hill, killed many of them to get their Horſes. Thô the Turks in the firſt Action did not loſe above Four thouſand Men, yet double the Number periſhed in the Fenny Ground, and in the Purſuit the Seraskier himſelf was wounded, and Oſman Paſha of Gran Cairo, and two other Paſhas were killed. The Chriſtians loſt not above Two hundred Men, and took but few Priſoners, becauſe that giving Quarter was almoſt out of Faſhion: The Purſuit continued not far, by reaſon that the Turkiſh Horſe were more nimble than the Chriſtian, and fled to Buda and Alba Regalis; the Foot ſaved themſelves in the Woods and in the Mountains: Howſoever, afterwards in more cool Bloud, many were hunted out, who had layn hid amongſt the Reeds and Oſiers which grew in the wet and marſhy Grounds, ſo that about Four hundred Priſoners might be taken, and many Chriſtian Slaves obtained their Freedom. The Turks loſt Thirty eight Colours, Twenty three Pieces of Cannon, two Mortars, and great ſtore of all ſorts of Ammunition. After the Battle was ended, Te Deum was ſung, and Thanks publickly render'd in the Camp to Almighty God for ſo ſignal a Victory; and the Prince of Neuburg was diſpatched with all diligence to render an account unto the Emperor of the happy Succeſs of that fortunate Day.

The Turks defeated.

The Loſs which the Turks ſuſtained.

Whilſt the Turks were engaged in Battle; and their Army routed and totally defeated; their Garriſon in Newhauſel declined, and the Beſiegers daily advanced upon them. The Galleries were again refitted and repaired, and the Soldiers lodged at the Foot of the Breach, ſo that all things were ready for a general Aſſault, only Count Caprara thought fit to demand firſt the Orders of the Duke of Lo- raine, not knowing whether he might be deſirous to be preſent at this great Action, to add the Subjection of this Place to the Glory of his late Victory: But the great Mind of the Duke, which was zealous for the Service of the Emperor, and the Chriſtian Cauſe, gave orders not to defer the Aſſault for one Moment; but firſt to adviſe the Beſieged of the defeat of their Seraskier, and to verify the ſame by ſome Priſoners taken in the late Battle, which were ſent into the Town, that being informed of their deſperate Condition, they might be induced to accept Terms of Mercy for their Lives. The 18*th* was the Day appointed for this Attempt, but the Rains were ſo violent, that it was thought fit to expect more favourable Weather, and to break ſome Paliſadoes with the Cannon, which were newly erected within the Breach. The next Morning being the 19*th*, at break of Day, the ſignal of the Aſſault was given by the diſcharge of Thirty ſix Pieces of Cannon, upon which, immediately Three thouſand Men were appointed to make the Aſſault. Count Scaffemberg, at the head of his Men, Commanded the Attack in face of the right Baſtion, and mounted thereupon without the loſs of one Man, and was followed by the Troops of Lunenburg and Suabia; the Turks now loſing their Courage, did not diſpute the Breach with ſuch Reſolution as was agreeable to the Reſiſtance they had made at firſt, and thereby gave opportunity to Scaſſemberg to poſſeſs himſelf of the Baſtion without much difficulty. The Baron of Aſti, and Colonel Kaletz, who Commanded the other Attacks, with the Troops of Cologne, Bavaria and Franconia, were in like manner ſucceſsful, and planted the Imperial Standards on the Breach, where a Paſha which Commanded it was killed; he was a Native of Bohemia, and of the Family of Garasba. In the Baſtion Eight hundred Men were ſlain, excepting Two or Three hundred, who caſt themſelves over the Wall into the Ditch, where they met the Sword of the Bavarians, and under that, ended their Days. All this time Seventy Pieces of Cannon continually plaid upon the Town, and Twenty Mortar-pieces which threw Bombs and Carcaſſes, and Three thouſand Men already upon the Walls and within the Town, in which Amazement the Turks ſpread a white Flag, which was the ſignal of a Parly or of a Surrender: But alas it was too late; for the Chriſtians being already Maſters of the Town, they killed all without remorſe, or diſtinction of Age or Sex, either of Men, Women or Children. The Governour of the Place died the next Day of his Wounds which he had received on the Breach; the Garriſon which conſiſted of Three thouſand Men, was reduced to On thouſand Seven hundred, moſt of which alſo were killed on that fatal Day. At length the Town being taken, Orders were given to ſtop the effuſion of Blood, which came only in time to ſave the Lives of about Two hundred Perſons.

All things ready for an Aſſault upon Newhauſel.

An Aſſault made.

The Town is taken.

In the Town Eighty Pieces of Cannon were taken, with great quantities of Ammunition. About Forty Chriſtian Slaves were ſet at liberty: The Plunder of the Town was eſteemed to amount unto two Millions, beſides Plate, good Furniture, and Moveables belonging to the Houſes. There were Fifty Horſes of Price taken, which were diſtributed amongſt the General Officers; all which was performed with the loſs of Fifty Soldiers only, and one Lieutenant. So ſoon as the Place was taken, Count Scaffemberg took Poſt to carry the joyful News thereof unto the Emperor, who was graciouſly pleaſed, in Reward of his Services, to conferr upon him the Government of that Place. The News of two ſuch Atchievements, as the defeat of the Turkiſh Army, and taking Newhauſel filled all Chriſtendom with Joy and Wonder, and Thanks to Almighty God for ſuch glorious and unexpected Succeſſes; which alſo being accompanied with the taking of Eſperies, by General Schultz, and the burning of the Town and Bridge of Eſſeck, by Count Leſly, increaſed the Jubilee of that Year in Chriſtendom; as on the contrary, never was there ſuch a Damp on the Spirits of the Turks, nor ſuch Sorrow and Grief as at that time: For the Loſs having been Univerſal through the whole Empire, the Death of Friends and Relations was lamented, as far as to Bagdat or Babylon it ſelf, and to other remote parts of the Eaſt.

The Advice of taking Newhauſel was brought to the Duke of Loraine, whilſt he was in Diſcourſe with the Elector of Bavaria, and the other Generals, of carrying on the Wars with ſuch other Enterpriſe, as might conclude and terminate this Campaign with the greater Glory. Upon the News hereof, the Generals moved with a deſire to ſee the Place, enter'd into it on the 20*th*, and there beheld the moſt horrid Spectacle of Slaughter and Deſolation in the World. To cover which, immediate Orders were given to bury the Dead, and to repair the Breaches which the Cannon had made in the Walls, and, with the Labour of Turkiſh Slaves, to fill up the Trenches and Approaches which were made without the Town during the Siege. The Chriſtian Slaves, which, on occaſion of the late Defeat, had eſcaped out of the hands of the Turks, came in great numbers to Newhauſel, and there related, how that the Se-

The diſmal Condition of Newhauſel.

raskier

The ill Condition of the Turkiſh Army.

raskier was come to Buda with a ſlight Wound in his Leg; that the Confuſion amongſt the Turks was ſo great, that they killed and robbed one the other, in the Flight; that in the Sieges of Strigonium and Vicegrade, they had loſt at leaſt Four thouſand Men; and that the latter place was ſo weakned by blowing up the Tower, and required ſo much time and labour to repair it, that they expected Orders from the Seraskier to demoliſh and abandon the Place. And in fine, That the Turkiſh Forces were ſo ſcatter'd and divided, that after all theſe loſſes and diſcouragements, they were ſcarce able to Rally an Army of 30.000 Men.

The Expedition of Count Leſly to the Bridge of Eſſeck.

We having not thought fit to interrupt the Relation of two ſuch great Matters, as the Fight near Strigonium, and the Siege of Newhauſal, with a Digreſſion unto other Actions; which being now paſt, let us look back, and behold the Progreſs which Count Leſly, and General Schultz were making againſt the Common Enemy in different Places. Leſly, being advanced into the Country near Kaniſia, had the good fortune to meet a Party of Turks, belonging to that place, which he defeated, and with the Slaughter of ſeveral hundred of them, cauſed the reſt to Fly into their Fortreſs. After which with an Army of about Eight thouſand Men, compoſed of Croats, Hungarians and Germans, he reſolved to render himſelf Maſter of the Bridge of Eſſeck: In order whereunto, having left his Baggage at Turnawitz, under the Cuſtody and Guard of Two thouſand Men, he marched away on the 9th of Auguſt, with Four thouſand Germans and Two thouſand Croats, all choiſe and experienced Soldiers towards Eſſeck, taking with them Proviſions for ten Days, in regard the Country was ſo waſted and deſtroyed by the War, that it yielded neither Food for Men, nor Forage almoſt for Horſes. The ſame Day a Detachment was made of Five hundred Croats, under the Command of an Officer to Inveſt Michalowitz, which upon the firſt Summons Surrender'd, before the Body of the Army appeared, without making any Terms, or Conditions for their Liberty. The Guard of this Fort was committed to the defence of Two hundred Foot and One hundred Heyduks; and the Priſoners taken, both Men, Women and Children were ſecured in a Tower belonging to the Fortreſs. After which the Army marched with all diligence towards Eſſeck: Upon ſight hereof, the little Forts and Palancas on the way, fired their Guns to Alarum the Country round about; and paſſing by Caraſina, which is a Town fortified with ſtrong Walls, and a double Ditch, the Turks Sallied forth with Horſe and Foot, and Skirmiſhed with ſome of the Troops, without any great hurt or damage on either ſide. After three or four Days of hard march, Leſly drew up his Forces on the 13*th* of the Month, into order of Battle in the Plains of Eſſeck, expecting to meet the Enemy in thoſe Parts: But finding no oppoſition, they pitched their Tents, and Hutts ſo much to advantage, and which took up ſo much Ground, as if they had contained an Army of at leaſt 30.000 Men: Soon afterwards, a Thouſand Turkiſh Horſe came and took a view of the Camp, with ſome Infantry marching in their Rear. Whereupon the Army Commanded by Siaus Paſha, drew out into order of Battle, and marched ſoftly againſt the Enemy, who ſtood firm, neither advancing nor retiring, until the Chriſtians were come within Muſquet-ſhot; and then they began to give Ground, which the Croats perceiving fell upon both their Wings, and gave them a total Rout and Defeat. The Horſe fled by the way of Belgrade, but being hotly purſued by the Croats, ſeveral of them were killed; but the Foot found a nearer Refuge in the Town and Caſtle of Eſſeck. The German Horſe and Foot, advanced ſtill in good Order to the Suburbs of the Town, which at the firſt Aſſault they took, and Plunder'd; and thence found an eaſy entrance into the City it ſelf; from whence the Turks had the Day before ſent their Wives and Children by Water towards the Danube, into which the Drave falls not far from the City: Thoſe who remain'd, were with their Goods and Moveables retired into the Caſtle.

The Turks near Eſſeck defeated.

Eſſeck.

The City of Eſſeck is not very large, but well peopled and well fortified; and as I remember, after the modern faſhion; it hath about Five hundred Shops belonging to Tradeſmen, and adorned with many Moſques and Caravaſaries, or Inns built for the Reception of Travellers, which are commonly ſtately Structures. It is very ſtrange, that this place which was eſteemed ſo ſtrong, and well fortified by the Turks, that they made it their Granary, and Store-Houſe for all ſorts of Proviſions for ſupply of thoſe Parts of the Country, ſhould ſo eaſily be abandoned, and opened to the Enemy, which was capable of ſuſtaining a Siege of many Months againſt an Army of far greater Force, than that of Count Leſly's, which did not exceed Six thouſand Men; eſpecially being well provided with quantities of Rice, Bread, Biſket, Salt and powder'd Fleſh; and with Barly and Oats; all which ſerved greatly to refreſh, and feed the Men and Horſe of Count Leſly's Army, which were languiſhing before for want of Victuals, the ten Days Proviſions which they had taken with them being almoſt conſumed. So ſoon as Leſly became Maſter of the Town, Guards were ſet to oppoſe any Sally from the Caſtle, whilſt the Soldiers were Ranſacking the Houſes, unto whom all the Plunder and Pillage was given. In the mean time, Count Leſly went to take a view of the Bridge, like which there is none in the World, and of which we have already given a Deſcription in the former part of our Hiſtory: The River Drave is not very broad in this place, there being only Sixteen Boats to ſuſtain the Bridge, which the Turks had broken down the Day before, looſing them that they might drive down the Stream; the Chriſtians endeavoured to recover them the next day following, but could not get aboard for want of ſmaller Boats; nor could they for want of this Bridge, paſs over the Drave to burn the Bridge of Eſſeck, which on that ſide is Eight thouſand Paces long, and all built of Oak. 'Tis true, Money and good Rewards were offer'd to ſome French Soldiers, of the Regiment of Erbeville, who with certain Germans and Croats under-took to paſs the River, and burn a great part of the Bridge; but the Boats on which they endeavoured to paſs were ſo ſmall and leaky, that they ſunk under them, and ſaved themſelves only by Swimming. Howſoever, That part of the Bridge which was on the Town ſide, being Eleven hundred Paces in length, was in a very ſhort time reduced to Aſhes: Whilſt theſe things were acting, a Rumour was ſpread amongſt the Soldiers, that all the Riches of the Paſha, and Moveables of value belonging to the Citizens, were conſerved within the Caſtle; which ſo animated the Soldiers to make an Aſſault up it, that Count Leſly could not reſtrain them from running the utmoſt hazard of Storming the place with open Force: But whilſt they were preparing Faggots, and other combuſtible Matter, to fix at the Gate which looks towards the City, a furious Fire took in divers Houſes, cauſed by the Rabble of the Soldiers, which burnt ſo violently, by reaſon that all the Houſes are built with Wood, and the very Streets Planked with Boards and Timber; the Ground being a Clay, and ſort of Owſey Earth, not capable of a Stony Pavement; that there was no poſſibility to quench it, or to Approach near to the Gate of the Caſtle on that ſide, ſo that in a few hours the whole Town was utterly conſumed: Wherefore they fixed ſome artificial Fire to the other Gate, on the Bridge ſide, with which both the Gate and the Bridge burnt together, without much offence to the Defendants within the Caſtle; but rather, the Fire and the Retrenchment made within, ſerved to ſecure them from an Aſſault: Wherefore General Leſly thought fit, not to Attempt any thing further upon the Caſtle, but having left all the Town in Ruins, he returned back the next Day to Turanowitz, where he had left Two thouſand Men to Guard and Secure the Baggage. With the good News of this Succeſs, Prince Deichtreſtein was diſpatched to the Emperor, and for Confirmation thereof, he carried with him five Colours of the Fourteen, which were taken from the Turks.

Taken by Count Leſly.

1685.

Eſſeck burnt.

Schultz before Eſperies.

Whilſt theſe matters were acting to the advancement and Glory of the Chriſtian Arms, General Schultz on the 19*th* of July, began to lay Siege to the Town of Eſperies, and by the 8*th* of Auguſt had formed all his Works, Trenches, and raiſed his Batteries, and threw ſuch quantities of Bombs and Carcaſſes into the Town, that it took Fire in divers places. Eſperies is a City of Hungary, in the County of Sarax, very well fortified, Situate on the River of Tarbez towards the Mountains, and on the Frontiers of Poland; and hath always been conſider'd by the Malecontents as a ſtrong place, and of great importance to them: The Garriſon conſiſted of a Thouſand Soldiers, all ſtout and brave Men, and more reſolute than the Turks; for the Malecontents having been provoked by the ill uſage, which the Emperor guided by his evil Council had put upon them, were always more obſtinate and fierce in Fight; either, becauſe they were made Angry by Oppreſſion, or became deſperate, and out of all hopes to obtain Pardon from the Emperor: Some Attempts were made by Tekeli to Reinforce the Garriſon with Six hundred Men, but they were prevented and beaten back; and the Beſieged made their Sallies, but with ill Succeſs, which moved them on the 16*th* to diſplay a white Flag in token of a Parly; but ſo ſoon, as ſome Soldiers and Officers came near to receive their Offers, they with-drew their Flag and Fired upon them, killing a Lieutenant and four Soldiers. Schultz being juſtly incenſed with this Treacherous Action, omitted nothing which might deſtroy the Enemy: He continually threw Bombs into the Town, and Batter'd the Walls; and having opened a Breach, an Aſſault was made, but his Soldiers were repulſed with conſiderable loſs. After which a Mine being formed, and ready to Spring, the Malecontents on the 10*th* of September deſired a Parly; but their late act of Treachery made the Imperialiſts more cautious in their Dealing with them, and to give them no anſwer, until they had ſent two Officers for Hoſtages; thoſe in the Town refuſing ſo to do, the General more furiouſly plied his Cannon and Bombs than before.

1685.

Capitulations made.

before. But at length, the Governour being made ſenſible of the impoſſibility of defending the Place much longer; deſired to Capitulate, and ſent Hoſtages for aſſurance of the Treaty, which was concluded on the 18*th* of September, on theſe following Articles.

Firſt, That the Commander, and ſeveral of the Officers and Soldiers being Germans, ſhould be received into the Service of the Emperor, and be advanced a Month's Pay.

Secondly, That ſuch as were not willing to enter into the Emperor's Service might have liberty to return to Tekeli, and to have ſafe Conduct into his Quarters.

Thirdly, That the Inhabitants ſhould have a free Exerciſe of their Religion, and that the Churches and Schools ſhould remain in the ſame Condition, as before, and enjoy the like Freedom and Liberty, as thoſe did, which had on the ſame Agreement and Articles ſubmitted to the Emperor.

Fourthly, That the Nobility might be reſtor'd to their Eſtates, and having taken a new Oath of Fidelity to the Emperor, might quietly enjoy the Privileges belonging to Noble Perſons.

Fifthly, That the Magiſtrates of the Town, and Judges ſhall continue in their reſpective Offices, and Places of Truſt.

Sixthly, That the City ſhall be conſerved and exempted from the Plunder of the Soldiery. And finally, That theſe particulars ſhall be approved and ratiſied by the Emperor.

The German Soldiers belonging to the Garriſon endeavour to Plunder.

Theſe Articles being agreed, a Surrender was made; but with much difficulty could General Schultz, and the Duke of Wirtemberg reſtrain the German Soldiers, who belonged to the Garriſon, and had taken part with Tekeli, from Plundering the Town: For they being inform'd of the many Succeſſes of the Imperial Arms, were deſirous to ſhew their Zeal to the Cauſe of the Emperor, and ſo ſignalize the Return to their Duty and Allegiance, by opening the great Gate of the City to the Soldiers of the Duke of Wirtemberg, with liberty to Plunder and Spoil together with themſelves; but General Schultz and the Duke of Wirtemberg being reſolved to maintain the Articles, Order'd two Officers with a Thouſand Men to Enter by the Breach, and at the Poſtern Gate; whilſt the Duke of Wirtemberg with Two hundred Men joyned with the Germans of the Garriſon, and together marched into the Town. Theſe Germans were ſo Zealous to teſtify their Loyalty and Kindneſs to their Country Men, That they invite them to fall upon the Spoil, and to Plunder with them; but by the care and good conduct of the Generals a ſtop was put thereunto, and the Town preſerved from Pillage, according to the Tenure of the Capitulations.

1685.

Proviſions and Ammunition in the Town.

The Day following General Schultz enter'd the Town, and cauſed the Ditch to be cleared of the dead Bodies, and the ſame to be decently Interr'd; and the Breach with all poſſible ſpeed to be repair'd. On the Walls were found Thirty Pieces of Cannon mounted, with a Mortar-piece carrying Sixty pounds Weight, and ſeveral Thouſands of Cannon Bullets, the greateſt part of which were Caſt by the Imperialiſts in the time of the late Siege; when the Town was taken by Tekeli in the Year 1678. There was no want of Proviſions in the Town, nor of Powder, of which there was One hundred and twenty one pounds weight. The Germans who were Two hundred and ſeventy in number, of which Thirty were Dragoons, were Liſted into the Emperor's Service, as alſo the greateſt part of the Talpazzi, a ſort of Hungarian Soldiers under their Hadnag or Captain. The others which were but Eleven, Swore never to Fight more againſt his Imperial Majeſty, but to return home, and live quietly and in peace amongſt their Neighbours. Such vertue and power hath good fortune, and ſucceſs in War, that it not only ſubdues by Force of Arms, but converts the Minds of Mankind, making them wiſe and gentle, free from Paſſion and Maſters of Reaſon.

Caſſovia.

The taking of Eſperies was followed by that of Caſſovia, which contrary to the Expectation of the Court at Vienna held out a formal Siege, and made a Vigorous Reſiſtance. Caſſovia called by the Hungarians Caſchaw, is the Capital City of the County of Abanwivar; it is very well fortified, being Situate on the River of Kunnert, which empties it ſelf into the Tibiſcus. Tho it be a Town which enjoys great Privileges, yet it hath long acknowledged and ſubmitted to the Emperor, as King of Hungary; but in Auguſt 1682, it was unhappily taken, and poſſeſſed by Tekeli and his Party, and continued firm to them until this Year 1685.

Caprara Beſieges Caſſovia.

When on the 6*th* of the Month of October, Count Caprara appear'd with his Army before Caſſovia, and immediately raiſed two Batteries, from which he warmly plied his Cannon and Mortars upon the Town; the like was return'd from thence upon the Beſiegers with much more Damage. The Garriſon within the Town, conſiſted only at firſt of Four hundred Soldiers beſides the Citizens, who were reſolved to hold out unto the laſt Extremity. The Count Peterhaſi, who was a valiant Man, 1685. and the beſt Soldier of all thoſe belonging to Tekeli, had made ſome overtures of returning to his Obedience, and to the Allegiance which he owed unto the Emperor; but all proved nothing but a mere Plot, and deſign to convey himſelf with Seven hundred Men into the Town: The which having ſucceeded according to his deſire, the Defendants were greatly thereby Reinforced, and animated to make a more Vigorous Reſiſtance than could be expected.

Peterhaſi relieves Caſſovia.

For on the 8*th* the Beſieged made a Sally and paſſed far within the Trenches; and thô they were forced at length to Retire, yet above Eighty Men were killed on both ſides. On the 14*th*, Count Caprara Summoned the Town, and received a fierce and diſdainful Anſwer; and the ſame Day three or four Sallies more were made, in which many were Slain, and amongſt the reſt the Prince of Wirtemberg, with ſeveral other Perſons of Quality. In the mean time General Schultz took the Caſtles of Kalo, Ibrano and Vibel belonging to Tekeli; as the Generals Heuſler, and Mercy had done of all the ſmall Places about Erla, for better convenience and enlargement of Winter-quarters.

1685. Count Caprara continued ſtill to Batter the Town, but with little effect, in regard the Garriſon within was ſtrong and reſolute: And the differences which happen'd between General Schultz and Caprara, were great obſtructions to the Surrender of that place: But at length an accommodation, and good underſtanding being made between thoſe two Generals, Schultz came to the Siege, and joyned his Army with that of Caprara, with which united Force a vigorous Attack being made, the City came to Terms of Treaty, and Surrender'd on the 25*th* Day of this Month of October.

Caſſovia ſurrendred.

Thus have we related the particulars of all the moſt Glorious Succeſſes, with which the Imperial Arms were bleſſed this Year in Hungary; which we have done ſo Amply, that we ſhall not need to add much more thereunto, until we have given an Account of the Progreſs of the Venetian Arms, which though very proſperous and conſiderable this Year in the Morea; yet we thought not fit to interrupt the Story of the dreadful Wars in Hungary, by a Digreſſion to any other Action.

THE

THE Venetian Succeſſes
AGAINST The TURKS, 1685.

1685.

WHILST the Morlaques retained in the Service of the Republick of Venice, made frequent Incurſions and Spoyls on the Turks in Dalmatia; The Mainiotes, (who are another ſort of People, much like the Morlaques) being animated with the Venetian Succeſſes, began to take up Arms againſt the Turks: But for better underſtanding of what is to follow, we will deſcribe a little the Countries and Humours of theſe two People. The Morlaques are a People who inhabit the Mountains of Croatia, on that ſide which looks towards the Adriatick Sea. In the Year 1647, the Paſha of Boſna and Tekeli, Father or Grand-father of the famous Tekeli of theſe Times, committed a Maſſacre upon many of theſe poor People at Knin; in reſentment whereof, at the inſtance of a certain Prieſt called Stephen Horien, who could mannage his Sword as well as his Crucifix, wholly ſubmitted themſelves to the Venetians, and deſired to live under their Protection: They receive no Pay from them, but have the Reward of a Sequin (which is Nine Shillings Six-pence Engliſh) for the Head of every Turk which they bring to the Venetian Officers; for Lucre of which, they have made ſuch conſtant Enterpriſes upon the Turks, and ſuch cruel Slaughters, as have rendred them irreconcilable Enemies to the Port. They are a ſort of Militia always on the Wing, under no Diſcipline but their own, encamp on the Plains, but live with their Families in the Mountains, avoiding the Licentiouſneſs which much Converſation brings, and the Luxury of Cities: They have no Learning amongſt them, nor underſtand much what belongs to keeping Faith or Promiſes with an Enemy, as appears by their dealing with the Turks of the Garriſon of Cliſſa, which in the Year 1648, having ſurrendred it ſelf up to the Venetians on Capitulations, as the Soldiers were marching out of the Town, they fell upon them, and killed Twelve hundred Men; and not one of the reſt had eſcaped, had not the Venetian Officers interpoſed their Perſons and Authority to ſave thoſe who as yet ſurvived.

The Morlaques.

1685.

The Mainiotes are in their Manners and Honeſty not much differing from the Morlaques, thô much diſtant from their Country. They are called Mainiotes from Braccio di Maina, or an Arm of Land in the Morea, ſtretching it ſelf out into the Sea, ſo called by the Venetians, but anciently part of the Country of the Lacedemonians: Theſe People by their nearneſs to the Sea, and ruggedneſs of their Mountains, have in deſpight of the Turkiſh Arms, conſerved themſelves after the manner of the Ancient Greeks, in form of a Republick, whereby they had ſome kind of Government and Juſtice amongſt themſelves, thô they entertained a Turkiſh Aga or Lord, rather out of Reſpect to the Turks, than Subjection; but as to other People, they lived upon the Spoil, keeping no honeſt Intercourſe with them, unleſs with the Venetians, whom they feared, becauſe of their Gallies which frequented their Ports. In the Iſle of Cervi, which belongs to them, and about Cape St. Angelo, which is oppoſite to the Iſle of Cerigo, they maintain ſeveral Brigantines; with which, when thy take Chriſtians, they tranſport them over to Tripoli in Barbary, where they find a Market for them; and when they have the fortune to ſeize Turks, they ſell them to Venice, or to Malta; and ſo are Free-booters on all ſides; I could of my own Knowledge, give diverſe Inſtances of their way of Trading, and of their Treatment uſed towards ſome Engliſhmen of my own

The Mainiotes.

1685. own Company, who unadviſedly and without due regard, ſet footing on their Land; but becauſe it is not material to our preſent Diſcourſe, and would be too great a Deviation from our preſent Hiſtory, we ſhall wave all that, and proceed to ſhew, That the Mainiotes hearing of the ill Succeſs of the Turks in all places, and that their Fortune was changed, declared for the Venetians, to whom they were more inclined on account of the Chriſtian Religion, profeſſing to be of the Greek Church, and to follow that Party and Intereſt which they obſerved to be in the moſt thriving Condition. The Turks to prevent the Revolt of the Mainiotes, ſent ſome Forces to reduce them; but they being ſupported by Venetian Succours, under Seignior Delfino, withſtood the Turks, and charged them with ſo much Vigour, that of Three thouſand five hundred Men, there eſcaped but an Hundred and Forty, all the reſt being either killed or taken. The News hereof encouraged the Greeks of Monte Nero, which is a Mountain in the Morea, to deſcend and Combate with the Turks on the Plains, in which Fight many were killed and wounded on both ſides.

The Mainiotes worſt the Turks.

In the mean time Paulo Michiel, a noble Venetian, with a Thouſand Horſe and ſome Foot joyned with Three thouſand Morlaques, made Incurſions into the Country round about. The Paſha of Boſna, who with Seven thouſand Men was on his March towards Hungary, alarum'd by theſe Forces, returned back to Clin, for Conſervation of his own Country: And having alter'd the Deſign and Expedition of that Year, he reſolved to wage War nearer home in Dalmatia, and accordingly ſent Eight thouſand Men to lay Siege to the Fortreſs of Duare. The Place defending it ſelf with great Reſolution, gave time and opportunity to the Generals, Valier and Michael, to come to its Relief; which they performed ſo effectually, that in leſs than an Hour's time the Turks were obliged to raiſe the Siege, with the loſs of Two hundred and fifty Men killed, and Seventy Priſoners taken; and on the Chriſtians ſide no more than ſix were ſlain, and about thirty wounded. The Morlaques continued the Purſuit, and routed the Paſha of Boſna himſelf, who with a Body of Four thouſand Horſe was marching towards Duare, to maintain the Siege. Theſe were Preludes to greater Matters, which were then acting by the Venetian Fleet, and groſs of the Army under the auſpicious Conduct of Franceſco Moroſini, Captain General of the Venetian Forces both by Sea and Land: For the Fleet being compleatly equipp'd and furniſhed with all Neceſſaries, both for the Services of Land and Sea, joyned with the Gallies belonging to the Pope, to Malta, and to the Duke of Florence; all which together compoſed a Fleet conſiſting of Five Galeaſſes, Thirty ſeven Gallies, Twelve Galleots, Twelve Men of War, Four Petaches, Three Pinks, and Three Tartans; beſides, Twenty two ſtout Ships of War, which triumphantly Sailed into the Archipelago, under the Command of Alexander Molino, and Girolamo Delfin, two Noblemen of Venice. The Gallies of Tuſcany were four, Commanded by Admiral Guidi, on which were Three hundred Land Soldiers, under Prior Vandomi. The Pope's Gallies were five in number, which carrying no Flag, joyned to the eight Gallies of Malta, and compoſed one Squadron together, under the Command of Prior Brancaccio, who had the Title of General, under whom was Cavalier Malaſpina, Director of the Eccleſiaſtical Gallies: Upon the Pope's Gallies were Three hundred Land Soldiers; and on thoſe of Malta were a Thouſand, including the Knights themſelves, Commanded by their General Le Tour, who by many brave Actions had ſignalized himſelf in the laſt famous Siege of the City of Candia. The other Land Forces, were Three thouſand Italians, One thouſand Sclavonians, and about Two thouſand Four hundred Germans, under Command of Prince Maximilian William of Brunſwick; all which together made up Eight thouſand Foot, beſides Horſe, and beſides ſeveral Perſons of Quality, who were Voluntiers, and amongſt the reſt Prince Philip of Savoy, a valiant and a generous Prince; all which Land-forces were Commanded by Count St. Paul, a General of great Ability and Experience, having for a long time ſerved the King of Denmark and the Duke of Newburg. Theſe Forces being joyned in the Port of Dragomeſtre, which was the Place appointed for their general Rendezvous; a Council of War was held, where it was reſolved to Sail to Cape Sapienza, both to make a Diverſion of the Turkiſh Forces, which in great numbers were aſſembled about Patras, and to confirm the Mainiotes to continue firm to the Venetians; but it ſeems their Succeſſes were different to their firſt beginnings, for the Venetians having with-drawn their Forces from them, they were over-powred by the Turks, and compelled to give Hoſtages for their future Faithfulneſs and Alliance to them.

Duare beſieged and relieved.

1685.

The Venetian Fleet and Auxiliaries.

The Guard and Care of Santa Maura and Preveza, being committed to Giacomo Cornaro, Proveditor General of the Iſlands, the Fleet, as was agreed, failed for the Waters of Sapienza, from whence a Meſſenger was diſpatched to the Mainiotes, encouraging them once more to make a Defection from the Turks, which they promiſed to do in deſpight of their late Agreement and Hoſtages given, being reſolved upon any Terms whatſoever to free themſelves from their Servitude to the Turks. In the mean time, a Council of War being called, it was put to the Queſtion, Whether they ſhould Beſiege Modon, Coron or Navarin; after ſome Debate thereupon, it was unanimouſly concluded, that Coron ſhould be the Place firſt to be inveſted, being the moſt feaſible Enterpriſe of any, and the moſt probable to ſucceed; and being neareſt to the Mainiotes, was the more commodious for keeping them firm and conſtant to the Republick: So ſoon as this Matter was reſolved, the Fleet weighed Anchor, and ſteered their courſe directly to the Place.

The Fleet Sails to Coron.

Coron deſcribed.

Coron is a Fortreſs ſituate in Meſſenia, one of the Provinces of the Morea; it is built in a triangular Form, after the ancient Faſhion, on a Promontory of Land, and is fortifyed with ſix Towers and a Caſtle. The Walls are high and thick, made of large ſquare Stones; the lower Town is inhabited by Greeks and Jews, and the Caſtle by the Turks: It is diſtant about twelve Miles from Modon, which together with Coron, belonged anciently to the Venetians; but were taken from them by Bajazet, in the Year 1499: After which, Prince Doria of Genoua, Commander of the Spaniſh Fleet, retook it from the Turks in the Year 1533; and having left one Mendoza therein Governour, with a mean Garriſon of Spaniards, it was in ſome few Years afterwards ſurrendred to the Turks, who knowing the Importance of the Place, have ever ſince that time conſerved it in their Hands until this Year 1685. When on the 25*th* of June, the Captain General Moroſini, in the Morning, landed his Forces almoſt within Cannon-ſhot of the Place, without any Oppoſition from the Turks, and approach'd the City under the ſhelter of ſome Olive-trees.

The Venetians land their Men, and open their Trenches.

On the 26*th* they began to open the Trenches, and to ſtreighten the Enemy on the ſide towards the Land: The Battallion of Malta, thoſe of Brunſwick, and the Pope's Forces, were poſted on the Right-hand towards the Sea, and the Venetians and Sclavonians on the Left towards a Suburb or Out-town, of which they made themſelves Maſters without oppoſition: The Works alſo went forward without much Interruption; and two Batteries were raiſed, each of four great Pieces of Cannon, with four Mortars for Bombs. In the mean time the Captain General kept the Place blocked up by Sea, that no Relief or Succours could come to it; and diſpeeded the Squadrons of Tuſcany, with that under the Captain of the Gulf, to Cruiſe towards the Levant: And becauſe the Tower of the Fort erected to the Sea, incommoded the Fleet, Order was given to Andrea Navager and Aguſtin Sagredo, the Captains of two Galeaſſes, with four principal Gallies to approach near, and to Batter the Tower, which was performed with good Effect and great Execution. The Works were continued with great Induſtry and Labour, and the Compleating of them haſtned with the more expedition, by reaſon that News was brought to the Camp, that the Paſha of the Morea, with a Body of Three or Four thouſand Horſe and Foot were aſſembling together to raiſe the Siege; to oppoſe which with the more advantage, all the Olive-trees near the Town were cut down, and a large Field and Campaign opened without any ſhelter for the Enemy. Notwithſtanding which, they were much encouraged in the Town, by Letters privately conveyed therein, giving them hopes from the Paſha of ſpeedy Relief; in expectation whereof, they returned an obſtinate and a rugged Anſwer to the Summons which the Captain Paſha had ſent them, ſignifying that the Fortreſs belonged to the Grand Seignior, which they were reſolved to defend, ſo long as one Stone thereof remained on the other. Nor were the Beſieged therein deceived; for the Captain General by moſt certain Intelligence was informed, that in the parts near to Lepanto and Patras Three thouſand Turks were got into a Body; and that ſome few Days before, Twelve hundred were upon the March under Muſtapha Paſha, and that the others commanded by Halin Paſha were following them with all expedition, and already on their March.

The Turks march to relieve the Place.

On the 7*th* of July in the Morning, a conſiderable Body of Turks appeared about two Miles diſtant from the Trenches, advancing ſlowly and with Circumſpection on their Way thither; the Number and Quality of which, (as was adviſed by a Janiſary, who was a Fugitive from the Enemy) were Five hundred Horſe, One hundred Janiſaries, Four hundred Segmen, beſides Two hundred more who were ſupplied from Modon, and gathered from the adjacent Villages, beſides a Thouſand more not far diſtant; and the Three thouſand Turks, who had lately muſtered near Lepanto and Patras, were alſo on their March with the ſame Deſign of Relieving the Town. As theſe Forces advanced nearer to the Venetians, Skirmiſhes daily happened, in which the Turks were for the moſt part worſted; and in regard Siaus Paſha found himſelf much weaker than the Chriſtians, he iſſued his Commands into all Parts near to Calamata and Miſitra, and the Parts adjacent, requiring them to ſend a Man out of every Houſe, with Mattock and Shovel, to level the Ways, and render them more paſſable and commodious for Tranſportation of Cannon, which he intended to plant on a Battery, deſigned to annoy the Venetian Fortifications: To Countermand which, the Chriſtian Ingeniers projecting where to erect another Battery to offend that which the Turks were deſigning, raiſed one in a very ſhort time, with three Pieces of Cannon on the higheſt Port, where the Forces of Brunſwick were lodged, which did great Execution, not only offending the new Battery of the Turks, but likewiſe the whole Camp.

Siaus Paſha.

The Paſha of the Morea fortifies his Camp.

The Paſha being come up with all his Forces very near to the Venetian Leaguer, fortified himſelf with a good Retrenchment; and with the Battery he had raiſed of four Pieces of Cannon, he plaid croſs-wiſe, which much incommoded the Chriſtian Camp, and the two Armies lying ſo near each to the other, it was impoſſible but Alarums muſt be continually given on both ſides, and daily Skirmiſhes muſt happen with various Succeſſes. The Beſieged being herewith encouraged, redoubled their Fire, and ſeemed neither to fear Aſſaults, nor the Springing of Mines, which being to be penetrated through a hard Rock, took up no leſs than three Weeks time to perfect. The Fortifications of the Place, thô much ruin'd by the Batteries, and much Damage cauſed by the Bombs, yet the Situation thereof was advantageous, being placed on a Rock, flanked with great Towers, defended with eighty Pieces of Cannon, with ſtore of Ammunition and Proviſion of all ſorts, and a good Garriſon within of Eight hundred Men, beſides many others fit to bear Arms; it ſeemed impoſſible to become Maſters of the Town, but by opening a wide Breach with Batteries and Mines, entring thereat with a vigorous Aſſault; during which they were to expect an Attack from the Turkiſh Army, which lay near them, and in a manner Beſieged them.

Mines prepared.

Orders for an Aſſault.

The Turks take a Fort from the Venetians.

La Tour killed,

with many other Knights of Malta.

They regain the Fort.

This poſture of Affairs gave ſome Trouble to the Chriſtian Generals, in what manner to offend the one, and at the ſame time to defend from the other; for the Mines were all ready, one under the great Tower, contrived and mannaged by the direction of the Ingenier Baſſignani; and the other oppoſite unto it, near the Attack of Brunſwick and Malta by Ingenier Verneda. And now to put theſe Matters in Execution, the Captain General Moroſini came on ſhoar, and having called a Council of War, it was thereat agreed, That the Day following being the 24*th* of July, a general Aſſault ſhould be made, and the Mine of Verneda ſhould in the firſt place be fired: All things were accordingly prepared; Segres a Knight of Malta, was to begin the Aſſault at the head of Sixty Granadiers, ſeconded by a Detachment of Fuſeliers and Sclavonians: La Barre Lieutenant General of the Battalion of Malta, was to follow the Chevalier de Refuge, at the head of the Pope's and Venetian Forces; theſe were to be ſeconded by the Prince of Brunſwick, with a Hundred and thirty Men, and afterwards followed by Monſieur de la Tour Maubeuge, General of Malta, with a Body of Knights carrying the Standard of that Order. All things being thus prepared and ordered, the Mine charged with a Hundred Barrels of Powder was fired, which threw up ſome of the Earth, and part of the Wall, but had not force ſufficient to move the Rock, but recoyled and vented it ſelf another way. The Turks taking this to be the Signal for an Aſſault, immediately inveſted the Redoubt and Battery, which (as we have ſaid) was erected on a certain Eminence of riſing Ground for ſecurity of the Lines, and ſtormed it ſo vigorouſly, that the Venetians and Sclavonians, who had the Defence thereof, were forced to give way and quit the Station, and the Turks remaining Maſters thereof, planted twenty of their Colours thereon, to the great Encouragement of the Beſieged. Monſieur de la Tour, who with his Knights was poſted neareſt to the Redoubt, conſidering that the Turks could not be permitted to remain in Poſſeſſion thereof without great Annoyance to the whole Camp; and that the ſame was not to be recovered without ſome extraordinary and ſignal Action; he without farther delay, called his Men about him, and with much Haſt and Bravery, which was natural to him, advanced towards the Enemy, and was the firſt who leaped into the Redoubt, and with his own Hand killed two Turks, who oppoſed him; a third coming behind him, threw off a light Helmet which he wore, and gave him a cut over the Head with his Cymeter, with which he fell to the Ground; and having received two other Wounds, from whence much Blood iſſued, his Companions deſigned to have carried him off, but were prevented by a Barrel of Powder, which accidently taking fire, carried him nearer towards Heaven, a Place deſigned for him in Reward of his Religion and Vertues. He was followed cloſe by ſeveral Knights, namely, by de Termes, a moſt valiant Perſon, who was alſo ſlain, as was Michon by a Muſquet-ſhot: Gramont received two Wounds with a Cymeter and a Muſquet-ſhot; Bourgon, de Galliard, & de la Motta, were mortally wounded, beſides many others, who ſo ſignalized themſelves in this Action, that they drove the Enemy headlong from the Redoubt, took eleven of their Colours, and in place thereof planted the Standard of the Order of Malta, at the ſight whereof all the Army with a loud ſhout cried, Viva Malta, or

May

1685.

May Malta live. The Venetians and Sclavonians, animated with this Succeſs returned to their wonted Courage, and killed Three hundred Turks, who had lodged themſelves in the Redoubt, ſuffering none of them to Eſcape. The Fight being ended, the Venetians expoſed the Banners they had taken from the Enemy, with One hundred and thirty Heads in view of the Beſieged, who being nothing affrighted herewith continued ſtill with much Valour and Reſolution to maintain their Fortreſs. The Death of General de la Tour, was lamented by all the Army, and eſpecially by the Captain General Moroſini: His Funeral Rites were celebrated with all the decency, and ceremony belonging to a Commander, whoſe Merits and Valour had made a deep Impreſſion in the Minds of his Soldiery; for the Sweetneſs of his Temper, with his modeſt and engaging Deportment, had made his Converſation agreeable to all that knew him. His Heart and Bones were Embalm'd, to be carried to Malta, where afterwards they were Interr'd. The Cavalier de la Barre being the next in place, was preferr'd to his Command of the Battalion, a Perſon qualified in all reſpects to ſucceed ſo worthy a Predeceſſour, having acquired a general eſteem by the bravery of his Actions, and long experience in the War.

The bravery of the Forces of Malta.

Notwithſtanding the repulſe which the Turks had received from the Redoubt, they returned again to make freſh Attempts upon the Lines, and with redoubled Force, having their Cymeters in their Hands they caſt themſelves once more into the Fort, which was call'd St. John's Fort, by reaſon that it had been preſerved by the Valour of thoſe Knights, who had the good Fortune to drive them once more from thence; by which and ſeveral other Actions of Chivalry, they became ſo formidable to the Turks, that they would Fly before them, ſo ſoon, as they ſaw the Standard of St. John advance. The Mine of Vernèda, having (as we have ſaid) recoyled without much effect; Conſiderations were had of Firing the other of Baſignani, charged with Two hundred Barrels of Powder, and thereupon to proceed to a General Aſſault: But in reguard the Turks in the Camp, who were now grown to Six thouſand Men, were ready on ſuch an occaſion, immediately to fall upon the Aſſailants; it was agreed as abſolutely neceſſary to give them Battle, and drive them out of their Works, before it could be ſafe, or poſſible to Storm the Breaches.

1685. Aug.

Whilſt theſe Matters were under Conſideration, two of the Rulers of the Mainotes, or grave Councellors (called by them Vecchiardi) happily came to the Captain General on the 5th of Auguſt, to offer to him in the name of their People a Recruit of Fifteen hundred Men, which were kindly accepted, and the Meſſengers treated with all imaginable Civility, and the next Day the Captain of the Gulf, with four Gallies was ſent to Tranſport them to the Camp. In the mean time, the Turks daily receiving new Recruits and Refreſhments, from divers parts of the Morea, infeſted continually the Chriſtians in their Works: The Defendants alſo let down ſmall Parties by Night from the Walls of the Town, who covering them under the Rocks, and in Holes, Fired upon the Guards; and being good Marks-men, and ſhooting with Art, ſeldom miſſed the Man they aimed at; and being nimble and active Men, skipt over the Rocks and made their Eſcape. By Night they threw their Artificial Fires from the Walls into the Trenches, which eaſily ſeized the Beams and Coverings, made of Olive-tree and Rafters of old Houſes, taken from a Neighbouring Village, which burned ſo impetuouſly, that with great difficulty the Fire was quenched; in doing which the Chriſtians were expoſed to the ſmall Shot from the Walls, which by the light of the Fire they poured upon them. Their numbers thus daily decreaſing by thoſe who were Slain, Sick and Wounded, there ſeemed a kind of neceſſity of performing ſpeedily ſome conſiderable Feat of Arms, before they languiſhed, and conſumed away in their Trenches; and before the new Re-inforcements were come from the Captain Paſha; who, as it was ſaid, was already arrived with his Fleet in ſome part of the Morea. This Council being agreed, as neceſſary by all the Chief Officers; The Captain General ſelected out of the Venetain Gallies and Galliots Fifteen hundred Levents, or Soldiers belonging to the Fleet, who were ſtout and robuſt Fellows, under Command of Lieutenant Colonel Magnanin; whom he commanded ſilently to Land after Mid-night; Twelve hundred whereof were to take their way towards the Enemies Trenches on the left Hand, at the opening into a Vally, and the remaining Three hundred to the right Hand; and to confound the Enemy the more, the Fleet was ordered to weigh Anchor, and move from their uſual Station. At the ſame time Three thouſand choiſe Soldiers under command of General St. Paul, were appointed to march out of their Line; and on the 7th of Auguſt by break of day in the Morning to Attack the Enemy in their Trenches, who were more numerous in their Men than the Chriſtians, and had much the advantage over them by their Horſe: All things were punctually obſerved, and executed accordingly;

The Venetians annoyed in their Trenches.

An attempt reſolved on the Turkiſh Camp.

The Turks defeated.

ly; And on the 7th Day, with the dawning of the Morning, the Signal was given by Firing two Barrels of Powder under the Breach, which was immediately followed by all the Cannon of the Fleet and Camp; and with ſuch thick Vollies of ſmall ſhot in the Front from the Three thouſand Men, which had Sallied out of the Line, and from the Levents, who had placed themſelves both in the Rear and Flank; that the Enemy believing the Venetian Camp to be much augmented by the acceſſion of the Mainiotes, and other Auxiliaries, affrighted with a panick fear, put themſelves generally to Flight: Thoſe who were more couragious and ſtood the Brunt, were not able to reſiſt long, but either were beaten, and trampled down by their Fellows, or killed by the Venetians, who purſued the Flying Enemy, as far as they could without Horſe, leaving the Ground cover'd with dead Bodies and with Blood.

The Booty taken.

This Victory was the more remarkable, becauſe it was obtained on the 7th of Auguſt, which was the ſame Day of the paſt Year, on which Santa Maura was taken. The Booty was very conſiderable; for beſides the Artillery, Arms and Ammunition of all ſorts, with ſtore of Proviſions, the Turks left Three hundred Horſe behind them, which they had not time to mount with their Tents and Colours, and two Horſe Tails, which are the Enſigns of Siaus Paſha, who alſo fell in this Action: All the Artillery was taken, amongſt which were ſix Pieces of Braſs Cannon, three whereof were marked with the Arms of the Republick.

Preparations for a new Aſſault.

Aug. 11th.

A Mine ſprung.

The Day following the Captain of the Gulf emploied (as we have ſaid) to bring Fifteen hundred Mainiotes to the Camp, arrived with Three hundred only: And on the 9th, the Commander in chief of the Forces belonging to the great Duke of Toſcany, alledging that the Term of his Commiſſion was expir'd, and that he was not authorized to remain longer at the Siege, he was licenſed by the Captain General to depart, and a Farewel taken with all expreſſions of kindneſs and civility. And now to complete and conſummate theſe Succeſſes by taking the Fortreſs, which was the chief and principal deſign of this Campaign; all induſtry and care was uſed to clear the Paſſage of the Rocks, Rubbiſh and other impediments which lay in the Way, on the ſide of the Attack of Brunſwick and Malta. And on the other ſide towards the Venetian Attack, to lay open, and widen the principal of the three Chambers of the Gallery, which was formed by the Engenier Baſſignani, and thereby to make an entrance ſo far, as was poſſible under the chief Bulwark: This work was ſo induſtriouſly carried on, that on the 10th of this Month of Auguſt the Mine was finiſhed, and charged with Two hundred and fifty Barrels of Powder, which were found in the Turkiſh Camp. And that Evening at a Council of War, at which the Captain General, and all the principal Officers were preſent, it was agreed next Morning by break of day to give Fire to the Mine and make a General Aſſault: Accordingly on the 11th the Troops being drawn into Battalia, the Mine was fired, which had it's due effect, overthrowing the Bulwark, and widening the Breach, and blowing up all the Garriſon which defended that part, into the Air, and not without hurt to many of the Venetian Soldiers, who were neareſt to the Mine, and ready to ſecond the Mine with an Aſſault.

An Attack on the Venetian ſide.

An Attack on the ſide of Malta.

So ſoon as the Blow was given, the Italian Troops commanded by Serjeant Major Jovij, with much Courage and Reſolution proceeded to the Aſſault, in the Front of which was Captain Marco Ferri, a Perſon who had greatly ſignalized himſelf at the Siege of Candia; and from thence, and from other places had brought many Scars and Wounds, which were ſo many Signs and Marks of Honour. The Aſſailants were received with Bravery by the Defendants; Howſoever, an opportunity was given them to Enter the City at that time, had they not inſtead of improving the advantage, contented themſelves with a Lodgment on the Breach. At the ſame time, ſo ſoon as the noiſe of the Mine was heard, the Forces of Malta, who were at the Head of the other Attack, ſeconded by the Pope's, and thoſe of Brunſwick, with great Vigour gained the Top of the Breach, which had been ſome Days open, thô it was of very difficult acceſs, and had been repair'd in ſome manner by the Defendants: Here now began a very furious Fight, in which the Knights behaved themſelves with as much Manhood, and Proweſs as became their Order, endeavouring to force the Retrenchment; but it being well Flank'd and furniſhed with Artillery, they fired ſo terribly upon them, that four of them were killed on the place, and above thirty wounded. The Cavalier de la Barre, who commanded that Battalion, behaved himſelf with all the Courage imaginable, and thô ſeconded with like Reſolution by the Pope's Officers, and thoſe of Brunſwick, yet they were repulſed and forced to Retire. But the Knights having heard how great a Breach the Venetian Mine had made, they reſolved to give a freſh Aſſault in the Afternoon; and in the mean time the Levents were Landed from the Galiots, to give better Countenance to this Enterpriſe. All things being prepared accordingly, and the 1685.

A Parly offered.

Troops Marching out of their Lines to attempt the ultimate Aſſault, gave the Beſieged cauſe to believe, that it was not poſſible longer to reſiſt, their Commander in Chief with many others of their principal Officers being buried in the Ruins; they ſpread a White Flag in token of a Parly.

The General St. Paul upon ſight hereof, gave a ſtop to the Aſſault; but the Captain General refuſed to accept any Treaty, unleſs the main Tower were in the firſt place delivered into their Hands. But whilſt they were Capitulating on this Preliminary, it unfortunately happened out, that two Soldiers quarrelling together a Piſtol was ſhot off, and the Bandeliers of another Soldier took Fire, which gave ſuch an Alarum to the Beſieged, that they cryed out Treachery, and therewith fired one of their Cannon planted at the entrance of the Breach, laden with ſmall ſhot, which killed ſeveral that were mounted thereon: This Accident was ſufficient to put an end to the Treaty, and incenſe the Soldiery, who tranſported with Fury, broke into the middle of the Town, and with miſerable ſlaughter put Men, Women and Children to the Sword, without any reſpect either to Age, or Sex.

Coron taken by Storm.

Thus ended the Siege of Coron, on the 11*th* of Auguſt, which was Seven and forty Days after the Trenches were opened. It was a Bloody Day to both ſides. The Chriſtians loſt about Three hundred Men, but the Turks near Three thouſand; all the Inhabitants, as well as the Soldiery being miſerably ſlaughter'd, and the Town committed to the Plunder and Pillage of the Soldiery. After which Te Deum being Sung, with other Hymns of Praiſes, and Thanks to Almighty God, the Captain General embraced all the Chief Officers with much affection and kindneſs, as namely the two Princes of Brunſwick and Savoy, and all the others in their ſeveral Degrees: He declar'd, That Count St. Paul with his Venetians had gained much Honour; That the young Count of Brunſwick had ſignalized himſelf in a particular manner; That the Forces of Florence had given good proofs of their Valour, to the time of their Departure, which was ſome Days before the end of the Siege. That the Battalion of Malta, which were always joyned with the Pope's Forces deſerved immortal Glory, as did all the Knights, who ſo bravely had ſacrificed their Lives in defence of the Chriſtian Faith; and that the Cavalier de la Barre, by many brave Actions had maintained the the ſame Honour which de la Tour had gained. He alſo particularly applauded the two Sergeant-Majors of Battalia, Jovii and Aloenago, the Marquis of Corbon, Colonel of Dragoons, with the Ingenier Baſſignani, on whom he beſtowed a Gold-chain and a Medal in Reward of the great Service he had done, by well contriving and fortifying the Mine, which gave the ultimate and fatal Blow to the Town. In fine, he beſtowed due Praiſes and Commendations on the inferior Officers and common Soldiers, amongſt whom the Booty of the Town being diſtributed, every one remained entirely ſatisfied. In the Town and Fortreſs thereof were an Hundred twenty eight Pieces of Cannon, of which Seventy were of Braſs, of which, ſome were buried in the Ruins; in digging for which, there was a Stone found with this Inſcription:

1685.

Moroſini applauds the Valour of his Officers.

Hoc opus ſieri fecerunt
Magnifici
Et Clariſſimi D. D.
Bernardus Donato
Caſtellanus
Et Ludovicus Contareno
Capitaneus
Et Proviſores Coroni
M. CCCCLXIII.

Before the Departure of the Captain General, the Government of this important Place was committed to the Care of Georgio Benzon, to be Proveditor in extraordinary, and to Juſtin de Riva in ordinary. The Super-intendency over the Arms was committed to Count Alexander Vimes, and his Brother was declared Governour.

The Pope's Gallies, and thoſe of Malta return home.

The Siege of Coron being thus honourably concluded, the Prior Brancaccio, General of Malta, and the Cavalier Malaſpina Antiano, Commander of the Pope's Gallies, declared, that the time allotted them for their continuance Abroad by Commiſſion and Inſtruction being expired, they deſired leave to return to their reſpective Countries. The Captain General, who was deſirous to add one brave Action more to the Glories of this Campaign, ſhewed himſelf unwilling to loſe ſo good Company, and ſo great a Diminution of his Forces, inſtantly deſired their Aid and Aſſiſtance for proſecution of a farther Deſign; but they urging that the term of their Commiſſions was already expired, and therefore againſt their own Inclinations, they were obliged to depart, and more-eſpecially that their Forces were more than half diminiſhed, and moſt of their Knights either killed, ſick, or wounded, they at length prevailed with the Captain-General to grant them a Releaſe; from whom having received the Viſits and Complements of Farewel, they ſet Sail on the 22*d* of Auguſt at Night; with whom alſo departed General St. Paul, a Perſon very aged, and tyred red with the Toils of the Campaign, had Licenſe given him to eaſe himſelf in the Iſland of Zant, as alſo to the Colonel his Son, who had for ſome time laboured under the Indiſpoſitions of a malignant Fever.

The Captain Paſha having received Intelligence of the loſs of Coron, ſailed with his Fleet of Gallies in ſight of Cerigo, hoping thereby to divert the Venetians from attempting farther any Deſign for that Year: But this Sally was only in Bravade, rather than in earneſt; for the Venetians were become ſo terrible to them by the late Succeſſes, that the Captain Paſha with fear retired into the Port of Napoli di Romania, where, ſo ſoon as he was entred, he drew the Chain croſs the Mouth of the Harbour for Security of his Gallies, and landed the moſt choiſe and ſelect Men of his Militia on the Shoar; where he formed a Camp, as well to receive the ſcattered and diſ-ſpirited Troops, which were fled from before Coron, as to give Life and Courage to the affrighted People of thoſe Provinces, and reſtrain the Mainiotes from their intended defection from the Ottoman Empire; promiſing to remit unto them all the Mony they owed for Charatch or Pole-mony, and to free and exempt them from all ſorts of Taxes and Impoſitions for the three enſuing Years. This Captain Paſha was chief Favourite. The Captain General who was ſtill at Coron, repairing thoſe Fortifications with great diligence, ſet Sail to the Coaſt of Zarnata, being recruited with the Forces of Saxony, which (as we have ſaid) were lately arrived in the Iſland of Corfu.

The Captain Paſha retires to Napoli de Romania.

Zarnata

Zarnata is a Fortreſs almoſt of a round Figure: It is naturally ſtrong, being ſituate on a high Hill, but rendred much more conſiderable by Art. The Captain General ſent a Detachment to Summon the Place, which began at the firſt Overture to entertain a Treaty; and thô the groſs of the Venetian Army was not within five Miles of them, and had not as yet made any deſcent; and the Turkiſh Forces, under the Captain Paſha, were much at the ſame diſtance from them: Howſoever, the Aga which govern'd the Place, whether out of fear or affection to the Chriſtians, Surrender'd it at the firſt Demand on the 11*th* of September. The Garriſon, which conſiſted of Six hundred Men, was embarked, and guarded by a Convoy within a ſmall diſtance from Calamata; but the Aga fearing Death for his Cowardice or Treachery, remained in the Venetian Camp, where he was entertained by the Captain General with a Penſion of Thirty Pieces of Eight a Month, after he had received Baptiſm, with Twenty other Turks, who were conſenting to the Surrender. In this place were fifty one Pieces of Cannon, Two hundred Quintals of Powder, with great ſtore of Bullets, Ammunition, and other Proviſions: After which, Seignior Moroſini put into the Town Two hundred and fifty Foot Soldiers, under Command of the noble Venetians, Bartholomeo Contareni and Angelo Emo.

is yielded.

Whilſt theſe things were acting, the Captain Paſha, who was encamped about five Miles diſtant from Zarnata, with Seven thouſand Foot and Three thouſand Horſe; upon News of the Surrender of the Fortreſs, withdrew his Forces under the Cannon of Calamata. This fear which the Turks ſhewed, animated the Chriſtians to adventure a Battle, without which, it was concluded at a Council of War, that nothing could be enterpriſed either towards Subjection of Calamata, or any other Town in the Maina; upon which Reſolution the Venetians landed their Forces on the Shoar of Agiaſio, which is ſituate at the entrance of the Province of Maina, a Place ſecure and advantagious, having on the Right-hand Mountains, on the Left Woods and Ditches, and on the Front ſeveral little Hills and Torrents of Water. So ſoon as ſome of the Venetian Troops appear'd on the Shoar, the Turks advanced to the tops of the Hills, on which they planted forty or fifty Colours or Banners, and about Five or Six hundred of their Horſe placed themſelves under the Hills in the Valley: To diſlodge theſe, and ſecure their own Camp, the Venetians had raiſed two Batteries of three Pieces of Cannon each, at the appearance of which, both the Horſe marched away, and the Colours were withdrawn. The Chriſtians taking this for an Inſtance of the Enemies fear, the Captain General put his whole Army into Battalia, with the Troops of Saxony, conducted by General Degbenſelt, an old and experienced Commander, and marched towards the Enemy; and at the ſame time, about a Thouſand Mainiotes flanked by Two hundred Morlaques, appeared on the top of a Hill to the Right-hand. In this poſture the Chriſtians remained all Night, and the next Morning being the 14*th* of September, which was the Exaltation of the Holy Croſs, the General gave Orders to the Army to move and attack the Enemy: But the Turks not thinking themſelves ſafe under the Walls of Calamata, ſet fire to their Magazines, and quitted the Town, making a Retreat with ſome ſmall Skirmiſhes, without much Damage to one ſide or the other. This Retreat or Flight rather, was ſo ſhameful, that the Chriſtians believed it at firſt to be ſome Stratagem, and were cautious either to purſue the Enemy, or enter the Town; but at length a Party of Sclavonians and Mainiotes being commanded to advance to the

The Venetians land their Forces.

The Captain Paſha put to Flight.

Town,

1685. Town, they obſerved it to flame in diverſe Places; for the Inhabitants finding themſelves abandoned by the Captian Paſha, deſpaired of all Relief, quitted the Town and ſet fire to their Houſes: And thus did the Chriſtian Army enter Calamata, without any oppoſition. The News of theſe Succeſſes encouraged the Mainiotes that they repaired to the Venetian Camp in great numbers; a Party of which was preſently ſent in purſuit of the Enemy. In the Caſtle were only found nine Pieces of Cannon, and thoſe nailed and rendred unſerviceable; the Ammunition was equal to the Arms, and the Place of it ſelf being eſteemed inconſiderable and unfit for a Garriſon, was diſmantled, and the Walls demoliſhed.

Calamata taken.

And demoliſhed.

Calamata is ſituate on the River anciently called Pamiſſus, or Paniſſus, in the Province of Belvedere, now Spirnazza: The Town is not environed by Walls, but defended by a Caſtle, which was only tenable againſt ſome preſent Incurſion, and for that reaſon, both the Turks abandon'd it, and the Chriſtians demoliſhed it.

After Calamata was taken, the Venetians ſeized on Porto Vitalo, in which were fifty Pieces of Cannon, ten of ſmaller Artillery, with ſtore of Ammunition. After which the Captain General appearing before Chielifu, the Garriſon therein conceiving themſelves in no Condition to make defence Surrender'd upon Articles. Aſan Paſha, who was Governour of that place, and of all the Province round, was the firſt to lead the way out of the Town, and being accompanied with a Thouſand People, carried the Keys to the Admiral Gally; Three hundred and fifty of which were Tranſported to the Iſland of Cervi, with their Goods and Moveables.

Chielifa Surrendered.

During this Summer Seignior Molino Commander of Twenty Sail of Ships, employed (as we have ſaid) to Cruiſe in the Archepelago, Chaſed the Captain Paſha from place to place, and at length drove him into Rhodes, where he ſecured himſelf and his Fleet, with a ſtrong Chain drawn croſs the Harbour, not daring to adventure a-broad, thô the Venetians came often to brave him, and challenge him to an Engagement.

The Captain Paſha droven into Rhodes.

Thus ending this Campaign with great Reputation and Glory to the Venetian Arms, the Captain General Moroſini Sailed for Corfu, to take his Winter-quarters there: The Troops of Brunſwick were ſent to Zant, thoſe of Saxony with the Dragoons to Santa Maura, and other independent Regiments to Corfu, all due care being taken to make Proviſions for their expected Gueſts. Whilſt theſe Forces were drawn into their Winter-quarters, to enjoy ſome eaſe after the labours of War; the Seignior Molino Captain extraordinary of the Ships, was appointed for a Guard to the Coaſt, and with his Squadron to Cruiſe near Cape Sapientia, and the Gulfs and Narrow Streights in thoſe Seas.

The Captain Geneal draws into Winter-quarters.

1685. But before the Captain General thought fit to lay up his Fleet until the next Seaſon in Corfu, he touched at Santa Maura and Preveſa, to take a View and Survey of the State of thoſe Places; but in his way thither, accidentally putting into the Port of Gomenizze with ſome Gallies, he order'd the Proveditor with the reſt of the Fleet to paſs to the other ſide, and beſtow a few Shot upon the Caſtle; which being done, ſome Troops were landed, and marched in Military form towards the Caſtle; upon ſight of which the Turks were become ſo Cowardly and Timorous, that they fired one Gun and abandoned the Caſtle, and fled into the neighbouring Mountains and Woods for Refuge. So the Venetians took immediate Poſſeſſion of the Fortreſs, in which were Twelve Pieces of Braſs Cannon.

The Venetians take Gomenizze.

This place of it ſelf was of no great conſideration; but in regard it was the Neſt, and Sanctuary for Pyrates and Robbers, who in the times of Peace continually infeſted Corfu, Parga and Pazo, the News thereof was ſatisfactory and pleaſing, to all the Inhabitants of that Coaſt: So that when the Captain General on the 13*th* of November enter'd into Corfu, he was there received with loud Acclamations, extolling the Glory of his conſtant and continued Succeſſes, with joyful remembrance, and with particular Thanks for having reduced the Caſtle of Gomenizze, which had long been an ill Neighbour, and had much annoy'd and infeſted their Seas.

Thus were the Affairs of the Turks ruinous as well at Sea as at Land, in Hungary and in the Morea; the Paſha overthrown at Eſſeck was called Siaus, and ſo was the Captain Paſha, or Admiral of the Gallies, as if there had been ſomething of Misfortune in the Name. Siaus, who was Admiral of the Fleet had formerly been Moſaip, or Favourite, and in his younger Years being a comely Perſon, was much beloved by the Grand Seignior; he was always in his Preſence, and ever had the Honour to be Familiar with him in Converſation; to be Clothed like his Maſter, and to Ride equal with him on the right Hand, which is the inferiour place with the Turks. But he that had always been educated in a Court, was upon the tryal found unfit, and unable to perform the Office of an Admiral at Sea; and therefore was order'd to leave the care and conduct of the Fleet to Mazzamama, ſo called becauſe he had killed his Mother, but he

A Character of the Captain Paſha.

1685.

Mazzamama takes the Command of the Turkiſh Fleet.

he was a good Sea Officer, bred up in the Gallies from his youth, and one of the Beys of the Archipelago, of which there are Twenty four in number, who are obliged to Arm, and Man their Gallies at their own Coſt and Charge, having in Conſideration thereof the Haratch or Pole-money of the Iſlands, ſetled on them for their Maintenance. He was the Son of a Captain Paſha, killed by the Engliſh in Fight at Sea; for which cauſe he hath ever ſince declared his Hatred and Malice againſt our Nation: He was a very fat and corpulent Man, afflicted much with a Fiſtula in Ano, which he cheriſhed by exceſſive Eating and a Sedentary Life, uſing no other Exerciſe than what he received by the motion of his Gally.

Siaus Paſha being diſcharged from his Office of Admiral, was made Generaliſſimo of all the Land Forces in the Morea, but he was as unfit to Command an Army, as he was a Fleet; for he was no Soldier, nor of any experience in a Camp; and beſides he was affected with an incurable Lameneſs in one of his Knees, whereby he could neither Walk, nor mount on Horſe-back without help. His Succeſs was agreeable to his Abilities; for (as we have ſaid) his Forces were defeated, his Kaya or Lieutenant killed, and he himſelf with difficulty eſcaped.

When the News of theſe ill Succeſſes came from the Morea, Hungary and other parts, the Court at Adrianople uſed all imaginable Arts to conceal the loſſes; the Curriers were order'd to come privately by Night into the Town, and none durſt to Cabal or Diſcourſe of News, which was the cauſe that nothing but Lies were whiſper'd about the Town. Upon theſe Emergences frequent Councils were held, at which the Mufti, Kadileſchers, or Chief Juſtices, Reis Effendi, or Secretary of State, and Janizar-Aga, all firm and entire Friends to the Grand Vizier, were always preſent and aſſiſtant to him; by which unuſual method of proceeding in this Court, he gave the World to underſtand, that acting nothing of himſelf, he was not to be blamed or cenſur'd for the Succeſs, or to be accountable for the miſcarriages of the War. And whereas there were ſeveral Murmurings amongſt the People, and in the Army eſpecially, againſt the Vizier for not going to the War; he publickly deſired the Grand Seignior's leave and commands to go; to which when the Sultan ſeem'd inclinable, the Council unanimouſly oppoſed it, repreſenting that it was never accuſtomary, nor decent for the Emperor, to ſend his Repreſentative with his Seal and Authority without a Royal Army, or without expectation of performing ſome Signal Enterprize: And that on any other Terms or Circumſtances than theſe, his going would be Prejudical and Diſhonourable: It was farther alledged, That the attendance on the Vizier would conſiſt of many uſeleſs Mouths, and the occaſion of buſineſs draw many Followers to his Court, who muſt neceſſarily conſume a great part of thoſe Proviſions, which would be more uſefully emploied for the uſe and ſuſtenance of the Camp.

The Grand Vizier's Caution.

1685.

Excuſes for not going to the War.

But the beſt Excuſe of all, was the ill ſtate of the Vizier's health; concerning which there were various Reports; ſometimes it was ſaid, that he was deſperately ill, then again that he was recover'd, then that he was relapſed; ſome ſaid, that he was Sick in Policy, others in Reality; but what ſeemed moſt probable was, that he was afflicted with the Spleen, by reaſon of which all kind of ill News made a ſenſible alteration in him: The Cares which conſtantly tormented him, kept his Mind always bent, and increaſed the pain in his Side, which kept him from Repoſe: Theſe matters with Sixty ſix years of Age, were Afflictions ſufficient to weary out, and haraſs a Body much more ſtrong and robuſt than his: Thô formerly he had the Report, and that not without reaſon of a bad Man; yet after his being Vizier, his Comportment was with all Juſtice and Moderation; and thô naturally he was Paſſionate, yet ſtriving with his Temper, he became mild and eaſie in his Converſation. Our Engliſh Nation in Turky were ſenſible of this great change of his Humour; for he became kind to them (which is extraordinary in a Turk) without other advantage to himſelf, than his uſual and regular Preſents.

The ill ſtate of the Turks.

It was impoſſible, but that the whole Empire, even as far as to Baſora, to Babylon or Bagdat, and the moſt remote parts of the Eaſt, ſhould feel the dire effects of this unfortunate War; little Money was ſtirring and Trade interrupted, the want of which affects the Publick, as much or more than private Members. The Grand Seignior was forced at the beginning of the laſt Campaign, to diſfurniſh his Coffers in the Seraglio of all the ready Money in Caſh; for the Riches there conſiſts for the moſt part in Jewels and rich Furniture, rather than in Banks of Money: After which about the middle of the Summer, they ranſacked the Treaſury of the Stables, and took out from thence in Silver and Gold Stirrups, and other Horſe-furniture, which they cauſed to be Coined with 30 l. per Cent. Allay, to the value as was reported of Two thouſand Purſes, which made juſt a Million of Dollars. Misfortunes and Scarcity made the Soldiers mutinous upon every ſmall occaſion, and averſe from going to the War: The Lord Treaſurer ſurer was removed from his Office, and made Paſha of Damaſcus, and ſent to ſupply the place, and charge of Siaus Paſha killed at Eſſeck, and order'd to repair the Bridge and defend that Paſs: A Party of about Two thouſand five hundred Spahees then at Adrianople, were commanded to follow him upon this Expedition. But Five hundred of theſe, withdrawing themſelves from the reſt demanded their Pay, and refuſed to March; ſaying, That by the original conſtitution of their Order, they were not obliged to go to the War, but with the Vizier, or Standard of the Prophet, which it was their Profeſſion and Office, to Guard and Defend. But to give a ſtop to this Sedition, and Nip it in the Bud, the Vizier immediately ſent his Kaiah with all his Retinue, and Janizar-Aga to the place where they were aſſembled, not far diſtant from the City; Twenty of them were taken and ſent to the Grand Seignior, who cauſed four of their Heads to be cut off, and the other Sixteen were ſent to the Gallies; and two of their Chief Officers were Baniſhed to Cyprus, for keeping no better Order amongſt their Men; all the reſt were diſperſed, and in an hour's time the whole Buſineſs was over; and in a few Days afterwards, thoſe who were baniſhed, and thoſe who were ſent to the Gallies were recalled and reſtor'd to their places, and all of them contentedly, and in good order marched towards Hungary. But they had not proceeded far on their way before advices came, that after Ibrahim Paſha's defeat near Strigonium, there had aroſe differences and diſturbances between the Spahees and Janiſaries, to ſuppreſs which Ibrahim had cut off ſeveral of them: Whereupon it being not thought fit to ſuffer theſe Mutinous Spahees, to joyn with the diſcontented Parties, a ſtop was put to their March; until ſuch time as Agiemzade, a grave and wiſe Perſon, one who had formerly been Reis Effendi, or Secretary of State, was ſent to the Army in Hungary, with a Sum of Money to appeaſe the Mutinies, and ſoften the Minds of the Soldiery. Theſe little diſturbances cauſed the People to talk, and brought the Vizier's name upon their Tongues: And thoſe who pretended to be Politicians diſcourſed, That this Empire had been raiſed, and ſupported by the Soldiery; and that from them deſerving Perſons had been promoted, and advanced to the high Degrees of Viziers and Generals; and not from Paraſites and Syphcoants, or from effeminate Courtiers and Favourites: And that the Grand Seignior, who diverted himſelf wholly in Hunting and with Women, neglecting the main concernments of the Empire was not like his Progenitors, who in Perſon marched at the Head of their Armies, and encouraged their Soldiers by their Preſence and Perſonal Valour: From ſuch Diſcourſes as theſe amongſt the Commonalty, who reported much worſe of their Affairs, than perhaps they were in reality, we may expect ſome greater Changes for the enſuing Years: For the Army was become Cowardly and Mutinous, and running from the War more willingly than coming to it; and the Common People affected with a ſtrange Superſtition, that Fortune will change with exchange of Officers.

A Mutiny amongſt the Spahees.

But before we put an end to this Year 1685, let us a little return once more into Hungary, and take a view of what was acting in the Upper parts of that Kingdom; where the Succeſs of the Imperial Arms had produced ſuch Dread and Terrour in the Minds of Turks and Malecontents, that many places yielded at the firſt Summons, or at the appearance of an Army before them: In this manner Potak, Regentz, Ungwar and Serau, all Garriſons belonging to Tekeli, yielded without one Blow, and received the Imperial Troops, which being welcom'd with real Joy by the Inhabitants, the Military Parol was maintained, and not the leaſt injury or damage offer'd to the People. The Surrender of theſe Places were leading Cards to Senetz, Valdachin, and to the Caſtles of Sonna, Annoin, Pallotz, Duron, Spadiz, Joram, Hinghen, Zatmar and other places, which ſubmitted to Count Caprara, and willingly received German Garriſons, and being pardon'd and abſolved from their Rebellion by this General, they took a new Oath of Fidelity and Allegiance to the Emperor.

Several places belonging to Tekeli ſurrender.

Tekeli in Diſgrace.

And received to Favour.

But that which chiefly facilitated the defection of theſe Places, was a report that Tekeli was ſeized by the Turks, and lay chained at Waradin; the Fame of which had ſome Foundation; for the Seraskier Shitan Ibrahim having had very ill Succeſs the laſt Summer, knew not where to charge the Fault, and excuſe himſelf better than by laying all the blame upon Tekeli; and to evidence his Reſentment, cauſed him to be impriſoned at Waradin, until his Crimes were notified to the Court, and Orders given by the Grand Seignior for his Puniſhment. But Tekeli by his Agents had ſo well mannaged his Cauſe before the Divan, that he was fairly acquitted from all Blame, and the Seraskier diſgraced for his raſh Judgment, as will hereafter be diſcourſed more at large: And indeed the Grand Seignior and his Council did wiſely conſider the great Intereſt of Tekeli in Hungary, and what Influence his preſent Diſgrace had already had over the many Towns and Caſtles which belonged to him, and which had Surrender'd upon the Report only of the Impriſonment priſonment of their Prince; wherefore the Grand Seignior and his Council haſten'd, with all poſſible ſpeed, Orders to the Paſha of Waradin for his Releaſe, and at the head of his Army to proclaim his Innocence, and repair his Honour; the which was accordingly performed, as appears by a Letter from Tekeli himſelf, dated the 4th of December 1685, from Alba Regalis, directed to his Wife, the Princeſs of Ragotzki, wherein alſo he ſignified his Intentions to return with the Spring into Hungary, with a Body of Fifteen thouſand Turks and Tartars, and endeavour to recover thoſe Places which were revolted from him. Theſe Advices ſo encouraged the Princeſs, that ſhe bravely refuſed to receive an Imperial Garriſon into Mongatz, thô her Town was blocked up by Count Caprara during the whole Winter, of which we ſhall ſpeak more at large at the beginning of the enſuing Year; and we ſhall conclude this, with the taking of Arad by Colonel Heuſler, a Place ſituate upon the Banks of the River Maroz, between Temeſwar and Giulia, diſtant twelve Leagues from Temeſwar, and about as far from Sigeth. Heuſler being not far from Arad, detached a Party of Hungarians before, to provoke the Janiſaries, and draw them forwards to an Engagement: Upon ſight of the Enemy, the Janiſaries made a Sally, ſupported with Fifteen hundred Spahees, Commanded by the Paſha of Soffia, which were newly come thither from Conſtantinople: Theſe Forces in the vigour and briſkneſs of their Courage, purſued the Hungarians, who made an orderly Retreat until they came to their main Body, at which the Paſha nothing diſmayed charged with much Bravery; but Colonel Mercy coming up with his Germans, fell in upon them with ſuch fury, that the Turks in a confuſion and diſorder endeavoured to make their Eſcape by flight into Arad; but were ſo cloſely purſued at the heels by the Germans and Hungarians, that they entred into the Town in mixture with the Turks, killing and deſtroying them with ſuch a Slaughter, that a Thouſand of them, together with the Paſha, were ſlain at the Gates and within the Town, which remained a rich Booty and Prize to the Conquerors; for theſe Spahees lately come from their Homes, were well furniſhed with Mony, ſcarce any of them had leſs about him than Two hundred Hungarian Ducats in Gold, with good Veſts of fine Cloth, well lined with Sables or other Furrs, and their Horſes of the beſt Breed of Aſia, well adorned with the Accouterments belonging to them, all which became a Prey to the victorious Army; beſides, the Town was well ſupplied with all ſorts of Proviſions in great abundance, with which the Soldiers refreſhed themſelves, and for the ſpace of four Days ſacked, plunder'd and welter'd in all ſorts of Beſtiality and Debauchery; at the end of which, they ſet fire to the Town, and in a few hours reduced all to Aſhes. Thoſe few Turks who eſcaped the Slaughter fled to Temeſwar, whereupon, this News was ſo great a Conſternation, that the Paſha to prevent the like fate on his Town, thought fit to burn the Suburbs, to the great damage and ruine of the Inhabitants.

Arad taken.

A rich Booty taken at Arad.

Shaitan Ibrahim put to Death.

We have formerly mentioned, that the ill Succeſs of the Turks in Hungary had cauſed Mutinies in the Army, and that one Aremzade, a grave and wiſe Perſon, was ſent with a Sum of Mony to appeaſe the Soldiery, and enquire into the Cauſe of theſe Diſturbances: The Matter being examined, a Report was made much to the Prejudice of Shaitan Ibrahim, by reaſon of the diſaffection of the Soldiers and Commanders to him; for it ſeems impoſſible for a General to be unfortunate and beloved: When the Report was come to the hands of the Grand Seignior, the Capelar-kiaſee, or Maſter of the Ceremonies, was ſpeedily diſpatched, with a Command to take off the Head of Shaitan Ibraim, and to make Apti, then Paſha of Buda, Seraſkier or General in his place, and Oſman Paſha, Ogli Paſha of Buda; but Oſman's Head was cut off by Ibrahim three Days before the Order came: In return for which, Shaitan Ibrahim's Head was brought to Adrianople the 6th of December. He had been in the greateſt Employments of the Empire for the ſpace of forty Years, and render'd conſiderable and ſignal Services thereunto: One might have thought that his brave and valiant Defence of Buda, would have attoned for future Miſfortunes; or that his Marriage with the Grand Seignior's Siſter deceas'd, and afterwards with his Aunt, would have been Intereſts ſufficient for his Protection; but the Grand Vizier feared him, and therefore was willing to wreak upon him all the Miſfortunes of an unhappy Campaign, laying it to his Charge, that he had converted the Soldiers Pay to his own Profit: And ſo he fell about the Eightieth Year of his Age, commiſerated by all, and according to the Character we have formerly given of him, he might have deſerved a milder Fate. And ſo we ſhall put an end to the Martial Enterpriſes, Wars and Confuſions of the Year 1685.

ANNO 1686.

The Grand Vizier's Diſtemper.

THE Grand Vizier being of a melancholy penſive Nature, and much afflicted with hypocondriacal Diſtempers, made his Thoughts more burdenſom by ſuppreſſing

1686. them, and not communicating his ſad Apprehenſions to other Friends. At the Siege of Buda he was ill for the ſpace of a Month; but when good News came, he recover'd again, and his political Diſeaſe had its cold and hot Fits, according to the changes and viciſſitude of Times. About the end of the laſt Year, or beginning of this, Soliman Paſha, who was General of the Army againſt Poland, had not only defended the Confines, but worſted the Poles, and returned to Adrianople with much Applauſe; for it was now no leſs Glory for a General amongſt the Turks to ſave his Army, and not be Overcome, than it was formerly to Conquer. This was the Fortune and Honour of Soliman, for having brought off his Army entire and unbroken; which was a piece of Service ſo highly eſteemed, that the Grand Vizier received him upon his arrival, with all Honour and Appearances of real Friendſhip, ſending the Chiausbaſhee and Chaouſes to conduct him to his Preſence, where at the ſame time were the Mufti, the Generals of the Janiſaries and Spahees, and other great Miniſters of State aſſembled, and all congratulated the Honours and Glories he had acquired; which Ceremonies being ended, all theſe great Perſons (except the Mufti) attended Soliman to the Seraglio, where the Grand Seignior received him with much Kindneſs, clothed him with a rich Veſt of Sables, entertained him with a ſplendid Banquet, and preſented him two Horſes richly furniſhed: According to which Example, as is accuſtomary, all the great Men made him their Preſents; for whom the Sultan will Favour, the inferior Officers are obliged to Honour. The next Day Soliman came to the Vizier's Palace, held a Divan, and acted all publick Buſineſs, and in the Mouths of the Commonalty, he was cried up for Vizier Azem. And thô what Soliman Paſha acted was only as an Aſſiſtant or Coadjutor to the Vizier, during his Weakneſs and Infirmity; yet Soliman got ſo much ground in Eſteem of the Sultan, and of the People, that the Vizier thought it time to rouze up his Spirits, and to act every thing by his own Perſon. And to ſecure himſelf from the danger of being ſupplanted by ſo powerful a Rival, he addreſſed a Memorial to the Grand Seignior, wherein he repreſented the Vertues and Abilities of Soliman in an eminent manner, that he was a faithful, experienced, and a fortunate Miniſter, and the only Perſon in the World fit and able to be General in Hungary, and to conduct an Army in this dangerous and difficult War. The Grand Seignior entertaining a like ſenſe of the Abilities of Soliman, inclined thereunto, and would have given him that Employment, had not ſome Accidents intervened to prevent it. For the Embrahor, or Maſter of the Horſe, the Kuzlir Aga, or Eunuch of the Women, and the Sultana or Empreſs her ſelf, being all Friends and Confidents to Soliman, adviſed him of the Plot, which might bring upon him the like Fate, which had befallen Shaitan Ibrahim; and that the beſt way to avoid it, would be to puſh at the Office of Vizier, and demand the Seal. Soliman encouraged by ſuch powerful Abettors, boldly caſt himſelf at the feet of the Grand Seignior, and told him, That he was ready to lay down his Life either at Home or in Hungary for the Service of him his Maſter, and ſacrifice all to his Pleaſure and Glory; but to go into Hungary without the Seal (which was without the power of Vizier) would be of Prejudice and ill Conſequence to the whole Empire, for which he alledged many Reaſons, and being an eloquent or a well-ſpoken Man, was ſeconded by others, who repreſented the preſent Vizier to be a Perſon infirm and unfit for War. The Grand Seignior was prevailed upon, and agreed to conſtitute Soliman his Vizier; but the Execution thereof, at the deſire of Soliman was deferred until next Morning; and in the mean time, the Matter was carried ſo ſecretly, that the Vizier had no Intimation or Jealouſie of the Reſolution. Next Morning being the time, when the Pay of the Spahees was to be delivered out, Soliman came to the Vizier's Chamber, and preſſed him very inſtantly, that ſince he was now in better Health, that he would be preſent at giving out the Pay unto the Spahees; and that in caſe he were wearied or uneaſy, he would perform the remainder of the Trouble for him; but the Vizier excuſed himſelf, and would not come, but deſired Soliman to take the trouble upon him of that Day's Office; which as he was performing, and had half done, the Boſtangibaſhee to the Grand Seignior, or he who is Maſter of the Wardrobe, came to the Vizier and demanded the Seal, ſhewing him a Warrant for it, under the Hand of the Grand Seignior: The Vizier was ſo ſtruck with the Surpriſe, that he had ſcarce power and ſtrength to put his trembling Hand into his Boſom to give it to him; and Nature being weak in him, he fell in a Swoun, and ſo was left. So ſoon as Soliman had finiſhed the giving out the Pay, a Capigibaſhee came to call him to the Grand Seignior, to whom being come, he had the Seal conferred upon him, with the Character of the Supream Vizier, and ſo was conducted to the publick Palace belonging to that Office; from whence the former Vizier, without other Ceremony or Warning, was in a moment removed, and being by his Servants put into a Coach,

1686.

Soliman Paſha's reception.

The Grand Vizier jealous of Soliman.

Soliman made Vizier.

was carried to a private Houſe, and four Days afterwards was order'd to retire unto Conſtantinople, with a Penſion of an Hundred and fifty Aſpers a Day, which may be about eight Shillings Engliſh Mony. This Ibrahim (for ſo we muſt now call him) having a Houſe and Garden of his own upon the Boſphorus, obtained leave to retire thither, but not to go to Mecha, as he inſtantly deſired: But he had not long continued there, before a Command was iſſued to ſeize his Eſtate, which was executed early one Morning by the Janizar-Aga and Boſtangibaſhee, who ſurrounded his Houſe, the latter of which went in to him, and told him that he muſt go with him; Ibrahim apprehending that his End was near, asked him, If he came for his Head; and when he told him no, he could not believe him, until he had Sworn by his Law and by his Prophet; being herewith a little comforted, he was carried Priſoner to the Middle-gate of the Seraglio; in the mean time his Houſe was rifled, and all his Servans and Pages of any faſhion were taken into Cuſtody, and Examined for better Diſcovery of his Eſtate. All the Mony found, did not amount unto more than Five thouſand Purſes, beſides his Jewels, and his great Revenues in Lands and Houſes. Being thus ſtripped of all his Eſtate, he was on the 18*th* of March put into a Gally, and ſent to Rhodes, there to remain a Priſoner in the Caſtle. Soliman Paſha, now Vizier, compaſſionating his Caſe, and not knowing how ſoon it might be his own turn, ſent him Five thouſand Dollars, with a Veſt of Sables, and obtained a ſmall Allowance for him from the Grand Seignior.

The late Vizier ſent to Conſtantinople.

His Eſtate ſeized.

Nor was this Change only of the Vizier, but attended with others at the Court; for the Janizar-Aga, or General of the Janiſaries was put out, and one Haſſan Aga, Lieutenant General of the Janiſaries at Buda was put in his ſtead: Zulficar Aga a vaſt rich Man, one of the Paſhas of the Bench, was ſent to command in the place of Muſtapha, Brother to the late Vizier Kupriogli, who was recalled to Court and made Chimacam at Conſtantinople. Ahmet Paſha nam'd for Captain Paſha laſt Year, was made Seraskier, or General in Hungary, in the place of Shaitan Ibrahim, and Apti Paſha (whom we have formerly mentioned) was return'd again to his Province of Paſha of Buda. The Reis Effendi, or Secretary of State was diſplaced, the Reaſon not known, and that Office ſupplied by a Relation of the late Vizier's, who wrote his Letters for him, a raw and an unexperienced Man. The Moſaip was continued General in the Morea, and Miſſir-ogli was made Captain Paſha in the place of Mazzamama, to whom as we have ſaid, the care of the Fleet was committed the laſt Summer.

Changes of Officers in the Turkiſh Court.

Theſe were the Changes with which this Year began in the Ottoman Court, after which care was taken to Recruit the Army, and make all Warlike preparations in Hungary, for which the new Vizier Solyman was preparing; and all the Court and People were full of hopes, and expectations of mighty Succeſſes under the auſpicious Conduct of Solyman, whoſe very Name had been Fortunate to the Turks.

Tekeli (as we have mentioned before) being ſet at Liberty, and reſtored to his Command with Honour; received Money from the Vizier to Raiſe Two thouſand Men, and was recommended by the Vizer to the new Seraskier, to give all the encouragement and aſſiſtance he was able, that ſo he might once more try his Fortune in the Upper Hungary.

Tekeli receives Aid from the Turks.

Amongſt the many ways and contrivances to raiſe Money, one was to diſcover the hidden Riches of the Impriſoned Vizier, for which, whilſt they made diligent Search in his Seraglio, or Palace at Conſtantinople it came to be known, that Three hundred Purſes belonging to the Vizier Kara Muſtapha, who was Strangled at Belgrade, were found in a ſecret conveyance of the Houſe, the Chimacam and Embrahore, or Maſter of the Horſe, would be preſent at Sealing of the Baggs, and had counted out Two hundred, when it proving dark and late, they deferr'd the remainder until the Day following; but that Night, by what Accident is not known, the Palace took Fire and was Burnt to the Ground.

The Vizier's Palace Burnt.

At Adrianople, where the Court reſided, an Envoy arrived from Muſcovy, and another from the General of the Coſacks, with Complaints againſt the Tartars and Governour of Aſac, a Fortreſs of the Turks on the Tanais, for Incurſions made upon them: The Muſcovites remain'd until this time in ſuſpence, whether to make War, or confirm a Peace with the Turks; but the Succeſs of the Emperor, and the Provocations received from the Tartars, put that Buſineſs beyond all doubt, and brought the Muſcovites into a League with the Emperor and Poland, as will ſhortly be made manifeſt by the Capitulations between them. Amongſt other Applications to the Ottoman Court, a new Ambaſſadour from France arrived at Adrianople, to aſſure the Sultan of his Maſter's Friendſhip, and his Reſolution to ſtand Neuter in this preſent War: But the Turks, who rely not with much confidence on the Word and Stories of the French, gave them an ordinary Reception, without Favours, or any unuſual Conceſſions, denying to them the Guardian-ſhip of the Holy Sepulcher at Addreſſes to the Ottoman Court.

Jeru-

1686. Jeruſalem, which had formerly been granted to them.

This was the State of the Ottoman Court, in the beginning of this Year 1686; when Count Caprara kept the Town of Mongatz Blocked up, which is ſtrongly fortified with a Caſtle, Situate on the River Turza, between Ungwar and Zatmar, near the Mountains. The place belonged to the Counteſs Tekeli, in right of her former Husband Prince Francis Ragotski; She was Daughter of Count Peter Serini, and Married to Tekeli, as we have formerly mentioned. Caprara having all the Winter his Quarters not far from Mongatz, ſent frequent Meſſages to this Lady to Surrender the Town and Caſtle to the Emperor, promiſing in the name of his Cæſarean Majeſty, to conſerve both her ſelf and her Son, in the ſame Condition of Greatneſs, and Eſtate as at preſent; adding thereunto many Complements, which are commonly given to a young and beautiful Lady. The expreſſions he made to her, were ſo full of tenderneſs and reſpect, that ſhe could not refuſe to return an Anſwer, agreeable to ſo much concernment as he teſtified for her; aſſuring him, That nothing ſo grieved her, as to ſee herſelf embarked in a Cauſe againſt the Emperor; and that nothing could be ſo uneaſie to her and difficult to determin, in what manner ſhe was to behave herſelf, between the Duty and Faith ſhe owed to a Husband, and Allegiance to the moſt gentle and gracious Prince of the Univerſe: But as to the Surrender of the Town and Caſtle, it was not in her Power, but depended entirely on the Secretary and Deputy of her Husband, who was there conſtituted Governour, with all the Riches and Wealth of the place; and that the Citizens and Chief Magiſtrates thereof, were joyned in the ſame Reſolutions with him, to defend and maintain the Place to their utmoſt hazard of their Lives and Fortunes; and that herein they were the more encouraged, by Advices lately received from Count Tekeli, whereby he not only gives them the good News of his Liberty, and the great Honours and Aids, which the Turks had beſtowed upon him in recompence for the Affront, which the late Vizier had caſt upon him; but promiſed them very ſpeedily a Relief ſufficient to drive their Enemies from their Doors, and at a diſtance from their Country, and would bring Rewards in his Hands for thoſe, who ſhould in the mean time remain true, and conſtant to his Intereſt.

Mongatz Blocked up.

A Sally from the Town of Mongatz.

Count Caprara rightly judging, that by ſuch delays and excuſes as theſe, the Princeſs intended only to gain time, and to illude his deſigns, began to draw his Forces nearer, with a Train of Artillery, Mortars and other Engins proper for a Siege: But the Garriſon nothing diſmaid thereby, made a Sally with Six hundred Men, and gained a Redoubt which the Imperialiſts had raiſed near the lower Town, with the ſlaughter of Four hundred Souldiers therein; and having taken out the Arms and Guns, they demoliſhed the Fort, and raſed it to the very Ground. Howſoever, Caprara having received a Recruit of Two thouſand Men, poſſeſſed himſelf of a Poſt, whereby he hoped to bar the Town of the Water, which ſupplied both that and the Caſtle: But matters happened quite otherwiſe, for the Rains fell in ſuch abundance, as filled the Ciſterns with Water, which were anciently made to ſupply the wants of the Inhabitants on ſuch occaſions.

1686.

In the mean time Apaſi Prince of Tranſilvania, labour'd with all his power to gain a Neutrality for himſelf between the Turks and the Emperor; by the firſt of which he was preſſed with all imaginable inſtances, to ſerve in this War both with Men and Money, according to agreement and obligations of his Inveſtiture, when he received the Standard from the Sultan: And by the other, That is, by the Emperor he was threatned to declare himſelf either a Friend, or an Enemy, for that no ſort of indifferency would be admitted in this Caſe: And the better to compel him thereunto, Count Caraffa advanced into his Country with Eight thouſand Men, Two thouſand whereof were Hungarians, and took up their Quarters on the Frontiers of Tranſilvania, which was now in a Condition under ſuch a Force rather to receive Laws, than to give them. The Prince Apaſi being much incommoded by Quartering of Soldiers, diſpatched three Agents to Vienna, to Treat of thoſe matters, to which he was altogether averſe in former times, and readily offer'd to give free Quarter to thoſe Troops which were ſent into his Country; but as to an open Declaration of nearer Alliance he deſired to be excuſed, conſidering that his Country was environed by the Turks, and their ſtrongeſt Garriſons bordering on his Confines, ſo that until the Emperor had driven the Enemy at a farther diſtance, it could not be adviſable for him to make a more publick Declaration.

Apaſi deſires a Neutrality.

The City of Debrezin, Situate between Tokay and Great Waradin, is Populous and Rich, and had voluntarily deſired to be received into Protection of his Imperial Majeſty, after Zolnock and Caſſovia had been reduced, having conſerved themſelves in a Neutrality during the late Revolutions of Hungary, without taking part in any Engagement with the Malecontents. This City I ſay, was received into Protection, upon upon promiſe to maintain with free Quarter Five thouſand Germans, and One thouſand Hungarians; but finding themſelves overburdened and haraſſed with Quartering theſe Soldiers, they agreed to pay Eighty thouſand Florins per Month, for the ſpace of ſix Months, in lieu of their free Quarter, by which Sum of Money they eaſed themſelves from the inconvenience and inſolence of Soldiers, as did alſo many parts of the upper Hungary, the main burden of Quarters being caſt upon the Counties bordering on Tranſilvania, which was of great relief to the Hereditary Countries.

Debrezin redeems it ſelf from free Quarter.

This Year began early with Action; for the Generals Mercy and Heuſler having their Quarters at Zolnock, made frequent Incurſions upon the Turks with great Succeſs and Advantage: And having intelligence, that in Tranſilvania a Convoy of about an Hundred Wagons was providing laden, with Money, Ammunition and Proviſions for the ſubſiſtence and relief of Buda, they made a Detachment of Five thouſand choiſe Horſe, with ſome Auxiliaries from Count Caprara, and ordered them to march towards Segedin, and to Way-lay them in their Paſſage over the River. Heuſler being advanced about a League from Segedin, gave Orders to Peterhaſi, with a ſtrong Battalion to embosk himſelf within the Woods, which grew very thick in that Country; and when the Garriſon of Segedin ſhould Sally forth to the aſſiſtance of the Convoy, That he ſhould then with his Battalion ariſe from the place of Concealment, and ſeize upon the Town, which might perhaps be left naked, and void of all defence. Matters did not in all things anſwer expectation; for the Convoy being Guarded with a ſtrong party of Turkiſh Soldiers, they Fought with ſuch Valour and Reſolution, that thô the Imperialiſts remain'd Maſters of the Field, and of the Convoy; yet the Action coſt ſo much Blood, that it could not properly be called a Victory; for a Victory may be too dearly bought, when it is purchaſed with the Lives of ſo many brave Men, as are not to be eſtimated by any advantage whatſoever: And ſo it happened now; for thô Three thouſand Turks were killed on the place, yet they were not to be valued with the Blood of Two thouſand Germans and Hungarians, all choiſe and ſelect Men, who lay dead in the Field. But as it happens commonly amongſt Soldiers, thoſe who live and ſurvive, have little ſenſe or regard for ſuch as are ſlain; unleſs that being made Mad, and more Furious by the death of their Companions, they breath nothing but Revenge; as did this remaining Party, which exaſperated by the difficulty of the late Fight, fell upon the Lands of Seudin, Geſet, Babatz, and the Parts adjacent, or not far from the place of Battle, deſtroying and conſuming all with Fire and Sword. The News of theſe Succeſſes were not very pleaſing at Vienna, where they eſteemed the Victory too dearly obtained; and thô they publickly applauded the bravery and reſolution of the Officers and Soldiers, yet in their private Councils, they could not but ſecretly blame the raſhneſs of the Commanders.

Heuſler Attacks a Convoy of the Turks.

The Victory dearly bought.

As all places in the upper Hungary were filled with Slaughter and Confuſion; ſo no leſs Damage was cauſed in Croatia, by the vaſt Flouds and Inundations, which for ſome time drowned all that Country, and carried away whole Towns and Familes, Caſtles and Proviſions down the Torrent: And not only hinder'd all Commerce and Correſpondence of one Town with another, but prevented the intended Incurſions on the Enemy, deſtroy'd the Proviſions neceſſary for ſupport of the Army, and ſuperinduced a grievous Famine over the whole Land. Count Nicolas Erdeody, who was then Ban or chief Commander at that time of Croatia, being much affected with the Common Calamity of his Country, aſſembled a Convention of all the Eſtates at Zagrabia, to conſider of the ſaid Condition and Deſolation of their Province, where after divers Conferences, they concluded it neceſſary to repreſent unto the Emperor, the State and Condition of Croatia, and the Confines and Militia thereof, and how neceſſary it was to defend and guard thoſe Frontiers, from the Forces then gathering between Belgrade and Eſſeck.

Flouds of Water in Croatia.

Nor were theſe Advices ill grounded; for the Turkiſh Forces were daily on their march from Belgrade to the Bridge of Eſſeck, which they had received Commands to Repair and Defend, being the moſt important Paſs of all Hungary. Apti Paſha now Seraskier, or General of the Turkiſh Army, was extreamly diligent and active to provide every thing neceſſary againſt the next Campaign; and with admirable Sedulity, as well, as the ſhortneſs of time would admit, he ſuccour'd all the Frontier Garriſons with Proviſions, and reinforced Waradin, Agria, Segedin, Temiſwar, Buda, Alba-Regalis and Kaniſia with Recruits, and all neceſſary ſupplies, being places moſt expoſed to the Enemy; and ſuch as might with Reaſon be believed, would all or ſome of them be attempted, and become the Enterpriſe and Deſign of this Years Campaign. This Apti Paſha, was a Man of ſome experience in the War, but being of a ſower and moroſe Temper, was ill beloved by the Soldiery.

The Seraſkier Reinforces ſeveral Garriſons.

Tekeli being intent to Relieve his Counteſs and City of Mongatz, and raiſe the Siege which Caprara had laid, and now compleatly formed; departed from Great Waradin about the beginning of February, with Seventeen Standards, and took his march by way of Hongland into Tranſilvania, about two Leagues from Clauſemberg, where underſtanding that ſeveral of his Troops, which the laſt Year had made a Defection from him, were Quarter'd in the Parts thereabouts, he hoped either to ſurprize and cut them off, or elſe to regain them back to his Party; but theſe Hungarian Troops having advice of his near Approach, changed their Quarters, and marched away to joyn with the Croatian Regiments of Lodron, and ſix Companies of the Regiment of Spinola; of which Tekeli being adviſed he alter'd his deſign, and reſolved to paſs the Tibiſcus, and march with all expedition towards Mongatz. This Motion of Tekeli Alarum'd all the Countries, and cauſed Caraffa to endeavor to Way-lay him, and take ſome convenient Poſt to intercept him in his march; but Tekeli upon this intelligence directed his Courſe towards Giulia, to joyn with the new Paſha of that place, and to concert other Methods, in order to their future proceedings. In the mean time Caraffa not to remain idle, having a Force of Four thouſand Germans and Three thouſand Hungarians, with four Pieces of Cannon and four Mortars, ſent to Summon the Fortreſs of St. Job, about three Leagues diſtant from Great Waradin, Situate in the middle of a great Marſh or Fen, which render'd it naturally very ſtrong; and was formed by Art in a Quadrangular Figure, encompaſſed by four Bulwarks, joyned by ſtrong built Curtains, and encompaſſed by a very deep Ditch: Upon one ſide of this Fortreſs there is a great wide open place, in which many Houſes are erected, and is called by the name of the Little City; which alſo is fortified in the nature of a ſtrong Palanca, encompaſſed with a convenient Ditch, by which it is joyned to that of the Caſtle, and hath communication therewith by a Draw-bridge: Notwithſtanding the ſtrength of this place, Caraffa inveſted it on the 9th of February, raiſed his Batteries, threw Bombs and Fir'd inſtantly upon the Town, which was reteturned in like manner from thence. But ſo it hapned by the Divine Providence, that one of the Bombs fell directly into a Tower in the middle of the Caſtle, where the Powder and Ammunition was conſerved; with which all blowing up, not only tore and rent the Tower in Pieces, but ſhook the whole Caſtle and the neighbouring Town, and put all the Soldiers and Inhabitants into ſuch amazement and conſternation, that they knew not which way, nor how to apply themſelves for their defence and ſafety. This fatal Blow gave advantage to the Chriſtians to Attack the Fortreſs in three ſeveral places; for which when the Turks perceived, that preparations were making, they ſpread a white Flag on the Walls, and demanded Terms of Surrender, which were readily granted and allowed to the Garriſon, and to all the Inhabitants to march forth with their Arms, with their Wives and Children, and with as much of their Baggage, as every perſon could carry. Poſſeſſion being taken of the Gates and Entrances by the German Soldiers, Six hundred Turks of the Garriſon marched out, beſides Women and Children, which were according to the Faith given, ſafely conducted within a League of Great Waradin; only an unlucky accident hapned, that as the Garriſon paſſed forth, about Twelve Perſons were diſcover'd amongſt them, to have been Hungarian Chriſtians, and ſuch as had become Renegadoes, and denied the Faith of Chriſt: Upon the ſight of which the Chriſtian Soldiers became ſo ſcandalized and incented, that forgetting the Capitulations agreed, they violently ſeized upon them, with intention immediately to Hang them up, or by ſome other way to put them to Death as Apoſtates: This Buſle cauſed great diſturbance, and made the Turks to Cry aloud, that the Conditions and Articles of Surrender were broken: But the Officers applying themſelves with their Authority, to reſtrain the Licentiouſneſs of the Soldiery, the Tumult was appeaſed: After which due care and diligence being uſed to extinguiſh the Fire, which ſtill raged both in the Town and Caſtle, it was at length overcome, and much of the Ammunition and Proviſions conſerved; what Goods remained were given to the Soldiery. In the Caſtle were eight Pieces of Cannon, without other Arms; about Two hundred and ſeventy Chriſtian Slaves were ſet at Liberty. The taking of this Place was eſteemed of much importance, by Reaſon, that thereby the Counties of Zathmar and Zoboleſch were freed of all Contributions, and the Towns and Boroughs in all Parts round, as far as Waradin were bridled and kept under ſome reſtraint, by a Garriſon of an Hundred Muſquetiers, and Two hundred Heydukes and a Hundred Huſſars, which Count Caraffa had put into St. Job, which were eſteemed ſufficient to reſiſt any ſuddain Incurſion of the Enemy until Relief came, which could not be long wanting from the neighbouring Places.

Tekeli marches towards Mongatz.

The Fortreſs of St. Job.

Inveſted by Caprara.

And Surrendered.

In the mean time (as we have ſaid) Count Caprara had drawn his Line of Circumvallation before Mongatz, and laid a formal Mongatz Beſieged.

Siege: Againſt which, the Beſieged wanting no reſolution to defend themſelves, fired continual Vollies of great and ſmall ſhot: And on the 10*th* of March made a Sally to ruin the Batteries of the Imperialiſts, but were vigorouſly repulſed with ſome loſs:

Sallies made.

Thô not long afterwards they made another Sally with more ſucceſs, having overthrown a Battery, and made the Cannon unſerviceable: But in regard the Defendants found by experience that frequent Sallies coſt the Lives of many Soldiers, which they could ill ſpare, they reſolved to conſerve them ſelves within their Walls, on the Defenſive part, without other hazards of offending the Enemy. On the other ſide, the Imperialiſts preſſed forward with much Reſolution, plaid with their Cannon on the Palanca, and threw Bombs and Carcaſſes into the Town; but what damage was done thereby was ſoon repair'd by the diligence of the Beſieged, returning their Shot with fiery Bullets of a new invention, which did great execution within the Lines. This and other Succeſſes, raiſed their Spirits within the Town to a ſteddy defence; to ſecure which, the Princeſs Ragotzki impoſed a new Oath of Fidelity on all the Souldiers, which they chearfully took, and to expreſs their readineſs thereunto, they fired all the great and ſmall Shot round the Town, with reſolute Proteſtations never to hearken unto any Offers or Conditions for Surrender of the Place: To confirm the Soldiery in this good Humour, it was noiſed in the Garriſon, that there were ſufficient Proviſions in the Magazines, for the ſubſiſtence of a whole Year; that the Princeſs had received Letters from her Husband Tekeli aſſuring her, that he would very ſuddainly appear before the Town, with an Army ſufficient to raiſe the Siege and reſtore their Liberties, and reward all thoſe, who had continued firm and conſtant in their Faith and Allegiance unto him.

Reports of Tekeli's March.

Nor was this Report confined within the Walls of Mongatz, but it was ſpread over all the Imperial Camp, that Tekeli had joyned the Seraskier's Army, with a Force of Eight thouſand Turks and Tartars, and ſhortly reſolved to attempt the raiſing of the Siege before Mongatz, and to Re-inforce the place with conſiderable Recruits. To prevent which, Count Caprara diſpeeded General Piccolomini, with a ſtrong Detachment to joyn with Mercy, Caraffa and Heuſler, and with united ſtrength to oppoſe the Enemies paſſage, and watch ſome favourable opportunity to engage them: But the Report of the Turks numbers, and Tekeli's deſign ſoon vaniſhed, there being no ſuch apparent Force in the Field to give them oppoſition.

In the mean time the Siege proceeded vigorouſly, Bombs and Carcaſſes being daily fired and thrown into the Palanca and Caſtle; one of which fell into the very Room, where the Princeſs Ragotzki was at Dinner, which without any diſorder, or affrightment of the Lady was ſoon extinguiſhed. Howſoever, the Beſiegers made ſuch a Breach into the Palanca, that they lodged a ſtrong Party upon the brink of the Ditch. The Beſieged on the other ſide had raiſed a great Battery behind the Breach, which diſmounted ſeveral of the Imperialiſts Cannon, and made divers Retrenchments, and fired continually Bombs and Carcaſſes into the Lines, which often times did conſiderable execution. But when the Officers of the Garriſon conſider'd, that the only means to preſerve the place, was to prevent the Draining of the two Ditches of the lower Town, which were extreamly deep, they cut a paſſage for ſeveral ſtreams of Water, by ſecret and hidden Channels to fall into the Ditch, which being increaſed by the melting of Snow from the Mountains, and continual Flouds of Rain, which fell in that Seaſon of the Year, the Ditches were not only filled, but the Earth made ſo ſoft and moiſt, that it was impoſſible to maintain their Works; ſo that Caprara could do nothing more than Batter the Town with his Cannon, and throw ſome Bombs and Carcaſſes with little or no Execution. In fine, the Seaſon coming on for Action, which required an application to ſomething more profitable and promiſing than this difficult Work; the Siege was raiſed by Order of the Emperor about the end of April, after five Months had been unprofitably ſpent before that place.

The Siege of Mongatz raiſed.

But before the great and moſt conſiderable Actions of the following Campaign began, there were certain Preparations or Preludes thereunto repreſented in Fights and Skirmiſhes between certain Parties detached from the main Bodies, in all which the Imperialiſts gained the Advantage, and ſometimes had the fortune of a clear Victory: On the 14*th* of March, ſome Imperial Troops having their Winter-quarters in Croatia, routed Fifteen hundred Turks drawn up in open Field, and put them to flight; Achmet Aga their chief Commander was killed, and his Son taken Priſoner: This Engagement happen'd near a little Town called Jalonne, which the Croats ſtormed, and took and pillaged it, and ſet at liberty Eight hundred Chriſtian Slaves, of which Three hundred were in a condition to take up Arms. Another Detachment of Croats poſſeſſed themſelves of the Caſtle of Clanitz, where they found a conſiderable Booty; as alſo of the Town of the great Claduſſa, about four Leagues from Strediclo, from whence they were enabled to make Incurſions into the Territories of the Turks without any oppoſition.

Achmet Aga defeated.

1686.

1686.

April.

Other Succeſſes.

About the beginning of this Month, other Detachments from the Garriſon of Veſprin, and Places in the Lower Hungary, took the Caſtle of Palotta, about two Leagues diſtant from Alba Regalis, and put all to the Sword. About the end of this Month, Count Baragotzi with a Regiment of German Horſe, and ſome Hungarian Troops, intended to ſurprize Tekeli in Giena, a little Town belonging to the Turks; but the Deſign failed, Tekeli being retired a little before the coming of the Enemy: Howſoever his March was not altogether fruitleſs, for in his return he took forty Turks, whom he made Priſoners.

The Turks on the other ſide, with Three thouſand Horſe and Foot, under the Command of Fonduck Paſha, deſigned to ſurprize Wirowitza in Croatia; but the Governour of that Place having notice thereof, got together about One thouſand Seven hundred Horſe and Dragoons from the neighbouring Garriſons, with which he ſurpriſed the Enemy in their Camp, before Day in the Morning, and charged them ſo briskly, that they killed about an Hundred and Seventy on the Place, took Thirty ſeven Priſoners, amongſt which were two Agas, and ſeveral Officers of Note, with three Standards, Drums, Timbrels, and a conſiderable Booty.

The orderly Diſpoſition of the Chriſtians in their Winter Quarters.

The Imperialiſts were ſtill within their Winter-quarters, which were ſo well diſpoſed, and in that Military Order, as if the Army had been drawn in Battalia, by which means they kept the Seraskier in continual Alarums, on both ſides of the Tibiſcus. The Hungarian and German Troops poſſeſſed a vaſt Tract of the Country; for General Barkotzi, with Four thouſand of his Countrymen, acting joyntly and by agreement with Piccolomini, and the Regiments of Schultz and Dunewald, extended themſelves all along the Upper Hungary, as far as to the Confines of Poland, to hinder the Incurſions of the Tartars, who were uſed to make that Way their common Road to Pillage and to Infeſt thoſe Countries. The Quarters of theſe Forces reached ſo far as to be near, or (as we may ſay) in call of General Caraſſa, who with the Counts Getz and Terzi, extended their ſeveral Bodies of Horſe and Foot all along the Confines of Tranſilvania, and the Counties of Chege and Debrezin, even to the neighbouring Juriſdiction of great Waradin. In like manner General Marcy and Heuſler, extended their Quarters from the Province of Zolnok, beyond the Tibiſcus, into the very Heart of the Turks Country, bringing all thoſe Parts under great and heavy Contributions, and ſtill maintaining a mutual Correſpondence with the other Generals: By which means the Turks were ſo locked up on all ſides, that they could not come to the Relief of any one Place without fighting, unleſs it were Peſth and Buda.

1686.

Prince Apaſi in diſtreſs.

The Prince of Tranſilvania was environed on one ſide by Caraſſa, who laid grievous Impoſitions on his People; and on the other, by many Troops that Quarter'd on the Confines, which ſo humbled him, that he became much more pliable and ſubmiſſive in his Language towards the Emperor, than he had formerly practiſed in all the Treaties held with the Imperial Miniſters. In this ſtraitned Condition, the Prince Apaſi acquainted the Ottoman Port, and the Seraskier, that it was impoſſible for him to anſwer the Expectation of the Turks either with Men or Mony, unleſs he were relieved from the Oppreſſion of the Chriſtians, who levied thoſe Monies on his Subjects, which were deſigned for his own and the Turkiſh Forces. To remedy which, the Seraskier drawing forth a Detachment from the Garriſons of Buda and Agria, marched in two Bodies; one by way of Giulia and Lippa, and the other paſs'd the Danube at Peſth, by which Mareſchal Marcy and Heuſler being greatly Alarum'd, drew out their Forces into the open Field, with reſolution to give Battle to the Seraskier, who conſidering that the Succeſs of War was hazardous, and that the ill event thereof might prejudice the Turks in all the Enterpriſes of the enſuing Campaign; he thought fit to draw off and return back to his former Quarters: Howſoever, leſt he ſhould ſeem to act nothing, he detach'd a Body of Fifteen hundred Men to advance forward, and make a diſcovery of the Forces and Diſpoſition of the Enemies Camp; but being met by a Party belonging to Marcy, were treated ſo ill by them, that about an Hundred and fifty were killed on the Place, and Fifty taken Priſoners, the remainder in a diſorderly manner betaking themſelves to flight. This Victory opened a free Paſſage for the Cavalry as far as Weſſerhaſel, a Country abounding with Proviſions for Man, and Forage for the Horſe, which the Inhabitants freely beſtowed upon them.

The Cruelty of Schonot.

The Garriſon of Schonot much offended at this Kindneſs of Weſſerhaſel to their Enemies, ſent Commiſſaries to examine the Matter, and without much Diſpute, empaled diverſe People, plunder'd and burn'd their Houſes and Mills, threatning greater Deſtruction in caſe they continued to afford Relief to the Chriſtians. Marcy on the other ſide being greatly enraged at this manner of Proceedings, reſolved to revenge the ſame on Schonot; and to that end, joyning with Heuſler, they attempted 1686.

Schonot relieved by the Turks.

tempted the Town, and were proceeded therein ſo far, as to enter the Ditch, the News whereof ſo allarum'd the Turkiſh Camp, that they reſolved with all their force to endeavour the Relief of Schonot; which Mercy not being of ſufficient ſtrength to oppoſe, drew off from the Town, and poſſeſſed himſelf of a Paſs at the Bridge of Arath, where he hindred the Turkiſh Forces from joyning; and with a party of Huſſars and Dragoons ſo charged the advanced Troops of the Turks, that they defeated a great number of them, and took the Bey of Lippa, and the Aga of Jiena Priſoners.

1686.

Preparations for the Campaign.

Officers appointed.

But all theſe were petty Actions, and inconſiderable Preludes to what was to follow in the ſucceeding Campaign, which was now in its beginning. The general Rendezvous of the whole Army was appointed to be on the 15*th* of May, between Gran and Barkan. The main Body of the Army, which was to act under the Command of the Duke of Loraine, was to be compoſed of 14.000 German Foot, and 12.000 German Horſe, drawn out from the Troops of Saxony, Brandenburg and Suabia, to which Three thouſand Hungarians were to be joyned, with other Troops, ſo far as would make up an Army of Fifty five thouſand Men; Count Caprara and Count Staremberg were to be Major Generals; the Duke de Croy was created General of the Foot, Prince Lewis of Neubourg, and Count de Suſa Lieutenant Generals; the Barons of Tinghen, Thun, and the Marquis of Nigrelli were made Sergeant Majors of Battle. There was likewiſe another Army preparing under the Command of the Duke of Bavaria, conſiſting of Thirty five thouſand Men; of which Eleven thouſand were to be Foot, Eight thouſand German Horſe, to which the Bavarian Troops were to be added, with thoſe of Franconia, and Two thouſand Five hundred Hungarians. Of theſe Count Leſlie was nominated for Major General, Count Serini for General of the Infantry; the Marqueſs of Vergne and Count Schaffemberg for Lieutenant Generals; the Barons of Walis and Berk, and the Count de Apremont for Major Generals. Prince Lewis of Baden was made General of the Horſe, the Counts Caraffa and Gonda Lieutenant Generals, and the Counts Piccolomini and Veterani, and Baron Heuſler Major Generals.

1686.

A Council of War called.

Arguments against the Siege of Buda.

In this manner all things being prepared and diſpoſed in Martial Order, for carrying on the War for the preſent Campaign; a Council of War was called to conſider and determine the Proceedings and Methods thereof, and to reſolve of the Enterpriſe which was firſt to be undertaken; upon Debate whereof, two different Opinions aroſe; one propoſed the Siege of Agria, or Alba Regalis, and the other that of Buda. The firſt urged the difficulty and hazard in the Attempt of Buda, which was much better fortyfied than in the former Siege; for that ſeveral new Works were raiſed on the Banks of the Danube; and that on the other ſide, the Ditch had been made much more deep and large than it was before: That the Turks had prepared diverſe Countermines in thoſe places where the Chriſtians had lately made their Mines: That they had made diverſe new Sally-ports: That they had unpaved all their Streets, uncovered the tops of their Houſes to prevent the Miſchief which was feared from Bombs and Carcaſſes, againſt which they had fortified the large Ciſtern of Water, which was built in the middle of the City: That they had furniſhed the Town with ſuch quantities of Proviſions and Ammunition, and Stores of all things neceſſary for War and ſupport of Human Life, as were ſufficient without other Supplies or Recruits to maintain a Siege for ſix Months: That the Garriſon conſiſted of Twenty five thouſand ſelect Men at leaſt, choſen out of the Janiſaries and Spahees, and were all reſolute Men and good Soldiers: That the Governour in chief was a ſtout and valiant Man, a Renegado, and one who was learned and experienced in all the Military Arts of the Chriſtians: That under him ſix Agas were ſubordinated, all Men of Conduct and Bravery to ſucceed in the Government, as one or the other of them ſhould fail. And laſtly, That the Town was diſcharged of all uſeleſs and unneceſſary Inhabitants, ſuch as Women and Children, and Jews and Armenian Merchants, who were permitted to withdraw themſelves, with all their Goods and Eſtates, out from the City.

The Siege of Buda reſolved.

Notwithſtanding this Diſcourſe maintain'd and urged by divers, the contrary Opinion prevailed for the Siege of Buda; as if the Difficulties thereof ſerved rather to enflame, than to diſcourage ſo many valiant and generous Spirits: Such an Enterpriſe as the taking a Capital City, with the Conqueſt of which, the whole Kingdom would follow, and fall a Prey into their Hands, ſeemed an Adventure and an Exploit worthy the undertaking of ſo many brave Soldiers, who were certainly the greateſt Captains of this Age, and perhaps we may ſpeak it without injury to paſt times, that they were the beſt Soldiers that ever the World had produced. Indeed, the whole Army of this Year was in a moſt Flouriſhing Condition, well Provided and Accoutred, Fleſhed with Blood and Victory, and ſo Couragious that nothing ſeemed too hard and difficult for them. And this was one Reaſon, 1686. to perſwade the Military Councils to the Siege of Buda, not knowing whether the next Year would produce ſuch an Army as at preſent; which as it was capable to undertake any thing, ſo it was pity to have it waſted and employed in trivial matters, and taking in of Fortreſſes from whence no Important Conſequences could be expected. There was moreover one thing more eſpecially urged, that by the laſt Siege the Defects and Errors, and falſe Attacks were all ſeen and diſcover'd, the which might now eaſily be rectified, and proviſions made againſt the miſchiefs, which coſt the Lives of many Men; and the Ground and nature of it, and Situation being perfectly known, the ſubjection of this place would become much more eaſie than the time before, notwithſtanding all the Proviſions the Turks had made. In fine, with theſe Arguments, as I ſaid, the Siege of Buda was reſolved, and every thing prepared in order thereunto: In the mean time, the Turks were not idle on their part; every Day Olacks or Curriers were diſpatched in all haſt from Buda to Belgrade, and thence to the Port, to expedite the coming of the Ottoman Army, and Succours for Re-inforcement of their Garriſon; giving them advices of the Motion, and Approach of the Imperial Troops againſt them, which if not prevented would quickly ſurround their Walls, and intercept their Advices and Relief. The Turkiſh Officers and Soldiers in all their Quarters in Hungary amaſſed, and gather'd what Forage and Proviſions they were able, which they laid up, and diſpoſed in thoſe Garriſons which were moſt expoſed to the Enemy; and Re-inforced them with Troops drawn from other places, which were in the leaſt danger of the Enemy, and at fartheſt diſtance from them.

Proviſions made by the Turks for the War.

The Tartars were urged and ſollicited, not only to haſten their march to the Confines of Poland, to keep that Country in Awe; but alſo to ſend another Body to joyn with the Ottoman Camp in Hungary. In the mean time, Skirmiſhes daily hapned between ſeveral Huſſars and Dragoons belonging to Raab and Strigonium, and detached Parties from Buda; to which place Reinforcements were ſo conſtantly ſent, that the 1686. Garriſon was calculated to amount unto above Nine thouſand Men, beſides the Citizens and Inhabitants, tho in reality the numbers were much greater. And in regard, the Grand Seignior was not well ſatisfied with the Valour and Conduct of the preſent Baſſa, another was ſent to ſupply the place, who inceſſantly laboured both Day and Night about the Fortifications; for tho it was not certain whether the Imperialiſts would make that Siege the buſineſs of this Year; yet it was greatly feared, and too much labour and caution could not be uſed, for the Defence of a place of ſuch Importance.

The Paſha of Buda changed.

1686. In the mean time the Grand Seignior removed from Adrianople to Conſtantinople, to paſs his Summer there, in hopes that his Preſence would bring ſome Trade to that City; but the War had drained all the Money in ſuch manner, that the Merchants found little benefit, or alteration in the quickneſs of their Trade. The Grand Vizier intended at the ſame time to have moved from Adrianople towards Belgrade, but the great Fire which had hapned lately there, cauſed him to retard his March for ſome Days, in order to rebuild the publick Edifices conſumed by the Fire. Beſides the Fire and Sword, there was great Scarcity of Corn in all the Ottoman Dominions; by the two firſt, the Rich were the greateſt Sufferers, but the latter was an Aggrievance which moſt affected the Poor. Howſoever, they ſupported theſe Troubles and Loſſes with Patience, without Murmurings amongſt the Citizens, or Mutinies as yet in the Camp.

The Grand Seignior goes to Conſtantinople.

Scarcity of Corn amongſt the Turks.

The Moſcovites were all this time playing a double Game, having ſent an Envoy to the Court to complain of the Incurſions, which the Tartars had made into their Country, and of the Depredations which the Turkiſh Governour of Aſac, had made upon them at the Mouth of the Tanais. The Envoy found a kind Reception, and Orders were ſent both to the Tartars, and Governour of Aſac to abſtain for the future, from all ſuch Acts of Hoſtility, and maintain a good Correſpondence with the Moſcovites, who were become Allies and faithful Friends to the Port: And more to engage the Envoy, ſome few Ruſſian Slaves were given him, with Licenſe to rebuild an old ruined Greek Church in Conſtantinople; with which to outward appearance, the Envoy returned with entire Satisfaction.

The Moſcovites treat with the Turks.

The Poliſh Inter-nuntio, who from the beginning of the War had been kept under reſtraint at Conſtantinople, was now upon exchange for a Turk of quality, again ſet at Liberty; and being upon his return into Poland, was on the Confines met by a Poliſh Jeſuit, who had ſome Months before been ſent by the late Vizier with Letters to that King, containing a Project for making a Peace; and was now returning with Anſwers to thoſe Letters, and Inſtructions to the Inter-nuntio, in what manner to manage a Treaty with the Turks. The Internuntio returned herewith, and made Propoſals, That in caſe the Turks would Surrender Caminiec, with all they had taken in Podolia, That then the Poliſh King would

The Poles make propoſals.

1686. become a Mediator for Peace with the other Confederates: But the Turks were not as yet ſufficiently humbled, to give up any Places they had in Poſſeſſion, eſpecially that important Fortreſs of Caminiec, which was the very Key of Poland; and tho' an Expedient was offer'd to Demoliſh the ſame, it would not be accepted by the Turks, who had a greater value and eſteem for that Place, for having been the only Conqueſt, which this Grand Seignior had made in Perſon. And the Turks having no great value of late for the Poles, either as to their Proweſs in War, or Conduct in Peace, gave a proud Anſwer to the Demand; reſolving this Year to ſtand on the Defenſive part, and to tire out the Chriſtians with a long, and an expenſive War: For tho they had loſt ſome of their Towns, and been often beaten in the Field; yet they kept up that Pride and fierceneſs, which is agreeable to their nature and former ſucceſſes in War.

The French Ambaſſador, who had for a long time maintained a Controverſy about the Safraw, (as formerly mentioned) did now conceive that it might be a very proper Seaſon, after ſuch various revolutions and change of Officers, by which the Pride of the Turks might be abaſed, to obtain thoſe Demands which were formerly denied. The Grand Vizier at the deſire of the Ambaſſadour admitted him to Audience, and treated him very civilly: But howſoever, at the beginning of their Diſcourſe, he gave him a caution not to demand any thing, which was not warranted by the Capitulations; And when the Ambaſſadour moved, That ſome Alterations ſhould be made in the Ceremony of his Audience, that when he aroſe to put on the Veſt, which the Grand Vizier or Chimacam had given; that they alſo ſhould riſe up at the ſame time, until he was Clothed, and that then they ſhould ſit down together. The Vizier provoked a little with this new Demand, believing that it proceeded from a meaner Opinion conceived of their Power, by Reaſon of their late Miſfortunes, readily Anſwered with ſome quickneſs, and ſaid, That the firſt Turks, who came over into Europe, paſſed the Boſphorus but with Forty Men only, and that they would return again by the ſame Way with the like number, rather than condeſcend to any thing tending to a Diminution, or Abaſement of the Honour of the Empire. In fine, Tho the French were treated at this Audience with more than uſual Civility and Reſpect; yet could obtain nothing more than a Confirmation of the Privileges they had formerly enjoyed, and a Liberty to rebuild a burnt Church.

The French Ambaſſadors Audience with the Grand Vizier.

But whilſt Preparations were making on both ſides for the War of the ſucceeding Year; It was adjudged in the Councils at Vienna, to be a matter abſolutely neceſſary, to engage the Moſcovits in the Confederacy, for that thereby, the King of Poland would not only be freed from all Jealouſies, of being Invaded by the Moſcovites, whilſt his Arms were otherwiſe diverted; but the Tartars reſtrained from their Incurſions, in caſe the Czars would take that Incumbence upon them, to give a ſtop to their Depredations. The benefit thus doubly conſidered, Miniſters were ſent from Vienna and Cracow to Moſco, and many Arguments offered to induce the Czars to enter into the League; the which Work found the greater difficulty and oppoſition, by reaſon that a Treaty was ſo lately concluded with the Turks, and their Ambaſſadour returned with a favourable Grant, and Conceſſion of all their Demands: But the Moſcovites in reality, could eaſily diſpenſe with ſuch Articles and Agreements, provided their Intereſt was advanced, and their Territories enlarged; in purſuance of which, a League Defenſive between Poland and Moſcovy was concluded for ever, and an Offenſive ſo long as the preſent War with the Turks ſhould be continued; the which League was Dated the 24*th* of April, according to the following Articles.

Firſt, That a perpetual Peace be concluded, and eſtabliſhed between the two Powers.

Secondly, To avoid all Differences and Diſputes ariſing about the Titles to be given to the Czars and the King of Poland, the ſame was agreed by both Parties.

Thirdly, That the Poles ſhall Deliver and Surrender up to the Moſcovites, the Palatinates of Kiovia and Smolenſko, with ſome other Places ſpecified in that Article.

Fourthly, That the Coſacks of thoſe Countries, ſhall be mutually diſcharged of the Oaths of Allegiance, which they had taken to either Crown.

Fifthly, That the Rebels and Revolters, who had ſubmitted to the Turks, ſhould find no Protection or Refuge from either Party.

Sixthly, That the Czars ſhould pay 1500.000 Florins of Poliſh Money to the Government of Poland in two equal Payments; the firſt to be made at the Signing and Sealing of the Articles, and the ſecond at the Meeting of the next Diet.

Seventhly, That the Towns and Fortreſſes, Situate on the Banks of the Boriſthenes, from Kiovia to the River of Taſmin, which runs by Czekrim, ſhall not be Rebuilt or Repaired, but that all that Country ſhould remain Waſt and Depopulated, until ſuch time, as the Differences ariſing thereupon ſhould be decided by more Ample Authority. The Plenipotentiaries of Poland declaring, That they had 1686. had no Power nor Inſtructions in that particular.

Eighthly, That to avoid all Differences, which might ariſe about the Cities and Places, which were to be Surrender'd by the Moſcovites into the Hands and Poſſeſſion of the Poles, ſhall be particularly nominated and mentioned. And accordingly they were afterwards nominated in this Article.

Ninethly, That free Liberty be given to the Roman Catholicks, to Exerciſe their Religion in the Suburbs of Kiovia and Smolenſko: Notwithſtanding any endeavours or oppoſition, which the Patriarch ſhall make thereunto.

Tenthly, That their Majeſties the Czars, being deſirous to introduce and eſtabliſh the Chriſtian Religion within the Mahometan Dominions, at the Inſtance and Requeſt of the King of Poland, and in purſuance of the League Offenſive and Defenſive concluded with His Majeſty, do Promiſe and Oblige themſelves immediately to make War upon the Turks, and with a numerous Army to Invade his Dominions this Summer, by ſuch Ways and Roads, as the Tartars have uſually Invaded Poland, and thereby give a ſtop to their Incurſions: And that Commands be immediately diſpatched to the Coſacks of the Tanais, That they forthwith Equip their Fleet for the Black Sea, and Trouble and infeſt thoſe Cities and Countries belonging to the Turks, which are Situate on that Coaſt.

Eleventhly, That in caſe the Turks ſhall lay Siege to Kiovia, or any other place appertaining to the Dominion of the Czars, That then the King of Poland ſhall ſend an Army for the Relief and Succour of ſuch place Beſieged: And in like manner, in caſe the Turks ſhall Beſiege Leopolis, or any other City in Poland, the Moſcovites ſhall endeavour the Relief and Succour thereof.

Twelfthly, That the Czars ſhall forthwith give Advices to the Ottoman Port of the League concluded with Poland, and their Intentions to make War upon the Grand Seignior: And tho' the Turks upon ſuch intimation ſhall offer to give ſatisfaction to either, or both Parties; yet no heed ſhall be given thereunto, or Concluſion made without the Approbation and Conſent of all the Confederate Chriſtians.

Thirteenthly, The Moſcovites engaged to ſend their Ambaſſadours into divers parts of Chriſtendom, as, England, Denmark, Holland, and other Princes to crave their aſſiſtance and Union againſt the Mahometan arms.

Fourteenthly, That after a Peace ſhall be concluded by common Conſent of the Confederates with the Turks; And that afterwards any of them ſhall be deſirous to commence a new War, That then the [illegible] Confederates ſhall not be obliged to joyn therein. 1686.

Fifteenthly, That whereas ſome Diſputes remain ſtill undecided, touching the Limits and Bounds of Poland and Moſcovy, That Commiſſioners ſhall forthwith be authorized and diſpatched for accommodation of that Matter; eſpecially about the Dependencies on Kiovia.

Sixteenthly, That Security of Trade and Commerce be eſtabliſhed between the two Kingdoms.

Seventeenthly, That the Debts which are owing from the Subjects of one Kingdom to thoſe of another, ſhall mutually be accounted for, and ſatisfied by one to the other: And that what Suits do or ſhall ariſe between the Subjects of either Kingdom, ſhall be determined by the ordinary Courts of Juſtice, where the Defendant abides.

Eighteenthly, Thoſe Points which remain undecided, and cannot be agreed by the Commiſſioners, the ſame ſhall be remitted to the Determination of the Sovereigns.

Nineteenthly, That the People on each ſide, who live on the Borders, ſhall paſs friendly and peaceably one with the other; and in caſe of Differences ariſing between them, the ſmaller Cauſes ſhall be determined by the Palatines, and the greater by Commiſſioners.

Twentiethly, Neither ſide ſhall give Succour or Aſſiſtance to the common Enemy, nor entertain any of their Subjects in the War, or in any Office or Employment.

One and twentieth, That their Majeſties the Czars ſhall Swear to the Obſervation of theſe Articles in preſence of the Poliſh Ambaſſadours. And the like ſhall be performed by the King of Poland, at a meeting of the Diet, in preſence of the Ambaſſadours from the Czars; and in the mean time, the Ambaſſadours ſhall mutually engage, that all theſe Articles ſhall be obſerved and maintained.

Two and twentieth, That whilſt theſe Articles are interchanging, and before the Ratifications are made, It ſhall be lawful for the Merchants of each Country and Nation to Trade and Traffick without any trouble or interruption of Commerce: Only Tobacco and Brandy ſhall not be brought into Moſcovy, but remain Contrabanda, as by ancient Articles.

Three and twentieth, In caſe the Poles or Moſcovites ſhall have occaſion to diſpatch Meſſengers to Perſia or other Parts, no moleſtation, let, or hindrance ſhall be given them, nor Paſſports denied.

Four and twentieth, And in regard a good Underſtanding and Communication is neceſſary in this War, the King of Poland obliges himſelf to maintain and defend the Confines and Country of the Dukedom of Solenſko, and the Czars ſo far as Kolizin: And that pre-

1686. private Letters ſhall pay Poſtage in both ſides; but the Publick and Royal Letters ſhall go free without Charge.

Five and twentieth, That both Parties ſhall give Advices to all the Allies and Confederates of this happy League and Agreement.

Six and twentieth, That this Contract ſhall as well oblige the Heirs and Succeſſors as the Princes, who are Parties thereunto. And in caſe this Original Inſtrument of Accord ſhould be loſt or embezled in the Chancery, or Paper-Office of either ſide, yet the Agreement ſhall not be Reſcinded thereby, but ſtand in full Vertue and Force.

How the Treaty was put in execution.

The League being in this manner agreed, ſigned, and ratified on both ſides, the News thereof ſoon ſpread it ſelf over all Europe, and was particularly received at Vienna, and in the Confederate Camp, with as much Joy and Triumph, as it was at Conſtantinople with Trouble and Confuſion. And now it was expected by all the World, that this Agreement ſhould be executed, and that the Moſcovites ſhould in the firſt place, to give a beginning, have made Incurſions into the Enemies Country, and without farther delay, have inveſted thoſe Places, which lay upon the Frontiers; but inſtead thereof, their firſt Exploit was to take Poſſeſſion of the Dukedom of Smolenzko, and of Kiovia, and of about Fifty Leagues of Country, which lies along by the Banks of the Nieſter; but as to other Acts of Hoſtility, unleſs it were by ſome ranging, and confuſed Incurſions made by their own Coſacks, with deſign rather to Pilfer and Pillage, than to Offend and Damage the Enemy, nothing of Moment was performed; by which means the Tartars, againſt whom the Moſcovites were obliged to oppoſe their Arms, found an opportunity to joyn with the Coſacks of Poland, who with united Forces, not only diſputed the Paſſes with the Polanders, but likewiſe recruited and reinforced the Grand Vizier's Army in Hungary.

Treaty with Apaſi begun.

After this Agreement was finiſhed, the next Treaty in hand, was to deal with Apaſi, Prince of Tranſilvania, to draw him off from his Adherence to the Turk. This Prince finding himſelf between two great Powers, the leaſt of which was able to cruſh him to nothing, kept and maintained his Agents at both Courts, only to protract time, and divert a Storm. Count Caraffa quartering with a ſtrong Party of Horſe and Foot, on the Confines of that Principality, was appointed by the Emperor to treat with Apaſi, and to joyn Menaces and Force to fair Words; but little Satisfaction could be extorted from him, more than a Deſire to live in a kind of Neutrality; for tho the Imperial Forces were not far diſtant from him, yet the Turks were not as yet beaten out of the Field, nor their Garriſons taken, but all things ſeemed to remain in a doubtful ſtate and change of War. Thus Apaſi feared both, and demanded Protection and Aſſiſtance from both ſides, hoping that whilſt he was wavering and ſeemed unfixt, he ſhould preſerve both his Friends, or at leaſt not provoke them to be his Enemies. But what Count Caraffa could not obtain by Treaty, he forced by two Regiments, which procured the Contributions, which were then exacted; to which Apaſi more eaſily yielded, becauſe ſuch a Compliance ſeemed rather an effect of Violence and Neceſſity, than of Choice. Howſoever, the Turks were not ſo very well aſſured of the Conſtancy of the Tranſilvanians, but that juſt cauſe of Jealouſie remained of their Inclinations towards the Emperor; to prevent which, the Turks order'd a ſtrong Body of Men to march and quarter on their Confines, there to attend and obſerve the Motions both of the Germans and the Tranſilvanians; the latter of which ſeeing the Sword over their Heads, continued ſtill in a ſtate of Irreſolution: So that the Emperor eſteeming, that nothing was to be done by Treaty, commanded the Agents to quit his Court: Howſoever, for a while a ſtop was given to their Departure; for that the Brother of the Prince of Valachia, called Catachuzeno, (of which Family and Name were the laſt Greek Emperors) being privately diſpatched to Vienna, to enter into a Treaty and League with the Emperor, in the Name and Behalf of his Brother, did inſinuate many fine and hopeful Projects, for gaining without Blood or Treaſure the three Principalities. In order unto which, a Diſpatch was ſent to the Count Scaffemberg, under the Imperial Signature, immediately to march with his Forces to Caſſovia, where he ſhould find Orders for his farther Proceedings; the Count accordingly obeyed, and immediately upon his arrival, received a poſitive Commiſſion to joyn Seven thouſand Germans to Four thouſand Hungarians, detached from the Troops quartered in the Upper Hungary; and with this Army, without any farther delay, to march to the Confines of Tranſilvania, ſituate on the River Maros, where Catachuzeno had given Aſſurances, that Twelve thouſand Tranſilvanians, well provided and armed, would there be ready to meet Scaffemberg, and joyn with his Forces at their firſt appearance; and with theſe, proceeding farther to Valachia, he ſhould there on the Confines have his Numbers increaſed by an addition of Sixteen thouſand Valachians and Moldavians, with 1686.

The Turks jealous thereof.

Catachuzeno ſent from his Brother Prince of Valachia to the Emperor.

His Promiſes.

1686. with which formidable Force compoſing a moſt powerful Army, it was not to be doubted, but that after the Example of their Soldiers, the three Provinces would revolt, and yield to the Emperor; and with ſuch a Force, which nothing could oppoſe, Incurſions might be made with Fire and Sword into all Towns and Quarters of the Turks, from the River Danube to the Confines of Poland, and whereby an intercourſe of Arms, and other intelligences would be obtained. This had been a rare deſign, and a happy project, had all things correſponded with the like Succeſs, and in ſuch a manner as they had been promiſed, and inſinuated by Catecuzeno: But tho' all things did not anſwer theſe expectations; yet in other matters, the March of theſe Forces came very opportunely into thoſe Countries, and ſerved to obſtruct the Tartars paſſage into the upper Hungary, where they were ſpeeding to joyn with Tekeli, and to waſt and deſtroy all thoſe Counties.

By this time the Sultan had received a new Confirmation of the Advice, That Apaſi had ſent Commiſſioners to Treat with the Emperor at Vienna; and tho' the Turks were well aſſured of the inclination of Apaſi towards them, yet not knowing how far the fear and dread of the ſucceſful Arms of the Imperialiſts might prevail, Orders were diſpatched to the Vizier then at Belgrade, immediately to ſend Succours into Tranſilvania, to fix and confirm the wavering Mind of that Prince: Accordingly a very conſiderable Force being on the march thither, they were encounter'd on the way by Count Schaffemberg, who charged the Ottoman Troops ſent to ſecure Tranſilvania with ſuch Bravery and Succeſs, that he killed and routed that whole Party, and made himſelf Maſter of that important Paſs of Hermansburg: After which he preſſed the Eſtates of Tranſilvania once more to declare, but they ſeeking new pretences and excuſes of delay, endeavouring ſo long as they could to maintain their Neutrality, were ſo diſtreſſed at length by Oppreſſion and Free quarters, and Inſolence of the Soldiers, that ſeeing no other remedy they joyned their Troops with the Imperialiſts, and in a Body charged a party of the Tartars and put them to Flight.

Orders ſent to the Grand Vizier to relief Prince Apaſi.

The Tranſilvanians joyn with the Imperialiſts.

1686.

In the mean time the Seaſon coming on for laying (as was reſolved) Siege to Buda, the Duke of Loraine departed from Newſtadt, with intention to go to the place of General Rendezvous; but being ſeized by ſome Indiſpoſition, he ſtopt at Odemberg and came not unto the Muſter, and Review of the Army until about $\frac{19}{29}$ of May: At which time the Elector of Bavaria, and Prince Lewis of Baden, Count Staremberg, and Count Bielk with a Regiment of Swediſh Curaſſiers, raiſed for the Service of the Duke of Bavaria, together with the Auxiliary Troops of Saxony came to the Camp at Newſtadt upon the River Waagh; but the Brandenburghers, and the Troops of Suabia being not as yet come; the Duke of Loraine marched toward Raab, Comorra and Gran, and put off the Review and Muſter of the Army until the 5*th* of June: But on the firſt of that Month, a General Council of War was held to agree upon ſuch Meaſures, as were to be taken for carrying on the Siege of Buda. At that aſſembly of Officers, all the miſcarriages and defects in the mannagement of the laſt Siege of the Year 1684 were examined; and Plats brought of the place drawn by divers Hands. In fine, After long Diſcourſes thereupon it was reſolved, That every one ſhould poſſeſs the ſame Poſt, which he held before at the laſt Siege; and that ſome falſe Attacks ſhould be made at firſt, until the Lines were formed, and ſecured in ſuch manner as to hinder all Succours from being brought into the City. After the Council was riſen, ſeveral ſmall Parties of Horſe were detached to ſcowre about the adjacent Parts of Buda, Alba Regalis and Erlaw, to make diſcovery of the State and Condition of the Enemy. The ſame Day the Commiſſary Generals brought unto the Duke of Loraine a Liſt of the Forces, which were formed and in a readineſs to be employed in the Siege of Buda, the which was compoſed of Thirty thouſand Foot, and Twenty thouſand Horſe, beſides the Hungarians and Brandenburgers, which were not as yet come to the Camp: The Artillery conſiſted of Sixty Pieces of heavy Cannon, Forty Mortar Pieces, beſides a great number of Bombs, Carcaſſes and Granadoes, with vaſt Stores of Ammunition and Proviſions.

1686.

A Council held for directing the Siege of Buda.

A Liſt of the Forces deſigned for Buda.

The greateſt part of the Army was by this time advanced as far as Gran, which is about Forty Engliſh Miles diſtant from Buda; the Imperial Troops with thoſe of Saxony paſſed the Danube over a Bridge at Gran, whilſt the Bavarians continued their march on the other ſide; that place being deſigned for the General Rendezvous, and where the Feaſt of Corpus Chriſti falling out on the 13*th* of June was to be celebrated; the Solemnity thereof cauſed ſo great a Concourſe of People, that the City not being capable to contain them, the Proceſſion was made without the Walls, and within the compaſs of the Camp. Some Writers ſay, That the People flocked in greater numbers to perform the Feſtival in that place, where it had been interdicted by the Turks, for the ſpace of One hundred and twenty Years; which now they were joyful to ſee reſtored; red: Theſe Writers had ſaid more properly, if inſtead of the word Reſtor'd, they had uſed the word Introduced; for that it is ſcarce an Hundred Years, as yet, ſince that Feaſt was firſt ordained. After this Day of Devotion was paſt, the Duke of Loraine leaving his Infantry under the Cannon of Gran, marched with his Cavalry without any Oppoſition as far as Marotz, a place near to the Iſle of St. Andrew; he cauſed the Ways to be enlarged, which were Narrow, and full of Woods and Buſhes, and then took a full Survey of all the places Situate near the City.

1686.

Recruits brought to Buda.

In the mean time the Turks were not idle to ſecure and defend themſelves; and for encouragement of the Garriſon of Buda, an Aga arrived there from Conſtantinople, with a great Sum of Money to pay the Soldiers all their Arreares; and being aſſured now, that the Siege of Buda was certainly deſigned, great numbers of Boats freighted with Ammunition and Proviſion, were with a ſtrong Convoy ſent up the River; which ſo drained all the Countries round of Victuals, that there was almoſt a Famine in the adjacent Provinces. Several Troops of the moſt ſelect and choiſe Soldiers were likewiſe ſent to Buda, which increaſed the Garriſon to 12.000 effective Foot and Three thouſand Horſe, beſides which the Vizier kept an Army by him of Forty five thouſand Horſe and Foot, which he thought a ſufficient Body to oppoſe any Force, which could be ſpared and detached from the Chriſtian Army, and to diſturb them in their Trenches and Works before Buda. And becauſe the Jealouſies which the Turks conceived of the three Provinces of Tranſilvania, Moldavia and Valachia grew higher every Day, and more cauſe to fear their inclinations towards the Emperor, ſome Forces were ſent againſt them; but conſidering that there was great need of an united Force, a great Detachment from the main Body could not well be ſpared; and therefore it was contrived, that Hoſtages compoſed of the Nobleſt, and moſt conſiderable Perſons of thoſe three Principalities, ſhould be ſent to the Port, for better ſecuring the Faith and Allegiance of thoſe Provinces unto the Sultan: But whilſt things remained in this doubtful Condition, the Turks could avail little either by fair Terms, or rude Menaces.

The Turks demand Hoſtages of the three Principalities.

But the time now approaching for the Siege of Buda, the Troops of the Hereditary Countries, haſtned their march from every Province. The Auxiliaries were already advanced to the Confines, and having quitted their Winter-quartes, marched towards the large Campaign of Barkan, which was appointed for the place of General Rendezvous. The Military Stores and Ammunition, with the Train of Artillery being all in readineſs, were diſpatched away, part by Water and part by Land, beſides the Proviſions which accompanied the Regiments and Troops in the Field: In the mean time, frequent Councils of War were held at Vienna, at which the Emperor, the Dukes of Loraine, Bavaria and Newburg were preſent, the Reſults of all which tended to the Siege of Buda; towards which place Orders were given to all the Army to march, and to the Officers to repair unto their reſpective Commands; for thô all the Forces were not as yet come up, yet ſeeing the Year was ſo far advanced, it was thought neceſſary to loſe no longer time before the Siege was formed. The Forces immediately under the Command of the Duke of Loraine, to whom the Counts Caprara and Staremberg were Major Generals, conſiſted of Forty ſeven thouſand and ſeven hundred Horſe and Foot; the Troops under Command of Maximilian Elector of Bavaria conſiſted of Thirty four thoſand Horſe and Foot. The Forces under Count Schultz appointed to guard Croatia, and the Banks of the Drave made a Body of Twelve thouſand Men; which in all made an Army of Ninety three thouſand and ſeven hundred Men, beſides the ſeveral Garriſons in Hungary, and the two Bodies of Schaffemberg and Caraffa, which were appointed to act apart on the Frontiers of Tranſilvania, and along the Tibiſcus; beſides a great number of Voluntiers, which flocked from all places, to gain Honour and Renown in ſo Signal a Conqueſt, amogſt which were ſeveral Perſons of great Quality; as one of the natural Sons of King James the II. called then Mr. Fitz-James now Duke of Berwick, with many other Engliſh Gentlemen of good Quality: Alſo two Grandees of Spain, namely the Dukes of Vejar and Scalona, with about Three hundred Spaniſh reformed Officers and Gentlemen of that Nation.

1686.

Councils held about the Siege of Buda.

The Force of the Chriſtians.

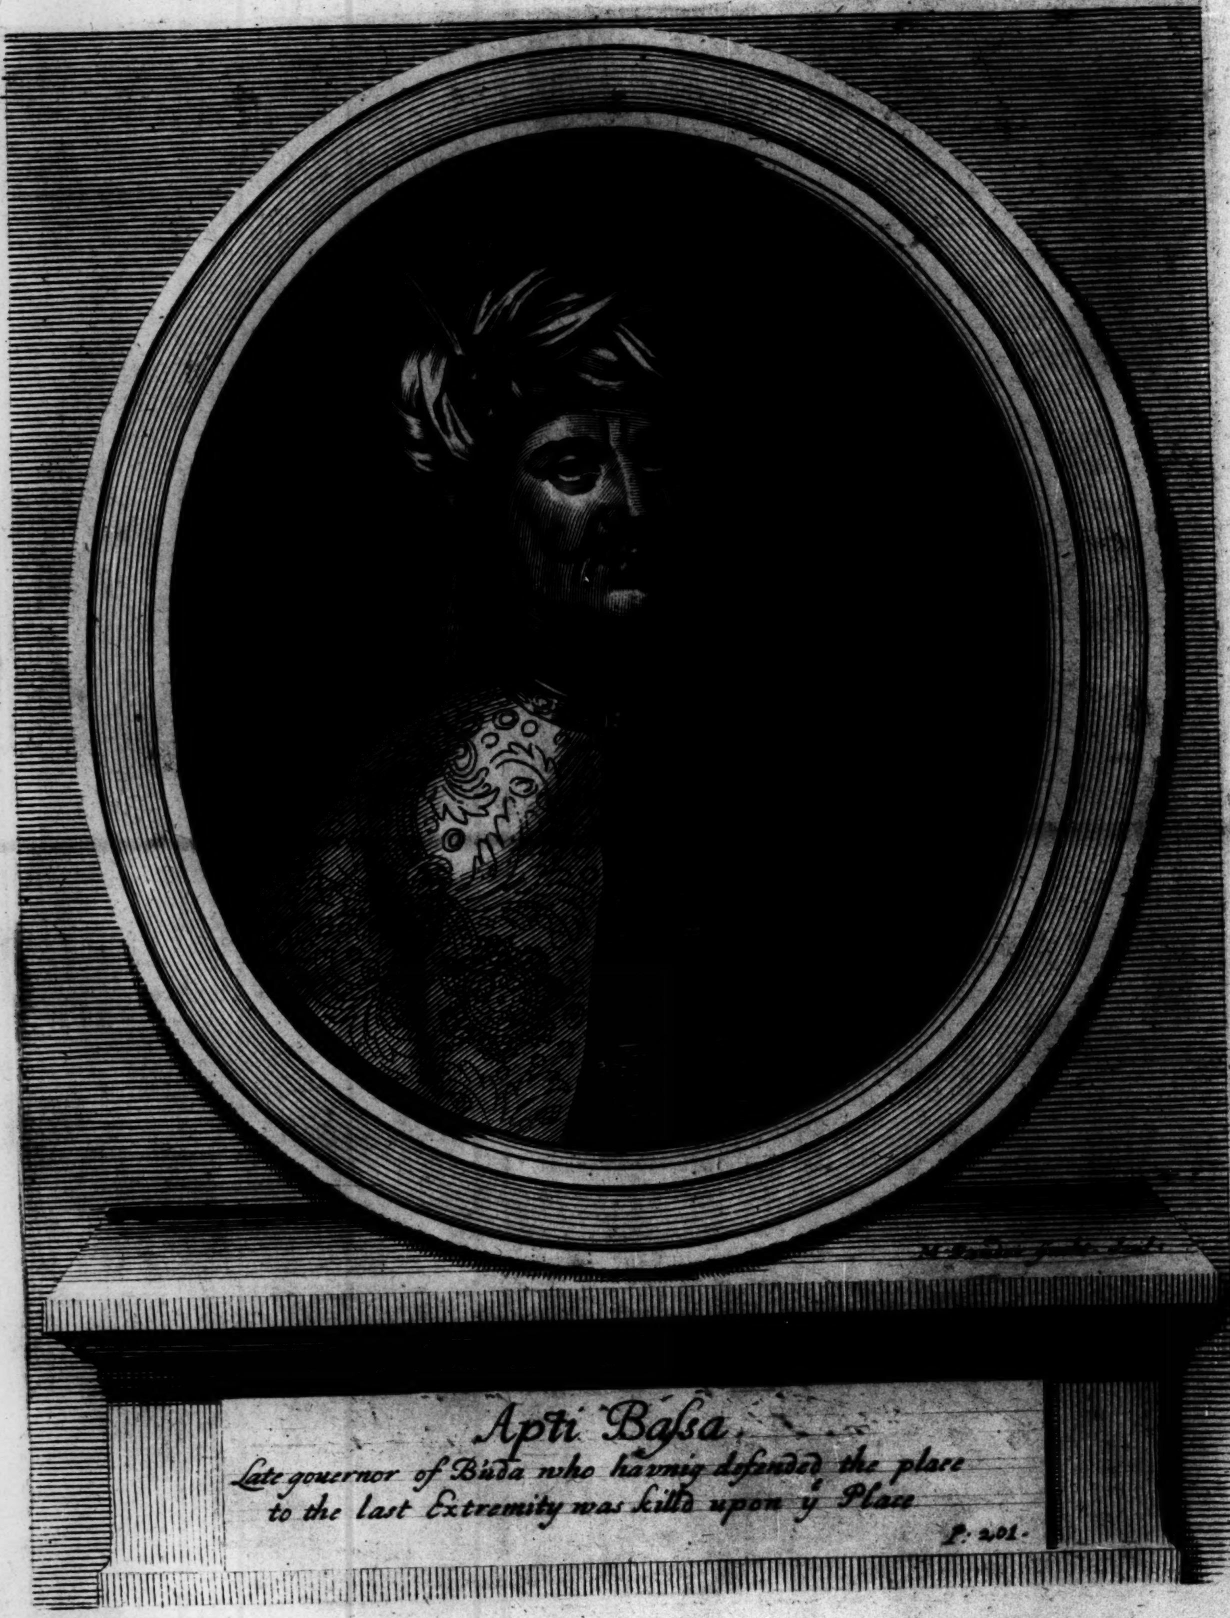
1686.

With this formidable Force (thô the Troops of Brandenburg were not yet come) about the beginning of June the Army began to move. The Duke of Loraine with his Horſe Encamped at St. Andrews, The Count Staremberg with his Foot at Poſſcamp, The Elector of Bavaria at Wailun; ſo that thô the Turks could from the Rampiers of Buda diſcover the Chriſtians on both ſides of the Danube, yet they made no Sallies to hinder, or obſtruct them in their march; believing that this might prove a falſe Appearance; whilſt the real and true intentions of the Chriſtians was deſigned againſt Alba Regalis; But it was not long before they were undeceived, when they ſaw the Bridge of Communication paſſed over the River,

June.

The Armies march.

and



Apti Baſsa

Late gouernor of Buda who havnig defended the place to the last Extremity was killd upon ye Place

P: 201.

1686. and the Bavarian Troops near to Peſth, and their City environed on all ſides with armed Force, then they began to believe that the Siege of Buda was deſigned; for until that time they were of Opinion (as we have ſaid) that Alba Regalis or Great Waradin, or ſome other place would be the labour of this Summer.

1686. On the 19*th* of June, the whole Army appear'd before the City to the great Conſternation of the Turks; and Orders were given to form a regular and cloſe Siege: And to make the Communication between the Armies the more eaſie and expedite, a ſtrong and ſpacious Bridge was built over the Danube, by the Iſland of St. Andrew, which was Situate in the middle of the River. The Bavarian Troops approaching towards Peſth, enter'd it without any oppoſition, for that the Turks finding it to be a place not to be defended without a greater Force, than what could well be ſpared from the Walls of Buda; had Demoliſhed the greateſt part of the Works, carried off the Cannon, their Ammunition and their Stores, leaving the Town diſmantled and deſolate: Howſoever, before they had wholly demoliſhed every thing as they had intended, they were ſurprized by the Bavarian Troops, and forced to quit their Work and fly to the Bridge; but when they came thither, they found it broken down by ſome of their Companions, who had paſſed before, fearing to be purſued by the Enemy; ſo that terrified and amazed, many leapt into the Water, of which divers were Drown'd, and about Thirty with an Aga were taken Priſoners; the Boats of which this Bridge was Built, floating on one ſide and the other of the River, were taken up by the Bavarians, and brought to the Iſle of St. Andrews, where they ſerved, and contributed much to the ſpeedy finiſhing of that Bridge which was there in Building.

The Turks abandon Peſth.

Peſth being in this manner poſſeſſed; It was agreed at a Council of War, That thoſe Fortifications which were the leaſt damaged ſhould be repair'd; which was accordingly done, and a Platform made in a Trianglar Figure, and ſurrounded with a deep Ditch, and fortified with ſome Cannon, and a ſufficient Garriſon left to defend it, whereby they cut off from the Enemy all Incurſions and Communications on that ſide of the River.

A Fort raiſed at Peſth.

Apti Paſha was then chief Commander in Buda: He was an aged Man, but a good Soldier and of great experience in the War: He had repaired all the Baſtions, and Curtains, and Walls, which had been battered down and blown up in the laſt Siege; and that thoſe Repairs might be the leſs ſeen and diſcovered by the Enemy, he had cauſed all the Walls to be new whited, that it might not appear where the Repairs had been lately made, and the Earth brought, which could not be ſo cloſe and binding and ſolid, as the old Works: Moreover he had erected a ſtrong Wall deſcending from the Caſtle to the River, to ſecure the Water and Communication with the Danube.

Apti Paſha Governour of Buda.

1686.

The Duke of Loraine paſſed over the Water in a little Boat, to Viſit and hold a Conference with the Duke of Bavaria then in his Quarters near Peſth; where after ſome Diſcourſe, the Aga taken at the Bridge was examined; and a Turk, who had voluntarily eſcaped out of the Town was brought before them, and declared, That there was not above Eight thouſand Men in all the Garriſon, accounting Janiſaries, Spahees and Segmen (which are a ſort of Foot Soldiers, properly belonging to thoſe Countries) and moſt of them of the new Levies; and that Apti Paſha himſelf, had not gained ſo much Reputation and Eſteem amongſt the Soldiery, as Shaitan Paſha had done, who had ſo bravely Defended the City in the Year 1684; and thô the wiſe Generals gave little or no credence to ſuch Relations as theſe, coming from affrighted Priſoners and Captives, whoſe buſineſs it was to flatter, and mollifie the Minds of their Conquerours; yet ſuch Reports proceeding from Witneſſes that were come from the City, ſerved to encourage the Soldiery, who were ready to believe what they deſire, and what may render their Enemies Low and Contemptible.

Examination of Turks taken.

Count Staremberg received Orders from the Duke of Loraine to perfect the Bridge with all poſſible ſpeed, which being finiſhed, the Elector of Bavaria, with all his Forces, (except thoſe which were left for the Guard of Peſth) paſſed and encamped his Men at the Foot of the Mount St. Gerard, and took poſſeſſion of the ſame Poſts and Places which he had poſſeſſed two Years before; and on the ſide of the Mount he raiſed two Batteries againſt the upper Town, and made his own Head-quarter, at the Baths of hot Waters, to be nearer to that Place, which his Forces were to Attack; and there raiſing a Battery of ſix Pieces of Cannon, he thence drew two parallel Lines of Communication; to which another was added very large and deep extending to the lower Town, into which the ſame day Two thouſand Men were entred to attack that Place. Next hereunto were the Quarters of Count Staremberg, to which were united the Troops of the Prince of Saxony, having their Lines in a circular Form: Next hereunto the main Body of Horſe was lodged, being as it were in the middle, and in the moſt commodious place to oppoſe the Sallies of the Enemies Cavalry;

Proceedings of the Duke of Bavaria.

The Quarters of the Army.

1686. on the other ſide of which Prince Lewis of Baden had made his Allodgement. Next hereunto were the Quarters of the Duke of Loraine, oppoſite to the Breach, which they were labouring to lay open. Next in order were placed the Troops of the Circles, which with the Voluntiers reached to the brink of the River, making a moſt formidable Body encompaſſing the Town: And to ſurround it on all ſides, Trenches and Lines were made on the ſide of Peſth, guarded and defended by Heydukes and Hungarians. Thus was this City again encompaſſed with the June. Chriſtian Arms, on the 22*d* of this Month, which about two Years ago, was accounted the impregnable Fortreſs, and the Sanctuary, and Place of Refuge for the Turks, where Fortune had made its Ne plus ultra, and ſet Bounds to the Progreſs of the Imperial Arms. But theſe brave Captains and Soldiers being returned again to their old Quarters, remembring the Diſgrace they had received by being foiled, and beholding the Places where their Comrades and Fellow-Soldiers had breathed out their laſt, and where ſome of them had received ſuch Wounds, as were ſtill ſmarting, and ſcarce healed, became more enraged and animated to avenge themſelves, of which they conceived greater hopes by Experience and Acquaintance with the Situation of the Place, and thereby better enabled to amend the Errors of the laſt Siege, having made Proviſions of all things in great abundance, for want of which, Armies commonly ſuffer more in their Trenches, than they dô from the Efforts, and Violences, and Sallies of the Enemy.

The provident and wiſe Duke of Loraine being well adviſed and aware hereof; and obſerving that very little Rain had fallen that Spring, ſo that the Graſs and Forage for Horſes was very ſhort; and that the great Heats and Drought had burnt up the Paſture in all parts round the Leaguer: He drew out from every Troop ten Men only, to lodge within the Trenches, which made a Body of two Regiments, or Two thouſand The Horſe Quarters. Horſe, under the Command of Count Taff, which were eſteem'd ſufficient to repulſe any Sallies of Horſe which the Enemy could make from the Town: But the main and great Body of Horſe were ordered to march towards Alba Regalis, under Command of the Counts Palfi and Gondola, and other Generals; and taking their Quarters upon the Banks of the River Sarwitz, they might there not only find plenty of Forage for themſelves, but deprive the Enemy thereof, and diminiſh their Stores; beſides, the Place was commodious both to interrupt the Vizier in his March, and all other Succours deſigned for the Relief of Buda.

The parallel Lines of Communication being finiſhed, by which the Soldiers might paſs under ſhelter to the lower Town; and the Batteries raiſed on the ſide of the hot Waters, where (as we ſaid) the Duke of Bavaria had his Head Quarters; Six Pieces of Cannon of Twenty four pound Ball, began firſt to play on that Wall, Batteries raiſed. where two Years before a Battery and Breach had been made, and an Aſſault given; the Place was called the Burg of Waſſerſtadt, in Engliſh, the Water-Town; and here it was thought fit to renew the Battery; for that the Earth having been lately laid, and the Work repaired, it could not be ſo well ſetled, and ſo firm as the ancient Fortifications, the which was manifeſted by a plain and open Proof; for being for one whole Day continually battered, ſo great a Breach was made, and ſo wide, as to open a Way to a formidable Aſſault: On the other ſide the Turks plyed their Cannon very hard upon the Camp, which did not much damage, thô lodged within Muſquet-ſhot. And thô the Breach was made, yet it was thought neceſſary to defer the Aſſault until the Approaches were perfected, June. which before Morning were almoſt finiſhed, under the darkneſs of the Night.

On the 24*th* all things being prepared, and a Breach open'd of above twenty Paces wide, a Signal for an Aſſault was given by firing three Pieces of Cannon; upon which the Troops appointed for that Service, advanced with ſuch Bravery and Reſolution, The lower Town aſſaulted that the Enemy yielded up that Station with little Reſiſtance; and a Party of them deſcending from the upper Town, gave only a ſingle Volly of Shot, and ſo again retired with ſome Diſorder. This being the firſt Action of this Siege, and taken. there was ſcarce a Voluntier or Gentleman-Adventurer in the whole Army, but who preſented himſelf in this Enterprize, being deſirous to ſignalize his Valour in the firſt beginning. The Night following the Turks kept continually firing, which did not hinder the Chriſtians from lodging themſelves to the right and left on the Breach of the lower Town; in the taking of which, they loſt but Eight Soldiers in that Day and Night's Service, which being ſo cheaply obtained, the Generals ſuſpected that the Enemy had abandoned the Place with Deſign, and with Intention to Blow up the Aſſailants with ſome Mines prepared for them; and for that reaſon they gave a ſtop to the Advancement of the Troops; but the next Day, having ſearched and examined thoſe Places, and finding all ſecure, they proceeded to make a new Lodgment in the Angle of the Wall of the lower Town, which anſwered in a right Line to the main Tower of the upper City, under which they lay ſecure from the

Enemies

1686. Enemies Shot. This Exploit being performed with the loſs only of Sixteen Men; there was but little Plunder found therein, beſides ſome Horſes and Oxen, and ſome few Field-pieces upon one of the Works; for all the Houſes were beaten down by the Turks themſelves, and conſumed by Fire, and the Inhabitants either fled or retired into the upper Fortifications; which ſhews evidently that the Turks looking on that Place as not tenable, had drawn their Force into the higher Town, in which they placed all their Security, hoping to make a moſt vigorous Reſiſtence, both by the advantagious Situation, and the goodneſs of the Fortifications: But the Chriſtians finding the Advantage of the lower Ground, whereby to offend the upper City, employed immediately Two thouſand Men, with diverſe Laboures to draw the Lines, and deepen the Approaches from one Gate to the other.

Lines drawn in the lower Town.

In the mean time the Turks, who lived in the parts adjacent to Buda, being put into great Conſternation by the concourſe of the Chriſtian Arms, prepared themſelves to fly, and ſeek Refuge in remote parts; ſo that many, with their Wives, and Children, and Servants, having taking with them the beſt of their Houſholdſtuff and Goods, paſſed over to the Iſland of St. Margarets, which is ſituate in the Danube, and of a very great length; but finding this Place of too near Neighbourhood to the Chriſtian Army, and very unſecure; having got about thirty large Boats and Barges, they had laden their Goods and embarked their Perſons thereon, with deſign to paſs down the River to Belgrade; when a Body of Hungarians, Huſſars, and Heydukes, under Command of Count Budiani, having Advice thereof, armed out a good number of Boats and Barges, and with Three hundred Dragoons by Land, boarded their Veſſels, and having killed the Boat-men, and the chief amongſt them, eaſily made themſelves Maſters of the reſt, and of all the rich Houſholdſtuff, Mony, and Goods, in ſuch abundance, that every Common Soldier had a Suit and Veſt of Silk for his own Share, with other good Booty and Plunder, which they carried away, and departed; but being informed afterwards by ſome Raſcians, that the Inhabitants of that Iſland had committed many Cruelties and Outrages upon the Chriſtians, they returned again to the Iſland, which is about ſeven Hungarian or German Miles long, (which make about Twenty eight Engliſh) and there put all to Fire and Sword, with the Slaughter of about a Thouſand Men. After which, Count Budiani went purpoſely to the Duke of Loraine, in the Camp, to render an account of his late Atchievements; and in teſtimony thereof, he preſented him with ſeven Turkiſh Standards, which he had won in that, and in another Rencounter, in which he had defeated a Party of the Enemy near Erſcin, together with ſome Priſoners of Quality and Condition, amongſt which there was an Aga and a Chiaus.

The Turks near Buda fly to the Iſle of St. Margaret.

Are attacked by the Chriſtians and plunder'd.

Many of them kill'd.

1686. June.

1686.

26th. The Chriſtian Soldiers animated with theſe daily Succeſſes, ſome few of them, with more Temerity than Prudence, made an attempt to Lodge themſelves nearer to the Upper City, without thoſe due Precautions of Defence, which are commonly uſed by throwing up of Earth, and making ſome little Blinds as is practiſed in all Military Approaches; but theſe bold Men adventured with open Breaſts to enlarge their Lodgments on that ſide of the City which looks towards Strigonium; which when the Turks obſerved, a great number of them flanked on one ſide by the round Tower, and on the other by a Party of Muſqueteers, throwing Stones and Hand-granadoes, aſſailed the Germans, (who were not above Fifty in all) with ſo much Fury as forced them to make their Retreat; the which notwithſtanding they did with good Order, being aſſiſted by their Comrades, who came to their Help, and repulſed the Enemy, and made them with ſome loſs to retire back into the City: Howſoever, in a ſhort time after, about the Cloſe of the Evening, the Turks made a more vigorous Sally on the Left-hand of the round Tower of the old City: The Count of Ausberg and the Cavalier Rohne having the Command that Night of thoſe Quarters, with great Bravery received the Enemy, and engaged with them for above an Hour's ſpace; when the Prince of Commarcy, and the Prince of Vaudemont having their Quarters near thereunto, came ſeaſonably into their Succour with many Gentlemen, who were Voluntiers, and Soldiers of Fortune, and forced the Turks back into the City, with the loſs of about Fifty Janiſaries: Of the Chriſtians were about ten killed in this Action, which was well paid by the advantage then gained; for whilſt the Parties were engaged in this manner, they opened the Trenches on both ſides of the old City, with two large Parades or places of Arms, and extended the Lines of the Approaches towards the two Bulwarks of the upper City. And becauſe it was neceſſary to Batter the City on that ſide, a Battery was raiſed, without the old Wall, of Sixteen Pieces of heavy Cannon, from which many Shot were made at the round Tower, and ſeveral Bombs thrown into the City.

The Boldneſs of the Chriſtian Soldiers.

Sallies made by the Turks, and are repulſed.

The Turks nothing diſanimated herewith, made a vigorous Sally on the Quarters of the Bavarian Forces, with Three thouſand

The Turks made a Sally and were repulſed.

Horſe and Foot; and thô the Elector was at that time indiſpoſed in his Health; yet his Bravery prompted him to mount on Horſeback, and with the aſſiſtance of the Horſe, under Command of Lieutenant Colonel Hoſkerken, which were Quartered in a Vally on the Way towards Strigonium, he with a ſteddy Foot oppoſed the Turks, and forced them to Retire with Diſorder into the Town. In this Action Twenty four of their Officers were Slain, with many Janiſaries, and many Wounded. Of the Bavarians about Forty were Killed, cauſed by a Surprize at the firſt beginning of the Sally: The Prince of Savoy according to his natural Courage and Valour, preſſing into the thickeſt of the Enemies numbers, had his Horſe Killed under him; but mounting another, purſued the Enemy to the very Gates of the City.

The Swedes and others come to the Camp.

Whilſt theſe things were acting, it was a matter of great encouragement to the Camp, to find their Forces daily augmenting by new Recruits. For the Swedes were then newly arrived under the Command of the Marquis of Turlac, and took their Station on that ſide, which leads to Alba Regalis. Theſe were followed by Lieutenant General Schoning, Commander in Chief of the Brandenburg Forces, whoſe arrival at the Camp ſooner than was expected, was a cauſe of much Joy and Satisfaction to the whole Army. About the ſame time alſo came Prince Lewis of Newburg, Great Maſter of the Knights of the Teutonick Order, with Count Dunewalt, and many Knights of that Order: As alſo divers famous Engeniers, together with Count Rabata, who brought with him many Bombs, Mortar-Pieces, with a new Train of Artillery, abundance of Ammunition, and all Warlike preparations: With which, and with the Addition of new Forces, they were enabled to draw a new Line of Communication, without that which was next to the City, extending from one Encampment unto the other; which they ſupported with ſmall Redoubts raiſed and fortified with Cannon, which proved to be of great uſe againſt the Sallies of the Turks, which were very frequent, and performed with Reſolution and Courage: Beſides all which Recruits, the Auxiliary Troops of Suabia and Franconia, to the number of Five or Six thouſand Men, with two Companies from Paſſau and Ratiſbone arrived in the Camp; and on the firſt of July they took thoſe Stations which were appointed for them. July.

The Works of the City batter'd.

The Town was now Batter'd on all ſides, and particularly by a Fort raiſed by the Swedes, which on the third of this Month, began to make a Breach on three Towers which defended the upper Wall. The Cannon on the ſide of the Loraine Quarters, had in four Days time abſolutely demoliſhed two Bulwarks, which flanked the Wall on that ſide, and ruined the Wall it ſelf, having made a very large Breach; to diſcover which, and to know in what manner it lay open to an Aſſault, four Muſquetiers were Order'd to mount thereupon, and ſee in what Poſture the Turks remained on that ſide; ſo ſoon as theſe adventurous Men appeared at the Mouth of the Breach, the Turks cried out and took a general Allarum, running immediately to drive them from thence, but they being ſuccoured by another Party of Muſquetiers, and by continual Peals of Cannon, and Fourteen Mortar-Pieces, which threw Bombs, the Turks were worſted and loſt many Men; and being not able to endure the conſtant Firings, were forced to Retreat, as alſo did the four Muſquetiers with ſome Wounds received by Stones and Granadoes. By two or three Inhabitants, who for fear had deſerted the Town, informations were given, That by the many Bombs, and the continual Firing of great Cannon, the Conſternation was ſo great, that both the Inhabitants and the Soldiers eſteemed themſelves in as much danger within the City, as thoſe were who mounted the Guards, and were actually emploied in Defence of the Walls: Wherefore, to ſecure themſelves the better, the Tops of the Houſes were uncovered, and Caves and Vaults made under Ground, to Lodge both the Citizens and the Souldiers; and for the better ſafeguard of the Garriſon, which was always expoſed on the Walls, it was contrived to make ſome Mines without at every Baſtion, well charged with Powder, that upon any Attack might be ready to be Fired: Of which the Duke of Loraine, having intelligence from theſe Fugitives, he order'd Countermines to be made, which hinder'd the Turkiſh Labourers ſomething in their Works; but either by the looſneſs of the Ground, or the unexperience of the Miners, the Succeſs did not anſwer Expectation: For thô the Miners had proceeded a great way under Ground, by which it was believed, that the Springing of one Mine would widen the Breach and facilitate the Aſſault; that Project had little effect, for the Mine being fired did not caſt up much Earth: Howſoever, It was followed by an Aſſault on that ſide of the Duke of Loraine, of which the Turks being aware made a moſt vigorous reſiſtance, throwing great quantities of Bombs, Stones and Hand-Granadoes amongſt the Beſiegers. In this Action above Sixty Muſquetiers were killed and wounded; the General Tingen, and Major Beſancon were wounded with Stones, and the Cavalier de Roſne was ſhot through the Shoulder. Howſoever, the Imperia-

The Turks uncover their Houſes

Mines and Counter-Mines.

An Aſſault given.

To the damage of the Chriſtians.

1686.

perialiſts keeping their Ground in their Trenches, about Two hundred Paces from the Wall, did at length repulſe the Enemy; and with continual Batteries the Walls were ſo plied, that from the Tower in the Corner of the City, to the firſt Bulwark, they were almoſt ruined and beaten down, as were alſo the three Towers which were oppoſite to that Attack.

July.

The Turks make a Sally on the Bran-denburg ſide.

On the 9th of this Month about break of Day, the Turks made another Sally to the Left-hand, where the Brandenburg Troops were lodged, which was performed with ſuch Fury, that the Brandenburgers being ſurprized, quitted their Poſts, and were beaten out of their firſt Line, with the loſs of about Two hundred Men killed, amongſt which there was one Captain, one Lieutenant and an Enſign: And the Enemy firing at the ſame time a Mine, in which four or five Miners were buried, had cauſed much more diſorder, had not a Body of Reſerve, and the Main Guard come in to their Aſſiſtance, which ſo bravely Charged the Enemy, as to force them to Retire in great Confuſion. The Imperialiſts loſt in this Action, beſides the Brandenburgers above One hundred and fifty Men, amongſt whom was a Lieutenant Colonel, who was a Swede, a Captain of the Regiment of Mansfelt, two Lieutenants and many other ſubaltern Officers.

In the mean time the Bavarians advanced their Approaches, and from a new Battery began to Fire, and ſhoot at a ſmall Tower, which notwithſtanding did little execution, the Walls being very good on that ſide. The ſame Day a Deſerter from the Town brought News, That the Beſieged expected in Twenty four Hours time a Reinforcement of Three thouſand Men; upon which intelligence Three hundred and fifty Men were immediately diſpatched over the Water unto Peſth, to ſtrengthen the Redoubt at that place, and to prevent the Turks in their deſign of cutting off all Communication between that Fort and the Camp. And upon farther intelligence, that the Turks aſſembled in great Bodies about Segedin, the Duke of Loraine diſpatched away the Baron Marcy, with Three thouſand Horſe, and ſix Battalions of Foot over the Danube, with Orders to advance as far as Hatwan, and to Engage the Turks in what place ſoever it ſhould be his Fortune to meet them: Accordingly Baron Marcy paſſed the River, and poſted himſelf near the Bridge of Peſth, there to attend the Enemy who were coming upon him, as was reported, with a Body of Ten thouſand Men, under Command of Achmet Paſha: Upon which Advice, the Duke of Loraine diſpeeded away three Imperial Regiments, to joyn with and reinforce the Detachment under Marcy, leſt the Enemy ſhould ſeize the Paſſage over the Teyſſe. In the mean time, the Chriſtian's working hard upon a Mine on the Bavarian ſide, which they deſigned ſhould make the Breach wider and larger than it was, were diſcovered by the Turkiſh Miners, who were preparing a Mine near thereunto; and had almoſt completed it, when fearing leſt the Chriſtians ſhould be before-hand with them, they precipitated matters ſo faſt, that due care was not taken to hinder a Reverſe; but on the contrary, the Turks giving Fire to their Mine, it recoyled back on themſelves, and buried many of their Men, and ſo ſhook the Walls and Fortifications of the Tower, that by the help of a Battery of eight Pieces of Cannon, which were levelled and plaid upon it, the Breach was made conſiderably wide, and ſo enlarged, that at a Council of War held on the 13*th* of this Month, it was reſolved not longer to defer the Aſſault on the Bavarian ſide: The Orders for which were no ſooner Iſſued, and the Signal given, than all the Voluntiers and brave Adventurers in the Army, Tranſported with Ambition, and Deſire of Glory, preſſed to be the firſt that ſhould mount the Breach. In this Action Count Guy of Staremberg, Count Herberſtein, and Count Aversberg were Commanded each with Two hundred and twenty Men to make the Aſſault in three ſeveral places; the firſt of which was to enter in the middle of the Curtain, the ſecond on the right Hand, and the third on the left; amongſt which ſome Granadiers were mixed, and Pioniers to prepare and level the Ground to make an Allodgment; and a Reſerve of Two thouſand Men was appointed to ſuſtain, and ſecond the Aſſailants. The Aſcent unto the Breach was very difficult, and the Turks had repaired it in many places with Paliſodoes; howſoever to brave Minds ſpirited with a deſire of Glory, ſuch as were the Voluntiers, who were Gentlemen of principal Quality, from divers Parts and Nations of Europe, nothing ſeemed ſo difficult and hazardous, but what they were able and daring to ſurmount. The Onſet was made about ſeven a Clock in the Evening, and the firſt thing attempted was to force up the Paliſadoes, which being done, they found the Beſieged poſted behind in their Trenches with good Order; the Chriſtians Attacked them with great Vigour, and the Turks made an equal Defence, pouring whole Vollies of ſhot with great numbers of Granadoes, and diſcharging a prodigious quantity of Stones from their Mortar-pieces upon them; on each ſide likewiſe was a round Tower filled with Muſquetiers and Granadiers, who beſtowed their Shot liberally upon them; ſo that the Aſſailants being between Firings on each ſide,

Succour ſent to Peſt.

Marcy ſent to oppoſe the march of the Turks.

1686.

The Turks Fire a Mine to their hurt.

July.

An Aſſault made on the Town.

1686.

An Aſſault given with loſs to the Chriſtians.

ſide, as alſo on the Front were killed and wounded in great numbers; howſoever they made themſelves Maſters of the Breach, which they maintained and defended above the ſpace of an hour; but at length the heat of the Fight was ſo great, as had put things into much Diſorder, and cauſed the Pioneers and Labourers to diſperſe; and a Proviſion of Faggots, and Sacks of Earth not being at Hand, ſufficient to cover the Aſſailants, they lay naked and expoſed to the Shot of the Enemy; and at the ſame time a Mine being prepared, and fired under the Breach, it did great execution; ſo that many Perſons of great Quality and Valour were killed and wounded in this Action; and the Turks making a Sally in another place at the ſame time, the General cauſed a Signal to be given for the Troops to Retreat, which was done in very good Order. The Regiments of Souches, Manſfelt and Staremberg, were thoſe which ſuffer'd moſt in this Action.

The Perſons Wounded were:

The Prince of Commarcy.
The Duke of Bejar, a Grandee of Spain.
Marquis Blancfort, Son of Mareſchal Crequi.
Count Staremberg.
Count Dona.
The Duke of Eſcalona, a Grandee of Spain.
Two Captains of Souches's Regiment.
The Baron Chifler, the Natural Son of Prince Rupert.
My Lord George Savil, Second Son of the Lord Marquis of Halifax.
Count Maldeghen.
Mr. Fitz James, Natural Son of King James the II. of England.
Count Urſe, three Spaniſh Gentlemen.
Monſieur Sulpice, a Gentleman belonging to the Prince of Commarcy.

Perſons Killed were:

Prince Palatine of Veldens.
Prince Piccolomini.
Count Hortemback, Page to the Duke of Loraine.
The Cavalier of Courmaillon.
Count Ermeſtein, Major of Schezſemberg's Regiment.
Six Engliſh Noblemen, amongſt which was that Worthy Gentleman Colonel Robert Forbus, Second Son to the Earl of Granard.
Three Spaniſh Gentlemen, belonging to the Duke of Bejar.
The Turks had about Two hundred Men killed, and One hundred wounded.

1686.

The Beſieged thinking hereby to have gained a great advantage over the Chriſtians, and thereby to have put them into ſome Confuſion and Diſorder, made a Sally that Night on the Brandenburgher's Quarters; but were vigorouſly repulſed back again into the Town, with the loſs of many Heads, which the Brandenburghers carried into the Camp, to receive the uſual Rewards promiſed thereupon.

Terrible effects of Bombs to the Turks.

For ſeveral Days there hapned nothing but Batteries, and Firing Mines on one ſide and the other; but the Mines on the Chriſtian ſide did not ſo much execution, as did thoſe of the Turks: Howſoever, the Bombs were much available, and did great damage within the Town; eſpecially thoſe of a new Invention made by an Ingenier called Gonzales, which not only killed, but ſet all on Fire whereſoever it fell. One of this ſort of Bombs hapning within the Walls of a great Edifice, (for as we ſaid before, all the Roofs and Coverings were taken off) produced moſt terrible and direful effects, not only beating down the Walls, but Killed above One hundred Men, Women and Children. The Turks to Revenge themſelves for all theſe Slaughters, were very diligent and active in Springing their Mines, which they had prepared with great Art; by which many Soldiers and Officers of note were deſtroyed, to the great diminution in number of the Beſiegers: In the mean time the Chriſtians plied their great Guns, and Sprang the Mines to widen the Breaches, in order to make a General Aſſault, for which Preparations were daily made, and Ladders brought, and all Inſtruments provided in order thereunto.

Of Mines to the Chriſtians.

July.

The great Magazine of the Turks Blown up.

On the 20*th* Day of July, about ſeven a Clock in the Morning, a ſtrange hollow Noiſe was heard under Ground, and the Earth trembled both in the Town, and under the Feet of the Soldiers in the Camp; and a dark Cloud of Smoak and Aſhes cover'd the City, ſo thick and black, that for the ſpace of an hour, ſcarce any thing of the Walls themſelves could be ſeen; which cauſed a Terrour in the Minds of the Beſiegers, notwithſtanding their Reſolution and Bravery; for whole ſhowers of Stones were caſt up, and thrown into the Bavarian Trenches, whereby many Soldiers and Officers of Quality were Wounded: And whilſt the Elector of Bavaria, and the Prince of Baden were buſily employ'd in Riding about to confirm their Soldiery, a Stone of conſiderable weight and bigneſs fell between them: All which Convulſion hapned by blowing up of the chief Magazine of the City, whether by Bomb from the Camp, or any other Accident is uncertain:

But ſuch were the dreadful effects thereof, That it ſhook down one Wing of the Caſtle, and that ſide of the Wall towards the Water; threw vaſt quantities of Stone and Rubbiſh into the Danube; and Killed above Fifteen hundred People, who were uſeleſs and unfit for Service, and had for their better ſafety hid themſelves in Vaults and Cellars: By this unexpected Blow, the City being much weakned towards the Water, Giavarino Lieutenant General of the Heydukes, was Order'd with a Party of his Soldiers to take the advantage of this Accident, and to poſt himſelf in the beſt manner he could, to hinder all Sallies of the Enemie by that way, and to make that ſide more eaſie and fit for Storm.

But whilſt the Duke of Loraine thought of theſe things, and how much his Forces were diminiſhed by Aſſaults, by Sallies of the Enemy, by Mines, by Sickneſs and various other Accidents; and how much Blood it might ſtill coſt, before the Town could be forced to Surrender by dint of Sword, he reſolved to make uſe of this opportune Miſfortune, whilſt the Turks remain'd in their Terrour and Amazement to try the Paſha with Capitulations and good Conditions in caſe of Surrender; and to ſend him a Summons in Writing, by the Hand of Count Coniſeck, who according to his Inſtructions, repreſented the State and Condition of the Affair to the Paſha Governour, that the Chriſtians were very ſtrong without, and reſolved to take the Town, the Walls of which were almoſt demoliſh'd, and their Garriſon laid open and expoſed; and that a General Aſſault was determined; and that ſince they could not reaſonably expect any Relief or Succour, the Paſha would do better Service to his Maſter the Ottoman Emperor by ſaving the Blood of his People, than by a deſperate defence to ſacrifice the Lives of ſo many by his wilful obſtinacy; nor hereby could he give occaſion to any to tax him, either for want of Valour or Conduct, ſince he had given ſuch fair Evidence of both unto the World. The Paſha received the Meſſenger with much more Humanity, than they did ever practiſe in the times of their Proſperity, and heard him with great attention; and Read the Letter ſent him by the Duke of Loraine ſeveral times over: But before he would make any Reply thereunto, he called a Divan or Council, in which the Buſineſs being debated for the ſpace of about three hours; at length this Anſwer was returned in Writing, and put up in a Purſe of White Sattin, according to the Cuſtom of the Turks; which was to this effect. That he did wonder much from which of his Actions, during this Siege, he could ground any Hope upon theſe Summons, that he ſhould, or could be prevailed with to make a Surrender, not having been guilty as be imagined of ſuch mean and Cowardly behavior, as might merit ſo great an Affront to his Valour, as to be tempted with Conditions and Terms how Honourable ſoever unto a Surrender. But in caſe He, and his Soldiers had appear'd in the leaſt manner Timorous and Baſe, That they would amend that fault by a more vigorous Defence, and by ſuch Actions as ſhould make it appear to the World, that, that City was conſerved with a Bravery equal to the Importance thereof; That God would puniſh the Pride of the Chriſtians, for daring ſo much as to conceive a thought of bringing low the Ottoman Emperor, from whom having received the Command of that Place, he was reſolved to deliver it unto no other, than unto him only.

Summons ſent to the Paſha.

The Paſha's Anſwer.

Whilſt this Treaty continued, which was for the ſpace of three Hours, a Ceſſation of Arms was granted, during which time, the Soldiers on each ſide diſcourſed friendly, and jeſted together, and reached to one another their Pipes, and their Tobacco; from whence it may be ſeen, how natural Love and Friendſhip is to Mankind, and how unnatural and violent is Hatred, War and Cruelty.

From this Haughty and Reſolute Anſwer of the Turks many did conjecture, That they had received promiſes of a ſpeedy Relief; which cauſed ſome Reports and Diſcourſes in the Camp, That the Vizier was marching with a very numerous and puiſſant Army for their Succour: Of which thô the Beſieged had no intelligence; yet conſidering that the thing was not improbable, the Turks conceived ſome hopes from thence, and the Chriſtians prepared to receive and engage them. Nor was the expectation of Relief by the March of the Turks without ſome ground; for at Hatwan in the Upper Hungary great numbers of them joyned in one Body, which with much advantage might deſcend with the Current down the River, and give trouble and diſturbance at the Siege of Buda: To prevent which, ſome Bridges were ſent, for paſſing the Regiments of Horſe under Caprara, and the Prince Charles of Neuburg over the Rivers, unto ſuch Commodious Paſſes, as were advantagious to reſtrain thoſe Forces from farther proceedings. In the mean time ſome comfortable News was brought to the Duke of Loraine from Count Caraffa, who adviſed, that upon intelligence of a very conſiderable Convoy ſent from Segedin, for the Relief and Reinforcement of Agria; he with General Heuſler reſolved to make an Aſſault thereupon; which deſign failing, gave an occaſion howſoever to give a Defeat to a great part of the Garriſon of Agria; in which Action Caprara poſted himſelf in a cloſe, and deep Vally, cover'd on both ſides with Hills; and about half a League beyond Peterhaſi with ſome Hungarian Troops well Armed, was order'd to lie in Ambuſh; from whence he detached about Fifty Huſſars to March towards the City, and in their Way to take up all the Horſes and Cattle they could find in the Paſtures, with Orders that in caſe the Garriſon ſhould Sally out upon them, that they ſhould feign a ſeeming Flight, and draw them on until they came near the Camp: The which being accordingly performed by the Huſſars, Oſman Paſha of Agria purſued them cloſe with a ſelect number of his beſt Soldiers, until unwarily he fell into the Ambuſcade which was laid for him; from whence the Hungarians Sallying forth renewed the Fight, being ſeconded by General Heuſler's Dragoons, who kept the Enemy in play until the Foot were come up to their Aſſiſtance: And then Oſman Paſha being ſenſible of the Snare into which he was fallen, encouraged his Men bravely to defend themſelves, and to make an orderly Retreat, but he was then too far engaged; for after a hot and deſperate Conflict, above Two hundred and fifty of the Garriſon were killed, and about One hundred Priſoners taken, and amongſt the reſt Oſman Paſha himſelf was ſlain: Howſoever this Victory was not gained without ſome loſs on the Chriſtians ſide; for Baron Bur a Captain of Dragoons, and the Captain Lieutenant of the Regiment of Caſtelli, with above Twenty Common Soldiers were killed, beſides many wounded; this Engagement being towards the Evening, the remainder of the Garriſon by covert of the Night, made their Retreat back and recover'd the City.

A ſtop given to the progreſs of the Turks.

1686.

The Paſha of Agria defeated.

Whilſt theſe things were acting, the Siege of Buda proceeded with various Fortunes; and the wiſe Generals were not only intent thereunto, preſſing forward with the greateſt Bravery imaginable; but alſo were wary, and vigilant to obſerve the Motions of the Turkiſh Army deſigned to raiſe the Siege: For by certain intelligence it was adviſed, That the Seraskier was on his March, but that he moved ſlowly, to give time unto the other Troops, which were Quarter'd along the Banks of the Rivers Save and Drave to come and joyn, for that the Forces of the Turks were not ſo numerous, as to admit of any Detachments, but rather to Fight in one Body only: It being neceſſary to ſecure the Paſſage by the Bridge of Eſſeck, Eight thouſand Men were order'd to poſſeſs it; but News coming, that the Imperialiſts were already Maſters of it with a far greater Force, the Seraskier paſſed the River by a Bridge at Peter Waradin, and ſtayed at Segedin; from whence he ſent a Flying Army of Horſe compoſed of Turks and Tartars, to March unto Alba Regalis; from whence they were order'd by frequent Sallies and Alarums to offend and amuſe the Chriſtian Camp before Buda, until ſuch time as the Grand Vizier being enforced by the Aſian Horſe, and by the Turks, might be able to joyn with them at Alba Regalis; from whence it was deſigned to make all their Sallies upon the Camp. Of which General Schultz having advice, whoſe buſineſs it was to obſerve the Motions of the Enemy, he pitched his Camp along the Drave, from whence he obſerved the March of the Enemy, and narrowly watched the Garriſons of Kaniſia and Zigeth. The Leaguer being thus ſecured from outward Aſſaults, every Quarter of the City was attacked by ſeveral turns, ſometime by the Bavarians on their ſide, by the Brandenburgers on theirs, and by the Imperialiſts, and others in their ſeveral Stations, with Mines and Countermines, with Cannon and Batteries, Bombs and Granadoes, and all other Inſtruments of Death, which coſt much Blood on one ſide and the other. At length, to bring Matters to a more ſure and ſpeedy Iſſue it was reſolved, to prepare all things againſt the 27th of July for a General Aſſault, which was to be performed by Fifteen thouſand Men; That is, Five thouſand at the Attack of Loraine, Five thouſand of Bavaria, and as many of Brandenburg, beſides Two thouſand Talpatſi, which are a People of Hungary; and that the Beſieged might be attacked on all ſides, and their Forces divided thereby, the Lieutenant General Giavarino Commander of the Haidukes, was order'd to make a ſeeming Attack by the Water-gate, where part of the Wall near the Caſtle was thrown down by the Magazine which was lately fired: For this General Storm all things were well prepared; the Officers of moſt experience, and bravery were appointed to lead the Aſſailants unto the reſpective Attacks, and Labourers placed in a readineſs to carry Faggots, and Sacks of Earth to cover the Men, and make good the Lodgments, and others with Mattocks and Spades, and ſuch like Inſtruments to dig and throw up the Earth.

Advices that the Seraskier approached

Schultz watches his Motion.

A General Aſſault pre pared.

1686.

The Duke of Loraine intending to begin the Aſſault at break of Day in the Morning, paſſed that Night in the Trenches; but when they were ready for that Enterpriſe on the Bavarian ſide, all the Paliſadoes were on Fire, and burnt with ſo violent a Flame, cauſed by a certain mixture of bituminous ſtuff, that the Attack was deferr'd until towards the Evening; before which time ſome Rains falling, ſerved to extinguiſh the fierceneſs of the Fire, and the Duke of Loraine and

Bavaria

The Aſſault made.

The Example of the General encourges the Soldiers.

The Turks Fire four Mines.

Bavaria after ſome Conſultations together reſolved forthwith to proceed unto the Aſſault; the Sign for which was given by firing three Pieces of Cannon: Upon which Signal the Imperialiſts, Bavarians and Brandenburgers drew out of their Lines, and advanced againſt the Breaches: The Imperialiſts ſoon made themſelves Maſters of the great Tower, but were quickly droven thence by the Turks; which when the Duke of Loraine obſerved from the place where he had poſted himſelf, for to give out his Orders; he immediately in Perſon advanced with freſh Troops to ſuſtain and ſupport the firſt; the Preſence of the General, who was engaged in a dangerous place, with the Sword in his Hand and Casket on his Head, did ſo animate the Soldiers, that inflamed with a deſire to imitate the bravery of their General and preſerve his Perſon, they all returned to the Fight; and tearing out the Paliſadoes all on Fire, in deſpight of the Enemies ſhot and reſiſtance, they bravely lodged themſelves upon the Breach of the firſt Wall, and preſently made themſelves Maſters of the great Tower, with two other ſmall Baſtions on the Right and on the Left-hand; driving the Turks into the Retrenchments, which were lately cut behind the new Paliſadoes: But the Chriſtians ſo plied them with ſmall Shot and Granadoes, that they were forced to quit that place alſo, with great loſs and ſlaughter of their Men: But while they were labouring to ſecure that Ground and the Lodgment there; the Enemy gave Fire to four Mines, which toſſed up many of thoſe into the Air who were the fartheſt advanced: Howſoever, the Preſence of the Duke of Loraine ſo encouraged the Soldiers, that in emulation of each other, they preſſed forward, and made themſelves Maſters of that Ground, which their other Fellows had newly quitted with the loſs of their Lives. At the ſame time, the Brandenburgers were ſo ſucceſſeful in their Enterpriſe, that they took the Tower which they attacked, whereon were Seventeen Pieces of Cannon with ſome Mortars. The Elector of Bavaria alſo ſucceeded in his Enterpriſe, leading on his Men in Perſon, and poſſeſſed himſelf of the great Tower which fronts the Caſtle, whereon were ſeven Pieces of Cannon, and two Standards of the Janiſaries.

On that part of the City allotted to the falſe Attack of the Heydukes, no great matter was performed, nor nothing expected; for the place was ſtrong, and the Party appointed for the Aſſault was to make a diverſion of the Forces, rather than in good earneſt to gain a Lodgment.

During theſe Attacks the Turks made a Sally, and charged the Chriſtians in the Flank, but being watched by ſome Squadrons of Horſe, were repulſed back into the Town with great loſs; and finding that the Chriſtians were preſſing forward, as far, as to the ſecond Wall, they ſet Fire to a ſort of ſulfureous and bituminous matter, compoſed on purpoſe to ſuffocate and poiſon the Lungs, which being thrown into the Ditch, gave a ſtop to the Progreſs of the Aſſailants: But a Wind ariſing ſoon afterwards, which carried the Fire and Smoke towards the Town, annoied the Defendants in ſuch manner, that they were forced to quit their Station, and ſuffer the Chriſtians without farther reſiſtance to keep, and make good the Ground they had taken.

Sulfureous Fires much annoy the Chriſtians.

A cruel Aſſault;

Which ends at Night.

This Aſſault continued for the ſpace of four hours, with a vaſt effuſion of Blood on one ſide and the other; but the Imperialiſts, Bavarians, Brandenburgers and all other the Aſſailants, with unparallel'd Valour fighting amidſt the Fire and Smoke, Granadoes, Stones, Swords and Lances without any regard to their Lives, and animated by the Bravery of the Commanders, who were as forward to expoſe themſelves to danger, as the meaneſt of the Common Soldiers, poſſeſſed at length, and lodged themſelves on all round Bulwarks, and Walls made with Earth, reaching from one ſide of the City unto the other. About Sun-ſetting the Attack ceaſed, and both ſides as it were by mutual conſent gave over the Fight, which ended with the great advantage of the Chriſtians, who had penetrated to the ſecond Retrenchment of the Wall and Ditch: And Night coming on, thoſe who were tyred with that Day's Labour, were relieved by others, who were all Night long employed in raiſing Earth, and fortifying the places which they had gained, on which they mounted Cannon, and turned thoſe on the Enemy which they had taken from them; and the next Day began therewith to Batter the inward Wall. It is impoſſible to expreſs the Bravery and Reſolution with which this Attack was maintained; For beſides the Gallantry of all the Officers in general, the Duke of Loraine, and Count Staremberg gave undeniable Proofs of their Courage, of their indefatigable Induſtry, and of their Zeal for the Glory of the Emperour, and the Chriſtian Religion; not only attending unto their own Quarters, but hazarded their Perſons in all places, where their Preſence and Directions were neceſſary or uſeful. In this Enterpriſe many brave Soldiers and Officers were ſlain, who were ready to Sacrifice their Lives, being puſhed forward with an Ambition to ſignalize themſelves in the Preſence of their Generals; the numbers of them were ſo great, that to make the Victory look more cheerful, it 1686. was thought fit to conceal them; only ſuch as were of principal note, were acknowledged as followeth.

Killed.

Monſieur Artein Agitant General to the Duke of Loraine.
Serjeant Major Pini.
Count Schlik.
Baron Geta, with many other Subaltern Officers of great experience.

Wounded.

The Duke of Croy.
The Prince of Commercy.
Serjeant General Diepenthall.
Baron de Aſti.
The Serjeant Major of Staremberg, with two Captains.
Serjeant General Dingen.
The Lieutenant Colonel of Neuburg's Regiment.

Killed of the Brandenburgers.

The Count of Dona.
Serjeant Major Maruvitz.

Wounded.

The Duke of Curland, with many other inferiour Officers.

The Elector of Bavaria ſecures the Works which he had taken.

The Elector of Bavaria and Prince Lewis of Baden, with incomparable Conduct and Bravery, expoſed their Perſons to danger and hazard in all places which required their Preſence, and remained all Night upon the Watch, giving directions in what manner the Labourers were to work, nor did they Retire, or take any Reſt or Repoſe, until the Lodgments were ſecured: For during the Darkneſs of the Night, they had formed a ſtrong Trench round the Tower, which is under the Wall of the Caſtle; and made ſmooth the heaps and ruins of Stones and Rubbiſh, by laying thereon an innumerable number of Sacks of Earth, whereon the Troops could with a large Front march up to relief of the Guards. And now whereas the innermoſt Gate of the Caſtle was poſſeſſed by the Bavarians, ſo that it could not longer hold out; the Turks thought fit for ſaving their Men to abandon it wholly, the Garriſon being much diminiſhed, and their numbers abated in the late Attack.

Officers and Soldiers killed and wounded.

In which of the Regiment of Bavaria were killed, A Captain, and wounded a Serjeant Major, a Captain and three Lieutenants.
Of the Regiment of Baden were killed two Lieutenants, and wounded five Captains, one Lieutenant and three Enſigns.
In the Regiment of Aſpremont, Killed one Enſign, and wounded the Colonel, the Lieutenant Colonel, Count Nicholas Palſi, Serjeant Major, Count Zacco, a Cavalier of Malta, and ſix other Captains, five Lieutenants and two Enſigns.
In the Regiment of Rummel killed, A Captain and a Lieutenant; wounded a Captain and an Enſign.
In the Regiment of Gallenfels, killed the Lieutenant Colonel; wounded two Captains and a Lieutenant.
In the Regiment of Furſtemberg, wounded a Captain, a Lieutenant, and an Enſign.
In the Regiment of Beck, wounded the Lieutenant Colonel, the Baron of Welsberg, five Captains, five Lieutenants, and five Enſigns.
In the Regiment of Steinau, killed a Serjeant Major and a Lieutenant; and wounded a Captain, two Lieutenants and an Enſign.
In the Regiment of Seibolſtorff, killed a Serjeant Major; and wounded a Captain and two Lieutenants.
In this Attack, of the Imperialiſts and Bavarians, were killed Common Soldiers an Hundred and ſeventeen; wounded Nine hundred ſeventy two.
Of the Saxons, were killed a Lieutenant Colonel, two Corporals, and ſeventy Common Soldiers; wounded a Lieutenant Colonel, two Serjeant Majors, two Captains, a Captain Lieutenant, three Enſigns, two Serjeants, two Corporals, and a Hundred Ninety nine Common Soldiers.

Another Aſſault.

Having in this manner, with a vaſt effuſion of Bloud, entred as far as to the inward Wall, all Art and Induſtry was uſed to blow that up with new Mines, at which they laboured with ſo much diligence, that in a Day and a Night's time they were finiſhed and fired; the third of which did ſuch great Execution by opening the Breach, as invited the Beſiegers to make an Aſſault; to the performance of which, Twelve hundred foot Soldiers, and Four hundred Dragoons were appointed; but their Officers being for the moſt part killed or wounded, the Duke of Loraine was forced to make uſe of the two Generals of Horſe, the Counts of Lodron and Styrum, to Command the Attack; and in the mean time that they were coming, a Battery of three Pieces of Cannon was raiſed on the Curtain lately poſſeſſed, with four Mortar-pieces, both to widen the Breach, and offend the more inward parts of the Town. But whilſt this was doing, the Beſieged were making a new Retrenchment behind the Breach, which was an evident Proof, that they reſolved to defend 1686.

defend the Place unto the laſt extremity.

July 31ſt.

A Treaty begun.

But not to drive Matters to that ultimate Period, the Turks ſent on their part two Agas to the Duke of Loraine to enter on a Treaty; and the Duke on his ſide ſent his Adjutant General, the Count of Lamberg, with his Interpreter, into the Town; where he was introduc'd to the Preſence of the Paſha, with ſuch Reſpect, Ceremony and Honour, as was agreeable to the ill Circumſtances under which the Turks labour'd; but he return'd again with no other ſatisfactory Anſwer than this: That the Officers and Commanders of that Government could not, nor would not ſo eaſily yield and ſurrender up that City, which is the Key of the Ottoman Empire: But when it ſhould be thought fit to conclude, and eſtabliſh an univerſal Peace, that they would then oblige themſelves, that an Equivalent ſhould be given to the Emperor, by the Delivery of two other Places? And that they were ready to give up the ſame, and conclude a Peace, for making which, they had received a ſufficient Power from the Grand Seignior, provided that the Siege be immediately raiſed. With this Anſwer the Generals not being pleas'd, they began on both ſides to fire with the uſual Fury, and that Night they finiſhed two Batteries, which were raiſed for enlargement of the Breaches, and three Mines were fired, which fill'd a great part of the Ditch with Earth; but one of them recoyling back, bury'd a hundred Men of the Brandenburger Troops, who were advanc'd too far, and were not advertis'd, when the Mine was to be fir'd.

Batteries raiſed and Mines fired.

The next Day following, about Nine a Clock in the Morning, the Turks beat again a Parly towards the ſide of the Breach of the Bavarian Quarter, and ſent the two Agas, which had been employed the Day before with the Duke of Loraine, unto the Elector, deſiring that two Hoſtages might be returned in their Places, which being done accordingly, one of the Agas offered in the Name of the Vizier of Buda, To yield and ſurrender up the Place, with all the Dependencies, which he avowed to be very great, and to contain no leſs than a Hundred and Fifty Leagues of Land thereupon depending, or otherwiſe to deliver up any other two places within the Kingdom of Hungary, being under the Turks Dominion, at the Will and Choice of the Emperor, provided that a general Peace might thereupon be concluded and enſue: But in regard the Elector was ſufficiently informed, that it was not in his own nor yet in the Emperor's Power to make a Peace without the common Conſent of the Allies, for which there was no time at that critical Seaſon: The two Agas were remanded back, and the Hoſtages returned, and then the old Trade proceeded, and they began again to fire on all ſides as before. But this Ceſſation of Arms was made uſe of by the Chriſtians, for diſcovery of the Breach of the Caſtle, and the entrance thereunto by way of the Town; of which a Lieutenant Colonel belonging to the Regiment of Baden, took a particular Obſervation.

Another Parly

which is broken off.

The ſame Day a Mine was fired by the Imperialiſts at the Attack of Loraine, which made a Breach in the ſecond Wall, and ſhaked the third, which ſo alarum'd the Defendants, that in great numbers they came running to that place; by which ſuch a diverſion was made of their Forces, as gave the Bavarians an opportunity to enter the Caſtle; but being not able to make good their Ground, they were conſtrained to abandon the Lodgment which they had already begun.

The Bava*rians enter the Caſtle, but are repulſed.*

August.

During theſe Actions, Count Staremberg applying himſelf to all places, where his Preſence was required, without any regard to the hazard and danger of life, he received a Muſquet Shot on his Left-hand, which carried away his Thumb; and with another Shot he was both wounded in the Cheek, and in the Shoulder; but the Wounds were ſo ſlight, as did not conſtrain him to withdraw from his Care and Command. The Duke of Loraine was at the ſame time indiſpoſed in his Health by the acceſſion of a Fever; which though not very violent, yet it gave ſome cauſe of Fear and Diſcouragement to the whole Camp; howſoever the Spirit of this Hero was ſo great, that he ſtill continued to proſecute his Enterprize, and give direction for perfecting the Mines, which were now neceſſary on that ſide; for that little thereof could be effected at the Bavarian Attack, where the Labourers were ſtopped by Rocks and Quarries of Stone: And whilſt the Miners worked at the Breach of Loraine, they were forced to withdraw themſelves from the peſtilential Air, cauſed under Ground by the noiſome Stench of dead Bodies. Howſoever, the Mine under the third Wall was finiſhed, and ſprung with good ſucceſs, thô the Ditch was not ſo filled, that the Soldiers could paſs to the Aſſault; yet bringing Sacks of Earth, and other defenſible Matter, they lodged and covered themſelves at the foot of the Breach.

Count Sta*remberg wounded.*

Duke of Loraine ſick.

The Difficulty of the Mines.

Whilſt the Siege proceeded with all this heat and vigour, certain News was brought, that the Grand Vizier had compoſed a Body of Seven thouſand Horſe, drawn out of divers Garriſons in Hungary, and cauſed them to advance as far as Sarowitz, which is within Thirteen Leagues of Buda, and that other Troops had paſſed the Bridge of Eſſeck, and that the Seraskier was appointed to guard that way, until the Vizier in Perſon had made his Paſſage, who with 40,000 Men was marching to the Relief of diſtreſſed Buda; and that he would be ſhortly Reinforced with a very great Body of Tartars and Aſiatick Horſe, which were already on their March, and had paſſed Adrianople. But the Generals, who had received more certain Advices of the Strength of the Vizier, were well aſſured, that neither the Number of his Soldiers was ſo great, nor the Quality of them ſo formidable, being for the moſt part compoſed of ſoft Aſiaticks, of Country-men and People inexpert and unaccuſtomed to War; and for that Reaſon it was not to be imagined that the Grand Vizier would put all to the hazard of a pitched Battle. Howſoever, not to deſpiſe an Enemy, the Generals conſidering hereof at a Council of War, diſpatched immediately expreſs Orders to the Cavalry, quarter'd in all parts of the Upper Hungary, where was no apprehenſion of any Enemy, to march unto the Camp; and accordingly General Dunewaldt, with ſeveral Regiments of Horſe under his Command, and Count Caprara, and General Heuſler with their Troops, and Count Budiani with about Two thouſand Hungarians, all valiant and veterane Soldiers, appeared at the Rendezvous, and with all expedition marched towards the Enemy, with intention to give them a ſtop in their Way towards Buda. The Ban or Governor of Croatia, having given Advice to the Generals, that he had raiſed the Militia of that Country for the Service of the Emperor, was commanded to March towards the Bridge of Eſſeck, and joyning with the other Forces, to make Head and Oppoſition to the Grand Vizier in his March.

News of the Grand Vizier's March.

The Chriſtians prepare to receive them.

The rumour and report of the Grand Vizier's approach with all his Army did daily increaſe, and as a certain Fore-runner thereof, ſeveral Thouſands of his Horſe were advanced very near to diſcover the Force and Actions of the Chriſtians: Whereupon a Council of War being called of all the Generals, it was concluded to countermand the Advance of the Troops, and appoint them to appear at a general Rendezvous, where it was plainly manifeſted, how greatly the numbers were abated; and therefore ſince the great Line of Circumvallation was perfected and well flanked with ſtrong Redoubts, Spurs and other defenſible Works, they order'd, that the ſame ſhould be maintained by Three thouſand Foot, which were ſufficient to give a ſtop to any Attempt, which might be made upon the Camp: And the Imperial, Bavarian, and Brandenburger Cavalry, were commanded to lodge on the Hills and riſing Grounds which were round the Town: And the Heydukes were encamped along the Wall of the old Town, extending themſelves from the Fort ſituate on the Danube, unto the Trenches of the Brandenburgers.

Having thus ſecured their Camp, and put every thing in a readineſs to receive the Enemy, in caſe they ſhould attempt to force their Lines; they proceeded on all ſides to perfect their Works on the Breaches. The Bavarians being piqued in point of Honour for the Foyl or Diſadvantage they had received about two or three Days before, had inceſſantly fired on the great Tower with their biggeſt Cannon; and from another Battery near adjoyning plaid continually on the Breach of the Wall, which as yet was not wide enough for the Attack; and becauſe the Situation of the Place was ſuch, as made it almoſt inacceſſible and too dangerous to the Soldiers to aſcend over the Rocks and Ruines which lay in the way, the Elector reſolved to point all his Cannon againſt the Caſtle, as alſo his Bombs of greateſt weight, with deſign to beat down the Walls, and with the Ruins thereof to make the Aſcent thereunto more eaſie and ſecure; with which, and ſome Mines which were blown up, that ancient and ſtately Edifice was almoſt deſtroyed.

The Bavarians point all their Batteries againſt the great Tower.

The News of the daily approach of the Vizier and his Army, cauſed the Chriſtians to be more watchful and vigilant than before, and ſcarce gave the Generals any reſt or repoſe by Day or Night free from Alarums, which the Duke of Loraine ſuſtained in a manner rather Miraculous than Natural; for being ſcarce recover'd of a Fever, the preſent ſtate of Affairs required him to redouble his Cares and Vigilance; which agitation of Mind was able to have droven a confirmed Health into the extremities of Heat and feveriſh Diſtempers; but God, who intended him for the glorious Inſtrument of ſubjecting this ſtrong City, gave him ſtrength for his great Work; ſo that notwithſtanding the expectation of the Vizier haſtning to the Relief, a general Aſſault was made at every Breach, which continued for the ſpace of two hours; in which the Defendants behaved themſelves with ſuch Gallantry, that the Duke of Loraine cauſed a Retreat to be ſounded, rather than unprofitably to loſe the Lives of his Soldiers, of which they began now to be ſenſible of the great Abatement: Howſoever ſomething was gained by this Aſſault on the right ſide of the Tower, adjoyning to the Caſtle at the corner of the inward Wall, where they lodged forty Men. In this Conflict not many Men were killed, but many were wounded, both Officers as well as common Soldiers, and particularly Count Leopold of Herberſtein, and Serjeant Major Biſchoffſhauſen; and on the Quarter of Bavaria, the Prince of Savoy, and Prince Lewis of Baden, both ſlightly wounded.

The Chriſtian Camp alarum'd.

By

Skirmiſhes between the Turks and Bavarians.

Letters taken.

The Christians prepare to give Battle to the Turks.

1686. By the motion of the Seraskier, it ſeemed as if his Intentions were to enter his Succour and Relief into the Town by the Bavarian Quarters; and ſome Thouſands of Turks appearing on the riſing Grounds and ſides of the Hills, put themſelves into a poſture, as if they intended to Engage; but the Trenches were ſo well guarded and fortified, that there ſeemed to be little danger of forcing Succour by that way into the City: Howſoever, there happen'd daily Skirmiſhes, in which diverſe were killed on one ſide and the other; and particularly a Turk well mounted and habited, advancing with more than prudent Gallantry, was laid dead on the Ground; and being ſtripped by the Soldiery, there were ſome Letters found about him from the Grand Vizier to the Paſha of Buda, ſignifying that his Intentions were to force ſome Quarter of the Enemy, and thereby introduce the Succours deſigned for Relief of the Place; and that in the mean time with a Body of Eight thouſand Tartars, to ſtop the Paſſage of all Proviſions to the Chriſtian Camp between Strigonium and Buda. Upon this Diſcovery, the Duke of Loraine and the Generals reſolved to guard their Trenches with Twenty thouſand Men, poſted in the moſt advantagious Places, and to draw out all the remainder of the Army into the Field to meet the Vizier, and ſhew their readineſs to give him Battle; for tho the Turks were reported to be Seventy thouſand ſtrong, they were not in reality above Forty thouſand able to bear Arms; againſt which the Duke of Loraine forming his Van-guard of Four thouſand Talpatzes and Hungarian Huſſars, flanked by a part of the German Horſe, marched forth in view of the Enemy. After ſome Skirmiſhes with loſs of Men on both ſides, the Turks retired, carrying away with them ſome Heads of Cattle, which the Huſſars endeavouring to recover, were beaten back with the loſs of thirteen Men. After this, the former Reſolution was changed, and it was concluded at a general Council of War, to keep within, and guard their Trenches, which were well fortified, until they were certainly aſſured of what Strength the Vizier was; according to which Reſolution, they continued to Fortify their Lines of Circumvallation with Redoubts, on which they mounted ſeveral Field-pieces.

August. The 9*th* of this Month the Turks appeared on the Hills, oppoſite to the Bavarian Quarters, in greater Numbers than before, and after an Engagement with the advanced Troops, made their Retreat as they had done the Day before; and in the return to their Camp, they met with a Party of about an Hundred and fifty Hungarians, which were ſent to diſcover the Enemy; they cut them all off, thirty only eſcaping, of which moſt of them were wounded; and at the ſame time the Beſiged made a Sally on the Bavarian Quarter, and killed about Eighty Soldiers, beſides ſome Officers. On the 10*th* the Bavarians had finiſhed their Line of Circumvallation, adjoyning to that of the Imperialiſts, and had wholly guarded themſelves from all Attempts of the Enemy by a very deep Ditch: Howſoever, things not being ſo ſecure, but that the Enemy might be able to attempt the entring Succours by way of the River, the Water of which was very low; they fortified that part alſo with ſome Boats at a convenient diſtance from each other, and with ſome Turn-pikes called Chevaux de Friſe

Various Succeſſes.

On the 11*th* certain Intelligence was brought, that the Grand Vizier was encamped about five Leagues off; and the ſame Day Two thouſand Turks appeared oppoſite to the Bavarian Quarter, about the ſame place as before; to diſcover which and their numbers, a Detachment was ſent, but they were ſoon forced to retire in haſt, the Enemy deſcending in numbers, which were too unequal a Match for them. The three Mines on which much Work was beſtowed being charged with Five thouſand weight of Powder, were now ready; and on the 12*th* were fired, but not with ſuch good effect as was expected, having only ſhaken the inward Wall, and ſome few of the Paliſadoes; ſo that it was believed, that the Turks had diſcharged them of the greateſt part of their Powder, by which diſappointment, the Aſſault which was intended, was countermanded, and the Miners order'd to begin a new Work. The Afternoon of the ſame Day, the Vizier appear'd and encamped on the Banks of the Danube, being as ſome Deſerters reported about Fifty thouſand ſtrong; at the ſight of which, the Beſieged being encouraged, made a Sally with about an Hundred Horſe and Foot, upon Three hundred Horſe of the Van-guard, of the Imperialiſts, who feigning a flight, drew them at ſome diſtance from the Town, and then returning upon them, cut the greateſt part of them in pieces.

A Mine fired.

The Vizier appears.

On the 14*th*, the Turks drew out their whole Army into Battalia, and Detached Six thouſand Men under three Paſhas, amongſt which were Two thouſand Janiſaries, with Orders to make their Way into the Town, by the Imperial and Brandenburger Quarters. Againſt whom the Duke of Loraine ſent the Regiment of Hungarians Commanded by Palſi, and the Regiments of Schultz, Serau, and Lodron to charge the Enemy and begin the Fight: The Hungarians upon the firſt Shock or Charge began to give

A Party of Turks commanded to enter the Town.

The Turks defeated.

give Ground; but Baron Marcy putting himſelf at the Head of the Regiment of Schultz, gave a ſtop to the Flight of the Hungarians, until ſuch time as Count Dunewalt came up with the Regiments of Taff, Lodron, Neubourg, Stirum and Staremberg, which being joyned in a Body, charged the Turks with that Fury and Bravery, that they totally defeated and put the Turkiſh Horſe to Flight, by which the Janiſaries being abandoned and laid open, were almoſt all cut off and deſtroyed. The Elector of Bavaria with his Horſe purſued them to their Camp, where Rallying again they endeavoured to charge the Chriſtians in the Flank; which when the Duke of Loraine perceived, he made a ſtand or a halt, and drew out ſome Forces from the Lines, which he cauſed to march towards their aſſiſtance; but the Turks having received the firſt Fire retreated to their Camp, whither it was thought fit not to purſue them, but rather to conduct the Troops back to the Camp, being much tired and wearied by continal Watchings, having for the ſpace of three Days and three Nights, been always on the Guard with Arms in their Hands. The Victory was very clear and ſignal, for the Turks loſt eight Pieces of Cannon, and Forty Standards, and Two thouſand and two hundred dead Bodies were accounted by the Duke of Loraine himſelf lying in the Field, where the Battle was Fought, which he cauſed to be buried, to prevent a putrefaction in the Air; and all this with the loſs only of about Two hundred Men killed and wounded, amongſt the latter of which were the Count of Lodron, a Major, and two Captains.

After this happy Succeſs all the Cannon were diſcharged, and the Colours taken from the Turks diſplaied, and many Heads of thoſe who had been killed, were ſet upon Pikes, and ſhewed to the Beſieged to increaſe their greater Terrour and Deſpair.

Two thouſand Turks force their way into the Town.

Notwithſtanding all which, the Turks abated nothing of their Courage; the Grand Vizier giving the Chriſtians every Night Alarms, the better to diſcover with what Force and Vigilancy the Lines and Avenues were Guarded. At length, on the 20*th* of Auguſt about break of Day, Four thouſand Turks, of which Two thouſand were Janiſaries mounted on Horſe-back, made a vigorous Attempt by the Vally of St. Paul, and with great Fury aſſailed thoſe Guards, which they not being able to ſuſtain, gave them Way, and permitted them in a full carrear, to Ride up to the Walls of the Town: At this confuſion of the Guards, and the Noiſe made by the Janiſaries, the Regiments of Caprara and Heuſler came, and renewed the Fight with them, and killed ſeveral hundreds of the Turks, who as they advanced farther into the Approaches, were ſo plied by the Muſquetiers, that moſt of them were ſlain: Howſoever, about Two hundred of them made their Way into the Town by the Bavarian Quarter: Which ſo animated the Defendants, that they made and diſcharged four Vollies of Shot for joy round the Town: Though this ſmall Recruit was rather a Weakening to them than any Reinforcement. This Attempt ſeemed ſo deſperate to the Turkiſh Soldiery, that the Vizier could not prevail with any Man to undertake it, without a Largeſs of Thirty Dollars in hand paid to every Janiſary, and promiſe to any that ſhould get within the Town, to have his pay doubled during his Life, and to be freed from going ever more to the War: Of which ſort of People there are above Fifty thouſand in the Ottoman Empire, called Otoracks, or as in Latin Milites emeriti.

The reward promiſed for the Service.

Batteries raiſed on the Rondel.

All this interrupted not the Bavarians in their Works, or in the Batteries they had raiſed on the great Rondel, by which they very much annoied the main Caſtle, which when the Turks obſerved, they planted one of their biggeſt Pieces of Cannon on the higheſt part of the Wall, which they having charged with Muſquet Bullets, Iron, Stones, &c. did great execution on the Soldiers, which maintained and guarded the Rondel of the Tower: Howſoever, not to give ground or abandon ſo advantagious a Poſt, the Elector of Bavaria with advice of the General Officers, reſolved to Aſſault the Tower, which was half ruined and already demoliſhed, ſo as thereby to gain the advantage of an upper Ground: The Aſſailants ſo bravely behaved themſelves, That on the the 22*d* without any regard to the difficulty and ruggedneſs of the Aſcent, or the oppoſition the Turks made, they ſurmounted the Breach and killed about One hundred Men, and made themſelves Maſters of the Tower: In the mean time whilſt this was in Action, the Duke of Loraine, and the Brandenburgers cauſed an Alarm to be given without, and with continual Firing of their Artillery and Vollies of Shot, kept the Enemy at a diſtance.

Auguſt.

The Tower taken.

The Turks endeavour to diſlodge the Bavarians.

The Paſha of Buda finding himſelf nearly urged, and preſſed by the loſs of ſo important a place, from whence the Chriſtians could now ſhoot into the Town; he applied all his endeavours to diſlodge them: But the Bavarians having ſtrongly poſted themſelves, being aſſiſted with the advantage of the riſing Situation, vigorouſly repulſed all the Force which the Turks could make upon them, and eaſily threw them down head-long from the Scaling Ladders which they had erected. This place was gained by the Bavarians without much Blood of the Common Soldiery, but Duke 1686. Henric of Saxon Merſburg was in that Action wounded in two places; and General Rummel of the Bavarians was ſlain by a Muſquet-ſhot in the Approaches, which ought to have been made deeper by three or four Foot, ſo as to cover the whole Body of a Man; he was an excellent Soldier, and a brave Man, and therefore much lamented by his Electoral Highneſs, and the whole Army.

Nothing could more annoy and vex the Defendants, than the taking and poſſeſſing this Tower, which render'd the Caſe and State of the City almoſt deſperate; ſo that no hopes remained, unleſs they were ſuccour'd and reliev'd by the Army of the Grand Vizier, whom to adviſe of their Extremity, two Meſſengers were diſpatch'd out of the Town, one by the way of the Water, and the other by the Land ſide, both diſguiſed in the Hungarian Habit. The firſt was diſcover'd ſwimming over to the Iſland of St. Margaret's; and being purſued was taken, but his Letters he had firſt thrown into the River: Howſoever, being brought before the Generals, he confeſſed and declared the low and deſperate Condition to which the City was reduc'd; and that it could not hold out much longer unleſs ſpeedily Reliev'd; and that another Meſſenger was ſent to acquaint the Vizier thereof by Word of Mouth, letting him know, that it was not ſufficient to appear before the Town, and flatter them with the hopes of Succour, unleſs alſo he could force the Enemy to raiſe the Siege; and that the late Recruit of Two hundred Men, who bravely made their way into the City, was but a ſmall Help and Comfort to a Garriſon already waſted, and almoſt totally conſumed by a long Siege. That the Caſtle was in a manner loſt, ſince that the principal Towers and Bulwarks of it were poſſeſſed by the Enemy: And in ſhort, that thoſe who remain'd alive, were wearied out with continual Watchings, and every Day diminiſh'd by Cannon and Muſquet-ſhot, by Bombs, Fires, and Carcaſſes continually thrown into the Town.

Two Meſſengers ſent from the City to the Grand Vizier.

One of them is taken.

All theſe Matters being reported before the Generals, they conceived certain hopes of putting a ſpeedy end to their Labours and Dangers: Howſoever, therewithal they ſo far conſulted their own Condition, that they concluded it very neceſſary, before any thing was farther attempted, to expect the coming of that Body of the Army under Count Scaffemberg, and the Twelve hundred Swedes, which were now on their March, and near at hand. At length Scaffemberg being come with a Reinforcement of Eight thouſand Men, beſides the Swedes, raiſed the Spirits of the whole Army, and put the Generals into a capacity of executing the Deſigns they had already plotted and contrived. On the Loraine Quarter a Bridge was made near the great Tower, leading towards the inward Paliſadoes of the Enemy; and to conſerve it from fire, they covered it over with Earth: The like was alſo performed on the Bavarian ſide; but whilſt theſe things were preparing, a ſtop was put thereunto by an unexpected and vigorous Sally which the Beſieged made, for diſlodging the Soldiers which had poſſeſſed the Tower. Three Attempts were made thereupon with the greateſt fury and deſperation imaginable, throwing Granadoes, Sacks of Powder, and artificial Fires, compoſed of Sulphur, Pitch, and all ſorts of burning and fetulent Matter; notwithſtanding which, they were moſt vigorouſly repulſed with much loſs. The Elector conſidering the dangerous Poſt, which his Men had undertaken to defend, thought fit to withdraw his Soldiers from the Bulwark, that he might with more advantage batter the great Tower with his heavieſt Cannon, which were ſo hotly plyed, that the whole Tower was beaten down, and the Enemy thereby made uncapable to offend from thoſe Works. The Bridge of which we ſpake, being finiſhed on the ſide of the Imperialiſts, with the Battery on the Rondel, the inward Paliſadoes were broken down, and the Breach widen'd above Forty Paces; ſo that now all had been ſurrender'd, had not the Vizier comforted the Paſha with Aſſurances, that he and the Seraskier had reſolved to attempt the Camp in three places at the ſame time; and that the moſt forcible one ſhould be given at the Water-ſide, where 'twas believ'd the leaſt Oppoſition could be made. Upon this Advice, the Water-ſide and Banks of the River were well fortified and ſecured, and a ſtrong Chain ſtretched over the Water below the Bridge of Boats, from the Shoar to the Point of St. Margaret's Iſle, to obſtruct the Paſſage of Spies and Meſſengers, who uſed to ſwim over the Water with Intelligence, and which alſo might ſerve to give a ſtop to the Cavalry, in caſe they ſhould attempt any thing on that ſide.

1686.

Eight thouſand Men come to the Imperial Camp.

The City being now in a languiſhing Condition, the Grand Vizier reſolved to make his laſt Effort; and having choſen out of his Army Three thouſand of his braveſt Soldiers, which he encouraged with Thirty Dollars a-piece paid them in hand, and with promiſe of Increaſe of their daily Pay, during Life, to ſuch as ſhould make and force their Way into the Town; and at the ſame time another Body was ordered to enter the Line, at the place which they had lately attempted. The Three thouſand deſcended by way of the Vally called Shamboiuck, and 1686. with great Fury fell in upon the Guards of the Imperialiſts; but were ſo well received by the Baron of Aſti, with his Talpatz and Huſſars, and by General Heuſler, with his Regiment, that they were vigorouſly repulſed. After which they made an Attempt on Count Caprara, and again on the Quarters of the Duke of Loraine, but in all places were ill treated, and came off with a great loſs of Men. In the mean time, the ſecond Body of Turks aſſaulted other parts of the Army, which increaſed the heat of the Fight; to ſuccour which, the Duke of Loraine detach'd all the Forces which were about him, remaining alone only with two Aſſiſtants; but the Battle growing hot, and the Turks endeavouring in diverſe places to break into the Line, the Duke of Loraine put himſelf at the Head of two Battalions of Brandenburgers, whoſe Example gave Life and Courage to the whole Army. But whilſt this Fight was mannaged in diverſe Squadrons, which confuſedly ran from one ſide to another, ſome of them had the fortune to force the Line towards the Wall of the lower City; but paſſing to the Line of Contravallation, they met there ſuch Vollies of Shot, and continual Firings, that knowing not which way to retreat, they fell into the Squadrons of Baron Marcy and Serau, by whom the greateſt part of them were kill'd upon the place; and thoſe which eſcaped were ſo confuſed, that being diſpers'd about the Fields, they knew not which way to take. Some of them happen'd to fall in with the Brandenburgers, others into the general Quarters, where being encompaſs'd on all ſides, they were miſerably cut to pieces and ſlain, not ſo much as their Servants, or Grooms of their Horſes eſcaping. The Beſieged in the mean time being Spectators of all that paſſed, deſigned by a moſt vigorous Sally to meet their Succours, but were ſo warmly encounter'd by the Bavarians, that they were forced to Retreat with precipitation and diſorder.

The Body which the Turks kept for a Reſerve, obſerving the unfortunate iſſue of theſe Conflicts, durſt not adventure to make another Attack, but retired back to their Camp. The Turks loſt above One thouſand Men kill'd on the place, and Twenty five of their Colours were taken. Howſoever, this Advantage was not obtained without ſome conſiderable loſs on the Chriſtian ſide, which was the more to be lamented by the Death of Baron Marcy, who after having kill'd ſeveral Janiſaries with his own hand, receiv'd two Cuts on the Head with a Cymeter, and one on his Shoulder, which tho at firſt were not eſteem'd Mortal; yet the Wounds being neglected, and the Cure thereof not much regarded, he Died thereof 1686. in a ſhort time afterwards, to the great Grief of the whole Camp, which much lamented the loſs of ſo brave a Soldier.

The Vizier being informed of this unfortunate Succeſs, immediately gave order to the Janiſaries of his Guards, which were kept for a Reſerve to renew the Fight, and attempt once more to give ſuccour to the Town; but the March of theſe freſh Forces being diſcovered by the General Count Piccolomini, who was at the Head of five Regiments of Horſe, divided into Twenty five Squadrons, he marched boldly to meet the Enemy; but the Turks upon appearance of the Van-guard of the Chriſtians ſounded a Retreat, and returned back to the Vizier's Camp.

Whilſt theſe ſeveral Conflicts and Skirmiſhes were acting in the Field, the Attacks upon the Town were not neglected; and on the ſide of Loraine they had advanced their Lodgment to the Breach of the inward Wall, not above three Pikes length from the Paliſadoes; but becauſe it was neceſſary to attack the Town with extream Reſolution and Force, without which it could not be taken; and that in the mean time, no Interruption ſhould be given to the Aſſault by the outward Force of the Enemy; it was reſolved at a Council of War, held by all the Generals then preſent, that the Lines of Circumvallation ſhould be made deeper, which being well guarded, would ſecure the Soldiers from the Enemy without: And in the mean time, to keep the Deſign ſecret, a Report was given out that the Chriſtians intended to give Battle to the Turks; upon the News of which, the Vizier applied himſelf to fortify his Camp, and the Beſieged neglected to provide for their laſt Defence.

It being now the ſecond of September, the Artillery continued ſtill to play upon the Breaches with Chained-ſhot, and to burn the Paliſadoes with Bullets red-hot, and to amuſe the Beſieged with the report of the Battle; ſo that ſeveral Troops were drawn out of the Lines, as if all the Army intended to take the Field; when on a ſuddain, upon a Signal given by firing ſix Pieces of Cannon from the Swedes Battery, the Soldiers aroſe like ſo many Lions to attack the Breaches in three ſeveral places, of Loraine, Bavaria and Brandenburg; beſides there were two other falſe Attacks. Baron Aſti, with his Granadiers, was the firſt to mount the Breach, but being wounded in the Attempt, he reſigned his Command to lead his Men to the Serjeant-Major of Diepenthal. Never was any thing more bravely aſſaulted, nor more courageouſly defended: For the Beſieged, notwithſtanding the late Stratagem to amuſe them, ſtill continued

September.

An Aſſault made in three pla-

1686.

The Commanders Guide to the Soldiers.

The Paſha of Buda killed.

The City enter'd and taken.

ed their uſual Vigilance, and oppoſe themſelves with open Breaſts againſt their Enemy; ſo that never was made a more brave and reſolute Defence than that of this Fortreſs of Buda. The Brandenburgers, not inferior in Courage to the Imperialiſts, were as forward as the others to mount the Breach; but both of them encountred an incredible Reſiſtance by whole ſhowers of Shot, Granadoes, Bags of Gunpowder, Stones, and even Swords and handy Blows, to which they came with the Enemy: But the Aſſailants being ſeconded by Reſerves, and animated by the Preſence and Example of their Generals, who marched at the head of their Men rather as Guides and Conductors, than as Commanders, were ſo encouraged, that they reſolv'd either now at laſt to enter the Town, or die on the Breach: The Duke of Croy, the Prince of Neuburg, with the Generals Souches, Scaffemberg and Diepental, were like Common Soldiers engaged amidſt the thickeſt of the Enemies; and the Duke of Loraine, who out of an heroick Spirit, was always preſent where was moſt of Danger, was one of the firſt to mount the Breach, being followed by the other Generals. The Fight grew ſo hot, and the Defendants ſo hardly preſs'd upon the Breach, that the Paſha-Governour of the Place, with the moſt ſelect and choiſe Men of the Garriſon came running to ſuccour that part where the Enemy was juſt ready to make their Entrance; the Paſha fighting valiantly on the Breach, and giving undeniable Proofs of his Valour, was ſlain on the Ruins, and fell a Sacrifice rather to his own Maſter than to his Enemies; for had he eſcaped the Danger and Slaughter, 'tis probable he would have been ill received at Home, and his Death made ſhameful by the Hand of the Executioner, which was now made glorious by the Sword of the Enemy. In fine, after a bloudy Fight on the Breach, which continued for the ſpace of three quarters of an Hour, the Soldiers entred freely into the City, where a new Engagement began, the Garriſon retreating from Houſe to Houſe, and from Wall to Wall, firing from Windows and Holes, and all parts, being reſolved to ſell their Habitations and Lives at the deareſt rate they were able, until at length with great diſorder they fled to the foot of the Caſtle Wall. The Imperialiſts being now Maſters of the Town, made a moſt direful Slaughter of all they met; and being in the heat of their Fury, put Women and Children to the Sword.

But the Elector of Bavaria met a ſtronger Reſiſtance at the Caſtle; for the Turks who were ſtill in their Trenches, and knew not as yet, that the Chriſtians had enter'd the Town, defended themſelves with their utmoſt Bravery, until at length the Bavarians redoubling their Force, became Maſters of the remaining part of the Caſtle; when thoſe who had forſaken the Breach, were flying to take their Refuge in it; but now no Place or Sanctuary remaining to ſave the Miſerable, ſome of them threw down their Arms, crying for Quarter, and others made Signs of Surrender, by the white Turbants which they took from their Heads, and diſplay'd in the Air, and others thinking to ſave themſelves in little Boats, and paſs over to Peſth; but many of them were taken by the Bavarians, and moſt of them kill'd: But in regard that thoſe, who were ſtill in their Trenches, perceived that no Quarter was given, they apply'd themſelves again to their Arms, and as deſperate Men, reſolved to ſell their Lives at the deareſt rate; and having ſet Fire to diverſe Places of the City, render'd it a moſt direful ſpectacle of Horrour and Confuſion. In fine, all endeavours being made by the Generals to ſtop the farther effuſion of Bloud; the Soldiers not being as yet ſatiated with Revenge for the Death of their Companions; and the Prince Eugene of Savoy, who (with his Regiment of Horſe was poſted in a burying place to oppoſe the Turks, in caſe they ſhould attempt any thing from the Vizier's Camp) was deaf to the Cries of the Conquer'd; for hearing that the Town was enter'd, and unwilling to loſe any part of the Glory, or that his Sword ſhould appear dry, and not colour'd with the Bloud of his Enemies, at the end of the Action, forſook his Poſt, and let looſe his Soldiers, crying out to give no Quarter to the Janiſaries, which to the number of about Sixteen hundred defended themſelves within the Trenches and Works of the Caſtle; but the Generals conſulting together, conſider'd that the Night was coming on, that the Enemies Camp was in ſight, that Fires were kindled and furiouſly burning in diverſe parts of the City, and that the Confuſion was every-where great; they at length agreed, thô with ſome Opinions to the contrary, to grant Quarter to the Janiſaries for their Lives only; the which they having accepted, and ſurrender'd themſeves, were by a ſtrong Guard conducted to one of the Moſchs of the City, others to the chief Store-houſe, and others to a part of the Caſtle, where they were kept in Cuſtody until the Day following.

1686.

The Turks demand Quarter.

Quarter not given by the P. of Savoy,

but is granted by the Generals.

In the great Action of this Day, being the 2*d* of September, 1686, which gave the capital City of the Kingdom of Hungary into the Hands of the Emperor, after it had remained in Poſſeſſion of the Turks ever ſince the Year 1529, when it was taken by Solyman; There were kill'd only Four 1686. hundred Soldiers, and about Two hundred wounded; for where is a great Conſternation, there is ſeldom much Bloud ſpilt on the victorious ſide: Of the Turks about Three thouſand might be ſlain, and Two thouſand made Captives; of which laſt, the Kahya to the Paſha of Buda, or his Deputy, was made Slave to the Elector of Bavaria; the Aga or Commander of the Janiſaries to the Duke of Loraine; as alſo the Mufti, the Treaſurer, the Haſnadar or Privy-Purſe to the Paſha, the Secretary to the Paſha, with ſeveral other Officers of Note: Many others were taken and kill'd, who endeavour'd to make their eſcape over the River, ſome of them being overtaken by the Talpatz in their ſwift-rowing Boats; and others taken or kill'd by the Garriſon of Peſth, at their landing on the other ſide; but ſtill was the City all this Night in continual Flames and Confuſion; for the Turks had conſerved diverſe Stores of Powder and Fire-works in places near the Attacks, which were not regarded by the Chriſtians, when they firſt enter'd the Town; where the Fire encreaſing, and running from Houſe to Houſe, at length touching the Magazines, they blew all up with ſo terrible a noiſe, that the General began to ſuſpect ſome Treaſon, and fear'd that all the Town was min'd in ſubterranean Vaults; but conſidering afterwards the place from whence the Blow came, it ſoon appear'd that it was all nothing but an Accident; howſoever, with that and other terrible Blows, very few Houſes in the City remained ſtanding, and the Roofs uncover'd; only the principal Church of the City was not much damnified, and the chief Magazine or Store-houſe was conſerved by the great Care and Diligence of Count Rabata, Commiſſary General, with another containing vaſt quantities of Powder and other warlike Proviſions.

The numbers ſlain at the taking of the City.

The Store-Houſe of Powder takes fire.

A ſtop being put (as we have ſaid) by the Authority of the Generals, unto the Slaughter; and the Fury of the Soldiers growing cool, they began to hearken to the voice of their Commanders, who with good Words, and promiſes of Reward, prevail'd with them to apply themſelves to the extinguiſhing of the Fire, which by the aſſiſtance of God was in a few Hours overcome. But a more wonderful deliverance by the Hand of God's Divine Providence, was the diſcovery of two Mines under the Caſtle, charged with Ten thouſand Pounds of Powder, which the Turks reſerved for their laſt and parting Blow, which had they taken Fire, would not only have deſtroyed the remainder of the City with the Walls and Bulwarks, but therewith buried the greateſt part of the Aſſailants in the Ruins, and given a ſad occaſion or cauſe of Rejoycing and Triumph to the ſurviving Conquerors; but the Turks amidſt this great Conſternation had forgot theſe Mines, or elſe abſtained from that deſperate Attempt in hopes of Life.

Endeavours made to quench the Fire.

Two Mines diſcover'd.

The Greatneſs and Power of the Vizier of Buda.

This was the Fate of this great and ſtrong City of Buda, the Capital of all Hungary, and Reſidence of the Beglerbei of that Kingdom, under whom are Twenty Sangiacks: He is ſtil'd the Vizier of Buda, and eſteem'd after the Grand Vizier Azem, and the Paſhas of Grand Cairo and Babylon, (who are always entitul'd Viziers) the next in order of Superiority; and becauſe his Station is on the Frontiers, and Neighbour to ſuch a Formidable and Martial People, as are the Germans; they commonly chuſe Men of Valour and Conduct for that Employment, of which we have had a good Proof and Evidence in the Perſon of the late Paſha, who decently Died on the Breach amidſt the croud of Common Soldiers.

The many Sieges which Buda ſuſtain'd.

This City was at firſt taken by Solyman the Magnificent, in the Year 1526; and afterwards in the Year 1527, was ſubdu'd by Ferdinand the I. King of Bohemia, Brother to Charles the V. In the Year 1529, Solyman regain'd it by Treachery of the Garriſon, and after it laid Siege to Vienna it ſelf, which after many bloudy Aſſaults he was forc'd to raiſe in haſt and confuſed Precipitation. After which, Buda ſuſtain'd eight ſeveral Sieges without any Effect.

The firſt was by Ferdinand King of Bohemia, in the Year 1530, which he was forced to raiſe with ſhame and loſs. 1ſt.

The ſecond was by the ſame King, under the Conduct of his General Leonard Feſtius, in the Year 1540; but the King dying, the Siege was raiſed. 2d.

The next Year being 1541, the General Rogenſdorf laid Siege a third time to that City, which again was reliev'd by a powerful Army under the Command of Solyman. 3d.

The Marqueſs of Brandenberg, in the Year 1542, made an appearance as if he had a deſign upon Buda, and came ſo near as to Attack Peſth; but being repuls'd thence with ſome loſs, he return'd back into Germany. 4th.

In the Year 1598, the Count of Swartzemburg, having by a Stratagem taken Rab from the Turks, marched thence towards Buda, and in the Month of October laid Siege thereunto, with the Forces of Mathias the Arch-Duke, which after thirty Days time he was forced to raiſe, by reaſon of the continual Rains: And what is obſervable, the Turks did the like at Waradin on the Frontiers, being under the ſame Inconveniences. 5th.

1686.

6th. The Chriſtians made an Attempt the 6th time upon this City, in the Year 1602, under the Conduct of General Roſworm: And thô they had ruin'd the Bridge over the Danube, and taken by force the City of Peſth, yet being overtaken by the rigour of the Winter-ſeaſon, they were forced to deſiſt from that Deſign.

7th. The 7th Siege was laid in the Year 1684, by Charles Duke of Loraine, Generaliſſimo of the Imperial Forces, and of the other Princes of Germany; which after many bloudy Aſſaults was again raiſed; as we have at large declared in the Hiſtorical Treatiſe of that Year.

The 8th time Beſieged and taken.

8th. But now at length, after many Battles unfortunate to the Turks, this Fortreſs was forced to ſurrender to the ſaid Duke of Loraine, being over-whelm'd by the Power and Valour of the Chriſtians, and taken in the ſight of the Ottoman Army, Commanded by the Grand Vizier himſelf, in which was the Flower of the Turkiſh Troops; but having loſt the beſt and braveſt of their Soldiers in former Battles, and diſcourag'd by a Series of evil Succeſſes, their Courage fail'd them, and no wonder, when they were generally poſſeſs'd with an Opinion, that God fought againſt them; in ſenſe of which, ſo ſoon as the City was taken, the Vizier with ſuch Precipitation raiſed his Camp and marched away, that he was forc'd to burn a great part of his Baggage to prevent the falling of it into the Hands of the Enemy. And indeed it was no wonder that the Vizier with fear and dread ſhould haſten away, for the Duke of Loraine had diſpatch'd Count Budiani, with Six thouſand Hungarians, to march in purſuit of him, whilſt he with the other Generals render'd Thanks to God, and ſang Te Deum for their Succeſſes in the great Church, Dedicated to St. Stephen King of Hungary.

The Command of Buda given.

In the mean time the Command of this important City was committed to the Charge of General Beck, with the Aſſiſtance of the Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiment of Salm, and of Biſcoffſhauſen, Serjeant-Major to Diepenthal, with a Garriſon of Three thouſand Five hundred Germans, and a Thouſand Hungarians: The firſt Work to be done, was to clear the Streets of the dead Bodies, which was perform'd by the Turks and Jews, who were made Priſoners; thoſe Bodies which were Turks and Jews, like themſelves, by Command of their Task-maſters, they threw into the River, but the Bodies of the Chriſtians were decently Interr'd. The next Buſineſs was to demoliſh the Works, repair the Breaches, to fill up the Trenches, and level the Lines: But the chief Priſoners, and Perſons of Quality, were conducted by Count Rabata to the Emperor at Vienna, where the Joy and Triumph of that Court was much increas'd at the ſight of ſuch conſiderable Captives.

1686.

The Spoyl and Plunder of the City could not amount unto much, by reaſon that the greateſt part of the Houſholdſtuff and Moveables was conſum'd in the Flames: Howſoever, there were ſome who had the fortune to ſeize conſiderable Sums both of Gold and Silver. After which the Place being viſited and ſurvey'd in all parts by the two Generals, they found therein above Four hundred Pieces of Cannon of great weight; of which there were four of vaſt bigneſs, carrying an Hundred and fifty Pound Bullet; to which the Chriſtians afterwards gave the Name of the four Evangeliſts; beſides, there were twenty Mortar-pieces, and Proviſions and Ammunition for about a Month longer.

Stores found in the Town.

The Generals having refreſh'd their Armies in Buda for the ſpace of three or four Days, on the 6th of September they march'd towards the Vizier with Twenty thouſand Foot and Twelve thouſand Horſe; of whom Count Budiani (as we have ſaid) being diſpatch'd before, gave an account, that the Vizier having viſited and reinforc'd the Garriſon of Alba Regalis, or Stultwiſſemberg, had taken his March with all expedition towards the Bridge of Eſſeck; and that his Army was reduc'd to a very ſmall number, being deſerted by the Country-people and Handycraftsmen, whom they had forc'd to the War; ſo that the Vizier not knowing otherwiſe in what manner to ſave himſelf, encamp'd with all the advantage he could about three Miles diſtant from the Bridge of Eſſeck, upon the little River of Sarwitz, having his Rear guarded by a Bog or marſhy Ground, intending there to remain, until he ſaw and diſcover'd the Deſigns of the Enemy, who could not in that advantagious Poſt force him to an Engagement.

The Army marches againſt the Vizier.

The Duke of Loraine being with the Imperial Army encamp'd at Tolna, about three Leagues diſtant from the Vizier, whom he could not force nor perſwade to Fight; he detach'd Eighteen Regiments under Command of Prince Lewis of Baden, with Orders to Beſiege the Town of Quinq; Eccleſiæ, whilſt he with the remainder of the Army paſſed the River, with a Bridge of Boats, at Tolna, taking his March towards Peſth; and in his way ſeized on the Town of Hatwan, which the Turks had abandon'd, and ſet on Fire; but the Chriſtians entring therein before all was reduc'd to Aſhes, they extinguiſh'd the Fire, and ſav'd the reſt, and found therein ſeventeen Pieces of Cannon.

Hatwan ſurrender'd.

Simon Torn taken

and Kapoſwar.

Quinq; Eccleſiæ taken.

Thus did the Imperial Arms proceed with a proſperous gale of Fortune, nothing ſtanding before them, but all yielded to the conquering Eagles; for Prince Lewis of Baden in his March, made himſelf Maſter of Simon-Torn, a Fortreſs encompaſs'd with a Ditch of thirty Paces broad, and that alſo defended by a Marſh quite round; the Paſſage over which is made by a Bridge of Three hundred Paces long, and the Caſtle is built of Free-ſtone, with Fortifications after the ancient Faſhion. In this Place were ſixteen Pieces of Braſs Guns, and one of Iron, Twenty ſix Granado-ſhells, and Twenty five Tuns of Gun-powder. Then without farther loſs of time he proceeded to Kapoſwar, which he Pillag'd and Burnt, the Caſtle only excepted: And being reinforc'd by Count Staffemberg and ſome Troops of the Croats, which joyn'd with him, they march'd together towards Quinq; Eccleſiæ; and being come near the Place, a Detachment of Three thouſand Germans and Croats was made to take a View of the Situation and Strength of the Town; which they finding to remain in a ſecure Condition, enter'd it by Surprize, and put an Hundred Turks to the Sword, the reſt flying to the Caſtle for Refuge, after they had ſet fire to the City in four places; but the Dragoons ſcaled the Walls, and with their Swords in their Hands caſt themſelves into the Place, and open'd the Gates to give entrance to the other Troops. After which the Fire was put out, and conſiderable Booty, and rich Plunder taken, and about a Thouſand Chriſtian Captives ſet at liberty.

Segedin beſieged.

Veterani routs the Tartars.

This Succeſs was ſoon afterwards followed by the Siege of Segedin, by ſome Troops detach'd by Order of the Duke of Loraine, under Command of Count Caraffa, one of the Generals; who, coming before the Place, in a ſhort time rais'd four Batteries, and mounted his Cannon thereupon, which were brought from Zolnock; but Forage and Proviſions growing very ſcarce in the Leaguer, Caraffa went himſelf to haſten the Proviſions, leaving Count Walis, Major-General, Chief Commander of the Forces before the Town: In the mean time Count Walis receiv'd Intelligence, that Two thouſand Turks, joyn'd with a conſiderable Body of Tartars, were marching to raiſe the Siege, or to force Succours into the Town; he detach'd ſix Regiments of Horſe and Foot, with ſome Croats, and a Regiment of Dragoons, under the Command of Count Veterani; who having marched all the Night, by break of Day drew up his Forces into Battalia, and with his right Wing charged the Tartars with ſuch reſolution, that he put them to flight, and kill'd great numbers of them in their Tents, and took Four or Five thouſand of their Horſes, with all their Baggage: Nor was the Colonel of the Regiment de Gotz, whoſe Incumbence it was to Charge the Turks, leſs ſucceſsful in his Enterpriſe; for tho they had the advantage of a Palanca for their Defence, yet the Imperialiſts (to whom nothing could now be difficult) did Storm it with ſo much Courage and Vigour, that they ſoon became Maſters of it, killing Two hundred of the Three hundred Janiſaries, which defended the Place; at the ſame time the Horſe charging the others, forced them to fly in diſorder, of which many falling into the Hands of Veterani, were kill'd without Quarter given to any.

A Body of Turks routed.

This Action was ſcarce over, before the Imperialiſts eſpied a great number of Turks, paſſing a Bridge which they had laid over the Danube, as if they had deſign'd to reinforce thoſe Troops newly defeated, and to come in to their Aſſiſtance for the Relief of Segedin. Veterani reſolving to charge them alſo, made a Detachment of ſome Regiments to hinder the run-away Tartars from attacking the Imperialiſts in the Flank, whilſt he aſſail'd the Turks, who were reputed to be Twelve thouſand Men, Commanded by the Vizier himſelf. The Action was ſo bravely perform'd, that the Van-guard of the Turks was beaten, and forced to retreat to a Place where their Infantry lay under covert, ſupported by Six hundred Janiſaries, with Thirty Field-pieces, which were diſcharged with terrible Fire and Smoke upon their Enemies; but the Chriſtians having receiv'd their Fire with undaunted Conſtancy and Courage, they aſſail'd the Turks and Tartars with ſuch bravery, that they put them to flight.

Another Body of the Turks defeated.

In this laſt Encounter above Three hundred Janiſaries were kill'd upon the Place, all their Artillery and Baggage taken, with their Timbals, which they found before the Paſhas, and many Colours, together with Five hundred Horſe, and Two thouſand Beaſts of Burden, laden with Baggage and Proviſions; and all this on the Chriſtian ſide, with the loſs only of a Hundred Foot Soldiers, and about Fifty Horſemen. After which Veterani returning to the Camp before Segedin, where Te Deum was ſung; ſome Priſoners were releaſ'd to carry the Intelligence of theſe Succeſſes into the Town: And thereupon a Treaty being deſired, and Hoſtages given, it was agreed, That the Soldiers of the Garriſon only ſhould have liberty to march out with as much Baggage as every Man was able to carry upon his Shoulders, and to be conducted in ſafety as far as Temeſwar.

Segedin taken.

Thus Segedin being taken, great quantities of Proviſions were found therein, which ſerved to augment the Loſs, and increaſe the terrible Conſternation in the Turkiſh Army, and in the Court, and in all parts of the Ottoman Dominions. Nor did the Turks Miſfortunes of this Year's Campaign end here, nothing being able to withſtand a victorious Army. Prince Lewis of Baden divided his Army into two Bodies; the firſt he Commanded himſelf, and march'd towards Darda, which is a Fortreſs built by the Turks, and ſerv'd to cover the Bridge of Eſſeck; the other Detachment was committed to the Conduct of Count Scaffemberg, with Orders to Attack Zyclos, the which he ſo well executed, that in five or ſix Days he took the Place, the Soldiers and Inhabitants Surrendring at diſcretion: In the Town were found Twelve Pieces of Cannon, with ſtores of all ſorts of Proviſion and Ammunition. The Men were made Priſoners of War, but the Women and Children were diſperſed into ſeveral Cities and Towns under obedience of the Emperor. After the taking of Zyclos, the Count of Scaffemberg joyn'd again with Prince Lewis, who was now come before Darda on the firſt of November, where he underſtood the two Paſhas, who had layn encamp'd on that ſide, with about Two thouſand Five hundred Men, were already paſs'd the Bridge of Eſſeck; and that the Garriſon of Darda had abandon'd the Place, and march'd the ſame way, carrying their Cannon and Proviſions with them, and to hinder the purſuit of their Enemies after them, had beaten down and burnt a great part of the Bridge behind them. The Fort and the Bridge being both poſſeſs'd without any oppoſition, Prince Lewis burnt about Six thouſand Paces more of the Bridge, notwithſtanding the Cannon-ſhot which they fired continually from the Town of Eſſeck, without any great loſs or damage to the Imperialiſts, or the People of the Country, which came in to their Aſſiſtance; ſo that by what one ſide and the other had done, the Bridge was totally ruin'd. Prince Lewis having put a good Garriſon into Darda, march'd to Zyclos, and thence to Kapeſwar, which he took upon Conditions, that the Garriſon ſhould march out, and be conducted in ſafety as far as Sigeth. There were in that Town Twenty four Pieces of Cannon planted, and the Magazines well ſtor'd with all ſorts of Proviſions and Arms.

Zyclos taken.

The Bridge of Eſſeck ruin'd.

In this glorious manner did this Campaign end in favour of the Chriſtian Arms: And now it being time for both Armies to retire into their Winter-quarters, the loſing Party had leiſure to lament and quarrel, and lay the fault on each other, and the victorious Party to rejoyce and triumph. And ſo it was; for by this time the news of the loſs of Buda, and the ſeveral Victories gain'd by the Chriſtians, being come to Conſtantinople, it ſtruck all ſorts and conditions of Men with a wonderful Conſternation and Aſtoniſhment; and yet under this Affliction and preſſure of heavy Taxes, they behav'd themſelves with much Humility and Reſignation of Mind to the Will and Pleaſure of God, acknowledging all theſe Miſeries which had fallen upon them, the flights and turning of their Backs to their Enemies, the loſs of their fortify'd Towns, and the Slaughter of their brave Soldiers, and valiant Men of War, to be all the effects of the Divine Anger and Vengeance upon them for their Sins. The Imaums or Pariſh-Prieſts, the Shecks or Preachers in their Moſchs, the Religious Men, ſuch as the Dervices, Kalenderi, Nimetulahi, and others made diverſe Proceſſions, exhorting the People as they paſs'd to Repentance and Amendment of Life, and particularly to lament their Sins of drinking Wine and unnatural Luſts, the common Wickedneſs and Vices of the People: And for better obſervation of their Law, which had been much neglected, it was commanded on pain of Death ſtrictly to obſerve the Ramazan, which is the Month of Faſting, during which Month, no Man is by their Law, in the Day time, till Night comes, to taſt Bread or drink Water: Every Friday in that Month, the Mufti and Kadees clothed in penitential Habits, were oblig'd to viſit all the principal Moſchs of the City, and to make Prayers for turning away the Anger and Diſpleaſure of God: But the People and Soldiery were of another Temper, being inclin'd to enquire after the Cauſe and Grounds of all theſe Evils, Slaughters, and Confuſion. The News of taking Buda, and putting all the Garriſon to the Sword, (which as reported) conſiſted of Eight thouſand Men, beſides Women and Children, had fill'd all Conſtantinople with a moſt wonderful Conſternation; the common ſort of Shopkeepers and Handycrafts-men ran to Coffee-houſes, and Places of publick Meetings to hear the News and Particulars of what had paſs'd. The Kadees, who were Lawyers and Judges, and the Otorack Janiſaries, who are like the Milites immeriti, or Soldiers with dead Pay, caball'd every Day together without the knowledge of the Grand Seignior, which ſo ſoon as he came to hear, he was affrighted, not knowing what might be the iſſue of ſuch ſeditious Meetings, and thereupon doubling his Guards in the Seraglio with Boſtangees, who are Gardiners, and ſtout able Men, he ſent to know the meaning of ſuch numerous Aſſemblies; to which anſwer was made, That ſeeing to their Grief the extream Ruin and Danger, then threatning both the Perſon of his Majeſty and the whole Empire, they thought it their Duty as Loyal Subjects and Slaves, and

The Turks humble themſelves.

Keep ſeditious Meetings.

The Grand Seignior affrighted at the Meetings, and ſends to them.

1686.

Their Anſwer.

They offer Remedies.

The Grand Seignior approves thereof.

and true Muſſelmen and Believers to conſult together what Advices and Expedients they might with all Humility offer to his Majeſty, for his own perſonal Conſervation, and for the Defence of their holy and true Religion, with the great Body of the Empire. The Grand Seignior, who dreaded the ill Conſequences of ſuch ſeditious Meetings, return'd to them a gentle Meſſage of Thanks for their Care and Love, deſiring them to offer him ſuch Remedies, which they in their Wiſdom did judge convenient for cure of the preſent, and prevention of future Evils; it being natural for the common ſort of People in ſuch caſes to caſt the Blame on the chief Miniſters of State, they immediately reply'd, That the Mufti was a bad Man, and had abuſed his Office, and that it was generally murmur'd in all places of the Empire, That his Majeſty was in ſuch times as theſe too expenſive in his Seraglio, and too looſe in his Government, giving himſelf up to Hunting and Recreations, and forſaking as it were the Helm of Government, whilſt the Veſſel of the Empire was toſſed amidſt an Ocean of Miſeries, and ready every Day to ſuffer Shipwrack. And that his Majeſty did too much neglect his Imperial City of Conſtantinople, gracing every little Place with his Preſence, which made that Royal Seat become deſolate and ſo impoveriſh'd, that it was not poſſible to anſwer and pay the vaſt Taxes and Impoſitions which were charged upon it. The Grand Seignior ſeem'd to take all this that was ſaid very kindly; and immediately depos'd the Mufti, and baniſhed him to Pruſa, and calling for one of the Kadileſchers (who are Chief Juſtices) he cloth'd him with a rich Sables, and inveſted him with his Office: And looking more nearly about him to the main Chance, he recall'd the Orders he had lately given for a general Hunt on a certain Day, and a vaſt number of Grey-hounds, which with great Charge had been got together from all parts of the Empire, were let looſe, and ſuffer'd to run without a Maſter through all the Streets of Conſtantinople: The Expences of the Seraglio were alſo much retrench'd, and the dayly Allowances reduc'd to one Moiety: And after this Example, the Kuſlir-Aga, the Kimacham, and all the great Miniſters of State made a Regulation in their Families: And to make this Reformation the more publick and notorious to the People, the Grand Seignior put on a more grave and penitential Face than ordinary, and frequented the Royal Moſques, going to one or other of them every Day with much Solemnity: This Reformation quieted the Minds of the Commonalty pretty well; but this and the News of the Vizier's coming to Conſtantinople very ſpeedily, to aſſiſt at the Councils for conferting Meaſures for the next Year's Campaign, terrified the Ringleaders of the late Cabals, with an Apprehenſion of being called to an Account on ſcore of their late ſeditious Meetings; for the Turks, who can eaſily diſſemble with the Vulgar, and temporize during the Outrages and Fluctuations of the People, yet ſo ſoon as the Storm is appeas'd, they never fail to queſtion the Cauſe, and puniſh Captain Tom and his mutinous Rabble with Puniſhment agreeable to their Demerit.

1686.

A Panick-fear poſſeſſes them at Conſtantinople.

As the Grand Seignior was affraid of his People, and they of the Grand Seignior and Vizier, ſo likewiſe were they generally poſſeſs'd with a Panick-fear of the coming of the Enemy, which will plainly appear by this Inſtance. The Turks having ſurrender'd up Napoli di Romania upon Conditions to the Venetians; one of them was, That they ſhould Tranſport the Inhabitants and Garriſon of that City, to ſome Place within the Dardanelli, near to the Caſtles: The Venetians, in purſuance of this Article, embark'd all the Soldiers, with the Men, Women and Children, and tranſported them to the place appointed; to which when they began to draw near, ſo that many Colours of St. Mark were ſeen from the Caſtles, entring into the Helleſpont, the News thereof was poſted from all hands to Conſtantinople, which put the whole City into a Conſternation, and gave cauſe of Rumour every-where, that the Venetians had already paſſed the Caſtles, and Reports flew up and down, that they were in a few Leagues, or as ſome fancied in ſight of the Town. This put all Hands to work, and in a confuſed manner, many Pieces of Cannon were mounted at the Seraglio Point, on the Maiden Tower, which is a little Fort built on a Rock in the Water, in the midway between Conſtantinople and Scutari, where alſo Guns were mounted, and Soldiers and Inhabitants of the City poſted in all places, where might be any ſuſpicion or danger of the Enemies deſcent or landing. This hurly burly continu'd for the ſpace of two Days, by which time the truth of the Matter being known, and that the Venetians were retired, things began to be quieted, and the People to return to their own Habitations and Buſineſs.

Thus have we done with the Campaign in Hungary for the Year 1686, which ended very glorious for the Emperor: It reſts now before we proceed farther, to take a view and ſurvey of the Succeſſes of the Venetians both by Sea and Land, which were not leſs proſperous than thoſe in the parts of Hungary.

1686.

Deſcription of the Country of Maina.

1686.

The Turks inveſt Chieleſa.

In the preceeding Years of this War, the Venetians made it their chief Buſineſs and Enterpriſe to render themſelves Maſters of the Morea, a fruitful and ancient Country, in which are many Provinces, and amongſt them, that of Laconia, now call'd Maina, and the Inhabitants, Mainioti, a ſort of People, who call themſelves Chriſtians, but live chiefly upon Spoyl and Robbery: In this Country the moſt conſiderable Places are, Calamata, Zarnata, Chieleſa, and Paſſava, all which Places were ſubdu'd by the Venetians, and taken from the Turks in the preceeding Year of 1685, in deſpight of the Captain Paſha, and in the ſight of him and his Army, as we have before related, which Diſgrace being a Crime ſufficient to coſt him his Head, he reſolv'd to ſave his Life if poſſible by recovery of Chieleſa; to gain which, he began betimes his Campaign, and on the firſt of April, he inveſted the Place with an Army, compoſed of Ten thouſand Foot and Fifteen hundred Horſe, commanded by himſelf and four other Paſhas, with a great number of Labourers and Pioniers. At his firſt appearance before this Fortreſs, the Captain Paſha ſent a Summons to the Governour, call'd Seignior Marin Gritti, Proveditor extraordinary for the Maina, demanding with many Threats the Surrender of that Town. To which Seignior Gritti return'd a reſolute Anſwer, That he and all his Soldiers would either live or die in Defence of that Place, not doubting but that the Omnipotent God would favour their juſt and brave Intentions. The Captain Paſha having receiv'd this Anſwer, immediately rais'd a Battery, and began to fire upon the Town with ſix Pieces of Cannon; at which the Governour not being in the leaſt diſmay'd, put all things in order for a reſolute Defence. The Turks ply'd their Batteries ſo warmly on the Town, that in the ſpace of ten Days they had open'd a Breach wide enough for an Aſſault; which whilſt they were preparing to do, the News being brought to Seignior Girolamo Cornaro, the General of the Iſlands, how that the Turks had inveſted Chieleſa, he immediately gather'd all the Force which was then ready in Zant, conſiſting of divers Nations; and having embark'd 'em on a Fleet of Ships commanded by Seignior Lorenzo Venier, he ſailed with a favourable Wind to the Morea. This News flew likewiſe with much ſpeed to the Captain-General Moroſini then at Corfu, who, with like diligence, having embark'd all the Forces he had there, and being aſſiſted with a proſperous Wind, arrived in the ſpace of four Days at the Place, where he deſign'd to make his Deſcent, and the Day following being the 30th of March, he landed Four thouſand Men under the Command of three Major Generals, that is, Storf, and the Cavaliers Alcenago, and d'Andria.

1686.

The Venetians relieve Chieleſa.

This unexpected News of the arrival of the Captain General ſurprized the Captain Paſha, and filled all the Turkiſh Camp with Fear and Confuſion; ſo that at the very Name of Moroſini, and the Chriſtian Troops, they rais'd their Tents, and drew off their Camp, but with ſuch haſt and precipitation, that at a little diſtance from the Town, they left ſix Pieces of Braſs Canon behind them, four of which were found in the common Way, and two were thrown down a Precipice, which afterwards were recover'd by the induſtry of the Venetians. So ſoon as the Beſieg'd obſerv'd the Enemy to raiſe their Camp, and to fly away with a Panick-fear, the Greeks and Mainiots purſu'd them, and kill'd above Four hundred of them; and the whole Body of the reſt were diſpers'd through the whole Country of the Morea; only the Captain Paſha with ſome few Troops pitch'd his Camp in the Country near to Paſſava, where he labour'd to gather his diſpers'd Troops.

1686.

The Venetians inveſt old Navarin.

The Inhabitants treat and ſurrender.

Towards the end of May, the Auxiliary-Gallies and Forces being united to the Army and Fleet, under the Captain General; the whole Body of the Armada conſiſting of about Two hundred Sail, on the ſecond Day of June appear'd in ſight of old Navarin, which fill'd all that Country round with great Conſternation. The Galleaſſes and great Ships led the Van, and ſerv'd to ſhelter and protect the ſmaller Veſſels in landing their Men, which being enter'd on the Shoar, were drawn up in Battalia by the Art and Direction of that valiant General Count Coniſmarc, in ſight of the People of Navarin. Moroſini, according to his accuſtomary Generoſity, ſent firſt his Summons to the Garriſon to Surrender, before he thought fit to make uſe of his Force, in anſwer unto which, they deſir'd time to conſider until the next Morning; and then they propos'd a longer Term, with deſign only to protract the Time, until they might receive Succours from the Seraskier, whom they knew to be not far diſtant with a conſiderable Force; of which the Captain General well conſidering, gave order to Count Coniſmarc to advance with a great part of the Army towards the Town, and at the ſame time, he cauſed another Regiment to take poſſeſſion of a Rock which forms the Port, and to plant a formidable Battery thereon; in which Matters whilſt they were thus employ'd, the Beſieged being greatly affrighted, ſet forth a white Flag, and diſpatched immediately in their Admiral Gally, certain Deputies to treat on, and receive ſome reaſonable Conditions upon the Surrender, which, as they deſir'd, were generouſly granted

1686. granted by the Captain General. In purſuance of which, the Inhabitants were permitted to march forth with all their Bag and Baggage and ſmall Arms, being not above Four hundred in number, of which One hundred were Soldiers, who were judged to be a ſufficient Garriſon to maintain a Fortreſs ſo naturally ſtrong, and ſituated on a high and almoſt inacceſſible Rock; and afterwards according to the Articles, all theſe People were tranſported to Alexandria in Egypt. Thus in a few Hours, without loſs of Men, or the leaſt effuſion of Blood, did this old Fort of Navarin fall into the Hands of the Venetians, in which were found Forty three Pieces of braſs Cannon, with many Arms, much Ammunition and Proviſions. The Captain General having furniſh'd the Place with a Garriſon of an Hundred and ſixty Men, under the Command of Pietro Grioni, in Quality of Proveditor in ordinay, he immediately block'd up the Port, and guarded the narroweſt ſtreight of it, to ſecure the Paſſage for the more ſafe and eaſie Tranſport of Cannons, Mortar-pieces and Proviſions unto that Place, where the Camp was pitch'd with deſign to Attack New Navarin, which was a Royal Fortreſs, and a place of greater Importance than that of Old Navarin.

1686. On the 4th of June at Night, the Gallies of Donado and Pizzamano, both Noble Venetians, were the firſt to enter into the narrow Paſſage; on the firſt of which the General Count Coniſmarc was embark'd, who enter'd ſafely within the Port, thô ſeveral Pieces of Cannon were fired at them from a Ravelin, which trolled the Shot exactly on the Surface of the Water. Theſe were follow'd by the Captain of the Gulf, with three other Gallies, who paſſed without any damage or loſs; and on the 6th at Night, Cornaro, General of the Iſlands, enter'd with his four Gallies alſo without other hurt, than the breaking ſome few Oars by a Shot from the Ravelin: The Cannon and Mortar-pieces, and other Neceſſaries for an Attack were firſt to be landed, which by the diligence, uſe and labour of the Slaves was preſently effected, notwithſtanding the many Difficulties which interven'd; and a formal Siege in a ſhort time laid by the Induſtry and Valour of Captain General Moroſini, and the happy Conduct of Count Coniſmarc, who had raiſed a Work, on which eighteen Mortar-pieces were planted, carrying Bombs of Five hundred pounds weight, and on another advantagious Ground had raiſed a Battery of Twenty Pieces of Cannon, carrying Fifty pound Bullet.

The Venetians enter the Port of Old Navarin.

Whilſt theſe Matters were acting, a certain Greek was taken with Letters from the Town, directed to the Seraskier, whereby they gave him to underſtand, That thô Sefer Paſha, a valiant and reſolute Soldier, was come to them, with a good Recruit both of Men and Ammunition, whereby their Garriſon amounted to a Thouſand Soldiers, and that nothing wanted either of Arms or Ammunition, yet that it was impoſſible for them to hold out long, unleſs the Siege was raiſed by a vigorous Force. Upon this Advice, General Coniſmarc reſolved with the greateſt part of his Troops to advance into the Country, and engage the Seraskier: Upon which Advice, the Turks were ſo far from deſigning to diſturb the Siege, that they raiſed their Camp, and retreated: Upon which alſo Coniſmarc thought fit to draw his Troops off, and return to the Siege; the Turks defending themſelves, and refuſing to Surrender upon any Summons or Force, which had hitherto been applied, upon hopes as they conceived of receiving ſpeedy Succour and Relief from the Seraskier, concerning whom the Report was, that he was approaching towards the Chriſtian Camp: In the mean time, the Captain General form'd all the Trenches and Traverſes for an Attack, and bomb'd the Town with Twenty Mortar-pieces, and batter'd the Walls with ſix Pieces of Cannon, carrying Fifty pounds weight of Bullet. The Report of the Seraskier's near approach, confirm'd by the Scouts and other Meſſengers, and that the Turks with a Body of 10.000 Men were come within ſix Italian Miles of the Leaguer; Count Coniſmarc with a very ſtrong Party advanced once again to meet and give them Battle, leaving the Cavalier Alcenago, one of the Major Generals, with a ſufficient Force to maintain the Siege.

Coniſmarc advances againſt the Seraskier.

June. The next Day after, Count Coniſmarc had riſen from before the Town, being the 14th of June, they found the Seraskier encamp'd with 10.000 Men, of which Two thouſand were Horſe, in a very advantagious Poſt, which ſeemed very difficult to be forced: Howſoever, the Venetians reſolving to ſurmount all the Diſadvantages with their Valour, enter'd into the Vally by a very ſtreight Paſſage, where the Turks lay encamped, and forced them to engage in Battle, which laſted for the ſpace of two Hours in a dubious Condition, it not appearing as yet to which ſide the Victory would incline: The Regiments of Corbon and Viſconti, which were Dragoons, behaved themſelves very bravely, and ſuſtaining the heat of the Battle, the greateſt part of the Loſs fell on them; but the Saxons, and the Troops of Brunſwick coming to their aſſiſtance, with four ſmall Field-pieces, forced the Enemy to quit the Field, and betake themſelves to flight, leaving about Five hundred dead upon the Place, with all their Tents and and overthrows them.

He engages the Turks,

1686. and Baggage, beſides many of them are wounded, amongſt which the Seraſkier himſelf was one; all which was perform'd by the wonderful Mercy of God, without any conſiderable loſs on the Chriſtian ſide. The Joy of this Victory was ſolemnized with Te Deum, and giving Thanks to God, and with many vollies of Shot and Cannon, which wholly diſanimated the Beſieged, and put them into ſuch a diſtracted Conſternation; that with more lenity than before, they began to hearken to a ſecond Summons, which the Captain General, to ſpare farther effuſion of Bloud, had been pleaſed to ſend to them. After divers Debates, and Articles propos'd, the Beſieg'd declar'd themſelves willing to lay down their Arms, and yield, on Conditions that three Days ſhould be given to the Garriſon to march out with their ſmall Arms and Baggage; and that ſhipping ſhould be given to the Garriſon and Inhabitants, to Tranſport them to the neareſt Coaſt of Barbary. Whilſt theſe things were in agitation, it unfortunately happen'd that by ſome Accident a Fire took in certain Houſes, near a Magazine of Powder, which on a ſuddain blew up, and killed an Hundred and Fifty Turks, with Seſer Paſha, the Commander in chief of Navarin, and alſo ſix Chriſtians, and about fifteen wounded without the Walls of the City. The Turks fearing leſt this Accident ſhould be eſteem'd as done with Deſign, came trembling before the Captain General, ſolemnly proteſting their Innocence in the Diſaſter, offering two other Hoſtages for performance of the Articles agreed; and laying their Standards and Keys of their City, at the feet of the Captain General, they were graciouſly received: And accordingly at the time appointed, above Three thouſand Perſons were embarked, of which, One thouſand were capable to bear Arms, and were conveyed over to the Coaſt of Barbary; and the Venetians took Poſſeſſion of the Town, and planted the Colours of St. Mark on the Walls thereof.

The Town Capitulates and Surrenders.

The Venetians take Poſſeſſion of the Town.

It was not long after before the Fortreſs of Modon followed the ſame fortune; for the Chriſtian Forces loſing no time to purſue their good Succeſs, on the 22*d* of June the Armada of Ships and Gallies ſhewed themſelves before Modon; at which the Garriſon not ſeeming to be diſmay'd, the Paſha, who Commanded in chief, returned a reſolute Anſwer, full of Bravery and Defiance, to the Summons ſent to him by the Captain General: Upon which the Approaches were begun, and the Batteries raiſed, and Cannons plaid, and Bombs thrown by Direction of that famous Engenier Mutoni, by which the Garriſon being terrified, on the 7*th* of July they ſpread a white Flag, and ſurrender'd on Conditions, That in three Days they ſhould leave the Place, and march out with Arms and Baggage; which accordingly was perform'd on the 10*th* of July, all the Inhabitants to the number of Four thouſand, of which, about One thouſand were Soldiers bearing Arms, abandon'd their Habitations with ſad and dejected Countenances; and, as was agreed by Articles, were all Tranſported into Barbary. The Town being ſeized, there were an Hundred Pieces of Cannon found therein, of which, Ninety one were of Braſs, beſides great Quantities of Powder and Ammunition, and plenty of Proviſions.

1686.

Modon attacked.

1686.

Modon ſurrendered.

Thus good Succeſs attending the Venetian Arms, the Captain General reſolved to purſue his Conqueſts, whilſt Fortune inclined to his ſide; and to proceed to Napoli di Romania, a Town anciently Famous, and celebrated for its happy and commodious Situation, in the moſt pleaſant and richeſt part of all the Morea: The Greeks call it Anaplia, and Ptolomy Nauplia, being ſeated at the bottom of a Bay, call'd in former times Sinus Argolicus, having a very ſpacious and ſecure Port for Shipping, and very commodious for Trade. The Town it ſelf is ſituated with great Advantages, being defended on the one ſide by the Sea, and on the other by high and craggy Hills, having Walls filled with Earth, much after the Modern Fortification; but without any Ditch; only at the Gate to the Land-ſide, there is a kind of a Ditch about ſix Paces broad, and about ſix Foot deep with Water; it hath alſo ſomething like a Counterſcarp, but inconſiderable; it hath no Drawbridge, but only ſome Paſſages thereunto, which the Turks have made a little difficult to enter.

The Deſcription of Napoli di Romania.

The Venetians having refreſhed their Army for a while before Modon, order'd Lorenzo Venier, Captain extraordinary, with three Ships of good force, to Cruiſe within the Archepelago, where he diſcovered, between the Iſlands of Nixia and Nicaria, a Fleet of Turkiſh Veſſels call'd the Caravan, bound from Egypt to Conſtantinople, plying to Wind-ward, nine of which belonged to Conſtantinople, and four Merchant Ships from Rhodes and other Places, under Convoy of four Tripoli Men of War: The Venetians immediately made up to them, and engaged with them for the ſpace of ſix Hours, with Damage on both ſides, tho the Turks had much the worſt, and at length with help of the Night, were forced to take Refuge in the Port of Rhodes, and the Venetians afterwards retired into Trio, a Port on the Iſland of Paris; where having taken ſome freſh Water, and mended their Rigging, and other damages ſuſtained in the

A Fight at Sea.

1686. late Fight, they ſailed again towards Rhodes; and being on their way between Lemno, and the Shore of Caramania, they eſpyed Two great Ships, and a Sayke; and making up, and paſſing ſome Broad Sides upon them, the greateſt Ship ran a-ſhoar, and ſet her ſelf a Fire; all the perſons, being 130, eſcap'd a-ſhoar and ſav'd themſelves; the other Ship and the Sayke were taken by the Venetians; the Ship which was burned, was called Nachis, Commanded by Uſuf of Roſetto, an Abyſſine by Nation, very richly Laden; and the Prizes taken were well Freighted with Rice, and other Proviſions very ſeaſonable at that time for the ſupport of the Venetian Forces, which by reaſon of contrary Winds, were long detained at Modon; but by help of their Oars, and aſſiſtance of the lighter Veſſels, they arrived at Port Rogdi about Four Miles diſtant from Napoli de Romania on the 30*th* day of July, from whence they had a Proſpect of the pleaſant Gardens, and Fountains belonging to Aſſan Paſha: And here having Landed the 200 Foot, and 20 Horſe, which every Gally carried, their Orders were to march to Mount Palamida, which is higher than the Town, and commands it, being within Muſquet-ſhot; This Van was the next day followed by the whole Army, between moſt pleaſant Streams, and Falls of Water.

The Venetians land near Napoli.

The Town being Situated, as before mentioned, was defended by 3000 men, of which 300 were lately ſent in to recruit the Garriſon; well fortified with Cannon, and with ſufficient Stores and Proviſions for their Maintenance; the Commander in Chief was Muſtapha Paſha, with whom were Four Brothers, who were all Beyes, as alſo a Diſdar, which ſignifies the Commander of the Caſtle, a Kadi or Judge, beſides the Aga who Commanded the Recruits. Upon approach of the Venetian Army, all thoſe who lived in the out-skirts and lower parts of the Town, amongſt which were above 100 Families of Greeks, retired with their Goods into the upper parts of the City, and of a Fortreſs amidſt the Rocks called Senonbolo. In the Port were Two Gallies unrigged, and diſarmed, and all the Slaves and Soldiers taken out and lodged on a Rock not far diſtant, to the number of about 500 perſons, one of which by the fall of a Bomb was ſunk ſome days after the beginning of the Siege, and an Engliſh Ship called the Mary, which came from Alexandria, laden with Rice and Coffee, whoſe Maſters Name was Edward Wall, ſubmitted her ſelf to the favour of the Captain General: Beſides which there were alſo Two Galeots in the Port, one of 25, and another of 18 Banks or Seats for Oars, beſides 40 Boats, or Barks of ſeveral ſorts. In Landing the Bombs and Mortar-pieces, with all the Train of Artillery, they found little or no difficulty, or oppoſition, tho' the Seraskier ſhewed himſelf twice at a diſtance, as if he had intended to have diſturbed them in their Works, and raiſing Batteries; nor did the Seraskier for that preſent do more, than only to fortify his Camp, which he had pitched near Argos, a Caſtle about 3 hours Journey diſtant from Napoli di Romania, the Way to which is all upon a plain, ſituate on a high Hill, at the foot of which is a Town containing about a hundred Houſes, the Inhabitants of which, being for the moſt part Rich and Wealthy, had carried up the beſt of their Houſhold-ſtuff and Moveablss into the Caſtle above, which is well defended by its natural Situation; it had alſo 8 Iron Guns, and 10 Petreroes, ſome ſmall quantities of Proviſions in it, with a Ciſtern, not very well furniſhed with plenty of Water. 1686.

The Caſtle Argos.

On the 3*d* of Auguſt, the Galeaſſes and Ships appeared in ſight of Napoli di Romania, and forthwith Landed all the Horſe and Foot, which were embarked thereon: And on the ſame day a Feluca belonging to Mahomet Paſha, a Bey, or Commander of Seven Gallies, deſerted, and came into the Service of the Venetians; upon the Feluca were 7 Greeks, who gave intelligence, That the Captain-Paſha having received advice of the arrival of the Venetian Fleet, had in Two Nights time entred 300 Foot into Napoli: But to prevent the like for the future, ſeveral Gallies with Four Felucas were detatched to guard and defend that Coaſt, and thereby to hinder and intercept all ſuccours on that ſide.

Auguſt 1686.

But becauſe it was neceſſary alſo to diſlodge the Seraskier, who on the other ſide appeared with ſeveral-parties of Horſe, and gave frequent diſturbances to them in the Lines and Trenches which were then forming; the Captain-General and General Chinixmarch after due deliberation concerning the manner, reſolved to give them Battel: To which end 2000 men ſelected out of the Ships, and Gallies, moſt of them being Voluntiers, and Soldiers of Fortune, were landed in a Creek, or covert place under the Conduct of Col. Magnanini, who was ordered to take a compaſs in the Night, and fall on the Turks in the Rear, whilſt the main Body of the Army charged them in the Van: In the Morning Count Chinixmarch, having left 1500 Italian Soldiers in the Trenches, under the Command of Sargeant Major Count Repeta, advanced two miles with his Army drawn up in good order to meet the Turks on the Plain; the Seraskier ſeemed at firſt very ready and reſolute to join Battel, advancing with a ſtrong Body of 3000 Horſe,

The Venetians march againſt the Seraskier.

Auguſt 16.

The Turks Retreat,

Horſe, and therewith to break into the Venetians; but finding a ſtout Repulſe, they made a ſtand; and fearing leſt they ſhould be attacked in the Rear by the Marine Regiments, they made a Retreat; and taking up their Tents and Baggage, they marched away with all the Order that their haſt would permit.

And quit Argos.

The People in Argos ſeeing the Seraskier and his Army, betake themſelves to Flight, reſolved to accompany them, and marched towards Corinth, where they arrived the next day, having lodged the Night before at a Village called Centera. In the Skirmiſh about 200 Turks were killed and wounded, with very little loſs on the Chriſtian ſide: After which having plundered the Caſtle Argos of all the Goods which the Turks had left therein, in which they found about 60 ſmall Boxes of Powder, they returned back again to their Trenches and Siege as before. In the mean time the City was burning in ſeveral places, being Fired by the Bombs and Carcaſſes which were thrown into it from the Palamida, and the Walls which were of Stone built after the ancient manner, were battered on all ſides by the Cannon, which they were not able to reſiſt; but that which cauſed the greateſt Conſternation in the City, and did the ſevereſt Execution, was the fall of a Bomb into the Magazine of Powder, which blowing up beat all the Houſes down which were near it on every ſide, killed many People, and filled with Earth and Ruins the chief Ciſtern which ſupplied all the Town with Water, ſo that the Defendants wanted now both Powder and Water, Two very principal neceſſaries for Life and Defence.

A Bomb blows up the Powder in the Town.

The Captain-General conceiving, that after ſuch a loſs, the beſieged would ſcarce have encouragement to defend themſelves much longer, reſolved to try their inclinations by ſending to them his Interpreter Fortis, with a Letter full of perſuaſive Motives, and good Articles, and Conditions, which ſhould be performed upon ſurrender of the City; and ſeeing that their Seraskier had been beaten and durſt not approach to give them Relief, they were exhorted before it was too late, to accept of the Mercy and Clemency which was then offered to them.

The Venetians offer conditions to the Town,

Their Anſwer.

To theſe Summons the Governor without much conſideration returned a ſpeedy Anſwer, That they were very ſenſible that it was for their Sin, that God had chaſtiſed and puniſhed them; howſoever their Truſt was, That God would deliver them, to whoſe Will and Divine Providence they remained with intire reſignation. The Bombs and Batteries continuing to do great Execution, by the obſcurity of the Night, ſeveral Greeks and Renegades made an eſcape out of the Town, and came to the Captain-General, agreeing together in their Reports, that there was ſcarce a Houſe in the Town which had not been damaged by the Bombs or Canon; and above 30 Houſes burnt down to the Ground, 22 Churches and Chappels ruined with their Granaries, and Stores for Proviſions: Many were the ſlain and wounded, and the people forced to drink brackiſh Water; and amidſt all this miſery and confuſion, the poor Women in a diſtracted manner were running about the Streets, with tears and ſighs, and ſcreeks. Howſoever the Governor Muſtapha Paſha ſeemed to remain ſtill firm and reſolute to hold out unto the laſt, and to loſe his Life for the ſake of his Country.

The Seraskier gives hopes of Relief.

In the mean time the Seraskier fortified his Camp about Corinth, endeavouring there to encreaſe his Army; and to encourage the Beſieged, he frequently cauſed certain Bodies to be ſeen from the Town, and parties of Horſe to advance near to the Trenches; which thô they did nothing, yet it ſupported the Spirits of the Defendants with ſome little glimmerings of hope. Whilſt matters were in this poſture, Admiral Duodo being returned from the Coaſt of Barbary and Tripoli, where he had landed the People at Modon; he joyned the reſt of the Fleet, as did alſo the ſame day Captain Piſani with 8 Ships from Argentiera.

The Turks continued ſtill to defend themſelves, thô their offence was very weak, now and then firing a Bomb, whilſt the Venetians plyed them continually with Carcaſſes and Bombs, having by this time ſpent at leaſt 3500 on the place: the Batteries alſo plaid almoſt without any intermiſſion, and the Lines and Approaches daily drawn nearer to the place; and they began now to throw Bombs into the Caſtle, which lies upon the Sea-ſide.

A Caſtle near the Sea.

This Caſtle is ſituate on a high Rock, with many Sands and ſhallow places round about it, ſo that it is impoſſible for any Veſſel to approach near to it: The Walls are very high with ſome Baſtions, and the place fortified with Seventeen Pieces of Braſs Cannon, and Seven Iron Guns, and a Mortar-piece to throw Bombs; it was ſupplied alſo with a good Ciſtern of Water, and Garriſoned with a hundred Foot Soldiers commanded by an Aga.

The Chriſtians continuing ſtill with indefatigable Labour, and fearleſs Hazards to preſs the Beſieged, entred the Ditch of the Town on the 23*d*, which Adventure coſt the Life of the Cavalier Alzenaga, one of the Major-Generals. About that time alſo ſeveral others dyed of the Camp Diſeaſe; namely, Colonel Viſconti, Major Cleiſt, as did alſo Signior Barbon Bragadino a Noble Venetian; and Count Charles, Nephew of General Chinixmarch, a young Gentleman of great hope; likewiſe Girolamo Ghirardi, Captain of his Guard. On the 29th by break of Day, the Seraskier, with part of his Army, ſhewed himſelf on the Hill which deſcends towards the Right-hand of the Line, having his Left-wing re-inforced with a thouſand Leventz or Soldiers of the Marine Regiments ſent by the Captain Paſha; which having joyned the Army but a few hours before, they all in good order of Battel, being Ten thouſand ſtrong with Horſe, and Foot, deſcended into the Plain, near unto the Line, charging with their uſual cryes of Allah, Allah, and much fury on the Soldiers who defended the Trenches: But General Chinixmarch had with ſuch admirable Order and Art ſo well diſpoſed the Militia, that they repulſed the Enemy; and then Two thouſand Sea-Soldiers, by Order of the Captain-General, coming to their ſuccour, they put the Enemy into great confuſion; and the Captain-General himſelf at the ſame time coming in perſon, with ſome Troops of ſelect men, wholly turned the fortune of that day's Fight (which for Three hours had continued doubtful) to the Chriſtian ſide, and cauſed the Turks to betake themſelves to a ſhameful Flight, leaving Fourteen hundred of their Companions behind them, killed, or wounded: In which Engagement the Venetians loſt not more than Three hundred and Fifty men, killed and wounded. General Chinixmarch had his Horſe ſhot under him, but he ſoon remounted another, and with great Vivacity, and Courage was preſent at all places, where the danger was moſt preſſing: The Princes of Brunſwick, and Turene, expoſed themſelves like brave Soldiers in all places which required their help and encouragement; and having thus diſcomfited the Seraskier's Army, and cauſed them to withdraw in diſorder from the City, the Captain General to loſe no time, left the purſuit of the Enemy, and returned to the Siege, cauſing the Batteries from all ſides to play on the Town; and to terrify the Defendants, they ſhewed many Heads of the Turks ranked in File on the points of their Lances. The Beſieged having ſeen the Seraskier, in whom was their greateſt hope, routed and defeated before their Eyes, grew deſperate of any relief or ſuccour from thence, which cauſed them to diſplay divers white Flags on the Walls, upon which all acts of Hoſtility ceaſed; and Two Turks came forth from the Town; and being conducted to the preſence of the Captain-General, they preſented a Paper to him, ſubſcribed by the Paſha, who was Governor of the City, declaring his readineſs to make ſurrender thereof, provided they might have free liberty to march out with their Arms and Baggage, and to be Tranſported thence to Troy, or to the Caſtles in the Dardanelli or Helleſpont. And that the Two Turkiſh Gallies then in Port might alſo be freed, with their Chiurma, or Slaves and Equipage, which (as we have ſaid) were retired into the Rocks, and faſt places near the Town: But this latter would not be allowed, or granted by the Captain-General, nor any thing more, than what had been accorded lately to Modon and Navarin. The firſt ſtep unto all which, was the Delivery of the Caſtle, ſituate on a Rock within the Sea, into which a Venetian Garriſon was put immediately; and therein were found Seventeen Pieces of Braſs Canon, and Seven of Iron, with a large Mortar-piece to throw Bombs; after this Eight Hoſtages were required of the moſt principal Turks of the City; and then the other Articles were performed, which related to the Embarking the Soldiers and Inhabitants, who were accordingly Shipped and Tranſported to the Dardanelli, the apperance of which ſo affrighted all the Coaſt at firſt, that the Alarum ran as far as Conſtantinople, and put them there into that Conſternation, of which we have before made a Relation.

Auguſt.

The Seraskier ſhews himſelf, and attacks the Chriſtians in their Trenches.

The Turks put to Flight.

The Beſieged capitulate.

And ſurrender.

Thus was this and other famous Fortreſſes of Greece, which had for many years remained in the Ottoman power, and withſtood great and conſiderable Forces, in a few Months ſubjected to the Chriſtian Arms, by the Valour and Bravery of the Captain-General Moroſini, by the admirable Conduct of Count Chinixmarch, and the courage of thoſe noble Princes of Brunſwick and Turene, amongſt which the German Soldiery, and all others did greatly ſignalize themſelves in all their Atchievements. And thus we ſhall put an end to the Succeſſes of the Year 1686, which have terminated ſo gloriouſly in honour of the Chriſtian Arms, by which the Turks were reduced to that low, and miſerable condition, of which they were never before ſenſible, nor never accuſtomed unto, which made them the leſs able to bear the Evil, nor endure the Remedy.

ANNO, 1687.

NEver had the Ottoman Empire, ſince the time, that they firſt paſſed out of Aſia over into Europe, been under that Eclipſe and in that low of Ebb of Fortune as at preſent: And yet this following Year was ſo much more unlucky and fatal to them than the former; as if their Miſchiefs would not have ended, but with the total Ruin, and Downfal of their Empire: To prevent which, the Grand Seignior meditated on Thoughts of Peace, and ſent a Chiaus 1687.

(a thing which the Turks never practiſed before) to tender Articles to the Emperor, which were not received, nor other Anſwer given, than that his Imperial Majeſty could not ſo much as enter into a Treaty without the conſent of Venice and Poland, their Allies. And thô the Turks endeavour'd to avail themſelves by that Method, yet they thought, that the beſt way to facilitate that proceeding, was with their Swords in their Hands, and by an appearance in the Field with the moſt formidable Army they were able to make; to which end all Otoracks, who are Milites immeriti, or Men excuſed from the War, on account of paſt Services with a dead pay, (as they call it) of which there may be Forty thouſand in the Empire, were all ſummoned to appear in the next Campagne, and forced to the War with the greateſt rigour, and on pain of Death, beſides which new Levies were order'd to be made in all Parts of Aſia; and particularly at Smyrna, and in the Parts adjacent; Six hundred Soldiers were raiſed at the charge of the Citizens and Inhabitants; beſides which eight or nine Millions being charged to be levied in the leſſer Aſia: The Quota taxed on Smyrna, came to a Hundred thouſand Dollars, which Sum not being to be found amongſt them, and perhaps ſcarce the Moiety thereof, the Cappugi-baſhee, who was ſent to Collect the Money, carried away moſt of the principal Turks in that Town to Conſtantinople; where having repreſented their Poverty, and inability to pay ſo great a Tax, it was moderated and brought down to one half, or to One hundred and five Purſes: Theſe proceedings may evidently convince the World, that the conceptions of the World generally formed of the vaſt Riches of the Grand Seignior's Treaſury were imaginary, ſeeing, that it was ſo exhauſted in a few Years, as to force the Government to thoſe rigorous Courſes, and unuſual methods of Oppreſſion, which can ſcare be repeated without a total Deſolation, or extreme Miſery of that Country.

The Turks prepare for War.

Taxes rigorouſly impoſed.

These Taxes joyned to the Diſcontents of the People, made all things uneaſy at the Ottoman Court, where it was impoſſible to prevent the Cabals, and liberty of Speech, which the Soldiers and others freely uſed in publick Diſcourſe; to ſuppreſs which, and to reſtrain the Mutinies, which were daily expected; it was reported that the Grand Vizier deſigned to leave Belgrade, and March back to Conſtantinople: But the Grand Seignior conſulting with his principal and wiſeſt of his Confidents, laid his Commands upon him not to remove from the Confines, but rather to keep a watch on the Motions of the Enemy, than to attend to domeſtick Seditions, which the Government was at all times able to appeaſe; and to quiet the mind of the Vizier, they gave him to underſtand, that he was entirely in the favour of his Prince, who was very ſenſible, that the misfortunes of the laſt year, were not to be attributed either to his ill Conduct, or want of Courage (as did appear by a Writing under the Hands of the principal Officers of the Army for his juſtification) but rather to the divine Juſtice of God, who was pleaſed for the Sins of the People to abate the Pride, and Glory of the Ottoman Empire. By this Letter the Grand Vizier being well ſatisfied of his Maſter's good Inclinations towards him, and ſtrengthned in his hopes, that he ſhould yet keep his Head for ſome time longer, or at leaſt until the next misfortune, he alter'd his intention of returning to the Port, and reſolved to paſs his Winter at Belgrade, where his Preſence was chiefly neceſſary for keeping the Army together, and more entire on the Frontiers: Moreover, during the rigour of this Winter ſeaſon, he continued to fortify Belgrade, and gave Orders to erect a Fort on the Danube, for better ſecurity of Peter Waradin, and diſpatched divers Convoys with Ammunition, and Proviſions for the Succour and Relief of Great Waradin, Giulia, Lippa, Zeno and Temeſwar.

Cabals at the Port.

1687.

The Vizier ordered to ſtay at Belgrade.

In the mean time the Imperialiſts preſſed Apaſi Prince of Tranſilvania, to Declare himſelf entirely for the Emperour, and receive his Forces to Winter-quarters in his Country: But that Prince, who had been always very crafty and ſubtle in his Negotiations, did ſo poſſeſs the Emperour's Generals, with the danger which he himſelf ſhould incur, and the diſadvantage which would accrue to the Emperor thereby, whoſe benefit it would rather be for him to remain in a Neutrality, That Count Caraffa admitted the policy of his Plea to be good, and concluded a Treaty with the Deputies of Tranſilvania on certain Articles; as namely, That for ſubſiſtence of the Troops, which ſhould be put into the Frontier places of their Country, Michael Apaſi their Prince, ſhould furniſh them every Month with Ten thouſand Buſhels of Wheat and Oats, for which one Moiety ſhould be paid in ready Money, and that the other ſhould be carried to, and laid up in the Magazines, or Store-houſes at reaſonable Rates, which was of more advantage to the Emperor, being thereby diſobliged from the trouble and charge of fetching and tranſporting ſuch quantities of Proviſions from Countries far diſtant from the places where they were to be uſed. And Secondly, it was agreed to give Winter Quarters to the Imperial Troops; upon which General Veterani Ordered and Aſſigned

A Treaty concluded with the Deputies of Tranſilvania.

1687. ſigned the ſeveral places, and Count Caraffa marched from Zatmar to Kalo, giving Directions to General Heuſler diligently to obſerve the motions of the Garriſon at Waradine, and rigorouſly to exact the Contributions of that Country for maintenance of the Troops.

The Vizier prepares for War, and ſends to the Tartars.

The Grand Vizier on the other ſide, who was a perſon of quick vivacity and readineſs of parts, (as we have before declared) finding that the Propoſals made to the Emperor for a Peace, were not likely to prevail; he uſed all imaginable diligence which was poſſible to proſecute the War, living in hopes that the following year would prove more auſpicious to the Ottoman Arms, than thoſe lately paſt. In the firſt place, frequent Meſſages were ſent to the Tartar Han, to haſten their ſpeedy march, and begin the Campaign early, and with one Body to joyn with the Turkiſh Forces, and with another to infeſt the Borders and Confines of Poland; and to make the diverſion there greater and more violent, endeavours were uſed to raiſe diviſions and jealouſies between the Coſacks, who were Subjects to the Poles, and thoſe to the Moſcovites, ſending rich Preſents, and kind Salutes and Promiſes, to invite them to Deſert and Revolt from their Princes, and take part with the Ottoman Forces. But this deſign miſcarried, and took no Effect by the happy arrival of Two Ambaſſadors from the Czar's of Moſcovy at the Court of Poland; where having occaſion of their Union and Friendſhip, nothing was omitted to gain their Alliance, thô their demands were ſo exorbitant, that nothing but a preſent neceſſity could have gained their conceſſion.

The Czar ſends Ambaſſadors to Poland.

The Vizier endeavours to relieve Sigeth.

The Vizier being diſappointed on that ſide, looked cloſely to his buſineſs in the lower Hungary; for having loſt Quinque Eccleſiæ, Siklos, Capiſwar, and a great part of the Bridge of Eſſeck being burnt, the ſtrong Fortreſs of Sigeth ſeemed to be in ſome danger, and lie moſt expoſed to the deſign of the Enemy: To prevent which, the Vizier cauſed the Tartars to advance and paſs the River Drave, and ſo to join with the Turks in the City of Eſſeck; the Tartars, who are the moſt expert Soldiers in the World for deſtroying and laying waſte a Country, having paſſed the Drave, left nothing for thoſe who were to follow after them, carrying away all the Inhabitants with them; and with what Proviſions they had plundered, they ſupplied the ſmall Garriſons which remained to the Turks on the Banks of the Drave; and eſpecial care above all was taken to furniſh Sigeth with all ſorts of Forage and Proviſions, ſo that it was made the chief Magazine of all that Country; for better defence and ſecurity of which, ſeveral new Boats were built to repair the Bridge before Eſſeck, and on the ſides of the River divers ſmall Forts were raiſed, on which Forty Pieces of Canon were Mounted, to prevent all Incurſions of the Enemy, and Attacks on Sigeth; during which ſeaſon of a rigorous Winter, the Tartars plaid their parts to hinder all Convoys laden with Forage and Proviſions to ſupply the Fortreſſes, which the Chriſtians had lately conquered. Howſoever by the diligence of Thinghen, Sergeant-General of Battalia, and the Governor of Quinq; Eccleſiæ, joyning themſelves to the Regiment, commanded by Baron de Pace, they agreed to diſappoint the aforeſaid deſign of the Enemy: To which end having detached Two hundred and Fifty ſelect, or choice Foot, and Five hundred well-diſciplined Horſe and Dragoons, led by Brave and well Experienced Commanders, they ſallied out of their Quarters about Sun-ſet, and the Horſe for better Expedition mounting the Foot behind them, they made ſuch haſte, that before day in the Morning, they lodged themſelves ſecretly near the Town of Sigeth; and without any noiſe conveying themſelves into the Suburbs, about dawning of the day ſet them on Fire; which took with ſo much fury, that in a ſhort time Three hundred Houſes were all in a Flame; the which more increaſed the Conſternation of the Inhabitants and Soldiery, becauſe that many of thoſe Houſes were the Store-houſes, in which were laid up vaſt quantities of Proviſions. Many People ſurprized with the ſudden and unexpected Fire, were ſmothered in the ſmoak, and periſhed in the flames; others at a diſtance betook themſelves with great Confuſion to their Arms, and not knowing as yet where the Enemy or the Danger was, Fired their Canon at random, they knew not where, nor on whom: The Day coming on, the light diſcovered the Enemy, and the Danger in which they were; howſoever in all this Action the Turks killed but Four Troopers, Three Dragoons, and a Corporal of Foot, and leaving their Houſes in the Town, retired to the Caſtle, which gave the Imperialiſts an opportnnity to ſet Fire to the City, and to burn ſome hundreds of Waggons all laden with Proviſions, deſigned for the Camp, and Relief of Alba Regalis. With this ſucceſs the Chriſtians retired, driving away with them ſome few heads of Cattle, a ſmall quantity of Proviſions, and ſuch Plunder as could be taken, and carried away in ſo haſty an Action: To recover which the Turks made a ſally and attacked them in the Arrear, to which, ſhame and confuſion of face gave them Courage; but the Conquerors, whoſe Valour increaſed according to their

A ſurprize given to Sigeth.

The Fear and Conſternation there.

their ſucceſs, made a ſtand, and ſo aſſailed the Enemy, that notwithſtanding all the conſiderations of ſhame, and deſire of revenge, they carried away their Spoils, and honour of the Victory.

The happy conſequence of this Action.

The conſequence of this ſucceſs, (thô the Action in it ſelf was not very great) was yet very conſiderable; for thereby the intercourſe between Quinque Eccleſiæ, Siklos, and other conquered Towns was rendered more free and ſecure, and not only the Peaſants of thoſe Countries brought their Proviſions with readineſs and ſafety to the Market; but even the Raſcians, who were Inhabitants of the Town of Sigeth, came voluntarily in, and ſubmitted themſelves to the Protection of the Emperor. This Action ſerved likewiſe to diſappoint and overthrow the deſign of the Commanders in Eſſeck, who intended an incurſion of Turks and Tartars in Two ſeparate Bodies; but their Proviſions in Sigeth (on which they depended for maintenance of their Forces) being conſumed, that reſolution was put off till a fairer opportunity. Howſoever the Imperial Forces remained Vigilant and Watchful on their Guard, having received frequent Alarums, that the Turks reſolved on ſome ſudden Enterprize to avenge themſelves, and repair their Honour; which General Thingben, and Colonel Pace greatly ſuſpecting, retired to Quinq; Eccleſiæ, from whence they ſent and diſtributed conſiderable quantities of Corn and Flower to Kapoſwar, and other places for ſuſtenance of the Garriſons, giving ſpecial charge to the Governors thereof to be intent and watchful to prevent any ſurprize of the Enemy: And for better ſecurity thereof, the Commiſſary General Count Rabata farther ſupplyed all thoſe places with Victuals, there being no want amongſt them of Arms or Ammunition. Care likewiſe was taken to repair the Breaches at Quinque Eccleſiæ, in as good a form and manner as the Seaſon of the Year would permit: But becauſe the Fortreſs of Siklos lay much expoſed to the attack of the Enemy, being the moſt Frontier Garriſon, they raiſed with admirable induſtry and diligence a half Moon, which they encompaſſed with Paliſadoes, the Seaſon of the Year nor time permitting to fortify it with a Wall, or any other Work. Whilſt things were thus tranſacted, and places ſecured on the Frontiers, no care or circumſpection was omitted for conſervation of Buda, tho' as yet the Walls and Breaches made in it the laſt Siege were not repaired, neither time nor ſeaſon of the year, and perhaps other great employments, not giving time to ſo great a Work, which perhaps we may find neglected for ſome years afterwards; howſoever they laboured for the preſent to clear the Ditches, fill up the Trenches, level the Batteries, Breaſtworks, and other Redoubts; carrying away the Rubbiſh and Ruins of Houſes and Buildings, which had been beaten down, and demoliſhed by the vaſt quantities of Bombs and Carcaſſes which had been thrown into the Town during the laſt Siege: In which Work great quantities of Arms, which lay buried in the Ruins were diſcovered, with Head-pieces, Corſlets, and Scmyters of value: And in digging the Cellars and Vaults, they found many Cheſts filled with rich Houſholdſtuff, with Trunks and Boxes of Writings and ancient Records, amongſt which, as was Reported, were the Charter and Privileges given to that City, with a Regiſter of all paſſages which had happened there, ſince the time that it firſt ſubmitted to the Dominion of the Turk.

The Chriſtian Garriſons ſupplied and relieved.

Buda cleanſed of Rubbiſh.

Rich Goods found in Vaults.

The Paſha endeavours to ſecure Alba Regalis.

Nor were the Turks in the mean time idle and remiſs on their part; for the Paſha of Alba Regalis ſuſpecting that that City would be the next to be attacked, and made the Work and Deſign of the enſuing Campaign; he ſtudiouſly applyed the Soldiers and Workmen to raiſe new Outworks, and repair the old inward Fortifications, which by time, and the neglect of his Predeceſſors were much decayed; and to expedite and quicken this Work, the Soldiers, beſides their ordinary Pay, were encouraged by daily Wages, ſuch as was commonly given to Day-labourers. But to diſturb this Work by frequent Alarums, a party of Huſſars were detached to watch the Avenues about Alba Regulis, and ſometimes to appear in ſight of the Town, and intercept thoſe who ſhould go in or out from thence: Accordingly poſting themſelves in a private way, it was their fortune to meet and ſurprize a party of Turks, of which they killed ſome, and took others, from whom they underſtood that they had been diſpatched by the Paſha there, to carry Letters and Advices to the Grand Vizier at Belgrade: In like manner they encountered another party coming from Zigeth to Alba Regalis, to whom only they gave chaſe, the Turks ſaving themſelves by the ſwiftneſs of their Horſes. Howſoever by the Letters which were intercepted, they came to have a perfect knowledge of the ſtate of that City, and the intentions of the Vizier; It was therein declared, That the Garriſon conſiſted of Four thouſand Fighting men; but much diſcouraged, and in great fears and conſternation, to think that they were to be made the next Sacrifice to the fury of the Chriſtian Arms. Notwithſtanding which, the Paſha encouraged the People of Alba Regalis aſſuring them that he had received late Letters from the Grand Vizier at Bel-

The State of Alba Regalis.

1687. grade, by which he promiſed them ſuch a ſpeedy relief both of Men, Proviſions, Ammunition, and Money, as might enable them to drive the Enemy from the Walls: And that he was ſending a very ſtrong Force to the Frontiers of Sclavonia, Croatia, and the River Dravus, under Command of ſeveral Brave and well-experienced Paſhas.

The Seaſon of the Year much favoured this deſign; for the Rivers, Marſhes, and Fenns were ſo Frozen up, that the Turks found an eaſy paſſage to all parts, which they intended to relieve: Of which the Imperialiſts being very apprehenſive, feared leſt the Enemy, who was got together in great Numbers at Eſſeck, ſhould attempt ſome of the conquered places, and thereby making a diverſion, ſhould introduce their Convoys into Sigeth, Caniſia, and Alba Regalis. But the place, which of any other was ſtraightned moſt for want of Proviſions, was Agria, called by the Hungarians Erla, ſituate on a River of that Name, which about Three Leagues from thence empties it ſelf into the Tibiſcus. This place of it ſelf was but ſmall, but very well Fortified; It is Recorded in Hiſtories that the firſt Siege which the Turks laid to it was in the Year 1552. with an Army of Sixty thouſand Men, when it was not ſtrong either by Art or Nature; but the weakneſs thereof was ſupplied by the Courage and Bravery of the Garriſon, conſiſting only of Two thouſand Hungarian Soldiers, and about Sixty Hungarian Nobles and Gentlemen, who had fled in thither with their Wives and Children, and beſt of their Riches and Moveables, and had ſworn to defend the place to the utmoſt extremity; and to let the Turks underſtand this reſolution, they raiſed a Coffin above the Walls in publick View, for an Evidence or Sign, that they would chuſe Death rather than Captivity. Many great things are ſaid of the Defence of this place, which the Turks battered for the ſpace of Forty days inceſſantly, with Fifty Pieces of Cannon, notwithſtanding which the Defendants abated nothing of their Courage; for tho the Turks aſſaulted them Three times in one day, yet they were as often repulſed, and loſt about Eight thouſand men. The Women alſo ſignalized their Valour above the Nature of their Sex in all theſe Actions; amongſt which (as is reported) there was one, who fought bravely in ſight both of her Mother, and her Husband; but the latter being killed, the Mother adviſed her Daughter to carry away the Dead Corps; but ſhe Anſwered, That ſhe could not do it, until ſhe had firſt revenged his Death; and thereupon taking up the Sword and Buckler of her dead Husband, ſhe fell upon the Turks with ſuch fury, that having killed Three of them with her own hand, ſhe returned to perform the laſt Office to her deceaſed Husband. Several other particular Actions of this Nature, are recounted of the Siege of this Fortreſs, which in fine relieved it ſelf, and cauſed the Turks to raiſe their Siege, whom they purſued ſo vigorouſly in the Rear, that they killed great Numbers of them, and took moſt of their Baggage. And thus did this City continue in the hands of the Hungarians until the year 1596, when it was taken by Mahomet the Third, then in perſon before it, and hath ever ſince that time remained in the hands of the Turks; who now hearing that that place was in great diſtreſs for want of Proviſions; and knowing the importance of it's Situation, endeavoured to ſend it relief by all ways and means which were poſſible.

Agria.

1687.

The Paſha, who Quartered on the Frontiers, was commanded by the Grand Vizier to put Succours into the place; and he alſo being a good Soldier, and ſenſible of the importance thereof, call'd a Council of War, to conſider in what manner this Action might moſt effectually be performed; conſidering whereupon, it was moved, That ſince Tekeli had made ſeveral inſtances to be recruited with Men and Proviſions for attempting ſome great Exploit, That he ſhould accordingly be reinforced with a moderate Number of Tartars, and ſome Turks, and that the care and incumbence of that great work ſhould be committed to his Charge and Conduct.

Propoſals how Agria might be ſupplied.

Count Caraffa, and General Heuſler being adviſed of the Deſign, aſſembled a conſiderable force of their Troops together, and aſſailed the Enemy near to great Waradin on a ſudden, and in a manner of ſurprize; the Tartars, who are not much uſed to make a ſtand againſt well formed Troops, were the firſt who betook themſelves to a ſpeedy Flight, and were ſoon followed by Tekeli and his men; howſoever ſeveral were killed on the place, and ſome Priſoners taken: And ſo both Caraffa, and Heuſler returned back to Debrezin, with the Forage and Spoil which they had gained in that Conflict. This misfortune did not much abate the Spirit of Tekeli; for having been lately ſupplied with a Sum of Money, he made new Levies of Men, and many of his old Soldiers who had formerly deſerted him, returned to him again; ſo that he ſeemed to recover the Credit and Reputation which he had formerly loſt; and having joyned his Forces to thoſe of a Paſha on the Frontiers, and to a rabble of Soldiers, who in a tumultuary manner followed his Colours; he Encamped ſometimes near Temiſwar, then about Giulia, and then near Waradin; from all which which places he ſent Parties abroad to diſcover the poſture of the Enemy, and to ſpy out how they might moſt ſecurely ſuccour Agria, for which the Grand Vizier was extremely preſſing. Nor were the Chriſtians leſs Vigilant to Obſerve and Watch the Motions of the Turks, and of Tekeli; whence it was that ſeveral Parties meeting each other, frequent Skirmiſhes happened, in all which the Huſſars and Germans gained the advantage: So that Tekeli finding the difficulty of carrying relief to Agria, and other places, made Incurſions into the Countries ſubjected to the Emperor, marching with a Body of Turks, Tartars, and a Rabble of new raiſed Soldiers, which ſerved rather for Guides than Combatants. In their way they burnt a Village of no great moment; and paſſed into the Confines of the Town of Segedin; from whence being diſcovered by the Huſſars of the Garriſon, they took the Alarum; and being joyned to a Body of German Foot, they made a ſally on the Enemy, and charged them ſo furiouſly, that Tekeli's new raiſed Soldiers, who were placed in the Front, immediately gave back, and preſſed with fear, ruſhed into the Body of the Turks, which put them into ſuch diſorder, that they were forced to Retreat with conſiderable loſs: Tekeli himſelf being wounded with a Muſquet-ſhot in the Knee, was forced for his Cure to betake himſelf to the Fortreſs of Temiſwar. In the mean time his Princeſs being reſolved to defend her Town of Mongatz, did not only fortify her ſelf therein with a ſtout Garriſon, and ſupplies of Ammunition and Proviſions; but ſent ſeveral Parties of Horſe from the Garriſon, to deſtroy all the Countries round with Fire, and Sword, and thereby to cut off all poſſibility of ſubſiſtence from the Imperialiſts; who having Advice thereof, detached a Party of Dragoons of the Regiment of Magni; who having the fortune to Encounter the Enemy, gave them a total Defeat, killing Fifty of them on the place, of which their Commander was one, and Six Priſoners were taken.

They are prevented.

Tekeli with Money makes Levies.

1687.

Enters into the Country near Segedin.

Is Defeated and Wounded.

Whilſt matters paſſed thus in the Upper Hungary, the City of Agria ſuffered much for want of Proviſions, which greatly diſcouraged both the Inhabitants and the Garriſon, ſo that many deſerted the place; and about Forty of them came to Onoth, declaring themſelves to be Chriſtians, and deſirous to be received into the Church by Baptiſm. But the Imperial Commanders being doubtful of the ſincere Faith of theſe new Converts, were not very forward to receive them into an Aſſociation; of which they being ſenſible, did voluntarily joyn themſelves to a Party then going abroad upon a diſcovery, and ſo bravely behaved themſelves in a Skirmiſh which they happened to have with the Turks, that they killed many of their Brethren with their own hands, and thereby gave evident proofs of their real Converſion.

Forty men of Agria deſert and joyn with the Chriſtians.

All this while no Garriſons were ſuccoured; for not only Agria was in miſerable want, but likewiſe all the Towns in the Lower Hungary, Sclavonia, and Croatia, ſuffered Scarcity and Famine. The Grand Vizier being in great care and pain for thoſe places, ſent ſtrict Commands from Belgrade to the Commanders at Eſſeck, to ſupply all thoſe places with neceſſary Proviſions; for Tranſportation of which the Danube being frozen up, there was no other way left than to carry all by Waggons over the Snow, and Ice; for the Rivers, Lakes, Fenns, and Marſhes being hard Frozen, were ſeldom ſtrong enough to bear Carriages and Waggons, by the moſt direct and neareſt way. And yet ſuch had been the miſery of the late Campagne, that the Countries were laid waſte and deſolate; all the Proviſions and Forage being ſo deſtroyed, that to ſuſtain the Famiſhed Towns, and Countries, Supplies were to be fetched from far diſtant places: To perform which, the Commander of Eſſeck laboured with the utmoſt of his Endeavours, and diſpeeded great Numbers of Waggons laden with all ſorts of Ammunition and Proviſions, to the wanting-places under a ſtrong Convoy. The Imperialiſts having Advice hereof, made a Detatchment of Three hundred Muſqueteers, Three Troops of Curaſſiers belonging to the Regiment of Newburg, and about Two thouſand Four hundred Soldiers, which were Huſſars, and Heyducks: The News of the Motion of theſe Forces ſoon Fled to Caniſia, Sigeth, and other places; where being in ſome fear for the ſafety of their Convoy, thoſe of Sigeth ſent out a ſtrong Party, placing them in Ambuſh about Two Engliſh Miles diſtant from the Town. The Convoy proceeded with what haſte they could, and the Baron d Orlich purſued them as faſt, and overtook them near the place where the Ambuſh was planted, and charged them ſo furiouſly, that he totally Defeated them, Killed One hundred and Twenty on the place, diſperſed the reſt, and made himſelf Maſter of all the Carriages.

1687.

Grand Vizier orders relief.

The Chriſtians endeavour to prevent it.

In the mean time Tekeli was neither idle or negligent in his Arms or Plots; for he had employed his Engines in divers parts to ſollicit the Citizens and Inhabitants of Bartfeld, Eſperies, and Caſſovia to a Revolt; and having droven out the Garriſons, he promiſed to ſupply them with a more numerous Force: Theſe Offers, and the Ways and Methods being happily diſcovered, ſeveral were accuſed for Complices in the Plots contrived by Tekeli are diſcovered

Plot; amongſt which a certain Judge whom Tekeli had formerly employed at Caſſovia, was ſeized and impriſoned: Likewiſe ſeveral Gentlemen and Magiſtrates of thoſe places were known to have entertained Correſpondencies with thoſe of Mongatz and Agria; and that Tekeli had remitted conſiderable Sums of Money to them for execution of their deſign. The Judge being put to the Queſtion on the Wrack, accuſed Two and twenty to have been engaged with him in the Plot. And another Conſpiracy againſt the Life of Count Caraffa was likewiſe diſcovered, in which above Seventy perſons, and ſome of Quality, were engaged. One Radwanski, a principal Author of the late Commotions was put to the Torture; and after he had Signed a Confeſſion, dyed by the Anguiſh of the Wrack; howſoever the Sentence pronounced againſt him, was executed on his Dead Corps, which was to have his Hand and Head cut off, and his Four Quarters diſpoſed in divers places of the City. In like manner Palaſſi, Sekel, Barrock, and Concoud, were Beheaded and Quartered: As alſo the ſame day one Beſſeck, a Counſellor of Newſol, and Weber, a publick Notary, Taſcias, and ſeveral incurred the ſame fate; and ſo had alſo Feldmeyer, a Commiſſary at War, but that he Killed himſelf in Priſon; howſoever that did not hinder, but that the Sentence was Executed on his Dead Body. To examine this Plot, and ſift into the bottom of it, ſo employed Count Caraffa, as for ſome time it deferred the deſign of Bombing Agria; and indeed ſo many were the Conſpirators, that great Executions were acted in divers places, and many alſo received pardon from the Mercy and Clemency of the Emperor; for that his Imperial Majeſty had been well aſſured, there were conſiderable Numbers of poor innocent People engaged in the Plot rather by deluſion, and example of others, than by a Natural Spirit and inclination to a Revolt.

Offenders are puniſhed.

Thô Caraffa was otherwiſe employed, yet there wanted not other active Officers in the Field to watch the Motions of the Enemy, and take the Advantages which did preſent. Baron Orlick was commanded to burn the Bridge, which the Turks had built over the Drave near Eſſeck; and accordingly marched away from Quinq; Eccleſiæ, with Six Companies drawn out from the Regiments of Montecuculi, and Herberville; and being on his march, he received Advice that Eight hundred Janiſaries, and Two hundred Spahees ſelected out of the Flour of the beſt Ottoman Troops, were detached from Eſſeck, with a deſign to intercept a Convoy appointed for the relief of Ziclos, and to take and demoliſh a ſmall Redoubt which had ſome days before been raiſed on the Banks of that River, by order of Count Vechi: Wherefore leaving the deſign of burning the Bridge, Baron Orlick marched directly againſt the Enemy, whom he found attacking the Fort, in which they had already killed a great many men with Granadoes: But ſo ſoon as Orlick appeared, the Turks fell into diſorder and fear; and being furiouſly charged by him, were defeated with the loſs of above Six hundred men killed on the place, amongſt which were two Aga's, and a Bey or Lord; Many Priſoners were taken with all their Baggage, and many Enſigns and Colours, of which Five were ſent to the Emperor by Baron de Hertleben, firſt Captain of that Regiment: And on the Emperor's ſide, Six Sergeants, Five Troopers, and Twelve Dragoons were killed, and many wounded. About the ſame time another Party of Turks was beaten near Zolnoch, Twenty of which were killed, and about Thirty taken Priſoners. Moreover Seven thouſand Turks, Tartars, and Malecontents being joyned together, endeavoured to ſurprize Chonad, which is a Fortreſs ſituate on the River Maros, which falls into the Tibiſcus, near to Segedin: But they met ſo vigorous a repulſe and rude entertainment from the Defendants, that they were forced to deſiſt from their Attacks, and march away with the loſs of Four hundred Soldiers, ſome of which were principal Officers.

Baron Orlick defeats a Party of the Turks.

The Turks worſted in ſeveral Skirmiſhes.

Chonad defends it ſelf againſt the Turks.

Thus the News of one ill ſucceſs coming to Conſtantinople on the Head of another ſtruck the People of all ſorts and conditions with a ſtrange Conſternation; the Government fearing the ill conſequences thereof, endeavoured by all ways and methods of gentleneſs to appeaſe the unquiet and fluctuating Spirits of the People and Soldiers. To do this, there was a neceſſity of vaſt Sums of Money, wherewith to quiet and gratify the Army and Fleet, and to ſatisfy the Tartars, who declared that it was impoſſible for them to move without Money; and which way to raiſe it, was the great difficulty; for the Grand Signior's Treaſure was exhauſted, and the People already tired, and over-burdened with Taxes: Wherefore after a long Debate thereupon in the Divan, it was agreed, That the Jewels and Plate of the Sultans amaſſed in ſeveral Chambers of the Seraglio ſhould be put to ſale, which might have raiſed vaſt Sums of Money, could they have been ſold to their value; but there was an impoſſibility of finding Buyers; for thô the Money could have been found in Conſtantinople, yet there was none, who durſt own to be Maſter of ſo great Riches. In fine, after divers Debates and Expedients propoſed, it was agreed to raiſe Money, by way of Contribution,

The Ottoman Port in great diſorder.

Great want of Money.

1687. bution, on the chief and prime Officers of the Seraglio, and of the Empire, and particularly on Kadees, and Men of the Law and Church, on Cuſtomers, Tax-gatherers, and rich Merchants, ſuch as lived eaſily and idly in their Houſes; it ſeeming reaſonable that ſuch who enjoyed Protection and Safeguard in their peaceable Acquiſitions at home, ſhould maintain and provide them who were venturing their Lives, and fighting in their defence abroad. And whereas the Tartar Han was very preſſing and importunate for Money, without which he could not move or ſerve in this Year's Campagne; it was reſolved to ſend him Fifty thouſand Crowns in Money, and to make up the reſt of his Demands in Diamonds, Scymeters ſtudded with Rubies, Emralds, and Pearls; and with Bucklers ſet with precious Stones, and other things of value taken from the Treaſury in the Seraglio.

Means to raiſe it.

But whilſt this was contriving, an unhappy Sedition and Mutiny aroſe amongſt the Levents, who are Soldiers belonging to the Sea; who having wanted Pay for a long time, came in a tumultuous manner to the Captain Paſha, who is Admiral of the Fleet, to demand it; and ruſhed with ſuch violence into his Houſe, that he had ſcarce time to eſcape out of their hands; and had proceeded to greater extremities, had they not been appeaſed with a ſpeedy tender of Six Months Pay. When theſe things were quieted, a ſtrict Examination was made into the Cauſe and Leaders of this Mutiny, of which ſome were ſtrangled, and about Twenty others were put into a Sack, after their Cuſtom, and caſt into the Sea: Howſoever this Severity did not ſo ſuppreſs this Rabble, but that many of them aſſembled together in the City, where they plundered divers Houſes, and committed a Thouſand Outrages, until ſuch time as Proclamation was made, giving Licence to the People to do themſelves Juſtice, and kill thoſe who made any attempt on their Houſes or Goods; which was the beſt way to deal with a Licentious Tumult; for ſo ſoon as ſuch a Decree was known, the lewd Mobile grew afraid, and diſperſed, moſt of them withdrawing themſelves Aboard their Veſſels.

A Mutiny among the Marine Soldiers.

But not only did the Ottoman Government labour under a want of Money, but of Men alſo. For whereas they expected a Recruit of Forty thouſand men out of Aſia for this Campagne, notwithſtanding the moſt rigorus Commands ſent, to compel all men to the War, there appeared not Six thouſand: For Turcomania had not furniſhed above Two thouſand men; Syria and Paleſtine One thouſand Eight hundred, and the Aſia Minor Two thouſand: The new Levies in and about Conſtantinople did not amount to above Three thouſand Five hundred; and all that could at preſent be found, wherewith to Recruit the Armies both in Hungary, and in the Morea, did not amount unto more than Twenty thouſand men; many of which deſerted in their march, and fled into the Mountains, where they abſconded, and paſſed the moſt part of the Summer, being forced to commit many Outrages for their neceſſary ſubſiſtence. 1687.

Want of men.

Theſe Misfortunes and diſappointments moved the Grand Signior and his Counſellors, to judge a Peace with the Emperor, the moſt compendious Method to ſecure the State of the Ottoman Empire, which was now ſtaggering, and falling with its own weight; and therefore gave orders to the Vizier, then at Belgrade, to endeavour a Peace at any price, and rate whaſoever. Accordingly the Grand Vizier diſpatched a Letter from Belgrade dated the 6th of March, to Prince Herman of Baden, Preſident of the Council of War to the Emperor, giving him to underſtand, That the Sultan, his Lord and Maſter being perſuaded to put an end to this miſerable War, which had long been maintained at the Expence of much Blood, and Treaſure on both ſides. He thought it neceſſary in order thereunto to Appoint a Place, and Nominate Commiſſioners for a Treaty: And to Evidence the reality and ſincere intentions of the Sultan towards a Peace; an Offer was made, as the firſt Preliminary to deliver up Tekeli into the hands of the Emperor. Theſe Propoſals were brought by an Aga as far as Debrezin, from whence he demanded a ſafe Conduct to proceed as far as Eſperies. But to cut this Treaty ſhort, the Emperor commanded Count Caraffa to let the Grand Vizier know, that he would be ready to make peace with the Ottoman Port, upon a Grant or Conceſſion of Three Articles only. Firſt, That the Grand Seignior ſhould pay to him Six Millions of Gold in ſatisfaction of the Ruin and Spoils, which his Troops had committed in Auſtria, and other his Hereditary Provinces. 2dly, That all the Towns and Places, which the Turks poſſeſſed in Hungary ſhould be delivered up to the Emperor, and the Turkiſh Forces withdrawn from that Kingdom. 3*dly*, That in all other matters they ſhould give equal ſatisfaction to the Allies. But as to Tekeli, he being a Subject and a Rebel, the ſurrender of him into the hands of Juſtice, ſeemed not a Motive ſufficient, nor any prevailing Argument, whereon to ground the Foundation of a Peace. Theſe Propoſitions being ſent to Conſtantinople, were conſidered as no other than as an abſolute refuſal to Treat or Hearken to a Peace; which cauſed great Fear and Conſternation at the Port; and which was greatly

The Turks ſeek for Peace.

1687.

The Emperor demands three Articles.

Augmented by the News, which came much about the ſame time with the former: That the Moſcovite Ambaſſadors, who had concluded the Peace already at Leopolis between the Czars and the King of Poland, were arrived at Vienna, and had there alſo entred into the ſame League with the Emperor against the Turks. 1687.

Theſe Ambaſſdors arrived at Vienna on the 18*th* of March, and on the 24*th* were conducted to their Audience with theſe following Ceremonies and Solemnity. In the Firſt place, ſome Companies of the City Trained-Bands, and Garriſon of Vienna marched before, and were followed by Forty Moſcovites clothed in Velvet, and Silk Habits of divers Colours; they were armed with Scymeters adorned and beſet with Diamonds, and other precious Stones, but without Bows, or Quivers which they wore on the Day when they made their Entrance; they were ſtately Mounted on fine Horſes, with Saddles and Houſſes Embroidered with Gold and Pearl, every one having a Footman waiting on him at the ſide of his Horſe: Theſe were followed by Sixteen Coaches, with Six Horſes a-piece, belonging to the Chief Officers of the Court to carry the Train, and Attendants of the Ambaſſadors, with Two Ruſſian Prieſts habited after the manner of their Order: After theſe Coaches marched Sixty Citizens all Clothed in Black Velvet, who carried the Preſents, which the Czars had ſent to his Imperial Majeſty, which conſiſted chiefly of Sables, and other rich Furrs, the Teeth of Fiſh, rich Quivers Embroidered with Gold and Silver, Pearls, and precious Stones, with Bows and Arrows ſuitable thereunto. After all theſe came a Moſcovite alone, Mounted on a brave Horſe, carrying the Czars Letter to the Emperor on his Head; and was followed by Two Coaches with Six Horſes belonging to the Perſon of the Emperor, in one of which was the Great Chancellor of Moſcovy, with another of the Ambaſſadors; and in the ſecond was he that was chief in the Commiſſion of the Embaſſy, accompanied by Noblemen appointed by the Emperor to receive them; and in this Order were conducted to the Palace-Yard, where Three Companies were drawn up with their Arms preſented: The Firſt which alighted at the Gate of the Palace, were the Moſcovites which rode on Horſeback: Then the Secretary with the Letter, and the Ambaſſadors being deſcended into the inward Court, they were met at the foot of the Stairs by the Prince of Swartzemberg, and by the P. of Dietrichſtein, High-Steward of the Emperor's Houſhold in the Knight's Hall; who conducted them into the Lobby before the Chamber of Audience, where leaving their Scymeters, and other Arms in the Charge and Keeping of the Firſt Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, they were admitted to the Preſence of the Emperor, of whom they received a favourable Audience. After which they were conducted back again in the ſame order, having firſt been ſumptuouſly treated at a Dinner in the Imperial Court. In ſhort, after divers Conferences, an Alliance and League was concluded with them, on the ſame Foot and Articles, as had been the laſt Year agreed between the Czars, and King of Poland; and ſo on the 5*th* of April the Four Ambaſſadors received their Audience of Congé, and ſoon afterwards Three of them returned to their own Country: And one proceeded to Venice, where he was received with thoſe Formalities which that Senate always uſes towards Ambaſſadors of that Quality. April. 1687.

The Grand Vizier being well aſſured by all theſe Proceedings, that there was no further place of hope left for obtaining Peace, commanded the Inhabitants of all places in ſubjection to the Grand Seignior, to drive their Cattel under the Reach and Protection of thoſe Towns, which were defended with Cannon; and to carry their Grain, and Forage, and Moveables into Fortified places, under Obedience of the Grand Seignior. They finiſhed their Bridge of Boats at Peter Waradin, and with all the diligence imaginable they laboured to repair the Bridge of Eſſeck; which they having Finiſhed with admirable Expedition, cauſed ſeveral of their Troops to paſs the ſame, and make their Excurſions to the very Gates of Quinque Eccleſiæ, which giving ſome jealouſy, that the Turks intended to Beſiege that Place, Three hundred Huſſars, and Two hundred Heiducks were ſent therein to reinforce the Garriſon.

At the ſame time the Count de Tinghen was ordered with a Detachment of Eight hundred Germans, and Four hundred Heiducks, with One hundred Horſe belonging to Siklos, and ſome other Troops to take a View of the Paſſage over the Drave: And having paſſed that River on the 8*th* of June, where joyning with ſome Troops under the Command of Baron Orlick, he drove away from the Paſtures near Walpo, Two hundred Head of Cattel, and One hundred Horſe, and ſet Fire to about One hundred ſmall Cottages, which had been raiſed ſince the late Deſolation; and being in their Retreat Encountred by a Party of One hundred Spahees, and Three hundred Janiſaries, they totally defeated them, Killing about Seventy on the place, and taking ſeveral Priſoners, with the loſs only of a Lieutenant, and of Eight or Ten Common Soldiers Wounded. About the ſame time a 1687. tachment from the Garriſon of Zolnock, conſiſting of Four hundred Huſſars, met another ſtrong Party of Turks belonging to Agria, which they charged with ſuch Bravery, that after a very ſharp Conflict, the Turks were forced to retire with the loſs almoſt of Two hundred men; Seven and thirty Priſoners were taken, with many Horſes, and a conſiderable part of their Baggage: Amongſt which they found a Letter from the Paſha of Agria to the Vizier, ſetting forth the miſerable ſcarcity of all Proviſions in that place, as alſo of Ammunition; and that the Famine was ſo great, that they were forced to Eat Horſe-Fleſh, and Dogs; by reaſon of which many of the Garriſon had deſerted, and unleſs ſpeedily relieved, they ſhould be forced to ſurrender the Town. At length the Paſha of Agria being droven to deſperate neceſſities, ſent to a Village between Buda and Agria, forthwith to bring them Proviſions upon pain of Military Execution; of which Baron Beck being advertiſed by the Inhabitants, immediately detached a Party of Five hundred men, to Attend and Watch this Motion of the Turks; in which Adventure, he had the Fortune to meet with them, killing many, and taking ſome Priſoners, and purſuing the reſt to the Walls of Agria.

Agria in diſtreſs.

This was the beginning of the Campaigne, and a Prelude to the happy Succeſſes of the Enſuing Year; when News came that the Grand Vizier was marching at the Head of a Numerous Army towards Waradin, the Number of which was Reported to amount unto Fifty thouſand men, according to the account which ſome Spyes pretended to have received from the Muſter-Roll, taken the 27th of April, in the Plains of Salankemen near Belgrade; as folſoweth: 1687.

The Grand Vizier, Janiſaries	7000
Paſha of Boſna, Spahees	4000
Paſha of G. Waradin, Spahees	1000
Beglerbey of Romelia, Janiſaries	2400
Paſha of Soria, Spahees	4000
Beglerby of Sebaſtia, Spahees	2500
Paſha of Aleppo, Janiſaries	3000
Paſha of Damaſcus, Janiſaries	4000
Paſha of Nicopolis, Janiſaries	11400
Paſha of Karahitar, Volontiers	8000
Aga of the Artillery Granadiers.	1100
	48400

To this 600 Miners are to be added;
1400 Camels of Burden,
364 Oxen to draw the Artillery,
400 Waggons with Ammunition,
45 heavy Pieces of Cannon,
28 Lighter for the Field.

All which belonged to the Army of the Grand Vizier, not accounting the Tartars, nor the Hungarian Army under Tekeli; nor Garriſons and Parties diſperſed in divers parts. 1687.

On the other ſide, on the 4th of June, the Duke of Loraine arrived at Buda, where he was received with Three Salvoes of all the Cannon from the Town; and having taken an account of the Horſes, and ſurveyed the Fortifications, and given Command for raiſing New Works, to which Employment Four thouſand Soldiers and Peaſants were appointed; he departed thence on the 7th, taking his march towards the Drave with a part of his Army; he deſigned to Encamp near the Bridge of Eſſeck, where Count Cherſſemberg was to joyn him with Nine Regiments; And let us here take a Computation in like manner of the Imperial Army, as we have done of the Turks. Of Dragoons there were Nine Regiments. 1687.

Of Lodron
Stirum
Caſtelli
Serau
Herbeville
Savoy
Thun
Magni Kuſſel.

The firſt of which Dragoons conſiſted of Eleven hundred men, all the others of Eight hundred each, making in all Seven thouſand Five hundred men.

The Cavalry conſiſted of Nineteen Regiments.

Of Saxelauemburg
Caprara
Dunewald
Palſi
Caraſſa
Gondola
Taff
Newbourg
Montecuculi
Veterani
Piccolomini
Heuſler
Commercy
Gotz
Hannover
Saint Croix
Furſtemberg
Pax
Truchs

Theſe Regiments amounting unto Eight hundred men each, compleated the Number of Fifteen thouſand Two hundred men. To theſe we are to add Seven and

The number of the Chriſtian Army.

and twenty Regiments of Infantry, of which Five and twenty conſiſted of One thouſand Five hundred men each, and Keiſerſtein's, and Stadel's Regiments of Two thouſand men each, ſo that the whole Number of the Infantry amounted in all unto Forty one thouſand Five hundred men; ſo the whole Army, according to this Computation, amounted to Sixty four thouſand Two hundred men, beſides Pioniers, Gunners, and Attendants on the Camp.

The Names of the Regiments of the Infantry were as followeth:

Of Count Erneſt of Staremberg
- Leſley
- Keyſerſtein
- Baden

De Croy
- Mansfield
- Salms

Maximilian de Staremberg
- Serini
- Neubourg
- Souches
- Scherſtemberg
- Stadel
- Diepenthal

Count Guey de Staremberg
- Tinben
- Meternich
- Beck
- Wallis
- Aſpremont
- Nigrelli
- Heuſler
- Averſperg
- The Young Prince of Loraine
- Hourchin
- Furſtemberg
- Straſler

June 1687.

This being the State of the Chriſtian Army, conſiſting of Sixty four thouſand Men plentifully ſupplied with all ſorts of Ammunition, and much ſuperior to that of the Turks in Numbers, and much more for Diſcipline by Inſtruction of the Commanders, and Bravery of the Soldiers; The Duke of Loraine on the Twelfth of June proceeded on his march to the River of Sarawitz, and in his way received Intelligence, that Agria was in ſuch extreme want of Proviſions, and that the Famine there was ſo great, that unleſs the Grand Vizier did by force of Arms ſuccour the City with Victuals, and Ammunition, the Place would be conſtrained to ſurrender it ſelf into the hands of the Enemy; to prevent which, and to relieve the Town, the Vizier appointed a Body of Eight thouſand Turks, and Four thouſand Tartars immediately to paſs the Bridge at Peter-Waradin to Convoy the Waggons and Camels laden with Proviſions, and force their way into Agria. Upon this Advice the Duke of Loraine diſpatched an Expreſs to Count Caraſſa, with Orders to draw out the Twelve Regiments Encamped between Onoc, and Zolnock, and therewith to interrupt and ſtop the paſſage of the Enemy; but ſuch was the diligence of the Turks, that marching by ſecret Ways, they miſſed of Caraſſa; and fell in with a weaker Body of Col. Heuſler; who having killed about Sixty Turks, forced one part of them to retire back to Peter-Waradin, whilſt others more bold and forward than the reſt, each man carrying a Sack of Meal behind him on his Horſe, got into Agria, which was ſufficient to afford them a ſubſiſtence for a ſhort time.

Succour brought to Agria.

The Elector of Bavaria comes to the Camp.

In the mean time the Forces began to gather near Barchan, which was the place appointed for the General Rendezvous: Thither came alſo the Troops of Zolnoc, which were to be commanded by the Elector of Bavaria, who very ſeaſonably arrived at the Camp to the great joy and encouragement of the whole Army: With him alſo came Prince Lewis of Baden, a Perſon of admirable Prudence and Courage; and of ſuch experience and fortunate ſucceſs, that the Elector repoſed great confidence in his Conduct. The Army being put into a fit poſture and condition to march, intelligence was brought that the Duke of Loraine was far advanced on his way towards Oſeck; upon which no time was admitted to follow him; but the way being long, and the Ways deep and broken by the late Rains, the Army moved ſlowly, and could not unite ſo ſpeedily with the Duke of Loraine as was expected: But at length with Induſtry, Time, and Patience, the Armies joyned, when News came that the Enemy in great Numbers were aſſembled near Peter-Waradin, and had formed a Bridge over the Tibiſcus, to equal the convenience of which, with that of the Enemy, and maintain a Correſpondence with Forces on the other ſide, the Duke of Loraine cauſed another to be built near Tolna, and Foituar, the better to facilitate a Conjunction with the Imperial Arms.

Eſſeck to be firſt attacked.

It was now made known, that the Campaign was to begin with the attack of the Town of Eſſeck, that from thence a way might be opened to the Conqueſt of Belgrade; in order unto which, General Dunewalt, with ſome German Regiments, and Troops belonging to Croatia, and the adjacent Countries, was commanded to march towards Verovitza, and there to expect farther Orders from the Duke of Loraine.

June 1687.

The Troops of Croatia, Commanded by Count Philip de la Torre in the place of Dunebolt, (who was Sick at Vienna) marched in a ſtrong Body with very good order, and a large Train of Artillery, provided by the Chamber of Stiria, and happily joyned with Dunewalt. The Duke of Loraine having left a ſtrong Party to defend the Bridge, which he had made over the Danube, moved his Camp from Mohatz, and without any oppoſition in the leaſt, pitched again near to Darda on the 24th of June, which is a Fortreſs that covers one end of the Bridge at Oſeck.

The Grand Vizier deſired to ſuccour Eſſeck.

The next day the Imperialiſts diſcover'd from their Camp a certain number of Turks, who had lodged themſelves in the Marſh, which began to be dry, that they might take a ſurvey of the Chriſtian Camp; againſt which a ſmall Party being ſent, they immediately retired to give advice unto the Town of Oſeck, of the near approach of the Enemy: Againſt this Party of Turks many more than thoſe appointed, were out of Curioſity carried to the Skirmiſh, to ſee who thoſe were who called ſo frankly to them in the French Language. The News being brought to Oſeck, or Eſſeck, Expreſſes were diſpatched one after the other to the Vizier, (who was then Encamped with the Ottoman Army near to Peter-Waradin) earneſtly deſiring him to march immediately to their Succour.

June.

The Imperialiſts poſſeſs themſelves of Bridges, and a Fort built by the Turks.

In the mean time the Duke of Loraine having diſpoſed his Army in an exact military poſture, he went himſelf in perſon with a Body of about Six hundred Horſe to take a view of the Neighbouring Paſſes; and next Morning being the 25th of June, he Decamped with the whole Army, and commanded the Count of Schertemberg, Major-General of the Infantry, to ſee whether the Bridges were repaired; and having advanced at a good diſtance before, without any diſcovery; it was reſolved to march with the whole Army as far as Uttona, where Orders had been given to provide all Materials for making a Bridge to paſs the Drave. But before this Deſign was put in Execution, Souches received Orders, with a Party of One thouſand Three hundred Muſquetiers, together with Count Guido de Staremberg, to march along the Banks of the Drave, upon a diſcovery which was ſo lucky, that he ſoon perceived certain little Bridges, railed on each ſide, ſtrong, and covered with Earth very artificially made; not far from which, there was a Fort with ſome Guns, and a Garriſon of about Four hundred Soldiers, that were Janiſaries. As the Imperialiſts approached, the Turks received them with ſuch a Volley of ſhot, as at firſt put them into ſome diſorder; but being animated by the Bravery of Souches and Staremberg, they immediately inveſted the Fort with ſuch courage, as forced the Turks to abandon the place with the loſs of Two hundred men, and the remainder to fly to Eſſeck, to the Walls of which the Imperialiſts ſo nearly purſued them, that they had almoſt entred with them into the Gates; howſoever they took poſſeſſion of the Fort, and burnt that part of the long Bridge, for about the ſpace of Five hundred Paces in length, which the Turks had lately repaired with Rayls, and covered with Earth.

The Vizier Orders his Army to march.

The Garriſon of Eſſeck being in great fear at the ſo near approach of the Chriſtian Army, diſpatched Meſſenger after Meſſenger, to adviſe the Vizier of their danger, and that they were endeavouring to paſs the Drave with Bridges; upon which Intelligence the Vizier cauſed the greateſt part of his Forces to march, remaining himſelf behind, in expectation of the Aſiatick Troops, who moved with leſs diligence, than the preſent preſſure of Affairs did require.

Floods break the Bridges.

The Marſhes repaired.

Thô the Duke of Loraine was not ignorant that the greateſt part of the Turkiſh Army lay Encamped near Eſſeck; yet being very deſirous to Engage the Enemy, notwithſtanding their Entrenchments, he endeavoured to paſs the River at Uttona, being a ſmall Redoubt, or Fortreſs, which P. Lewis of Baden had raiſed the year before, being a very convenient Paſs for the Forces; for that falling down from thence with the Stream, they might conveniently be Landed at Valpo, about Four Leagues diſtant from Oſeck. To this End the Infantry was commanded to advance towards Siclós, with the Cavalry of Montecuculi, Ladron, and Hanover; the reſt of the Army was commanded to keep their Station near Darda. In the mean time whilſt the Bridges were preparing, ſuch great Floods of Snow-waters fell from the Mountains of Stiria, and Carinthia, that the Drave ſwelled beyond its Banks with a moſt rapid Stream, and the Marſhes or Moraſſes were filled in ſuch manner, that it was very difficult to lay the Bridges, or raiſe Ways over the Marſhes, which were afterwards made firm and paſſable, by vaſt quantities of Bruſh and Faggots, which the Soldiers had cut and laid: And that no time might be loſt, whilſt the Waters were abating, Orders were diſpatched unto General Dunewalt, who was in Croatia with ſeveral Thouſands of the Inhabitants of that Country, to ſecure the paſſage of thoſe Boats, which were appointed to carry Proviſions and Ammunition to the Army from Stiria. Dunewalt having obſerved theſe Orders, the Duke of Loraine Detached a ſmall Party to view and diſcover the face and 1687. poſture of the Enemy; and to eſpy and take an account of what Troops lay in the way to oppoſe their Paſſage. This Party being returned with intelligence that the Way was clear and open; the Imperialiſts without any oppoſition poſted themſelves on a high Ground near Walpo, over-againſt Uttona; where the Duke of Loraine in Perſon paſſed the River, to lay out the Ground, and open the Trenches for better Security to the Army in their Paſſage.

Siaus Paſha at Eſſeck.

In the mean time the Heyducks had the Fortune to take Six Turks near to Eſſeck, who declared upon Oath that the Grand Vizier was ſtill at Peter-Waradin, and that Siaus, Paſha of Aleppo was come into Eſſeck with Two thouſand men, where they had raiſed a Trench of about Two thouſand Paces in length.

Howſoever the Duke reſolving to paſs the Drave, Ferried over in Boats a conſiderable Number of Dragoons, and German Foot, to labour in digging the Trenches, which were intended to ſecure the Paſſage of the whole Army, which was a moſt immenſe Labour, and ſuch (as we may ſay) had not been performed in many preceeding Ages, for that Thirty thouſand Faggots were not ſufficient for ſettling the Marſhes, which by reaſon of the abundant Rains were ſcarce paſſable; beſides the raiſing of Five and twenty Bridges in divers places, all which was performed with unexpreſſible induſtry in the ſpace of Four days; the Duke of Loraine himſelf in perſon encouraging and lending a helpful hand unto the Work: Howſoever this Work was not done without ſome loſs and damage in the Tranſportation of the Horſe, Baggage, and Cannon.

A laborious Work.

Some part of the Imperial Infantry having paſſed the Drave in Boats, and followed by the Croats of Dunewalt's Regiment; the Duke of Loraine, in the next place, cauſed all the remaining Infantry to paſs as faſt, and in as full Bodies, as the Bridges would allow; ſo that they might be able to make a reſiſtance againſt any Force, which they expected might be ſent from Eſſeck to interrupt their Paſſage; but the Turks moved not, but remained ſtill in their Trenches, all the time that the Army, Cannon, and Baggage were with Boats and Bridges Tranſporting from one ſide of the River unto the other: Before which was finiſhed, they were forced to withdraw their main Bridge, by reaſon of the fall of great Trees, which the Turks above about the parts of Kaniſia had purpoſely Cut down, and Launched out into the Torrent; that being carried down with a mighty Rapid Stream, increaſed by an abundance of Rains, ſerved very much to break and overthrow their Bridges: Howſoever in a ſhort time the Bridge was repaired, and then the Thirteen Regiments of Horſe, which were left to cover the Bridge, paſſed over to the reſt of the Army.

Trees cut and thrown into the Stream by the Turks.

The Imperial Forces under the Duke of Loraine being thus paſſed, General Caprara with his Horſe was commanded to do the like at Uttona, which was performed the 12*th* of July; and alſo the Elector of Bavaria paſſed his Forces on the 13*th*, together with Nineteen Imperial Regiments near Siklos. Thus the whole Army being joyned on the other ſide of the Drave, on the 15*th* the Generals Dined together, and in the Afternoon made a ſhort march towards Walpo, where the day following they Encamped near to the Caſtle, which was defended by a good Garriſon. The ſame day General Heuſler joyned the Army, as did alſo Count Bargozzi with Two thouſand Hungarians.

July.

The Army paſſed the Drave.

The 17*th* very early in the Morning, the Quarter-Maſter-General was commanded to advance, as were alſo thoſe who had the care of the Forage committed to them; and Heuſler with a Party of Four hundred Croats was ordered to ſeek out, and take a view of the Enemies Camp; in his way unto which, he fell in with ſome Thouſands of them, which he charged ſo bravely, that he obliged them to Retreat, and purſued them to a narrow Paſs, where he thought fit to ſtop, fearing ſome Ambuſcade, or private deſign to enſnare him: And having poſted his Soldiers in good order, he intended to repoſe a while, and take a little Breath; and having called for a Glaſs of Wine, whilſt he was drinking a Muſquet-ſhot fired from a Neighbouring Wood, paſſed his Left-Leg from one ſide to the other; and having grated a little on the Boan, it was thought that it might require ſome time to Cure; ſo he repoſed that Night near Carazizza, by which ran a ſmall Stream, ſending his Spyes abroad to prevent ſurprizal.

Marches forward.

Heuſler wounded.

July.

On the 18*th* the whole Army marched, and pitched that Night about Two Engliſh Miles diſtant from Eſſeck, where ſome Parties of the Turks being abroad, retired to their main Camp. The next Morning by Break of Day, the Duke of Loraine commanded the whole Army to advance in order of Battel: And becauſe the Ways were narrow, the Woods and Buſhes thick, Commands were given to the Pioniers, and Labourers to cut down the Trees, and Under-Woods, and ſo to open the Ways, that the Army might march in Two Lines; which was done with ſuch expedition and induſtry, that the Troops marched in that admirable order, as evidenced the Conduct of one of the greateſt Captains in the World; and in this manner they appeared in ſight of the Enemy.

The Army marches in Battalia.

1687.

The Viziers ſtrongly encamped.

Are aſſiſted by the French.

The Grand Vizier with a Numerous Army and a well-ordered Camp, lodged under Eſſeck, fortified with a deep and regular Trench, and guarded with a good number of Cannon, in an open Plain, about a Muſquet-ſhot from a Wood. The Chriſtians were much ſurprized to find the Turks thus regularly Encamped, which was an Art unknown to them till now; being therein inſtructed by ſome French Engeniers, and Captains, with Soldiers of the ſame Nation, under the Command of the Marqueſs of Perſan, a perſon well eſteemed by the Grand Seignior, and in favour with the Vizier: For now it was, that the French Nation began not only to enter into an intereſt and confidence with the Turks, by the aſſiſtance they gave them of Officers and Enginiers; but farther obliged the whole City of Conſtantinople, with Proviſions of Rice and Wheat brought from Alexandria on 14 Sail of French Ships, when the City was labouring under great want, and Famine almoſt of all neceſſaries for Life.

The Tur[illegible] keep wit[illegible] in their Camp.

Some Croats cut off.

The manner of the Turkiſh Camp.

The Chriſtian Army being now come in ſight of the Turkiſh Camp; it was expected that the Grand Vizier would have marched out, and given them Battle, which the Chriſtian Generals bravely offer'd, and the Soldiers deſired with a Courage anſwerable to their former Succeſſes: But the Turks finding it their advantage to remain within their Trenches, made uſe of their Cannon againſt the Imperial Camp; which lying open, and undefended without Works or Trenches, did great execution both againſt the Horſe and Men; and amongſt other Officers Count Francis Palfy, who was Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiment, which belonged to the General of that name, was ſhot in the Head by a Cannon Bullet. During the time that the Armies lay in this poſture ſeveral Skirmiſhes hapned with various Succeſſes; and particularly one proved not very fortunate to a party of Croats, who being on Foot, and ill armed, were unskilfully engaged, and too far advanced by the raſhneſs of their Commanders; and they firing all their Muſquets at one volly, were left open to the Enemy; and not being ſeconded by other Troops, above one half of them were killed upon the place, the reſt retiring to the main Body. In this manner did the Turks make frequent Sallies on the Chriſtian Camp, endeavouring to draw them into Ambuſcades, but not to an equal and fair Battle, which the Vizier was not willing to adventure, but rather to watch advantages within his Camp, which was ſtrongly fortified with Trenches, Paliſadoes and Cannon, having a Line drawn from the River Drave to a Wood, which with a Moraſs, and the River Valkowar to the left, Flanked with the Town of Oſeck, and covered behind with the Caſtle Valkovar, and the Danube, by which all Proviſons were carried in great abundance; which render'd the Camp impregnable, and not to be focred either by Arms or Famine: Whilſt it was impoſſible for the Chriſtian Army to continue long in that poſture, both becauſe they lay expoſed to One hundred and fifty Pieces of Cannon of the Turks, which plaid continually upon them, thô returned with like Damage again from thoſe of the Chriſtians: And alſo, becauſe they began in that place to want both Forage and Proviſions, ſo that there ſeemed a neceſſity for the Army to retire.

Reaſons for a Retreat.

Agreed at the Chriſtian Camp.

Whereupon the Duke of Loraine obſerving that after he had for the ſpace of 46 hours bid defiance to the Turkiſh Army, and that he could on no Terms provoke them to a Battle: He aſſembled a Council of War, where many things being alledged, in reference to the ſtrong Encampment of the Turks, their Reſolution of keeping within their Trenches, which were not to be forced without danger of loſing the whole Chriſtian Army; and the want of Forage and Proviſions in their own Camp, which were not to be ſupplyed in thoſe places; it was reſolved to make a Retreat, and repaſs the Drave.

Conduct in the Retreat

Againſt the Attacks of the Turks.

Such an Action as this was now become difficult, and the Army not to be ſecured, but by the skill and bravery of ſuch Generals: For the Turks obſerving the Retreat of their Enemies, and believing it to be a kind of Flight, either out of weakneſs in Strength, or want of Courage, made many Aſſaults and Attacks on the Rear, which the Generals with ſuch admirable Art, Martial conduct, and Diſcipline defended, that in all the attempts they made, they were repulſed: Five Regiments under the Command of Piccolomini were commanded to March before to Siklos; and the reſt of the Army towards Walpo, drawn into two Lines, often facing the Turks to the Van, to the Rear, and on each ſide; in ſuch manner, that it was almoſt impoſſible to break in upon them. The Turks, who had not for ſome years ſeen the backs of their Enemies, and ſeldom a Retreat made by them, full of vain Glory, and hopes of gaining a Victory preſſed very hard on the Rear, which being defended by the Valour, and excellent Conduct of that magnanimous, and generous Prince the Elector of Bavaria, with the aſſiſtance of Prince Lewis of Baden, whoſe Arms and Conduct were dreaded by the Turks. There was little, or no advantage obtained that day by the Enemy, the Camp being that night pitched near Walpo.

1687.

The day following they proceeded in their March without any conſiderable oppoſition from the Enemy, and encamped near the Drave, between Walpo and Uſſona; only the Foragers thinking ſemſelves ſo ſecure were attacked by the Enemy with the loſs of many Men and Horſe. The Elector of Bavaria having that day the command of his own Wing which was the Van-gard, cauſed almoſt all his Baggage to paſs the Drave, which much diſappointed the deſign of the Enemy: And the Duke of Loraine gave order, that all the Baggage, as well that belonging to the Soldiers, as to the Commanders, which could be tranſported that night, ſhould be paſſed over: And the next day the Cavalry of the right Wing, after them the left Wing, then the Baggage of the Infantry; and the day following all the Infantry it ſelf were paſſed over; all which being performed with moſt admirable order and conduct, the Bridges were broken, and the Boats burnt and ſunk. As the Chriſtian Leaders ſhewed themſelves great and valiant Captains; ſo the Turks gave no leſs proofs of their Cowardiſe, who might have made uſe of this advantage to the total deſtruction of the Chriſtian Army, had not the Divine Hand preſerved them for more ſignal Victories, and for the more ſevere puniſhment of the Turks; howſoever the Grand Vizier fancying this Retreat to be an entire Victory, diſpatched Curriers with the News thereof to Conſtantinople, and to all parts of the Empire, glorying that he had now recover'd the loſt Honour of the Ottoman power, not doubting but in a ſhort time to regain Buda, and all the conquer'd places, and to reſtore peace, and quietneſs once more with Honour to the Muſſelmin Dominions. This Opinion was celebrated in the Turkiſh Camp with Joy and Triumph, and at the Port, and remote parts of the Empire with divers days of Feſtival, all believing that the ſide of Fortune was now turned under the auſpicious Conduct of this Vizier, from whom great things, and almoſt Miracles were expected: In purſuance of this fancy and belief, ſo ſoon as the Imperialiſts had withdrawn from Eſſeck, the Turks detached a Body of Four thouſand Horſe towards Darda, with Orders to proceed thence to Mohatz, where they deſigned, if poſſible to burn all the Boats laden with Ammunition and Proviſion belonging to the Chriſtian Army: But this deſign was prevented by the March of Piccolomini, with ſome Regiments of Huſſars and Croats, and of Count Cohari, who with Two thouſand Hungarians was commanded to paſs that way, and thence to proceed to joyn with the Marquis Doria, and reinforce him in the Blocade of Agria: Howſoever, the expedition of the Four thouſand Turkiſh Horſe was not altogether unſucceſsful; for it was their fortune to meet with One hundred and fifty Waggons belonging to the Bavarian Troops, under the Convoy only of Five hundred Croats, commanded by that brave Soldier Count Orlick; who notwithſtanding the inequality of numbers, ſuſtained the Shock, and at laſt orderly retreated by the help of a Moraſs, with the loſs of One hundred Men, which the Turks at their return to the Camp, reported for a ſignal Victory.

The manner how the Chriſtians repaſſed the Drave.

The Joy which the Turks make for this Succeſs.

Parties ſent by the Turks to Darda.

July.

The main Body of the Chriſtian Army continuing their March, on the 28th pitched their Camp, about a League diſtant from Mohatz, before which place all the Boats laden with Ammunition and Proviſions for ſuſtenance of the Army were then Riding in the River; and here it was that Five thouſand Foot, and One thouſand Horſe from the Circles of Suabia, and Franconia joyned with the Army under the command of the Marquis Charles Guſtavus of Baden Durlach; all choiſe and ſelect Men, veterane Soldiers, and ſo well armed and clothed, that in their March towards the Camp, the Emperor took delight to ſee them paſs through the Streets of Vienna: With theſe came alſo Count Rabata, Commiſſary General, bringing Money with him for the Subſiſtence and Payment of the Army; in which Office he ſo well acquitted himſelf for three or four years paſt, that much of the health, and convenient ſubſiſtence of the Army, may well be attributed to his Induſtry and Mannagment, by which all things were provided in ſuch plenty, that there was little need of ſending Foragers abroad with hazard and danger, for relief of the Camp. And indeed by the Succeſſes of this year, it plainly appeared how great a Service ſuch good Managment was; for want of which the Imperialiſts had not of late ſuffered in any thing a greater loſs than in their Foragers, who wandering abroad without care, or due circumſpection, were often ſurprized by the Enemy with the loſs of their Horſes, and many of their Lives.

The Chriſtian Army reinforced.

Loſs by the Foragers.

The Grand Vizier finding that the Chriſtian Army had repaſſed the Drave, did believe that they would not ſit idle, but undertake ſome Enterpriſe or other, either by the Siege of Sigher, or ſome other place of importance; to prevent which by giving encouragement to the ſeveral Garriſons, the Vizier diſpatched Expreſſes to all parts, to let them know that in caſe of a Siege, they ſhould manfully reſiſt, aſſuring them that in a ſhort time, he would bring them Relief, and ſuch Succour as they ſhould deſire.

1687. On the other ſide the Duke of Loraine ſeriouſly conſidering what Courſe the Enemy might in probability follow, and effect; he imagined, that their Deſign might be, by a ſtrong Convoy of Horſe to Relieve Agria with Proviſions; of which (as we have ſaid) there had been a long want; and ſuch a ſcarcity as might reaſonably be termed a Famine: To intercept this Relief Count Ziacchi with Two thouſand Hungarians, and Count Veterani with five Regiments of Horſe, were commanded to paſs the Danube, and draw towards Agria. It was reſolved alſo to fortify Mohatz, and put a Garriſon into it of Four thouſand Men; but upon News brought to the Generals, that the Turks one the 29th of July had begun to paſs the Drave near Eſſeck, all the Councils and Meaſures were changed; the Detachments, were recalled back to the main Body, the Bridges broken, the Boats laden with Proviſions order'd to a certain Iſland, there to remain for better ſecurity; and in fine all things were diſpoſed for a Field Battle, which the Chriſtian Soldiers had long deſired, and to ſee their Enemy in the open Plain, rather than fortified in the Trenches of a Camp, or within the Walls of a City.

Means to intercept relief of Agria.

A Field Battle deſigned.

The Turks having paſſed the River, advanced towards Darda, and entrenched themſelves very ſtrongly between certain Moraſſes, or Marſhes in that Country near Baranwar, about a League from the Imperial Camp, where they much troubled and infeſted the Foragers belonging to the Chriſtian Army.

Auguſt. 1687.

The Duke of Loraine being very deſirous to intice the Turks to a Battle, retreated towards Mohatz, which the Vizier interpreting as a kind of Flight, cauſed many Thouſands of Turks and Tartars to advance; which being diſcover'd by the German Out-guards gave an Allarum to the whole Army, and put them all into form of Battle; but nothing thereupon happened, but only a Skirmiſh between the Chriſtian Volontiers and the advanced Body, the firſt of which being ſupported by ſome Regiments of Horſe, that party of the Enemy was forced to Retire, and paſs the Bridge.

A Skirmiſh.

The Duke of Mantoua at the Camp.

About this time, Ferdinand Charles, the third Duke of Mantoua, being deſirous to ſee, and learn the Art of War mannaged by the firſt and braveſt Captains of the World, left the Air, and pleaſant Places and Gardens of Italy, to obſerve the Martial exploits acted in the more groſs Air of Hungary; and being attended with an Equipage agreeable, he enter'd the Chriſtian Camp about the beginning of the Month of Auguſt, where he was received by the Duke of Loraine, the Elector of Bavaria, and the other Generals with all the marks and demonſtrations of Reſpect, and Honour due to a Prince of ſuch Sublime Birth and Dignity. 1687.

As the Chriſtian Army retreated, the Turks advanced, ſuppoſing that the Retreat was an aſſured evidence of their weakneſs. The Duke of Loraine was amazed, and glad to obſerve this confidence in the Turk, whom he had for a long time endeavoured to allure, and decoy into a Battle; of which there was a kind of a neceſſity at preſent, for the groſs Air of that Seaſon became very pernicious to Bodies not accuſtomed to that Climate, ſo that the Army began to grow Sickly, and wanting Forage which was neceſſary to be ſupplied, it was procured with a daily loſs of Men taken, or killed by the Enemy, by which an Army worthy of higher Enterpriſes was in danger of being deſtroyed without Fighting or Action. It was therefore concluded neceſſary to Fight, of which there appear'd great hopes from the forwardneſs of the Enemy, who animated with the March of the Chriſtian Army, purſued after them. The Duke of Lorain intending to draw the Enemy after him, carried away all the Proviſions in Boats up the Stream to Sertio, and ſet Fire to the Town of Mohatz, deſtroying all the ſubſiſtence round the Country; and intending to do the like by Siklos and Quinq; Eccleſiæ, Letters were diſpatched by a certain Captain to the Governours of thoſe places to convey away all the Proviſion, and Ammunition they were able from thoſe parts, and afterward to conſume the Towns, and remaining Goods with Fire: But by the Providence and direction of God Almighty, it ſo happened, that this Captain being taken, and his Letters intercepted; he was brought to be examined before the Grand Vizier, and his Papers being read and conſidered at a Council of War called for that purpoſe; It was unanimouſly concluded, that this Reſolution to burn thoſe Towns was a certain evidence of the weakneſs of the Chriſtian Army; and therefore that not to omit, and paſs by ſo favourable an opportunity of gaining an entire Victory, it was reſolved to come to a Battle with the Chriſtians; and to that end the whole Turkiſh Army marched towards Siklos, and pitched in an open Country not far diſtant from the Town through which the Imperial Army was of neceſſity to paſs, and there they opened ſome new Trenches, and raiſed Works of ſome conſiderable defence.

A neceſſity to Fight.

The Turks reſolve to Fight.

After that Mohatz was burnt; the Imperialiſts in order of Battle took their March towards Siklos, not without ſome loſs ſuſtained by the Foragers, who wander'd at too far a diſtance, without due caution, or gard had to the near encampment of the Enemy: The Imperialiſts likewiſe continued their March. The day following Count Stirum advanced before with his Guards, and Scouts, as did all the Quarter-maſters and Foragers, between whom and ſome Troops of Tartars a furious Skirmiſh happened within Trees and Boſcage, which continued a long time with mutual loſs on both ſides, which fell moſt ſeverly on the Regiment of Lodron. The Duke of Loraine finding himſelf to draw near to the Enemy, cauſed the right Wing, commanded by himſelf, to make a Halt under the Mount of Arſchan, and the left Wing commanded by the Elector of Bavaria to make a ſtand on a riſing Ground near Baraniovar, not more than an hour's March from the Enemy, where Six thouſand of the Enemies Horſe made an attack on ſome of the Imperial Troops, as others of them did on the Rear-guard commanded by the Elector of Bavaria, which Skirmiſhes took up ſome hours time: The ſame day the Prince of Comercy with Twelve hundred Horſe, was commanded out to cover the Foragers; but he was not far advanced before he returned with advice, that the Enemy with the groſs of their Army both of Horſe and Foot had raiſed their Camp, and had poſted themſelves in a nearer and more advantagious place: This News was confirmed by a Grecian youth of Retimo taken Captive by the Turks in Candia, who having made his eſcape reported, That the Turkiſh Army conſiſted of Eighty thouſand fighting Men, of which there were Twenty five thouſand Janiſaries, and with the Attendants and Servants, they might make up in all the Number of One hundred and twenty thouſand perſons: And accordingly that Evening, three Encampments appear'd, conſiſting of three very great Bodies.

Several Skirmiſhes.

Auguſt.

The Turkiſh Army appears.

The next day being the 12*th* of Auguſt, the Duke of Lorain having diſpoſed his Affairs in a Military poſture, againſt all accidents and contingences from the Enemy whatſoever, began his March towards Siklos with the right Wing, being then about an hour's March diſtant from Siklos. Scarce had he opened the Plain, when the Elector of Bavaria with his left Wing was attacked by Eight thouſand of the Enemies Horſe, ſuſtained by Six thouſand Janiſaries, who had the night before intrenched themſelves on the ſide of a Hill, from whence they fired many Vollies of Shot on the three Regiments of Cavalry, viz. Arco, Magni and Soyer.

A Battle began at Harſcham.

Prince Lewis of Baden having obſerved, that there was a very advantagious place on the ſide of the Hill near to the Janiſaries, which, if poſſeſſed, might very much annoy the Turks; immediately advertiſed the Dukes of Loraine and Bavaria thereof, who having in the firſt place reinforced the Rear-guards with four Regiments under the conduct of Piccolomini, gave it in charge to Prince Lewis, to take the Poſt he had denoted on the ſide of the Hill; which accordingly he performed with admirable Succeſs; for the Janiſaries having fired three Vollies, and the Spahees having furiouſly charged the Rear-guard as often; the Elector encouraging his Men ſetled them firm and ſteddy againſt the frequent and forcible Shocks and Charges of the Enemy; who not being able to endure the Fire, and the unſhaken order of the Chriſtians, betook themſelves to a diſorderly and precipitate Flight, in which the Turkiſh Horſe broke in upon their Foot, and trampling down the Janiſaries under foot, drove them back into their Trenches, into which entring at the ſame time with the Enemy, they put the whole Army to the Rout, and to a ſhameful Flight, leaving their Camp, Tents and all their Baggage for a Prey to the Chriſtians.

The Turks routed.

On this memorable day, which is to be celebrated to all Poſterity, the two Dukes, who were Generals, ſignalized themſelves by their admirable Conduct, and undaunted Bravery, to all the World. Prince Lewis of Baden in like manner, with his Sword in his Hand, applying himſelf at all places to direct, and encourage the Soldiery by his Preſence and Voice, demonſtrated and evidenced himſelf to be a great Captain and Champion; in imitation of whom, and of all other the Commanders, the inferiour Officers and Soldiers gave marks to the World of their bravery and zeal in the Succeſſes of that glorious day.

The valour of the Chriſtian Commanders.

The Prince Eugenie of Savoy was the firſt, who with the Regiments of his Brigade entred the Trenches of the Enemy; and for that reaſon had the honour to be the firſt Meſſenger of this happy News unto the Emperor. Count Sinzendorf, a Cavalier of great Courage, and Hope, adventuring his Perſon amidſt the thickeſt of his Enemies, had Two Horſes killed under him that day, and Two wounded, together with his Page, who fought on his Left-hand; and by a great Shot had his Leg broke: Howſoever he purſued the Enemy beyond their Trenches for the ſpace of an hour, as did the reſt of the Army, until the Cloſe of the Evening, when it was thought fit to deſiſt from the purſuit, and return to the Camp, that they might give Refreſhment both to Man, and Horſe, who had for two days greatly ſuffered for want both of Victuals, and Forage. The Prince of Commercy, who Commanded the Troops of Volontiers, deſerved alſo his due Praiſe, being being one of the moſt forward to attack the Enemy, of which he gave undeniable Proofs, the Sargeant Major of his Regiment, and One hundred and Sixty of his Soldiers being ſlain at the beginning of the Battle. The whole Number killed and wounded on the Chriſtian ſide, were not much above One thouſand, Three Captains, Twelve ſubaltern Officers, and Four Trumpeters; which indeed was very ſtrange, and almoſt miraculous, if we conſider the great loſs which the Turks ſuſtained; for there were Eight thouſand Janiſaries with their Aga, or General, killed on the place, all choice and ſelect Soldiers, Two thouſand were made Priſoners, and about Three thouſand Drowned, and the whole Army ſcattered and diſperſed in the Woods, Marſhes, and Boggs of that Country.

The Prince of Savoy carries the News of Victory. His bravery.

1687.

The Numbers killed and wounded.

Strange and wonderful indeed was the Succeſs of this day, and ought wholly to be aſcribed to the Almighty Hand of the God of Hoſts: For the Turkiſh Army was much more numerous than the Chriſtian, conſiſting in all of One hundred and twenty thouſand, of which Eighty thouſand were Fighting men, encouraged by late Succeſſes, and grown proud, and confident of their Strength, by the Retreat which the Chriſtians made. But what is ſtill more ſtrange, is that this formidable Army was Defeated, and put to Flight by Ten thouſand men only of the Left-wing of the Rear-Guard, Commanded by the Elector of Bavaria; for the Right-wing under the Duke of Loraine, and Led by Count Caprara, had not time to come up, before the Turks were put to a Rout, and a Haſty Flight, which had they delayed and ſtood until the other Forces had come up, it might, in all probability, have proved ſo bloody a loſs to the Turks, as could never more have been recovered, and which might have proved the total Ruin and Downfal of the Ottoman Empire.

The Vizier's Tent allotted to the Elector of Bavaria.

Thus ſince it was the Fortune of the Elector of Bavaria to Fight that day with Victorious Succeſs, the Magnificent Tent of the Grand Vizier, like opima ſpolia, were by Lot the juſt Reward of his Labour, and Valou. It is ſaid, That that Tent was the moſt ſumptuous and rich of any, that had, during this whole War, been brought by any preceeding General into the Field; therein was taken all the Caſh, or Ready-Money brought for the Uſe of the Army, all the Books and Accounts belonging to the Militia, the Horſe-tails or Tugh carried before the Vizier; beſides Fifty thouſand Crowns, which ſome principal Officers, as is ſaid, appropriated to their own Uſe.

The ſpoils taken.

Beſides this ſtately Tent, there were great Numbers of other Tents taken, in which the Turks ſhow moſt of their Grandeur, making more Oſtentation by their Tents, in the Camp, than they do by their Houſes, and Edifices in the City. Moreover there were taken Sixty ſeven Pieces of Canon, Four of which were of an extraordinary bigneſs; of Powder there was a Thouſand Kintals, of Match Four hundred, about Eight thouſand Cannon-Bullets, Three thouſand Bombs and Carcaſſes, Ten thouſand Granadoes, Arms of all ſorts in great Numbers, Two thouſand Oxen, Five hundred Horſe, Mules, Aſſes, and Camels about Two hundred, Buffoloes Four hundred, which were appointed and fitted to the Yoke, for drawing Carriages, and Cannon; Sheep, and other Cattle innumerable.

1687.

Beſides all this, there were found great quantities of Coffee, Chocolate, Sugar, Sherbet, and Honey, with Carpets, and Beds of Wool, and Cotton: Alſo Oats, Rice, Barley, Flower, Oyl, Bread, and Salt; in ſhort, all things neceſſary and convenient for Man and Beaſt; with which the Chriſtian Soldiers refreſhed themſelves after a long Battle, tedious and tireſome Marches, in great Want, and Scarcity of all Neceſſaries for Support and ſuſtenance of an Army. After which great and ſignal Victory, Te Deum was on the 13*th* of Auguſt Sung in the Tent of the Grand Vizier; and Triumphs made by expoſing the Horſe-tails, and great Numbers of Banners and Enſigns before the Door of the Tent, with Vollies of ſmall Shot, and Diſcharge of Four hundred Pieces of Cannon, giving Thanks to God for this ſo remarkable a Succeſs, which was the more obſervable, becauſe this Victory was obtained in that very Ground, where Lodowick, the laſt of the Hungarian Kings was Slain, and his Army Routed by Sultan Soliman the Magnificent, who in Memory thereof, cauſed a Moſch of Wood to be Erected, and Endowed it with Eight hundred Crowns Yearly Rent, that Derviſes, who are a ſort of Turkiſh Friers, might ſolemnize their daily Devotions and Prayers in that place.

Auguſt. 1687.

Te Deum Sung in the Vizier's Tent.

The Turkiſh Army being thus totally Routed, and Diſperſed, ſome in the Woods, and others in the Marſhes, where many of them dyed of their Wounds, or fainted for want of Food, or Refreſhments; others of them, or as many, as could, Travelling a Day and a Night, came at length faint and weary to lodge themſelves under the Walls and Cannon of Eſſeck, without Proviſion to comfort them, or Tents to cover them; where being ſad and diſconſolate, had the Mortification to hear the Triumphs which the Chriſtians were making in their Camp for their Victorious Succeſſes.

Agria ſurrenders.

This News affected the Inhabitants of Agria to the laſt extremity of Deſpair: They had lived for a long time in hope of Relief;

1687. lief; and feeding on that, and on Horſe-Fleſh, and Dogs, and Herbs growing under the Walls, and by making ſometimes Excurſions near hand to gain a little ſuſtenance; but now by this laſt blow being put beyond all hopes, the People had thoughts privately to abandon the Town, and fly to other Quarters; but the Town being cloſely blocked up by Marqueſs Doria, was forced ſoon afterwards to ſurrender at diſcretion, without any farther Effuſion of Blood.

Fears at Vienna.

Joy at the News of Victory.

The Suceeſs of this Battle, near Harſcham, happened very ſeaſonable to the Chriſtian Cauſe, and of great Comfort and Joy to the Court of Vienna, where they had lately received no very good News in reference to the State of their Army, which, as Reported, was very much weakened by late Skirmiſhes, Sickneſſes, and want of Proviſions, and much haraſſed by long Marches, bad Weather, and dirty deep Ways: Of which the Enemy being ſenſible, was grown bold and daring, and often preſſed them to a Battle: The Emperor being informed hereof, was very doubtful and anxious for the Succeſs; and Prayers, Supplications and Penance were ordered to be made in all Churches to implore the Divine Aſſiſtance and Bleſſing; when the Prince Eugene of Savoy arrived at Vienna with the News of the Battle, and the Particulars of the Victory, which filled all the Court and City with Joy and Triumph: To render which the more compleat and full, Advices were come the Night before from the Senate of Venice, to give an Account to his Imperial Majeſty of the Defeat which the Arms of St. Mark had given the Turks in the Morea; which had produced ſuch a Terror and Conſternation amongſt them, that in little more than Four and twenty Hours time, Four places had ſurrendered to the Venetians. With theſe happy Advices, Expreſſes being diſpatched to all Courts of Chriſtian Princes, were the Cauſe and Subject of common Joy and Jubilee, in the Courts of all, the moſt Chriſtian Kings only excepted.

Diſſentions amongſt the Turkiſh Militia.

The Grand Vizier with his ſcattered Troops rallied near Eſſeck; where taking an account of the Numbers loſt, he found his Army diminiſhed about Twenty thouſand men; for beſides thoſe which were killed, taken, and drown'd, many had deſerted, and withdrawn from the Field. The Face of the whole Camp was ſad and diſconſolate; and thô the Vizier did all he could to comfort and chear them; yet they being not only melancholy, but angry, and aſhamed of their diſhonourable Flight, began to blame and caſt the fault on each other. The Janiſaries with good reaſon upbraided the Spahees, as the Authors of their Rout; for that they cowardly retiring, broke in upon their Ranks, and put them into diſorder; which the Enemy obſerving, preſſed ſo hard upon them, that they were forced to give way, and with them the whole Army was laid open, and expoſed to the Enemy. The Diſpute grew ſo hot between the Two Ranks, and Orders of Soldiers, who were always emulous of each other, that at length they came to Blows, and to a Civil War, in which about Seven hundred were killed upon the place.

Appeaſed with Mony.

The Grand Vizier, and Officers had no ſooner with much pain and labour parted the Fray, but the tumultuous Soldiery joyned together to accuſe the Vizier himſelf, and to cry out, that the loſs of the day was to be charged on him, and the Myrmidons about him, who were the moſt forward to ſhow an Example to the Soldiery of a baſe and fearful Flight; the which Clamour cauſed ſuch a Mutiny in the Camp, as had put the Life of the Vizier, and many great Officers into extreme danger, had not the Vizier with Money and fair words mollified their Anger. But this accommodation continued not long, before the Grand Vizier was forced to give way to the irreſiſtible fury and ſedition of the Soldiery, as we ſhall preſently have occaſion to declare.

Forces ſent under Dunewalt.

In the mean time the Duke of Loraine, not to loſe the benefit and advantage of ſo glorious a Victory, deſigned a farther Conqueſt, and to conclude the Campaigne, with ſome other memorable Enterprize. It was the common Talk at Vienna amongſt the Courtiers, at the Emperor's Palaces, and amongſt the Religious men in their Convents and Monaſteries; that the Duke of Loraine was to proſecute his Victory without delay as far as Belgrade, and thence to paſs to Adrianople, and make that City his Head Quarters for this Winter; but theſe men, who had repoſed themſelves quietly at home, had not the Thoughts, nor Conſideration of the great Generals, to know the Sufferings and Hardſhip which the Cavalry had ſuſtained this Summer in paſſing Boggs and Marſhes, by want of Forage, and long Marches; nor the difficulty of paſſing the River of Drave, defended by the ſtrong Fortreſs of Eſſeck, nor the Seaſon of the Year too far ſpent to undertake any great Enterprize: All which being conſidered by the Two Great Captains, the Duke of Loraine, and the Elector of Bavaria; they reſolved only to ſend a detachment of Ten thouſand men, under Command of General Dunewalt, to paſs the Drave at Turanovitz, and there to undertake ſuch deſigns, as ſhould be thought moſt facile and feaſible, without over-much hazard to be put in Execution.

Dunewalt accordingly began his March on the 17*th* towards Siklos, where he was furniſhed with 18 Pieces of heavy Cannon, and 1687.

Four Mortars taken lately from the Enemy, of which he was to make uſe in caſe of a Siege, or other occaſion; and was there reinforced with a conſiderable Body of Croats, under Command of their Bano. The Duke of Loraine in the mean time took his march with the remainder of his Army towards Mohatz, with deſign to paſs the Danube, and on that ſide to refreſh his Army, and allot out to them Quarters for the Winter in Tranſilvania, Moldavia, and Valachia, obliging thoſe Hoſpodars, or Princes to yield Obedience to his Imperial Majeſty, and pay Contributions, by which means not only the Hereditary Countries of the Emperor, but the waſted and conſumed Provinces of Hungary would be eaſed, and relieved of their long burdens and diſtreſſes. Some Leagues above Mohatz, the Duke of Loraine paſſed the Danube with all his Baggage, and Train of Artillery, at a place, where he had the advantage of an Iſland in the midſt of the River, to lay more eaſily their Bridges. The Army having paſſed the Water with all their Artillery and Baggage, it was expected by ſome, and ſo made the common Diſcourſe, that a farther Enterprize would be undertaken, and that the Army would march towards Peter-Waradin, and thence proceed to the Siege of Eſſeck; but this deſign after mature conſultation, appeared too difficult in this preſent Seaſon: For that great Floods of Rain had fallen, and ſo filled the Rivers that the Waters could not be contained within their Channel, but overflowed all the Fields and Meadows bordering on the River; and afterwards when the Water abated, they had yet covered the Grounds with ſo much Mire and Sand, that it was impoſſible to march near to the Brink of the River, ſo as to have the benefit or uſe of their Boats for Carriage of their Forage and Proviſions: Wherefore it was reſolved to Lade the Proviſions and Baggage on Carts, and take their march with the whole Army towards Segedin: The Boats being emptied and diſcharged, were all burnt, as needleſs and cumberſome; and the greater Barges on which the Cannon and Ammunition were laden, were drawn up the River by Horſes and Oxen, attended with a Convoy of three Regiments of Horſe and Dragoons: And in this manner Loraine took his March towards the Tibiſcus; but the Elector of Bavaria judging that the Campaign was ſo far ſpent, that no great Enterprize was more to be atchieved, having committed his Troops to the care and conduct of the Duke of Loraine, he together with Prince Lewis of Baden took his way towards the City of Vienna.

The Duke of Loraine paſſes the Danube.

Proviſions laden on Carts.

But this March proved much more difficult than was imagined or expected, for the Ways and Fields by the continual Rains were ſo deep and rotten, and full of Water, that the Army inſtead of being relieved, and eaſed of their late Fatigues and Suffering, ſeemed to be engaged and engolfed in greater; for their March was in Mire and Dirt to the Mid-leg, the Weather very Raw and Cold, without Wood or other Fuel to dry and warm them at the end of their day's March; and without any other Suſtenance, than dry Bisket ſoftned with bad Water, ſuch as was found in the Ditches and the Ways; ſo that it was not ſtrange that the Army ſhould grow Sickly, and weakned with ſo many and ſo long ſufferings. Some Troops of the Turks, who had fled to Peter Waradin having notice hereof, order'd a Detachment of ſome Forces belonging to Tekeli, joyned to a ſtrong party of Turks and Tartars, to fall in upon the Rear of the Imperialiſts, which often-times happed to the great loſs and hurt of the ſickly and infirm, who were miſerably cut to pieces, and ſlain by the Enemy. Nor was the Cavalry in a much better Condition, for travelling over Marſhes and Wet-grounds, their Horſes died for want of Forage.

1687.

The difficulty of marching.

Sickly and infirm attacked by the Turks.

The Duke of Loraine with his principal Commanders conſidering hereof, order'd that all Officers having Carts ſhould apply them to the uſe of the ſickly and weak Infantry; and to give a good Example herein to others, he was the firſt to proffer his own Waggons, which all other Officers obſerving, generouſly afforded their Carriages to the uſe of the Foot, by which the Army was wonderfully relieved, and after many hardſhips were brought near to the Quarters of Segedin, where the Air and Waters being more wholſome, and the Forage and Proviſions more plentiful, the Sick began to recover, and after ſome few days of reſt and refreſhment, the whole Army was in a great meaſure reſtor'd to perfect Health and ſtrong Condition: After which they marched to Zolnock, where they found plenty of all Proviſions and Forage, provided and gathered by the abundant care, and induſtry of Count Caraffa chief Governour of the upper Hungary: And thence they marched to Debrezin, from whence the Duke of Loraine detached the Regiment of Cuiraſſiers commanded by Count Palſi, with the Regiment of Foot belonging to Count Staremberg, with Orders to march unto Poſſonium or Presburg, there to aſſiſt at the Coronation of the Arch-Duke Joſeph, Son of the Emperor, then created King of the Romans.

The Foot carried in Carts.

The Sick recover at Segedin.

And Zolnock.

But to return now to the Turkiſh Camp, where we may believe, that after ſo fatal a Rout there was great Confuſion: The

Grand

Sedition in the Turkiſh Camp.

Grand Vizier retired from Eſſeck to Peter Waradin, where he intended to muſter up his Forces, and to recount his loſs, and make the beſt ſtand he could againſt the farther Progreſs of the Chriſtian Arms; but the Turkiſh Troops inſtead of yielding obedience to their Commanders, publickly aroſe againſt the Vizier, boldly demanding of him five Months pay, and the ſurrender of Mahomet's Colours or Standard: Upon which Inſolence the Grand Vizier fled to Belgrade, ſending before him Fourteen Mules laden with Money; at which the Militia being more enraged, propoſed to Elect Oſman Paſha, Ogli or Sciaus Paſha for their Leader: For with both theſe the Vizier had a Quarrel before the Battle, and after it upon his Complaints made againſt them to the Grand Seignior, for not having done their Duty in the Fight, had obtained a Huſbeſheriff, or a Royal command to Strangle or Baniſh them, as he judged moſt for Service of the Sultan; but Soliman the Vizier being averſe to Blood, laid the Command by him, without Execution of it, which coming to the knowledge of theſe two turbulent Men, they raiſed the Militia againſt him; who offered to acknowledge Oſman Paſha for their General, provided he would undertake to kill the Vizier; which Enterprize he readily accepted, and enter'd the Vizier's Tents, where he killed ſeveral of his Servants and Pages; as he did alſo the Vizier's Kahya or Deputy, who ſent to appeaſe the Mutiny; but the Vizier himſelf eſcaped in a Boat down the Danube, accompanied with the Teſterdar or Lord Treaſurer, and Reis Effendi or Secretary of State, upon notice of which the Soldiery elected Sciaus Paſha for their General, laying Oſman Paſha aſide, notwithſtanding his late Service, having been a Rebel and Robber in Aſia.

Sciaus Paſha made General.

A Character of the Vizier.

Thus the Sedition being begun, a great Revolution followed in the Empire; which was not ſo much cauſed by the defeat of the Turkiſh Army, as by the natural Temper of the Vizier, and the Poverty of the Treaſury which could not furniſh Money ſufficient for payment of the Soldiery. For thô Solyman was a Man of dexterity in Negotiations, and well qualified for a Court; yet being of a mild Nature was not ſo proper to command a Camp, wanting that Vigour, and Martial Spirit which ſhould make him ſevere, ſo as to be fear'd and reſpected: Beſides, having little experience in War, and of an open and free Humour, lent his Ear to every Adviſer, ſo that amongſt diverſity of Opinions he became confuſed and unreſolved, and inſtead of governing was governed, and ſometimes made to act againſt his own Judgment. Tis true, the Vizier had by his care and induſtry gathered a powerful Army and good Troops for this Campaign; for he had ſummoned all the Otoracks, or Soldiers who had formerly been freed and exempted from the War, and had long lived at eaſe, and with convenience at their own Houſes, to return again to the Camp, and to the ſeverities of Martial Diſcipline; many of which had been Spectators or Actors in the Mutinies, during the Minority of Sultan Mahomet, and wanting now pay, and their accuſtomed eaſe, were ſoon incited to Sedition on the firſt occaſion, which now happed upon theſe Misfortunes, and the Flight of the Vizier.

Wuchin taken by Dunewalt.

The Sedition being thus begun, we will leave the Mutiniers for a while and return to the Exploits of General Dunewalt, and then relate at large the great Revolution which after this enſued at the Port. Dunewalt had continued his March for ſeveral days from Siklos, and at length without any conſiderable Encounter, he came to Turnovitz, where he laid a Bridge and paſſed the Drave; and being there relieved with Proviſions, he proceeded to the attack of Wuching, a Caſtle well fortified, and the Garriſon lately reinforced with a Thouſand Tartars: And thô the Ways were deep and bad, and the Weather rainy and wet, yet nothing was impoſſible for a victorious Army, which marched along the ſide of ſome Hills, where the Ways were more hard and dry. Count Lodron with his Regiment, and Count Budiani with ſome hundreds of Huſſars, and a Sargent Major with Two hundred Dragoons, were commanded to advance before to Inveſt Wuchin, and to hinder all Succours which might be ſent for its Relief, until the Mortars and Cannon, and the reſt of the Army could come up. At length the Bombs, and Train of Artillery being with much labour and difficulty arrived; Batteries were raiſed, and the place ſummoned to Surrender; to which at firſt a haughty and an obſtinate Anſwer was returned, but the Cannon being mounted and fired, in the ſpace of one day had made ſuch a Breach, that the Turks conſidering the Reſolution of the Chriſtians, and the impoſibility of being relieved, diſplaid a white Flag, and deſired to Capitulate. At firſt they demanded liberty to March out like Soldiers with Arms and Baggage, but that being denied them, with all other Conditions, excepting only to yield at Diſcretion, they were forced to ſubmit to the Will of the Conquerour, and loſe their Freedom and Eſtates, to ſave their Lives. In the Garriſon were about Three hundred Soldiers, beſides more than One hundred Women and Children: The principal Priſoners of note, 1687.

note, were ſhared amongſt the Generals, and chief Officers of Horſe, and the others equally divided amongſt the Regiments of Foot.

After taking this Caſtle, which is Situate on a Rock, and in a pleaſant and plentiful Country, abounding with Trees and Fruit, and well planted with Vine-yards; and after refreſhment given to the Army for ſome few days, it was reſolved to March to Walpo, and there to remain in expectation of farther Orders from the Imperial Court: During which time certain Advice was brought, that the Grand Vizier with all his Army and Equipage, was retired from Eſſeck to Peter Waradin, and thence to Belgrade, with intention totally to abandon the Fortreſs of Eſſeck.

Sept. 1687.

Upon this News Dunewalt having refreſhed his Army near Walpo for ſome days, after a tedious March through a waſted and deſolate Country full of Boggs and Marſhes, he ordered a party of Five hundred Horſe, under command of Count Hoſkirchen, Lieutenant Colonel of that Regiment, to make an Excurſion as far a Eſſeck, and learn the State of that Garriſon, and the Forces of the Enemy thereabouts.

Hoſkirchen with a party make an Excurſion as far as Eſſeck.

Hoſkirchen had been out two days, without any Diſcovery, or giving advice of any thing to the General, whom he found encamped under Walpo, a place defended by Five hundred Turks, who at firſt Summons ſeemvery reſolute to defend themſelves, or at leaſt, not to yield until they had firſt heard that Eſſeck had ſubmitted. Hereupon Batteries were mounted, which with frequent firing at the Caſtle gave an Alarum to the Country round about; but whilſt theſe Matters were in agitation, intelligence was brought to the Camp by a Country Fellow, that whilſt Hoſkirchen remained in the Woods to make Diſcovery of the Enemy's Motion, the Garriſon taking it to be the Van-guard of the Army, were ſtruck with ſuch a fear, that they immediately reſolved to abandon the place; and having laden the beſt of their Moveables and Goods on Boats, the Garriſon and all the Inhabitants forſook the place, and fled to Peter Waradin.

Walpo Inveſted.

General Dunewalt taking this Relation from the Country-man to be true, commanded the three Regiments of Lodron, Count Kiſel and Hoſkirchen to March unto Eſſeck, and take poſſeſſion of the place, in caſe it were abandoned, as before reported. Accordingly theſe Forces being come near Eſſeck; the day following they were met by a Turk, and a Renegado Croat, who, having made humble inſtances for their Lives, which were granted them; they confirmed the intelligence of the Turks having abandoned Eſſeck, to be true, and likewiſe informed them, that the Turks before they left the place, had formed five Mines under the Walls, which they would diſcover to them; and accordingly Lodron having appointed Thirty of his Men with ſome Raſcians to uncharge the Mines, he marched with his whole Body and took poſſeſſion of that conſiderable and important place of Eſſeck without any oppoſition, before which (as we have related) two great Armies lately lay encamped.

1687.

Eſſeck abandoned by the Turks.

With this advice Count Lodron immediately diſpatched an Expreſs to Dunewalt, giving him an account that he had taken poſſeſſion of Eſſeck, and had found therein Fifty five Pieces of Cannon, two Mortar Pieces, two Petards, with a great quantity of Ammunition and Proviſion of all ſorts; the Garriſon of Walpo being alſo aſſured hereof, loſt their Courage, and ſurrender'd forthwith at Diſcretion, ſubmitting themſelves, their Wives and Children to Slavery.

Walpo Surrenders.

After which, things being well ſecured and order'd at Walpo, Dunewalt marched towards Eſſeck, and encamped his Army on the 2*d* of October in the ſame place, where the Grand Vizier had lately intrenched: Where having ſung Te Deum, and returned Thanks to Almighty God for ſo many and great Succeſſes, a Council of War was called to conſider what was the next great Enterprize which was to be undertaken.

Octob. 1687.

The Seaſon of the Year being advanced towards Winter; it might well be judged a convenient time to draw the Soldiers into Quarters, and give the Troops reſt and repoſe after the many Fatigues and Hardſhips ſuſtained; but God ſtill favouring the Deſigns of the Chriſtians againſt the Turks, who were in all places poſſeſſed with fear and conſternation; it was thought fit by the Commanders to follow the Foot-ſteps of Fortune, and not to give over the Game with a lucky Hand; wherefore Count Appremont being left in the Government of Eſſeck, with a Garriſon of Eighteen Companies of Foot, and Sixteen Troops of Horſe, the General reſolved to attack Poſſega, the Metropolis of all Sclavonia; and in his March thither he ſummoned the Caſtle of Orovitza, Situate on a high Hill, an the Foot of which is a Palancha, or ſmall Redoubt; the Ground is covered with Cheſnut-Trees, and planted with Fruit Trees; the Garriſon at firſt returned an angry and reſolute Anſwer, but afterwards thinking better with themſelves, they packed up the beſt of their Goods and Baggage, and in the night by ſecret and By-ways through the Woods and Mountains privately ſtole away, every one ſhifting for himſelf in the beſt manner he was able: So that in the morning the Chriſtians enter'd the Town and Caſtle without any oppoſition; being a place very

The Turks quit Orovitza.

1687. Commodious, to which ſeveral Villages paid Contribution, and which was neceſſary firſt to be taken, in order to the more eaſy and ſafe attack of Poſſega. The very ſame day that Dunewalt enter'd into Oravitza, intelligence was brought him, that the Turks were poſſeſſed with ſuch great Fear and Conſternation at Poſſega, that there was no doubt to be made, but that the place would Surrender at his firſt appearance before it; which accordingly happened; for no ſooner were the Chriſtian Forces deſcended into the Plains, but they eſpied a conſiderable body of Turks, that ranged themſelves under the Cannon of Poſſega. The Forces of Dunewalt being come up, ſeveral Skirmiſhes paſſed between the Parties, but the Turks finding themſelves unable to engage with ſuch an unequal Force, they betook themſelves to flight into the Mountains, abandoning the City and Caſtle to the poſſeſſion of the Chriſtians: Five Companies purſued them into the Mountains, but without any effect, for having neither knowledge of the Ways, nor Suſtenance in that deſolate Country, being alſo wearied and tired with long Marches, were forced to return, and repoſe themſelves in Poſſega.

Poſſega quitted by the Turks.

Fortune thus favouring the Progreſs of the Chriſtian Arms, Dunewalt reſolved to make uſe of this proſperous Gale; and having in order thereunto held a Council of War, it was reſolved to follow the Enemy to the River Save, where at a place called Kobas they were Tranſporting themſelves and Baggage to the other ſide: In order unto which, and for better ſecurity of Poſſega, a Garriſon of Sixteen hundred Germans were left in the place, and orders given to Count Lodron, that being come thither with the Infantry and Baggage, he ſhould repoſe and refreſh his Men there until the return of Dunewalt; who loſing no time came ſo opportunly to the Save, as to ſurprize ſome Carts laden with Corn and Proviſions, which the Enemy had left there, not having time to Tranſport them to the other ſide; and in the mean time Count Leoneda, Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiments of Lodron, a brisk and daring Gentleman, purſued a party of the Enemy's Horſe, and skirmiſhed with them for the ſpace of three hours, and put them to flight, returning back to the Camp over againſt Kobas, with a Booty of Two hundred Head of Cattle. At this place Dunewalt continued for the ſpace of three days, endeavouring to paſs the River with deſign to burn and demoliſh that Caſtle; and thô on the other ſide there appeared a Body of Eight hundred Turks, Horſe and Foot; yet ſome Germans endeavoured to paſs in ſmall Boats, and to take a Poſt, or place of Defence; but before they could be ſeconded by other Forces, they were attacked by Two hundred Turks, and after a valorous defence were moſt of them cut in pieces, or droven into the River. 1687.

It is garriſoned by the Germans.

Dunewalt Marches to Kobas.

A party of Germans cut off.

Dunewalt finding it very difficult to paſs the River without the help of great Boats, returned to Poſſega, where finding the Cannon and Infantry arrived, he proceeded to Zerneck, about two Hungarian Leagues diſtant from Poſſega, which the Turks having quitted, the Germans without oppoſition made their entrance into it: The day following Count Hoſkirchen was detached from this place, with a party of Five hundred Croats, to take a view of the Enemies State and Condition about Gradiſca; on his March whereunto, he was encountred by a ſtrong party of Turks, with whom entring into an Engagement, Hoſkirchen was wounded by a Muſquet Bullet in his Arm, and Count Harimberg in the right Hand with a Lance; two Common Soldiers were killed, and ſome few others wounded: Howſoever Hoſkirchen miſſed not of the intelligence he deſigned; bringing an account at his return, that the City of Gradiſca was ſtrong, garriſoned by Ten thouſand Soldiers, cover'd by Five thouſand Horſe which were quartered in parts adjacent; and that in the Way to the City, the Paſſages were very Streight, beſides many Woods, and three Bridges which lay in the Road thither. Upon this Advice the deſign againſt Gradiſca was deferr'd; and a great part of the Militia was employed to fortifie Zerneck, and the Towns lately conquer'd; and to provide them with good Garriſons, as alſo Valkowa: After which the Seaſon being far ſpent, and Proviſions and Forage beginning to want in the Camp, the remainder of the Army were lodged and laid up in their Winter-quarters in Croatia. Notwithſtanding all which Succeſſes, there were not ſuch wanting, who blamed theſe proceedings, and confidently affirmed, that in caſe Dunewalt had been inforced with ſome Regiments, and had laid all other Deſigns aſide, he might in that great conſternation of the Turks have paſſed the Save, and made himſelf Maſter of Belgrade without much difficulty, and therewith have reduced all Boſnia to the devotion of the Emperor. But this being an Over-ſight, and matters ſucceeding as before related; let us return to the mutinous Army of the Turks, whom we lately left raging againſt the Grand Vizier, the Grand Seignior and all the Government.

The Turks quit Zerneck.

A Skirmiſh.

Dunewalts Army lodged in Winter-quarters.

The Grand Vizier, as we have ſaid, having quitted the Army, to give way to the Fury of the Soldiers, took a Boat at Belgrade and rowed down the Danube, accompanied with the Teſterdar or Lord Treaſurer, and the Reis Effendi or Secretary of State

1687. State; the Soldiers in the mean time choſe (as is aforeſaid) Sciaus for their General; and immediately diſpatched away Orta Chiaus, an Officer of the Janiſaries, to acquaint the Grand Seignior with what the Army had done.

A Chiaus ſent by the Army to the Sultan.

It was now no time to expoſtulate with the Soldiers, or diſapprove their Actions; but on the contrary Orta was kindly received, and careſſed by the Chimacam at Conſtantinople called Regeb Paſha:

The Grand Seignior approves of what they had done.

And the Grand Seignior himſelf without any Heſitancy confirming the Choice which the Army had made, diſpatched Orta Chiaus immediately back with the Signals of Honour, which are a Sword, and a Veſt of Sables, declaring him General, and ordering him to take care of the Frontiers. The Vizier having got out of the reach of the Army, took Poſt and came to Adrianople, where he ſtaid, and gave time for his Friends to work in his behalf with the Grand Seignior; who of himſelf was well enough inclined to Solyman; and therefore after the Rout, and Noiſe was a while appeaſed, Regeb the Chimacam obtained his Pardon, and Permiſſion for him to come to Conſtantinople, and Mamout Aga his Friend, and a rich Man was ſent for the Meſſenger to invite him thither.

The Army Petitions againſt Solyman.

But before Solyman arrived the Scene was much changed by the coming of four Officers from the Army, with Arz and Max-Arz, which is a Petition, and Certificate ſigned by the principal Commanders in the Army, atteſting that Solyman was a Perſon of no Conduct, a Coward and a Lyer, and one who took no care to pay the Army, and in ſhort that he was not fit for that Sublime Office of Grand Vizier, concluding their Petition with a Prayer, that another might be placed in that Government:

He delivers up the Seal and Standard.

Solyman having News hereof, as he was on the Road to Conſtantinople, and thinking thereupon that, that place would be too hot for him at preſent; ſent the Seal and the Standard of the Prophet to the Sultan, committing them to the care of the Teſterdar the Treaſurer, and Reis Effendi the Secretary, his Friends and fellow Travellers, to be delivered by them, conveying himſelf privately within the Walls of Conſtantinople; upon which, without delay the Grand Seignior diſpatched away the Seal and the Standard to Sciaus, declaring him Grand Vizier in the place of Solyman. Regeb would have diſſwaded the Grand Seignior from ſending the Standard, which is the Colours of their Prophet Mahomet; and towards which the People bear a ſuperſtitious Devotion, alledging that thereby he weakned himſelf, and armed a Company of Mutiniers with the Charm of that holy Relick: Howſoever the Kuzlier Aga, who is the chief Eunuch of the Women, was of a different Opinion, being of a nature timorous like that of the Grand Seignior: His Council prevailed, and the Standard was ſent by the Hand of the Selictar or Sword-bearer, that the Soldiery might not have cauſe to believe, that the Sultan treated them with reſerves, or with the leaſt manner of diffidence. But all this ſerved not to appeaſe, or mollify the madneſs of the Soldiery, who now talked of nothing but marching to Conſtantinople, and there to Depoſe the Grand Seignior, and reform the Government, ſetting up his Brother Sultan Solyman, under whoſe Reign they hoped for the like Auſpicious Succeſſes, as they had found in the fortunate Reigns of thoſe Sultans, who had formed the Ottoman Empire; and eſpecially they had a ſingular Reverence for the Name of Sultan Solyman, who, they hoped would prove as great and fortunate as Solyman the Magnificent. Sciaus Paſha, who was in his Heart a cordial Friend to the late Vizier Solyman, found now that he had conjured up a Devil he could not lay, would gladly have diſſwaded the Soldiery from their deſigned March to the Port, and rather adviſed them to guard their Frontiers, and oppoſe the Enemy:

Sciaus unwilling to March.

But this Council had coſt him his Life, had he not touched the Propoſal very gently, and at the ſame time aſſured them of his readineſs to joyn with them in any Deſign they ſhould contrive: And accordingly marching away in a kind of a tumultuous, and diſorderly manner towards the River Save, great Numbers of them were actually paſſing the Bridge near Belgrade, when the Chimacam or Governour General of the Janiſaries of that place, apprehending that they came to Plunder the Town, refuſed them Paſſage, cauſing ſeveral Pieces of Cannon to be fired upon them; with which ſeveral being killed they returned back:

They ſhoot at the Soldiers from Belgrade.

Howſoever perſiſting ſtill in their Reſolution, the moſt wild and obſtinate party of them paſſed the River in Boats at ſome diſtance from the Town, leaving Sciaus Paſha with the reſt of the Militia on the other ſide, a good days March behind them; by this ſlow Motion of Sciaus, the Soldiery gueſſing at his backwardneſs to engage with them, like enraged Mad-men they returned to him and treated him with Menaces, vowing to kill him, in caſe he refuſed to be their General and Leader in this good Cauſe of reforming the Government.

Troubles at Conſtantiple.

Whilſt the Army was in this Commotion, great were the Confuſions, Plots, Stratagems, and Contrivances at Conſtantinople, which Regeb the Chimacam ſuſpecting, that the Friends of the late Vizier Ibrahim exiled to Rhodes, did foment, and alſo, that the Mufti who was laſt year Baniſhed to Pruſa 1687.

1687.

1687.

was too near; he procured a Command from the Grand Seignior to remove that Mufti to Rhodes, and the Kapugibaſhee or Meſſenger, who was employed on this Affair, and had the care upon him to conduct this Mufti to Rhodes, carried alſo a Hatte-ſheriff, or the Command with him for the Head of Ibrahim Paſha, which we ſhall ſhortly find at Conſtantinople, about the ſame time almoſt that Regeb's Head was laid with others to augment the heap.

The Soldiers take an Oath to reform the Government.

Septem. 1687.

Regeb gives Council, but not taken.

The Kuzlir Aga's Council againſt Regeb.

Regeb ſeized.

He eſcapes.

In the mean time the Teſterdar or Treaſurer, and the Reis Effendi, or Secretary, who were the Two Fellow-Travellers with Solyman the late Vizier, were diſpatched to the Army with ſoft Meſſages from the Grand Seignior, approving all that they had done, and offering to perform all they did or could deſire: But we ſhall ſee preſently how well theſe Two Mediators ſucceeded in their Office of making Peace with a heady Multitude, which would hear no Reaſon and endure no Government. For Sciaus was now made only a Property to execute the Commands of the Janiſaries, and Spahees, who had entred into a ſolemn Covenant, and military Oath to ſtand by each other for Reformation of the Government: In purſuance of which deſign, they were to march directly to Conſtantinople, there to remove all the Favourite Pages, and Idle Eunuchs in the Seraglio, with Solyman, Regeb, the Chimacam, and all their Creatures, and Dependants, and now began to talk openly of depoſing Sultan Mahomet, and ſetting up Solyman his Brother in the Throne. And yet for all this, Sultan Mahomet was ſo ſtupid, that without any care or concernment he went every day a Hunting, and had continued his Sport until the Mutiniers had ſurprized him in the Field, had not Regeb the Chimacam, a man of great Courage and Capacity acquainted him with his danger, adviſing him that the Storm was growing black round about him, and therefore that he ſhould retire into the Seraglio, and prepare for his defence; ſhewing him now his Error, in ſending away the Prophet's Banner, which in ſuch an extremity as this, had been his chief Protection; but the Grand Seignior had neither Underſtanding to ſee his danger, nor Courage to avoid it, or to embrace a bold and vigorous Council, which was neceſſary in this emergency; but Regeb being qualified for both, and ſufficiently alarum'd by the Chiohadar, an Officer of the Janiſaries, newly arrived from the Army, of the great Combuſtions amongſt them, and of the true ſtate of things, without loſing time, went the next day to the Mufti to deſire a Fetfa, or Sentence declaring them all Rebels and Infidels, (whom they call Gaürs) who would not obey the Commands of the Grand Signior; but the Mufti being either ſick, or at leaſt pretending to be ſo, the Fetfa could not be obtained: Thence he went to the Segmenbaſhee, who was in the place of the Aga of the Janiſaries, whom he found well inclined; but the Kuzlir Aga, a timorous Eunuch, having information from his Spyes of the Motions of Regeb, preſently repreſented them to the Grand Seignior, as if he were contriving his Peace with the Army, intending to betray and ſacrifice all others to their fury and madneſs; and that therefore it would be better to be before-hand with him, and ſend both his and the Head of Solyman to make an Attonement for the lives of others. The Grand Seignior liking the Project extremely well, gave a Command immediately to the Boſtangibaſhee, who is a great man, and chief of the Gardiners, to ſeize Regeb in his Houſe, and carry him to Priſon. The Command being accordingly ſerved, and ſhewed to Regeb, he ſeemed not in the leaſt ſurprized, but entertained the Boſtangibaſhee without any alteration in a free and facetious Diſcourſe; giving Orders very unconcernedly to have his Horſe made ready: And going out with the Boſtangibaſhee, his Boſtangees or Servants going down before him, he ſtopt ſhort at the Head of the Stairs, and turning about, ſaid, Aga, It would not be amiſs, if I ſhould take ſome Zechins into the Priſon with me; come with me into my Chamber for them: So turning quick about, he enters into a Room; the Boſtangibaſhee being ſurprized, followed him in; but Regeb paſſed nimbly into an inner Room through a kind of Cup-board Door, and by a pair of back-ſtairs into the Garden, and ſo eſcaped at a Poſtern-door.

Others are ſeized, and Solyman the Vizier is taken.

The Boſtangibaſhee looking about for him, thought he was vaniſhed, he knew not how; and calling his Servants about him, put all the Houſe into an uproar; but there was no remedy, for the Priſoner was eſcaped and his Kahya, or Steward, had time alſo to get out of the way, thô Two days afterwards he ſurrendered himſelf, and the Haſnadar or Treaſurer, and Chiohadar, or Maſter of his Wardrobe were alſo impriſoned: And about the ſame time alſo Shahin Aga, the Chief Cuſtomer, was ſeized and carried Priſoner to the middle Gate of the Seraglio, where Solyman the late Vizier was alſo committed, being taken at a Houſe of his own on the Boſphorus; and the ſame day the Segmenbaſhee was alſo impriſoned, all which was performed by the ſpecial Command of the Grand Signior at the inſtigation of the Kuzlir Aga, whoſe Councils now ſolely prevailed, and tended to the ſeizure of all perſons whatſoever of Office, and Riches, no matter why, or wherefore, provided they might be a Sacrifice acceptable to the Soldiery, 1687. diery, and attone for the Lives of his Maſter and himſelf. All theſe ſeizures and impriſonments of the great Officers cauſed ſuch diſturbances and fears amongſt the Citizens at Conſtantinople, that they all ſhut up their Shops, a thouſand Reports flying about the Town, of Dangers, and Enemies; and that the Grand Vizier with ſome Soldiers were come to the City with bad intentions and deſigns: Amidſt all theſe Rumours, there were no Officers, or Governors; (they being all impriſoned) to appeaſe, or comfort the People, until the Grand Signior created the Niſangi Paſha, (who puts the Grand Signior's Firm to publick Writings) to be Chimacam pro tempore, who came and publiſhed that there was no danger, and that every man ſhould open his Shop upon pain of Death: And that Night the Grand Seignior went to the Grand Seraglio, where he had not Slept in Thirty Years before, having an averſion to the place, as we have ſhewn in other Books. And this was done for one Point of Reformation intended againſt the coming of the Army; for that it was one Article againſt this Sultan, that he had forſaken his Royal Palace, or Seraglio, the Glorious Seat of his Anceſtors.

Kuperlee Paſha is ſent for.

In this want of great and wiſe Officers, and Miniſters, the Kuzlir Aga, whoſe Council was only heard, adviſed the Grand Signior to order and appoint Muſtapha Paſha, Son of the Old Kuperlee, and Brother to the late Achmet Kupriogli, who then commanded at the Dardanelli to go to the Army, and endeavour to appeaſe, and direct them; for which Employment he was eſteemed the moſt proper perſon, being Brother-in-Law to Sciaus Paſha, who married his Siſter, and one who ſtood well in the good Opinion and Eſteem of the Soldiery: But upon farther Thoughts he was firſt commanded to come to Conſtantinople, there to receive his Orders and Inſtructions.

Is kindly received. October 1687.

In a few days Kuperlee Muſtapha came to Conſtantinople, and was treated and received by the Grand Seignior, with an unuſual Reſpect and Kindneſs; he called him Lala, which is a Compellation given by the Grand Signiors to their Great Vizier's, and ſignifies as much (as Father) telling him that as his Father ſetled him in his Throne, ſo now he was to Inherit that Honour, and confirm him thereon in deſpite of thoſe powerful Machinations, which were forming againſt him; and to enable him thereunto, he created him Chimacam, Veſted him, and what was very extraordinary, he cauſed him to Sup with him. That very Night, whilſt the Grand Seignior was at the Table, the Selictar Aga, or Sword-Bearer, who was ſent with the Seal and Standard to Siaus Paſha, by which he was created Grand Vizier, returned from the Army, which he met at Niſſa; and reported, That whilſt he was there, the Soldiers aroſe in a furious Tumult, and cut in pieces the Teſterdar, who was ſent to appeaſe them; and Ali Effendi, who the laſt year had been in the Treaty: But the Reis Effendi, who was ſent on the ſame Errant, upon their firſt ſtirring fled, being too wiſe to truſt their Mercy; as did alſo, a chief Commander of the Boſtangees or Gardiners: But Ajemzadee a reverend Perſon of about Eighty years of Age, adviſing them not to ſpill the Blood of Muſſelmen, was purſued by them into the Vizier's Tent, who covering him with his Veſt endeavoured to ſave him; but finding the danger to which he expoſed his own Life, he was forced to deliver him up to their Fury: He had been Reis Effendi or Chief Secretary, but then had an Office in the Treaſury. They demanded alſo the two Teskaragees, or Chief Clerks to the Reis Effendi, to be delivered up to their Juſtice; one of which had for many years done all the Engliſh buſineſs in that Office; but they deſiring to be Strangled, rather than to have their Bodies mangled by the Soldiery, it was accordingly performed behind the Vizier's Tent, and their Bodies expoſed. Orta, Chiaus of the Janiſaries (of whom we have already made mention) being ſuſpected to have been corrupted by Regeb, the Chimacam of Conſtantinople, was cut in pieces. Muſtapha Paſha, who had been General of the Janiſaries, and Seraskier in the firſt Siege of Buda, was ſecured, and ran great danger of his Life; but by the Mediation of the Vizier, he was only depoſed, and ſent to command at the Dardanelli in the place of Muſtapha Kuperlee, who was now Chimacam at Conſtantinople.

1687.

News from the Army.

Many Officers killed by them.

The Selictar returns from the Army.

And laſtly, after this diſmal Tragedy the Selictar coming to give an account of himſelf, he declared, That he was fearful of his own Life, notwithſtanding the good Office he had done in bringing the Seal and Standard to the Grand Vizier; for which whilſt he was expecting a great Preſent, as was accuſtomary; an Anſwer was given, That the beſt Preſent could be given him was of his own Head, which had been taken off, according to the Liſt in which he was proſcribed, but that he had merited his Life, by this Office of bringing the Seal and Standard.

The Army Marches to Conſtantinople.

The Army having in this manner vented ſome part of their Fury at Niſſa, proceeded on their March towards Conſtantinople, doing little other harm on the Way, than only diſplacing ſome few Officers of the Janiſaries, and putting an old Granatine, who had been one of thoſe, who had been baniſhed by the Spaniards out of the Kingdom of Granada, a Perſon of Eighty years of Age, in the Office of General of the

Jani-

1687.

A Council held.

Solyman the late Vizier ſtrangled.

His laſt Will.

Janiſaries. As the Army approached, ſo the Fears and Apprehenſions of the great Men at Conſtantinople increaſed. Muſtapha Kupriogli, as we have ſaid, being made Chimacam, he appeared publickly in the Divan, and gave out the Pay to the Soldiers; and then went to the Grand Seignior, whom he found at a Kiosk, or Houſe of Pleaſure by the Water ſide, and preſently a Conſultation was held, at which were preſent the two Kadileskers, or chief Juſtices, the Nakib Effendi, who is chief of the Green-heads of the Prophet (or Mahomet's Kindred) four Sheghs or Preachers, the Stambol Effendi, or Mayor of the City, as alſo the Niſangi Paſha, who ſets the Firm of the Grand Seignior to Commiſſions; theſe after a Conſultation and Debate of about two hours time, reſolved on ſeveral Points, not then divulged to the World but by the execution of them; for they all went together to the Chimacam's Houſe, from whence in half an hours time afterwards, the Chiefs of the Chiauſes, whith Thirty of his Men were ſent to the Priſon where Solyman the late Vizier was confined; ſo ſoon as Solyman ſaw the Chiausbaſhee, he ſaid, I know for what you come, God's will be done; the Chiausbaſhee who had been his Creature, and raiſed by him, with Tears in his Eyes delivered unto him the Command for his Head. Solyman taking it from him, kiſſed it and ſaid, I have waſhed, but not as yet ſaid my Kindi, or Afternoon Prayers, (for it was about that time) let me perform thoſe my laſt Prayers, and then in the name of God execute your Office. Solyman having finiſhed his Prayers, called the Chiausbaſhee into an Inner Room, and ſaid, Execute your Orders; but firſt let me recommend two things to you. One is, That you declare and be a Witneſs to the World; That I have given Freedom to all my Slaves both Males and Females. And 2*ly*, That they do not torment my People to find out my Money, for I never had any thing conſiderable; the little I had was with me in the Camp, where it was loſt, and made a Prey to the Enemy. In my Houſe at Scutari there is ſome Furniture, and ſome few Galanteries, which if the Grand Seignior will preſent to my Son it is well, but if not he is Lord and Maſter of them: And if you, ſaid he, to the Chiausbaſhee, ſhall not declare this to the Grand Seignior, my Hands ſhall be upon you at the Day of Judgment; And having ſaid thus much he kneeled, and turning his Face to the Wall, the Executioners performed their Duty. So was Solyman ſtrangled, a Perſon deſerving to live in better times, and worthy of a better Death; his Head was cut off and carried to the Chimacam, where it was flead and ſtuffed with Cotton, and being put into a Box was ſent to the Grand Seignior; but his Body was conſigned to his Friends, and buried at Scutari. His Son a young Man of about 24 years of Age was ſent for from Adrianople, and impriſoned to diſcover his Father's Eſtate; but that being known to be very little, the Chimacam by his own Authority ſet him at liberty. The Wife of Solyman amidſt her Fears, ſent two Trunks filled with Sables, and rich Habits, and Veſtments to the Houſe of a certain Friend to be there ſecured, and were accordingly covered under a Pile of Wood: This matter being obſerved by a crew of Rogues, they came that Night, pretending an Order from the Chimacam to ſeize thoſe Goods, naming the place where they were concealed; at which the People of the Houſe being affrighted, immediately delivered the Trunks to the Hands of the Rogues: The next day the Wife of Solyman, full of ſorrow and anguiſh of Mind, came to the Chimacam to make complaint of this hard Uſage, declaring the Goods to be her own, and not her Husband's. The Chimacam diſavowing the matter, and denying to have given any ſuch Orders, the Robbery appeared, and Search being made after the Thieves, four of them were taken and moſt of the Goods reſtored.

1687.

Propoſals ſent to the Army;

And refuſed.

The next day Solyman's Head was ſent for a Preſent to the Army, by two Officers belonging to the New Vizier, with a Letter from the Chimacam, accompanying an Imperial Command or Signature from the Sultan, declaring, that if the Army would ſtay and Winter at Adrianople he would give them full ſatisfaction in ſending the Heads of all they ſhould demand, not ſparing his own Sons or Brother, and would ſend them the Fifteen Months Pay that they were in Arrear, with the ſame Donative as ſhould have been given, in caſe a new Grand Seignior had been created. But they would hearken to no Conditions, for they had caſt the Bridle out of their Mouths, and taken the Power into their Hands; and nothing could now make them ſafe but a total Subverſion of the Government, and a Change of the Grand Seignior.

Regeb taken.

But firſt, The way thereunto was to be made by the Death of many of the great Men: Regeb Paſha, the late Chimacam, was about this time taken at a place called Viſa near Chattalgee in Aſia, his Horſe tired, and he almoſt famiſhed with Hunger; and being brought to Conſtantinople, he was committed Priſoner to the ſame Chamber, in which his Maſter Solyman had been lately executed; and was in a few days afterwards Strangled, as we ſhall ſee hereafter.

The

Ibrahim Paſha put to Death at Rhodes.

1687. The ſame night that Regeb was impriſoned, the Kapugibaſhee, who was ſent to Conduct the Mufti from Pruſa to Rhodes, returned with the Head of Ibrahim Paſha, who had been Vizier before Solyman; being put to Death by the contrivance of Regeb, as be- before mentioned. The manner whereof was this: The Bey or Captain of the Gally, which carried the Mufti to Rhodes being a Friend to Ibrahim Paſha, endeavoured during the Voyage to pump the Capugibaſhee to know of him, whether he had any other Orders to perform at Rhodes, beſides that of conducting the Mufti; but he could diſcover nothing, ſo that ſo ſoon as he was arrived, he went directly to Ibrahim Paſha to put him out of pain, by aſſuring him, that there were no Orders come in relation unto him, and that their buſineſs was only to bring the Mufti. Whilſt they were thus diſcourſing, a noiſe was heard in the Street and Ibrahim looking out of the Window, ſaw a multitude of People gathering about the Door, which the Bey ſaid, might be out of curioſity to ſee the Mufti their new Gueſt. In a few minutes afterwards, in came the Capugibaſhee; and kiſſing Ibrahim's Veſt ſate down by him, and being asked what News, he ſaid, all is well; and then diſcourſing of general things, he drank his Coffee, and having ſmoaked his Pipe, he put his Hand into his Breaſt, and drew out a Paper, which he gave to his Hand; whilſt he was reading of it, he ſhewed ſome alteration in his Countenance, for he ſoon found that it concerned his Life: He had a little Child at that time playing upon his Knee, he kiſſed it with Tears in his Eyes, and bid his Servants take it away: And then ſaid, What have I done? They have ſeized all my Eſtate, and not being contented therewith, they have ſent for my Life. Oh treacherous World! Whilſt he was ſaying thus much, the Capugibaſhee's Servants threw down the Cord on the Floar, which Ibrahim obſerving to be thick, and rugged, he took it up, ſaying, This is a Cord one would not ſtrangle a Dog with, and bid his Man fetch him a Bow-ſtring, which he ſoaped with the Soap, he intended to uſe at his waſhing before Prayers, and made a Knot to it himſelf: his Prayers being ended he was ſtrangled; and his Head with his Women and Children were brought to Conſtantinople. The Chimacam had no mind to ſee it, for he had been his Friend, and had no Hand in his Blood, which lay wholly at Regeb's Door, who was now in a fair way of incurring the ſame Fate himſelf: The Mony found about him was no more than Nine thouſand Dollars.

It was now the Feſtival of their little Byram, when the Grand Seignior according to the uſual Cuſtom received the Salutes of the Chimacam and all the great Men, ſitting in his Kiosk, or Houſe of pleaſure by the Sea-ſide, with Muſick and firing of the Guns which lay at the point of the Seraglio.

1686. The little Byram.

The Army inflexible.

The Grand Seignior ſtill endavours to appeaſe them.

Fines laid and levied.

And now the Fate of the Grand Seignior ſeemed to approach; for the Army drew near, and had rejected all the fair Terms, and Propoſitions which the Sultan had offered them, and yet he ſtill continued to make ſuch Sacrifices to them as he thought might ſweeten and appeaſe them. But Turks were never uſed to be overcome by gentle Terms and ſoft Promiſes, but by the Topuz or Club, or by violent Remedies. For when the Head of Solyman late Vizier was brought, they ſaid, it was not that which they looked for, but rather to have had him alive under Examination, to know how he had diſpoſed of the Money, which was given the laſt year to defray the Charges of the War: Howſoever, the Grand Seignior ſtill reſolved to try them yet farther by ſuch Methods, which he thought might pleaſe them, and that was to Impriſon, or put to Death all Men indifferently, that were in Office and Power, whether they had deſerved well or evil: Accordingly the Kuzlir Aga (chief of the black Eunuchs) and Boſtangibaſhee were impriſoned in the Seraglio, and others put into their places; and theſe two with Mahomet Effendi, Treaſurer and Steward to the Empreſs, the Moxur Aga to Regeb Paſha, who was Grandſon to the famous Bectas, who was Janiſar Aga when the Kioſem Valide was cut off, Vanni Efendi Teskeragee or Giver of the Writs, Kapan Cheleli, who belonged to the Arſenal; Omar the Steward of Regeb late Chimacam, and Shafan Aga, who had been tormented to diſcover his Money, were all ſent to the Army to receive ſuch Sentence and Doom, as they ſhould appoint for them: But as theſe were not demanded by the Soldiery, ſo ſome of them were rather preferr'd than puniſhed by them. For the Moxur Aga was ſent to command the Janiſaries in Candia, the Boſtangibaſhee and Segmen-baſhee, were ſet at liberty, and the former ſent Paſha to Mytilene, and the other to Command the Forces in the Morea againſt the Venetians; the others were held under Examination, being obliged to render an Account of the publick Monies, which had paſſed through their Hands; but none of them was acquitted without paying a Ranſom. The Kuzlier Aga was fined at Three hundred Purſes, beſides his Goods and Furniture, which were very rich, he having Two hundred Sable Veſts, which were never made up, all which were ſeized, and he baniſhed to Grand Cairo, the Aſylum, or Receptacle of unfor-

1687. unfortunate Eunuchs. The Grand Seignior finding himſelf now ſtript of all his faithful and old Friends, which he had imprudently deſtroyed or faintly delivered up into the Hands of his Enemies; began to grow deſperate; and as ſuch, reſolved to play the laſt Game of Cowardize and Cruelty, which was by the aſſiſtance of his Pages and Servants near his Perſon, to cut off his Sons and two Brothers; that ſo none remaining alive of the Ottoman Line, the Soldiers would be obliged to ſuffer him to Reign, and Propagate more of the Royal Race. To execute this deſign with greater eaſe and ſecurity, He ſent to the Eunuchs who kept his Brothers, telling them that he knowing his Condition to be ſuch, that he could Reign no longer, he deſired he might come and ſee them, and recommend himſelf and Children to them, for that as he had been merciful to them, and not touched their Lives, ſo that they would prove kind and compaſſionate to him and his. This deſign could not be executed without entruſting it firſt to the Pages, who were to be Actors in the Tragedy; and they not being all faithful alike, ſome, or one of them made it known to the Chimacam, who immediately charged the New Kuzlir Aga, and Boſtangibaſhee to ſet Guards at the Doors of the Brother's Apartments; between whom and the Pages there hapned ſome Scuffle: The new Janiſar Aga had alſo received Orders to attend with his Janiſaries before the Gate of the Seraglio; and matters being in this manner ſecured, the Chimacam went himſelf to the Grand Seignior, and admoniſhed him not to precipitate, and engage himſelf in ſuch a raſh and odious Attempt, which the Janiſaries, who were attending at the Gate would moſt certainly Revenge without any Regard, or Reverence to his Perſon. The Grand Seignior had been a little Rough before with the Chimacam; but the armed Force being near, ſo affrightned him, that he began to Treat the Chimacam with milder Terms. Howſoever his Children were removed from the Seraglio, and the Guards doubled, which were ſet upon his Brothers. From that time the Grand Seignior loſt all his Authority; for the Chimacam came no more near him, and order'd the Boſtangibaſhee not to ſuffer him to ſtir out of the Seraglio, ſo that all the Liberty and Divertiſement he had, was to paſs his time in a Kiosk, or Houſe or Pleaſure near the Sea. Howſoever, the Grand Seignior to make Trial of his Authority ſent a Hatteſheriff, or Royal Command to diſplace the Segmenbaſhee; but it proved of little effect, for the Chimacam received it, and ſaid tis very well, but laid it by him, and that was all.

The Grand Seignior endeavours to cut off his Brothers and Sons.

Is prevented.

The Grand Seignior loſes his Authority.

THE

Solyman the fourteenth Emperour of the Turks made Sultan october ye 30. 1687.

p 257

THE REIGN OF SOLYMAN,

The Fourteenth Emperor of the Turks.

1687. BY this time the Army was come near to the City, the Vizier in Perſon as far as Ponte Grande, which is about Twenty Engliſh Miles Oct. 28. 1687. diſtant from Conſtantinople: And about ten a Clock that Night, the Janiſar-Aga entred the City, with ten Chambers of Janiſaries. And now did the hour fatal to Sultan Mahomet approach; for about two a Clock in the Morning of the 29*th* of October, Sultan Mahomet depoſed. the Boſtangeebaſhi, and the Kuzlir Aga by Order of the Army came to Sequeſter and confine him to his Chamber. He asked why, and what Hurt he had done? They told him, That he had Reigned Forty years, which was the Life of a Man, and might content himſelf with that, for that few of his Anceſtors had ruled ſo long. Then did the Chimacam, the Mufti, Nakib Effendi, who is principal of the Green-heads, or Mahomet's Kindred, with the Kadeleskers or Chief Juſtices, with the Chief Men of the Law meet together, and held a Council before Day at St. Sophia. This Nakib Effendi had been a Kadelesker, but a few Days before; for the former Nakib died of a Fright, taken at the appearance of ſome Janiſaries before his Door, which he apprehended came to ſeize him. After they had ended their morning Prayer about break of Day, they went together from the Moſch to the Seraglio, and entring in, they asked for Sultan Solyman, who was brought out to them; and then the Nakib Effendi, whoſe Office it was, as being the Head of the Race of the Prophet, placed him in the Throne, and Sultan Solyman made Emperor. prayed that he might be proſperous, and increaſe the Honour of the Empire, and kiſſed his Hand, as did alſo the Mufti, the Chimacam and the others. The Sultan laying his Hand on his Breaſt bowed and thanked 1687. them; after which Ceremony they all retired, and afterwards about nine a Clock Proclamation was made in the Streets, That Sultan Mahomet being depoſed for his ill Government, Sultan Solyman is made Emperor in his place.

1687. The next Day being the laſt Day of October, the Chimacam, the Chiansbaſhee, and other great Men went to meet the Grand Vizier at Daout Paſſa, a place diſtant about two Engliſh Miles from Conſtantinople; but the Chiausbaſhee was arreſted, not that the Soldiers had any thing againſt him, but only that they might make room for him, who officiated in that charge in the Army.

1687. The firſt of November the Grand Vizier made his Entrance into the City with a Solemn Cavalcade, accompanied by all the great Men of the Empire both Civil and Military: The Mufti riding on his Left-hand, Siaus Paſha Grand Vizier makes his Entry and Salutes the Grand Seignior. he went to the Seraglio, where he alighted, and taking the Standard of the Prophet, he went with it to the Grand Seignior, who ariſing from his Throne went three Steps to meet it, and took it from the Vizier, and gave it to the Selictar; then the Vizier gave him up the Seal alſo, which being with his Brother's Name, he kept, and returned him a new one, with his own Name. The Solemnity being over, the Vizer went to a great Palace lately Ibrahim Paſha's, near the Janiſaries Chamber, which was provided for him; and the Chimacam Kupriogli remained in that where his Brother and other Viziers had formerly reſided.

And now it might have been thought, that all Seditions and Mutinies amongſt the Soldiery would have ended at this Period But it ſeems the Storm was not half over;

1687.

Nov. 1687. Regeb ſtrangled.

The chief of the Mutineers killed.

for it remained, that the Authours of theſe Troubles who had been guilty of ſo much Blood, and death of their Officers, ſhould at length turn their Fury againſt each other; and ſo it happened: For the Spahees meeting at Atmeidan or the Hypodromo, and the Janiſaries at Etmeidan, demanded their Pay, and that Regeb Paſha, ſhould be delivered to their Hands. The next Day being the 4*th* af November, Regeb Paſha was ſtrangled, and his Body expoſed before the Seraglio in the Square of Santa Sophia, and laid on an old Matt for three Days: It is believed, that thô the demand of his Life proceeded from the Soldiery, yet that it was a contrivance of the Vizier, not only in Revenge for procuring the Command ſent to the late Solyman for his Head; but out of fear of his Perſon, who was known to be a Subtle, and a ſtout Man. The ſame Day Cochinck or little Mahomet, a Peſtilent Fellow, and chief Head of the Mutinous Spahees, with ſeven other Ringleaders in all the Seditions, was lodged in the great Palace of the Hypodromo; and when he went abroad was always attended with a numerous armed Guard, whether out of State, or Fear, is not well known; having a confidence in himſelf, and his Merits and good Services he had done for the Soldiery, adventured to perſwade them to a quiet, and an orderly behaviour, and to content themſelves for the preſent with three Pays, and to have a little patience for the reſt, and for their Donative, until Money could be raiſed: This admonition ſounding not well in the Ears of ſome Soldiers, they preſently inſtilled into the Minds of their Comrades, that this Mahomet had been taken off with Mony, and was brought into the Aſſociation with thoſe, whoſe buſineſs it was to defraud them of their juſt Demands: Such a ſiniſter Report as this, was enough at that time to have deſtroyed half their Officers; as it quickly did his buſineſs; for immediately they ran to his Palace to look for him there, but miſſing him, they afterwards met him in the Streets, and pulled him from his Horſe, ſaying, You that brought us hither, and ſhould Speak for us, now look to your ſelf; you Lie in a Palace, Eat High, and are clad in Sables, whilſt we poor Fellows are Ragged, and Lie in the Yards of the Moſchs, and Corners of the Streets; and with that they ruſhed upon him, and with Clubs and Knives, killed him, and Toar his Body in Pieces. This was the buſieſt Man of any, feared by all, thô an ordinary Spahee; he was preſented and courted by all the great Men in Town; for no Man was ſecure of his Head, if he would have inſtigated, and moved the Soldiers to call for it: Having thus diſpatched him, they ran to his Palace, and plunder'd all he had there.

1687.

Several Impriſoned.

The Kuzlir-Aga, who had eſcaped, was purſued and taken at Nice, and brought back and committed Priſoner to the ſeven Towers; then was Mahomet Effendi Tefterdar or Treaſurer, Shaban Aga, Omar Kiah, Capan Chelebi, and ſeveral others, were ſent to the Common Priſon: But Kupriogli was declared Moſayp, or Favourite of the Grand Seignior.

The Spahees and Janiſaries unite.

The Vizier yields to all their demands.

All the care was now to pacifie the Soldiers, which was only to be done with Money; and the Art was, how to ſeparate and divide the Spahees; as a means whereunto they began to give pay to the Janiſaries, and to ſerve them firſt: This had likely to have begotten ill Blood; but the Spahees put them in mind of the ſolemn Oath, they had made to ſtand by each other; and the Janiſaries refuſed their Pay, without the increaſe both of their Pay and Donative; but there being not as yet a ſufficient Fund for all, the Tumults ſtill continued. This Artifice which was contrived for a Separation, tied the Knot of Union more cloſely between the Janiſaries and Spahees, ſo that many Spahees came as Gueſts to the Janiſaries Chambers, and lodged with them, declaring that they would not touch an Aſper of their Pay, until the Janiſaries were fully ſatisfied. This Friendſhip being made between theſe two Military Orders; the Spahees as the more polite and ingenious Men took all the Government into their own Hands, holding their Councils at Atmeidan, and what was there reſolved, was reported to the Vizier by four of their own Members, and the Vizier being forced to aſſent unto all their Demands, gave them a Writing to approve of all that they ſhould do, and liberty to uſe ſuch Methods for raiſing Money, as they ſhould judge moſt convenient in this exigence, both to ſatisfie the Donative, and the Arrears and Increaſe of Pay.

The Janiſaries chuſe a new Aga.

Notwithſtanding all theſe Condeſcentions, and thô the means were put into their Hands to pay themſelves what they demanded, yet the Troubles and Embroils ſtill continued: For the Janiſaries ſuſpecting that their Aga or Commander in Chief was not cordial to them, nor approving their Actions (for every one was thought ſo, who did not run to the ſame heigth of Madneſs with them) they turned him out of his Office, and would have none of their own Body to command them, but one, as in former times, taken out of the Seraglio; and ſuch an one they pitched upon, called Muſtapha Aga, a Chirurgion by profeſſion, who had been Twenty five years in the Seraglio, of which he had been eight Talbentgee or Turbant-folder to

the

1687. the late Grand Seignior, and Selictar to the preſent Sultan; the true cauſe of this change was, that they would have a raw unpractiſed Fellow over them, and one whom they could govern, and not one, who knew how to govern them.

The manner of raiſing Money.

The Tumults ſtill continued, and muſt ſo until Money could be found, which the Soldiers were now themſelves to raiſe; every Man that had Money muſt now bleed his Coffers, and redeem his Life with his Riches. The Favourits of the Seraglio muſt pay their Shares, being taxed at vaſt Sums, the particulars of which were not exactly known; but it was reported, That the Selictar Aga to the late Grand Seignior, now made Paſha of Grand Cairo, paid Six hundred Purſes; the Chiobadar, or he who is Maſter of the Wardrobe, Two hundred; the Paſha of Balſora, Two hundred; beſides many others, who all paid their Aſſeſments, as the Soldiers were pleaſed to Rate and Tax them.

Rich Men taxed.

Then the Chief of the Spahees called before them ſeveral of the Rich men of the City, and Taxed them each according to what they believed them worth; and ſent an Officer, with a certain Number of Soldiers, to go with them to their reſpective Houſes, and ſtay with them until the Money was paid, and then they carried it to the Treaſurer, taking his Receipt for the ſame. The Stambol Agaſee, or Mayor of Conſtantinople, was Fined Five hundred Purſes, the Shahir Emin, or City Cuſtomer Forty, Sari Oſman Aga Thirty, beſides Ninety which the Exchequer owed him, which he was to remit. Likewiſe the Grand Signior's chief Phyſicians, Aſtrologers and Goldſmiths, and great Numbers more of all ſorts and conditions, were all Taxed, and moſt of them to the full of what they were worth. Thus were vaſt Sums raiſed by Military Execution, with which the Grand Vizier was well enough pleaſed; for the Soldiers had done his buſineſs for him, without drawing an Odium upon himſelf; for there being a ſcarcity, and yet an abſolute neceſſity for Money, it could not be raiſed by more compendious Methods, than by armed Force.

The Janiſaries Aſſaults their Officers.

And yet for all this the Tumults continued; for the Janiſaries not knowing what they would have, aſſaulted their Officers at Evening Prayer, in a Moſch near their Chambers; ſaying, That they were met there in Council againſt them, with deſign to inſtill bad Principles into their new Janiſar Aga; but no hurt was more done than a few Blows, and an abundance of bad Words.

Nov. 1687.

They vouchſafe to raiſe their pay.

And now about the middle of this Month, after many Complements and Courtſhips made to the Janiſaries, they condeſcended at length to raiſe their Pay and Donative, which were ſo kindly offered; and thoſe, 1687. who had been impriſoned upon paying their Ranſom were ſet at Liberty. Mahomet Effendi, who had been Treaſurer, paid One hundred and twenty Purſes; Shaban Aga One hundred and fifty, beſides Four hundred which had formerly been racked from him by Torments; Capan Chelebi Sixty, Omar Kiak Thirty five, beſides what had been taken from him before: Muſtapha Aga the Chiausbaſhee Forty, and Uziel a Jew was made to pay eight Purſes; and thus ſufficient Money being found for payment of all, and the ſame daily iſſuing, all things grew calm and quiet; ſo that on the 17*th* about eight a Clock in the Morning, the new Grand Seignior went by Boat from the Seraglio to Eiub, where the Nakib Effendi, or Chief of Mahomet's Kindred Girt him with the Sword, which is a Ceremony anſwering to our Coronation; and having ſaid Noon-Prayers at that place, and all the Ceremonies ended, he rode from the Moſch in a Solemn Cavalcade through the City back to the Seraglio, but not with ſuch Splendor and Magnificence, as had been done in the time of the Grand Seigniors his Predeceſſors: All People crouded (as we may believe) to ſee the Features and Faſhion of their new Sultan, of whoſe Perſon and Abilities Reports had created already a high Expectation.

The new Grand Seignior inſtalled.

His perſon and qualities.

He was of a long, lean, pale Viſage, but not of an ungrateful Aſpect; his Eyes were full and black, and his Beard was black, but ſomewhat griſly; what his Qualications of Mind were, will be more evidently diſcovered hereafter, and come then more properly to be deſcribed in their due place. But in the mean time we may reflect, that the change of the perſon of the Prince, could not be of much advantage to the Publick; For what the other did out of a remiſs and voluptuous Humour, attending only to his Divertiſements, and leaving the Care and Management of all his Affairs to the Contrivance and Conduct of his Miniſters; this Grand Seignior muſt now do out of neceſſity, being wholly unexperienced in the World, having all his Life been kept up in a Chamber, without other Converſation, than that of a few Eunuchs, ſome old Women, and two or three Hogiaes, or Maſters to aſſiſt him in his Studies. As Books were his Entertainment in his confined Life, ſo he ſeemed to have had an affection for them, in the choice he made of Kupriogli for his Favourite, who was eſteemed in that Country a learned Man, and to have had the beſt Library of any in that whole Empire. It was ſaid, That he had promiſed his depoſed Brother all ſecurity of his Life, and that he ſhould be kept in the ſame manner, as he was; and that he might 1687.

allow him what comfort he could in that manner of Life, he ſuffered his Children to be with him for ſome Days; but they were afterwards by the Councils of others taken from him and lodged apart. His other Brother Achmet, the Companion with him in his Impriſonment, he viſited, and promiſed to be kind to him; but he was not perfect Maſter of his Senſes; of which we ſhall ſpeak more when we come to ſee him on the Throne after the Death of Sultan Solyman. The Hazaki Sultana, or Empreſs of the depoſed Sultan, was ſent to the old Seraglio there to remain until Death, or ſome other Revolution of Fortune ſhall releaſe her: In the place of her, the Mother of the preſent Grand Seignior, who for ſome years was reported to be dead, appeared alive, and removed from the old Seraglio to her Son, but ſhe was a little Maddiſh.

He viſits his Brother Achmet.

Thus were all things turned up-ſide down; all the great Officers of the Empire, except the Captain Paſha or Admiral, being changed: Which when a Man ſeriouſly conſiders, and that theſe Revolutions were carried on by common Soldiers, one would admire that they ſhould paſs with ſo little Confuſion, or Blood-ſhed: For except thoſe ſix which were killed in the Army, and Cuchiuck Mahomet at Conſtantinople in a Military Fury, there was only Solyman and Regeb cut off; for the Death of Ibrahim at Rhodes, did not proceed from them, but from Regeb. As to the daily Inſolences in the Streets, they were not committed by the Spahees, but by poor Drunken Janiſaries, who had neither Money nor Cloths, and therewith would be ſupplied from Chriſtians, and Jews, and Turks too. But this was no new thing, but what had been formerly practiſed by the baſer ſort of the Soldiers, as often as they came from the War, or were ſhortly going thither. And now ſince things were thus changed, ſome Reformation was expected, and that was to begin in the Seraglio; where the firſt and moſt plauſible thing was the Retrenchment of the Expences, which during the time of the late Sultan had been exceſſive, the very Barly for the Horſes coſting One thouſand five hundred Dollars, or Three hundred pounds Sterling a Day; the number of the Hawks and Dogs, with the People who attended them was vaſt, all which were ordered to be reduced; for the preſent Sultan took ſo little delight in theſe Divertiſements, than he was to learn how to Ride; and the Stables were to be reduced to a Hundred Horſe, one Hundred and fifty of the Pages were to be made Spahees, and the reſt were to be changed, and new ones put into their places. The ſame was to be performed in the Courts and Chambers of the Women; ſo that the Retrenchments made were calculated to amount unto Eight thouſand Purſes of Money a year, every Purſe being Five hundred Dollars, and may be accounted to be almoſt a Million of pounds Sterling: The Greyhounds and Dogs, of which there were many Hundreds kept in the Seraglio for the uſe of the late Sultan, were all let looſe and ſuffered to run about the Streets of Conſtantinople, where they might have ſtarved, had not the godly Men, whoſe Religion conſiſts much in feeding Dogs and Cats, taken Compaſſion on them, and fed them daily with Bread from the Bakers Shops.

Reflections on the changes.

Reformations in the Government.

1687.

Decem. 1687.

Theſe Retrenchments of expence in the Seraglio pleaſed the Soldiers wonderfully, hoping that thereby the more Money would be coming to them; and ſo they continued very obſervant and quiet, during all the time that the Money was paying out; but ſo ſoon as that began to fail and fall ſhort, they became as troubleſome as ever, aſſembling with great Inſolence at the Vizier's Houſe, threw Stones at his Windows, ſtorming and raging like Mad-men, until ſuch time as with fair words, and promiſes of Money within a few Days they were for a while appeaſed.

New Commotions.

Thus far had the Soldiery found the ways to raiſe Money; but now they being at a ſtand, it was the Vizier's turn to ſet on foot ſome new invention, or conjuration for more: But ſo empty and drained were all the great Banks, that no other way could be thought on, but only to go over the rich Men once more, and to ſqueeze them to the laſt Dreggs of all their Eſtates; to perform which they began with the old Kuzlir Aga, who obtained his Liberty upon payment of Nine hundred Purſes, in all, beſides his Furniture, and Curioſities which were taken from him to a great value; and after that he had the favour to be Baniſht to Grand Cairo: The Haſnadar Aga, who (as we have ſaid) ſucceeded him, was diſplaced, and paid Two hundred Purſes; and the Aga of the old Seraglio was made Kuzlir Aga; which Promotion was according to the ancient Methods, that every one ſhould riſe and ſucceed gradually, and favoured ſomething of a Reformation. But becauſe this new Tax would not reach the entire Sum required for the Soldiers Pay and Donative; they were forced to Coin out of Plate, and Silver and Gold taken off from the Horſes Furniture belonging to the Seraglio Two hundred Purſes in Gold, and Sixty in Silver; with which every one being ſatisfied, all was quiet and calm again, and the Spahees returned to their own Homes, leaving ſix of the Chief Mutiniers to remain behind at Conſtantinople. That is to ſay, one Chief

Mony wanting, but is found.

The Spahees go Home.

with two Aſſiſtants for the white Colours, and the like for the red; and Four hundred Captains called Bolucbaſhees, Two hundred for each Colour or Enſign; and theſe were appointed to hold the power in their Hands, which their Mutinies, and late Rebellions had gained for them.

The French deſire to engage the Turks to them.

About this time, the Turks propoſed at the inſtigation of the French Ambaſſador; to ſend a Chiaus into France, England and Holland, to acquaint thoſe Princes with the advancement of Sultan Solyman to the Throne of the Ottoman Emperors. The which Embaſſy, tho little deſired by the other Miniſters, being a Complement inſignificant in it ſelf, and which would only coſt Money and Trouble, was yet much preſſed by the French, who were then contriving to do ſomething extraordinary to engage the Turk in a ſtrict Alliance with them, being at that time reſolved to diſoblige, and enter into a War againſt the Emperor, and all the Princes of Germany. But by Troubles afterwards amongſt the Turks themſelves, and by the revived Spirits of Mutiny amongſt the Soldiery, their thoughts were ſo taken up with their Seditions, Forreign Enemies and other Misfortunes, that they thought it not ſo ſeaſonable to ſend ſuch triumphant Meſſages in the declenſion of their Affairs, as might have been in more happy and proſperous times. Howſoever the French Ambaſſador and Merchants at Conſtantinople, to evidence their good Affection to the Port, freely ſupplied the late Selictar Aga, now appointed Paſha of Grand Cairo, with two Ships to Tranſport him and his Equipage to Alexandria; and farther to oblige him, lent him in Money and Goods to the value of One hundred and fifty Purſes; for ſecurity of which, Pawns were given to remain aboard, until the Debt was ſatisfied.

The Vizier appears in publick.

And now the Grand Vizier began to appear in publick with the uſual Pomp and Equipage; he made his Viſit with great State to the Mufti; and daily held the Divans in the Seraglio, beſides thoſe at his own Houſe.

The Character of the new Grand Seignior.

The new Sultan had been ſo little a while in the Government, that he could not as yet give many Indications of his Temper; but as to what appeared of him at firſt, he ſeemed very devout, a ſtrict obſerver of his Law, and much addicted to reading, ſo that he could not ſhake off his habitual retiredneſs, nor enjoy the pleaſures of a Court, and of ſuch a Throne as anciently caſt off all the Cares of it, on the Vizier and other Miniſters; for he neither converſed with Women, nor took any publick Diverſion. In the mean time his depoſed Brother Sultan Mahomet, who had always uſed much Exerciſe, began by an unaccuſtomed Confinement to be tainted with the Scurvy; his Legs ſwelled, and gave Symptoms of the Dropſy. Wherefore he ſent to his Brother the preſent Sultan, deſiring that ſome Phyſitians might be permitted to come to him for his Cure. But grave Solyman returned him anſwer, That in caſe he ſhould allow that, and he miſcarry, the World would ſay, that he was an occaſion of his Death; ſo that in lieu of the Phyſitians he would pray to God for him, and he who ſent the Sickneſs could give him a Cure.

The Chriſtian Army draws into Winter-quarters.

Theſe civil Commotions and Mutinies amongſt the Soldiers were more dangerous to the Ottoman State, than all the Ruins, Defeats and Loſſes they had received from the Enemy; and gave the Imperialiſts an opportunity to act, and ſucceed in all their Enterprizes in Hungary, and march and rove with their Parties through the whole Country without oppoſition or controule: But the Seaſon of the year being too much advanced, it was thought time to draw the Armies into Winter-quarters, and to lodge them in the conquered Countries. Thus Count Dunewalt after he had fortified and ſecured the Caſtles, and Places which he had taken, quartered his Army at Poſſega, Valkovar, and other places bordering upon Croatia. Likewiſe the two Regiments of Palfy and Staremberg, which had lately been detached from the Duke of Lorain's Army, to attend the Emperor's ſervice at Poſſonium, on occaſion of the Coronation of Joſeph King of the Romans; joyned with ſome other Hungarian Troops near Buda, attacked in their way thither the Fortreſſes of Ciocca and Palatta, and took them; by which the Garriſon of Alba Regalis was much ſtreightned, and diſabled from making Incurſions ſo far as the Danube.

Quarters taken in Tranſilvania.

Apafi ſends Deputies to the Duke of Loraine.

The Duke of Loraine marching (as we have ſaid) towards Tranſilvania, reſolved to take Quarters for his Army in that fruitful Principality, as yet not much waſted with the War; and the better to prepare them, diſpatched away the Baron Hunſchin with full Commiſſion to Prince Apafi to Treat about the places, which might be aſſigned with moſt convenience for the Soldiery, and eaſe to the People. Hunſchin ſpeedily returned with advice, that he had been favourably received by Apafi, who having aſſembled ſeveral of his Boyars, or Noblemen together, had reſolved to ſend Deputies to the Duke of Loraine, giving him to underſtand, the great joy and ſatisfaction they had received by the happy Succeſſes of the Imperial Arms, by which they flattered themſelves ſo far, as to believe that they ſhould now be freed from the Tyranny and oppreſſion of the Ottoman Yoak, and that as

1687. as a Teſtimony thereof, they had readily conſented to afford all the ſuccour and ſubſiſtence they were able to the maintenance of the Chriſtian Troops, during the whole Winter ſeaſon. But as to aſſign them places for Quarters within the Principality of Tranſilvania, they inſtantly deſired to be acquitted; in regard that ſuch a Conceſſion would greatly offend the Port, and lay them open to the Incurſions, and to the Fire and Sword both of the Turks and Tartars. To this Meſſage the Duke of Loraine made Anſwer in obliging, but yet in general Terms; and in the mean time the Army ſtill advanced without farther Treaty, it being well known that neither the Turkiſh Troops, nor thoſe of the Country were in a capacity to Diſpute their Paſſage; ſo that on the 11*th* of October, the Army arrived at Salone, the firſt Town of Tranſilvania, where after having without many queſtions or complements, put a Garriſon of about a Hundred Men into the place, they marched forward towards Clanſembourg: But on their way thither, the Duke of Loraine was met by three Deputies from the Prince and States, who repeated the ſame Offers, which had been related by Baron Huntſchin touching the Ammunition and Proviſions, with which they would furniſh the Troops; to which they added alſo an offer of ſome Money; but as to aſſigning places for Winter-quarters, it was a matter impoſſible, and of the moſt dangerous conſequence to them in the World; ſince that their Country lying open, and without defence, would thereby be expoſed to all the Hoſtilities, which the moſt barbarous and cruel Enemy in the World could execute. The Duke of Loraine finding that the Commiſſion of theſe Deputies extended no farther, than what they had declared; returned them back again with Count Scherffemberg and Baron Falkenhem, who were orordered to let Prince Apaſi know, that ſince he had refuſed to aſſign him Winter-quarters on fair Terms, he himſelf ſhould be conſtrained to point them out unto his Troops, and continue his March into the Bowels of his Country. The States of the Principality perceiving the Duke of Loraine to be in earneſt, and reſolved to obtain his Demands; were contented to grant him Quarters for a certain number, but that not ſuffiſing, he continued his March towards Clanſembourg or Claudiopolis, the chief City of that Country, and the place where the States of Tranſilvania did uſually Aſſemble. It is ſituate in a very fruitful Plain upon the little River of Samos; it is encompaſſed with very thick Walls, and the Houſes are very well Built; it is defended by an ancient Fortreſs; the Suburbs are ſo large and well peopled, that it ſeems to be another Town; the Inhabitants are both Hungarians and Saxons, who live in ſo good unity and correſpondence together, that both are equally capable of Offices and Places of Truſt in the Government. The Duke of Loraine ſo ſoon as he appeared before the Place, ſent to the Governour to provide Quarters in the Town for ſome of his Troops; but he excuſing it, and ſaying, that he could not do it without Orders from Prince Apaſi, immediately Count Caprara was ſent to let him know, that his Anſwer was not ſatisfactory, and that Orders were given to the Infantry to prepare all things neceſſary for making an Attack on the Town. Whereupon the Governour conſidering better of the matter, enter'd into a Treaty with the Duke of Loraine, who condeſcended to grant unto the Inhabitants theſe following Conditions. 1687.

1687.

Offers made.

A Meſſage from Loraine.

Claudiopolis.

The Conditions with Claudiopolis.

That the Inhabitants ſhould enjoy a free Exerciſe of their Religion.

That the Magiſtrates and Citizens ſhould be maintained in their Liberties and Priviledges, and not be forced to pay any extraordinary Contributions.

That every Officer or Magiſtrate of the City, ſhould be exempt from giving Quarters to any Soldier in his own Houſe.

That what Forage and Subſiſtence ſhould be neceſſary for the Soldiery ſhould be furniſhed in Specie, and no Money exacted in lieu of the ſame: And that the Soldiers be forbidden under ſevere Penalties to commit any Diſorders, or Abuſe the People.

That thoſe Citizens who were unwilling to continue their Aboad in the City, but were deſirous to depart, might have Liberty ſo to do, and carry with them all their Goods and Moveables.

According to theſe Conditions the Garriſon of Apaſi, marched out at one Gate, whilſt Three thouſand of the Imperialiſts enter'd in at the other with Drums beating and Colours flying; and the Command of the Town was given to Count Guy de Staremberg, which a ſtrict Charge to puniſh moſt ſeverely all Inſolences of the Soldiers; the which was carefully obſerved, not only in that City, but alſo in all parts of Tranſilvania ſince their entrance into it.

The Duke of Loraine having for one day refreſhed the reſt of his Army in places without the Town, marched towards Torrembourg, which is another important Paſs in that Country, in which having left a Garriſon, he proceeded to Weiſſembourg, otherwiſe called Alba Julia, ſo named from the Empreſs Julia, Mother of Marcus Aurelius, and entred into it without any reſiſtance. The place is ſituate on the ſide of a Hill, from whence

The Duke of Loraine at Alba Julia.

1687. whence a vaſt Plain diſcovers it ſelf; it is reported to have been the ultimate Limit of the Roman Conqueſts on that ſide. Prince Ragotzki erected an Univerſity there, which was very flouriſhing and famous, conſidering the Country.

Zeben

Hermanſtadt, alias Zeben, followed the Example of the aforeſaid places: It is the Metropolis of the whole Province of Saxons, ſituate in a Plain full of Boggs and Marſhes, and no Hills near to command it; the Walls are very thick, and flanked with very great Baſtions.

And Beſtriſſa ſurrender.

Beſtriſſa, and all the other conſiderable Towns opened in like manner their Gates; ſo that now the whole Army being conveniently Quartered, the Duke of Loraine entred into a Treaty with Prince Apaſi, and the States of Tranſilvania, and concluded on theſe following Articles.

Articles agreed.

I. That the Prince of Tranſilvania, his Children, and all perſons of his Houſhold, as alſo, all the Nobles, and in General, all the People of Tranſilvania may have liberty according to their Will and Pleaſure to go out of Hermanſtadt, or any other City or Town, and return again, as ſhall be moſt agreeable and expedient to or for their Affairs.

II. That the Prince, and Michael Apaſi, his Eldeſt Son, who is declared Succeſſor to his Father, ſhall both retain the ſame Power and Dignity with which the Sultan had inveſted them, and that the Principality ſhould be governed by them, and the Eſtates according to the known Laws and Cuſtoms of that Country.

III. That the Four Religions allowed in Tranſilvania, that is to ſay, the Roman Catholicks, the Lutherans, the Calviniſts, and the Unitarians, or Socinians, ſhall be permitted to exerciſe the Rites of their reſpective Religions, and to have Liberty of Conſcience equally indulged to them.

IV. That it ſhall not be permitted, on any pretence whatſoever, to moleſt the Prieſts, or the Miniſters of any of the aforeſaid Religions in the due exerciſe of their reſpective Rites and Ceremonies, nor diſturb their Schools, or Colleges, the which with all freedom and liberty ſhall be allowed, and permitted, and defended by the Authority and Power of the Emperor.

V. That the Tranſilvanians ſhall be ſupported, and maintained in their Civil Privileges, and Franchiſes.

VI. In caſe any Foreign Power ſhall invade, and attack the Country of Tranſilvania, the Imperialiſts ſhall uſe all their power to drive them thence and defend the Country: And the Tranſilvanians ſhall to that end enter into a defenſive alliance with them; the which ſhall by both Parties be confirmed upon Oath. 1687.

VII. The Imperial Troops which have their Winter-Quarters in Cities, Towns, or Villages, ſhall remain no longer therein, than until the Spring; when they ſhall be obliged to draw out of thoſe Quarters into the Field, that ſo they may be no longer a charge unto the ſeveral Cities and Countries.

VIII. That in caſe the Weather and Seaſon ſhould be ſuch, or ſome other cauſe intervene, that the Imperialiſts cannot conveniently draw out into the Field at the beginning of the Spring; there ſhall be an Article expreſly formed for this caſe; that ſo an amicable underſtanding may be continued between the Emperor and Prince Apaſi.

IX. That a General Act of Amneſty, or Oblivion ſhall paſs of all Outrages and Hoſtilities which have been committed on one ſide or the other, wherein all Strangers and Deſerters ſhall be included.

X. That the Burghers and Citizens ſhall be continued in their Privileges of guarding the Gates, and the Keys of the City ſhall be committed to the hands of the Saxon Conſuls; the which Gates notwithſtanding are to be ſhut and opened at all times when the Imperial Governor ſhall command.

Theſe Articles being agreed, and concluded between the Duke of Loraine, and the Prince and Eſtates of Tranſilvania, and afterwards ratified by the Emperor, the Troops marched into their Winter-Quarters; and it was hoped, that Moldavia, and Walachia being Neighbouring Provinces, would follow the Example of the more powerful Principality.

The Imperial Court goes to Poſſonium.

This Year's Campaigne being thus gloriouſly ended, to the great and laſting Honour of the Emperor, and to the Welfare and Safety of the Empire, and of all Germany, and as we may juſtly ſay of all Chriſtendom; The Emperor, the Empreſs, the Arch-Duke, and the Arch-Ducheſs Elizabeth his Siſter on the 26*th* of October left Vienna, attended only with their ordinary Guards and Miniſters, and Officers of their Court, and began their Journey towards Poſſonium, at which place againſt this time, circular Letters had been ſent to convene a General Diet of the Nobles and States of Hungary.

This Auguſt Family were met on their way near that City by Two thouſand of the Hungarian Nobility, all well mounted, with a ſplendid Equipage in the Plains of Chitzé, not far from Poſſonium; as alſo by two Imperial Regiments, which attended their Majeſties to the Gates of the City, where the Recorder met them; and having Complimented their Majeſties with a moſt florid Oration, offered the Keys of the City to the Emperor, in the Name of the People, who with loud Acclamations, and firing all the Cannon on the Walls, teſtified the Joy they conceived for the appearance of the moſt Auguſt and Illuſtrious Family.

Crown of Hungary ſetled.

The day following, after the Maſs was Celebrated, the Aſſembly of the States of Hungary were convened, where after divers Points were debated, all Difficulties were overcome, and agreed to the common ſatisfaction, and with the general conſent, That the Hereditary Succeſſion of that Kingdom ſhould deſcend to the Eldeſt Son of his Ceſarean Majeſty, and from him to all thoſe who ſhall ſpring, or be derived from him; and for default of Iſſue, in caſe that Line ſhould come to fail, (which God forbid) then the Crown ſhould deſcend unto the Family of the King of Spain.

The Ceremonies of Crowning the King of Hungary.

The day appointed for the Coronation being come, the Emperor and Empreſs, attended with a Noble and an Illuſtrious Train came to the Temple of St. Martin, where the Ceremony was to be performed, and at the Gate thereof were met by the Archbiſhop of Strigonium, Primate of that Kingdom, aſſiſted by all the Biſhops, who were Twelve in Number, beſides Fourteen Priors, and Abbots, clothed in their Pontifical and Canonical Habits, who with the Sound of all ſorts of Muſical Inſtruments, conducted their Imperial Majeſties, habited in their ſacred Garments, wearing their Crowns, attended with a moſt pompous Train, and with all the Signals of Empire unto the Altar, and there ſeated them on their Thrones.

After which the Biſhops and other Prelates returned to receive the new King; before whom firſt marched the Heralds of the Kingdom of Hungary in their Coats: After them followed the Guards, next went the Lacquies and Pages, all clothed in new Liveries; theſe were followed by the Biſhops and Chief Officers of that Kingdom, with Ten Hungarian Knights, each carrying a Standard in his hand, repreſenting the Ten Kingdoms anciently appertaining to the vaſt Dominion of Hungary.

After all which came the King clothed in the Hungarian Habit accompanied with Prince Eſterhaſy the Palatine, and the Counts Stephen Ciaky, Lord Chief Juſtice Nicholas Erdeody Ban or Prince of the Kingdom of Croatia, John Draſcoviz, Steward of the Royal Houſhold, and Adam Zrini, Marſhal of the Kingdom; the King himſelf being between Two Biſhops, was conducted to the Throne prepared for him, not far from the High Altar, at which Maſs was Celebrated by the Archbiſhop of Strigonium, Lord Primate of Hungary; the which being ended, all the Nobility did Homage to the King; who having made profeſſion of his Faith before the Altar, he was Bleſſed and Conſecrated by the Archbiſhop, and Anointed in the Palm of his Right-hand, on his Arm, and Shoulders; and then the Palatine holding up the Crown in his hand, asked them with a loud Voice, ſaying, Coronabimus Joſephum Archiducem Auſtriæ in Regem Hungariæ? which is, Shall we Crown Joſeph Arch-Duke of Auſtria King of the Romans? which being done Three times, and anſwer made as often Coronetur, or let him be Crowned; the Crown was delivered by the Palatine to the Archbiſhop, who ſet it on his Head, and was clothed by him with the Royal Mantle of St. Stephen: Then was the Sword delivered to one Hand, and the Scepter to the other; and thus being adorned with all the Enſigns of Majeſty, he was Proclaimed King with the ſound of Drums, Trumpets, Acclamations of the People, and all ſorts of Muſick, the Cannon being at the ſame time Fired round the Walls, and in the Fortreſſes. Then was the King conducted again to his Throne, and Te Deum ſung: In the mean time the Maſs was continued by the Archbiſhop, who being come to the Goſpel, the Emperor himſelf aroſe, and taking the Scepter in his Right Hand, and the Globe in his Left, he held the ſame in that manner, until the Goſpel was ended, and then the Young King received the Sacrament.

All the Ceremonies being ended, the King deſcended from his Throne, and walked in Proceſſion, habited in his Royal Garments, the Biſhops, and all the Orders of State marching before him, to the Church of the Franciſcans diſcalced, all the Streets being hung with White, and Red, and Green Cloth, and crouded with an infinite Number of Spectators. Being come into the Monaſtery, ſeveral Ceremonies were performed, and the King having conferred the Honour of Knighthood on divers Gentlemen, he was entertained with a Dinner, and ſome Refreſhments, after the Solemnities of Four hours, in the Refectory of the Convent. After which the King mounted on Horſe-back, and being attended with a Noble Cavalcade of moſt of the Nobility of the Kingdom, and always accompanied by the Prince of Salm, his Tutor, under Title of Lord High Steward of his Houſhold; he was conducted through the Gate of St. Michael, to a Theatre erected againſt the Monaſtery called the Brethren 1687. of Mercy, on which the King aſcended; and being Seated under a Canopy, all the Guns from the Walls of the City and Fortreſſes were Fired; and then the King in the face of all the People, took an Oath to conſerve all the Privileges of that Kingdom, as lately agreed by the Eſtates in ſeveral particulars. After which the Palatine turning to the People, cried with a loud Voice, Vivat Rex Hungariæ. Then the King deſcended, and went in like manner as before, to another Theatre raiſed on a little Hill near the Fiſh-gate; where unſheathing his Sword, he therewith made Four Croſſes towards the Four Quarters of the World, as a Signal that therewith he would Fight againſt all the Enemies of that Kingdom, and of the moſt Auguſt Houſe of Auſtria. After which the King deſcended, followed by the Lord High Chamberlain of the Mountain Cities; and Baron Viechten, of the Emperor's Privy-Council, who ſcattered Money amongſt the People; and being entred within the Caſtle, all the Canon were Fired; and the King diſmounting from his Horſe, was attended to the Emperor's Apartments with a ſplendid Train of the Nobility and Gentry; and being thence conducted to the Imperial Hall, he was entertained there with incomparable Muſick both Vocal and Inſtrumental, and with a Sumptuous and Royal Banquet; where alſo all the Prelates, Grandees, and Strangers were treated at Eighty ſeveral Magnificent Tables. After which, the Solemnities and Triumphs of the day were ended with great Joy, Honour, and Satisfaction. And now in this place it is worthy our Obſervation, that whilſt the Germans were employed in the Exaltation of Joſeph, the Arch-Duke, to the Throne of the Kingdom of Hungary; the Turks were on the other ſide buſy in pulling down, and depoſing Mahomet their Sultan, and in his place, raiſing and ſetting up his Brother Solyman to be their Lord and Emperor.

Whilſt theſe things were in agitation, the Blocade of Agria continued, and the place greatly ſtraitned by Marqueſs Doria. And the Duke of Loraine having agreed all things with the Prince and Eſtates of Tranſilvania, and ſetled and ſecured his Army in their Winter-Quarters, found a vacancy to abſent himſelf from the Camp, and eaſe his mind after the troubles of a long and hazardous Campaigne: Accordingly the Duke in company with the Marqueſs of Baden Durlach, took his Journey towards the Imperial Court, and in his way viſited Marqueſs Doria; and taking a ſurvey of the Blocade of Agria, gave ſuch Orders therein, as were moſt convenient to force a ſpeedy ſurrender of the place; and thence proceeding to Poſſonium, he was there received by his Imperial Majeſty, with ſuch Honours and gracious Expreſſions, as befitted the Worth and Merit of ſo brave and fortunate a General. And having remained ſome few days at this place, he took his leave of the Emperor, and his Journey to Inſprug, being all the way honoured with the Praiſes, Acclamations, and Bleſſings of the People. 1687.

In the mean time Agria being miſerably ſtraitned for want of Victuals, many died, and others to avoid Famine, abandoned the Town, and fled privately to other places: Thoſe which remained within, grew deſperate of all relief: For Tekely had promiſed them Succours, and in purſuance thereof intended to paſs the Tibiſcus; but meeting there with ſome Forces under Count Sarau, was forced to retire, leaving Agria to its own Fate: Of which the People having Information, they all aroſe, and with one conſent laying before the Paſha their miſeries, in which they muſt (if not prevented) in a ſhort time inevitably periſh, they conſtrained him to propoſe a Treaty, and ſend Two Hoſtages to the Imperial Camp; which being accordingly done, the Marqueſs of Doria accepted them, and in exchange thereof ſent Two others to the City. The Articles were eaſily agreed, but not ſo ſoon executed; for the Paſha out of an unneceſſary caution, required that the Capitulations ſhould be confirmed by the Hand of the Emperor; in compliance with which demand, Marqueſs Doria diſpatched Count Anthony of Lamberg, a Carinthian Gentleman, with an Aga, to make tender of the Articles to the Emperor; the which having been examined, were Approved, Confirmed, and Signed by his Imperial Majeſty.

The Articles being returned with their Confirmation, and the Writings of Treaty exchanged, Count Marſigli with a Commiſſary of the Artillery, was ſent into the Town, that with his uſual Zeal, and dexterous Management of Affairs, which he had evidenced in ſeveral occaſions in the Emperor's Service, he might take notice of the ſtate of the place, and the Proviſions belonging to it. The Count being entred into the Gates, was received kindly by the People, and with much faithfulneſs was ſhewed all the Magazines, Stores, and Ammunition of the place. We muſt not expect to receive any account of Victuals, for thoſe were long ſince conſumed; but as to Ammunition, there were Twenty thouſand Cannon-Bullets remaining, of which Four Thouſand were for Whole Cannon; One Thouſand hundred Weight of Powder, Twenty thouſand Hand-Granadoes, beſides great quantities of Bombs and Carcaſſes, many thouſands of Match, One hundred and Ten Pieces of Cannon, five Mortar Pieces, 1687. and nine Mines and Countermines; notwithſtanding all which, Famine being a ſtronger Enemy within, than all the Troops and Forces were without; on the 16*th* of December the City was ſurrender'd, and according to the Capitulations, Carts were provided, and the Soldiers and Inhabitants with their Women and Children, and with their Goods and Baggage were permitted to March out; and then Ruſſan the Paſha deliver'd up the Keys of the City, Caſtle and Magazines, to the Hand of General Caraffa, who at the Head of the Imperial Troops ranged in good order, ſtood ready to receive them. Then the General conducted the Paſha to his Tent, and there treated him with a very ſumptuous Dinner; after which he preſented him with ſeveral fine Horſes, and two Carts laden with Refreſhments. Various diſcourſes having paſſed between them, at length Ruſſan Paſha taking his leave, ſaid theſe words, Into your Hands, as Commiſſioner for the Emperor of the Romans I ſurrender this City without Blood; for having endured a Famine of ſeven Months without Bread, I could hold it out no longer, but am forced to give up a place, which one of my Emperors took with his own Hands; wherefore do you give God thanks; for this and all other Succeſſes are from the appointment, and diſpoſition of the moſt High.

General Caraffa trea's the Paſha of Agria.

All the Garriſon, with Men, Women and Children, which marched out, were Three thouſand five hundred; about Six hundred remained in the place and ſubmitted to the Imperial Sovereignty. It was ſad to hear the Miſeries of thoſe People recounted, who had for ſeveral Months lived on nothing but boyled Herbs; and if a piece of Horſe-fleſh could have been purchaſed with Gold, to dreſs and put in the Pot with them, it would have been a Feaſt for ſeveral Days. The conſtancy of this People in their ſufferings cannot be ſufficiently expreſſed; ſo that as the Blocade it ſelf was the moſt famous of any in our Age, ſo the Surrender of the place was of high importance; for Thirteen Counties depended thereon, and the Emperor thereby became abſolute Maſter of all that Country, which lies between the Danube and the Tibiſcus; and laid Mongatz open and expoſed to greater danger, which was already blocked up by Forces quarter'd round the place. Thus having finiſhed the relation of this year's Wars in Hungary, it will be pertinent to our Hiſtory to paſs over into the Morea, and there take a Survey of that Country, and recount the Exploits and Atchievements, performed there this year by the Venetian Arms.

The advantage of taking Agria.

1687. At the beginning of this Year, the Senate ordained three days of ſolemn Devotion to implore the Divine Bleſſing on the Arms of that Republick, which was performed with many Proceſſions, expence of Lamps and Wax; and with many Vows and Prayers of the People. So ſoon as the Seaſon became Ripe and fit for Action, it was reſolved by the Captain General, the Cavalier Francis Moroſini, with the Univerſal conſent of all the Commanders at a Council of War held the 21*ſt* of July, to enter the River of Patras, and accordingly the whole Fleet, with the Veſſels which tranſported the Land Forces, Proviſions and Ammunition looſed from Glimino on the 20*th* of July, and made a glorious appearance in thoſe Seas, being compoſed of Twenty ſix Gallies, ſix Galeaſſes, beſides Eighty ſeven Veſſels of other ſorts; that is to ſay, Ships, Pinks, Petaches and ſuch like, who were all Commanded by the Governour Zaguri. This Fleet Sailing all that Night with a proſperous Gale, on the 21*ſt* in the Morning came in ſight of the Caſtles and Fortreſs of Patras; at appearance of which the Turks being much alarum'd came down in great numbers, and pitched their Tents, ſome on the Top of a Hill, and others on the ſide of the main Caſtle. The better to diſcover the State and Condition of the Turkiſh Camp, the lighter Veſſels were Commanded to Coaſt along the Shoar, by which and by ſome Spies it was known, and adviſed in what manner their whole Camp was diſpoſed; a Detachment of which under ſhelter of a Trench, which they had thrown up, fired many Vollies of Small-ſhot againſt the Veſſels which coaſted along the Shoar; but proceeded no farther to annoy their Enemies than unto the end of their Line; which when the Captain General obſerved, and the difficulty of Landing near thoſe places, he enter'd into the River of Rumelia, which in like manner he found to be guarded by great numbers of Turks, and a Trench like the former caſt up near the Caſtle. The General Koniſmark (of whom with due Honour we have made mention in the Tranſactions of the laſt year, was embarked on the Admiral Gally with the Captain General, to have the better convenience to conſult and confer together) was of Opinion, that notwithſtanding all the Preparations the Turks had made near the Caſtle, and that the Seraskier of the Morea was encamped near the Town of Patras, and two other Paſhas not far diſtant from thence, and the Banks along Guarded by Parapets or Breaſt-works; yet, that the moſt fit and commodious place to Land, was in the River of Patras it ſelf; which being agreed, the Troops were diſpoſed in an extraordinary manner of Military Diſcipline, and order'd ſpeedily to Land, which was done with great Reſolution. The firſt to ſet Foot on the Shoar were the Germans, who were on 1687. Prayers at Venice for Succeſs.

The Venetian Armado Sail to Patras.

The Turks Trenches.

The Chriſtians land.

1687. followed by all the other Troops, without any hindrance, or obſtruction from the Enemy at their Landing; becauſe the place being in ſome manner guarded and defended by a Moraſs, or Wet-ground, the Turks thought themſelves on ſome kind of diſadvantage, in caſe of an Attack.

The Turks Retreat.

Some Gallies paſs the Caſtles.

The Troops being landed, and drawn up in Battalia, the Germans led the Van, and marching with great bravery to the Right, were charged by a ſtrong Detachment of the Turks; whom they received with ſuch Vigour, that they cauſed them to Retreat, and afterwards betake themſelves to a ſhameful Flight. This firſt ſtep being thus fortunately begun, gave Courage to the Chriſtians, and Reſolution to the Captain General Moroſini, to fall on the Seraskier in his Camp before he was reinforced by more Troops, which daily joyned with him. At firſt landing all the Venetian Army conſiſted of no more than Nine thouſand Foot, and Thirteen hundred Horſe; thoſe Forces having been much diminiſhed by the Fatigues of the laſt year, and the Sickneſs of their Winter-Quarters, but now being recruited by great numbers of Levents and Greeks, who as Volontiers came over from Zant and Ceſalonia, the Army became numerous and capable to undertake any Enterprize. But to facilitate the Deſigns; it was adjudged neceſſary to cut off all Communication between the Caſtles; the which was no ſooner ordered than put in Execution, by the entrance of divers Gallies, which by favour of the Night adventured to paſs the Dardanelli, or narrow Paſſages into the bottom of the Gulf, without any other hurt or loſs, than of four or five Men at the Oars by a Cannon-ſhot; the which Gallies were followed by a Galleot and three Felucas, Commanded by Magnar, a Knight of Malta. This unexpected appearance of the Venetian Colours within the Dardanelli, as it ſtruck a great Terror and Amazement to the Turks, being a Streight which they thought impoſſible to be paſſed by any Veſſel whatſoever; ſo it gave the Chriſtians a Reſolution to Attack the Seraskier, who according to a Report of certain Priſoners taken in a Boat paſſing from the Morea to Rumelia ſide, lay not far off encamped with an Army of 10.000 Foot, and 4000 Horſe; and that a Reſerve of 5000 Foot more, and 1000 Horſe lay quartered about five Italian Miles from thence. The Gallies within the Gulf made great Triumph with their Flags and Streamers; and made themſelves Maſters of Fourteen Galiots or Brigantines, which had long ſerved for Capers or Picaroons, to Rob and Plunder in thoſe Seas. This Succeſs enlivening the Spirits of the Chriſtians, it was reſolved at a Council of War, to March by the ſide of the Hill to attempt the Seraskier's Camp, as a way the leaſt incommoded by the Enemy's Cannon; and where was place ſufficient to draw up the Battalions in good order.

1687.

Koniſmark draws up the Army.

In purſuance of this Reſolution on the 24th of July by break of day, General Koniſmark drew up the Army, and diſpoſed them in order of Battle, and advanced boldly on the Enemy, who conſiſted of Ten thouſand Foot and Four thouſand Horſe: And in the mean time the Captain General with ſome light Veſſels directed the Galeaſſes, to deſtroy a Battery of the Enemy erected near the Sea-ſide; and to drive out of a Trench two Troops of Turkiſh Horſe, a Marine Regiment was landed under Command of Captain Negro, who in a ſhort time made themſelves Maſters of the Battery, on which were divers Pieces of Cannon, two whereof were of Braſs.

A Fight.

The Seraskier enraged at the loſs of theſe places, and ſeeing the Enemies Troops advance upon him, feared to be aſſaulted in the Rear, or ſurprized in their Trenches; to prevent which, he made a Detachment of ſome of his beſt Troops to meet the Enemy and Skirmiſh with them; in which Action thô the Turks ſeemingly ſhewed Reſolution; yet they did it in that looſe manner, running at firſt as it were on the Face of the Enemy, and then turning their Backs, as if they deſigned thereby to diſturb the good Order of the Chriſtians; who ſtill maintained and kept their Ranks with a Regular ſteddineſs, and ſtill advanced forward to come unto their deſired Engagement. At length about three a Clock in the After-noon the Turks began to Skirmiſh with a Battalion Commanded by Colonel Ceclina, who ſo well behaved themſelves, that they put the Enemy to Flight: Which when the Seraskier obſerved, he gave out the Signal for the whole Army to Engage, and to Charge the Chriſtians both in the Front and in the Flank, truſting to his Troops, which were much Superiour in number to their Enemies. Their firſt attack was with the uſual Cry of Alah, Alah, accompanied with the Vollies of all their Small-ſhot, after which they fell furiouſly on with their Scemyters in their Hands. The firſt Fire was received and ſuſtained by the Germans, flanked by the Croatian Cavalry of the left Wing, without moving the leaſt Step backwards, and particularly by the old Veterane Regiments of Brunſwick, who according to their uſual Bravery, repulſed the Enemy with continued Vollies of Shot; and the Cavalry under Command of that renowed Captain the Marquis of Corbon, ſo vigorouſly ſeconded the Foot, that the Turks began to give Way and Retreat, and ſoon afterwards to betake themſelves to a ſhameful Flight.

The Turks defeated.

Chriſtians were very eager to purſue the flying Enemy, but the General Koniſmark ſuſpecting ſome treacherous Ambuſcade, gave a ſtop to the Valiant Heat of his Army.

At the ſame time, the Captain General took this opportunity to Command Captain Negro with his Battalions to advance to the bottom of the Gulf of Lepanto, from whence all the Forces both of the Fleet, and the Land Soldiers giving a loud Shout, put the Turks into ſuch a Conſternation, that they abandoned all their Works raiſed at the bottom of the Gulf; and giving Fire firſt to their Magazine of Powder and Ammunition, they followed the Example of their flying Seraſkier or General.

Patras taken.

In this manner by the Bleſſing of the Divine Providence, this ſtrong Fortreſs of Patras fell into the Hands of the Venetians, which in former times had withſtood numerous Armies of the Turks. In ancient days Emanuel Emperor of the Greeks, finding himſelf not in a Condition to defend this place againſt the proſperous, and the then ſucceſsful Arms of the Turks, reſigned it into the Hands of the Venetians to be defended by them, who ſo well fortified the place with ſuch Works and Cannon, that the Turks laying Siege thereunto in the year 1465, were able to avail nothing; but afterwards returning with a more powerful and invincible Army in the year 1496, and laying Siege to the place; after a long and valorous defence was forced to yield it ſelf to the power of the Turk, in whoſe Hands it hath ever remained, until this year of 1687, when it yielded it ſelf to the Victorious Arms of the Evangeliſt St. Mark.

Mahomet Paſha put to Flight.

The Fort of Lepanto battered.

The Seraſkier Flies to Corinth.

So ſoon as the News hereof came to the knowledge of the Captain General, he immediately weighed Anchor, and by break of Day in the Morning, Sailed with his whole Fleet under the Caſtle of Rumelia, where he found Mahomet Paſha Encamped with Six thouſand Men. This Surprize was ſo ſudden, that the Turks having no time to conſult, or ſend for other Succours or Auxiliaries, with great Precipitation betook themſelves to a ſhameful Flight, giving Fire in the firſt place to all their Magazine of Powder, the force of which ſhook down a great part of that Wall which looks towards the Sea. Upon theſe Succeſſes, the Captain General following the Air of his good Fortune, Commanded all the Fleet to bring their Chaſe-guns on the Head of their Ships and Gallies, to bear on the Fortreſs of Lepanto, which was a moſt admirable Structure, and ſo ſtrong, that in ancient times it had ruined thoſe Armies and Fleets, which had made Attacks upon it: But now the Fortune of the Turks being changed; and therewith their Spirits ſunk and grown low, they were not able to ſuſtain the ſhot of the Venetians; but taking whatſoever with them, that they could carry on their Backs and Shoulders, they abandoned the place, leaving a free acceſs and entrance thereinto at the pleaſure and will of their Enemies: Thus did the Venetians in leſs than Twenty four hours time, erect their Flag on four ſeveral ſtrong Fortreſſes, with little damage on their ſide, but with conſiderable ſlaughter of the Turks, and loſs of the greateſt part of the Baggage, Ammunition and Tents in their Camp; from whence the Seraſkier marched with great fear and haſt to Corinth. In theſe four places the Venetians took Sixty Pieces of Cannon, moſt of them of Braſs, with eight Pieces in the Camp of the Seraſkier, and other ſix from the Camp of Muſtapha Paſha, with great Stores of Proviſions of all ſorts. The News of this happy Succeſs was diſpatched to Venice with all diligence by Sergeant Major Nicolo Roſſi, who embarked on a Feluca belonging to the State, and happily arrived at that City on a Sunday, whilſt the Grand Counſel of ten were actually Sitting; The Letters from the Captain General being opened and Read, giving a diſtinct Account of the Bleſſings of Heaven on the Venetian Arms, it pleaſed the Senate to give immediate Order, that ſolemn Thanks ſhould be render'd to God Almighty in all places of publick Devotion, for his Benedictions and gracious Deliverances: And accordingly his Serene Highneſs the Doge, aſſiſted by all the Ambaſſadors and Senators, and Magiſtrates in their purple Robes, deſcended into the Ducal Chappel of St. Mark, where Te Deum was ſolemnly Sung with moſt excellent Harmony, and Muſick of all ſorts of Inſtruments, with firing the Guns, ringing of Bells, and ſeveral other Expreſſions of Joy and Triumph; the which Feſtival of Joy continued for the ſpace of three Days.

Rejoycings at Venice.

Rewards given to the Generals.

Theſe Demonſtrations of publick Joy being concluded, the Senate which hath been always munificent in their Gifts and Honours unto thoſe, who have rendered Services to their Republick, were pleaſed in the High Counſel of the Pregadi, to ordain, that to the eternal Memory of the glorious Triumphs of the Captain General Franceſco Moroſini, that the Horſe-tails and Standards, which are the Opima Spolia, or Royal Spoils, taken from the Seraſkier or Turkiſh General in the Field, ſhould be placed in the Senatorian Chamber: And that a Statue of Braſs repreſenting the Perſon of Moroſini ſhould be erected, with ſuch an Inſcription as might conſerve the Glory of his Name to all Ages. The term of time in which Count Koniſmark was to exerciſe the Office of General, was enlarged for ſeven years, beyond the time ſpecified in his Patent, with an Augmentation of Six thouſand Ducats to his ordinary Stipend, ſo that for the ſeven years to come, he was to receive Twenty four thouſand Ducats a year; To the Prince of Brunſwick a Jewel was ordained of Four thouſand Ducats; To the Prince of Savoy a Sword was appointed, with a Hilt ſet with precious Stones, to the value of Twenty four hundred Ducats; To Marquis Corbon Eight hundred Ducats a year were allotted, as an Addition to his former Salary: All, or moſt of the other General Officers were gratified with Preſents, agreeable to their quality; and ſuch as were Venetians were promoted to Offices, and places of Truſt in the State, and ſome to the Patrician Dignity.

The Turks Fly out of the Morea.

Thus whilſt all things were Triumphant at Venice, the Morea was filled with Slaughter and Conſternation of the Turks, who terrified with the entire Defeat and Flight of the Seraskier, and the Surrender of Lepanto, Patras, and two other Caſtles of conſiderable Force, reſolved to give way to Fortune, and to quit and abandon the Kingdom of Morea. For indeed, the loſs which the Turks had ſuſtained, was far greater than it was computed at firſt; for beſides thoſe which were Slain in the Field of Battle, above Two thouſand were found dead in the High-ways, in Ditches and under Rocks: And divers Soldiers Adventurers, who to get many Slaves, were ſo bold as to Rove about in the Country, reported, that in the Fields and Villages, every where they met with dead Bodies and wounded Men. To purſue this Victory, and follow the Foot-ſteps of Fortune, which ſo fairly preſented it ſelf, the Captain General leaving the great Veſſels of his Fleet at the two Caſtles of Rumelia and Lepanto, enter'd farther into the Gulf of Lepanto with his lighter Gallies, and coaſting along by the Land-ſide, he ſo affrighted the Turks, that carrying away with them what Goods were portable, they followed the Foot-ſteps of their flying Army. And being mad and enraged to leave their native Soil, they carried away with them whole Families of Chriſtians into Slavery: But the Peaſants or Country People alarumed hereat, and encouraged by the Succeſſes of the Chriſtians, aroſe in Arms againſt them, and recovered back the greateſt part of their Wives and Children, as they were leading them into Captivity, killing and taking many of the Fugitives. The Noiſe hereof ſerved ſtill to amaze and confound the Turks; ſo that Muſtapha Paſha fled with all Precipitation without ſo much as being purſued by the Enemy, taking his March towards Salona, not far from which place he encounter'd with Iſhmael Paſha, who had with him a Thouſand Soldiers, which he brought from Salonica, alias Theſſalonica. Theſe two Commanders with fear, and uncertainty what to act, remained ſome days at Salona; for conſidering that in caſe they ſhould remain there, they ſhould lie expoſed to the Attack of the Enemy; and then in caſe they ſhould march and joyn with the Seraskier at Corinth, they were in danger of being ſtrangled by him, for having been ſo tardy in their March, and ſo backward in coming to his aſſiſtance, wherefore they took a Reſolution to become a Convoy to thoſe Families of Turks, who in great numbers with Women and Children had quitted the Morea, and were going to plant themſelves in the upper parts of Greece.

Muſtapha Paſha Flies to Salona.

The Venetians Anchor before Corinth.

In the mean time the Captain General Sailing with Victorious Arms, and a proſperous Gale by the Shoar of the Gulf of Lepanto, came in a ſhort time to take a full view and proſpect of the ancient City of Corinth; in the Road of which they came to an Anchor with all their Fleet of Gallies and Galeots: But becauſe that Gulf is commonly ſubject to bad and tempeſtuous Weather, and the Navigation in thoſe Seas very dangerous, there being no Port on the Morea ſide within a Hundred Miles; and on the other, no ſhelter beſides a ſmall Nook or Creek, which is narrow and not capable to receive many Veſſels, and the Water ſhallow; therefore the Captain General proceeding with due caution according to Military diſcipline, diſpeeded ſome of his lighter Veſſels to Fathom the depth of the Waters, and to take a ſurvey of the State, and Condition of the Enemies Camp.

The Turks burn and abandon Corinth.

The affrighted Turks ſeeing the Venetian Fleet in the Road of Corinth, did of their own accord ſet Fire to all the Villages and Houſes round about, and alſo to the Town it ſelf, blowing up all the Ammunition, and deſtroying the Proviſions which they could not carry with them; and ſo quitted and abandoned that anciently famous City, leaving it a Prey to their Enemies at a cheep rate, without the leaſt drop of Blood; and thence poſſeſſed with a Panick fear marched away to Thebes, there to make their place of Rendezvous for their ſcattered Troops to unite.

The Captain General being informed that the Turks had deſerted the City, or Village rather (as it now remains) and reduced as much as they could of it unto Aſhes, returned with all ſpeed imaginable to the Caſtles of Rumelia and Morea, where he had left the moſt conſiderable part of his Forces encamped, as alſo ſome Gallies and Veſſels belonging to his Fleet: And there taking aboard the greateſt part of the Infantry, whilſt the Cavalry marched by Land, with ſome Regiments of Foot under the Command 1687.

The Chriſtians take poſſeſſion of the place.

A deſcription of Corinth.

mand of Count Koniſmark, they all came to joyn near the Town of Corinth; and thence in order of Battle took poſſeſſion of the place, where they ſcarce found a Houſe, or Lodging wherein to cover or ſhelter themſelves; ſuch havock and deſtruction had the Turks made of every thing beſides the Walls. The Gates alſo of the Fortreſs were found open, and an eaſy entrance thereinto; which being poſſeſſed by the Companies of Colonel Bonetti, and Count Vertoua, the Standard of St. Mark was diſplaid on the Walls. The City of Corinth was anciently the Metropolis of all Achaia; and therefore called by Lucius Florus Achaiæ Caput, & Greciæ Decus: After it had fallen under the Government of the Roman Commonwealth, many Battles were fought near the Walls of that City, under the Command of ſeveral Generals, ſuch as Critolzus, Metellus and Mummius. The Corinthian Braſs is famous over all the World, for the admirable mixture of it with divers other Mettles, amongſt which there was ſome proportion of Gold which enter'd into the Compoſition. The Art of making this Braſs is now entirely loſt, and the quantity thereof not much at preſent in the World; for all the ancient Statues of famous Men of Greece, erected at Corinth of this ſort of Braſs, were by Wars and Alterations in the State melted down and carried to Rome, which afterwards being worked into Plates, ſerved to cover the Roof of the Pantheon, now called the Rotondo at Rome; and thence by order of the Barberini were ripped off, and an Altar made thereof conſecrated to St. Peter and St. Paul, in the great Baſilicon of St. Peter; the Over-plus of which was turned into a Cannon, and placed in the Caſtle of St. Angelo; which gave occaſion to that ſaying, Quod non fecerunt Babari, fecerunt Barberini.

The Situation of Corinth is in a rich and fertile Country, and in a ſweet Air, and ſo near the Sea, that it enjoyed the benefit and uſe of all the Elements, rendring it a place of Plenty and Luxury, which gave occaſion to that ſaying, Non cuivis homini contingit adire Corinthum. Near this place is the Mount Parnaſſus, and the Fountain of Helicon. From the Romans Corinth deſcended to the Grecian Emperors, one of which called Emanuel, over-threw Roger King of Naples, who invaded the Countries near Corinth. Not long afterwards the Deſpots of Greece yielded it up to the Republick of Venice, who defended it for ſome years, until overpowred with the force and numbers of Mahomet the Second, were at length compelled to give it up to his Tyranny: Since which time it hath ever remained in the Hands of the Turks, until this year of 1687, when God favouring the Chriſtian Arms in this, as well, as in other parts, was pleaſed to reſtore this City to the Venetians, the ancient Lords and Poſſeſſors of it.

1687.

The Albanians fall on the Turks.

The Albanians encouraged with theſe Succeſſes, and the Flight of the Turks, purſued after them, and falling on their Rear ſeized on their Baggage, and all their Beaſts of Burden, ſuch as Horſes, Camels, Mules and Aſſes; carrying away Men, Women and Children Captives, with great Droves of Cattle to the City of Megara.

Caſtle Tornese Surrenders.

Theſe happy events were followed by the Surrender of Caſtle Torneſe, at the firſt Summons made by Captain Negro, upon no other Conditions than that they ſhould ſave their Lives, and have Licenſe to carry away all their Goods and Baggage, which was freely granted to them, with Veſſels to Tranſport them to Smyrna. But before their departure, about an Hundred and fifty Turks, Inhabitants of that Caſtle, voluntarily declared themſelves Chriſtians, and were deſirous of being Baptized; amongſt theſe were many Families of the Gaſtuni, who having a Territory of their own, containing ſome Hundred of Houſes and Cottages, deſired all to be received into the Boſom of the Chriſtian Church; all which were in a Solemn manner Baptized together; to the great Confuſion and Diſpleaſure of the Mahometan Profeſſors.

1687.

Several other Towns ſubmit.

As alſo Salona.

The Report of theſe Succeſſes, with the appearance of ſo great a Fleet at Corinth, ſtruck all the Inhabitants of the Morea with ſuch Terrour and Conſternation, that they voluntarily ſubmitted themſelves to the Venetian Government; as namely Miſitra, Saritenea, Idrapolica, all which places were abandoned by the Turks: Only Salona, a Town well peopled, and Situate in a rich Soyl, which lies within a ſmall Gulf ſo called, ſent two Turks to the Captain General to offer a Tribute to him, provided they might live under their own Laws and Government; but this ſeeming a ridiculous Propoſition under their preſent Circumſtances, it was abſolutely rejected: Whereupon the rich and ruling Turks of the City, with fear and precipitation removed their Goods and Families and Fled; and the City yielded it ſelf to the power, and under the ſubjection of the Conquerour: And ſo ſucceſſfully had all things proceeded through the courſe of this Campain, that beſides the Cities gained with very little Blood, as before related, Three hundred Pieces of Cannon, moſt of Braſs were added to the publick Stock; beſides Thouſands of Slaves, Ammunition and Proviſions. All things thus falling at the Feet of the Venetians, the Land Army both of Horſe and Foot encamped near Corinth, under Command of Count Coniſmark, whilſt the Captain General with 1687. the greateſt part of the Armado coaſted round the Morea, to viſit, and ſtrengthen the places newly reduced, and eſpecially thoſe parts which are bordering on the Gulf of Egena. In the mean time many Families of Greece, which had for a long time been oppreſſed by the Tyranny of the Turkiſh Government, made their Petition to the Captain General, that they might be tranſported to ſome Country under the Venetian Dominion, where they might enjoy Freedom and Security, both in their Religion and Eſtates.

Several Greek Families tranſported to the Morea.

Moroſini conſidering well that the multitude of People is the Riches and ſtrength of a Country; and that the Morea being almoſt emptied of People, and deſolate by the Flight and Deſertion of the Turks, eaſily condeſcended to their requeſt, and accordingly diſpeeded the Proveditor Piſani with four Gallies, and ſome other Tranſport Veſſels to carry away the People, of which many Thouſands with their Baggage and Cattle were Embarked, and Landed in divers parts of the Morea, where thoſe Families are at preſent ſetled.

Mitra Surrenders.

The Succeſſes of the Venetian Arms had now gained ſuch Reputation in all parts, that Mitra, a ſtrong and conſiderable place ſubmitted, and followed the Fortune of other places; for the Turks therein, at the firſt appearance only of Polani the Proveditor of Sarnata, with ſome Marine Forces diſplaying their white Flag, enter'd into a Treaty and gave Hoſtages for performance of Articles; the which was ſoon performed, and the place yielded to the Conqueror.

1687.

Malvaſia alarumed.

The Surrender of this City produced many other happy conſequences, one of which, was, that thereby Napoli di Malvaſia became greatly ſtreightned, and all hopes of Relief and Succour cut off, when on any occaſion it ſhould happen to be diſtreſſed: And now to terrifie and amuſe that Garriſon, and the Inhabitants, who by the numbers therein, and the Situation of the place were very ſtrong, and able to make a conſiderable reſiſtance, Captain Venier (who was newly returned from blocking up the Turkiſh Fleet at Rhodes, many of which Ships were come from Egypt laden with Rice, and other Proviſons for Conſtantinople) was order'd to appear before the Town with his Squadron of Ships, and ſome Corſairs, whom he had accidentally met with in the Seas; to which the Capt. General joyning ſome of the lighter Gallies, cauſed ſuch an appearance to be made, ſomething terrible to the People of Malvaſia, as might give them an Alarum, and Prepare and diſpoſe them to a Surrender.

The Venetians Sailing with a proſperous Gale of Fortune, reſolved, if poſſible, to Crown the Atchievements of this Campain, with the glorious Conqueſt of that ancient City of Athens, in order to which deſign (thô the Seaſon of the year was far ſpent) yet the Captain General leaving a ſtrong detachment at Corinth, gave Orders to the remainder of his Fleet to Sail to the other ſide of the Iſthmus, which is the full compaſs and circle of the Morea; and in his way coming before the Walls of Malvaſia, he ſent a Summons to the Turks, who maintained the Peninſula of that ſtrong Fortreſs; but they returning a proud Anſwer, and ſhewing a reſolution to defend themſelves, the Captain General was pleaſed to beſtow certain Bombs and Cannon upon them, which ruined a part of the Town, and did ſome damage to the Caſtle; but having a deſign upon Athens, he thought not fit to Land his Men, but to proceed forward to Port Leon, where being arrived on the $\frac{20}{10}$ of Sept. both Horſe and Foot were immediately Landed, and took their March in an orderly manner to the Walls of Athens.

1687.

And is Bombed.

1687.

A deſign upon Athens.

Port Leon is ſo called from the Image of a Lyon, erected on a Pedeſtal at the bottom of the Port, and may be about ſix or ſeven Engliſh Miles diſtant from Athens.

Which is Summon'd.

So ſoon as the Turks of that place had the News of the deſcent, or landing of the Venetinn Troops, they abandoned the City and Houſes thereabouts, and full of fear and amazement fled into the Caſtle: Which according to the uſual Cuſtom being ſummoned to Surrender on fair and gentle Terms, an Anſwer was returned with proud expreſſions, evidencing a reſolution to defend the place to the utmoſt extremity.

The Caſtle battered.

Whereupon General Koniſmark entrenched round the Town, raiſed a Battery of ſix Pieces of Cannon and four Mortar-pieces, with which he began to Batter the Caſtle, which was Situate on a high Rock, that on three ſides of it was inacceſſible; and becauſe that part which lay open was all Rock, without Earth to cover the Men, it was very difficult to make nearer Approaches; ſo that for the ſpace of eight days, all that could be done, was to ſhoot fiery Bullets and Bombs into the place, which had ſo good effect, that one falling into their Magazine of Powder, Blew up a great part of the Caſtle into the Air, burying moſt of the People in the Ruins.

The Seraſkier dares not Fight.

The Seraſkier having gathered ſome of his diſperſed Troops into a Body, took his March towards Athens, as if he had intended to relieve the place: Upon advice of which General Koniſmark drew off a ſtrong party both of Horſe and Foot, and marched away to meet the Seraſkier; whoſe Spirit being cowed by the late ill Succeſſes in the Morea, durſt not ſtand the Shock, or try his Fortune in another Battle, but retreated, and fled with his Forces to ſtrong Holds in the Mountains.

This

1687.

The Caſtle of Athens ſurrenders.

This ſhameful Flight of the Seraskier, gave ſufficient evidence and proof to the Beſieged of the weak and low Condition of the Seraskier, the which being joyned to the late unhappy Accident of blowing up the Magazine of Ammunition, ſo diſpirited the Defendants, that finding themſelves without all probable hopes of Relief, they diſplaied a white Flag, to ſhew their deſires to Capitulate; and accordingly a Treaty was enter'd into and concluded in few Articles.

The Articles of Treaty.

Some Turks turn Chriſtians.

That the Soldiers ſhould march forth without Arms, and with no more Goods than what they could at one time carry on their Shoulders. And 2*dly*, That in the ſpace of Five days they ſhould quit the place; which was accordingly performed at the expiration thereof; about Three thouſand Souls in all going out, of which not above Six hundred men were capable to bear Arms: To which, Licence was given to take ſo much Proviſion with them, as might ſerve to ſuſtain them as far as Smyrna, or any other place, to which they were deſirous to be Tranſported. But many of the Greeks being not willing to leave their Dwellings and their Native Soyl, remained ſtill in the City; and amongſt the Turks about Three hundred profeſſing the Chriſtian Faith, were received to Baptiſm, of which we find very few Examples amongſt the Turks in other places, who are as firm and conſtant to their Mahometan Principles, as any Sect in the World are to theirs. Only I obſerve that the Turks in Greece are more eaſily perſuaded to embrace the Chriſtian Faith, than they are in other Countries; perhaps becauſe they are for the moſt part ſprung from Chriſtian Parents, and are married to Chriſtian Wives, and have moſt of their Converſation with them; ſo that it is no wonder if the Rites and Services of the Chriſtian Religion, which are become familiar to them, ſhould be more eaſily embraced by theſe than other Turks who are Educated with a deteſtation and abhorrence to Chriſtianity.

The deſcription of Athens.

1687.

In the Caſtle were found Eighteen Pieces of Cannon of divers ſorts and metals; the City it ſelf remained entire with little damage, thô ruined, and grievouſly deſtroyed by other Wars. It was anciently the capital City of all Attica, the Walls of which are about Three miles in compaſs; within which are the Ruins of many ſtately Edifices, which by Time and Wars have loſt their Names and Memory of what they were. There is one Magnificent Palace ſupported by Pillars of Marble, upon one of which is Engraven in Greek Characters, This is Athens, the Ancient Seat of Theſeus: There is alſo the Pantheon, on the Walls of which are Engraven the Figures of the Grecian Champions; there are alſo Two Horſes to be ſeen cut in Stone, which are ſaid to be the Workmanſhip of Praxiteles: Moreover there are many other Antiquities there to be ſeen, which are not the Subject of this Hiſtory. Only it is obſervable, That in this place is the beſt Air of the World, which ſerved to quicken the Wits, and clear the Underſtandings of Young Students, who were ſent to that Univerſity to have their Education. This City being thus fallen into the hands of the Venetians, the Government thereof was committed to the charge of Daniel Delfin, a Nobleman of Venice.

Megara burnt.

The News of the taking of Athens flying into all the Towns and Countries round about, ſo terrified the People of Megara, that not attending the Aſſault or Approach of the Enemy, they with fearful Conſternation abandoned the place, and carrying with them what in ſuch a precipitate haſte was portable, they left the reſt to the diſpoſal of the Venetians; who conſidering it as a place rather troubleſome than uſeful, delivered it up to the Mercy of the Flames.

1687.

As the Venetian Arms were proſperous in the Morea, and other parts of Greece, under the wiſe and happy Conduct of the Captain-General Franceſco Moroſini; ſo were they not leſs ſucceſsful in Dalmatia, and Albania, under the Valorous Guidance of that worthy General Gerolemo Cornaro Procurator of St. Mark.

Caſtel Nuovo attacked.

On the Firſt of September a Squadron of the Venetian Armado (diſtinct from that which was commanded by General Moroſini) conſiſting of ſome Gallies, Galiot Ships, and other Tranſport Veſſels, appearing before the Town of Caſtel Nuovo, greatly alarum'd the Garriſon, and People therein; of which they conceived the greater Dread and Apprehenſions; becauſe they had obſerved that the Auxiliary Gallies, which had long been hovering about the Coaſt of Dalmatia were come in, and had joyned the Armado, attended with great Numbers of Veſſels laden with Ammunition and Proviſions; and re-inforced by certain Veterane Troops belonging to the G. Duke of Tuſcany.

Septem. 1687.

The Venetians Land.

On the Second of September, Girolamo Cornaro Proveditor-General of the Venetian Forces in Dalmatia and Albania, endeavoured to Land the Militia, with all neceſſary Appurtenances of War at a place called Comburt, which was a Port environed round with Hills and Rocks, and had been a place very proper for Landing, had not the Turks prepoſſeſſed the important Paſſes of it, and encompaſſed it about with a ſtrong Trench; howſoever the Venetians reſolving to make a deſcent at that place, drove the Turks out of their Trenches, and landed all their Men, and Train of Artillery, with their Proviſions and Inſtruments for War.

1687.

A Fight begun.

The Paſha of Boſna endeavours to relieve the Turks,

And is repulſed.

The firſt thing there to be done was to diſcover the face of the Enemy, which Calbo, the Proveditor Extraordinary, undertook, and with a Detatched Party brought News, that the Garriſon of Caſtel Nuovo had lately been reinforced by the Neighbouring places, which the Turks were fortifying round about with Trenches, and Redoubts. In conſideration of which, it was reſolved by common conſent that another Deſcent ſhould be made at a place called Zelenica; and accordingly that was performed by the Auxiliaries, aſſiſted by Two Battalions, under the Command of that undaunted General St. Paul, who began a Fight with the Enemy; in which after Five hours time, the Venetians became Maſters of the firſt Trenches, and ſoon afterwards drove the Turks out of the ſecond, and proceeded to gain the Hill called Santa Veneranda, which commands the place: Where having raiſed a ſmall Platform, and fortified it with Two ſmall Guns, with which they ſhot red-hot Bullets into the Town, they ſoon made it too hot for the Inhabitants to abide, or the Soldiers in their Trenches to maintain: And thô the Paſha of Boſna came with all his Forces to their aſſiſtance, yet Two thouſand Soldiers being ſeaſonably landed by the Auxiliary Gallies on the Eaſt part of the Town towards the ſide of Raguſi, gave ſuch an effectual Repulſe to the Troops of that Paſha, that they betaking themſelves to a moſt ſhameful Flight, left the Beſieged in great Terror and Conſternation. In the mean time the Morlachs, who are Thieves and Robbers by Nature, and Profeſſion, entred the Town, and fell on the Plunder, which occaſioned ſome Diſorder, until the Proveditor General by his Troops, and the Authority of his Perſon quieted the Tumult ariſen about the Booty. After which the Militia of Malta advanced according to agreement, with ſo much courage to the very Muzzle of the Enemy's Muſquets, and the falſe Bray of the Upper-Caſtle, that Four Cavaliers of Malta, and many of their Soldiers loſt their Lives in this Action: Howſoever the Poſt was maintained with ſo much reſolution againſt the Ottoman Fury, that Marqueſs Borro Sergeant-Major, flanked with ſome other Troops, coming timely to their aſſiſtance, the Enemy was forced to a Retreat, and ſhelter themſelves under the Cannon of the lower Fortreſs, leaving ſlain on the place, the Captain of the Caſtle, Two Agas, with ſeveral principal Officers, and a great Number of the common Soldiers. Thus the Turks being droven from all their Poſts, and Outworks, which encompaſſed the Fortreſs; and the ſame poſſeſſed by the Venetian Arms, the Siege became totally formed on all parts; every principal Commander having his reſpective Poſt allotted unto him to guard and defend.

1687.

Another Paſha endeavours to give ſuccour.

1687.

A part of the Venetians put to the rout.

The Turks defeated.

The Turks obſerving themſelves to be environed on all ſides by a well-formed and cloſe Siege, made a vigorous Sally with a Detachment of their Braveſt and beſt Selected Soldiers; but were as couragiouſly received, and forced to retreat. Whilſt things remained in this poſture, Intelligence being brought to the Leaguer, that the Paſha of Herzegovina was on his march for to ſuccour and relieve the Town, a Detachment was immediately formed out of the Morlach and Perattine Troops to oppoſe him. This Paſha having lately ſerved in Hungary under one Atlee-gick (which is as much as to ſay the little Horſeman) was upon his Death promoted to the Government of Boſna, in the place of the other Paſha lately defeated; and with that Preferment being a little elevated with Pride, marched forward with confidence of Victory, and Contempt of the Chriſtian Camp; and being on the top of that Hill, which was called Topgee (or the Gunner) he furiouſly made a deſcent on the Quarter of Perini, who upon the firſt Charge received a Wound, in his own perſon; but the Body of his men ſtood firm and immoveable, whilſt the Battalion of Sergeant Major Galli was put to the Rout, and Fled without looking behind them to the Sea-Coaſt: To remedy this diſorder, Major-General Grimini, and the Proveditor-General, with the General of Malta, and all the chief Officers of the Army came in to their aſſiſtance, and cauſed the Run-aways to make a ſtand, and rally again, and make Head upon the Enemy. And then the Colonel of the General's Guards, with ſeveral other Captains coming up, with a Body of Granadiers, they mingled themſelves with the Turks, and fighting with their Swords amidſt the thickeſt of them, gave them ſuch a repulſe, that at firſt they began to give way, and afterwards to betake themſelves to a ſhameful Flight, leaving the Field with the Glory of the day to the Arms of the victorious Chriſtians.

In this Conflict Seven hundred of the Turks lay dead on the Ground; of which the principal men were Zambeg, a famous and ſtout Commander, with many Agas, Bulluckbaſhees, and one Cadi or Judge; whoſe Heads being cut off from their Bodies to the Number of Three hundred, were fixed on Half-pikes, and ranged in order, before the Walls of the Town to be a Spectacle to the Beſieged of Terror, and an Evidence of the Victory. Likewiſe Twelve Colours were taken, together with much Spoil and Booty, which was given as a Reward to the conquering Soldiers.

1687.

Summons ſent to the Town.

Are refuſed.

Upon this Succeſs another Summons was ſent to the Town, inviting them to a Surrender, upon conſideration that the Forces being defeated, which came to their aſſiſtance, there remained no other hope of ſafety than only by yielding themſelves on ſuch Articles as ſhould be offered on reaſonable terms. The Beſieged in Anſwer thereunto, having returned a plain and flat refuſal of coming to any Conditions, all acts of Hoſtility were renewed, and the Cannon began continually to play, which beat down one of the Towers, and made a large Breach on the Curtain, ſo that (notwithſtanding the bad weather which gave ſome hindrance) great Advancement was made, to the damage of the Beſieged: In like manner another Battery of Four Guns continually plyed the City, and ſuch valorous Attempts were made by the Venetians, that in deſpite of all the Enemy's Fire, and frequent Sallies, they made themſelves Maſters of the Counterſcarp; amidſt all which Action the Florentine Troops came ſeaſonably to their aſſiſtance.

The Turks march to relieve the Town.

An Aſſault reſolved.

The Aſſailants forced to retreat.

Whilſt theſe things were in agitation, Advices were brought that Two Paſhas were on their march with numerous Troops for relief of the Town: And that the Paſha of Albania being come as far as Podgoriza, was haſtening with all expedition poſſible to joyn the other Troops, for the ſame intent of giving ſuccour to the languiſhing City. Upon this Advice the Proveditor-General Cornaro, finding that the Breach made was of Six and thirty Paces in Breadth, and that by the fall of a Bomb into the great Tower towards the Sea-ſide, directed by the skilful Art of a Florentine Engenier, their great Magazine of Powder was blown up, by which many Families were buried in the Ruins, together with divers Officers and Soldiers to the Number of Three hundred Perſons: On this advantage, I ſay, the Proveditor reſolved to make a ſpeedy Aſſault, before the Paſhas with their Forces could come to their aſſiſtance. Accordingly the Marqueſs Borro, with ſuch Bravery began the Aſſault, that in deſpite of the reſiſtance made by the Defendants, he mounted the Breach, and made himſelf Maſter of one of the Redoubts, and thereby opened a free paſſage to many Troops to enter the Town; in which place alſo they found an obſtinate reſiſtance; for the Men fired out of the Windows, and the Women threw Stones from the Tops of the Houſes; and all the Streets were barricadoed up by Carts and Timber laid in the way, which together with bad and rainy Weather, damaged the Aſſailants in ſuch manner, that they were forced to retreat, and give way to their Adverſe Fortune. In this Conflict a Cavalier of Malta, a Lieutenant-Colonel called Julio, a Florentine Captain, with many brave Soldiers of divers Nations were Slain, and in all to the Number of Five hundred were killed and wounded. Howſoever in deſpite of Misfortune, thoſe who had poſſeſſed the Redoubt, and Breach on the Curtain, maintained their Poſt, having under obſcurity of the Night, covered themſelves with Faggots, and Sacks of Wooll.

1687.

The Morlachs renew the Aſſault.

The Tower yields.

The next Morning being the Nine and twentieth of September, the Morlachs reſolving to give ſome proofs of their Valour, prepared themſelves to give a freſh Aſſault, which they performed with ſuch vigour, that notwithſtanding the ſtout defence of the Beſieged, and by continual Thundrings of the Bombs and Cannon, they made themſelves Maſters of a fortified Houſe at the Foot of the Wall, and ſoon after on the Thirtieth of September, Forty Segmen, or Foot-Soldiers, who were placed for Guard of a Tower towards the Sea, and had the defence of a long part of the Wall, came to Capitulations, and offered to deliver the ſame up into the hands of the Chriſtians, provided they might have liberty to depart with their Families, and neceſſary Baggage, and might be Tranſported into Albania.

Alſo the middle Tower.

The General conſenting hereunto, the Tower and Wall were ſurrendered, and the People civilly treated, according to the Convention: The Defendants of the middle Caſtle, ſeeing the lower Fortification in the hands of the Enemy, deſpaired of all means longer to defend themſelves; and ſo entring into Capitulations, deſired Six days time, that in caſe the Succours came not to them within that Term, that then they would yield unto the Conditions of the Conqueror. But that being denied, and nothing but a ſudden Surrender ſatisfying, the Defendants yielded on the ſame Conditions as the lower Fortreſs had done, marching out only with a ſingle Burden on the Shoulders of each perſon.

The main Caſtle ſurrenders.

There remained now nothing to be ſubdued after theſe Two lower Fortreſſes, beſides the higher Caſtle of all, the Garriſon of which finding themſelves deveſted of their Two main Bulwarks, reſolved alſo upon a Surrender, the Articles of which were ſoon agreed upon the baſis or foot of thoſe Conditions, which had been granted unto the Two other Fortreſſes. Accordingly the People of the Caſtle marched out, to the Number of about Two thouſand Two hundred Souls, of which Seven hundred only were capable to bear Arms; the Place was found to have been well provided of all ſorts of Ammunition and Proviſions, with Seventy two Pieces of Cannon, beſides a good Booty for the Soldiers. There were alſo Six light Frigats ſeized in the Port, which had been Corſars or Capers, having formerly done 1687. great miſchief at Sea, by their Piracies and Robberies.

Thus did Caſtel Nuovo fall into the hands of the Venetians, being the more remarkable, becauſe it happened at a time, when Three Paſhas, with very numerous Troops, were in the Neighbourhood, and as we may ſay, in ſight of the place, with intention to ſuccour and relieve it by force of Arms.

Nor was this Noble Proveditor-General the Cavalier Girolamo Cornaro, leſs ſucceſsful, and renowned in taking the conſiderable Fortreſs of Caſtel Nuovo, than he was in relieving and raiſing the Siege which the Turks had formed againſt Singh; the which place this ſame Cornaro had in the Year 1676, taken from the Turks, being the firſt of his Government of Dalmatia and Albania, and had now in this Year of 1687, the good fortune to preſerve and maintain it from returning into the hands of its late barbarous Maſters. In which Action this Noble perſon deſerves as much Honour, as he purchaſed in the Conqueſt of it: It being no leſs a Vertue to defend and conſerve, than to gain or win; according to that old ſaying, Non minor eſt virtus, quàm quærere, 1687. parta tueri. It being a great eye-ſore to the Turks to ſee Singh, their own Native Habitation, in the hands of the Chriſtians, they were moved with indignation, and with a paſſionate deſire to recover it again into their own poſſeſſion. In purſuance whereof Atleegick lately made Paſha of Boſna, drew out his Army in ſight of Singh, and encamped in the Plan of Clivino, where he pitched many Tents; and his Army being encreaſed by great Numbers of Albanians, and the choiceſt Soldiery of the Provinces round about, and provided with all ſorts of Ammunition and Victuals both for Man and Horſe, and with a conſiderable Train of Artillery, they thought upon their firſt appearance to affright the Garriſon of Singh into a ſurrender. But the place having before been well provided with all things neceſſary, and defended by a valorous Garriſon, they contemned the Summons of their Enemies, reſolving to maintain the place to the laſt extremity.

The Turks endeavour to take Singh.

Whereupon the Turks having raiſed their Batteries, began to play upon it with their Cannon, but without any damage to the Beſieged. Hereupon the Turks changed their Attack from than, to another part, where their Horſe and Foot were drawn up in Military Order, with reſolution to Storm the place, which they attempted by break of day in the Morning, falling on with great fury, and with their Scemyters in their hands thought immediately by force of Arms to carry the place: But the beſieged ſo bravely defended themſelves, that they gave them ſuch repulſe, as cauſed them to ſound a Retreat, leaving behind them many of their Soldiers dead on the place, to the number of about Two hundred, of which the greateſt part were Albanians. In the Town the loſs was very inconſiderable, there being only the chief Engineer killed, and ſome few perſons wounded. 1687.

Singh aſſaulted by the Turks.

They are repulſed.

In the mean time the Proveditor-General Cornaro being informed of theſe ſucceſſes, reſolved to give effectual relief to the Town; and accordingly he detached ſeveral Parties of Morlachs to infeſt the Enemy on all ſides; which they performed ſo ſucceſsfully, that they returned with the Heads of many Turks, with Priſoners in Chains, and with a conſiderable booty, and Numbers of Cattle, having had the fortune to defeat a Convoy which was ſent with Ammunition and Proviſions to the Turkiſh Camp.

Howſoever the Turks ſtill continuing the Siege which had now laſted Seventeen days, to which they had called all the Netferee, which are the Trained-Bands of the Country, and brought thereunto all the Cannon which remained in the fortified places round about; they did not doubt in a ſhort time of the ſucceſs they deſired. But all theſe hopes vaniſhed away ſo ſoon as News came to Atleegick, that the Venetian Army was on their march to relieve the Town, with which they were ſo alarum'd and affrighted, that raiſing their Camp, Tents, and Baggage, they quitted the Siege, and ran away with a ſhameful and precipitate Cowardice. And thus ended the Succeſſes of this Year 1687, to the Glory of God, and Confuſion to the Enemies of the Chriſtian Faith. The Victories and Triumphs in Hungary gained by the Imperial Arms, were almoſt miraculous, as is before related; the ſucceſſes in the Morea, with the ſubjection of Patras, Athens, and other places of Greece, were wonderful, and the relief given to Singh, and taking of Caſtel Nuovo, were all works of the Divine Providence. And when we farther conſider the Tumults, Seditions, and Mutinies amongſt the Turks themſelves, to the depoſing of their Sultan himſelf, and deſtruction of their Chief and Principal Officers by the madneſs and fury of the Soldiers, even almoſt to to the total deſtruction of their Empire; we may believe, that the Hand of God was lifted up againſt this People, to bring them to the brink of Ruin, and Miſery, and cauſe them to ceaſe, and be no longer a People. Let us therefore proceed to the Enſuing Year, and therein relate the ſequel of the wonderful works of God, in whoſe hands are the diſpoſal of Empires and Kingdoms.

The Siege raiſed.

1687.

ANNO 1688.

The Emperor prepares for the next Campaign.

The States of Auſtria convened.

THE Emperor, who had from the time of the Incoronation of the King of Hungary remained at Presburg, (otherwiſe called Poſſonium) with all the Imperial Court, returned now at the beginning of this year to Vienna, and arrived there on the 26*th* of January. The Seaſon was now come for making Preparations for the next Campaign againſt the Turks; and Conſultations were held, not only to ſecure the new Conqueſts, but to advance farther, and to enlarge the Imperial Dominions; at all which his Ceſarean Majeſty was pleaſed to aſſiſt in Perſon. But in regard the Work was great, and the Charges immenſe to Recruit the old Regiments, and raiſe new, to provide Ammunition, Proviſions and Forage, for that vaſt Army which was deſigned for Hungary; His Imperial Majeſty was pleaſed to convene all the States of Auſtria, and of his Hereditary Dominions; who accordingly meeting and forming an Auguſt Aſſembly, the Chancellor in the name of the Emperor declared unto them in a Florid Oration, the neceeſſity that there was for a large ſupply of Money, whereby to carry on the War againſt the Turks, not only on the defenſive part, but alſo to advance forward in that way, which God had opened, and to enlarge the Dominions and extent of Chriſtendom.

They promiſe Money

As do alſo the States of Stiria.

At the Concluſion of the Speech, the States of Auſtria having with moſt profound Reverence and Reſpect, returned their moſt humble Thanks to his Imperial Majeſty for his gracious Clemency, they promiſed in the moſt ſubmiſſive Terms imaginable, to anſwer the juſt Demands of his Majeſty to the utmoſt of their Power. The like was done by the States of Stiria, the Governour of which Province called Stubemberg, having offer'd to his Majeſty the Sum of Three hundred thouſand Florins, beſides the One hundred and Sixty thouſand, which thoſe States annually pay for Maintenance of their own Charges, both Civil and Military; and of the Militia which is quarter'd on the Confines of Sclavonia.

Alba Regalis in diſtreſs.

Meſſengers ſent to Belgrade.

Are taken.

Valkowar,

Confeſſion of Achmet

Moreover, Meſſages were ſent to the ſeveral Princes of the Empire, to ſend their reſpective Quotas and Contingents, and numbers of Soldiers, according to the ancient Conſtitutions of the Empire: And in the mean time the Imperial Chamber took ſuch due means, and meaſures in order to the preparations of all things neceſſary; that Recruits were made, the Artillery mounted, the Magazines filled with Ammunition and Proviſions; and all ſorts of Carriages, Pontons, Boats, Barges, and all other appointments for War were provided in great abundance. In the mean time the Garriſon of Alba Regalis being reduced to great Extremities, by Famine, and want of all neceſſaries, diſpatched away a certain Aga called Achmet, with ſome few Attendants to Belgrade, there to expoſe to the Governours of that place, the Miſeries of their languiſhing City. Achmet privately conveying himſelf out of the Town with his Servants, found by chance a ſmall Boat tied on the Banks of the Danube, into which being enter'd, they quietly paſſed for ſome Days down the Stream, until they came near to a place called Erdeody, which had not long before been poſſeſſed by the Chriſtians: The Heydukes perceiving the Boat from the Walls, immediately ſuſpected, that the People therein were Fugitives, then making their Eſcape; to prevent which, they privately went on Board a Saick or Turkiſh Veſſel, and croſſing upon them cut them off in their way; and firing on them with their Muskets, forced them to Steer and Row to the other ſide; but they following them, made them all Priſoners (Achmet only excepted) who being very nimble and active, and a kind of a Bog-trotter, eſcaped over a Marſh with all his Letters; and fetching a compaſs out of the way, he came over againſt Valkowar, which he ſuppoſing to be ſtill a Garriſon of the Turks, made a Sign for a Boat to Ferry him over the River; the Boat paſſing over, rowed and manned by Heydukes, ſeized Achmet, who being ſurprized to ſee himſelf made a Priſoner, and thinking, that they were Turks and not Enemies, cried out; I am a Turk, ſent by the Paſha and Garriſon of Alba Regalis, with a Verbal Commiſſion only to the Port, denying to have any Letters about him; but they rifling him, found near Three hundred Letters, which were afterwards ſent to Vienna, and tranſlated by the Emperor's Interpreter. And now Achmet finding it no time longer to conceal his Buſineſs, openly declared with Tears in his Eyes, That he was the more troubled for this misfortune, becauſe that thereby he could not anſwer the expectation of his Friends at Alba Regalis, who had diſpeeded him for Belgrade to give an Account to thoſe Governours of their diſtreſſed Condition, and according to ſuch Anſwers, as they ſhould receive from thence, to take a Reſolution either to Defend or Surrender the Town. He farther added, That tho ſometimes certain Hungarian Friends conveyed into the Town ſome Flour, Peaſe, Beans and Butter, yet it was in ſuch ſmall Quantities, that all was devoured, and the People therein reduced to ſuch Extremites, that in caſe a ſmall number of Germans ſhould appear with Cannon before the City, the Bodies of the Garriſon, 1688. ſon, and Inhabitants were become ſo enfeebled by Famine, and their Spirits ſo low, that without all doubt, they would upon the firſt Summons Surrender at Diſcretion: But to give the Reader a more evident Narration of the Miſery of that place, it will not be from our purpoſe to inſert one of the Letters which were taken about Achmet, ſubſcribed by the three Paſhas from Alba Regalis to the Grand Vizier, in theſe Terms. After the Complements and Ceremonious words premiſed; which are commonly long, and full of Bombaſtick Expreſſions according to the Turkiſh Stile, they began in this manner:

Moſt happy Lord,

If you enquire after the State of this City, and of the Turkiſh Soldiers therein, and in the Parts adjacent, all that we can ſay is, That we recommend theirs and our Condition to the moſt High God, and to the Pious Compaſſion of your Excellency; for that after all our Stores of Proviſion, as well new, as old were conſumed, there remained a ſmall quantity of Millet, which tho' it were ſo old and corrupted, as if it had been laid in, at the firſt Foundation of the City, yet it was delivered out and diſtributed amongſt the Soldiers; the which being alſo conſumed, there remains not one Grane of any Corn amongſt us; ſo that we are reduced to a moſt extream, and incredible Extremity: And what is worſe, we cannot expect any Relief from the neighbouring parts; for that the Villages round about are revolted to the Enemy, who in the laſt Summer burnt all our Corn upon the Ground; and in the Autumn made themſelves Maſters of the bordering Palancaes, or Forts, namely Palotta, Chiocca and Bacchian; ſo that at preſent being environed on all ſides by Enemies, we dare not ſtir abroad, but are forced to contain our ſelves within the compaſs of four Walls. And indeed to ſpeak the Truth, we are in that ſtarving Condition, that many have deſerted, and above Eight hundred of the Servants of God, have rather choſen to yield themſelves Slaves to the Chriſtians, than to die by Hunger; and many of theſe have renounced our Holy Faith; nor is it poſſible for us to hinder thoſe, who do daily deſert us. Surely, moſt Pious Lord, The Compaſſion of our Sovereign is ſuch, as will not permit his innocent People to periſh, or to be trampled under the Feet of our Enemies.

Moſt happy Lord, The Giaurs or Infidels, ſince the taking of Agria, are come to take Winter-quarters in the Caſtles, and Villages of our Neighbour-hood, and appear every Day in ſight of our Gates; and being puffed up with Pride, ſince the ſubjection of Agria and Ofſeck, they daily ſend us Letters and Summons to Surrender; and now lately the third time, we received a moſt inſolent Letter from a certain Captain, who ſays he belongs to the Religious at Vienna, inviting us to a Surrender, promiſing to Conduct us in ſafety with our Goods and Families to ſuch places, as we ſhall deſire; Threatning upon our refuſal to give us no Quarter, but to put us all to the Sword. And now at laſt another Meſſenger is come to us from the Commander of Palotta, whom out of pure Zeal to our Religion, we put to Death with Thouſands of Torments: The next Day after which we made a Sally, in which the Giaurs (that is, the Chriſtians*) gained the advantage, killing and taking Priſoners, One hundred and fifty of our* Zaims and Timariots, putting to Death afterwards all thoſe which they had taken; in Revenge of what we had committed on the Meſſenger, which they had ſent to us; and with theſe, many of our Servants became Martyrs for our Holy Faith; which ſtruck ſuch a terrour into the Minds of our Citizens, Spahees and Janiſaries, that above Two hundred of them conveyed themſelves away in one Night. 1688.

Moſt valiant Lord, Beſides thoſe Letters, which we have ſent by divers Conveyances to give a Relation of our moſt miſerable Condition, we have yet farther to add, that our Souldiers finding themſelves deſperate, and out of all hopes of Relief and Succour, have ſometimes ariſen in a Mutiny upon us. For after they had eaten up all the Cattle and Oxen, and Fleſh which was in the Magazine, ſo that an Oke (which is two pounds and a half) of Salt, is ſold at four Dollars, and a Buſhel of Millet at Twenty four Dollars; in which neceſſity and Famine, the Soldiers came upon us demanding Pay and Subſiſtence; ſaying, That they were obliged to remain only one year in the Town, and that then they ſhould be relieved; but inſtead thereof, they had been continued a year and a half in Famine, Nakedneſs, and perpetual danger of their Lives; ſo that the Janiſaries, who are to the number of Three hundred, have rent aſunder all the Linings of the Tents for Cloth, and Linnen to cover and defend themſelves againſt the Cold. Wherefore moſt Honoured, and moſt Dread Lord; To quiet and appeaſe the juſt Complaints and Demands of our Soldiery, we have promiſed that in the ſpace of a Month, they ſhall receive both Pay and Subſiſtence: To which purpoſe, we have diſpatched away the Bearer hereof, with ſome Camerades of his, to preſent, and expoſe our Grievances, Wants and Miſeries, at the happy and ſacred Feet of your Excellency, praying unto God, to Conduct him ſafe to your moſt revered Preſence.

But if notwithſtanding all we have ſaid, delay ſhould be made to Succour us with a formidable Army, with Money and Proviſions, God knows what will become of us; for in a ſhort time our Buſineſs muſt have an end. If the General of the Emperor ſhould come upon us, us, both We, and this City muſt fall into his Hands. And then neither your Excellency, nor the Port can excuſe your ſelves in ſaying, That you were not timely adviſed of our Miſeries: For if in the ſpace of a few Weeks we are not relieved, conſidering the People we have loſt, and thoſe which die daily, God knows, you will never ſee more of our Letters: All depends on your Excellency.

Given at Alba Regalis, in the Month of January, 1688. Subſcribed,

Your Servant Sechoghy Achmet Paſha, called Vizier of Buda:
Your Servant Achmet Paſha, Governour of Alba Regalis:
Your Servant Oſman Zagargi Paſha, Commander of the Janiſaries.

Beſides this, and ſeveral other Letters, which were found about Achmet, the Kadi or Judge of the City, had ſecretly conveyed into his Hands a certain Arz, or Memorial, faithfully repreſenting the Abuſes of the Officers, and which was to this effect.

OUr moſt gracious Emperour having ſupplied our City of Alba Regalis, with plenty of Proviſions for Subſiſtence of the People, one half of them is already conſumed and devoured, and the other half hath been fraudulently divided between this our Honourable Vizier, and the Zagargibaſhee, who is Commander of the Garriſon, and which they have ſold abroad, and put the Money into their own Purſes, by Reaſon of which the poor People are conſtrained either to periſh with Famine, or to Deſert, and Fly into the Hands of the Infidels, who are our Enemies: Beſides which, to the great Diminution of our Garriſon, many of our People have been miſerably deſtroyed in the frequent Sallies which they have made. And becauſe by ſuch Miſcarriages as theſe, the Muſſulmin Cauſe (or Cauſe of the Believers) doth greatly ſuffer; I am obliged in Conſcience to make known theſe falſe, and treacherous dealings, which are the natural effects of Tyranny and Oppreſſion; for as the Alchoran ſaith, Allânettulach Alla Zelimin, which is, let the Curſe of God fall upon the Head of Tyrants.

This Honourable Vizier by his evil Management of Affairs, and by the inſupportable Taxes, which he hath laid upon the Subjects, hath been the cauſe, why ſo many of the Servants of God have been trampled under Foot, and ſo many Villages laid Waſt, and why ſo many Entire Families, have been neceſſitated to retire for Protection into the Chriſtian Dominions. In ſhort, his Tyranny and Negligence in the Government hath exterminated the People, and reduced this Garriſon to utter Ruin, where at preſent are ſcarce Three hundred Perſons to be found: And in fine, he is a Tyrant and unfit to Govern with an abſolute Authority. One day I adventured to Begin a free Diſcourſe with Achmet Aga, the Bearer hereof, touching all theſe Miſcarriages, in preſence of Oſman the Zagargibaſhee Governour of this place; who therewith was ſo offended, that he laid his Hand upon his Dagger, and would have killed me. I know not more what to ſay, ſince it is the Will of God: And I hope, That what I have here declared will be kindly, and graciouſly interpreted: And ſo referring all to your Prudence, I remain;

Muſtapha Kadi of Alba Regalis.

Given at Alba Regalis, in the Month of January, 1688.

The truth of theſe Matters was confirmed by a Chriſtian, who had lately made an Eſcape out of Alba Regalis; with this farther Addition, That the Commanders of that Town were ſo grievouſly importuned by the Garriſon and Inhabitants, that they were reſolved to diſpatch another party of Turks, amongſt which was one Ali Aga, a ſubtle and dexterous Perſon, who had been often a Priſoner, and with one Wribech a Renegado, with Inſtructions to repreſent the State of their Affairs at Belgrade, and to haſten the deſired, and long expected Succours. Beſides which, the Turks were not wanting with all Diligence, Subtlety, and Money to provide what Suſtenance they were able, an occaſion for which in a ſhort time offered unto them: For Colonel Biſterzi Commander of Palotta, deſigning to furniſh Zioccha with ſome neceſſary Proviſions; laded four Carts therewith, and diſpeeded them away under the Guard, and Conduct of Twenty four Muſquetiers; of which the Turks being informed by a treacherous Perſon, detached that very Night a Party of Two hundred Men, to lie in wait in a Neighbouring Wood, attending the paſſage of the Waggons, which ſo fortunately ſucceeded, that they ſurprized them, and brought them with Twelve Muſquetiers of their Convoy into Alba Regalis.

The Turks of Alba Regalis Seize four Waggons with Proviſons.

About this time another Regehado arrived ſafely in the Town from Belgrade, who gave new Encouragement to the Commanders to hold out, with aſſurance, that before he came away the Seraskier had already provided great abundance of Victuals and Money, under a ſtrong Guard, which was on their way towards the City. And moreover he reported, That there were other Succours coming to them from Con-

They are encouraged

ſtantinople

1688. ſtantinople, under ſuch a powerful Convoy as needed not to fear the German Troops, who being ſenſible of their own Weakneſs, had abandoned part of their Conqueſts; as Illoch, Peter Waradin and other Villages, both upon the Save and Danube; ſo that the Turks having a free Paſſage, had laid their Bridges over the Save and Drave, deſigning not only to relieve Alba Regalis, but likewiſe Sigeth and Caniſa.

1688.

The News which this Meſſenger had brought, was ſoon afterwards verified, by an Incurſion which ſome Troops detached from the Regiment of Norcheim had made into the Neighbouring Woods; into which they had no ſooner enter'd, than they found themſeves aſſaulted by a ſtrong party of Turks, who cut off the Heads of divers of thoſe, who were too far advanced; howſoever the reſt made their Retreat good by the Aſſiſtance of the Governour of Poſſega, who came in to their aſſiſtance; at which time alſo Seven thouſand Turks paſſed the Save, who rifled all the Villages round, and carried away the People.

Means taken to hinder the Succours from Alba Regalis.

The Imperial Court being ſeaſonably adviſed hereof, took immediate Counſels to prevent and obſtruct the Succours deſigned for Alba Regalis, and to ſecure the new Conqueſts from returning again into the Power and Dominion of the Enemy: To which end, Orders were diſpeeded from the Counſel of War, to the Regiments quarted in all the adjacent parts about Peſth, to prepare themſelves for a March; the like Orders were given to the Regiments of Palſi and Staremberg, as alſo to ſome of the Bavarian Troops quarter'd in the Counties of Strana and Liptona: Moreover Marſhal Caprara received the like Orders, to cauſe all the Regiments under his Command to March, which lay on the Confines of Croatia: And the like poſitive Commands were diſpatched to the Governours of Croatia; And to all of them Orders were ſent to make their Rendezvous in, and about Oſeck, ſo as to be in a readineſs to oppoſe any Attempt of the Turks, and to obſtruct their paſſage over the Drave; and prevent their making Semblin a place and Magazine of Arms: by which means all the deſigns of relieving Alba Regalis, Sigeth and Kaniſia were diſappointed.

Tekeli writes to his Princeſs.

In the mean time Tekeli not being informed of the Surrender of Mongatz, but ſuppoſing it to be much ſtraitned, and in a Condition not to hold out much longer, wrote a Letter to his Princeſs (which was intercepted) wherein he directs her to provide in the Articles of Surrender, that his Goods and princely Coronet, with thoſe Writings and Commiſſions given by the Sultan in his favour might be preſerved, and permitted to be carried with her; and that for her ſelf and Family, ſhe would do well to diſpoſe of her ſelf and them in Poland, but by no means to commit her Perſon into the Hands of the Germans, or to abide in any part of the Upper Hungary. But Tekeli hearing that theſe Orders came too late, and that the Place was already yielded, being full of Anger and Rage, he ſtudied all ways poſſible to Revenge himſelf, waſting and conſuming all thoſe fruitful Fields and Countries, in the parts adjacent as far as Great Waradin; near unto which he had fortified himſelf with ſome Thouſands of Men, in a certain Village called Thelegh, where General Heuſler had ſome times beaten up his Quarters: And at length on the 6th of February, paſſing the River Kerez over the Ice with a ſtrong party of Horſe, he fell upon him in his very Trenches, with ſuch Bravery and Succeſs, that Tekeli was put to Flight, leaving Six hundred of his Men dead in the Field; and Four hundred Priſoners taken, amongſt which was one Genay a Chief Captain, and ſecond in Command to Tekeli himſelf, together with Twenty other Officers.

Febr. 1688.

1688. He waſts the Countries.

1688. Tekeli defeated.

This Succeſs was followed by another of the like nature: For Tekeli having detached a Party into the County of Zatmar to gather Contributions, and forcing the ſame with Fire and Sword, put the poor People into a moſt miſerable Terrour and Conſternation, flying from place to place for Refuge and Protection. Upon advice of which, General Heuſler haſtned with a Party of Horſe, encouraged and fluſhed with the late Victory, happily encountred the Tekelites, as they were carrying away the Spoil, which they had diſtrained for Non-payment of Contribution; but they not daring to make a ſtand, quitted their Horſes and their Booty, and ſaved themſelves in the Thickets of a neighbouring Wood. At the ſame time General Caraſa was by order of the Emperor diſpatched into Tranſilvania to ſettle matters in a better ſtate then before: And being come to Hermanſtadt, he was informed that the German Troops were not provided, and accommodated according to Agreement; whereupon he diſpatched a reſolute Meſſage to Apaſi, and the States of the Country, giving them to underſtand, that in caſe better Proviſions were not made for the neceſſary Quarters of the Soldiers, he ſhould be forced to take ſuch Meaſures, as were moſt adequate to the preſent occaſion. Apaſi, conſidering that Caraſa was reſolute, and not to be oppoſed in his Demands, made a vertue of neceſſity, and ſent his Chief Miniſter Telecky, the moſt eſteemed and moſt honoured Perſon of the States and Nobility, unto him, to make him a Complement, with all the high Ex-

General Caraſa at Hermanſtadt.

1688.

The Soldiers Allowance in Winter-Quarters increaſed.

Expreſſions of Submiſſion and Compliance. In purſuance whereof the General took into his conſideration the particulars of the ſeveral Quarters, and thought fit to advance the Allowance one Third more, than what hath been agreed in the former Treaties. And having made ſome alterations amongſt the Officers, belonging to certain Imperial Garriſons, he fixed his own Head-Quarters at Hermanſtadt, as being not only the ſtrongeſt Garriſon, but the moſt proper and convenient place, from whence he might moſt eaſily ſuccour and relieve the other Quarters, as occaſion ſerved.

Halmet yielded.

Felſiat ſurrenders.

The Name of the Germans was become now ſo dreadful over all Hungary, that many ſtrong Fortreſſes at the firſt appearance of the Imperial Forces ſurrendred themſelves; as did Halmet, a Caſtle on the Frontiers of Tranſilvania, encompaſſed with a deep and broad Ditch, and furniſhed with Draw-Bridges, and Garriſon'd by Turks, yield up it ſelf to General Magni; who proceeding forwards in his March, took in the Fortreſs of Felſiat with as much eaſe and facility, as he had done that of Halmet; by which means he brought above Two hundred Villages under Contribution, and excluded the Turks from all Communication with the parts of Tranſilvania.

1688. March.

The Deſpot of Valachia ſubmits.

All things being ſetled in Tranſilvania to the ſatisfaction of the Emperor; Baron de Pace was detached with Three Regiments, and reinforced with ſome other Troops under General Saurau, with Orders to march towards Stephanopolis, a Frontier Garriſon of Valachia; to prevent the deſigns of that Deſpot in caſe he ſhould attempt any thing to the prejudice of the Emperor: But the Imperial Court being ſufficiently ſatisfied that the Deſpot had no other but ſincere intentions to preſerve his own Dominion, and benefit Chriſtendom, His Imperial Majeſty was pleaſed to ſend the Biſhop of Nicopolis unto him, giving him to underſtand that he ſhould receive his gracious Aſſiſtance in all his deſigns, and that he would cauſe the Succeſſion of that Principality to deſcend upon his Son, acknowledging only that Homage, which from ancient times was paid to the King of Hungary. Whereupon the Deſpot ſent an Envoy to General Caraſa at Hermanſtadt, to receive Orders and Inſtructions in what manner to behave and govern his Affairs.

Alba Re-galis in Mutiny,

1688.

Denies to ſurrender.

The Blocade cloſely watched.

Marqueſs of Baden at Ratisbon.

In the mean time the Turks in Alba Regalis, finding themſelves without all relief, and no returns made to thoſe Meſſages, which they had diſpatched by various ways, began again to be very mutinous, and unruly towards their Governors; howſoever they ſtill held out, reſolving as yet to hearken unto no terms, which ſhould be offered them by the Enemy. Notwithſtanding which, the Marqueſs of Baden, who was Preſident of the Council of War for his Imperial Majeſty, being commanded to paſs from his Government of Javarin, or Rab, unto Ratisbon, there to reſide as Plenipotentiary for his Imperial Majeſty at that Diet; did think fit, before his departure, to regulate ſome Affairs within his Juriſdiction; and particularly to appoint Count Ricceardi, accompanied with an Interpreter, and a party of Hungarian Horſe, to view and obſerve the State of Alba Regalis, and to try if he could incline and perſuade the Turks to ſurrender; but they being quite of another humour, not being reduced as yet to the utmoſt point and extremity of Famine, cryed out with a loud Voice, that they would maintain their City to the laſt drop of Blood; and even to more violent neceſſities than thoſe of Agria. Ricceardi returning with this report to Giavarin, the Marqueſs of Baden iſſued out new Orders to ſtraiten the Town with more rigour and cloſeneſs, than before; and not only reinforced the Caſtles of Palotta, Zioccha, and Schambegh, warning them to be more diligent and watchful for the future to prevent all Communication between Alba Regalis, and the Neighbouring Villages, and to make the Blocade more formal, General Batthiani was not only commanded to march into thoſe Quarters with his Hungarian Troops, but likewiſe cauſed them to be reinforced by ſome of the Militia belonging to the Circles of Franconia, and other Troops under the Command of Count Erdeodi, Lieutenant-General at that time of Giavarin: Moreover the Marqueſs of Baden before his departure, diſpoſed the March of the Militia, and ordered their ſeveral Quarters in parts adjacent to Oſeck, there to oppoſe the paſſage of the Enemy over the Drave: After which, all matters being well ordered, with excellent Methods and Rules of Government, the Marqueſs took Poſt for Vienna; where having received Inſtructions from the Emperor for better Government of his Preſidency at Ratisbon, he proceeded thither, and there he held ſeveral publick and private Conferences, for the better Regulation of the Military Affairs for the Enſuing Campaigne.

In the mean time Recruits were made, and Horſes provided to Remount ſuch as wanted them; and whilſt it was doubted, Whether the Elector of Bavaria could be preſent in Perſon to conduct his Army this Year into Hungary, upon a jealouſy, that the French would fall into the Palatinate; yet the Treaty was concluded for the Bavarian Troops to continue in Hungary, and ſerve with their beſt aſſiſtance to forward the Progreſs of the Imperial Arms.

C. Caprara commands in Hungary.

The deſigns of the Turks defeated in Sclavonia.

Ratzá taken from the Turks and burnt

Mareſchal Caprara commanding now in Chief in Hungary, provided Oſeck with all things neceſſary for their Subſiſtence; and gave Orders to thoſe Captains, who commanded upon the Save to provide great Numbers of Boats, and Barges, and Floats, for making Bridges over that River, and as occaſion ſerved therewith to Tranſport Proviſions and Materials for War. The Turks on the other ſide had alſo Erected another Bridge for the better ſecurity of Boſnia, and aſſembled at Coſtanovitz, on the River Unna, with deſign to make Incurſions into the Confines of Croatia; but that Country was ſo well guarded and defended by the vigilance of Count Erdeody the Banno, or Chief Governor thereof, that all attempts of the Turks on that ſide were wholly diſappointed, and defeated: And farther to render the Actions of the Turks fruitleſs and ineffectual in Sclavonia, where they had made Proviſions of Victuals and Ammunition, and had laided therewith Lighters and Barges, to ſupply their ſmaller Garriſons on the River Save, Baron de Tunkel was diſpeeded with a Detachment of Two hundred Horſe, and a Regiment of Dragoons, with ſome Haiducks to oppoſe the intentions of the Enemy; and being come as far as Valkovar, the Scouts brought word, that Ruſtan Paſha, the late Governor of Agria, with about One thouſand Horſe and Foot, had conducted into Illoch a very great Convoy of about Two hundred Waggons laden with Proviſions; and that afterwards he himſelf was returned unto Belgrade. Tunkel being diſappointed of this Deſign, was more ſucceſsful in another Attempt, which he made on a place called Ratza, ſituate on this ſide of the Save, defended by ſome Spahees and Janiſaries; to which privately marching in the Night, he ſurprized the place about Two hours after Midnight, with the Death of about Three hundred Turks, and Seventy Slaves, and ſet at liberty Fifty Chriſtians, and took Sixty Horſes, with great Numbers of Cattle, and Three Enſigns; and having ſet Fire to the City, he returned in Safety and Triumph to Oſock, laden with Honour and Spoyls.

On the other ſide the Paſha of Gradiſca having advice that Count Caprara was upon his march towards Oſeck with a ſtrong Party to Conduct and Convoy many Waggons laden with Ammunition and Proviſions in order to ſome extraordinary Enterprize; the Paſha apprehending that his Deſign might be upon Belgrade, reſolved to paſs the Bridges which he had laid over the Save, with deſign to ſurprize Poſſega, and Zernech, and thereby to divert the Attack intended upon Belgrade: In purſuance of which the Paſha marched with a Body of Three thouſand Five hundred men towards Zernech, but not with that Privacy as Tunkel had lately done; for in their way they ſet Fire to all the Villages round, and killed the People, which gave ſuch an Alarum to that Garriſon, by the affrighted Peaſants which had eſcaped, that they immediately put themſelves into a poſture of defence: And Colonel Baron Amanzaga having alſo News thereof, haſtned with a Body of Horſe, and ſome Foot, and came ſo ſeaſonably to the ſuccour of the Town, that they encountred the Turks in their march, and charged them with ſo much bravery, that they not only put the Cavalry to Flight, but alſo forced them to abandon the Janiſaries, and to expoſe them to the Sword of their Enemies: The greateſt part of which, to the Number of about Five hundred, were Slain upon the place, and Two hundred made Priſoners, amongſt which was the Commander in Chief of the Janiſaries, Four Aga's, and the Son of the Paſha of Gradiſca, with ſeveral Colours, and Drums: The News of which Baron Amanzaga diſpatched to General Caprara with all Expedition.

Baron Amanzaga defeats the Paſta of Gradiſca.

About the ſame time, or the Day before, another Party detached from the main Body made an Attack upon the Out-guards of Poſſega, which being over-matched in numbers, retreated under the Gates of the City: The Lieutenant Governour, to whom at that time with ſome veterane Soldiers, and ſubaltern Officers, the Command of the Town was committed, took the Alarum; but not being cautious enough to be informed of the Strength, and Numbers of the Enemy by the Report of the Out-guards, he advanced too far from the Town; which when the Turks obſerved, they made a feigned Flight, with deſign to bring their Enemy into an Ambuſcade, which they had prepared for them, in which they had all miſcarried, had not Count Truxes, Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiment of Holſtein, and Count Bizzaro, Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiment of Lodron, who (were accidentally marching to relieve the Out-guards,) come ſeaſonably into their Succour and Reſcue; who ſo vigorouſly charged the Enemy, that they put them to Flight, and forced them to take Refuge in the Woods and Mountains, whilſt the Chriſtians, the Night approaching, retired orderly into Poſſega.

The Garriſon of Poſſega ſeaſonably relieved.

There being in the mean time various Reports at the Imperial Court concerning the State and Condition of the City of Alba Regalis; which holding out ſo long beyond all expectation, it was conjectur'd, that the Blocade was not ſtrict, or at leaſt not ſufficiently guarded and watchfully attended as it ought to have been, which obliged the Counſel of War to diſpatch Orders to Colonel Riccardi, that he with his Regiment ſhould March to Veſprimio, Palotta, and other Neighbouring places, to make enquiry 1688.

Colonel Riccardi made enquiry into the State of Alba Regalis.

Colonel Riccardi deſires a parly with the Paſha.

1688.

Jealouſies in the Town.

into the State, and Condition of that City and Garriſon. Riccardi according to his Orders marched out of Giavarino or Rab; and taking with him a Company of Croats, and a Party from Schomberg, he came to Quarter for one Night at a Village called Brin, about a League diſtant from Alba Regalis; and early in the Morning by break of day ſounding to Horſe, in purſuance of his March he detached Ten Croats, and as many Hungarians to advance before, with directions to ſeize and ſurprize what Turks they ſhould meet near the City, that by them they might be informed of the State of the place. But they meeting with none on the way, came up to the very Gates of the Town, which they found ſhut and unguarded: But ſoon afterwards they were opened, to give Paſſage to the Sally of a Party both of Horſe and Foot; the latter of which remained within their Paliſadoes; but the firſt Sallied out into the Field, having the Renegado Wrebeck at the head of them, who coming near, frankly diſcourſed with the Chriſtians in this manner: Soldiers what is it you demand? May a Man truſt to your Word? To which Anſwer was made, That he might; whereupon he came up boldly to them, and touched the Hand of an Hungarian Enſign, and a Raſcian: By which time Wrebeck perceiving the numbers of the Enemies to increaſe, and to approach within Cannon-ſhot of the Town, he Demanded, what thoſe Troops were? To which Anſwer was made, That they were the Troops of a certain Croatian Colonel, who deſired to have conference with the Paſha, or with ſome other of the principal Officers. Wrebeck promiſed to carry that Meſſage, and accordingly returned to the City, where at the Gates thereof he met the Paſha of that Country, with the Commander in Chief of the Janiſaries, and with two or three other of the principal Officers of that place; to whom he made a Report, that the Troops without were Commanded by a certain Croatian Colonel, who deſired to enter into a Conference with the Paſha: To which the Paſha ſuddainly replied in theſe words; It is well, he is welcome, I will go and ſpeak with him. Theſe words being over-heard by the Chief Commander, or Aga of the Janiſaries, he aroſe up in a Fury, and throwing down his Turbant with a Rage upon the Ground, cried out Treachery, and that the Paſha had a Deſign to betray them into the Hands of the Chriſtians: And Roaring out Treachery, Treachery, he ran to adviſe the Vizier thereof, whom he found on one of the Baſtions, taking a view of the Enemie's Troops in the Field. The Vizer having heard this ſaying, Commanded that the Buſineſs ſhould be examined, and in caſe the Paſha ſhould be found Guilty, he ſhould be ſtoned to Death, and his Body thrown over the Walls. The Paſha being highly incenſed upon this ſo unjuſt an occaſion, took up his Topuſs, or Mace into his Hand, and holding it over the Head of the Aga of the Janiſaries; ſaid aloud, What is the matter? And what Noiſe is this thou makeſt? Thou old Fool? Thinkeſt thou, that thou art more brave, or more faithful than I am? Hold thy peace, or by the living God, I will beat thy Brains out with this Topuſs. For what Reaſon is it, that I am not permitted to ſpeak with that Captain? Will he alone take this City? Let us hear and ſee what it is that he will ſay: If his Offers are good, we may receive them, and if bad we may reject them. It was never denied in any part of the World to hear Ambaſſadours.

1688.

A Skirmiſh near the Gates.

An Uproar in the Town.

1688.

In the mean time a great Noiſe, and Tumult aroſe amongſt the Soldiers at the Gate, and above a dozen Cannon-ſhot were fired at the Imperial Horſe, which ſtood drawn up within Muſquet-ſhot of the Gates; and ſome of the Turks mounted on Horſe-back made a Sally, and began a Skirmiſh, which continued almoſt two Hours, without any other hurt than of ſome few Turks, who were wounded. Colonel Riccardi all this time could not diſcover the true State and Condition of the Town; and therefore he gave freedom to two Turks, provided that they would procure entrance into the Town, and return with certain advice of the true ſtate thereof: But the Confuſion was ſo great before the Gates, that they were neither permitted to enter, or ſpeak: Whereupon the Colonel ſeeing little good was to be done, at that preſent made a Retreat, and was on his return with his Soldiers to Palotta; when they eſpied Wrebeck, with ſome other Turks running full ſpeed towards them, as if they intended another Skirmiſh; but they ſtopped their Horſes and returned back to the Town, and ſo did the Colonel towards Palotta: And having paſſed a certain Bog or Moraſs, and the River Sarowitz, he gave Command to a Turk who was his Priſoner, to go that Night to Alba Regalis; and having there underſtood the true State of the place, that he ſhould the next day early return with ſome certain Report thereof: But the Turk deſired to be excuſed, for that in caſe he were diſcovered, he ſhould moſt certainly be Empaled. But the Colonel fiercely commanded him to go, with promiſe to give him his Liberty at his return: The poor Fellow obeyed out of fear, and out of Religion to the Faith of his Promiſe and Oath, he faithfully performed the Service enjoyned him.

For the next Day being the 30*th* of March, this Turk with Sixteen others well clothed and armed, with four Turkiſh Women, Wives to ſome of them, and Children eſcaped out of

1688. of the Town, and fled to the Chriſtians. The Colonel ſoon enter'd into diſcourſe with them, and by their Anſwers to ſeveral Interrogatories he put to them, he underſtood, that amongſt thoſe Sixteen there were two of them, which in the late Tumult in the City had been principal Ringleaders of the Sedition, the firſt called Hadgi Ali, and the other Kara Haſſan, both of them Officers amongſt the Spahees, and of the number of thoſe, who had broken the Vizier's Windows, and given ſome Stabs to the Governour of the Caſtle. And to ſatisfie the Colonel's Queſtions more particularly, Hadgi Ali gave this following Account of the late Uproar, which had hapned in the Town.

A Relation of the Mutiny in the Town of Alba Regalis.

On the 27th ſaid he, of this Month of March, ſome Janiſaries and Spahees of the Garriſon came to me; and ſaid, Friends and Brethren, what are we to do? Theſe our Commanders will neither Surrender up the City to the Chriſtians, nor yet give us Proviſions wherewith to live: Come let us go to theſe Tyrants, and require an Account from them, for what reaſon they treat us in this inhuman manner. The Day following, the Spahees and Janiſaries, to the number of Four or Five hundred, went with me to the Vizier, with whom we found the Paſha of the City then preſent; and I, as their chief Speaker, began in ſharp and reſenting Terms, to lay before them our miſerable and ſtarving Condition and Aggrievances. The Vizier and Paſha with gentle, and moſt obliging words endeavoured to pacifie us, and to lay the blame of all upon the Aga of the Janiſaries, adviſing us to cite him before the Kadi, or Judge, then ſitting in the chief Moſch of the City; where being convicted by Juſtice, they would leave him to our Mercy, to inflict Puniſhment on him according to our own free Will and Pleaſure: And that their intentions might appear more real and manifeſt, they gave into my Hands an Order directed to the Judge, to give ear unto the Aggrievances of the People, and to thoſe Accuſations which they had to charge on the Aga of the Janiſaries. The People herewith went to the Houſe of the Judge, whom finding not at home, they proceeded directly to the Aga of the Janiſaries, who being well preadviſed of the Buſineſs, called me to himſelf and began to ſpeak to me in very kind words. I know, my dear Hadgi, you deſire that the place be yielded up; and for my part I am contented; and if you will let me go to the Vizier and the Paſha, we will ſoon agree upon Articles for the Surrender. The which we having permitted him to do, he immediately mounted on his Horſe; but the enraged People fell upon him, and had killed him, had he not retired back into the Yard of his Houſe, and ſhut his Gates upon them; and to ſave himſelf from farther Out-rage, he barred up himſelf in a ſecret place of his Houſe, reſolving not to come forth, until he had received aſſurances for the ſecurity of his Life; the which, when I had given him, with conſent and approbation of the People, on Condition that he ſhould concur with the Vizier and Paſha in their Reſolutions for Surrender of the place, he then went to the Vizier and the Paſha; and being all three together, they joyntly agreed to call me to their Preſence, and cauſed me, which was a thing unuſual, to ſit down amongſt them, and demanded of me what it was I deſired. I immediately anſwered: Sirs, My Companions have entruſted me to tell you, That if you do not Surrender up the City, but ſuffer them miſerably to Periſh, they reſolve to Kill you, and to do the Buſineſs themſelves, and to depart from hence with their Families to Belgrade. 1688.

Theſe words being uttered with ſome fierceneſs, and accompanied with ſome other Menaces; they expreſſed great tenderneſs for the People, repeating their promiſes to yield unto all their deſires: But I was ſcarce got out from their preſence, before the Gates were with deſpight ſhut upon us; and the Commanders ſhewed themſelves armed with all their Attendants at the Windows; and the Aga of the Janiſaries, who was more reſolute than any, and averſe to the Surrender, holding his Bow and Arrows in his Hand, told the People plainly, that he would not conſent to the Surrender of the City, but would defend and maintain it to the laſt drop of his Blood.

The People enraged hereat, drew up into a Body before the Vizier's Houſe; and ſome of them ran upon the Walls, and drew from thence two Pieces of Cannon, intending therewith to batter down the Vizier's Palace; which was ready for Execution, when the Renegado Wrebeck, a Fellow very dear to the People, came with Tears in his Eyes, to diſſuade them from ſo violent an Attempt; and having uſed many very pungent Arguments to them, he prevailed ſo far, that the Tumult was appeaſed.

During this interval or ſuſpenſion of Arms, I, who was as it were the Tribune of the People, was called again, and deſired to appeaſe the Multitude, promiſing to anſwer their deſires: But they having been ſo often deluded, refuſed to give any Credit to their Words, unleſs they would ſolemnly ſwear on the Alchoran to yield the City; nor yet would they draw off, and return the Cannon unto the Walls, until ſuch time as they had begun to make ſome ſteps towards the execution of their deſires.

Hereupon the three Commanders, with ſome of the Citizens aſſembled in the great Moſch, as if they intended to agree upon the Propoſitions, which were to be offer'd to the Enemies; but in reality they intended nothing leſs, labouring all that Day to appeaſe the Tumults with Mony and Proviſions: The Vizier made large diſtributions to the Spahees, and the 1688. Aga to the Janiſaries, and the Paſha to the Citizens and Soldiers of the Country; and by theſe means they took an Oath of the People patiently to endure, until St. George's Day, being the 23d of April, which is a Day regard by the Turks: But howſoever they would eſteem themſelves abſolved from this Oath, in caſe an Enemy ſhould in the mean time appear before their Walls, and ſtreighten them yet farther by a Siege.

Colonel Riccardi having by this Relation been rightly informed of the true State of the Town, he thought fit to make Tryal of another Appearance before the Walls, and came with more than One hundred Horſe within Cannon-ſhot of the place, which had he done the preceeding Day, before the People had taken an Oath to hold out until St. George's Day, the City had moſt certainly been yielded: But now inſtead thereof, they made ſeveral Shots from the Baſtions, and ſallied out both Horſe and Foot, without any other execution on either ſide, than the taking of one Turk, whoſe Head they cut off in ſight of his Companions.

1688. Colonel Ricceardi leaves Alba Regalis.

Thus the Colonel having ſufficiently been informed of the State of the matter, on which he was employed, he departed from Palotta with his Troops on the 31*ſt* of March, and Lodging that Night within a League of Alba Regalis, a certain Janiſary well armed and clothed came to them in the Morning, and gave an Account that he was fled from the City with ſome other Companions, amongſt which was an Odabaſhee, or Captain of the Janiſaries, who having been over active and forward in the late Mutiny, feared in cooler Blood to be called to queſtion by the angred Officers. After which, Colonel Riccardi finding little farther to be done, marched back to Buda, as Colonel Biſterzi did with his Forces to Palotta.

The obſtinate Defence which Alba Regalis made, gave ſome trouble to the Court at Vienna; both becauſe it was neceſſary to have it ſubjected before the beginning of the Campaign; and becauſe the Captive Turks and Deſerters were ſo numerous in thoſe parts, and in the Towns and Redoubts over all thoſe Qarters, as might give juſt occaſion of Jealouſie and fear of Danger, in caſe any deſign of Maſſacre, or Aſſaſſination ſhould be plotted by them: But ſo vile and mean were the Turks eſteemed, and their price and value ſo low, that a luſty Fellow was ſold for a Dollar, and a Woman for a quarter.

Mutinies begin again at Conſtantinople.

But we muſt here take our leave of Alba Regalis for a while, and return to Conſtantinople, where we ſhall find the Seditions and Military Mutinies broken out again with more Fury and Danger, even to the very ſhaking of the Foundations of the Empire, than at the latter end of the laſt year: For the Cabals daily increaſed amongſt the mutinous Soldiers: They had lately received their pay, and were ſatisfied in all they could demand; their Officers had ſome of them been diſplaced, and others ſtrangled, as they were pleaſed to beſtow their Heads and Offices, but not being herewith contented, unleſs every one of them could be made a Vizier or Paſha, they were emboldned to proceed to farther Outrages. There had been a kind of a ceſſation of theſe inteſtine Troubles, for about the ſpace of two Months; during which time the new Sultan was perſuaded as a thing accuſtomary, to ſend an Ambaſſador to France, England and Holland, to give notice of his happy exaltation to the Sublime Throne of his Anceſtors; but whilſt this was meditating, and preparations making for carrying on the Wars of the enſuing Summer, which was deſigned moſt vigorouſly to be acted in the Morea, and in a defenſive manner only in Hungary, the Thoughts of ſending an Ambaſſador into Chriſtendom, (as lately deſigned) were laid aſide, which was not unpleaſing either to Sir William Trumbal, who was then Ambaſſador for his Majeſty of Great Britain at Conſtantinople, nor yet to the Engliſh Company of Merchants at London trading into the Levant Seas, who could expect to reap nothing but trouble, and expence from ſuch an Embaſſy. And indeed all things were at a ſtand by the Inſolencies of the Soldiers; the Officers both Civil and Military being diſcouraged, and at a ſtop and full Period in the Grand Seignior's Service, had work enough to contrive, how to guard their own Perſons againſt the violence of the Soldiers, and provide for the ſafety of their own Lives.

Kuperlee laid aſide.

The daily Cabals of Mutinous Soldiers having been held in ſeveral places of the City, were adjourned at length to the Vizier's own Houſe, where with Menaces and greater Inſolencies than formerly, they demanded the removal of Kuperlee the Chimacam from his Office; ſaying, That he was as bad a Man as his Father, who had ſpilt Rivers of Blood, and ruined the Empire. It was an unuſual Piece of Favour and Mercy in this People to deal thus gently with him, who were accuſtomed formerly to be, Executioners of their own Sentence, upon thoſe, whom they ſuſpected to be no good Wiſhers to their Side, and Faction. To oppoſe them herein had been to no purpoſe, and to expoſtulate with them had been equally dangerous; wherefore the Vizier being ſenſible of their Outragious and Irrational Humour, not patient of the leaſt Contradiction, ſeemed to concur with them in all they asked, and ordered dered

He is ſent in a Gally to the Caſtles.

1688. dered a Gally immediately to Tranſport Kuperlee to the Caſtles, on the Helleſpont or Dardanelli: There was no need of Commands, or Force to drive Kuperlee away, for he was affrighted and readily leapt into the Gally, thinking it a happy occaſion to ſave his Life, and eſcape out of their Hands. The Vizier alſo at their inſtance diſcharged ſeveral Officers, which they had nominated, putting the Chief of theſe Rebels into their places, and renewed a ſolemn Oath with them to ſtand by them, and never to be their Enemy; and the Spahees and Janiſaries took the ſame Oath to ſtand by each other.

The Vizier forced to diſſemble.

A Zechin is about 9 s. 6 d.

The Vizier, as a means to amuſe the Mutiniers, and to divert their Thoughts to more orderly and lawful deſigns, ſet forth the (Tugh) or Horſe's Tail, with a Signal of the Vizier's March into the Field within the ſpace of Forty days; but having been forced in this manner to put out Kuperlee his Brother-in-Law (in whom he much confided) from his Office of Chimacam; he knew not any, whom he could more ſafely truſt with the Government of the City, during his abſence than Shaban Aga, his own Kaiah, or Deputy in his Buſineſs; and to ſupply his place Zulſicar Effendi was nominated to be Kajah; but very unſeaſonably, for he was Obnoxious to the Mutiniers, having been Chiauſbaſhee, and turned out by them; which when one Teſfugee underſtood (the ableſt and activeſt Head amongſt them) he came to the Vizier, and inſolently told him, that if he made that Man his Kaiah, he would kill him before his Face. The Vizier ſtill diſſembled this Affront, as well as many others; letting theſe Rebels run on in their mad and tyrannical Government, until they had render'd themſelves univerſally Odious to the People, which they ſoon did by their Arbitrary and unequal proceedings; for they framed a Project of raiſing Chimny-Money, of a Zechin yearly on every Chimney; (thô for Popularity it was contrived, that the Rich ſhould pay for the Poor) they alſo gave out Rules for quartering Soldiers, and for levying Money by extraordinary Ways, beſides innumerable other Violences and Outrages they committed; all which ſerved to the Vizier's purpoſe, and haſtened the execution of the Deſigns, which had been contrived between him and Kuperlee, to bring them to deſtruction; but this could not be compleated without the conſent of the new Aga of the Janiſaries, with whom the Vizier had prevailed to joyn, and concur with him.

1688.

The Grand Seignior's Command read to the Soldiers.

Teſfagee refuſes to obey;

And is killed.

1688. Accordingly on Sunday the 19*th* of February, a Hatte-ſheriff (which is a Royal Command under the Sultan's own Hand writing) was ſent to the Janiſar-Aga, who aſſembling the Chief Officers, read it to them, the Contents whereof were thus; 'That whereas the Soldiers having lien under many 'Grievances, and long Arrears of pay, had 'choſen ſome of their Body to obtain a redreſs; which having been granted unto 'them, and they fully ſatisfied in all their 'juſt Demands, their Duty was now to be 'Obedient to the Sultan, and to all ſuch as 'he ſhould appoint to be their Officers, and 'not to mix in Affairs relating to the Government; and that whoſoever ſhould be Refractory ſhould be puniſhed as a Rebel. The Hattee-ſheriff being read, the Janiſar-Aga asked them, whether they would be obedient to the Royal Command? To which the Officers (for none but the inferiour Soldiers joyned with the Mutiniers) anſwered, Yes. But Teſfagee cryed out, That he was a Villain, and a Raſcal who obeyed that Order. Whereupon the Janiſar-Aga calling him Traytor and Infidel, cauſed him to be carried into an Inner-room, where he was killed, and his Body thrown out before the Gate, After this, the Janiſar-Aga went to the Vizier to give him an account of this Action and Succeſs, with which the Vizier could not but be well pleaſed, thinking the Buſineſs to be ended: And indeed it was a good ſtep to it, for this Teſfagee was the principal Inſtrument to keep the Spahees and Janiſaries united, and the boldeſt, and moſt underſtanding Villain amongſt them. And now as if the Game had been ſure, the Vizier ſent the Teſterdar to Seal up his Houſe in order to a Confiſcation of his Eſtate, and alſo the Houſes of ſeveral others of the Chief Mutiniers: But herein the Vizier made a falſe ſtep, for he ſhould have ſecured their Perſons, before he had ſealed their Houſes.

Hadgi Ali another Mutinous Fellow.

Kills the Aga of the Janiſaries.

For hereupon Hadgi Ali (who was an intimate Companion of him who was killed) fearing the ſame Fate, preſently adviſed the reſt of the Mutiniers hereof, and ſtirred up the Janiſaries, by minding them of the many Oaths they had taken with the Spahees to ſtand by each other: They aſſembled at Atmeidan, or rather Okmeidan, which is a Field without the City, where they uſed to Shoot with Bows and Arrows. The Janiſar-Aga hearing of the Aſſembly, and thinking by his Authority to diſperſe, and appeaſe it, enter'd boldly into the Field; whom when Hadgi Ali eſpied, he made up to him, and told him, You have Murther'd our Companion, and endeavoured to ſow Diſſentions amongſt us; and ſtriking him on the Head with his Scymeter, he was immediately cut to pieces. This Man was an Armenian Renegado; and as it is ſaid, he was after his Death found to be uncircumciſed. After this the Tumult increaſed; and then they went to the Teſterdar's Houſe, and ranſacked it,

1688.

The Tumult increaſes.

The Vizier gives up the Seals.

He is killed.

His Wife, Houſe, &c. ranſacked.

it, taking away a conſiderable Sum of Money, which was prepared and laid up for the Soldiers Pay: From thence they went, and aſſaulted the Vizier in his own Houſe, where he defended himſelf valiantly; for having got to himſelf the Teſterdar, the Captain Paſha, and a conſiderable number of Friends and Servants all well armed, he repulſed them thence. At laſt, thinking to pacifie them by the Reſignation of his Office (which was a very great Error) he ſent for the Mufti, who out of fear was joyned with the Mutiniers. He gave up the Seals into his Hands, deſiring him to carry them to the Grand Seignior, that he might conſtitute another Vizier more pleaſing, and more capable to Rule his People. This falſe ſtep diſheartned all his Friends and Aſſociats, finding him deveſted of all his Authority and Power; the Teſterdar and Captain Paſha gave way alſo to the Fury of the Soldiery, and made their Eſcapes: And the Mutiniers being hereby encouraged, and not in the leaſt ſoftned by this Reſignation, fell on more fiercely, and broke into the Houſe of the Vizier, who retiring by a Back-ſtairs, was purſued by Hadgi Ali, and ſhot with a Piſtol, and by others wounded in the Belly, ſo that his Guts came out: He had fought couragiouſly, having ſlain ſeveral with his own Hand: His Friends would have perſuaded him to withdraw himſelf; But they could not prevail upon him, ſaying, That he could not live long, and that during his ſhort life, he would not abandon his Wife, and Children to the Fury of theſe Miſcreants. Above Fifty Soldiers were killed before they enter'd the Houſe, which they ſpoiled even to the Windows and Doors. His Wife (the Daughter of Old Kuperlee) gave them all her Jewels; but they treated her inhumanly, and wounded her; upon which, as then reported, ſhe Miſcarried of a Child and died: The eldeſt Daughter not delivering her Pendants ſoon enough, they cut off her Ears with them; and a younger Daughter with a Slave, they took away, and ſold for ſix Dollars.

Great confuſion.

The ruin of the Mutiniers from whence.

Mahomet's Standard ſpread.

The Sedition ſuppreſſed.

1688.

Divers puniſhed.

This Tumult laſted three or four Days, when the Rebels ſeemed to be abſolute Maſters; for there was now no Vizier, no Janiſar-Aga, nor any ſurviving, who had any Authority over them; when a ſmall Accident ruined theſe Men, and over-turned their Anarchy, which was impoſſible to laſt: For after they had domineer'd for the ſpace of five Months, Pardoning or Killing, Raiſing or Deſtroying whom they pleaſed; it hapned, that in ſome of the Shops of the City, four of theſe Janiſaries in the Morning had taken away ſome Embroider'd Handkerchiefs, and other ſmall Commodities which remained there to be Sold; upon which a great Cry, and Clamour being raiſed amongſt the Shop-keepers, by the Encouragement of an Emir they all aroſe, fell on them, and killed two of them; and then the Emir putting a Linnen-cloth on a Stick, and lifting it up cried out, Let all true Muſſelmen come to the Seraglio, and pray the Grand Seignior to put out the Prophet's Standard and deſtroy theſe Rebels: Upon this, great numbers of the Citizens, who had been highly incenſed by their Robberies and Inſolence, got in a Body together and went to the Seraglio, which ſo encouraged the Sultan and thoſe within, that the Standard was ſet forth about Noon, and Proclamation made in the Streets, for all People to come and Fight under it. The Reverence paid to this Standard, brought an incredible concourſe of People of all Conditions and Ages, under the Walls of the Seraglio; from whence a Shegh, or Preacher called to them thrice, and asked them, Whether they were contented with their preſent Emperor? To which, Anſwer was made in the Affirmative, with three great Shouts; but that they would have the Giurbaes, or Captains, or Ringleaders of the Mutinous Militia deſtroyed: Upon which, Orders were given to ſeize them: Accordingly Thirteen of them were taken and cut to pieces; the reſt fled or abſconded. The Mufti alſo, who had ſided with the Giurbaes, was deprived of his Office, and Tabac Effendi put into his place, who had formerly been depoſed by the unruly Soldiers: All that night a ſtrong Watch was ſet about the Seraglio, and the next day all was quieted, as if none of theſe Diſturbances had hapned: Only Proclamation was made to Search for the Rebels, of which, as many as were found, were immediately executed. Upon this Revolution, and Turn of Affairs all the great Officers were changed: The Niſangi-Paſha who was an old Man, and for many years had done nothing elſe, but make the Grand Seignior's Firm on Commands, was created Grand Vizier: And a very young Man, the fifth Page of the R. Chamber, whoſe Office it is to cover the Grand Seignior's Table, was made Aga of the Janiſaries: Several Armenians, who dreſſed in the Habit of Soldiers, had mixed with the Tumults, and plunder'd the Houſes of the late Grand Vizier, and Aga of the Janiſaries, were taken and hanged, and ſeveral others were Impriſoned upon Suſpition of confederacy with the Rebels. In fine, upon Proclamation made, that whoſoever had plunder'd any thing from any of the aforeſaid Houſes, and ſhould reſtore the ſame again in the ſpace of three days, ſhould obtain his Pardon; which had ſo good effect, that ſeveral Sums of Money, were either brought to the new 1688.

Vizier, or in the night time laid in the Streets, and next morning reſtored. And now from this day only may we begin to account the Reign of this new Sultan: Who in the firſt place to exerciſe his Authority, by a ſtrict reformation of things, he ſuppreſſed Taverns, and prohibited the taking of Tobacco: And to obſerve what effect his Authority had taken; he walked one day Incognito in the Streets, with about eight Servants at a ſhort diſtance from him, and finding two poor Fellows ſelling Tobacco, he cauſed them immediately to be executed. The ſuppreſſion of this dreadful Mutiny and Rebellion, produced a general Joy and Jubily over the whole City, and ſerved to bring the Soldiery again into their Wits, who had for ſome Months, like ſo many Wild and Ravenous Beaſts, getting the Bridle out of their Mouths, acted without Reaſon or Common-Senſe. For one would have thought that Men, ſo lately mortified by the Victories and Succeſſes, which their Enemies had gained over them, ſhould not thereby grow, or become more inſolent; or that they who fled before their Enemies, ſhould bluſh to abandon their Frontiers, and leave them naked and expoſed, whilſt they marched Five or Six hundred Miles homewards, to reak their Anger on their Commanders, and exerciſe the little Courage which was left them, againſt their Citizens and Country-men. But many times we read, that ſuch Turbulences as theſe, which are like Fevers in the Body Politick, have ſerved to render the whole Compoſition afterwards more healthful, being thereby purged of many corrupt and malignant Humours.

The Sultan takes upon him to govern.

Iſmael made Vizier by Chance.

And ſo it hapned in this caſe; for after the Death of Sciaus Paſha, and the deſtruction of the Giurbas, it hapened fortunately for the preſent Vizier Iſmael, that there was no Paſha then in view, on whom to confer this Sublime Office. After which no eminent Men appearing, and of years fitter to ſupport the weight of ſo great a Charge, then Iſmael, who was almoſt arrived to the Age of Fourſcore; it was propoſed, that he ſhould deſcend to the Truſt of Chimacam: But Iſmael rejected that employment, ſaying, That in ſuch turbulent Times he could not act with Vigour and Authority, requiſite for compoſing the preſent diſtractions, and ſecuring the Peace and Quiet of the Empire, unleſs he were inveſted with the Supreme Power and the Seal of Vizier, which in that preſent Exigency was granted to him: But he having never made any Figure in the World before, and this advancement to ſo high a Dignity being very accidental, it was really believed, that it could not be of any long continuance, and that he was rather deſigned to ſupply the Vacancy, than poſſeſs the Office. But in a few days Iſmael diſcovered to the World, that his intentions were not to keep the place warm for another, but to ſettle himſelf; and for his own greater ſecurity and quiet of the City, he immediately fell to purge with great ſeverity the dregs of thoſe ill Humours, which had diſturbed the Government. And ſo he cauſed all the chief Servants of the Giurbas, and ſeveral of the Spahees, and Janiſaries (who had ſided with them) every Night to be cut off and thrown into the Sea, to the Number of about a Thouſand, by which the reſt being terrified, the Soldiers were reduced to as exact an Obedience, as formerly.

1688.

March 1688.

The Vizier endeavours to ſettle himſelf.

To proceed farther in this Work, the Teſterdar, or Lord-Treaſurer, who was firſt put in by the Giurbas (tho afterwards they would have killed him) was impriſoned in the Middle-gate of the Seraglio, and all his Eſtate ſeized: Then was the Kia bei, or Lieutenant-General of the Janiſaries ſent for, and veſted by the Vizier as a Paſha; but ſo ſoon as he was gone out, he was ſeized, impriſoned, and privately conveyed away in a Boat, and baniſhed to Mytilene. The reaſon why the Grand Vizier made him a Paſha, was becauſe that according to the Conſtitution of the Janiſaries, and that Ancient Cannon, no Kia-bei, whilſt ſo, can be put to Death, or Baniſhed, until he is firſt diveſted of that Office.

Kuperlee ſent to Canea.

And now Kuperlee, who, as formerly mentioned, was ſent away to the Caſtles at the Dardanelli, began to come into remembrance, and to be looked on by the Vizier as his Rival, and a dangerous Competitor, and as ſuch, to be too near the Port: Wherefore to remove him farther off, a Gally was ordered to Tranſport him to Canea, and the ſame Gally in her return to take Muſtapha Paſha, the late Janiſar-Aga, who was not long ſince baniſhed to Canea, and bring him back to the Dardanelli.

Several Impriſoned, and Fined.

And farther to purge the Army of all Mutiniers, and puniſh them for their late Sedition, ſeveral of the chief Giurbas were taken, ſtrangled, and their Bodies thrown out before the Gate of the Seraglio. Shaban Aga, the Kaiah, or Deputy of Siaus Paſha, late Vizier, and his Haſnadar, or Treaſurer, were impriſoned to make a diſcovery of the Eſtate belonging to Siaus Paſha, their Maſter; in Compoſition for which, upon payment of One hundred and twenty Purſes, they were ſet at liberty. Shaban Aga the Cuſtomer was alſo ſeized, and Three hundred Purſes demanded of him; but he having been ſo often fleeced, and ſqueezed in all Turns, declared himſelf unable, and ſo was continued in his Impriſonment.

In 1688.

In the mean Teghen, the famous Robber in Aſia, who having the laſt Year brought with him Fifteen hundred men into Hungaria, was for that reaſon made a Paſha, by Solomon then Vizier; and for want of better Officers, the Command of the Turkiſh Forces on the Frontiers of Hungaria were now committed to his Conduct: But being a Man always uſed to Rapine, and Violence, he could not caſt off the Trade to which he was accuſtomed, but fell in upon the Country of one Zeni the Paſha of Albania, which he plundered, and pillaged on all ſides where he came, raiſing great Sums with all manner of Oppreſſion, by the Force and Violence of his Soldiers; which Zeni not enduring, oppoſed and beat them away. Whereupon Teghen made great Complaints to the Port; and Zeni not knowing what impreſſions they might make in the minds of the Great Men, appeared in Perſon at Conſtantinople to make his defence; but ſo low-ſpirited were the Miniſters at that time, that for fear of Teghen, they gave up Zeni to be ſtrangled by him. This Zeni was an Albanian by Birth, and of good intereſt in his Country, and always bred up to the Wars, and eſteemed a brave Soldier; and being now ſentenced to Dye, he made it his earneſt deſire, that he might be ſent againſt the Grand Seignior's Enemies, that he might Dye in the midſt of them with his Sword in his Hand; but he was to be Sacrificed to the baſe and rapacious Spirit of a Robber; for to ſo vile and mean a Degree was the Greatneſs and Authority of this Empire fallen.

Yeghen Bei commits ſome outrages.

Paſha of Boſnia ſtrangled.

It being now the Month of March, when it was high time to form an Army with all Proviſions of War for the Campaigne, frequent Conſultations were held thereupon in the Divan. The New Vizier, as to himſelf, was for ſeveral reaſons unwilling to remove from the Court to the Camp; For he was very poor when he came firſt to that Office: And thô the Conjuncture was favourable, when he was at firſt advanced to it, all Offices being then new Farmed, and let out through the whole Empire, which brought him at leaſt a Thouſand Purſes of Money; yet the Equipage of a Grand Vizier for the War was vaſt, and to one in his condition wholly diſfurniſhed of Tents, Horſes, Camels, Mules, &c. would be unſupportable: And this gave him a fair pretence to excuſe himſelf from going this Year to the Wars: Nor indeed was it his intereſt ſo ſoon to abſent himſelf from the Grand Seignior's Preſence, until he had ſetled himſelf in his Favour and Acquaintance, and introduced his own Creatures. Moreover his Age was great, and his Experience in the War little; the Preparations for the War, by reaſon of the late Diſtractions, and Inteſtine Troubles, Diviſions, and all kinds of ill-management, were become very inconſiderable; ſo that it was not without favour to the Vizier given out, that it was not for the Reputation of the Grand Seignior's Seal, and the Safety and Honour of the Prophet's Standard to be ſo meanly attended. Whereupon it was concluded to make Teghen a Vizier of the Bench, to ſend him Three Horſe-tails, and conſtitute him Sardar, or Major-General in Hungary.

The Grand Vizier makes excuſe for not going to the War.

1688.

Yeghen intruſted with the Army.

All this while Teghen had not been idle, but had purſued his point of raiſing Monies by all manner of Extortions, and at laſt very confidently wrote a Letter to the Vizier; importing, That in caſe any Letters ſhould have been wrote to the Port, containing Complaints of his having raiſed great Sums upon the People; he deſired the Vizier to peruſe the Account, whereby he would find that the Sums he had raiſed, did almoſt amount unto One thouſand Purſes, which he had employed to the payment of his Soldiers, and to provide them with Neceſſaries, deſiring that One thouſand Purſes more might be forthwith ſent him to pay off the remaining Arrears of the Army, which would ſerve to keep the Soldiers in Order, and Obedience, and put both himſelf and them in a convenient poſture for the War.

1688.

He demands Money.

But the Vizier was not very forward to ſend him ſupplies of Money, having taken a jealouſy, that by his various motions he intended to ſet up for himſelf; for many of his Ancient Comrades came daily flocking over to him, and ſome privately from Aſia; and therefore deſigned to remove him as far off from him, as he could, and give him his Hands full of buſineſs with the Germans.

The Vizier anſwers not.

Soon after which, this Teghen ſent his Steward or Kaiah, named Kara Muſtapha, with Letters to the Grand Vizier, recommending the Kaiah to be made Paſha of Caramania, and that he might have Orders to forward the Aſiatick Levies for the War. This the Vizier diſſembled and granted; and accordingly whilſt his Kaiah was preparing an Equipage for his Government, other Letters came from Teghen, demanding more Money and Soldiers, with the Standard of Mahomet, and a power to diſpoſe of all the Offices, and Paſhalucks, or Government of Paſhas in thoſe parts, adding that it was very fit the Grand Seignior's Seals ſhould be in the Army, as neceſſary to uphold the Authority of a General, and keep the Soldiers in due obedience. This ſpoke ſo plain his intention of ſetting up for Grand Vizier, That a Great Council was convened, where it was agreed to take from him

1688.

Yeghen demands the Grand Seignior's Seals.

1688. him even the Office and Title of Sardar; and beſtowing on him the Title only of Paſha of Temiſwar, Haſnadar, or Treaſurer, Haſſan Paſha was again made Seraskier in the Room of Yeghen. To execute this reſolution with more Authority, Five Kapigibaſhees were diſpatched, with Orders and Inſtructions, That in caſe Yeghen would not accept of the Government of Temiſwar, and refuſe quietly to repair thither; then they were by vertue of a Royal Command under Signature of the Grand Seignior, directed to the Boſtangibaſhees at Adrianople, and in all parts of Romelia to raiſe the Neſiran, or Trained-Bands of thoſe Countries upon him. And to prevent the paſſage of Yeghen into Aſia, where by joyning with a Body of Thieves, and Robbers, and Malecontents of his Party, he might cauſe great Commotions, the Ways were all laid with Forces to prevent and obſtruct his Paſſage: And that his Kaiah neither, might not be permitted to paſs into Aſia to prepare Commotions againſt the coming of his Maſter; the Gates of Conſtantinople were ſhut, and Guards ſet, not to ſuffer any to go out of the City. But the Kaiah, upon the Rumour hereof, ſurrendered himſelf that Evening to the Grand Vizier, and had immediately been ſtrangled, had not the Mufti vigorouſly interpoſed in his behalf, alledging, That it would appear more juſt and reaſonable to ſecure his perſon for the preſent, and to ſtay, and to ſee what effects the Grand Seignior's Orders would have upon Yeghen his Maſter.

But is degraded.

New fears in the City from Yeghen.

Theſe Rumours raiſed once again new fears and diſtractions at Conſtantinople; for Reports flew about, that Yeghen was on his march towards the City, where he had a ſtrong Party amongſt the Giurbas, and others, giving out that he came to reſtore Sultan Mahomet, or his Son, to the Throne, all which being Fore-runners of a New Civil War, moved many rich Turks to leave the City, and ſome of them to retire to Grand Cairo, the Sanctuary of Rich and Opulent Turks. The Vizier in the mean time to obſtruct his March, ſent Ten or Twelve Chambers of Janiſaries, with ſeveral Pieces of Cannon to guard an important Paſs, called Muſtapha Paſha's Bridge, upon a River in the Marſhes, about Six Hours Journey from Adrianople: And leſt he ſhould have another deſign in his Head of paſſing over into Aſia, at the narrow Streight of the Helleſpont, Morza Paſha was ſent with other Janiſaries to Gallipoli, where it was probable he might attempt a paſſage, it being reported, that he had already ſent Four hundred Purſes, with many of his People by that way. All his Force was reported to conſiſt only of Four thouſand Horſe; and it was hoped by the Grand Vizier, and other Chief Commanders, that many of theſe would deſert alſo; and that all the Country of Romelia, which had miſerably been haraſſed by him, and that the Great Men, who mortally hated him, would unanimouſly riſe to ſuppreſs, and reduce him to Subjection. 1688.

1688. During all theſe inteſtine Embroils, no care was taken to oppoſe the Foreign and Common Enemy, all being abandoned to their Luſt, until they could ſee an end of the Civil Wars. From whence we may learn, That no Faith or Truſt is to be given to Robbers, and Highway-men, like theſe; for tho they may by fair words, and ſpecious pretences, come in to the aſſiſtance of a Prince, their deſign is to ſet up for themſelves, and ſet only on Miſchief, on Rapine, on Violence, which their Education had made natural unto them.

Iſmael the Vizier undermined.

Still did the Apprehenſions, and inteſtine Diſturbances from Yeghen daily increaſe; and Iſmael the Vizier being found to be a Perſon of ill Qualities, Proud, Obſtinate, and extremely Avaritious, beſides his ſmall practice in Affairs; the Mufti, together with the Chief Men of the Law and Sword, gave privately by the hands of the Kuzlir-Aga, an Arz, or Memorial to the Grand Seignior, repreſenting that they thought themſelves obliged in Duty, humbly to make known unto him, that Iſmael Paſha was not a fit man to continue Vizier: That ſuch difficult times, as theſe, required one of the greateſt Abilities, and Experience; and that none was better qualified to contend with the dangerous Troubles and Commotions, than Muſtapha Paſha, at preſent an Exile at the Caſtles of the Dardanelli. The Grand Seignior preſently agreed to the Counſel, and diſpatched a Hatte-Sheriff, or Royal Command to Muſtapha Paſha, to repair to his preſence; which he accordingly did; and the next Morning after his Arrival, he 1688. viſited the Grand Vizier; who being informed that Muſtapha was ſent for to be made Vizier of the Bench, and to be an Aſſiſtant to him in his Counſels, for the better Compoſure of the diſturbed Eſtate of the Empire, he veſted him with a Veſt of Sables, as a Vizier of the Bench, and Companion with him, to bear a ſhare of the heavy burthen of the Government. The Vizier alſo deſigned to move the Grand Seignior to employ him in the Command of the Army, in the place of Yeghen; for which Office he was very proper, being well beloved in the Army, and in high Reputation both of the Spahees and Janiſaries.

Muſtapha Paſha ſent for.

But the Vizier had but flattered himſelf with all theſe Meaſures; for coming one 1688. Morning from the Divan, and being ſate down at his Table to Eat, in came the Baltagee Kiaſei, or Lieutenant of the Guard of the Battle-axes, and delivered a Hatte-Sheriff, or Royal Command from the Sultan, to deliver up the Seals, which he immediately did; and the ſame being carried to the Grand Seignior, he ſent for Muſtapha, and gave them to him, veſting him with the Ceremonies uſual at the Creation of a Grand Vizier.

Muſtapha made Vizier.

After which, the firſt thing which Muſtapha did, was to diſpatch away ſeveral Couriers to Tegben, and to the Paſhas in thoſe parts to countermand the Orders formerly ſent; but before thoſe Advices could arrive, a Meſſenger came with Letters from Tegben to Iſmael, and the Mufti, acquainting them, That ſince the Neſtran, or Trained-Bands had by their Orders been raiſed upon him, and encompaſſed him round on all ſides in the Plains near Sophia, where he lay Encamped, but durſt not attack him; (for if they did, he reſolved to ſell his Life dear, as he had declared to thoſe, who came to take him) therefore he proteſted againſt the Vizier, and Mufti for all the Muſſelman Blood, which ſhould be ſpilt in that quarrel. He alſo deſired the Paſhas, who came againſt him, to have patience only until an Anſwer was returned to thoſe Letters which he was then ſending to the Port, and to give them free paſſage. In his Letters he ſeemed to wonder much, what ſhould be the cauſe of this Commotion, he for his part having done nothing contrary to his Duty, or his Allegiance to his Prince; and therefore could not believe, that it was the Grand Seignior's Will and Pleaſure that theſe Arms ſhould be raiſed upon him; but if it were, he would go, and lay his Head at his Feet, who might take it, if he pleaſed, but he would deliver it no other perſon.

Yeghen writes to Iſmael and the Mufti.

Muſtapha, now Vizier, having received the Letters, read them, and ſaid to the Meſſenger, who brought them, Curſed be he who was the cauſe of this diſturbance: But howſoever he ſaid that all ſhould end well; for that he had already diſpatched Orders for pacifying and compoſing all things, and would next day return him back with a Confirmation of the former diſpatch. Iſmael being now laid aſide, and out of Power and Office, was to bear the Burthen of all the Misfortunes; for that Tegben Writing, in caſe he had not more Men and Money, he could not advance farther againſt the Enemy, but ſhould be forced to return to Conſtantinople. Iſmael had taken the Alarum, and raiſed the Country upon him without juſt or reaſonable Apprehenſions of any danger from a force ſo ſmall and inconſiderable, as that of Tegben's, they conſiſting of no greater a Number, than that of Four thouſand men. But the Truth was; Iſmael had great reaſon to apprehend the danger of the approach of Tegben to the Port; for he was a dangerous Villain; and tho his Numbers were not great, yet they might be formidable when joyned to the Faction and Friends of the Giurbas, and the Male-contented Party which lay concealed, and under Covert in the City of Conſtantinople. 1688.

Muſtapha Vizier anſwers Yeghens Letter. Iſmael blamed.

But now new Maſters, new Meaſures; and Tegben was to be Courted by Letters from the Vizier, declaring that the Sultan highly eſteemed his Fidelity and Bravery; and had pardoned him; and that now he ſhould return to the Frontiers, and cheerfully attend the Service of the Sultan: As to his Kaiah he was continued in the Office, with the Title of Paſha of Caramania; but was ordered to ſupply his Government with a Muſſelim, or Deputy, but he himſelf was ordered to ſerve in the War.

And now after theſe diſpatches, Iſmael was called upon to Refund the Monies, which he had raiſed from Paſhas, and other Officers for their places; which were valued to amount unto One thouſand Purſes; but he made his Compoſition, and paid to the Teſterdar or Treaſurer Five hundred only.

Iſmael Fined.

Thus had the Civil Diſſentions taken up all their time, and obſtructed the due Preparations for a War ſo preſſing and heavy upon them; ſo that little could be expected of great Action in Hungary, the Seaſon of the Year (which was now April) being far advanced: Howſoever great things were expected from the Wiſe and Valorous Conduct of this New Vizier Muſtapha, having for his Merit been raiſed from a common Soldier to be a General. He had been Janiſar-Aga at the Siege of Vienna, and afterwards Seraskier at the firſt Siege of Buda, and was for a while in great Reputation with all People, both Civil and Military.

1688.
May

But this favourable Air of the People did not continue long; for Muſtapha by his Indiſpoſition of Body, and the continual Diſtractions and Difficulties of the Times, ſeemed not to anſwer the great expectation which was at firſt conceived of him; and indeed the Confuſions and Fears of the People, grew always higher and greater as Dangers approached nearer; to increaſe which, there wanted not evil Spirits to poſſeſs and affect the minds of the Vulgar with hideous Stories and Reports; and indeed as for ſome of them, there wanted not probable Reaſons, or ſubſtantial Foundation. The News of the Revolutions at Grand Caire took up a greatpart of the Diſcourſe; the Truth of which came afterwards to Light, and known to be no other, but a diſcontent of the People raiſed upon a Belief, that the Fears and terrible Reports at Conſtantinople.

Vizier

1688. Vizier intended to change the Paſha, which had but four Months before been entred into his Office: Upon which Report, after many Conſultations held at Grand Cairo, they reſolved to ſend ſeveral of their Beys, or Lords, as Deputies to repreſent unto the Vizier, that beſides the great Tax laid upon the Country at the entrance of every new Paſha, it was contrary to the Priviledges, and Conſtitutions of Egypt, that their Paſha ſhould be changed before the expiration of three years; the which they ſupplicated the Vizier to conſider, and to lay theſe their Deſires and Reaſons before the Grand Seignior. The Vizier at firſt anſwered them very roughly, and with Anger, telling them that this Meſſage which they brought aroſe from Humours and Seeds of Mutiny and Sedition, and the Contagion they had received from the Rebellious Giurbas; That they undertook to meddle in matters, which did not concern them; that they were the Grand Seignior's Subjects, and therefore ought quietly to ſubmit, to whom ſoever it was his Imperial pleaſure to ſet over them. But in a few days afterwards, upon cooler Thoughts, and Reflections on the preſent diſorder of the Government, it not being judged convenient to diſcontent or provoke this People; he called again for the Deputies, and diſmiſt them with a confirmation of the ſame Paſha, and ſo diſpatched them back again to Grand Cairo with full ſatisfaction.

Deputies ſent from Grand Cairo.

They are diſpatched back again.

But that which gave moſt trouble, was certain Advice, that in Aſia great numbers of Thieves and Robbers infeſted the Country, and that a Body of about Four thouſand Men had appeared before Angora; the Head, or Chief Commander of which was one Tedic, under whom Teghen had ſerved as a Captain, before he came into the Grand Seignior's Service; he was a bold and an old Robber, who had long lived on Rapine and Spoil, and now commanding ſo conſiderable a Body of Horſe, he ravaged all the Country, commanding free Quarters every where, and raiſing Contributions and Taxes in all places according to his own Luſt and Pleaſure; and hearing what ſucceſs Teghen his Under-Officer had gained, he was willing to put in for a ſhare with the reſt; offering himſelf and Forces to come over into Europe, and ſerve the Grand Seignior in the Wars of Hungary.

Robbers in Aſia trouble the Country.

About the ſame time alſo there hapned a Combuſtion in Candia, where the Soldiers mutined for want of Pay, and killed their Paſha, with the Aga of the Janiſaries, and ſome others, ſeizing on the Paſha's Eſtate, which was accounted to amount unto ſo much Money, as would pay the Soldiers all that was due to them. Whereupon the Grand Vizier created Kuperlee-Ogle, lately baniſhed thither (as we have mentioned) Paſha of that Country, and the Moxur Aga or Major General of the Janiſaries, to be Aga of the Janiſaries in the places of thoſe, who were lately killed in the Tumult, and likewiſe diſpatched from Conſtantinople Ali Paſha, who was once a Creature of Kara Muſtapha Paſha late Vizier, to be Paſha of Canea; by which means the Vizier freed himſelf of two dangerous Competitors. 1688.

Mutinies in Candia.

In the mean time Iſmael Paſha the late Vizier was ſent on a Gally to guard Cavalla, a Caſtle near Salonica, which in effect was no other than an Honourable Baniſhment; And becauſe the Grand Seignior was not pleaſed to accept the offer made to him by Tedic, a Teſtirgee Paſha, with ſome other ordinary Paſhas, were diſpatched into Anatolia, to ſettle and ſecure the Country, and to reduce Tedic, and the Thieves his Complices to Obedience.

Iſmael baniſhed.

Tedic was to be ſuppreſſed.

The Grand Vizier now according to the Cuſtom of all his Predeceſſors, that he might ſettle himſelf more firm, began to make ſeveral changes in the Officers; amongſt others, he put out Ramadam Effendi, Lord Treaſurer in the late time of Iſmael, placing in his ſtead Mahomet Effendi, Treaſurer in the time, when the Giurbaes governed; an ill Man, and of a bad Reputation.

Nor could the Vizier think himſelf ſecure whilſt Teghen Command his Forces, ſo near as Sophia, and was diſobedient to all Commands, aſpiring to no leſs, than to be Seraskier or General of the Army; nor could it be thought, he would ſtop there, or at any other point until he came to be Grand Vizier: Wherefore Muſtapha Vizier, diſpatched private Orders to have Teghen ſtrangled; who remained hovering about, between Belgrade and Sophia, keeping all Strangers from any near approach, ſo that the execution of thoſe Orders were reſpited, until a more opportune conjuncture: For he continued ſtill in Rebellion, having refuſed to go to Boſna, declaring that he would not give up the Command of Seraskier of the Army in Hungary, to Haſſan Paſha, or any other.

Yeghen continues in Rebellion.

Whilſt theſe things were in Agitation, an Envoy arrived at Conſtantinople from the Emperor of Morocco, with Letters of Complement to the Grand Seignior upon his Exaltion to the Throne, and with Offers, that as the Chriſtians were united together againſt the Muſulmen, ſo he was ready to give his Aſſiſtance to the Grand-Seignior in defence of the Mahometan Faith. 1688.

It being now the Spring time, when the Turks always put their Horſes out to Graſs and Soil: The Imbrahor, or Maſter of the Horſe, invited the Grand Seignior into the Fields, to ſee in what order his Horſes were governed at their Paſture; and there gave him a very Splendid Entertainment. The Grand Seignior was ſo pleaſed with the Dinner, the Air, and the Fields, that in two or three days afterwards he went again to the Meadows at Cat-Hanah, about two Engliſh Miles at fartheſt from Pera; where he was again feaſted, not without the Cenſure and Murmuring of the People; who ſaid, That in a ſhort time he would follow the Example of the late Sultan in his Diverſions, and Negligence in the Government, ſo they ſhould have changed (as indeed they had) to little purpoſe.

The People diſpleaſed with the New Sultan.

1688.

It began now plainly to appear, That the Turks by reaſon of their inteſtine Diviſions, had made very inconſiderable Preparations either by Land or Sea: Howſoever ſomething was neceſſary to be; and therefore in the firſt place, Eleven Gallies were ſent to Guard the Black Sea againſt the Coſacks, who (as was reported) were preparing to make Incurſions into the Parts near Conſtantinople, as they had uſually done in former times.

The Turks make ſmall Preparations.

But their chief Apprehenſions and Fears were raiſed from a Report, that the Imperialiſts were marching towards Belgrade: And indeed they had great Reaſons for it; for they had nothing of Force on the Frontiers, nor nothing to oppoſe them in caſe the Emperor ſhould think fit to puſh forward his Conqueſts, which nothing could obſtruct, beſides Famine and Hunger in a March through a ruined, and a deſart Country.

They ſeek for Peace.

An Ambaſſador deſigned for England.

1688.

The Embaſſy put off.

The Turks in theſe extremities, finding no ſafety or ſucceſs, and protection in their Arms, had recourſe to their laſt refuge, which was, if poſſible to obtain a Peace with the Emperor, a Method, which they had never practiſed before ſince they were an Empire, to be the firſt to Sue for a Peace. But now Neceſſity preſſing them, they were for diſpatching an Ambaſſador to the Kings of France, England, and the States of Holland, whoſe deſign, ſubſtance and main drift of his Embaſſy was only pretended to give notice unto thoſe Powers of the Exaltation of Sultan Solyman to the Throne of the Ottoman Empire: But with private Inſtructions to inſinuate unto thoſe Princes ſeverally to interpoſe in a Mediation of Peace, and to uſe their endeavours to give a ſtop to the Career of the Imperial Arms; which good Offices, in order to a Peace might reaſonably be expected from Kings and Princes, who had for many years maintained a happy Peace, and Correſpondence with the Ottoman Port; where their Ambaſſadors had been treated with Friendſhip, and their Merchants with Security, and their Trade flouriſhed on all ſides with Profit and Advantage. One Achmet Aga being propoſed for this Embaſſy, he was ſeverally treated and feaſted by the three Ambaſſadors, who by the Diſcourſes they had entertained with him, obſerved him to be a Perſon diſcreet, and better practiſed in Affairs of Countries different to their own, than commonly Turks are, who think it an Indignity to them, to look into the States of Chriſtian Princes, which ſo lately the Ottoman Empire overlooked, as unworthy their Conſideration: To Tranſport this Ambaſſador a French-ſhip was appointed, and his Equipage prepar'd; but by the Conduct of Sir William Trumbal, Engliſh Ambaſſador then at Conſtantinople, and the confuſed Affairs of the Turks, this Embaſſy did not ſucceed: And indeed the Turky Company could not expect to Reap any thing from thence, but trouble and expence, and perhaps diſpleaſure at the Port, in caſe his Entertainment had not equalled, that which he had received at Paris.

Ambaſſadors deſigned to the Emperor.

1688.

Howſoever, the Turks were better reſolved in the Point of that Embaſſy, deſigned to the Emperor. And to that end, they choſe Hamedi Effendi, one who had been bred up a Clerk, and afterwards came to be firſt Accountant in the Treaſury; and Mauvro Cordato, a Greek by Nation, a Man of Intrigue and Buſineſs, having for many years been employed for Interpreter to the Grand Vizier, ever ſince the Death of Panaioti. The Turks being aſhamed, as a thing below the Dignity of their Empire to Sue for Peace, thought it might prove a certain conſequence in Anſwer to a civil Letter, written by the Grand Seignior to the Emperor, giving notice of his Exaltation to the Ottoman Throne (much after the ſame Tenour with that which was written to the other Powers) with this Addition and Alteration: That whereas the ancient Amity and Friendſhip had been broken during the Reign of his Predeceſſor, he, as to his own Perſon, had not been conſenting nor inſtrumental thereunto; and that God having puniſhed the Authors of this War, he reſolved to take different Meaſures; and conſidering the Emperour as his Neighbour, he was deſirous to enter into a League of Friendſhip with him, and to eſtabliſh a firm and laſting Peace, in caſe the Emperor ſhould be inclining thereunto. Theſe Ambaſſadors were appointed to begin their Journey towards the end of June, towards whoſe expences the Grand Seignior intended to allow Six thouſand Dollars; which was eſteemed a ſufficient Proviſion for them, until they came to the Confines, whence according to the ancient Canon, they are to be conducted by the Emperor's Guards, and defray'd at his Expence: Their Retinue conſiſted of 60 perſons, half of which was habited in the Turkiſh, and half after the Grecian Faſhion. As yet they had received no Paſſports for them; but in 1688. aſſurance, that they would be granted, the Ambaſſadors were poſted away to Belgrade, there to remain in expectation of them.

The Humour of Sultan Solyman.

The New Grand Seignior during all theſe Combuſtions and Negotiations minded little, or nothing of Buſineſs; nor indeed was he capable of any; for when any thing was propounded to him, He anſwered, Yes or No, or with ſome very ſhort Reply, after the manner of Laconick brevity, and then preſently turned away to read the Alchoran. He was at firſt reputed after the manner of his Father, to be impotent as to Women; but afterwards taking five or ſix into his Embraces, he gave the World cauſe to conceive another Opinion of him. He ſat as aukwardly on Horſe-back as his Father, that Exerciſe being uneaſie to him; his chief Divertiſements were his Books, (which we may believe he ill underſtood) and ſometimes taking the Air on the Water, and in Chiosks, or Garden Houſes on the ſide of the Boſphorus, he paſſed his pleaſant time.

Yeghen made Saraskier.

His Complices encouraged.

Teghen ſtill continued to Ravage the Country between Sophia and Belgrade, as his Comrade Tedic that Arch-robber did in Anatolia: And the Government being too weak to ſuppreſs two ſuch Thieves or Highway-Men, how much leſs was it able to contend with the German Troops? They were forced to diſſemble, and give way to the preſent Extremities; by making Teghen Seraskier in Hungary, whilſt Haſſan Paſha was forced to give way, and fly privately out of the reach of his Competitor. The News hereof flew with great haſt to the Thieves in Anatolia, who being encouraged with the Succeſs of Teghen, under whoſe Government they all fancied to be made Paſhas or Grandees, came over in great numbers to joyn with him: Amongſt which one Temac Boluckbaſhee, a leading Man, with Four hundred of his Robbers paſſed boldly over from Aſia to Conſtantinople; and Tedic their General was not only pardoned, but made a Paſha.

An Aga ſent to Tranſilvania.

To this hard Plight and Extremity was the Ottoman Empire reduced; when the Turks placing their greateſt hopes in the Tartars, diſpatched away an Aga to Apaſi Prince of Tranſilvania, with a Patent to confirm him in his Principality; and with Orders to demand of him in conſideration thereof a round Sum of ready Money, wherewith to Succour, and pay the Garriſons on the Boriſthenes; and to provide for the Maintenance of Caminiec, which was in want of Ammunition, and all things neceſſary. And to perſuade Apaſi hereunto, he told Stories very improper and unfit to compaſs his ends; for he reherſed all the Tumults of the Zorbas at Conſtantinople, and that the Grand Seignior was forced to create Teghen, who was their Chief and Leader, to be Seraskier in Hungary. That in Conſtantinople there was want of every thing, even to a Famine, cauſed by the Seditions and Mutinies of the Soldiers; and that for the appeaſing theſe Tumults, and for the Donative unto the Soldiers, which is uſually given by the Sultans at their Inauguration, the Exchequer had been drained of Twenty Millions of Dollars; wherefore he urged the States of Tranſilvania to grant him his Demands; in failure of which he threatned them with the Incurſions of the Tartars, who had already paſſed the River Prut, and were enter'd into the Neighbouring Provinces, where they had left ſad Marks of their cruel and miſerable Devaſtations: And that Sultan Galga, and Noradin with a mighty Army were marching to oppoſe the Emperors deſigns upon Belgrade. 1688.

General Carafa having notice of theſe Practices upon Tranſilvania, went with all haſt thither; and in a ſhort time not only defeated this Aga in his Negotiations, but alſo ſo well diſpoſed Apaſi, and the States of Tranſilvania with entire Devotion to the Emperor, that in deſpight of the Meſſage brought by the Aga; they abſolutely renounced all Obedience, and Duty to the Ottoman Port: The which Renuntiation follows in this manner.

We Michael Teleky de Szek General, George and Alexius de Bethlem, Laodiſlaus Szekel of Boroſzeno, Valentine Frank one of the Judges, Chriſtian Zato Conſul of the City of Hermanſtadt, Counſellors to the Illuſtrious Prince of Tranſilvania: As alſo Nicholas of Bethlem, Stephen Appor, Peter Alvinzy, and John Staroſy Principal and publick Notaries, Michael Filſtrick Judge of the City of Braſlavia, Plenipotentiaries deputed by the Prince aforeſaid, and by the States of the Kingdom of Tranſilvania; do hereby declare and make known unto all the World, deſiring that theſe Preſents may remain upon Record, for a laſting Teſtimony unto all Ages.

With great Reaſon may this preſent Age remain aſtoniſhed, and envious Eyes become dazled with the Splendor of the Divine Clemency; which not ſuffering its beloved Chriſtendom to Groan longer under the Yoak of Barbarous Pride, nor remain in Bonds to Tyrannical Servitude, nor longer to be overwhelmed, and drowned after ſo many Wars in a Sea of Innocent Blood; hath at length out of his great Compaſſion, been pleaſed to exert the ſtrong Power of his Omnipotent Arm, to Reſcue ſo many Kingdoms and Provinces, from an unſupportable Slavery under the Turks, who tranſported with ſenſeleſs Fury had rendered themſelves formidable to the World, ruinous to their Neighbours, and Deſpiſers of 1688. all People, beſides their own. But behold! How the God of Hoſts, being juſtly diſpleaſed with theſe vain Boaſtings, hath thrown his Thunder-bolts amongſt them, and diſperſed them, making the moſt Auguſt Emperor Leopold the Firſt an Inſtrument of his Vengeance, and having ſhowred Floods of Bleſſings on his Glorious and Triumphant Arms, hath encompaſſed his Royal Head with Wreaths of Victorious Laurel; whilſt the Ottoman Throne is dreſſed up with Mournful Cipreſs.

Such were the aſtoniſhing operations of the Divine Power, made manifeſt to all the World. For when the barbarous Tyranny was in its full Career, and was in the Trail of a hot Scent after Chriſtian Blood; then was God pleaſed to ſtop them in their Courſe; and reduce their unſtable and depreſſed Fortune to the doubtful Terms of Hope and Fear.

It is now near an Age, that unhappy Tranſilvania hath been depreſſed by the unſupportable Ottoman Yoak, and bewailed the loſs of her lawful King and Lord: And after having been Turmoiled, toſſed with Storms of War, with Fire and Sword, and Civil Diſſentions, all things have been ſo confuſed and defaced, that ſcarce any thing hath remained on the Regiſters of it's ancient Glory; only ſince the Dominion of the Turk gained by the inteſtine differences of it's own Princes, ſome Memorials are written, and reſerved to repreſent to the World a Hiſtory of a moſt direful Tragedy. But now the maligne Influence of the Stars being either abated, or entirely exhauſted; and the Ambitious Pride, and Deſigns of private Men defeated, Tranſilvania embraces the Paternal, and Powerful Protection of the moſt Auguſt Emperor of the Romans, Leopold the Firſt, and Hereditary King of Hungary, and of all his Succeſſors, and particularly of the moſt Serene Prince Joſeph King of Hungary, (whoſe Life may God long continue) and of his Heirs after him, according as it hath been concluded and agreed in the year 1687, at the laſt Diet at Poſſonium with full Conſent, Approbation and Concurrence of all the States of Hungary, who have for a long time poured out their Prayers and Tears, and Sighs before God, that at length through the Divine Mercy, they might obtain the Enjoyment of this long wiſhed Felicity. Be it therefore Enacted, Eſtabliſhed, and made known to this preſent, and to future Ages; That to the Glory of the Omnipotent God, and for the more quiet, and proſperous State of this Principality, both in this, and in Ages to come; We the ſaid Plenipotentiaries deputed by the Illuſtrious Prince, and States of this Kingdom, do with our free Will and Chriſtian Zeal, Renounce all Protection from the Turk; declaring that for the future, We will ſend him no Preſents, nor pay him Tribute; Nor will we maintain any Correſpondence with the Ottoman Port, their Adherents or Dependants, whether Turks or Chriſtians; or with any others, who are Enemies to the Majeſty of the Roman Emperor our gracious Lord, or to his lawful Succeſſours, and Hereditary Kings of Hungary; upon Penalty of High Treaſon, to be puniſhed according to the Laws of this Country, after due Conviction of the Crime. And in lieu of that Power which we have now renounced, We do with all Sincerity, and Purity of Heart Enter, and Liſt our ſelves under the Protection of the moſt Auguſt Emperor; and engage not only our ſelves, but our Poſterity of this Kingdom of Tranſilvania. And for an Evidence of this our Submiſſion and Agreement, by vertue of the power we have received from his Highneſs the Prince, and the States of the Country, We do admit, and receive the Imperial Forces, into the Fortreſs of Kôvar, Huſs, Georgim and Braſlavia, beſides other places already garriſoned by German Soldiers. Moreover we declare, That we ſhall be ready at all times, to take up Arms againſt the Common Enemy of Chriſtendom, and againſt all others, as we ſhall be commanded by our moſt gracious Lord; whom with all Humility, We Pray and Beſeech, that he would be graciouſly pleaſed to confirm our Priviledges, and the free Exerciſe of our Religion, as we have hither to enjoyed: And alſo, that he would Protect, and Defend our Poſterity, and Succeſſors in the ſaid Liberty and Priviledges: And in the mean time that the Teaty and Convention made with the Duke of Loraine may remain in full Force and Vertue; We have in Teſtimony thereof and for greater Evidence and Manifeſtation to all the World, ratified and confirmed this our Abjuration, and Renuntiation of the Ottoman Protection under the Seal of the three Nations of the Kingdom of Tranſilvania. 1688.

Given at Hermanſtadt the 9th of May, 1688.

Theſe happy Succeſſes made way for the Surrender of Alba Regalis, which all this time held out, ſupplying themſelves ſometimes with Proviſions by Sallies and Excurſions, which they often made even to the Walls of Buda. Wherefore it being wiſely conſidered, that this Garriſon might ſtill defend it ſelf for a long time, unleſs the Blocade were more ſtreightly watched; and ſuch Forces diſpoſed on all ſides, as might ſuffer none either to go in, or come out of the City; Prince Herman of Baden Preſident of the Counſel of War, projected a formal Blocade, and with ſome Parties of Germans and Hungarians, within the Juriſdiction of his own Government, together with ſome Militia of General Count Bathyani, Commanded by himſelf; and the former Conducted by Colonel Baron Arey-

Alba Regalis ſtreightned.

1688.

May.

1688. zaga Governour of Leopolſtadt, and theſe were enjoyned to make an actual Attack upon the place, in caſe they underſtood, that a Blocade was not likely to ſucceed.

The Turks make a Sally.

About the beginning of May theſe Forces appeared in view of Alba Regalis; and a ſtrict Blocade was formed on all ſides of the Town. Howſoever, the Defendants ſeemed not to loſe Courage, but on the contrary, made a ſtout Sally both with Horſe and Foot; the Iſſue of which was of no greater Importance, than only the taking off the Heads of ſome unfortunate Soldiers on one ſide and the other. And now at length to make their laſt effort, the Turks made another Sally on the Germans, but ſoon retired again without any Action; which gave opportunity to the Van-guard, to advance within Cannon-ſhot of the Town; with which the Defendants became ſo terrified, that the three Chief Commanders ſent forth a Turk well clothed and mounted,to make ſome motion for a Treaty: The Turk approaching near the Vanguard, deſired to ſpeak with ſome of the Chief Captains, letting them know, that he had Offers to make of a Surrender; which whilſt he was uttering, ſeveral other Turks Sallied out with a kind of cheerful Air and Briskneſs, one of which advancing before, demanded of the Chriſtian Soldiers, what it was they required? To which Anſwer being made: The Town. Reply was made; 'But we muſt know firſt on what 'Conditions; may we not, ſaid they, expect to receive the ſame Articles,that were 'given to Agria? And may not we obtain 'the Favour to have our Treaty Signed at 'Vienna, by the great Emperor of the Romans: To which Anſwer was made, That thô they had no Power, nor Authority to give them any aſſurance of the latter, yet they would endeavour to give them ſatiſfaction in that point, as well, as in others.

They Capitulate.

The Articles are agreed, and Meſſengers ſent to Vienna.

1688. Hereupon Articles were drawn into ſeveral Heads and ſent into the City, the which, next day being conſider'd in the Divan, and by common conſent agreed unto, were Signed by the three Paſhas, and Chief Commanders of the Garriſon; the Sum of all which being this: That the ſame Conditions ſhould be given in all Points, as to Agria. And as to the Confirmation of theſe Articles by the Emperor, that the Turks might be ſatisfied therein, an Expreſs was diſpatched to Prince Herman of Baden, that he might ſend Advice to the Emperor of this Succeſs, and withall to intimate the Deſires of the Turks to have their Articles confirmed by the Imperial Signature. The which being granted, Ali Aga, and Ali Beg were commiſſioned by the Garriſon to carry the Articles to Vienna; and being come near to the City, an Officer was ſent to meet them with a Coach, by whom with a Guard they were conducted to the chief Inn of the City, where they were Lodged, and provided with all things neceſſary for their Entertainment. The Emperor not being in the City, but at his Country-Houſe at Luxemburg; the Turks loſt the curioſity of their Deſires, and Honour of Kiſſing the Hem of the Emperor's Garment: Howſoever, after having been courteouſly treated, they were with much expedition diſpatched away, that the Surrender of the Town might not be delaied; for in War are many Hazards: And perhaps the Commanders of the Town might have projected this pretence for a delay, not knowing what might happen in the interim by Succours from Belgrade; which were promiſed, and daily expected to relieve them. In conſideration of which the Marquis Herman of Baden, Preſident of the Council of War, procured the Imperial Signature to their Capitulations with all haſt imaginable, and having made a Preſent to each of them of a Watch, they were Conducted back to Alba Regalis by Count Ziccky, who had all that Winter been very Active to Watch that Garriſon, and force them to a Surrender. Thus theſe two Commiſſioners being returned to Alba Regalis, with the Articles of Surrender ſigned and confirmed, they enter'd into the Divan with the Paſhas, and other Commanders, and after ſome Debate and Conſultation, they reſolved on an immediate Surrender, and without other pauſe or delay, they began to laid their Goods and Moveables on Carts and Waggons: And on the next day being the 19*th* of May, they quitted the City, and went out by the Gates, to the number in all of about Eight thouſand Souls, amongſt which there were not above Three hundred Soldiers. The Articles on which the Town was Surrender'd were theſe. 1688. May.

First, That the Caſtle, and City with all the Ammunition, Cannon and Arms, with the Bells, Clocks, and all things of publick uſe, ſhall without Fraud, or Deſign be delivered up; and what Mines that are, either in the Caſtle or Town, ſhall be diſcovered, and made known.

Secondly, That permiſſion ſhall be given without let or hindrance, or moleſtation whatſoever to the Garriſon and Inhabitants freely to leave the City with their Arms, Horſes, Beaſts, Goods and Moveables.

Thirdly, That the Sons of Chriſtian Women, who are Slaves, and do not paſs the Age

of

1688. of Eighteen, ſhall remain in the Power, and under the Government of their Fathers, who were Turks. But thoſe who are of riper Years, and paſt that Age, ſhall be left to their own free Will, to chuſe which ſide, or party they will take. And as to thoſe who were Born Chriſtians, and are under Age, as well Males, as Females ſhall be delivered faithfully into the Hands of the Chriſtians; and in caſe amongſt the Turks, any Perſon ſhall be deſirous to turn Chriſtian, no Perſon ſhall dare to hinder, or pervert him.

Fourthly, That Three hundred Waggons ſhall be provided for carrying their Goods and Moveables, as far as Gian Curtaran upon the Danube; where Seventy Boats or more (in caſe Seventy be not ſufficient) ſhall be furniſhed for Tranſport of the People and their Goods to ſuch Places, as they ſhall deſire; and in the mean while whilſt the Waggons are providing, and the Garriſon is iſſuing forth, the principal Turks of the City ſhall remain for Hoſtages.

Fifthly, That ſome German and Hungarian Officers ſhall go with the Convoy, which Conducts the People to the Danube, where being Embarked, they ſhall Accompany and Protect them to the next Garriſoned Town of the Turks; and for ſecurity of the ſafe return of ſuch Officers, ſome principal Turks ſhall be given for Hoſtages, to remain at Oſeck until all Conditions are executed, and then afterwards they ſhall have free liberty to depart.

Sixthly, All Chriſtian Captives, as well young as old, ſhall be ſet at liberty.

1688. The Garriſon of Alba Regalis Marches out.

Thus Alba Regalis being Surrender'd on the 19*th* of May, as we have ſaid, Te Deum was Sung in the principal Moſchs, and on the 20*th* the Turks began to take their way towards Gian Curtaran; and a ſufficient Garriſon of Imperialiſts entered the City, to the number of Five hundred Germans, and about One thouſand Huſſars Horſe and Foot, under the Command of Colonel Areizaga, there to remain until farther Orders from the Emperor. Some few days afterwards Count Stephen Zicchy, Lieutenant General of Giavarin, who by Order of the Counſel of War had with a Guard of Five hundred Huſſars, Three hundred Muſquetiers of the Regiment of Wech, and Three hundred Horſe of the Circle of Suabia, convoyed the Turks to the place appointed, returned back to Alba Regalis, where he reported, the great Senſe the Turks had of the faithful obſervance, which was given to the Articles; concerning which they had made many Expreſſions of Satiſfaction; ſaying that it was no wonder, That the Chriſtians gather ſo many Laurels of Victory, ſince they knew ſo well with Sincerity, and Religion to obſerve, and comply with the Faith they had given: The which may more evidently appear by the Letter here following, Written to the Marquis of Baden. 1688.

Moſt Happy, moſt Honourable and Gentle Prince, Vizier of the Emperor of the Romans, Friend, and dear Brother, after theſe our ſincere Salutations ſhall be come to your Hands, Be it made known unto you, That in that happy Hour, when the Imperial Decree of your moſt Gracious, and Glorious Emperor, and our Lord, and alſo your obliging Letter filled with courteous Expreſſions, and Demonſtrations of Civility uſed towards our Meſſenger Ali Aga, and Ali Bei came to Hand, we were greatly comforted, to have found favour, by means of your interceſſion, in the Eyes of your Gracious Emperor, whom the High God reward, and recompenſe with his Divine Grace. For that in purſuance of the Sacred Command Signed by your Emperor, the Honourable General Bathyani, and his other Officers have carefully protected us, not only when we quitted the Town, but during all our March towards the Danube; ſo that by the regular Diſcipline and watchful Eye of the Germans, and Hungarians towards us, we are ſafely arrived at Gian Curtaran. And ſo much we have thought fit to acknowledge, and expoſe at the Feet of your Highneſs; that it may be made manifeſt to the World, with how much Sincerity and Faith, this Treaty hath been Executed. As to other Matters, we find the Boats and Veſſels all in a readineſs, ſo that we Deſign to Embark and depart early to Morrow Morning; for all which good and punctual performance, we beſeech God to ſucceed, and proſper you.

Dated the 23*d* of the Moon of Regeb 1099. That is, the 22*d* of May 1688.
Subſcribed by the Servants of God.

Achmet Vizier Commander in Chief,
Aga of the Janiſaries, Zagargee Paſha.

Beſides this Letter the ſame Perſons wrote another to Count Bathyani of the like Tenure; acknowledging the due Obſervance and Execution of the Treaty.

When the People, and Garriſon of this City, to the number of about Eight thouſand Souls, paſſed down the River by Towns belonging to the Turks, great was the Confuſion and Conſternation amongſt them, but more was the ſhame to the principal Officers, who had either by their Negligence or Cowardiſe, or ill Coduct, not relieved ſo important a City, but ſuffered it to be reduced to the utmoſt Extremities of Famine, without hopes of Succour: And at the ſame time, that the Fortreſſes of Sigeth and Caniſa, were in no better Condition, being reduced almoſt to the like

1688. like Extremity with Alba Regalis, which being well known to the Imperial Counſel of War, Orders were given to ſtreighten thoſe places by a more cloſe, and ſtrict Blocade.

1688. About this time to haſten the Preparations, and to draw out the Meaſures, and Scheme of War for the enſuing Campaign; the Duke of Loraine arrived at Vienna, where ſeveral Conferences and Counſels were held, by the great Captains and Generals, than which, never did any Age produce more Brave, Valiant and Wiſe of Conduct, than appeared in this preſent year. There are many things concur to form and complete a General of Renown; towards which nothing doth more contribute, than Fortune and Succeſs in War; of which the Imperialiſts had for ſome years had a happy Run, and plaid long with a lucky Hand. The Turks on the contrary had loſt the moſt part of their braveſt Officers, and Soldiers; and thoſe which had eſcaped out of the Battles, became a Sacrifice to the Rage, and Fury of Mutinous and Diſſolute Soldiers, who having thrown off the Bridle of all Diſcipline, turned their Swords from their Enemies upon their own Commanders and Generals; and this was not the leaſt Miſfortune of the Turks, that the moſt captived People, and ſuch as formerly ſerved with the moſt blind Obedience, had forgot to obey, or revere their Sultans. But now if we ſhould compare theſe obſcure Commanders of the Turks, Men ſtarted from nothing, unexperienced in War, Thieves and Robbers, ſuch as Tegben, and his Maſter Tedic, who for ſome Years had lived on Spoils in the leſſer Aſia, with the Redoubted, and Valiant Generals of the Imperial Armies, we may without the help of ancient Propheſies, Prognoſticate the continued Succeſſes of the Imperial Arms: The Names of which Generals are theſe, worthy to be Recorded for ever in Hiſtory.

Counſels of War at Vienna.

The Commanders on either ſide compared.

The Chriſtian Generals and Officers.

The Duke of Loraine.
The Elector of Bavaria.
Prince Lewis of Baden.
Count Caraffa.
Count de Staremberg, Marſhal of the Field to the Emperor.
The Prince of Salm, a Field Marſhal, to whom the Education of the young King of Hungary was committed.
Count de Rebata, Commiſſary General of the Emperor's Armies.
Count Dunewald, General of the Emperor's Horſe.
Count Palfi, another General of Horſe.
Count de Serau, General of the Bavarian Horſe.
Prince de Croy, General of the Artillery.
Gondola, Chief Lieutenant General of Horſe, and a very ancient Officer. 1688.
Count Taff, another Lieutenant General of Horſe.
Count Scheffenburg, a Lieutenant General of Foot.
The Prince of Neubourg, Great Maſter of the Teutonick Order.
The Prince of Savoy.
Veterani, a brave General, full of Courage.
Piccolimini the like.
The Prince of Lommercey, Rabutin, Negrelli and Eſterhaſi, Apremont and Wallis, all Major Generals, were Perſons of great Reputation and Bravery, Fit, and Proper to Lead, Conduct, and Command an Army.

To give all theſe Generals a Character agreeable to their Worth and Merit, would be too great a Taſk, and ſavour, ſomething of Flattery, which is diſagreeable to the Sincerity of an Hiſtorian. Howſoever, we may adventure to draw ſome few Lines, in deſcribing the Complexion of thoſe Heros, to whoſe Valour and Conduct Chriſtendom is ſo much obliged for it's Defence and Safety.

Character of the Duke of Loraine.

The Duke of Loraine was a Prince Naturally Valiant, and unconcerned in Dangers, expoſing himſelf without Oſtentation or Vanity, into Perils, where he judged, that his forwardneſs was requiſite to animate his Soldiers, and to give them an Example to imitate his Valour. And as his Temperament was uncapable of Fear, ſo amidſt the moſt hazardous Condition he was always ſetled and compoſed, and capable to give and receive Counſel; and willingly hearkned to the Advices of any, that pretended to have an inſight into Matters: Howſoever, thô he was not eſteemed to have a large Proſpect into Matters, or to draw a Scheme for a whole Campaign; yet in the Management of a Battle, or taking all the Advantages, no General in the World was ever more capable. Howſoever it was objected againſt him, That he was over looſe in his Marches, and acted with little Order therein; that he was not careful to ſtrengthen his Convoys, nor to ſecure his Forages, by which, and a thouſand other Overſights of this nature, we read in Hiſtory, that whole Armies have been confounded, and mouldred to nothing: There is no Man, without his Faults and Defects; or, as we ſay, without his blind ſide: Yet the World muſt avouch, that he was a great Captain, and a Perſon of moſt excellent Qualifications; for it is not little to his Honour that he was not Ambitious, or tranſported with vain Glory; but firm and 1688.

zealous for the Intereſt of the Emperor, tho he little regarded his own, by endeavouring to form and project ſtrong Leagues againſt France.

Character of the the Elector of Bavaria.

The Elector of Bavaria was another General of great Renown; than whom no perſon in the World was endued with more natural Valour; indefatigable in War, and would never be wearied or faint, thô he ſhould be conſtrained to fight every day. Skirmiſhes were his divertiſements; and thô he was a General, yet he could condeſcend to the degree of an inferior Officer, in giving Orders, where they were neceſſary. At this time he was Young, and conſequently had not as yet ſeen many Campaigns; but no Prince was ever more capable, and of greater hopes, which ſome Years afterwards were brought to all Perfection. He loved Battels; and to put the Troops of his Enemies to Flight, and to make himſelf Maſter of the Field, and to gain Victories, were his great pleaſures; but as to the Plunder of the Field, and the great Booties obtained therein, he left all to his Officers and Soldiers, never demanding any ſhare, or account of them. Howſoever he was eſteemed alſo to have his Defects; for it is ſaid, That he looked not with due attention to the care of his Troops; and that as he was very diligent and vigilant in the time of action; yet afterwards he indulged himſelf too much to his Pleaſures in the times of Vacation and Eaſe from his Labours; and it may be ſaid of him as was of a Roman General, That he was Patiens Laboris, indefeſſus in bello, ſed ubi vacuerit, nimiæ voluptatis.

Character of Prince Lewis of Baden.

Prince Lewis of Baden was a true Man of War, cut out for a Soldier from his Infancy; in which Trade being Educated, he ſoon arrived to a ſingular Perfection, being naturally addicted to Arms. He was full of Courage, Heat, and Bravery; Active, Vigilant, and a Man of Order in diſpoſing of his Troops; always on Horſe-back, and capable of doing great Actions; as we ſhall ſee verified Two or Three Years afterwards: Howſoever he was not without ſome allays, by a too obſtinate adherence to his own Opinion, and Councils; which if at any time he was forced to retract or change, ſo as to follow the Advices and Counſels of others, yet he would do it with an ill Grace and Will, and not without ſome mixture of his own contrivance. He was more fit for an Army than a Court; giving his Tongue too much liberty to Speak and Diſcourſe freely of the Faults and Defects of the chief Miniſters of State; which begot him ſome Enemies, but his Greatneſs of Mind, and Succeſs in War, carried him above all.

1688.

Count Caraffa.

Count Caraffa was advanced by the favour of Count Montecuculi his Uncle; to which his own Merits contributed very much; for being a Soldier of Fortune, he reſolved to riſe by that way; and being endued with a natural Courage, he ſignalized himſelf on ſeveral occaſions. His Enterprizes were always performed with great moderation, and Phlegm, watching his opportunities of advantage upon the Enemy, and ſeldom inclined to hazard any thing; his Counſels were full of prudent Caution, which made his Performances ſuſpected by the Enemy, fearing ſome Turn which they did not foreſee. He was alſo a Courtier as well as a Soldier, and knew how to comport himſelf towards the chief Miniſters of State in the Court; as he did alſo to the Generals, and Officers, and Soldiers in the Camp.

Count Starem-berg.

Count Staremberg, one of the Emperor's Field-Marſhals, a Perſon Renowned through the World for the defence of Vienna, was a perſon of admirable Courage and much Fire in his Temper, and endued with all Qualities fit for a Soldier, thô not ſo proper for a General, being naturally violent and tranſported with Paſſion. He is, as we find him, more celebrated amongſt Foreigners and Strangers for defending Vienna, than amongſt the Germans, who ſerved in the Garriſon with him, alledging that he expoſed his Soldiers too frequently to unneceſſary Sallies, and was too prodigal of ſpilling their Blood.

The Prince of Salm.

The Prince of Salm was another Field-Marſhal, to whom the Education of the Young King of Hungary was committed. It is ſaid, That he hath ſerved long, and gained great Experience in the War: But his Valour, Wiſdom, and Nobility, have endued him with ſuch Vertues, as ſerve not only to render him eſteemed and honoured for himſelf, but capable alſo to inſpire Learning, and Royal Thoughts into the Mind of that Young King.

Count Rabata.

Count Rabata, another Field-Marſhal, and Commiſſary-General of the Imperial Army, was eſteemed more capable of the latter, than of the firſt Office. For as to the providing for the ſubſiſtence of an Army, no man was ever reputed more intelligent and induſtrious, being endued with an admirable Faculty to draw out a Scheme for Winter-Quarters, and the manner how to regulate Troops with ſuch Diſcipline, as might tend to the Conſervation of the Proviſions of a Country, which Soldiers are apt to conſume unneceſſarily; eſpecially the German Armies, which love Plenty and Exceſs; and do commonly, (if not prevented by good Management) ruin thoſe Countries in Two Months, which 1688. might otherwiſe conveniently maintain an Army for the whole Year.

Dunewald. Count Dunewald, General of the Imperial Cavalry, was eſteemed very capable of that Charge; and with all the Reaſon and Juſtice in the World, may be numbred amongſt the beſt of thoſe Officers, who are eſteemed, to be Couragious, Wiſe, and Experienced in War.

Count Palfi. Count Palfi, General of the Hungarian Horſe, was a man of great Underſtanding; but becauſe he hath not ſerved in any other Wars, than thoſe of Hungary, he is not much eſteemed for a Soldier; howſoever being deſcended from one of the moſt Ancient and Noble Families in Hungary, the Court of Vienna judged it policy, to give in his Perſon an Example and Proof of the Emperor's Favour and good Will towards the Hungarian Nobility: By reaſon of which he made a ſpeedier advance into Preferments in the War, than could reaſonably be expected from his Services, and Actions.

Count Serien. Count de Serien, General of the Bavarian Troops, beſides his other Qualities, hath but too much of Wit and good Management, by which he ſeldom fails of arriving at the end of his deſigns, having by his Conduct and good Fortune, got into the Command of the Bavarian Troops: And ſo inſinuated himſelf into the Court of Vienna, that they ſeem to ſay, that they are obliged to him, for the ſtrict Alliance which the Elector hath made with the Houſe of Auſtria. In ſhort, he was eſteemed for a Perſon of admirable dexterity in avoiding invidious matters, without being either ſuſpected or perceived.

P. of Croy. The Prince of Croy, General of the Artillery, was a perſon of undoubted Valour.

Gondola. Gondola, firſt Lieutenant-General of the Horſe, was a very Ancient Officer; much beloved by his own Soldiers; in ſhort he is a man without Vice, Vivacity of Spirit, or Ambition, being of a Converſation eaſy, and inoffenſive to all the World.

Count Taff. Count Taff, a Lieutenant-General of the Horſe, was a very Gallant man, having in all occaſions of danger acquitted himſelf with great Courage; and yet he is not ſo much to be commended for his Military performances, as for the Character he hath acquired of a juſt, civil, and an honeſt Gentleman. He was of great Underſtanding, pleaſant Converſation, good Literature, and well ſtudied, accompliſhed in all his Exerciſes, doing every thing with a good Grace. In fine, he would be ſupereminent in every thing, did he not prefer thoſe Qualities which rendered him uſeful before thoſe which made him acceptable. I had once the honour to ſee him at Vienna, and have ſome acquaintance with him in the Year 1666.

Count Souches, chief Lieutenant-General of the Infantry, was greatly advanced by thoſe Employments which his Father had bequeathed to him. 1688. Souches.

Count Schaffenberg, Lieutenant-General of the Foot, was a perſon of great Courage, but ſomething tenacious. Schaffenberg.

The Prince of Neuburg, Great Maſter of the Teutonick Order, was a very good Man, but heavy and unactive; bold in danger, but without much Application to buſineſs. Neuburg.

The Prince of Savoy, a Gentleman of great Courage, of more ſolid Judgment, than quickneſs of Fancy. He was a Man of good Learning, and in his ſtudies had applied his mind to that part of the Mathematicks, which treats of Fortifications; by which, and by practice in War, there was great hope, that with time, he would arrive at thoſe eminent degrees of Honour and Preferment, of which the greatneſs of his Birth, and his own Virtues made him capable. P. of Savoy.

Veterani was as Brave and Valiant as any, having ſignalized himſelf in the laſt War by an extraordinary Action, worthy for ever to be remembred. He was an Italian by Birth, but ſo plain and unaffected in his Speech and Behaviour, that he ſeemed to have contracted nothing of the Air of that Nation, but the Name only. Veterani.

Heuſler was a Soldier of Fortune, as ſtout and brave as Hercules himſelf; no man more Valiant, and none more Active and Vigilant, and by his Merits only arrived to the higheſt Commands in the Army; his Comportment, Motions, and way of Speaking ſavoured of a man of Quality. Heuſler.

Piccolomini, was not only endued with Courage, which is the firſt Principle of a Soldier; but was a Maſter in the Trade of War: Tho' he hath been maliciouſly traduced, as wanting both; but his own Actions, Conduct, and Succeſs in many Battels, have evinced the contrary. Piccolomini.

To theſe we might add the Prince of Lommercy, Rabbatin, Nigrelli, Eſterhaſi, Apremont, and Wallis, all Major-Generals of Renown, and Famous Reputation, beſides many other Field-Commanders, Captains and ſubaltern Officers; ſo that, as we have ſaid, no Age could ever boaſt of more brave and undaunted Spirits. On the contrary, the Turks had in ſeveral Battels, unfortunate to themſelves, loſt the beſt of their brave Soldiers, Paſhas, and Timariots, and what remained were cut off by the Chiurbas, and the rebellious Soldiers, (as fore-related;) ſo that now there ſcarce ſurvived one perſon fit, and of ſufficient Experience to conduct an Army, as will appear in the ſequel of this preſent Year.

1688.

Reſult of the Counſels of War at Vienna.

But to return now to the Councils of War held at Vienna for haſtening the Campaigne, and forwarding the Troops, and drawing a Scheme for managing the War of this Year; many and various were the Opinions. At length ſtrict Orders were given to Mareſchal Caprara, immediately to go to Oſeck; and there conſult with Count Apremont, Governor of that place, on ſuch methods, as might beſt contribute to the Service of his Imperial Majeſty, both as to the Enlargement of the Conqueſts, and Subſiſtence of the Soldiery: In order unto which, great Numbers of Boats were laden with all ſorts of Proviſion and Ammunition, and diſpeeded down the Rivers of Danube, Vagus, Tibiſcus, and Drave, for undertaking ſome conſiderable Enterprize.

Orders were alſo diſpatched from the Council of War to General Caraffa in Tranſilvania; That having committed the command of the Upper-Hungaria to Nigrelli, and of Tranſilvania to General Veterani; and having alſo ſatisfied the Quarters of his own Militia, he ſhould forthwith march along the Banks of the Danube, but with ſuch Caution and Vigilance, as might ſecure him and his Forces from the Surprizals of Tekely; who ſince the ſurrender of Agria and Mongatz, had made frequent incurſions from Temeſwar, as far as Lippa, Julia, and ſometimes from Jeno to Waradin.

It being judged almoſt impoſſible to conſerve Peter Waradin, by reaſon of the nearneſs thereunto of Illock, where the Enemy maintained a numerous Garriſon, it was reſolved to draw forth the Troops and Proviſions from thence. Howſoever Caprara being deſirous firſt to take a view of Illock, he conveyed himſelf privately before the place with ſome Horſe of the Regiment of Palfi, and about Two hundred Dragoons on Foot, and ſeized on a Moſch before the Gate; but being diſcovered by the Turks, they Fired ſuch a Volly of Shot upon him, that ſeveral of his Dragoons were killed, and he received Two Muſquet-ſhots through the Folds of his looſe Coat, with which he retired without other hurt or loſs.

1688.

But of more concernment it was to General Caprara to defeat the Camp of the Turks, which they were forming in the open Plains of Salankement; to which end he prepared Boats and Barges, and Bridges to Tranſport over the Drave the Forces which were on their march from the Upper-Hungary. But the Waters by exceſſive Rains, had ſo ſwollen the Rivers beyond the Banks of their right Channel, that both Horſe and Foot were conſtrained to make a ſtop at Darda, to which place the General paſſed over in a Boat, and there remained until the Waters were fallen; as did alſo ſome Bavarian Troops deſigned to repaſs the Danube near Buda, on their march to Erdeodi; where having raiſed a Bridge over the Danube, and Six more over the Moors and Fenns, they joyned with other Forces, and marched in a Body towards Illock.

1688.

1688.

The Duke of Loraine Sick.

In the mean time, whilſt the Imperial Court was enjoying the pleaſures of the Country at Luxemburg, the Duke of Loraine falling ſick, put the Court into ſome diſcompoſure; for that the Seaſon of the Year being now ripe for Action, the want of the General's preſence, would be a neceſſary retardment to the Proceedings of the Campaigne; howſoever that was happily ſupplied by the coming of P. Lewis of Baden, who every day entred into conſultation with the D. of Loraine, in what manner they might beſt carry on the War on the other ſide of the Save; which being agreed, P. Lewis proceeded to the Camp, where, with Mareſchal Caprara, the Imperial Forces were for that time commanded, and with them it was concluded to paſs the Save.

The City of Stephanopolis refuſes to receive a German Garriſon.

But now ſome of the Tranſilvanians being allured by Succours, and great Aſſiſtance promiſed them by the Tartars, to renounce their ſworn Allegiance to the Emperor; the City of Stephanopolis refuſed to receive a German Garriſon, which Deſign was chiefly carried on at the perſuaſion of the Valachians, who conſidering that by the Submiſſion of Tranſilvania, their Province lay open to the Germans, and through that an eaſie paſſage into Tartary; they both joyned to perſuade the People of Stephanopolis, to refuſe to take in a Garriſon of Germans. But General Veterani immediately marched to the City with the Regiments of Pace, Taff and Stirum, and by ſurprize Attacked the Suburbs in three places, and being come within Piſtol-ſhot of the Walls, the Dragoons diſmounting from their Horſes, and raiſing ſome Barricadoes to cover them from the Enemies Cannon, they began to throw Bombs into the Caſtle, by which, and by help of the Regiments of Baden and Schaffemberg, who brought with them two Pieces of great Cannon, and four of ſmall, they batter'd the Town, to the Terrour and Conſternation of the Inhabitants; ſo that with common conſent they cried out for Quarter; which was granted to them by General Caraffa, at Diſcretion; and the City yielded, as alſo the Caſtle, into which five Companies of the Regiment of Baden were admitted. In the mean time General Caraffa with like diligence, Marched with a Body of an Army to Lippa; and having Summoned the City, he was anſwer'd by their great and Small-ſhot from the Walls: Upon which the General without any delay raiſed,

The City Surrendered.

Lippa attacked.

Lippa yielded.

1688. raiſed two Batteries, by which beating down part of the Wall, he made an Attack on the Breach; from whence, thô he was repulſed at the firſt time by the Bravery of the Defendants; yet renewing the Aſſault again with grater Force and Reſolution, they enter'd the Town by Storm, with the Death of Five hundred Turks; the reſt giving Fire to their Houſes and Magazines retired into the Caſtle, which they maintained a while with good Reſolution. But Caraffa raiſing two new Batteries, fired inceſſantly from them, and threw Bombs into it with ſuch good effect, that the Defendants terrified therewith, diſplayed a white Flag, and ſubmitted unto Terms of being made Priſoners, to the number of Six thouſand Perſons, Two thouſand of which being Men capable to bear Arms were made Slaves; but the Women and Children were freed, and with a Convoy 1688. were ſent in ſafety to Temeſwar: The Surrender of Lippa was of great conſequence to the Germans, having thereby opened all the Country between the River Maros, and the Tibiſcus.

Lagos yielded.

This Succeſs was ſoon followed by the Surrender of Lagos, a Caſtle four Leagues diſtant from Lippa, which after a ſmall reſiſtance yielded to Colonel Pace on Articles, according to which about Two hundred Soldiers, with One hundred and Eighty Raſcians and Valachians marched out, together with the Inhabitants of the lower City, and about Six hundred Women and Children. Within was only one Mortar-piece, and eight Pieces of Cannon; but no Victuals or Ammunition. The like Fortune had ſucceeded at the great Caſtle of Caranzebes, had not the Attacks been diſappointed by an exceſſive Rain of four or five days; which forced Colonel Pace to return back to General Caraſa, who remained ſtill in expectation of his coming to Lippa.

The Elector of Bavaria made General.

The Indiſpoſition of the Duke of Loraine increaſing, and little hopes of his Recovery to ſuch a ſtate of Health, as was requiſite to Conduct an Army during the preſent Campaign; the Elector Maximilian 1688. Emanuel Duke of Bavaria, was the only perſon looked upon fit for the high Command of General of the Imperial Forces: For he was a Prince thô young in Years, yet for his time, of that vaſt experience, and of that Diſpoſition and Courage, naturally inclined to War, that he ſeemed not to come behind any of thoſe renowned Generals, famed for Heroick Actions in paſt Ages; wherefore being elected by the conſent of all the General Officers, for Commander in Chief of the whole Army, the Count Kaunitz was diſpatched with the Imperial Letters to the Elector at Monaco, inviting him to accept of this important Charge. 1688. But becauſe the Seaſon of the year was far advanced, and that no time was to be loſt, Prince Lewis of Baden was diſpatched to the Army to joyn with Marſhal Caprara, both for Conſervation of the new Conqueſts, and to diſpoſe Matters in order to farther Victories.

Nor were the Turks only vexed with the ill Succeſſes of War, but were alſo afflicted with Earthquakes, Mutinies, Conſpiracies, amongſt their Soldiers, with Robberies and Diſordes over all Aſia.

An Earthquake at Smyrna.

On the 30*th* of June, about half an hour 1688. before Twelve a Clock at Noon, which is the common time of Dinner, hapned a moſt dreadful Earthquake at Smyrna, which in a few Moments over-threw almoſt all the Houſes in the City, with the Death (as is computed) of Five thouſand of the Inhabitants, many of which were drawn out half Dead from the Ruins. This terrible Judgment, by the good Providence of God hapning to be on a Saturday, (which commonly the Conſul, and Factors of the Engliſh Nation make a Day of divertiſement without any buſineſs) moſt of them were abroad, either in the Country, or on board ſome Ships in the Port, from whence they eaſily heard the lamentable Noiſe, and Cries of the falling City, not now to be ſeen, or diſcerned through the vaſt and thick Duſt which cover'd all the Ruins; thoſe who were in the Ships were ſenſible of the Shake; for the Seas lifted up the Ships, the Guns leaped in the Carriages, and the Seamen on the Deck were as unſteddy on their Feet, as in a Storm at Sea. Some who were on the Shoar, felt the Earth trembling under them, Stagger'd, and were thrown to the Ground. In the Houſes of our Merchants, three only of the Engliſh Nation periſhed, namely, Mr. Samuel Bernardiſton, Mr. Henry Stephens and Mr. Richard Pierce, all killed by the falling of a main Beam, as they were ſitting at Dinner: Several others which remained at Home, are ſtill alive to recount their wonderful Eſcape, whilſt the Tops, Tiles and Rafters of the Houſes fell round about them without any Wound, or touch on their Bodies. But had it ſo pleaſed God, that this Earthquake ſhould have hapned on any other Day in the Week beſides Saturday; it is more than probable, that many more of the Engliſh Factory would have periſhed in the Ruins. Of the Jews Four hundred were killed, and amongſt them one of their moſt famous Rabbis of the Eaſt, called Aron Ibben Haim. The Metropolite of Smyrna with many of his Papaſſes, who went into their Church to Pray, were killed by the fall of the Roof. The like Fate befel

the 1688.

A Fire breaks out.

the Patriarch of Alexandria, who with his People was overwhelm'd with the Ruins. Of the French Nation the Conſul only was killed; and of the Dutch only one Merchant. About three or four Hours after this diſmal Shake, an Irruption of Fire appeared in the Frank Street, (which is a Row of Houſes along the Sea ſide, inhabited by the Frank Nations) for ſo the Turks call all the Weſtern People: This Fire perhaps might at firſt have been extinguiſhed, but that ſmaller Shakes hapning now and then after the greater Earthquake, ſo terrified the People by the falling of Walls and Tops of Houſes, that none daring to come near, ſuffer'd the Fire to prevail; which conſumed much of the Merchants Cloth, melted their Tin, Lead and Money; and burnt up their Papers and Books of Account: So that it cannot be ſaid, whether the Earthquake, or the the Fire did the greateſt Damage and Devaſtation: But this is certain, that the Engliſh Merchants were very conſiderable ſufferers, ſome having computed the loſs to a Hundred thouſand pounds Sterling. It is a great Queſtion from whence this Fire ſhould proceed, ſome will have it from the Fires in the Kitchins, which were kindled about that time of the Day, for the uſe and purpoſe of dreſſing Meat and other Services; but that ſeems unlikely; for the Kitchin Fires at that time of the Year and of the Day, being not great, might have been more eaſily extinguiſhed, and ſmothered by the fall of ſo much Brick and Rubbiſh, rather than kindled by the Beams and Rafters; wherefore I believe, that this Incendiation did proceed from an Irruption of Subterranean Fires, which are the cauſe of Earthquakes: Thus was it, when the Mount Veſuvius was blown up, and ſo it was, and is when Mongibello Vomits out it's Flames, making all the Countries tremble round the Iſland of Sicily; and ſo it was in the Year 1666, when Raguſi was deſtroyed with an Earthquake, the Subterranean Fires deſtroying whatſoever remained under the Ruins: And ſo it was at Lima in the Weſt-Indies, where after the Earthquake a Fire broke forth, which conſumed that City in the ſame manner, as afterwards it did at Smyrna.

1688.

Seditions in the Army.

A Conſpiracy againſt the Vizier plotted and diſcovered.

In the Army were great Diſcontents, as it always happens in times of Misfortune. Teghen (as we have ſaid) had forced himſelf upon the Vizier tobe made Seraskier or General; whilſt many better Men than he, were laid aſide: The Force being ſo inconſiderable on the Frontiers, it was judged beneath the Dignity of a Vizier, to appear at the Head of ſo weak an Army; wherefore remaining that year at Conſtantinople, where ſeveral of the diſcontented Giurbas had concealed them; a Conſpiracy was by them formed againſt the Grand Vizier and the Government, which had in a few hours taken effect, had it not been diſcovered by ſome of their falſe Brethren; to prepare which, ſeveral Libels were thrown about in the Moſques, condemning the removal of the Grand Seignior, and his Court to Adrianople, to the great Ruin and Detriment of the ancient Seat of the Sultans at Conſtantinople, and prejudicial to the Empire by ſuch an unneceſſary expence: Theſe Libels were ſeconded by an Arz, or Memorial from the Soldiers to the Vizier himſelf, importing, that they would not ſuffer the Sultan to remove from Conſtantinople; but in caſe the Vizier would go in Perſon to the Wars, and firſt pay them their Arrears, they would accompany him, when the Seaſon was fit for ſo long a March; but to go and Winter at Adrianople, would diſcommode them and their Families, and prove of no benefit to the grand Deſign of War againſt the Common Enemy the Chriſtians. This bold Memorial gave Encouragement to the Inferiour Janiſaries to commit daily Inſolences in the Streets; which being connived at by their Officers concerned in the Conſpiracy, which was to have been executed on the 23*d* day of July, gave Fears and Jealouſies to the Government, that the ſame Tragedy was acting over again, as had been in the time of the late Giurbas. For the Plot was laid, that the Gebegees, ſhould in a Tumultuous manner go to the Vizier's Houſe to demand their Arrears of Pay; then were the Janiſaries upon the Noiſe hereof to joyn with them, and Aſſault the Vizier, and take the Government into their own Hands, as had lately been practiſed by the Giurbas. But on the Vigil before the Execution, the whole Plot was diſcovered, and thoſe who were to be the principal Actors therein were made known to the Vizier: Who immediately thereupon Summoned ſuch Guards, as he could confide in; and with Five hundred Men went about the City all that Night, and ſeized all the Conſpirators in their Houſes. The next day, the Janiſar-Aga was diſplaced, and made Paſha of Van, a City on the Borders of Perſia, and one Mahomet Aga (the Segme Baſhee, Colonel of a ſort of Militia ſo called) was advanced to his Office; he was a Man of above Eighty years of Age, very lame by reaſon of a Wound he had received at the Siege of Candia by a Cannon Bullet, which ſhot off one of his Buttocks; But yet he was Vigorous, and of a ſevere Temper, fit to keep ſuch Mutiniers in Diſcipline and Subjection: The Kiahbei, or Lieutenant

The Methods of the Plot.

1688.

1688. nant General of the Janiſaries was alſo Caſhiered, and thô they both pleaded Innocence and Ignorance; yet the want of knowledge to diſcover ſuch a Contrivance hatching amongſt their Soldiers, was Crime ſufficient to eaſe them of their Commands.

How prevented.

For two Nights following, three Parties of armed Men took their Rounds about the City: The firſt led by the Vizier, The ſecond by the new Janiſar-Aga, and the third by the new Kia-bei; theſe meeting together in the Morning, and conferring Notes, found that they had cut off about Fifty Perſons, moſt of them Janiſaries: And ſeveral Nights afterwards ſome Executions were done, and all acted with ſuch Secrecy, and Silence in the dead of the Night, that no Noiſe or Diſturbance followed thereupon; for there was no Man of great Vogue or Repute put to Death, the higheſt being only in degree a Chiurbagee or Captain; all which were put into Sacks and thrown into the Sea, according to the puniſhment by ancient Conſtitution to be inflicted on Janiſaries. Amongſt thoſe, who were put to Death was one Hamedi Effendi, who was at firſt appointed with others to carry the Grand Seignior's Letter for Peace to the Emperor: Several others being too free in their Tongues againſt the 1688. Vizier, openly ſaying that he was decayed in his Parts, and not capable to mannage ſo great an Employment, uttering other things ſavouring of a high Contempt of his Perſon, were put to Death: And amidſt theſe Executions, the Head of Dogangee Shuban, Paſha of Nicopolis, on the Danube, was brought to Town; he had been one of the Giurbas, and Kiab to Siaus Paſha, and once named by him to have been left Chimacam, when the Vizier was at the War: This Report, with the Fame of being deſigned by the Conſpirators to be ſet up for Vizier, was fatal to him, and procured the Hand-writing or Sentence for his Death. Tegben Bei was alſo ſuſpected to have had a Hand in promoting, and projecting the Conſpiracy; but he was too great, as yet to be reached by the waining Power of the Vizier: This Suſpicion had ſome Foundation from the Counſels, which Tegben had formerly given, concerning the removal of the Grand Seignior to Adrianople, which as he ſaid could not be done without Hurt, and Damage to the Empire; declaring in like manner by a ſecond Letter, that in caſe they ſhould, contrary to his Mind and Opinion, remove the Grand Seignior, he would in the Autumn come perſonally to Adrianople to demand their Reaſons for the ſame. Howſoever this Vizier was willing to overlook all the extravagant, and inſolent Speeches of Tegben Bei, out of Gratitude, as was ſaid, of ſparing his Life; when after the loſs of the late Battle, (he then being Janiſar-Aga) the Soldiers would have cut him to pieces, had not the Authority and Intereſt of Tegben with the Militia, ſpared and ſecured his Life: In Conſideration, and Remembrance of which, he was no ſooner created Vizier, than he diſcharged the Nefran, or Trained Bands of the Country, which the late Iſhmael Paſha had raiſed to ſuppreſs Tegben, then lying with his Forces near to Sophia.

Yeghen ſuſpected to have been in the Conſpiracy.

1688.

The Viziers reſpect to Yeghen.

Howſoever, this Conſpiracy againſt the Vizier would ſcarce have paſſed over ſo eaſily, had not a lucky hit of Two thouſand and ſix hundred Purſes (being the Eſtate of two rich Kuzlir-Agas cut off, and brought from Grand Cairo in Egypt) been ſeaſonably brought to the Exchequer, which ſerved a little to pacifie the Soldiery, which was now nine Months in Arrear. The Vizier alſo not thinking himſelf ſecure from the Plots and Conſpiracies which might ſtill be framed againſt him, removed Iſhmael the late Vizier from Cavalla, a place near Salonica, where he had been Impriſoned, to the Caſtle at Rhodes, the famous place for diſgraced and baniſhed Officers: He removed alſo ſeveral from their places of Truſt, putting Creatures of his into their Offices; and amongſt the reſt he made four new Viziers of the Bench; one of which was Hali Aga, Haſnadar or Treaſurer to the Vizier Kupri-oglee, called from Trapezond, where he was Paſha; another was Omer Paſha, Tefterdar or Treaſurer, who laſt year in the beginning of the Troubles was Segmen Baſhee, or General of that Militia, and had been pulled off from his Horſe by the Giurbas in the Streets, and turned out of Office; a third was the Niſangi Baſhee, a young Man taken out of the Seraglio, where he was a Page: And a fourth was one of the Vizier's ancient Servants.

Money came from Grand Cairo.

Four new Viziers of the Bench made.

But notwithſtanding the diſlike which the Soldiers ſhewed to the Grand Seignior's removal to Adrianople, the Vizier and his Counſellours reſolved to purſue their Deſign; eſteeming it a place more ſecure and ſafe for the Government (according to the Maxim of old Kuperlee) where the Milita could be more under their Eye; and Plots not ſo eaſily contrived as at Conſtantinople, where the numbers and Riches of the People were capable at all times to move Diſturbances. So in the Month of July, the 1688. Sultan removed to Adrianople, with his depoſed Brother, his Son, and the other Brother Sultan Achmet, with the Valide Sultana or Queen Mother.

The Court being come to Adrianople, at the firſt Conſult a Peace was propoſed, and Ambaſſadors named to go to Vienna, viz.

Zulficar

1688.

Zulficar Aga, and Mavrocordato, who was a Chriſtian, and Interpreter to the Vizier; the Diſpatch of theſe Ambaſſadors was the more earneſtly haſtned, by reaſon of the News then come to the Court, that the Germans were on their March to Inveſt Belgrade. Tegben Paſha was then at Niſſa, where the Differences between him, and Haſſan Paſha grew to that Heat, that their Parties falling to Blows, Two hundred were killed in the Fray; which Haſſan, being the Wiſer, and more temperate Commander, interpreted for a bad Omen of Succeſs in the following Campaign. The Court took little Notice of all this Matter; but ſtill continued to encourage Tegben with Promiſes of Additional Forces, and new Supplies, ordering him to oppoſe all the Deſigns, and Attempts of the Chriſtians to the utmoſt of his Power; giving him alſo a Commiſſion to enter into a Treaty of Peace with the Chriſtian General, in caſe any Overture ſhould fairly offer its ſelf. But Tegben not having with theſe Commands received the Prophet's Standard, nor the Imperial Seal, which are the Badges and proper Signals of the Office of Grand Vizier, became Angry and Sullen; for tho' he was made General, yet that ſeemed not ſufficient without the Title of Supreme Governor: And whereas before, he was on his March towards Belgrade, he returned back again to Sophia, declaring that without thoſe powerful Inſtruments, it was impoſſible for him to Govern the Army, and Rule them with ſuch ſtrict Obedience, as was neceſſary againſt ſo powerful an Enemy, and ſo formidable as the Chriſtians: And as to the Overtures of Peace he was reſolved to make none, nor ſuffer the Ambaſſadors to paſs until ſuch time, as he had tried the Fortune of the Ottoman Sword once more in the Field. To this pitch of Inſolence was this Tegben ariſen, that he was ready to Sacrifice the whole concernment of the Empire to his own Pride and Vanity: But Expreſs after Expreſs coming from Belgrade with News, that the Germans were Marching towards the Save, with a Reſolution to paſs that River, ſo ſoon, as the Elector of Bavaria ſhould Arrive in the Camp, Tegben began to grow a little aſhamed; and fearing that all the Misfortunes impending over Belgrade, would be attributed to his ill Government and Sedition, he Marched away from Sophia, and being come to Belgrade, he made publick Declaration, that the Sultan had created him General of all Hungary, upon which the Forces Encamped in the Parts adjacent to the City ſubmitted to his Command; and being now inveſted with the ſole Power, he vented his Spleen againſt his old Competitor, Haſſan Paſha, with whom formerly (as we have ſaid) he had a Quarrel in Boſnia, and having now an opportunity to ſhew his farther Reſentments, he ſeized on his Tents, Horſes and Money, and would have ſtrangled him, had he not been prevented by the Aga of the Janiſaries, and the Son of the Han of Tartary, who was there preſent with a ſmall Body of Tartars.

Yegben in Mutiny.

He returns to Belgrade.

1688.

Seizes on Haſſan Paſha.

But the Turks had now ſomething more to do, than to quarrel amongſt themſelves; for the Chriſtians came pouring upon them on all ſides; and how to reſiſt them was the preſent Incumbence, and grand Concernment; ſo that laying aſide all Inteſtine differences, Tegben with Ten thouſand Soldiers, joyned to the Troops of Tekeli, reſolved to paſs the Save, and Encamp near Semblin on the other ſide of the River. But that deſign was laid aſide, ſo ſoon as News was brought to Belgrade that P. Lewis of Baden was Decamped from Valkovar, and that, together with Caprara, he had taken his march towards Illock; with which, Tegben and the Turks fainting in their Courage, were inclined rather to Propoſals of Peace, than to a continuance of the War; and to try whether any reaſonable offers of that nature would be accepted. Two ordinary Peaſants were diſpatched to Oſeck, with Letters to Marqueſs Herman of Baden, and Marſhal Caprara, deſiring them to intercede with his Imperial Majeſty to put an end to this bloody War, which had already coſt the lives of many innocent People, and laid waſte and deſolate vaſt and large Countries, and Provinces: But ſuch a Meſſage as this being brought by Peaſants, who are improper Inſtruments to be employed in ſo eminent an Action, gave juſt cauſe to the Generals to take and eſteem them for no other than Spyes: Upon which ſuſpicion they were impriſoned, and Advice ſent thereof to the Imperial Court; which not judging fit to take notice of any Offers of Peace propoſed in ſuch Form, gave new Orders and Inſtructions to Caprara to purſue with all vigour imaginable the Rules chalked out, and deſigned for carrying on the Work of this Campaigne.

1688.

The Turks ſeek for Peace.

Their Meſſengers are ſuſpected.

In the mean time the Troops of Bavaria arrived in the Camp under the Command of General Serini, an experienced Captain, and therewith the main Army being reinforced, Caprara took his march towards Illock, of which ſo ſoon as the Turks had received intelligence, they were put into ſuch conſternation, that they abandoned the place; and having packed up what Moveables the ſhortneſs of time would permit, they ſet Fire to the City, and retired in a precipitate and diſorderly Flight. The Smoke being deſcryed at a diſtance, Ca-

Illock abandoned by the Turks.

prara

1688.

1688. prara detached a Body of Germans, and Hungarians, to advance towards the Town, to obſerve the face of the Enemy, and the occaſion of that Smoke; and being come near to the Gates, and perceiving that the Soldiers and Inhabitants had deſerted the City; the Germans were employed to extinguiſh the Fire, and the Hungarians to purſue the flying Enemy; which they performed ſo effectually, that they ſeized a great part of the Goods which were then carrying away, and brought them to the Camp. The News hereof ſo affrighted the Garriſon of Peter-Waradin, that with like Terror and Precipitation they abandoned their City, and fled to Belgrade.

Theſe Succeſſes gave great encouragement to the whole Army, and to the Imperial Court at Vienna, where the Duke of Mantona about this time arrived, with intention to paſs forward to the Camp, and ſignalize himſelf and his Followers in a War againſt the common Enemy; his Equipage was very ſplendid, and agreeable to the Spirit of ſo generous a Prince.

1688. July. In like manner the Elector of Bavaria, Maximilian Emanuel the Third arrived at Vienna, being called by the Emperor to command the Army in Hungary in the place of the Duke of Loraine, who was become ſo weak by his Indiſpoſition and want of Health, that he judged himſelf unable to command the Army with ſuch vigour, as was required in ſo active a War. The Elector was ſo intent upon this Expedition, that the very day he arrived at Vienna with his moſt Serene Conſort, he had departed, and proceeded to the Camp, had he not been forcibly detained by the obliging invitation of the Emperor, and perſuaded to ſtay until the Evening of the following day.

The E. of Bavaria at Vienna, and haſtens to the Camp.

In the mean time a deſign was formed to block up Great Waradin; but the Garriſon being ſtrong within, the Turks made frequent Excurſions with Two hundred Horſe, and a Thouſand Janiſaries at a time, and frequently brought Proviſions into the Town, the which was ſo managed by the Paſha and other Commanders, that the Caſtle held out until the Year 1692. Howſoever the Blocade of Sigeth and Caniſia was greatly ſtraitned; the firſt by General Gabriel, Count of Vecchia, and the other by Bathyani, and Ziccby, Lieutenant-Governor of Giavarin, or Rabb; who appearing before Caniſia in order of Battel, the Turks diſplayed their Colours of defiance, ſhewing a couragious reſolution to defend themſelves and their Fortreſs. Howſoever the Huſſars and Heydúcks came under command of the Cannon, and in deſpite of their ſhot, ſet Fire to the Corn and Fruits growing near the City. At which the Turks cryed out with lamentable Voice, ſaying, Set the fear of God before your Eyes, and do not commit theſe grievous ſins, for which we have been puniſhed by God; for the time was, when we did the like outrages, and diſorders, deſtroying without cauſe the Chriſtian Churches, for which we have worthily deſerved the Divine Vengeance, and are now juſtly puniſhed for theſe Offences. In this Fear and Amazement were the Turks, finding themſelves blocked up, and environed round, having Five thouſand Women and Children within, without hopes of being ever relieved, or ſuccoured; ſo that their Courage began to fail, and Thoughts ariſe amongſt them, how they might yield up their City on the moſt advantageous Terms.

Sigeth and Kaniſia ſtraitned.

1688.

In the mean time, P. Lewis of Baden continued his march with all expedition towards Poſſega; where meeting the Count of Hoffkirchen, they conſulted together in what manner they might beſt offend the Enemy on the other ſide of the Save; but becauſe the Turks kept the Banks of the River well guarded, the Paſſage over ſeemed very difficult, eſpecially wanting Boats to Tranſport their men: At length, whilſt they were conſidering hereof, News was brought by ſome of the Heydúcks, that about Two Leagues above on the River near Proot, Three Boats lay hid amongſt the Flags, and Boughs, of which the Turks had no knowledge; each of which was capable to Ferry Fifteen or Twenty men at a time over to the other ſide; upon which intelligence, it was reſolved, that Hoffkirchen and Serini ſhould in the Night-time paſs Eight hundred Heydúcks over to the other ſide; the which were followed by Eight hundred Horſe, and Two hundred German Foot, under command of Hoffkirchen; but the Nights were ſo ſhort, and the Boats ſo little, that by Break of day in the Morning, not above Five hundred of the Heydúcks had paſſed; who finding themſelves cut off, and ſeparated from the reſt of their Companions, reſolved to attack certain Boats, Barges, and Ferries belonging to the Enemy, which lay on that ſide of the Water; and to make uſe of them for Tranſportation of the other Forces. The deſign ſucceeded very proſperouſly; for the Turks taking theſe Heydúcks to be their Friends, were eaſily ſurprized and cut to pieces; and two very great Barges were ſeized and brought over to the other ſide, on which Hoffkirchen and Zerini embarking themſelves with Three hundred Dragoons, paſſed the River, and joyned the Heydúcks, who were far engaged in a purſuit of the Enemy; who being ſurprized, had abandoned Proot, together with the Works and Trenches which they had made; of which taking poſſeſſion, made a ſpeedy paſſage for the remaining Party of the Germans, Conſultations to paſs the Save.

Five hundred paſs the River.

1688.

1688. and Heyducks. In the Heat of this Action, Two hundred of the Enemy, who were Two thouſand ſtrong, were cut in pieces, and many Women and Children were made Priſoners; the Chriſtian Soldiers gained a conſiderable Booty in this Action; for the Turks being ſurprized, had not time to ſave any thing of their Moveables and Riches; and with them they had the Fortune to ſet Two hundred Chriſtians at liberty, amongſt which was a Lieutenant of the Regiment of the Upper Rhine, with ſeveral other ſubaltern Officers.

Count Hoffkirchen looking on this place to be an advantageous Poſt for raiſing a Bridge of Communication between that ſide and Sclavonia, and that in Four days they could at any time be carried down the Stream to Belgrade; It was reſolved to maintain that Poſt until other Orders ſhould come from P. Lewis, to whom an Expreſs was ſent to know his pleaſure: And in the mean time, they repaired the Trenches, and improved the Works with better Fortifications than thoſe which the Turks had made; whereby they put themſelves into a condition to reſiſt any force, which the Turks could bring againſt them in a ſhort time; and hereof in two or three days afterwards they had an occaſion to make ſome Tryal; for Topal Paſha having joyned himſelf with Two other Paſhas lately come from Adrianople, came upon them with an Army to the Number of Eight thouſand men; and having intrenched himſelf at the diſtance of about Three hundred Paces from the Palancha, he aſſaulted that, and the Trenches about Midnight; but were bravely repulſed by the continual Fire, which the Chriſtians made upon them; ſo that drawing off at ſome little diſtance, they brought Two Guns about Break of day in the Morning, with deſign to batter the place; in which were no more than Three hundred Germans, Horſe and Foot, and about One thouſand Heyducks; becauſe that Hoffkirchen had detached a great part of his Forces towards Poſſega, to Convoy ſome Waggons of Proviſions and Ammunition, of which they ſtood in need. The Enemy being well adviſed hereof, and of the weakneſs of the Garriſon within, returned to make a new Attack, covering their approach with Boards, Waggons, and Barrels of Earth. In the mean time the Attachment ſent to Poſſega returning, were obſerved by the Turk; who reſolving to hinder their Union, furiouſly made another Aſſault, with Two thouſand brave Janiſaries, and as many Spahees; who having filled up the ſhallow Ditch with Buſhes, Boards, and Rubbiſh, aſcended as high as to the Parapet, where they planted Two of the Colours belonging to Topal Paſha, near to Three of the Imperial Enſigns: Whereupon began a very furious Fight, with Swords and Scymeters at handy blows; and the Imperialiſts mixing with the Turks, threw them headlong into the Ditch and Trenches, killing in this Action with very little loſs on their ſide above Five hundred Turks, and taking Three Enſigns. After which a Sally was made with ſo much vigour and bravery, that the Turks were repulſed, and droven out of their new Works, which they had made near the Banks of the River.

Hoffkirchen attacked by Topal Paſha,

Who is repulſed.

The Turks endeavour to be at Hoffkirchen out of Proot.

1688.

Are repulſed.

In the mean time the Detachment which had lately been made, returned and paſſed the Water; with which the Forces in the Palancha being reinforced, made a Sally upon the Enemy, both with Horſe and Foot; and intirely beat them out of all their Approaches and Retrenchments, with the loſs of their Baggage and Waggons: This Action continued for the ſpace of Four and twenty Hours; in which, and other Attacks before, the Turks loſt above Twelve hundred men.

With great loſs.

1688. This Poſt was maintained for ſeveral days, and until ſuch time as P. Lewis of Baden ſent Orders to Hoffkirchen to withdraw his Troops; it not being adviſable to hazard ſuch brave men in a Poſt, which could not eaſily be maintained; and at ſo far a diſtance, as Four days Journey from the main Body of the Army, C. Hoffkirchen abandoned the place accordingly; and having ſacked it, ſet Fire to it, and paſſed the River with a very rich Booty.

Proot demoliſhed.

July.

The particulars of this Retreat not being well underſtood, cauſed ſome Diſturbance at Poſſega, where it was reported, that the Turks in a Body of Fifteen hundred Men, had paſſed the Save; and having defeated Hoff-kirchen, intended to diſpute the Paſſage with Prince Lewis of Baden: Who being in great Concernment for Hoff-kirchen, was come as far as Poſſega to enquire after him; and to receive true Information, he diſpatched General Piccolomini with Three hundred Horſe, to look after him; but they Marching by different Ways, miſſed of each other: When the General came to Proot, where he diſcovered ſome Parties of the Enemy, which cover'd themſelves within thoſe Ruins, having firſt broken down all the Bridges near to that Palanca, he paſſed the Water, and boldly attempted the Turks, imagining their numbers to be leſs than they were. The Turks gueſſing on the other ſide, that theſe Forces were ſome advanced Troops of the main Body of the Army, retired themſelves into the old Fort over againſt Proot, where having no Cannon, they plied their Small-ſhot very plentifully upon the Imperialiſts, by which it Piccolomini ſent in queſt of Hoffkirchen.

He retreats.

being

1688.

He Retreats with much Art, and good Conduct.

being diſcover'd, that the Turks were at leaſt Two thouſand in number; Piccolomini made a very skilful Retreat, according to the Military Order, and returned towards Poſſega, where he found Hoff-kirchen, Prince Lewis, and all the other other Troops happily joyned.

Prince Lewis Marches towards Gradiska.

The Troops having refreſhed themſelves one day in Poſſega, and being provided with all things requiſite for their Subſiſtence, Prince Lewis began his March thence towards Gradiska on the 24th of July, carrying with him four Demy-culverins, and ſome Field Pieces; reſolving to paſs the Save at Siſſeck in Croatia, and joyn there with a Body of Croats, and endeavour to Attack the Enemy, if poſſible: And here we will leave him for a while on this Expedition, and return to the great Camp, where the Elector of Bavaria was Arrived, to the great Joy and Triumph of the whole Army.

The Elector of Bavaria prepares his March for Belgrade.

The ſame Evening that the Elector entered the Camp at Tiska, he reſolved next Morning to proceed towards Belgrade, and accordingly he made a ſtrong Detachment under the Command of Count Dunewalt to Advance, and diſcover the Countenance of the Enemy, who (as it was reported) with a Body of Twenty thouſand Men, had fortified the Banks of the Save all along the Shoar, as far as to the Danube, with Timbers, and Ditches, and Paliſadoes, in the ſame manner as they had done the yeat before under Eſſeck; beſides which, Tekely had formed a Camp with ſuch Advantage, as that he could in a very ſhort time come in to their Aſſiſtance.

Auguſt. 1688.

The Cannon, &c. joyns the Army.

Reſolved to paſs the River.

1688.

Attempts to paſs the Save.

The Chriſtian Army paſſes the Save.

The Army having the 5th of Auguſt Encamped at Tiska, continued their March next day towards the Save, and made a Halt at Bagliutz, about half a League diſtant from the River; where the Artillery lately brought by Water from Buda, together with the Baggage, and the Boats on Wheels, with other Materials neceſſary for making a Bridge, joyned the Army that Evening under a Good Convoy of Horſe and Foot. About the ſame time a Priſoner was brought to the Camp, who upon Examination declared, That the Ottoman Army was compoſed of about Twenty five thouſand Men, of which Twenty five Chambers of Janiſaries, conſiſting of about Four or five hundred each, were employed to finiſh the Intrenchments they had made on the other ſide of the Save, to hinder the Paſſage of the Chriſtian Army: A Counſel of War being held thereupon, it was reſolved to force the Paſſage; and to ſend a good Body of Men to burn the Bridge, which the Turks had Built near Belgrade: But in caſe that Deſign ſucceeded not, then they were to Poſt themſelves as near the Bridge as they could, both to give the Alarum on that ſide, and alſo to ſecure the Convoys which were coming to the Army from Peter Waradin; for ſecurity of which, the Detachment of Four thouſand Men, under Dunewalt was alſo appointed: In the mean time the groſs Body of the Army moved towards the Save, directing their March towards the Iſland of Zingar or Swallows, which the Turks had poſſeſſed, but fled, and quitted it upon a Report, of the near Approach of the Chriſtian Army, ſo that the Imperialiſts without any Oppoſition poſſeſſed themſelves of that Iſland; the Foot paſſed over in Boats, but the Horſe forded the Water: But the great difficulty lay on the other ſide, where the Water was not only deeper; but the oppoſite Banks defended ſo well by the Enemies Cannon and Small-ſhot, that there ſeemed an impoſſibility almoſt to paſs; and the more, becauſe that Tekely lay Encamped on the other ſide, joyned to a ſtrong Body of Turks, who lay ready to receive them at their landing, and to give them an unpleaſing Welcome. All which being conſider'd; it was reſolved to Alarum the Turks that Night in divers places, whilſt Count Serini General of the Bavarian Forces, aſſiſted with the Generals Stirum and Aſpremont, ſhould with Six thouſand Men endeavour to paſs the River at a good diſtance from the place, where the chief Alarum was made; which was executed with that Care and Conduct, that the Succeſs proved anſwerable thereunto; for the Six thouſand Men having ſafely paſſed without any Oppoſition, poſted themſelves with the Chevaux de Friſe chained and linked together, which ſerved like a Turn-pike againſt the Enemies Horſe and Foot, until the reſt of the Army could follow. But ſo ſoon as it was clear Day, they were furiouſly attacked by Eight thouſand Janiſaries, who were as warmly received, and forced to Retreat, leaving Six hundred of their Men dead upon the place, with the loſs only of One hundred and twenty Men on the Chriſtian ſide; during this Engagement which laſted about two Hours, a Bridge was laid over the River with ſuch Expedition, that the whole Army paſſed that Day, except only the Cannon, and the Heavy Baggage; which were alſo Tranſported over without any delay. The moſt difficult Point of the whole Campaign being now overcome, the Elector of Bavaria diſtributed Two thouſand Ducats amongſt thoſe who had ſignalized themſelves in this Action; and without any demur marched towards Belgrade, from whence he was not diſtant above three days March. Had the Turks been Men of Courage or 1688.

The Turks diſcouraged.

1688.

Auguſt.

The Turks Fly.

The Citizens of Belgrade abandon their Dwellings.

1688.

Conduct, they might eaſily have hindred the Chriſtian Army from paſſing the River; but indeed to ſpeak the Truth, they had loſt all that Bravery and Spirit, by which they had gained ſo many Kingdoms in the Eaſt, and advanced ſo far into the Dominions of Europe: But being now diſpirited by unfortunate loſſes of their Cities and ſtrong Holds, and by Over-throws and Defeats in Battle, and more eſpecially by their own inteſtine Mutinies and Diſſentions, in which moſt of their brave Men periſhed; they became ſo ſunk in their Spirits, that they were not half the Men, that they formerly had been; but being ſtruck with a Conſternation, as their Enemies were raiſed and fluſhed with Victory and Triumph, they Cowardly gave back, and loſt the advantage, which Nature had given them by the Waters for a defence. The Elector deſigned to purſue the Enemy, before he Attempted the Siege of Belgrade; and to raiſe his Camp with the riſing of the Moon, then entring into the laſt Quarter; when he was hinder'd by a violent Storm of Wind and Rain, with Thunder and Lightning which endanger'd the Bridge, and laſted until break of Day of the 10*th* in the Morning: The Turks interpreting this Storm, as a bad Omen unto themſelves, abandoned their Camp, leaving many Thouſand Heads of Cattle diſperſed in the Fields, with all their Inſtruments for Intrenching; and fled with ſuch Precipitation and Haſt, that the Chriſtian Generals judging it impoſſible to overtake them, directed their Courſe by the neareſt way to Belgrade. Prince Eugeny of Savoy was Commanded by his Electoral Highneſs, to advance with his Regiment and ſome Guards, towards the City, to take a view of the Enemy, and diſcover in what order they were lodged in their Trenches: The Inhabitants of the City having received the affrighting News of the near Approach of the Chriſtian Army, had the time of three or four days, to Embark their uſeleſs People, with the beſt of their Moveables, and richeſt Goods on a Thouſand Boats; with which they ſailed down the Stream of the River, landing afterwards at ſeveral places, where Friends or Relations, or other Coveniencies invited them: And in the mean time the remaining Garriſon ſet Fire to the Suburbs, and reduced all to Aſhes. Notwithſtanding which, the Flight was ſo confuſed and haſty, that many of the Inhabitants with their Wives and Children, had not time to Convey themſelves away; of which ſome were killed, and many made Captives: Only ſome Jews and Raſcians remained behind, who being habited in the Turkiſh faſhion, had been expoſed to the Fury of the Soldiery, had not the Generoſity of the Prince reſtrained the Heat of their Martial Fury. Soon afterwards the whole Army came up, and Sacked and Plundered the Suburbs, ſparing neither Moſque nor Houſe: And thô the Fire, and Flames were very terrible; yet the Soldiers gained more Plunder and Booty in thoſe Suburbs, than they had done in all Buda; becauſe they had the fortune to ſurprize whole Bales of Goods, and Moveables ready Packed up, which the Owners in their Flight had not time to carry away. Howſoever, ſome of theſe Plunderers being over-intent on their Prey, were ſurprized by a Party of the Enemy, and either killed, or made Captives.

1688.

Auguſt.

A Fire conſumes the Suburbs.

The Trenches open'd.

Auguſt. 1688.

Batteries raiſed.

No time was loſt in opening the Trenches, into which Major General Steinau, and Count Ottingen enter'd on the 21*ſt* of Auguſt, and Commanded there that Night, but could not advance much by reaſon of the continual Rains. Howſoever, in two or three days the Trenches were finiſhed, and three Batteries were raiſed, and furniſhed with the Heavy Cannon, which on the 25*th* arrived in the Camp. Twenty ſix Pieces were immediately mounted, and began to play upon the Caſtle; and thô they had raiſed their Batteries, as high as was poſſible; yet the Ruins of the Suburbs lay ſo much in the way, that the Shot could not reach the bottom of the Wall, till the Way was cleared by the Pioniers; and then two new Batteries more being raiſed, and all the remaining Artillery planted thereon, they ply'd inceſſantly on the Walls of the Caſtle with great Shot and Bombs, in the mean time the Enemy was not idle, but returned the like into the Chriſtian Camp, making frequent Sallies with much Bravery; in which the Germans loſt more Men than the Turks, amongſt which was the Count of Ligneville, Colonel of Foot, and Adjutant General, who by a Shot received in the Trenches died immediately.

The Town, and Caſtle of Belgrade being in this manner formally inveſted, it was believed, That it could not hold out long, by reaſon of the Weakneſs of the Garriſon, which conſiſted of no more than Three thouſand and five hundred Men, Commanded by Ibrahim late Paſha of Bagdat or Babylon, who being a Brave and Valiant Soldier, reſolved to maintain the place to the laſt Extremity, giving out for Encouragement of his Garriſon, that powerful Succours were coming to their Relief, under the Command of Oſman Paſha of Aleppo; but this Report, grounded on ſome ſtragling Troops belonging to Tekeli, ſeen in the Neighbour-hood of Semendria, 1688. gave ſome hopes to the fainting Garriſon; but General Dunewalt being ſent againſt Tekeli, with a ſtrong Detachment of Horſe, ſoon drove him from thoſe Quarters. The chief Force of the Turks being no more than Twenty five thouſand Men, under Command of Oſman Paſha of Aleppo, lay Encamped near Niſſa, whilſt Teghen was retired with his Horſe (for his Foot had deſerted him) near to Sophia, deſtroying and conſuming the Forage round the Country.

The Turks Sue for Peace. The Turks finding themſelves in this low and helpleſs Condition, inclined to Counſels tending to Peace, and reaſſumed their former Reſolution of ſending their two forementioned Ambaſſadors, Zulficar Effendi, and the Interpreter Mauro-cordato to beg a Peace (to whom as we have ſaid, Teghen gave lately a ſtop) a Method never before practiſed by the Ottoman Emperors, ſince the beginning of their Empire: But the Misfortunes of War, and the Miſeries of their own inteſtine Diſſentions had bowed their Hearts, and Haughty Thoughts to ſubmiſſive and humble Prayers for Peace; in order to which Oſman Paſha of Aleppo wrote this following Letter to the Elector of Bavaria, brought to him by the Hand of a Chiaus.

T*O him, who is Dear to God, and ranked in chief Degree amongſt the Princes of* Germany, powerful in People and Government, Famous and Renowned in all Parts, Duke Maximilian Emanuel, Elector of Bavaria, and General of the Army of the Emperor of the Romans, unto whom may God grant that Health, which I wiſh unto him.

After Salutations premiſed. Be it known unto you, That one of the Chief Officers of our Emperor of the Turks, who now Reigns, is diſpatched with an important Letter to your moſt powerful Emperor: This Ambaſſador is a Perſon highly eſteemed amongſt us, both for his Wiſdom and Vertue, whoſe name is Zulficar Effendi; with whom goes alſo joyned in the ſame Commiſſion Alexander Mauro-cordato, Interpreter to the Port for ſecret Affairs, a Perſon of ſingular Reputation and Fame, and a Chriſtian by Profeſſion. Theſe two Perſons are arrived at this place from Conſtantinople with deſign to proceed farther to your Camp; in caſe they may be received with the ſame Honourable, Safe and Courteous Entertainment, as hath by ancient Cuſtom, and laudable Practice been ſhewn to thoſe of their Character: They have with them about One hundred Perſons belonging to their Retinue, for whom that ſafe Convoy and Paſports may be diſpatched, I have ſent you this Letter, to requeſt ſuch Security for them as is neceſſary: When they draw near to your Camp, they will ſend again to you, to the end, that a Convoy may come from your Army to meet and receive them from the Paſha, who is ſent with Troops from hence: That ſo the Reſpect, and Safety of Ambaſſadors obſerved by all Nations, as is fit and neceſſary may remain in it's ancient Luſtre. For you know how careful both ſides ought to be of their ſafe Paſſage. Proſperity to thoſe, who follow the true Direction. 1688.

Signed, Oſman Paſha of Aleppo.

Given in the Army near Niſſa.

The Elector of Bavaria's Anſwer.

To Oſman Paſha of Aleppo. Greeting, &c.

W*E have received your Letter from the Camp at* Niſſa, wherein you give us to underſtand, That an Ambaſſador by name Zulficar Effendi, and the firſt Interpreter, have Orders from your Emperor to come to our Army: Now althô we being inclined to Military Actions, might well refuſe to receive them here; which none could take amiſs in this preſent heat of Affairs, or might put off their Reception until another time, ſince We judge that their Propoſals will little agree with our preſent Intentions: Yet being moved by a Chriſtian Compaſſion, We do Grant that they may come to the Army: And We will favourably hear, what your Emperor hath Commanded them to propoſe unto us. To which end We have Commanded that a Paſport ſhall be prepared for their Security and delivered to the Perſons, who brought your Letter. We have alſo given Orders to the Governour of Semandria, that in the manner directed him, and with a ſufficient number of Troops, he Conduct them ſafe to our Army. Upon which they may firmly Rely.

Given at our Camp before Belgrade.
Auguſt 23*d* 1688.

In purſance of this Letter, Orders were given to General Caraffa to go to Titul, and receive the Ambaſſadors; but in the mean time the Siege proceeded, and Attacks were made with all the Fury and Vigour imaginable; many Pieces of the Cannon, which came from Buda, being caſt in haſt, burſt one after another; ſo that to ſupply their defect, the Elector ſent for moſt of the Cannon from Semandria; which being raiſed, and planted, did great Execution; and throwing Bombs and Carcaſſes from Fifteen Mortars at a time, ſtruck Terror into the Defendants, and ſet Fire to divers parts of the Fortreſs. Howſoever, the Turks manfully applied themſelves to quench the Flames, and returned the Cannon-ſhot and Bombs, The Turks throw Bombs and Carcaſſes.

Bombs, with other artificial Fires made with Pitch, and Sulfur upon the Beſiegers, in the ſame manner, as they had practiſed in the defence of Buda. They Sprang alſo one Mine, which venting about eight or ten Paces backwards, did no farther miſchief, than the killing of one Man; but this being followed by a Storm of Bombs, one of which falling into a Magazine, where ſome Hundreds of Weights of Powder, it blew all into the Air, without other Miſchief than the Death of eight Common Soldiers.

They make a ſally, and are beaten back.

The Turks believing that this Blow, and Springing of the laſt Mine, had cauſed ſome diſorder in the Trenches, made a violent Sally, with their Scemyters in their Hands into the Approaches; but being ſtrongly oppoſed by a Captain who Commanded a Hundred Men, reinforced alſo by ſome Parties of Straſſer's Regiment, they were repulſed with the loſs of Forty of their Men, eight Imperialiſts only being killed. The Fury of the Turks being hereby much abated; Differences, as is uſual, aroſe between the Commanders and the Souldiers; the firſt ſeemed reſolved to defend the Fortreſs to the laſt extremity, and laſt drop of their Blood, knowing that they could not long out-live any Surrender made upon Compoſition: But the Soldiers, who could ſave their Lives on eaſier Terms, were deſirous to be freed from the Showers of Fire, which being continually poured upon them, did in the Night reſemble the dreadful Flames of Veſuvius or Mongibello.

The Duke of Loraine comes to the Camp.

The Elector of Bavaria being well aſſured in the mean time, that the Conqueſt of that Caſtle would ſhortly be added to the Triumphs of Cæſar, had time, with much quiet of mind, and without any diſtraction to give a Magnificent Reception to the Duke of Loraine; who being now in ſome meaſure recovered from his late Sickneſs, could not abſent himſelf from Martial Exerciſes, at leaſt from being a Spectator, or bearing ſome ſhare in this Heroick Enterprize.

Is received by the Elector of Bavaria.

News being come, that the Duke of Loraine, having left his Royal Conſort the Queen at Buda, was not far diſtant, the Elector accompanied with the Duke of Mantoua, and ſeveral of the General Officers, went to him at the Foot of the Bridge, which was made over the Save, and there received him with the joyful Salutation of all the Cannon which were planted in the Lines of Circumvallation, and by the Soldiery drawn up in ſeveral Battalions; and having walked over all the Lines, and obſerved the diſpoſition of the Siege; all which being well approved, he was conducted to the Bavarian Tents, where he was ſumptiouſly treated by the Elector. After which, whilſt theſe Noble Generals were viewing the approaches, the Turks ſprang a ſecond Mine under the main Battery; not far from the perſons of theſe great Commanders; who being reſerved by the Providence of God to reap more Laurels, remained untouched amidſt that danger. Howſoever the Turks thinking thereby to have gained ſome great advantage, made a briſk Sally, with Colours flying, and Drums beating, drawn up in poſture of Battel: The Swedes and Franconians having then that place allotted them to Guard, gave way upon the firſt attack of the Enemy, and abandoned their Poſt, leaving their Officers to the mercy of the Enemy, who were miſerably ſlaughtered by them.

The Turks ſpring another Mine, and make a ſally.

Auguſt. 1688.

After which the Turks advancing to the Left, were ſo warmly received, that they were repulſed with the loſs of many of their Soldiers: Soon after which theſe Illuſtrious Dukes entred the approaches from whence the Turks had been beaten, and beſtowed due Praiſes on thoſe Soldiers, who ſo bravely and valiantly had behaved themſelves to the Reproach of thoſe, who cowardly retreated. After which the Duke of Loraine retired to the Quarters of his own Regiment of Horſe, than which he had at that time no other Command in the Army, the whole conduct and General direction being entirely in the power of the Elector of Bavaria.

Septem. 1688.

An Attack intended.

The Breaches being now made, ſome wider than others, the 5th of September was appointed for a day of a General Aſſault; which being come, the whole Army remained in a readineſs to make the on-ſet, and execute the laſt Orders of their Generals; when unexpectedly a Bomb from the Enemies Works fell amongſt certain Barrels of Powder; which blowing up, over-turned the Works which belonged to Mines then preparing; and burned in a furious manner all things near it, killing divers Soldiers; and amongſt the reſt was Count Guido of Staremberg, and Count Berzetti, Chief Director of the Mines. This Fire was followed by ſuch a terrible Rain, which continued all that day, and part of the Night following, that it was impoſſible to execute the intended Attack; but afterwards the Weather clearing up, the Mines were repaired again in ſuch manner, that at break of day in the Morning, Fire was given to them with ſo good ſucceſs, that the Ditch was filled up, and as it were, levelled as much as was needful.

The Attack was ordered to be made in Four ſeveral Quarters, that in the Front was commanded by the Elector himſelf: That on the Right-hand by the Prince of 1688. Commercy, on the Left by the Dragoons of General Heuſler, and that next the Water by Pina Sergeant Major of the Regiment of Loraine.

All things being in this manner diſpoſed in order for a general Aſſault, about Nine a Clock in the Morning the Signal was given to make the Attack, by Firing a Piece of Cannon in the Front of the Line of Circumvallation, which was anſwered by a Shot to the Right, and ſoon afterwards by Two others to the Left; which being the Signal to make the Attack, the Aſſailants entred the Ditch, where they were received by infinite Vollies of Shot pouring upon them from all ſides; which giving no ſtop to the Bravery and Courage of the Soldiers, they mounted to the top of the Breach, thô the Earth was become ſoft and ſlippery by the late Rains.

Belgrade Stormed.

From the height of this Breach, they took a Proſpect of greater difficulties ſtill to overcome; for they were now to deſcend into another Ditch, which the Turks had digged at the Foot of the inſide of the Wall; and there to wrench up or beat down the Paliſadoes, which were planted on the top of the Ditch; and this was to be executed in Contempt and Deſpite of all the Shot, which the Beſieged ſhowr'd from all ſides upon them; the which was ſufficient to intimidate and cool the Courage of the moſt valiant Heroes, eſpecially when at the beginning of this danger they ſaw their Leader Count Scherffemberg, and ſoon afterwards their Colonel Count Emanuel de Furſtemburg, who entred into his place, both killed before them, as was alſo Count Henric of Sturemberg: And indeed the German Soldiers beginning a little to give Ground, were in danger totally to loſe all the advantage which they had gained, had not the Elector himſelf expoſed his own Perſon to all the Shot of the Enemy; and ſtanding upon the Breach with his Sword drawn, threatned the Life of any one who ſhould dare to retire, and accordingly ſome were killed for the Terror of others.

Count Scherffemberg killed.

The Elector ſtands on the Breach.

The Soldiers animated by the Example of their General, and touched with a ſenſe of Honour, deſcended with new Reſolution into the Ditch; and being well ſeconded by others, they mounted to the Top, where the Paliſadoes were Planted.

The Turks terrified with ſo bold and ſurprizing an Attempt, fled trembling from the face of their Enemies, and crowded into the Caſtle, between which and the Town, there was only a ſingle Bridge; where diſplaying a White Flag, they demanded to Capitulate for their Lives; But ſome of the more deſperate Aſſailants having no regard to Flags, or Colours, or what was acting, aſcended to the Tops of the Houſes, and into Windows, and entred in at the Port-holes made for the Guns, where they made a moſt horrible Maſſacre of all that ſtood before them, without regard to Age or Sex.

The Turks Capitulate.

This Succeſs was in a great meaſure obtained by the other Attack, commanded by the Prince of Commercy; who thô wounded in the Shoulder by a Muſquet-Bullet, did yet overcome all difficulties, and enter victoriouſly within the Walls.

The P. of Commercy enters on the other ſide.

On that ſide howſoever, where General Heuſler commanded with his Dragoons, the oppoſition was not ſo great; ſo that laying aſide the Ladders which they had prepared for Scaling the Walls, they went directly to the Gate, and in ſpite of all their Shot fixed a Petard thereunto, which intirely forced it from its Bolts and Hinges, and laid all open to the entrance of the Soldiers; howſoever at ſome little diſtance from the firſt, another Wall preſented it ſelf, well guarded, and defended with Soldiers, who made continual Vollies upon the Aſſailants; to which there was an Iron-gate to paſs, before entrance could be made; and that ſo ſtrong, that it was judged almoſt impoſſible to be overthrown, during the Heat of this Action.

G. Heuſler forces a Gate.

Howſoever the Dragoons of Savoy being encouraged by their Prince, (who but ſome days before had been wounded in the Knee) leaped on the Wall, which was not very high, and deſperately threw themſelves into the City; by which means becoming Maſters of the Gate, they opened it, and let in a whole Torrent of the German Forces, who in a ſhort time covered all the Streets with the Bodies of their Enemies: Howſoever this Action coſt the Lives of above One hundred Dragoons of Savoy, with ſome of their principal Officers, amongſt which was the Count of Maſſel; and General Heuſler had his Thumb ſhot off with a Muſquet-Bullet, which hindred nothing in proſecution of this Victory.

Maſſacre and ſlaughter of the Turks.

Many Turks endeavouring to eſcape the fury of the Soldiers by paſſing the River in Boats, fell into the hands of the Germans, who gave them no better Quarter, than they had done to thoſe who defended the Breach.

All being now ſubdued, and ſubjected to Victorious Arms of the Chriſtians, no place ſtood out, but only a ſmall Trench behind the Caſtle, to which the Paſha or Commander in Chief, with the Aga of the Janiſaries, and ſome Officers had retired themſelves; and with them they took thoſe Slaves which they had maintained for their Service in the Caſtle: The Soldiers in their fury, not being ſatiated with the Blood they had already ſpilt, were diſpoſed to bathe their Swords yet farther in the Bodies of this ſmall remainder of their Enemies, and were ready to have executed, and wreak their final Rage on the Paſha, and Officers, when the Clemency of the moſt Serene Elector, being moved by the Cries and Tears of the Chriſtian Captives, at their Petitions and Prayers, ſpared the Lives of the Turks; being contented to ſee the Turks bound in the ſame Chains which they had newly taken from the Chriſtians: And yet the horrible Maſſacre of the Sword did not ceaſe in other parts of the City, all being filled with Confuſion and Cruelty; when on a ſudden a terrible Fire broke out in the lower Town, which burned with ſo much Violence, that the Conquerors as well as the Conquered were willing to eſcape out at the Gates.

The Paſha and other Officers made Priſoners.

The Cruelty of the Soldiers. 1688.

It was grievous to ſee poor Old men made Priſoners, dragged by their Beards, and Women and Maidens covered with Blood and, Dirt drawn by the Hairs of the Head, and made the Sport and Paſtime of Military Inſolence.

In Fine, the Fire being extinguiſhed, Slaughter ceaſed, and about Noon the City and Caſtle were intirely ſubdued.

On the 6th of September when His Electoral Highneſs, and the other Generals rode Triumphantly into the City, beholding the dead Bodies, which filled the Streets, the Ruins of the Houſes, and the Deſtruction which the Bombs had made; And conſidering theſe Succeſſes to have proceeded intirely from the Bleſſing, and Divine aſſiſtance of the God of Hoſts; His Electoral Highneſs on the 7th of September, cauſed Te Deum to be ſung in one of the Pleaſure-houſes belonging to the Grand Seignior, ſituate on the Declivity of a Hill, where the Elector thought fit to take up his Lodgings. And a Capuchin after ſaying Maſs, was ordered by a ſhort and devout Sermon to move the minds of the Soldiery to return Thanks unto God, who was the Giver of Victory; and to implore the Divine Benediction on the farther progreſs of their Arms. After which, all the Cannon of the Fortreſs, and of the Camp were Fired Three times, with loud Vive's reſounding the Fame of Leopold, and Maximilian Emanuel.

Sept. 7. Te Deum ſung.

The day following the Elector invited all the Generals, and Chief Officers of the Army to a ſumptuous Banquet, at which alſo the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors happened to be preſent; for whom, and his Retinue, (as we mentioned before) the Paſha of Aleppo had deſired a Paſs.

When this Ambaſſador approached near the Camp, he was ſtrangely ſurprized to hear all things ſo quiet, no Noiſe of Guns or other Inſtruments of War; but coming yet nearer, his Eyes convinced him (when he ſaw the Imperial Eagles advanced on the Walls) that the Town was taken.

The Turkiſh Ambaſſador comes to the Camp.

News being brought to the Elector, that the Ambaſſador was come, he was conducted with his Interpreter Mauro-cordato, and his Followers on Horſeback into the Court-yard, of the Houſe where the Elector was lodged; and there being alighted, he was conducted up Stairs by Two Gentlemen, to the Chamber where the Elector was ſeated, with whom at his firſt Entrance, he paſſed ſome Complements of Thanks, for the Paſſport and Convoy which he had ſo obligingly beſtowed upon him.

After which he was led into a large Hall, where a ſumptuous Table was ſpread. The Elector took the Upper-end, at his Right-hand was placed the Duke of Mantoua, on his Left the Ottoman Ambaſſador; and by his ſide the Interpreter was ſeated.

Is Feaſted with the Generals.

By the Duke were placed the Generals Caprara, Dunewalt, Heuſler, Rabattin; Prince Charles, Philip of Hannover, the Vice-Commiſſary Falchenhan, Count of Oetting, Sauran, Stirum, Grousfelt, Montecucoli, Palfi, and Sereni; which filled and crowned the Table with chearful Countenances, whilſt the Ambaſſador drooping in his Spirits, could not hide and ſuppreſs his Sorrow from appearing in his looks: The jollity of theſe Victorious Officers, was a Ponyard to his Heart, which very ill agreed with ſo much Feſtivity and Mirth of his Enemies; and of the principal Officers, who in very rich Habits encircled the Table. Howſoever being conſtrained to ſay ſomething, which might not betray his dejection of mind; caſting his Eyes round upon the Company, he ſaid to the Elector, That he was aſtoniſhed at the appearance of ſo many handſome and accompliſhed pliſhed Perſonages: But one thing he obſerved, That the Emperor of the Romans was ſerved by Young Generals; at which he could not much wonder; for when he conſidered, how they daily expoſed themſelves to the moſt deſperate dangers, there ſeemed an impoſſibility almoſt for them to ſurvive till old Age: Thus far it had been well, if he had ſtopped at this period of Complement.

1688.

But purſuing his Diſcourſe farther, he told them, that the Year before he had been at the Battel of Hatſchan. To which the Elector Replied, That certainly he muſt have had a good Horſe, meaning to eſcape and run away; which cauſed ſome Laughter.

During the time of Dinner, the Trumpets, Haut-boys, and other Inſtruments were ſounded; and Healths drank round in full Cups of Wine; to the Emperor; to the continuance of proſperous Succeſſes to his Arms; and the Third to the Health of the Ottoman Emperor; To all which the Ambaſſador did reaſon in Sherbet of Lemmons Wine, being both againſt his Religion and his Cuſtom to Drink. The Fourth Health was to the Elector; the Fifth to the Duke of Mantoua; the Sixth to the Ambaſſador, and then to all brave Soldiers; and after many other Glaſſes, they concluded all with a Health to a Good Peace, or a Glorious War, with which, breaking their Glaſſes, the Feaſt ended with the Day.

The taking of the Town, and City of Belgrade, was of a moſt fatal Importance to the Turks; for thereby the Way was laid opened to Adrianople, and Conſtantinople, no Garriſons lay between them and Belgrade, nor Forces to oppoſe the March of the Imperial Arms; unleſs Scarcity and Want of Proviſions through a deſolate Country, in many places full of Rocks and Mountains, to be paſſed, ſhould bring more difficulty to the progreſs of a Victorious Army, than the Troops of their Enemies.

Topal ſigniſie Lame.

Nor did this Campaigne end as yet with the Conqueſt of Belgrade, being ſeconded by others of equal advantage in Boſnia, under the auſpicious Conduct of that Renowned and Fortunate General, Prince Lewis of Baden, whom we left lately at Poſſega, with deſign to attack Topal, Paſha of Boſnia, who had Encamped himſelf under Tervat or Terwent, near the River of Ucraine, about Five Miles diſtant from Proot, which Prince Lewis had fortified, to facilitate his paſſage more eaſily into Boſnia, and to ſecure the Communication between the Neighbouring Forts: And there alſo paſſed a Bridge over the Save; which being finiſhed, on the Third of September, he cauſed his Baggage to paſs over, and the next day followed with his whole Army, in hopes to have drawn the Paſha from his Encampment; of whoſe Number the Prince had no very good Account; but being reported to be much leſs than they were, the Prince marched the Fourth Inſtant in the Evening ſilently, and without Noiſe to aſſault the Enemy in the Camp; and having paſſed that Night through many ſtrait and difficult Ways, they arrived next Morning by break of day within ſight of the advanced Guards of the Enemy, who gave the firſt Alarum; upon which the Paſhas was the firſt to Mount on Horſeback, and immediately drew forth his Troops, placing them in order of Battel; the Horſe into Two Wings, and the Foot in the middle. The Force conducted by Prince Lewis, was no ſtronger in all than Three thouſand Horſe, and Three hundred Croats; but the Turks by ſeveral Recruits which had lately joyned them, were in all Fifteen thouſand Fighting-men; by which inequality of Numbers, the Turks judging themſelves ſecure of Victory, furiouſly attacked the Prince, who had alſo divided his Squadrons of Horſe into Two Wings, the Right Commanded by Piccolomini, and the Left by Count Caſtelli, both Generals of Battalia.

1688.

1688. Septem.

P. Lewis paſſes the Save.

The Turks aſſault the Germans.

The Turks at firſt falling in with all their power, and Numbers on the Left-wing, were Three times bravely repulſed by Caſtelli; when Piccolamini coming in to their Aſſiſtance, the Fight became ſo hot and fierce, that the Chriſtians and the Turks remained for half an Hour ſo mixed together, that having not time to Re-Charge their Fire-Arms, they fought only at handy blows, opening the way with their Swords.

The Turkiſh Horſe put to Flight, And the Foot expoſed to danger.

At length the Turks being overcome by the unparallel'd Valour of the Imperialiſts, the Turkiſh Horſe began to retire, leaving their Infantry naked, and expoſed to the Fury of the Enemy, of whom the greateſt Slaughter was made, that ever was known, between Two ſuch ſmall Bodies.

And indeed, Reflexion being made on the Numbers of the Imperialiſts, it will appear a Miracle that Three thouſand three hundred men ſhould defeat Fifteen thouſand, killing Five thouſand on the place, amongſt which was the General Topal Paſha, Two Agas, and the Kahyá to the Paſha: The Foot made a brave defence for ſome time;

1688. but at length were diſperſed: About Two hundred of them were drowned in the River, and loſt in the Bogs, and ſuch as eſcaped the Sword, ſubmitted to Quarter. The Imperialiſts had the advantage to be covered by the ſide of a Hill, when the Enemy attacked them.

In this great Action the Imperialiſts loſt not more than One hundred and fifty men, amongſt which was Captain Maraville, and Two Lieutenants; the Prince Auguſt of Hannover was ſlightly Wounded in the Hand by a Lance, and the Count de Cronſfelt, Sergeant-Major of the Regiment of Holſtein in the Neck.

Prince Auguſt was Colonel of a Regiment of Curaſſiers, and conducted a Detachment of Two thouſand men, with which he was commanded to march from Peter-Waradin, and joyn with Prince Lewis of Baden; the which he performed, and behaved himſelf with incomparable Valour, which is natural to that Illuſtrious Family.

P. Lewis returns to Proot.

In this manner Prince Lewis Exalted with Glory, and laden with Spoils, returned with many Standards and Colours taken from the Enemy, to his former Camp at Proot; where Dedicating the Day following to the Repoſe and Refreſhment of his Soldiery, he retorned Thanks to the God of Hoſts, for ſo ſignal a Victory, which happened to fall out on the very ſame day, that the Elector of Bavaria ſang the Te Deum at Belgrade for the Conqueſt and Subjection of that place.

News ſent to Vienna.

Theſe Two great and ſignal Actions being performed ſo near to each other in time, filled all Vienna and Chriſtendom, (France only excepted) with extraordinary Joy and Triumph.

Prince Charles of Vaudemont was choſen by the Elector to be the joyful Meſſenger of this Glorious Action of taking 1688. Belgrade, to the Imperial Court, which was immediately followed by Baron Schlick, diſpatched by the Prince of Baden, with Advice of that wonderful Victory obtained over Topal the Paſha of Boſnia.

The French K. obſtructs the Wars againſt the Turks.

In this glorious manner did the Campaigne end in Hungary, which might have been farther improved, and a progreſs made by the Imperial Arms to the utmoſt extent of thoſe Dominions which the Turks poſſeſs in Europe, had not the moſt Chriſtian King, being diſpleaſed at the proſperous Courſe of the Imperial Arms againſt the Turk, thought it time to make a diverſion by waging War upon Germany. 1688.

And indeed it had been no wonder to have ſeen the Imperial Eagles, as a conſequence of the preſent Conſternation, Erected on the Walls of Conſtantinople, and the Turks driven over the Boſphorus to poſſeſs their more Ancient poſſeſſions in Aſia, had not the Menaces of the French King recalled the Elector of Bavaria from his intended Enterprize, which was very probable and likely to have ſucceeded: For the Raſcians were got into a Body of Eight thouſand men between Semandria and Niſſa, being, beſides their old Feuds, lately exaſperated by the burning of their Houſes, and deſtroying of their Fields by Teghen Paſha, which he did to hinder the Imperialiſts from following him in his late Flight from Belgrade: In revenge of which, they deſired the Germans to furniſh them with experienced Commanders, to direct and diſcipline them; not queſtioning but to become Maſters of all that Country, and to poſſeſs Sophia it ſelf; promiſing alſo to bring the Bulgarians and Greeks into the Intereſt of the Emperor.

The Raſcians in Arms againſt the Turks.

But the Elector of Bavaria, as we have ſaid, being obliged to return, he arrived at Vienna the 18*th* day of September, and Three days afterwards was followed by the Duke of Loraine, who by reaſon of his late indiſpoſition, could not move ſo vigorouſly as the Elector.

The Elector of Bavaria returns to Vienna.

The arrival of the Elector at Vienna, happened on the Day of Thankſgiving for the late Succeſſes; where nothing was omitted to render that Day ſolemn and full of Joy and Triumph. The Proceſſion came forth from the Royal Church of the Auguſtines diſcalced, and proceeded to the Cathedral of St. Stephen's, being followed by all the Clergy, Gentry, Nobility, and Miniſters of the Court; and laſt of all with Exemplary Devotion and Piety, came the Young King of Hungary, and their Imperial Majeſties, attended with the Queen of Poland, and the Electreſs of Bavaria.

A Solemn Day of Thankſgiving.

This moſt Auguſt Train being entred the Church, an Eloquent Sermon was Preached before them, agreeable to the preſent occaſion; after which, Te Deum was Sung, and Maſs Celebrated by the Biſhop of Vienna, with the Harmony of the moſt exquiſite Muſick, both Vocal and Inſtrumental, that Human Art could arrive unto. All which Jubilee and Triumph was much augmented
by

1688. by the appearance of his Electoral Highneſs, whom the Fatigues and wearineſs of his Journey could not hinder from bearing part in the Feſtival of this day; and indeed the People beheld him with ſuch Admiration, that their Eyes had ſcarce time to fix on any other Object than his perſon, who had atchieved Two ſuch memorable Actions that Year; namely, in paſſing the Save, and ſubduing Belgrade, as may compare with the moſt memorable and Heroick Acts of Alexander, or the Cæſars.

Whilſt theſe Triumphs were celebrating in Auſtria, and over all Germany, and Meſſengers diſpatched to all Courts of Chriſtendom to carry the happy News of ſo many Victories, the Ottoman Dominions lay diſconſolate and low, and expoſed to the Incurſions of their Enemies, had the Imperialiſts been inclined to puſh forward their Victories, even to the Walls of Conſtantinople.

The French obſtructs the War againſt the Turk.

But the Councils of France judging it neceſſary to ſupport the Turk, reſolved to break into Germany; which was accordingly performed; and ſuch a diverſion made thereby, as protracted the War for ſeveral Years afterwards: Wherefore thô it be my purpoſe only to relate the Wars between the Emperor, and the Turks, carried on in the famous Kingdom of Hungary; yet conſidering that by the French Machinations and Contrivances a ſtop was put to the free Courſe of the Imperial Arms, it may not be from our purpoſe to make a ſmall digreſſion; and deſcribe the Original of that War, which afterwards involved all Chriſtendom to the great Advantage and Conſervation of the Turks.

We muſt therefore underſtand, that King Lewis the 14*th* had, on Account of Madam d' Orleans, and a pretended Title ariſing from her, ſwallowed in his mind a right to the whole Palatinate; and nouriſhed for a long time a hatred to that moſt Auguſt Family, watching all Opportunities to ſeize on thoſe Lands and Cities, which he thought were unjuſtly detained from him: Howſoever his Enmity burſt not into open Violence, ſo long as the Cardinal of Furſtemburg was joyned in a Coadjutorial power with the Elector of Cologne.

But that Biſhop being dead, and Fuſtemburg diſappointed of his Election by the Choice of Prince Joſeph Clement of Bavaria; the King paſſing the bounds of all moderation, breaks with the Emperor, and writes this following Letter to the Pope. 1688.

Moſt Holy Father,

We have reſolved to Write with our own Hand unto your Holineſs, deſiring you to do juſtice to Cardinal de Fuſtemburg, who hath been choſen Archbiſhop and Elector of Cologne, on the 19th Current of this Month of September, by ſuch plurality of Voices, that this Cardinal doth not doubt, but to obtain the Approbation and Confirmation of your Holineſs in this Election, which hath been performed according to the ſtrict Rules of the Cannon; eſpecially ſince amongſt all thoſe who ſtood Candidates for this ſublime Office, none is or can be ſo capable to govern, and worthy the Dignity of an Archbiſhop, as this Cardinal.

What therefore I deſire of your Holineſs is but a meer Act of Juſtice: But ſince we could never as yet obtain the leaſt point of favour from you; we find our ſelves obliged to lay before your Holineſs, that in caſe your denial of Conſtituting the Cardinal of Fuſtemburg Elector by your Bull, ſhould be the Cauſe and Original of a War, which cannot be other than bloody and miſerable; we proteſt before God that your Holineſs is liable to anſwer for all thoſe wretched and fatal Accidents which ſhall trouble and diſquiet the repoſe of Chriſtendom, which you, as the common Father, are obliged to prevent.

And leſt it ſhould be Objected, That the Biſhoprick of Argentina (with which the Cardinal of Furſtemburg is invited) is incompatible with the Archbiſhoprick of Cologne; We declare, That the ſaid Cardinal ſhall readily quit that See; for which we Preſent one of the moſt conſiderable Subjects of our Kingdom, who is the Biſhop of Metz, againſt whom your Holineſs can have no Objection, conſidering that your Holineſs once gave him the Character of being the Scourge of the Hereticks. Which being the only Occaſion and Sum of this Letter, we crave, Holy Father, the Apoſtolical Benediction.

Given at Verſailes September 22. 1688.

Subſcribed Lewis King of France, the Eldeſt Son of the Church.

1688. This Letter being deſivered to Pope Innocent 11th by Cardinal de' Eſtrees, received not the Anſwer which the King expected; for this Pope being a perſon of Courage, juſt and ſevere in Obſervance of the Canonical Cannons and Conſtitutions, would not be induced out of fear or dread of thoſe Menaces pronounced in the Letter, to diſannul or make void the Lawful Election of Prince Joſeph Clement of Bavaria, to the Archbiſhoprick and Electorate of Cologne. Whereupon the King being highly diſpleaſed, made a ſolemn Proteſt againſt the Validity of that Election; with which he diſpatched Meſſengers and Curriers with a thouſand Menaces into all parts of Germany, as alſo into Holland; enjoyning them not to intermeddle, or concern themſelves in the Electorate of Cologne, declaring that he was reſolved to vindicate the cauſe of the Cardinal of Fürſtemburg by force of Arms; and at the ſame time commanded his Troops to march into the Eccleaſiaſtical State near Avignon, and into Germany; upon which Philipsburg was attacked and taken: Some Manifeſtos, were likewiſe publiſhed at the Diet at Ratisbon, and other places, declaring, That the King did not deſign to act any thing againſt the Truce made at Nimeguen, but rather intended to Convert it into a perpetual Peace, in caſe the Cardinal of Fuſtemburg might be eſtabliſhed in the Electorate: Offering alſo to demoliſh Philipsburg, and reſtore it to the Biſhoprick of Spire; and Freibourg to the Emperor, it being firſt demoliſhed. But then as to the pretenſions of Madam d' Orleans, relating to her Demands upon the Palatinate, the ſame ſhould be amicably debated; which not being agreed, in the ſpace of one year, they ſhould then be referred to the impartial Mediation of the King of England, and the Republick of Venice.

1688.

The Cruelty of the French in Germany.

But no ſooner was this Declaration publiſhed, than the French by Force of Arms made themſelves Maſters of ſeveral Cities, ſeizing, and fortifying Caſtles, miſerably burning and deſtroying the Palatinate; and exacting Contributions in Suevia, Franconia, and other places upon pain of military Execution, raging over all thoſe Countries with ſuch barbarous Inhumanity, as if men had laid aſide all ſenſe of Bowels, or Compaſſion to each other, waging War in a manner unknown to Tartars, Scythians, or other more ſalvage People of former Ages.

This ſurprizing Irruption of the French into Germany being carried by an Expreſs to his Electoral Highneſs at Belgrade gave (as we have ſaid) a ſtop to the progreſs of his Victorious Arms againſt the Turk; ſo that having committed the Command of the Imperial Forces to the auſpicious Conduct and Care of General Caprara; he returned with all Expedition to Vienna, commanding his own Forces to follow him. 1688.

The Elector returns to Monaco.

At Vienna having paſſed ſome few days and diverted himſelf with his moſt Serene Conſort, at the Imperial Court of his moſt Auguſt Father in Law, he haſted with all expedition to Monaco, the place of his Electoral Reſidence; there to take ſuch Meaſures as might ſecure his Brother in the Electorate of Cologne, to which he had been fairly choſen, and confirmed therein, by the concurrence of Pope Innocent the Eleventh: And likewiſe guard his own Countries from the Incurſions of the French, who now like a Torrent carried all before them, burning and laying all places deſolate, even to the very Borders of the Bavarian Dominions.

1688.

The German Troops recalled from Hungary.

Thus were the Ottoman Dominions in Europe reſcued from the fatal Blow of an entire Conqueſt: For not only were the Bavarian Troops recalled; but the French preſſing hard upon the Upper-Germany, the Emperor was forced to give Licence to the Militia of the Circles to return home, and to remand back from Hungary ſome of his own Regiments, for ſecurity of the Empire, and of the Electors, and other Princes; who now judged it time to unite themſelves againſt the common Enemy; which tho' once eſteemed to be the Turk only, yet now the French being become more formidable, more cruel, and bloody, than the Turks themſelves, when they came firſt from Scythia, it became the common Intereſt of all Germany to unite in a Body in oppoſition to the dreadful power of their mighty Foe. So the Elector of Saxony joyning with the Princes of Lunenburg, Brunſwick, Hanover, and Heſſe-caſſel, they vigorouſly made Head, reſolving to oppoſe all the Attempts, which the French made upon the Empire.

In this manner the Turks being relieved from imminent deſtruction, by a ſtop given to the Current of the Chriſtian Arms, they had time to take ſome breath, and reſpite, and recover themſelves a little, as will appear in the courſe of the following Year.

The Paſha of Belgrade taken Priſoner, as we have ſaid, was carried to Vienna, where 1688.

The Paſha of Belgrade Priſoner.

where he was treated with Reſpect, and permitted the liberty of the City, under the care of Cavag^{re} Marc Ant^{o} the Emperor's principal Interpreter, becauſe he was a man of Years, a great Soldier, and one choſen for his Valour and Bravery for the defence of Belgrade, having approved 1688. himſelf on all occaſions couragious in Battel; and particularly in the defence of Belgrade, which he had maintained to the laſt extremity.

Caprara commands at Belgrade.

The Government of the City of Belgrade being (as we have ſaid) committed to the Care and Command of Mareſchal Caprara; His firſt Employment was to purge and cleanſe the City of the noiſome and fetulent ſmell of Dead Corps, which lay ſcattered in the Streets, under the Walls, and upon the Breaches; the ſame were laden upon Waggons, to the Number of about Eight thouſand, and thrown into the Current of the Danube; which being carried down the Stream, found their Graves, or Reſting-places, where the Winds and Torrent carried them.

The Garriſon appointed for Defence of the Town conſiſted of Four thouſand Foot, and a Regiment of Horſe, under the Command of Count Guido de Staremberg; the reſt of the Militia being drawn out into Quarters near Peter-Waradin, ſome care was taken to repair the Breaches by the Art and Induſtry of the Ingenier Andrea Cornaro; howſoever there was ſo much neglect in the progreſs of this work, as tended to the advantage of the Turks, who Two Years afterwards retook the Town again to the diſreputation, as well as to the loſs of the Chriſtian Arms.

The Works about Belgrade negligently repaired.

But whilſt the Ingenier was at work to repair the Breaches, on a ſudden a Fire burſt forth in the Houſe, or Palace, called the Grand Seignior's Favourite, which conſumed it intirely to Aſhes, no man knowing how, nor by what means thoſe Flames were kindled.

Caprara ſeizes on Semandria.

After ſo many happy Succeſſes, Labours, and Travels of the Soldiery, it might now be judged time to put an end to this glorious Campaigne, and refreſh the Soldiery already wearied with Toils and Dangers.

But General Caprara willing to make uſe of the Air of Fortune, reſolved to viſit the City of Semandria, which, as he was informed, was abandoned by the Turks: Being come thither, he was carried with a deſire to proceed yet farther into the Conquered Countries, and advanced as far as 1688. Reſſkarovert, an open Town conſiſting of about Three hundred Houſes, which the Turks alſo had abandoned, leaving all their Chans, or publick Inns filled with Victuals, and Proviſions of all ſorts for a Booty to their Enemies.

The Raſcians ſubmit to the Emperor.

Theſe fortunate Succeſſes induced the Raſcians to ſubmit unto the Emperor; ſo that the Inhabitants of Semandria, having for their Leader Paul Diach, were the firſt to pay Homage unto his Cæſarean Majeſty; and in proceſs of time performed great Services againſt the Turk.

They take two places and defeat the Turks.

Theſe being animated by General Caprara increaſed ſpeedily into a Body of Two thouſand men, who ſurprized a place called VVaolva on the River Drine, and another Town on the ſame River called Zolkolova, where engaging with a Body of the Turks, they killed a Thouſand of them on the place, and put the reſt to Flight, of which very few of them had the fortune to eſcape with their Lives. But becauſe the Turks made great Spoils and Devaſtations on the Banks of the River Morava, carrying away many Greeks as well as Raſcians into Slavery, General Caprara ſent Orders to Heuſler to haſten to their help with Five Regiments of Horſe, Foot, and Dragoons, Heuſler being arrived on the River Morava; where hearing of the Exploits which the Raſcians had performed, and how that they had taken Three other Caſtles upon that River about Twenty Leagues diſtant from Belgrade; he paſſed the River and Lodged at Pazziarovitz, an open place, well ſituated, and eaſily defended, being guarded in the Front by the Three Caſtles, and in the Rear by Semandria.

Caprara returns to Belgrade.

All things meeting the deſired Succeſs, Count Caprara returned to Belgrade, from whence he reinforced Heuſler with Fifteen hundred Foot to give a ſtop to the Incurſions of the Turks, who with a Body of Twelve thouſand Men ranged all along the River Morava; but conſiſting for the moſt part of a ſort of Rabble, rather than formed Troops, they were ſoon diſperſed, and came to nothing, Diſbanding or Deſerting of themſelves: Or at leaſt ſerved only for Plunder and Spoil, rather than to oppoſe or make a Stand againſt a formidable Enemy; and in this manner they made Slaves of their own Chriſtian Subjects, and deſtroyed their Country, until ſuch time as that ſome Parties of them moved with indignation for the unjuſt outrages which the Turks uſed againſt them, took up Arms, 1688. and ſeized the City of Uſſiza, a place tho' open, yet rich; killing Five hundred Turks on the place, and taking Two thouſand Priſoners.

This Town was conſidered as a very important Paſs and Inlet into Boſnia; but becauſe the Ways were ſo narrow and rocky, that Cannon could not be drawn thither, it was judged fit not to put a Garriſon of Germans into it; but rather to commit it to the Cuſtody and Defence of the Raſcians.

Theſe ill Succeſſes falling in this manner one on the Neck of another, ſo diſpirited the Turks, that the only way left them to quiet the minds both of the Soldiers and People, was to poſſeſs them with the hopes of Peace by the Negotiation of thoſe Ambaſſadors which were lately diſpatched from the Sultan to the Emperor, who were now arrived at the Caſtle of Puffendorf, about Five Leagues diſtant from Vienna, where they were ordered to remain, until the Plenipotentiaries from Poland and Venice ſhould meet at Vienna, furniſhed with Commiſſions and Inſtructions from their reſpective Powers in order to a Treaty.

And that this pretence might appear more plauſible, the Grand Seignior paſſed to Adrianople; from whence he diſpatched very urgent and poſitive Orders to Tegben Paſha, that he ſhould forward an Expreſs to the Ambaſſadors, to preſs with all earneſtneſs the Concluſion of a Peace, as the ſole means remaining to ſave the Ottoman Empire; which in caſe he could not effect, he was then to take care that the Frontiers might be defended.

Yeghen Paſha commits great Spoils.

Tegben taking this Meſſage and Commiſſion as an Evidence of the Grand Seignior's Favour, and Re-eſtabliſhment into his Grace, he readily applied himſelf to an undertaking, which in appearance might look like Obedience to Command; and tho' he knew it was not poſſible to withſtand the Power and Progreſs of the Imperial Arms, animated with ſo many Victories; yet conſidering himſelf ſtrong enough to do miſchief, and ſpoil, and pillage, he marched from Niſſa towards Dobravitz, where he committed all the Outrages imaginable on the miſerable Inhabitants of that place; giving liberty to a licentious Soldiery to deſtroy an Ancient Monaſtery of Greeks, to which many poor Chriſtians being fled for Sanctuary, they ſtained the Pavements with the Blood of a thouſand perſons; carrying away the Old Monks, Women, and Children into diſtreſſed Captivity. 1688.

Tekeli alſo being re-inforced with a party of Turks, and Tartars, committed great Spoyls on the Confines of Valachia, and Tranſilvania; but ſoon was forced to retire, upon the News that the Raſcians with a Body of Four thouſand men were marching againſt them: And thus laying aſide much of his confidence in Arms, he reſolved to try what effect his perſuaſions might have with his Tranſilvanian Friends, and thoſe of his Faction, inviting them to caſt off the Yoke of Germany from their Necks, and reaſſume their Ancient Liberties; and to that end he wrote this following Letter.

Ad Capitaneos, Directores, & Magiſtratus Inclyti Regni Tranſilvaniæ.

Omnia bona det Deus Regno Tranſilvaniæ, vigile Ingenium & oculos Incolis ejus opto. Nolim Ingratitudinem veſtram quâ Cæſaream amplexi fuiſtis protectionem reſpicere; imò potius certiores vos facere, & commune facere velim vehementer volens Regnum Tranſilvaniæ, in tantis afflictionibus, & exactionibus verſari. Non dubito quin ſatis perſpexeritis, hucuſque iniquas Germanorum Machinationes. Volunt ſe in regnum intrudere, ut vos ex regno expellant: Vos peribitis, illi manebunt; Pellite itaq; & corrigite ceæcitatem veſtram: Ad Arma currite omnes Nobiles, Libertini & Subditi; pro felici Patria certate, certe vos libertatem conſecuturos, quam turpiter perdiſtis ad Comam uſque: Niſi omnes audacter inſurrexeritis, peribitis vos, & filii veſtri, & Nobiliſſimum Regnum in manibus barbarorum manebit. Valete, et vigiliate vobis, & Patriæ veſtræ. Datas trans Danubium proximè ad Tranſalpinas.

And to leave no Stone unturned, he ſollicited the Ottoman Port for new Succours, promiſing mighty Succeſſes in caſe the Tartars would invade Tranſilvania; the which accordingly was deſigned, and had taken effect, had not the Coſacks made an unexpected Irruption into Tartary, and thereby obliged thoſe Barbarians to quit their deſign, that they might attend to the ſafeguard of their own Country.

All places in Boſnia being now ſubdued, and brought under the power of the Emperor (Bertzka only excepted) ſituate on the Save; Prince Lewis after he had fortified Proot, and Gradiſca, marched againſt it, being a place of ſuch importance as ſecured all the River from thence to Belgrade. The Turks having advice of the approach

1688. of Prince Lewis, with Terror and terrible Conſternation abandoned that vaſt City, pleaſant for its Situation in a delicious Country, abounding with all ſorts of Proviſions and Fruits, both for the ſuſtenance and delight of the Inhabitants; into this Commodious Dwelling made void by the flight of the Turks, a Garriſon of Two thouſand Germans was lodged, which ſerved them for Winter-Quarters, wherein to refreſh themſelves after all the fatigues, dangers, and tedious Marches of the paſſed Campaigne; and to ſecure this City ſo plentiful of all ſorts of Proviſions, a regular Fortification was Erected on the riſing of a Hill, which ſerved to cover, and very much to ſtrengthen the City. Now in regard Advices were brought to Bertzka, that the Paſha of Boſnia was making Levies of men, and recruiting his Forces in the Neighbouring parts; General Piccolomini was diſpatched to Vienna, to render an Account of the State of that Country, and to preſs for Forces immediately to be diſpeeded for ſecurity thereof; it being a Province inhabited by many Chriſtians, who with encouragement and protection would be ready to ſubmit and do Homage to the Emperor.

Piccolomini diſpatched to Vienna.

Piccolomini ſo well Negotiated his Affairs at Vienna, that he ſoon procured Orders directed to the General at Belgrade to reinforce Prince Lewis with a conſiderable Body of men.

But becauſe the French were now in motion, and had already entred Germany with a formidable Army; to oppoſe which, there was need of the Counſel and Direction of the beſt and moſt Experienced Captains, who had lately with ſuch auſpicious Fortune conducted the Imperial Forces againſt the Turks; it was reſolved to recall Prince Lewis of Baden to Vienna; and to commit the Charge of Boſnia to the Courage and Conduct of Piccolomini. 1688.

P. Lewis recalled to Vienna.

So ſoon as Piccolomini was returned to Gradiſca, Prince Lewis took Poſt for Vienna, having ſome few days before his departure, taken poſſeſſion of Oliva, and Sbornich, or Swornich, a City and Caſtle of conſiderable importance; of the latter of which, the Charge was committed to Major Thomas Stracharta, a Scotch Gentleman, who bravely maintained it againſt Two Aſſaults of the Turks: Theſe places were ſituate on the River Drine.

1688. After which this Valiant Prince departed, leaving moſt manifeſt Evidences and Proofs behind him of his Courage aſſiſted with Fortune; for that in the ſpace of about Nine Weeks, he had ſubdued all the Province of Boſnia, defeated the Paſha with double Numbers, taken Praot, Gradiſca, Bertzka, and divers Caſtles, with no more than Eight thouſand Germans, Hungarians, and Croatians.

Tho' it was now time to end this Campaigne, yet ſtill the Blocades of Sigeth, Caniſa, and Grand-Waradin were continued; the Defendants, tho' reduced very low, remained howſoever very obſtinate and reſolute to maintain the Garriſons to the laſt extremity, in hopes rather that their Ambaſſadors would ſucceed in the Concluſion of a Peace, than in any apparent probability there was of reſcuing themſelves by their own force, or other expected Succours. And indeed the Turks might then on very good Grounds have hoped for a peace, ſince that they readily offered to have quitted all pretenſions to the Conquered places, and ſuffered the Emperor to remain in quiet poſſeſſion of all whereof he had made himſelf Maſter; which had been a vaſt advantage to the Empire at that time, when the French were entered into Germany with a formidable Army, burning, laying waſte, and deſtroying all the Palatinate; threatning War on the Empire, which continued for ſeveral Years with ſuch fury, that had not King William of England, joyned with Spain, Holland, and ſome of the Princes of Germany oppoſed this terrible Foe, all the Empire and other Countries had ſunk under the weight of the Arms of France. But God knows by what Fate the Emperor refuſed to hearken to thoſe fair Propoſitions of Peace; which that they might not be urged or preſſed on his Counſellors, the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors were committed Priſoners to the Caſtle of Puffendorf, where they paſſed ſome Years under a tedious reſtraint and loſs of Liberty, contrary to the Law of Nations: And tho' the Turks may be much blamed for this kind of Violation of the Law of Nations, and diſreſpect to the perſons of Ambaſſadors, which in all Countries have been eſteemed ſacred, yet it is a new thing to be ſo practiſed by Chriſtian Princes, eſpecially by the Auſtrian Family, which is Renowned over all the World for their Piety, Juſtice, and Clemency. As there was at that time no Reaſon or Senſe for not cloſing with the 1688.

The Turks deſire Peace.

The Emperor unhappily refuſes it.

The Turkiſh Ambaſſadors in Priſon.

1688. and ſeized the City of Uſſiza, a place tho' open, yet rich; killing Five hundred Turks on the place, and taking Two thouſand Priſoners.

This Town was conſidered as a very important Paſs and Inlet into Boſnia; but becauſe the Ways were ſo narrow and rocky, that Cannon could not be drawn thither, it was judged fit not to put a Garriſon of Germans into it; but rather to commit it to the Cuſtody and Defence of the Raſcians.

Theſe ill Succeſſes falling in this manner one on the Neck of another, ſo diſpirited the Turks, that the only way left them to quiet the minds both of the Soldiers and People, was to poſſeſs them with the hopes of Peace by the Negotiation of thoſe Ambaſſadors which were lately diſpatched from the Sultan to the Emperor, who were now arrived at the Caſtle of Puſſendorf, about Five Leagues diſtant from Vienna, where they were ordered to remain, until the Plenipotentiaries from Poland and Venice ſhould meet at Vienna, furniſhed with Commiſſions and Inſtructions from their reſpective Powers in order to a Treaty.

And that this pretence might appear more plauſible, the Grand Seignior paſſed to Adrianople; from whence he diſpatched very urgent and poſitive Orders to Tegben Paſha, that he ſhould forward an Expreſs to the Ambaſſadors, to preſs with all earneſtneſs the Concluſion of a Peace, as the ſole means remaining to ſave the Ottoman Empire; which in caſe he could not effect, he was then to take care that the Frontiers might be defended.

Yeghen Paſha commits great Spoils.

Tegben taking this Meſſage and Commiſſion as an Evidence of the Grand Seignior's Favour, and Re-eſtabliſhment into his Grace, he readily applied himſelf to an undertaking, which in appearance might look like Obedience to Command; and tho' he knew it was not poſſible to withſtand the Power and Progreſs of the Imperial Arms, animated with ſo many Victories; yet conſidering himſelf ſtrong enough to do miſchief, and ſpoil, and pillage, he marched from Niſſa towards Dobravitz, where he committed all the Outrages imaginable on the miſerable Inhabitants of that place; giving liberty to a licentious Soldiery to deſtroy an Ancient Monaſtery of Greeks, to which many poor Chriſtians being fled for Sanctuary, they ſtained the Pavements with the Blood of a thouſand perſons; carrying away the Old Monks, Women, and Children into diſtreſſed Captivity. 1688.

Tekeli alſo being re-inforced with a party of Turks, and Tartars, committed great Spoyls on the Confines of Valachia, and Tranſilvania; but ſoon was forced to retire, upon the News that the Raſcians with a Body of Four thouſand men were marching againſt them: And thus laying aſide much of his confidence in Arms, he reſolved to try what effect his perſuaſions might have with his Tranſilvanian Friends, and thoſe of his Faction, inviting them to caſt off the Yoke of Germany from their Necks, and reaſſume their Ancient Liberties; and to that end he wrote this following Letter.

Ad Capitaneos, Directores, & Magiſtratus Inclyti Regni Tranſilvaniæ.

Omnia bona det Deus Regno Tranſilvaniæ, vigile Ingenium & oculos Incolis ejus opto. Nolim Ingratitudinem veſtram quâ Cæſaream amplexi fuiſtis protectionem reſpicere; imò potius certiores vos facere, & commune facere velim vehementer volens Regnum Tranſilvaniæ, in tantis afflictionibus, & exactionibus verſari. Non dubito quin ſatis perſpexeritis, hucuſque iniquas Germanorum Machinationes. Volunt ſe in regnum intrudere, ut vos ex regno expellant: Vos peribitis, illi manebunt; Pellite itaq; & corrigite cæcitatem veſtram: Ad Arma currite omnes Nobiles, Libertini & Subditi; pro felici Patria certate, certe vos libertatem conſecuturos, quam turpiter perdidiſtis ad Comam uſque: Niſi omnes audacter inſurrexeritis, peribitis vos, & filii veſtri, & Nobiliſſimum Regnum in manibus barbarorum manebit. Valete, et vigiliate vobis, & Patriæ veſtræ. Datas trans Danubium proximè ad Tranſalpinas.

And to leave no Stone unturned, he ſollicited the Ottoman Port for new Succours, promiſing mighty Succeſſes in caſe the Tartars would invade Tranſilvania; the which accordingly was deſigned, and had taken effect, had not the Coſacks made an unexpected Irruption into Tartary, and thereby obliged thoſe Barbarians to quit their deſign, that they might attend to the ſafeguard of their own Country.

All places in Boſnia being now ſubdued, and brought under the power of the Emperor (Bertzka only excepted) ſituate on the Save; Prince Lewis after he had fortified Proot, and Gradiſca, marched againſt it, being a place of ſuch importance as ſecured all the River from thence to Belgrade. The Turks having advice of the approach of

1688. of Prince Lewis, with Terror and terrible Conſternation abandoned that vaſt City, pleaſant for its Situation in a delicious Country, abounding with all ſorts of Proviſions and Fruits, both for the ſuſtenance and delight of the Inhabitants; into this Commodious Dwelling made void by the flight of the Turks, a Garriſon of Two thouſand Germans was lodged, which ſerved them for Winter-Quarters, wherein to refreſh themſelves after all the fatigues, dangers, and tedious Marches of the paſſed Campaigne; and to ſecure this City ſo plentiful of all ſorts of Proviſions, a regular Fortification was Erected on the riſing of a Hill, which ſerved to cover, and very much to ſtrengthen the City. Now in regard Advices were brought to Bertzka, that the Paſha of Boſnia was making Levies of men, and recruiting his Forces in the Neighbouring parts; General Piccolomini was diſpatched to Vienna, to render an Account of the State of that Country, and to preſs for Forces immediately to be diſpeeded for ſecurity thereof; it being a Province inhabited by many Chriſtians, who with encouragement and protection would be ready to ſubmit and do Homage to the Emperor.

Piccolomini diſpatched to Vienna.

Piccolomini ſo well Negotiated his Affairs at Vienna, that he ſoon procured Orders directed to the General at Belgrade to reinforce Prince Lewis with a conſiderable Body of men.

But becauſe the French were now in motion, and had already entred Germany with a formidable Army; to oppoſe which, there was need of the Counſel and Direction of the beſt and moſt Experienced Captains, who had lately with ſuch auſpicious Fortune conducted the Imperial Forces againſt the Turks; it was reſolved to recall Prince Lewis of Baden to Vienna; and to commit the Charge of Boſnia to the Courage and Conduct of Piccolomini. 1688.

P. Lewis recalled to Vienna.

So ſoon as Piccolomini was returned to Gradiſca, Prince Lewis took Poſt for Vienna, having ſome few days before his departure, taken poſſeſſion of Oliva, and Sbornich, or Swornich, a City and Caſtle of conſiderable importance; of the latter of which, the Charge was committed to Major Thomas Stracharta, a Scotch Gentleman, who bravely maintained it againſt Two Aſſaults of the Turks: Theſe places were ſituate on the River Drine.

1688. After which this Valiant Prince departed, leaving moſt manifeſt Evidences and Proofs behind him of his Courage aſſiſted with Fortune; for that in the ſpace of about Nine Weeks, he had ſubdued all the Province of Boſnia, defeated the Paſha with double Numbers, taken Praot, Gradiſca, Bertzka, and divers Caſtles, with no more than Eight thouſand Germans, Hungarians, and Croatians.

Tho' it was now time to end this Campaigne, yet ſtill the Blocades of Sigeth, Caniſa, and Grand-Waradin were continued; the Defendants, tho' reduced very low, remained howſoever very obſtinate and reſolute to maintain the Garriſons to the laſt extremity, in hopes rather that their Ambaſſadors would ſucceed in the Concluſion of a Peace, than in any apparent probability there was of reſcuing themſelves by their own force, or other expected Succours. And indeed the Turks might then on very good Grounds have hoped for a peace, ſince that they readily offered to have quitted all pretenſions to the Conquered places, and ſuffered the Emperor to remain in quiet poſſeſſion of all whereof he had made himſelf Maſter; which had been a vaſt advantage to the Empire at that time, when the French were entered into Germany with a formidable Army, burning, laying waſte, and deſtroying all the Palatinate; threatning War on the Empire, which continued for ſeveral Years with ſuch fury, that had not King William of England, joyned with Spain, Holland, and ſome of the Princes of Germany oppoſed this terrible Foe, all the Empire and other Countries had ſunk under the weight of the Arms of France. But God knows by what Fate the Emperor refuſed to hearken to thoſe fair Propoſitions of Peace; which that they might not be urged or preſſed on his Counſellors, the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors were committed Priſoners to the Caſtle of Puffendorf, where they paſſed ſome Years under a tedious reſtraint and loſs of Liberty, contrary to the Law of Nations: And tho' the Turks may be much blamed for this kind of Violation of the Law of Nations, and diſreſpect to the perſons of Ambaſſadors, which in all Countries have been eſteemed ſacred, yet it is a new thing to be ſo practiſed by Chriſtian Princes, eſpecially by the Auſtrian Family, which is Renowned over all the World for their Piety, Juſtice, and Clemency. As there was at that time no Reaſon or Senſe for not cloſing with the 1688.

The Turks deſire Peace.

The Empe*ror unhappily refuſes it.*

The Turk*iſh Ambaſſadors in Priſon.*

Turks

1688. Turks in a Peace, ſo afterwards the Folly and Misfortune was ſo apparent, that the Court of Vienna hath often lamented the unhappy Conſequences of that evil Counſel, which the Miniſters of State to throw off from themſelves have caſt on the prevailing Faction of the Jeſuits, and Clergy, which have ever carried a great ſway in that Counſel.

1688. And thus having by God's Aſſiſtance finiſhed the Wars in Hungary by a full and ample Relation of all that paſſed in that miſerable Country during the Courſe of the laſt Year of 1688. Let us now proceed to the Martial Actions, which paſſed in the ſame Year between the Venetians and the Turks.

THE

THE Venetian Succeſſes
In Their WAR againſt the
TURKS,
In the Year 1688.

1688.

THE Doge of Venice Dying about the End of the laſt Year, the Senate knew not any Subject on whom they could more worthily confer that Dignity, than on the Captain-General Franciſco Moroſini, a Perſon not only of an ancient Patritian Family, but one who had ſignalized himſelf both in Peace and War, and Sacrificed all his Time and Intereſt to the Service of the Republick.

Had he not merited more than by his great Atchievements in this preſent War, the Ducal Dignity could not have been beſtowed on any more deſerving than himſelf, of which the Senate was ſo ſenſible; that tho' it was a new thing to Elect a Doge who was abſent, which ſome, envious of his Vertues, and growing Greatneſs, did object; yet the Majority of Voices carried the Election, and accordingly the Ducal Bonnet was, by order, ſent to Moroſini, by the Secretary Zuccato, who found his Serenity aboard the Admiral Gally in Porto Poro, a Port in the Morea; where he offer'd in the Name of the Senate, expreſſed in a moſt Eloquent Oration, the Enſigns of the Principality; all the other Ceremonies being ſolemnly perform'd at Venice.

F. Moroſini Elected Doge.

Before this Happy Inauguration, the Peſtilence had greatly infeſted the Venetian Armata; but by God's Bleſſing, it was now ceaſed, and Prattick given at Venice to thoſe who came from thence; for which the Doge having returned Thanks in a devout manner to Almighty God, aboard the Fleet, he began to entertain thoughts of undertaking ſome Enterprize worthy his new Dignity, and which might ſerve for a Fortunate Omen of what was to ſucceed in all the Progreſs of his Auſpicious Government, which at the beginning looked fair, and proſperous in all the Circumſtances thereof.

For from Candia Advices were brought to the Armata, of great Revolutions, and Mutinies in Candia, which ended with the Death and Deſtruction of that Vizier, and the principal Paſha's and Bey's of that place: In Canea the Diſorders were not leſs, the Souldiery following the Example of thoſe Seditions, and Tragedies acted at Conſtantinople, would govern themſelves; and whilſt they knew not what Government to ſet up, there was a Rumour amongſt them amidſt their Confuſion, That they would deliver up thoſe Places into the Hands of the Venetians; but their Army being at ſome diſtance, and not near enough to meet the heat of this Popular Inſurrection, theſe Hopes vaniſhed, the Turks returning to more ſober, and cooler Counſels.

1688.

Troubles amongſt the Turks in Candia.

The Captain Paſha was now ready to come forth with the Ottoman Fleet, which conſiſted of ſo few Gallies, as were in no condition to deal with the Naval Forces of the Venetians, and yet were of ſome uſe for Tranſporting Soldiers and Relief to Negropont, or other Parts, according to the Motion of the Enemy.

The Turkiſh Fleet very weak.

But the Venetian Armata increaſed daily by the Union of ſeveral Convoys dis-ſpeeded to joyn with the main Body under Command of the Doge.

The firſt Convoy was compoſed of ſeveral Ships, Marſilians, and light Gallies, under the Command of his Excellency Piſani, with whom alſo two Noble Venetians called Lorenzo Donato, and Girolamo Grimani, were Embarked, appointed by the Senate to aſſiſt as Counſellors unto his Serene Highneſs the Doge; whom four other Noble Venetians accompanied to ſupply Places, and Offices of Truſt, as occaſions ſhould offer.

The Venetian Armata joyned.

On another Convoy the firſt Regiment of Wirtemberg, and the Prince himſelf, who Commanded them, was Embarked with ſeveral Nobles, and Gentlemen of that Nation, all of them Brave and Experienced Soldiers, attended with many Ships, and Veſ-1688. ſels laden with Ammunition, Proviſions, and all ſorts of Inſtruments and Utenſils for War. And with them alſo were diſpatched the Syndicks and Officers for better government of the Morea.

A third Convoy was alſo prepared, and diſpatched with the Second Regiment of Wirtemberg, under the Command and Conduct of the Prince Landgrave of Armſtadt, and whilſt theſe Forces were on their Voyage towards Porto Poro, there to joyn with the main Body of the Venetian Fleet, in order to ſome great Enterprize, his Excellency Cornaro Proveditor-General in Dalmatia, was giving all the Aſſiſtance he was able, to the Chriſtians of that Country; who upon the Rumour of the Misfortunes of the Turks, had taken Arms to recover their Freedom.

Cornaro in Dalmatia.

The Commander in Chief of the Turks in thoſe Countries, was called Solyman Paſha, who by ill Succeſſes having lately been droven into the Caſtle of Podgorizza, which he had plentifully provided with all ſorts of Proviſions and Ammunition, he gathered unto him all the Soldiers that were in Scutari, Antivari, Dolcigno, Aleſſio, Drino, Croia, Durazzo, Ofrida, and Terra Nova; with which, and with the Auxiliaries of 4000 Turks joyned thereunto by Verlaz Paſha Sangiack of Valona, he had formed an Army of 10000 Fighting Men, with which he reſolved according to Commands received from the Port, to deſtroy the Cutzi, Montegrini, and Nixichi, Inhabitants of the Mountains, who having caſt off the Mahometan Yoak, had devoted themſelves to the Venetian Republick.

Solyman Paſha troubles the Chriſtians

At the firſt beginning Solyman Paſha ſent kind Meſſages to them, Exhorting, and Inviting them to return to their former Obedience; but they truſting to their ſtrong Holds in the Mountains, and to the Aſſurances given by the Proveditor-General Cornaro, to relieve and ſuccour them on all Occaſions, they rejected all the fair Words and Propoſitions made to them by the Turks.

Whereupon Solyman Paſha Detached about 3000 Men under the Command of Ahmethis Kaja, or Deputy, to fall upon their Rear in the Mountains; but the Cutzi ſo bravely received their Attack, and with ſuch Conſtancy, that after a Bloody Fight, which continued for ſeveral Hours, the Kaja was totally Routed, and Defeated, and forced to betake himſelf to a ſhameful Flight: Whilſt on the other ſide Solyman Paſha Burned ſome Villages, and cut up the Vines, and ruined the Vineyards of the Cutzi; who thereupon were ſo highly Enraged, that purſuing their late Victory with Courage and Indignation, they fell upon the Paſha, and forced him to take Refuge in his Caſtle of Podgorizza.

His Kaja beaten by the Cutzi.

1688.

The News hereof being brought to the Proveditor-General, he dis-ſpeeded Orders to the Cavalier John Antonio Polizza, that with the Borderers on the Channel of Cattaro, and to the Super-Intendent Perini, that with a Battalion of Italians, and 600 of thoſe called Oltramarini, who are Albaneſes, and other People living on the Coaſts of Friuli and Dalmatia; they ſhould march to the Succour and Aſſiſtance of the Cutzi: And in the mean time to give the Turks an Alarm in divers Places, ſome Gallies and Galeaſſes were commanded to paſs along the Coaſt of Albania, under the Conduct of that Noble Venetian called Franciſco Grimani, Nephew to Cornaro: This Appearance on the Coaſt, ſometimes at St. John de Medua, then again near Dolcigno, and ſoon afterwards on the Shoar of Bolaria, and Antivari, the Turks were ſo confounded thereby, that they knew not where to apply themſelves; until at length ſome Venetians Landing near Antivati, were Attacked by one Ahmet Aga, the Son of the Governour of that place, whom they repulſed with much Vigour, and killed Ahmet upon the Place; and ſtranded a Brigantine belonging to Caſtel Nuovo on the Shoar.

Succours ſent to the Cutzi.

But the grand Deſign and Enterprize of this Year, being the Siege of Negropont, the whole Venetian Fleet with the Gallies of the Pope, and Malta, having made their general Rendezvous in Porto Poro, on the 19th of June, Old Stile, weighed Anchor, directing their Courſe towards the Archipelago. The Fleet was divided into three Squadrons; one Commanded by his Excellency Veniero, Captain Extraordinary of the Ships; another Squadron conſiſted of Gallies, under Command of the Governour of the Condannata, or of ſuch who are Condemned to the Oar, whoſe Poſt was to keep to Windward of the Fleet. The third Squadron was Commanded by the Doge himſelf, who with the remaining part of the Galleaſſes, Gallies, Galleots and Ships, were to take their Station to Lee-ward; beſides which, a Squadron of Ships with 13 Chriſtian Corſairs, making in all 26 Sail, were diſpatched before with Orders to advance as far as the Dardanelli, and give a ſtop to the Captain Paſha; who upon the News of this powerful Fleet, durſt not adventure Abroad, but kept within the Reach and Covert of the Caſtles: For indeed the Turkiſh Fleet, which for many Years paſt had not been of equal force to engage the Venetians, was this Year alſo much weakened by the want of Eight Gallies, which the Captain Paſha had diſpatched to the Black Sea for relief of their Saicks againſt the Coſſacks, who much

Part of the Venetian Fleet ſent to the Dardanelli.

They ſtop the Captain Paſha from coming out.

infeſted that Coaſt, and for want of forty Galleots, which were remaining on the Stocks in the Arſenal at Conſtantinople, having neither Slaves for the Oar, nor Soldiers for Fight and Defence, nor Seamen to Sail and direct them. Nor was the Captain Paſha of ſufficient force to give Convoy to the Fleet expected from Egypt, conſiſting of nine great Soltanaes, and diverſe Saicks laden with Ammunition and Proviſions, of which, tho' the Grand Seignior had great want, and had diſpatched divers Commands unto Alexandria, to haſten their Voyage; yet the fear they had of being intercepted by the Venetians, was a ſufficient Defence for them againſt the reiterated Commands of the Port.

This Squadron of Ships coming to Anchor before the Mouth of the Dardanelli, kept the Turkiſh Fleet within the Caſtles, whilſt the Doge advanced with the main Fleet towards the Iſland of Negropont, in the Form and Manner before deſcribed.

The Deſcription of the City of Negropont.

The Iſland of Negropont is the moſt conſiderable of all the Iſles in the Archipelago; the ancient Name of it amongſt the Greeks and Latines was Eubœa; it had alſo other Names, as Macris from the narrowneſs of the Channel which paſſes between the Iſland, and the Main Land; Abantias and the People Abantiades; the chief Town was Chalcis, now named after the Denomination of the Country; Pliny calls the Iſland Aſopis, and Strabo Ocha; it had alſo the Name of Ellopia, from Ellope the Son of Jupiter. This Iſland, as believed, was once joined to the Main Land, but ſeparated from thence by ſome Earthquake, and now adjoyned by a Bridge; it is 365 Italian Miles in compaſs, 90 Miles in length, and 40 in breadth. The City of Negropont anciently Chalcis, is ſituated on the Euripus, which is a narrow Channel, that in a wonderful manner Ebbs and Flows ſeven times in 24 Hours: The Walls of the City are about two Miles in compaſs, but the Suburbs are much larger, and more Populous, by reaſon of the many Greeks and Jews which Inhabit therein. The Captain Paſha is the Chief Commander thereof; but commonly governs by his Deputy: There is a Bey alſo belonging to it, a Man of great Power, by reaſon that he draws from thence a Yearly Revenue for Maintenance of a Gally.

Negropont when taken by the Turks.

This Iſland of Negropont formerly belonged to the Venetians, and to this Day the Arms of St. Mark remain over one of the Gates of the City; when Pietro Zani was Doge, it was given by the Emperour of Conſtantinople to the Venetians in recompence and reward of ſome good Services performed by that Republick towards him; or rather becauſe he could not defend it, he gave it over into the Hands of a good Ally.

But in the Year 1469, Sultan Mahomet being deſirous to joyn that Pleaſant Iſle to his other Conqueſts, endeavoured to make a Bridge for the more eaſie Tranſportation of his Troops into the Land; but being repulſed by the Inhabitants, and the Bridge overthrown, the Turks were forced to betake themſelves unto their Boats, and Veſſels: Howſoever in leſs than a Month afterwards, the Turks returned before the Place with 300 Sail, and then having formed the Bridge, as was intended, Mahomet himſelf came with an Army of 120000 Men, and Attacked the City, which was Fortified after the manner of thoſe Times, and defended by a Garriſon of 24000 Men, under the Command of Giovanni Bondulmiero, Ludovico Calvo, and Paolo Erizzo.

The Turks raiſed ſeveral Batteries in different Places againſt it, by which they made ſuch large Breaches, that they made four terrible Aſſaults thereon, in which above 40000 Turks were Slain, and the Enemies bravely repulſed, but at length being overwhelmed with Numbers, and tired with a long Siege, the Guards which defended the Porta Bureliana, conveyed themſelves ſecretly away, and abandoning their Poſt, they entered the Gate without much oppoſition, killing all the People who paſſed the Age of 20 Years. Calvo was killed on the Place, and Bondulmiero in his Houſe: Erizzo having Intrenched himſelf in ſome faſt place, defended himſelf Valiantly, and at length ſurrendred on Conditions of Life; but the Turks maintained them not, but cauſed him to be Sawn in two: His Fair Daughter choſe rather to die by her own Dagger, than to give up her Chaſtity to the Luſt of the Turks.

Preparations in order to the Siege of Negropont.

The Turks having remained Maſters of this City ever ſince the Year 1469; it came at length to be Attacked in hopes of Recovery in this Year 1688; in order unto which, the Captain Extraordinary Veniero, was appointed with nine Ships belonging to the Republick, a Fire-ſhip, and a Palandra to guard the Channel of Negropont, and to hinder the Turks from bringing Succours to the City; to which alſo ſeven Gallies were added under Proveditor Piſani. At the ſame time alſo, ſeveral light Gallies were ordered to ſcower the Channel of Volo, and hinder all Succours from paſſing on that ſide.

The Venetian Fleet ſails towards Negropont.

All the Land Forces being Embarked upon the Ships, Gallies, Galleaſſes, Galleots, Palandras, and other Veſſels; the Venetian Fleet weighed Anchor on the 7th of July from Porto Poro, and Sailed with a fair Wind, directing their Courſe towards the Iſland of Negropont; but by what Misfortune not known, a great Ship called the Smyrna Merchant, ran upon a Rock, which being high, and eaſily ſeen, it was ſuſpected, to have been done on purpoſe by Treachery of the Captain; the which unhappy Accident gave ſome ſtop to the proceeding of the Fleet, in hopes to ſave moſt of the Rigging, and Materials thereunto belonging: But in fine a Gale of Wind ſpringing up, the Ship was broken in pieces, and no more ſaved than only the Men and eight Pieces of Cannon of the 50 with which ſhe was mounted, beſides ſome Bombs, and other Materials for War. This Accident hindered ſomething of the Proceedings of the Fleet, which received yet a greater Impediment from the Northern Winds, which at this Seaſon of the Year ſo conſtantly reign in thoſe Seas, as if they were Trade-Winds: Howſoever when the Gale abated, as it doth commonly towards Night, the Gallies made uſe of their Oars to row to Windward as high as Cape Colonna, where afterwards the Ships joyned them: And taking the Calm of the Night, the Gallies by force of their Oars towed up the Ships, and on the 11th of July they entered the Channel of Negropont; and on the 13th came to an Anchor in the Road, called the Gardens, about ſix Miles diſtant from the Capital City of Negropont.

Some of the Forces landed on Negropont.

Here it was that all the Soldiers, Horſe and Foot which were Embark'd on the Galleaſſes, Gallies, and Galleots, making a Body of about 8000 Foot, and 500 Horſe, Landed without the leaſt oppoſition; having only ſeen a Party of about 50 Turks on Horſeback who preſented themſelves in view, to take cognizance of the Motion of their Enemies, amongſt which Muſtapha Paſha Commander of the Town was there in Perſon. So ſoon as the Out-guards of the Turks poſted on a Tower erected on a Neck of Land which ſtretched out to the Euripus, eſpy'd the Troops which were diſembarking, they diſcharged ſome Guns, to give an Alarm to the Town, and immediately quitted the place, as being not tenible; into which ſome Soldiers were entered from the Ducal Gally, being an advantageous Poſt, wherein were found four Iron Guns, and ſome ſmall Proviſions.

Turkiſh Strength in Negropont.

The Day that theſe Forces were Landed, ſome Greeks of the Country, together with the Captain of a French Tartana came, and gave Intelligence, that the whole force of the Iſland conſiſted of about 6000 Men, with Janizaries and Spahees; but that they did not truſt much to the Faith of the Inhabitants, whom they had lately diſoblig'd by taking from them the beſt of their Goods and Furniture for their Houſes: That the Walls of the City were lined with Earth, and fortified on all ſides with Baſtions, well provided with Cannon: That all the Gates, and Entrances to the City were Mined; and that the Suburbs were ſurrounded with a deep Ditch and Palliſadoes: Beſides which, that there were ſome Out-works lately finiſhed, all provided well with Water, and Proviſions neceſſary for a long Defence. That there were two Governours in chief, one called Muſtapha Paſha, a Man of great Reputation, who Commanded the Mount, on which a Battery was erected towards the Sea: The other was Ibrahim Paſha, who defended the Outworks of the City, both Men of Reſolution; beſides theſe, who defended the Town, in which the Garriſon was very ſtrong, the Seraskier lay Encamped with 4000 Men, moſt Horſe, not far from Negropont.

The Doge, and General Officers, take a view of the Country.

On the 14th of this Month his Serenity the Doge, accompanied with General Koniſmark, and the Engenier Verneda, attended with many Barges and Felucaes, went to take a Survey of the Country, of the Situation of the City, and the Forts, and Batteries, which tho' more in number, and furniſhed with Cannon beyond expectation, did not yet abate the Courage of theſe Aſſailants. All things being well obſerved by theſe Generals, they diſcovered how the Turks had on the left Hand of the Bridge raiſed a Battery with Earth, and planted many Pieces of Cannon thereon, and pitched their Tents along the ſide of the Aqueducts: And on the left Hand had formed a Line of Communication between the Suburbs and the Hill which commands the Sea, from whence they could offend the Gallies with their Shot, and the Venetian Tents; beſides which, they diſcovered divers other Trenches in different Forms, ſtrengthned with Palliſadoes, with a deep Ditch full of Sea-Water, 30 Paces long, reaching to the Gate of the City, covered by a Hornwork: And below the Mills another Battery was raiſed of three Pieces of great Cannon, which commanded the Shoar along the Sea-ſide; all which Forts were defended by ſome Chriſtians more or leſs in every Work, moſt of them of the French Nation, who were skilful in throwing Bombs, and all ſorts of Fireworks.

The Chriſtian Troops advance.

Thus the Doge, and his Generals, having taken a full Survey of the ſeveral Fortifications of the City, and the Situation of the Country, on the 15th of the Month, was the Day appointed for the March of the Army towards a riſing Hill oppoſite to another which covers the City: And at the ſame time the Gallies, and Galleaſſes advanced by force of their Oars, againſt the Northern Winds, which continually blow at that Seaſon, and came to an Anchor under 1688. July.

der that riſing Hill, which is near to a Wood, from whence they could ſee the new Fort of Karababa, or Black Father. An in regard the Ships could not enter into the Channel of Negropont, by reaſon of contrary Winds, the Doge diſpatched away the Captain of the Gulf, with 10 Gallies to take out the Soldiers, and Tranſport them aſhoar to joyn with the reſt of the Army: And for more expedition in this Work, the Proveditor Piſani, who Commanded the Gallies which are Manned with ſuch as are Condemned to the Oar, being returned with the nine Ships, of which we have given an Account, to have been ordered to the Dardanelli; and by reaſon of contrary Winds, were put into the Port of Andro, was alſo commanded to give his Aſſiſtance, for landing Soldiers, Horſe, and all the Inſtruments, and Neceſſaries for War.

The General of Malta receives Audience of the Doge.

Whilſt theſe things were preparing for the Siege, the Baly Spinelli, a Neapolitan Cavalier, General of the Gallies of Malta, demanded Audience of the Doge, to paſs his Complement of Congratulation upon his Advancement to the Ducal Throne, the which being granted, the General appeared with a great Attendance, followed by many Boats, Barges, and Felucaes; ſo ſoon as he was aſcended into the Ducal Gally, which was adorned with Flags and Streamers from Stem to Stern, he was ſaluted with four great Guns, and at the Stairs was met and conducted by Lieutenant General Piſani, to the Stern of the Gally, where his Serenity was ſeated on his Throne, having on his Head his Ducal Bonnet, and wearing the Senatorian Gown after the ancient Roman Faſhion; before him ſtood the four Admirals of the Seas.

The General of Malta being entered into the Preſence, the Doge aroſe from his Throne, and received him ſtanding. The General with eight other Knights, Captains of the Gallies, and his Comrades, made a moſt profound Reverence at their Entrance, and having delivered the Letter to the Doge, from the Grand Maſter of Malta, full of kind and amicable Expreſſions, all there preſent ſtood Bare-headed whilſt it was reading: After which the General was cauſed to ſit down on a Seat placed on the right Hand of the Doge, and four of the Knights on a Bench on the left Hand, the other four remaining without, ſeated alſo on Banks, the Antiport of the Cabin being drawn up, the Slaves at the Oar were cloathed in White, and the Soldiers clad with divers Colours, armed with Half-Pikes, Muskets, and Swords, each bearing a Burgurdian on his Head, which being to the Number of 500 Men, appeared very pleaſant to the Eye.

1688. July. A Skirmiſh between the Turks and Venetians

This Complement was no ſooner paſſed, than News was brought, That a Skirmiſh had happened between the Voluntier Adventurers and the Turks; but the firſt being reinforced by the Marquis Corloni, with ſome of his Dragoons, and Soldiers of the Greek Nation, the Fight became very warm, but the Turks were at length forced to retire with conſiderable Loſs; tho' this Succeſs coſt the Life of Colonel Paul Macri, being ſhot in the Head, who for his Bravery and Deſerts having obtained the Honour of Knighthood, was much deplored and lamented by the whole Army.

By this time the Ships under Veniero, and the main Body of the whole Armata were come about, and had doubled the Point of Karababa, from whence they received many Shot, but without any damage; ſo that the Ships and Gallies having taken the ſeveral Poſts aſſigned to them, and alſo four of the Duke of Tuſcany's Ships laden with Warlike Proviſions, and 400 Land Soldiers, being come and joyned to thoſe other Forces belonging to the Great Duke's Gallies, compoſed a Body of 800 Men; all which being arrived and united to the Fleet and Army, the Doge prepared every thing ready in order to a formal Siege. The General of the Great Duke's Forces was Named Chigi, who having made a Viſit to his Serene Highneſs the Doge, the ſame Ceremonies paſſed, as were ſhown towards the General of Malta.

The Town Inveſted.

Eighteen Days after the Forces were Landed, all the Approaches were finiſhed in ſight of the Town; during which Time the Turks made not the leaſt Sally to hinder, or diſturb the Works, nor did the Venetians fire a Gun againſt the Turks, who greatly wondered at ſo long ſilence, as if on both ſides a Ceſſation of Arms had been agreed; and all remained quiet, until the 30th of July, when the Cannon began inceſſantly to play about Break of Day in the Morning from the Venetian Batteries, with Showers of Bombs and Carcaſſes, which being thrown into the Town and Outwarks of the Enemy, filled the City with Terrour and Conſternation, eſpecially the Women, whoſe Cries and Schreeks were heard into the Venetian Camp.

August.

The firſt of Auguſt a Reſolution was taken to Attack a certain Fort called Loppo, ſituate on a little Hill, but upon diſcovery that the place was Undermined, the Deſign was altered, and Orders given to Bomb the Place with a Palandra, a Veſſel made for that purpoſe, which ruined ſome of the Turks Trenches; howſoever this Attempt coſt the Life of two Mariners, and the Loſs of the Captain's Arm, who commanded the Palandra.

After which the Venetians advanced under the Mills ſecuring their Poſts with Earth and Baskets; and the Malteſes and Florentines endamaged the Enemy very much, by the Bombs and Carcaſſes which they threw into a ſmall Fort on the Eaſt-ſide, and thereby it was, as it were, totally deſtroyed and levelled. And as the Venetians were diligent in their Approaches, ſo the Turks were not leſs active to give them a Repulſe, and to make frequent Sallies as they did one upon the Malteſes, of whom they kill'd and wounded about 40, and afterwards retreated, but not without ſome loſs both of Men and Horſe. In the mean time the Cannons play'd continually from the Batteries, and Bombs thrown into the Town, one of which falling into the Houſe of the Paſha, ſo affrighted the Women and Children, that with Schreeks and Cries caſting themſelves at the Feet of the Paſha, begged and beſeeched him to ſurrender up the Town into the Hands of the Enemy upon Terms of Capitulation; but the Paſha inflexible, and refuſing to hearken unto ſuch Intreaties, reſolved to maintain it to the laſt Extremity: To which End many Retrenchments were made within the Walls, and Caverns digged under Ground, to ſecure the People, and Goods, and Soldiers which were not on the Guard, from the Deſolation made by the Bombs.

The Seraskier at Petra.

During all this time the Seraskier, with a Body of about 4000 Men, remained at a Place called Petra in Livadia, about ſix Miles diſtant from Negropont, with deſign not to adventure his Men, until ſome unavoidable Neceſſity happened, or the City was reduced to its laſt Agony; which as yet was not ſo far ſtreightned, but that there remained ſome hopes that it would be able to relieve it ſelf; it being eſteemed better Service to keep the Paſſes free, and an open Commerce with the Town, than to hazard an Engagement with the Enemy, with ſo unequal a Force, which being overthrown, would prove a certain forerunner of the Loſs of the City.

The Venetian Camp waſted with Sickneſs.

Negropont a Fruitful Country.

The Temper of the Inhabitants.

The Venetians finding it more eaſie to proceed on the Attack of the Town, than to loſe time in taking the Fort of Carababa, they raiſed a new Battery upon a ſmall Rock, at the Entrance of the Port under Command of the Captain of the Gulf, which he effected with his own, and the help of another Galley. But what moſt incommoded the Venetian Camp, was the exceſſive Heats; for tho' the Winds were Northerly, as they commonly are in thoſe Seas; yet paſſing over the Land, they contracted ſuch Heat, and carried with them ſuch a kind of Noxious, and Sulphureous Vapour, as produced Malignant Fevers amongſt the Soldiers, and Officers, that many of them Died, and the Camp became enfeebled, and much weakened; amongſt which was General Koniſmark; who being forced to leave the Camp, to go Aboard his Ship in order to his Cure, his Command was committed to the Charge of Major General Horn of Brunſwick. The Sickneſs ſtill ſpreading with Fevers and Tertian Agues, a Sergeant General of Battallia, Pietro Gaſpari, and Colonel of the Switzers, died thereof; and the Count Palatine Landgrave of Heſſe, reduced to the laſt Extremity; ſo that many Deſigns were neglected, which might have gained the City, and all the Enterpriſes of the Army became faint and languiſhing. Beſides Health there was nothing that wanted; the Iſland it ſelf being very fruitful, abounded with Wines, and all ſorts of Victuals, and Proviſions for the Suſtenance of Humane Life, and were it not for the Depredations made thereon by Pirates, it would be one of the moſt happy Countries of the World: The Inhabitants thereof being of an Open, Free, and Chearful Nature, of a Sanguine Complexion, and Merry like the other Greeks, without much Thought, or Care, which renders commonly the Lives of Men very uneaſie to themſelves and others; and tho' the Country abounded with all things, yet the Neighbouring Iſlands brought over their Cattle and Fruits thither; which finding a ready Market, cauſed as great Plenty, and abundance of all things, as could be deſired.

On the 10th of Auguſt the Turks made a Sally into the Venetian Trenches, whence happened a Skirmiſh, but without much damage, or hurt on either ſide; nor had the Enemies Cannon done any great Execution as yet on the Chriſtian Camp; which, on the 11th of Auguſt had perfected all their Batteries. And to ſpare the Labour of the Soldiers, who had already ſuffered much in opening Trenches, and raiſing Batteries, and Fighting; Orders were given to Seignior Delfino Proveditor of the Camp, to gather what Greeks he could to ſerve for Pioneers, and that every Gally, and Galleaſs ſhould prepare 500 Faggots, with ſome Palliſadoes, which was readily effected.

The Turks ſhow themſelves.

And now about the 13th of this Month, the Enemy began to ſhow themſelves Evening and Morning near the Venetian Trenches, but attempted nothing, with deſign as was imagined, to draw their Enemies into a place which they had Undermined; ſo that for three or four Days nothing happened of any thing conſiderable, unleſs it were the burſting of a Cannon, which battered the Palliſadoes of the Enemy, by which the chief Gunner was killed, and five others were wounded; and another Cannon diſmounted by a Shot from the Enemy upon the Wheel of the Carriage.

August. The Turks Attack the Malteſes.

But on the 16th about Sun-ſet, the Turks Attacked the Trenches of the Malteſes, where a very hot Skirmiſh began, which continued for the ſpace of an Hour, until Night coming on, the Turks retired with conſiderable Loſs, and of the Malteſes about 15 were killed, and about 20 wounded: Upon which the Malteſes advanced and enlarged their Works, and whilſt they were Fighting on that ſide, a Detachment of 3000 Men Attacked a Fort near the Mills about a Piſtol-ſhot from the Enemies Palliſadoes, of which after ſome reſiſtance, they rendered themſelves Maſters with the Death of above 100 Turks, and ſome wounded.

A Fort near the Mills taken.

The loſs of this place being of great importance to the Turks, by Break of Day in the Morning on the 17th, they fell upon it with great Numbers to recover it, and ſurprized the Florentines and the Regiment of Atti, which were the Guard placed there to defend it; which being Sleeping, or found in a negligent Poſture, the Turks returned with 150 Heads, amongſt which were ſeveral Cavaliers of Florence, and three Captains of the Regiment, and the reſt quitted the Fort and fled, amongſt which were above 100 wounded; which Action coſt the Turks very little.

The Turks recover it.

The Doge reſolves to Attack the Turks in their Trenches.

The Doge being highly enraged at this ill Succeſs, and deſirous of Revenge, reſolved to Attack the Enemies Trenches; which tho' eſteemed by a Counſel of War, to be a hazardous Enterprize, which tho' it ſhould ſucceed, would coſt much Blood; yet the Doge nothing moved, continued his Reſolution to put the Attempt in execution on the 20th of Auguſt, being well aſſured, that nothing could be effected on the Town unleſs firſt they could poſſeſs, and make themſelves Maſters of the Enemies Trenches. In order unto which on the 17th the Doge, with the chief Sea-Officers, came aſhoar to take a View, and Survey the Enemies Trenches, the which extended almoſt three Miles from the Hill to the Sea, the Soldiers therein lodged ſecurely, as if they had been Buried; they were very ſpacious and deep, ſo that 50 could march a Breaſt, ſecured by vaſt Oaken Beams, over which were Sacks of Cotton artificially laid, and the void places filled up with Earth; and what damage was done hereunto by the Venetian Cannon, or Bombs in the Day, were by the Induſtry and Labour of the Turks repaired in the Night. Theſe Trenches were likewiſe defended by five Batteries, on which 26 Pieces of Cannon were mounted, and ſix Mortar-pieces which threw Stones at ſuch diſtance, as ſerved not only to defend their own Trenches, but alſo to offend the Venetian Camp.

The Manner of their Trenches.

Whilſt the Doge, and principal Officers were contriving the Attack which was to be executed on the 20th: The Turks on the 18th made a Sally on the Regiment of Colonel Gaſpar an Athenian, who was placed to guard the Aqueducts, but were ſo bravely received by the Valour of that Colonel, that they were repulſed with the loſs of 150 of their Men killed on the place; and 50 or 60 of the Chriſtians, amongſt which was Colonel Gaſpar himſelf, being ſhot in the Breaſt with a Musket-Bullet; in recompence of whoſe Reſolute and Valiant Behaviour to the general Satisfaction and Applauſe of the whole Army, the Doge beſtowed the Command of the Regiment on his Brother Demetrio, with an Annual Penſion to his Son, during his Life.

August The Turks Sally out.

Colonel Gaſpar an Athenian killed.

The Morning of the 20th being come every one prepared himſelf for the intended Aſſault on the Enemies Trenches. The Marquis of Corbon with his Cavalry, was the firſt to break in upon the Enemies Horſe, which he performed with ſuch Succeſs, that he thereby opened a way for the Foot to Attack the Trenches in three ſeveral places, which was executed with ſuch reſolution, that neither Cannon nor Musket-ſhot were ſerviceable on this occaſion; for the Fight in the Trenches was ſo cloſe with the Swords and Handy Blows; that being intermixed one with the other, the Combatants rather appeared like Gladiators than Soldiers fighting in regular Troops. The Turks on one ſide being hard preſſed, began to throw away their Arms and fly; but being ſeconded, and relieved by ſome Troops led on by the Paſha Commander of the place, who at the ſame time promiſed Rewards to the Valiant, and threatned Death to the Cowardly, the Fight increaſed, and the Trenches were filled with the Bodies of Dead and dying Men. The Venetians were repulſed twice, and thrice in ſome places: But at length all the Paſſes towards the Mountain being forced by the Regiment of Bonometti, and the Venturieri, (who are Soldiers of Fortune) the Turks began to abandon their Poſts, and betake themſelves to Flight; and other Regiments forcing the Lines in other places, filled all with Slaughter and Confuſion; the Horſe were the firſt began to turn their Backs, running with full Career to take refuge in the Town, and to ſave themſelves: But the Infantry fared much worſe, for ſome Thouſands of them being purſued by the Chriſtians, even to the Gates of the City, about 500 of them were cut off, and their Journey ſhortned.

The Turks Attacked in their Trenches.

They quit them and fly.

Another Party of the Turks flying towards the Sea, were killed by the Horſe, and others threw themſelves headlong into the Water, where ſome were Drowned, and others killed by Vollies of Musket-ſhot from

A terrible Slaughter.

1688.
August.

Girolamo Garzoni ſlain.

The Venetians Maſters of the Turks Trenches & Suburbs.

from the Shoar, ſo that the Sea was dyed with Blood, and covered with the Garments and Bodies of Men; and beſides thoſe who were killed and wounded of the Turks, many Priſoners were taken. This Fight continued about two Hours, at the beginning of which, the Turks Cannon offended much the Venetian Troops, but without any diſorder, every one giving undoubted Proofs of his Bravery, and conſtancy of his Reſolution. This Action coſt the Lives of 200 Men, amongſt which Seignior Girolamo Garzoni was ſlain, the Senior of all the Senators then in the Camp; he at firſt was hurt with a Muſket-ſhot in the Side, but refuſing to yield unto that Wound, or to be carried into the Tent for Cure, he continued to fight, until he was cut down by a Turkiſh Scimeter, with which the Turk would have taken off, and carried away his Head, but that Seignior Almoro Moroſini, covered his Body, and defended it from the Inſults and Indignities of the Enemy. Of the Venetians about 200 were wounded, amongſt which was Prince Harcourt by a Shot on his Breaſt, Prince of Turene in the Arm, but the Prince of Wirtemberg mortally. In the Trenches all their Cannon and Mortar-pieces were taken, with great Numbers of Arms, and all their Baggage and Proviſions; after which with little difficulty the Venetians made themſelves Maſters of the Suburbs, wherein alſo they found ſome Cannon, Proviſions and Arms, beſides ſome good plunder.

Aug. 21.

The Loſs of the Turks.

The Turks Sally again.

The Day following this Action, News was brought by a Deſerter, That the wounded Men brought into the Town, were above 1000, and thoſe who were killed, were much more, amongſt which they reckoned the Son of the Seraskier, and one Muſtapha Paſha, who was Bey of five Gallies, with many other Officers: The next Day the Venetians continued to batter the Town with Cannon and Bombs; and the 23d the Turks made a furious Sally, but were repulſed with the loſs of 150 Men, and 30 killed on the Venetian ſide.

For three Days afterwards nothing happened, beſides the continual ſhooting of Cannon and Bombs, until the 27th; when the Chriſtians began to open their Approaches nearer to the Town, which continued until the 5th of September, without the leaſt damage imaginable to the Pioneers, or Soldiers; when the Turks to the Number of 500, made a Sally from the Part of the Suburbs on the Quarters of the Sclavonians, and made themſelves Maſters of the firſt Trench; but afterwards rallying again in good order, they drove them out of the Trench, and purſued them to the very Ditch, killing about 40 of them, with the loſs only of 14 Chriſtians.

1688.
Auguſt.

General Koniſmark ſick.

Septemb.

General Koniſmark continuing ſick, and his Fever increaſing on him, the Doge ſubſtituted the Major of the Troops of Brunſwick in his place, to oppoſe the Sally of the Enemies; and tho' this brave Man was alſo at that time laid upon his Bed, and labouring under the Acceſs, or Fit of a Fever; yet he aroſe, and ſtrove againſt his Natural Weakneſs, to comply with the Command of the Doge, but ſo ſoon as he was gone out of the Door of his Tent, a Cannon-ſhot from the Enemy ſtroke his Bed and overthrew it. The Night following, Captain Verneda the chief Engineer, and a Captain of the Regiment of Wirtemberg, with ſome common Soldiers, were killed by Muſket-ſhot as they were advancing their Works towards the Ditch.

A brave Offer made by an Engineer.

The 6th and 7th paſſed without other Action than firing Cannon on both ſides; by which the Venetians made a Breach in a Tower on the Sea-ſide at the end of the Ditch; upon which the Engenier Romagnato, a Man of reſolute Courage, made an offer with 50 Perſons, how difficult ſoever the Attempt ſeemed, to mount the Breach: This generous Offer being accepted, and greatly applauded, the Doge came aſhoar in Perſon, and placed himſelf in one of the Batteries, to be a Spectator of this Enterprize, and to give the neceſſary Orders therein, which ſhould be required for ſeconding ſo reſolute an Enterprize.

The Venetians repulſed.

A remarkable Paſſage.

On the eighth an Attack was made, and with great courage they mounted the Breach, and planted two Enſigns thereon; but becauſe the Breach was very narrow, without any covert from the Shot of the Enemy, and the deſcent into the Town very deep and hazardous, they were forced to quit the Poſt, which they had gained with the loſs of ſix or eight Men, amongſt which was one of the Enſigns, whoſe Colours howſoever were recovered by another Officer: Nor did the Turks eſcape without ſome loſs on occaſion of the Attack; for 300 Men being lodged in the Ditch to ſupport thoſe who were to make the firſt Entrance, did great execution on the Turks that appeared on the Breach without any covert, or ſhelter. There is one thing very remarkable of a Soldier, who in this Aſſault received ſix Wounds on his Head and in his Body with Scimeters, by which falling on the Ruines, was eſteemed for Dead, and ſo remained until the Dusk of the Evening, when riſing up, it was not ſo Dark but that he was perceived by the Enemy, who made many Shot at him; to avoid which, he threw himſelf into the Sea, bleeding with all his Wounds, and notwithſtanding the many Shot aimed at him, of which he received one in his Shoulder, he ſwam away,

and

1688.
Septemb.

and got aſhore at the Camp, where he was afterwards cured of his Wounds, which made the Doge to give him the Name of the wonderful Man.

The Regiments of Count Waldeck and Colonel Bilz, belonging to the Troops of Wirtemberg, being advanced without any Order for ſo doing, one to the Bank of the Ditch, and the other to the Foot of the Tower, received an unhappy welcome by ſeveral Vollies of ſmall ſhot, both from the Wall, and from the falſe Bray; by which two Colonels, ſeven or eight Captains, twelve or fourteen Subaltern Officers, five Cavalier Adventurers, and about 200 common Soldiers, were all ſlain upon the place, and as many wounded; which was a diſcouraging loſs to the Beſiegers, tho' the Defendants, according to the Report of ſome Deſerters, loſt double the number within the City.

The Venetians again repulſed.

Howſoever, the Venetians being not diſmayed hereat, on the 10th of this month forced an Entrance into the Ditch, where they began to form a Gallery for a more near approach unto the Wall, under which they deſigned once to form a Mine; but becauſe it would be the work of fifteen Days at leaſt before the Mine could be brought to Perfection, for want of good Engeniers, of which many were Dead, and Sick; They raiſed a new Battery on the other ſide of the Water, from whence they made a Breach on the other Tower; and with two pieces of Cannon planted on the Bank of the Ditch, they battered the foot of the Courtain between the two Towers.

The Day following, ſome Deſerters from the Town brought Advice, That the whole Garriſon within did not conſiſt of more than 3000 Men, and thoſe much afrighted and diſcouraged by their many loſſes; only that which ſupported their Spirits, was the free and open paſſage by the Bridge, between the Turkiſh Camp and the City; by which every third day they received Recruits of Men, and Supply of Proviſions; ſo that now little hopes remained of taking the City for this year, the Seaſon alſo being far advanced: All therefore that remained to be done, was to continue the Batteries and to throw Bombs, of which above 10000 having been already caſt into the City, few Houſes remained ſtanding, but all reduced to a Maſs of Rubbiſh and Aſhes.

The Difficulties of taking the City.

The Venetians being under theſe diſcouraging Circumſtances, the Attacks proceeded but ſlowly; nothing being heard in the Camp, but of the Death or Sickneſs of their great Men; amongſt which, News was brought to the Doge, that Signior Molino and Delfino were forced to yield unto their ſick Beds; That the Engenier Ramagnato was killed with a Musket-ſhot, whilſt he was giving Direction about the Works in the Ditch; That Signior Aurelio Marcelli was Dead of a Fever cauſed by his Wounds; as was alſo Mattio Bon Patritii, a Nobleman of Venice; And that General Keniſmark was Dead of a violent Fever, having Breathed his laſt on the 15th of September, to the great Grief and Sorrow of the whole Army; but eſpecially of his Lady Carlotta, who with great Affection and Tenderneſs, having been his Companion in all this Expedition, was over-whelmed with Sorrow and confuſed Grief at his Death. His Bowels were Interr'd the ſame Night with many thouſands of Torches and Lights; but his Body being Embalmed, was afterwards deſigned for Strade, a place in the Dutchy of Bremen, there to be Interred in the Burial-place of his Anceſtors. The ſame Night two Engeniers were wounded, and one killed, and many common Soldiers killed and wounded by the Enemies ſhot from the falſe Bray, whilſt they were perfecting their Works in the Ditch.

1688.
Septemb.

The Venetians diſcouraged.

General Keniſmark's Death.

And now it being the 17th of September, the Florentines were the firſt to Demand a Diſmiſſion from the Camp, and Licenſe to return home, alledging that the Seaſon of the year was far ſpent, and the long Voyage they had to make unto their own Country. The time alſo appointed by the Great Maſter of Malta unto his General, for the Fleet to remain abroad, being alſo expired, Licence was demanded for their return; but the Doge flattering himſelf with hopes of a ſpeedy Surrender of the place, perſuaded that General to ſtay ſome few days longer; to which he conſented, in expectation of taking part of that Glory which would belong to him by the Conqueſt of that place.

The Generals of the Great Duke and Malta deſire leave to return home.

But it was not the Will of God that this Place ſhould yield to the Chriſtian Arms, for that from this preſent time, until the End of the Siege, nothing but Misfortunes attended the Actions of the Venetians. However, The Courage and Conſtancy of the Generals was ſuch, as that they would not leave one Stone unturned which might tend to the Conqueſt of the place, reſolving not to deſiſt from that Enterprize, whilſt any hopes appeared of becoming Maſters thereof. In order unto which, the Doge Moroſini, conſidering with the principal Captains, what was farther to be done to facilitate this Enterprize; [it was obſerved, that the greateſt difficulty, was, how to convey their Forces under the Wall, for the Ditch was 30 Paces broad, and waſhed at each end by the Sea; to do which, the Ingeniers found no other means than by a Traverſe, which was to be covered on the top, and defended by Gabions filled with Earth, which being conſidered, and reſolved, it was put into immediate Execution, all things neceſſary for that work being brought to the place, with the Inſtruments for fixing the Miner to the Walls; but the Waters ſo encreaſed in the Night, that the Labour became much more great, and the Deſign more difficult than was imagined, they being forced to Work under the Enemies ſmall ſhot; by which the Engeniers, Samuel Miller was killed, and Renaldo Della Ruë, and Antonio Captain of the Miners, grievouſly wounded. Howſoever, not diſcouraged from the proſecution of this Deſign, the Marquis of Corbon, Serjeant-General, with ſome of his Dragoons, undertook that work of the Traverſe, which notwithſtanding found not the Succeſs expected; he being, whilſt he was giving direction about the Traverſe, wounded by a Musket-ſhot, which paſſed his Left-Thigh.

The difficulty of directing a Traverſe.

The Turks, who were very vigilant and induſtrious to deſtroy the Work of the Traverſe; formed a Work in the Falſe Bray, by which they ſo annoyed the Labourers upon the Traverſe by continual firing, that it was not poſſible to proceed, until the Enemy was droven out of the Counterſcarp; to perform which, it was reſolved to take a Bonnet which lay in the way, which ſucceeded according to Deſire; But the Beſieged having conſidered, that that place was of great Importance, they ſoon Aſſaulted it, with ſuch Vigour, that the Venetians not being relieved by the farther advanced Line, were droven out from thence with much Blood and Slaughter.

The Venetians take a Bonnet from the Turks, and again droven out of it.

Thus all hopes failing of taking the Town, Camillo Chigi, Admiral of the Gallies of Tuſcany, having as we have ſaid obtained his Diſcharge, ſailed away with his Squadron of Gallies by Night, that the Turks might not obſerve his Departure, leaving howſoever behind him two Ships, and ſome Troops in the Service.

The Gallies of Tuſcany depart.

The Venetians reſolving that the Turks ſhould not remain in quiet Poſſeſſion of the Bonnet, attacked them again therein, and drove them thence, and fortified it in ſuch manner, that it would be very difficult for them to regain it. Likewiſe a new Battery was raiſed of fifteen pieces of great Cannon, which ſhot into the Houſes of the Town; and at the ſame time, a Line of Communication was made for relief of the Bonnet.

The Bonnet retaken.

Sickneſs in the Chriſtian Camp.

During which Time and Actions, Diſeaſes increaſed in the Camp, and Officers, as well as common Soldiers fell ſick, by which, and daily ſlaughters of Men in the Aſſaults made, the Army was much diminiſhed. And tho' the Condition of the Turks in the Town was rather worſe than better, yet their Spirits being ſupported by the Encouragements given by the Seraskier, who promiſed ſpeedily to relieve them, and to ſend 2000 Horſe into the Morea to make a Diverſion, they made ſeveral Sallies out of the Town, which tho' not with much Advantage to themſelves, yet it ſhowed a Vigour of Spirit, and that they laboured not under any Fears, or deſpairing hopes of Defence. On the other ſide, the Venetians failed not in their Induſtry, and aſſiduous Projects every day, in acting ſome Enterprize or other, which might facilitate a general Aſſault, and give that deciſive blow, which ſhould put an end unto, and terminate the Labours of that year: But neither the Traverſe, nor the Batteries, found the Effect deſired and expected; wherefore the Engenier Baſignani, who had long laboured under a violent Fever, being now a little recovered, projected a Subterranean Gallery under the Water of the Ditch, to paſs unto the Wall; and there underneath to make a Mine, which being ſprang could not fail of making ſuch a Breach, as was requiſite for an Aſſault; but in the execution thereof, there was found too much difficulty, and almoſt an impoſſibility; for the bottom of the Ditch was altogether Mud for many yards deep; and in ſinking the Shaft to the depth required, they met ſo much Water as wholly drowned out the Miners and put them by their Work; and Baſignani himſelf, whilſt he was giving Directions, was ſhot by a Musket-Bullet in the Head, which put an end to this Deſign, which had it been practicable, would yet have required more time than what the ſeaſon of the year would admit. The Turks alſo on the other ſide had formed a Mine under the Bonnet; which being fired, it had not the due effect, by reaſon that it was not rightly placed; howſoever the Defendants were ſo afrighted with the blow, that they abandoned the Fort; as did thoſe of the Battery, not far diſtant from that place.

The Turks Sally.

October.

Baſignani the Engenier fails in his Deſign, and is killed.

But what made all things the more deſperate, and to look with an ill Aſpect, was the Indiſpoſition of his Moſt Serene Highneſs the Doge, being not only forced to keep his Bed, but to uſe ſuch Remedies as were neceſſary for his Recovery: Alſo at the ſame time, Mateo Querini of Noble Extract, Died, after a ſickneſs of a few days continuance.

The Doge ſick.

1688. October.

And to the farther Weakening and Diſabling of the Camp, the General of Malta having obtained his Licence to depart, upon Allegations that he had already tranſgreſſed the time which was allotted him by the Grand Maſter, ſet Sail in the Night without Ceremony, or noiſe of Guns at his departure, which would have animated the Turks to a longer perſeverance in Defence of their Town.

The General of Malta departs.

Notwithſtanding all which, the Batteries continued to play with ſo good ſucceſs, that they made ſuch wide Breaches in the Wall, as gave hopes that the Walls might be yet attempted, and made open to an Aſſault; in which matter, whilſt Count Raperta, who was Serjeant-Major of Battail, was giving Directions, he was wounded in the Breaſt by a Musket-ſhot, which was a great loſs and diſappointment to the whole Deſign: In like manner, the Marquis of Corbon, who was a Serjeant-General, was killed by a Cannon-ſhot from the Battery of Carababa, to the great trouble and loſs of the whole Army; there being now much want of good Officers, endued with Bravery and Conduct.

Chief Officers killed.

And tho' all things went thus Ill, yet the Recovery of the Doge, and his Appearance in the Field, inſpired new Courage into the Hearts of the haraſſed Soldiery: But in regard, the weakneſs of the Doge was ſuch, as to diſable him from taking an exact View of what was acting in the Camp, or what Breaches were made, he was conſtrained to take all his Informations from the Proveditors of the Camp, who were Commanded to joyn and concurr in all their Reſolutions with the Prince of Brunſwick, who at preſent was poſted in the principal Command of the whole Army; being aſſiſted with the Counſel and Advice of Serjeant-General Hor, a Soldier of great Eſteem for his long Experience in War, tho' much weaken'd and faint by a long Sickneſs. The Doge depending much on the Bravery and Conduct of theſe Generals, by whom he was aſſured of the excellent Order and Diſpoſition of all things, reſolved to appoint the Day for a General Aſſault: But that an Enterprize of ſuch high Concernment ſhould not be undertaken without mature Advice and Deliberation, a Council of War was called, which might diſcuſs all Points of Difficulty; and conſider whether ſuch an Action as this might be practicable under the preſent Circumſtances; and the common Safety of the Army, and Glory of the Venetian State, not put to Hazard under doubtful Uncertainties. After ſome Debates in this Council, a Report was given to his Serenity the Doge, That an Attack was very feaſible, and might in all probability ſucceed, in caſe the Breaches were made a little more wide and commodious, and that the Mine were ready to be ſprang under that part of the Counterſcarp which was near the Battery, which would open a paſſage to the Aſſailants over the Ditch; for which purpoſe, thouſands of Faggots, and Sacks of Earth were provided, and all things diſpoſed in good order by the Generals, Brunſwick and Hor; and Directions given to the Commanders of their reſpective Troops, what Rules and Methods they were to obſerve in the Attack, and in what manner they were to Succour and Relieve each other. And to inforce and envigorate this Attack, the Levents, or Marine Regiments were taken out of the Galeots; and Reformades, and Mariners from the Fleet; and amongſt them 200 choice Soldiers belonging to the Ducal-Galley, under the Command of Colonel Diſſinfeldt, all deſperate Fellows, were ready to attempt the moſt hazardous Enterprize.

Prince of Brunſwick, and General Hor command the Army.

1688. October. The Council of War adviſes an Attack.

The Preparations made for it.

The day following was appointed for that general Aſſault, which was to determine the Fate of that place; when above 8000 Men were poſted in their ſeveral Stations, and every thing diſpoſed in ſuch manner as was requiſite for this great Work; Likewiſe Aleſſandro Bon, the Captain of the Gulf, was Commanded with his Squadron to enter the Port on the Lar-board-ſide, and Inveſt the Fort of Carababa, whereby the Garriſon therein might be diverted from ſending their Forces for ſuccour of the Town.

Octob. 12. An Aſſault made,

About Ten a Clock in the Morning the Mine was Sprung under the Counterſcarp, which was to be the ſignal for the Aſſault; upon which the Troops appointed to ſtorm the Breach began to move, having ſome Granadiers in their Front; and at the ſame time, Antonio Medini their Commander, ſcowred the Ditch with a Party of his Men, being followed by 1500 Soldiers, who were to Repulſe the Turks, in caſe of a Salley from the Town; but this unfortunately ſucceeded; for being come to the Traverſe-Line, which was neceſſary to be overcome, the Turks ſo vigorouſly defended it with Vollies of ſmall ſhot, that many Captains and Soldiers being there killed, a ſtop was given to their farther proceeding; for not being ſuſtained by the Troops appointed to ſecond them, who Halted at the entrance to the Ditch, they were forced to ſound a Retreat. From this firſt Misfortune ſeveral Diſorders followed; for whilſt a great

And miſcarried.

1688. October. Body of Soldiers marched unfiled through a narrow Paſſage one after another, they were ſo raked by the Cannon from Carababa, (there being no other Trench opened) that many were killed, and all put into ſuch confuſion, that there remained no poſſibility of entering the place on that ſide.

All this time, thoſe who had mounted the Breach were in great danger, and many lay Dead thereupon, being deſtroyed by Sacks with Powder, by which they were blown up. Nor was there any better appearance of Succeſs, or hopes of Entrance on the other ſide, where, tho' they had mounted to the top of one of the Towers, being conducted by the ſpecial Valour of their Commanders, and by the ſignal Courage of Boneſana a Major General of the Troops of Milan; from which heighth they diſcovered ſuch a diſmal Deſcent into the Town, that it was impoſſible to enter, without throwing themſelves Headlong down a Precipice; ſo that no other was the Sequel of this Attempt, but the unhappy and fruitleſs loſs of the Lives of many brave Men.

Many Men loſt.

Great miſfortunes.

Nor was the 4th Attack more ſucceſsful than the former three; for on this ſide the Town was inacceſſible; howſoever the Troops marched with their Officers leading them forward, and took their Poſt in the Ditch, without proceeding farther; but this place being neither provided with Bavins, nor Faggots, nor Sacks of Earth, ſome of the Soldiers ſtanding up to the Middle in Water, remained expoſed to the Enemies ſhot, who guarded the Traverſe; which being thus ſuſtained for ſeveral Hours, above 1000 Soldiers, with divers Officers, loſt their Lives; amongſt which were Lieutenant Colonel Slade, and the Captains Pini, Pipam, and Gilinon; and of the Stranger, or Foreign Troops, ſeveral were ſorely wounded, amongſt which were General Spabar, and the Prince of Hermanſtadt, who were the Principal Officers appointed to direct the Aſſault.

The Loſſes ſuſtained by the Gallies.

Nor were the Loſſes on the Sea-ſide, leſs than thoſe on the Land. For the Gallies appointed to make the Diverſion, were ſo droven by a Storm of Wind into the Current, that it was impoſſible to ſave themſelves, but by coming to an Anchor juſt under the Town, from whence they received many Cannon-ſhot. Antonio Nani had his Main-Maſt diſabled by a Shot of 1000 weight. Gredenigo received the like, which carried away all his Poop, beſides other Damages: The Gally of Pezzamani was ſtrook with a Stone-Bullet of three Fathom and a half in Circumference, which had almoſt ſunk the Gally: Alvige Foſcari received a Shot of 50 weight in the Midſhip of the Gally, and another which carried away his Rudder: George Marin had the Poop of his Galley carried away, and he himſelf wounded in the Throat by the Splinters. Nor did it paſs much better with the Captain of the Gulf, by a Shot on the Lar-board ſide of the Galley, by which he received much damage.

1688. October.

Octob. 13

A Counſel of War reſolves to deſiſt from the Attack.

In this manner the Gallies drawing off at a farther diſtance, and the Land Soldiers deſiſting from their Attacks, all hopes of taking the Town began now to fail; ſo the Commanders aſſembling at a Council of War, where every thing was debated, and the impoſſibility conſidered of making another Aſſault, in regard to the Fleet, which (as we have ſaid) was much endamaged; and the Camp much diminiſhed by Sickneſs, Slaughter, and Departure of ſome of their Troops; and the Seaſon of the Year advanced to the beginning of Winter, ſo that it was judged impoſſible longer to maintain the Siege.

A Propoſal made to ſtay all the Winter in the Iſland.

But becauſe much Blood and Treaſure, and the time of a whole Summer had been conſumed before that City, a Retreat from which, would look ſomething ſhameful before the Turks, and make an ill noiſe, and report over all Chriſtendom; it was propoſed at a Council of War, not wholly to quit, or abandon the place, but to remain before it during the Winter Seaſon; in order unto which it was projected to draw a Line of Circumvallation from one Neck of Land to the other, which was not above the ſpace of an Italian Mile, and the Mould, or Soil being all Earth, it might eaſily be effected; the which being fortified with a Ditch, and Palliſadoes, Redoubts, and Cannon, might make a ſufficient place of defence for the Soldiers, and convenient Quarters might be made for them out of thoſe Timbers and Planks which they had ſaved from the Ruines of the Suburbs of Negropont. And that they might be in a condition all the Winter to endamage the Town, and hinder the Turks from repairing their Breaches, the Mount of Muſlekat, and the Hill of Vilibaba, were to be ſtrongly fortified with Cannon: In fine all things were propoſed, and provided as far as Humane Reaſon could contrive for ſecurity of the Camp, and Maintainance of the Soldiery; and for Proviſion and Suſtenance, they promiſed themſelves ſufficient from the Inhabitants of the Iſlands, beſides thoſe which might be brought from the other Iſles of the Archipelago.

Theſe Matters being thus propoſed, and projected in the Council of War, where Enquiry was made into the Miſcarriages of the late Aſſault, (which was made appear otherwiſe than was repreſented) it was ordered, that the Cannon which were neareſt to the place ſhould be drawn off, and the manner 1688.

October.
Some Cannon drawn off.
Octob. 15.

contrived how it might be executed; and the Night following they began to draw off the covered Cannon, which lay under the Works, the which Attempt was the moſt difficult of any: To prevent which, the Turks all that Night aſſaulted the Bonnet with quantities of Granadoes, and Sacks of Powder; but a valorous reſiſtance being made by the Defendants, the Turks were repulſed with great loſs; ſo that the Night following all the remaining Cannon were drawn off and ſecured: In which Work Silveſter the Admiral of Candia, having been very active and adventurous, as he had been in many other doubtful and hazardous Attempts, the Doge honoured him with a Gold Chain and Medal, as an evidence of his good Services, and of the Eſteem he entertained of his Perſonal Courage and Conduct.

The Foreign Troops mutiny, and will not Winter on the Iſland.

Had the Project of Quartering all that Winter on the Iſland ſucceeded, it was very probable, and with good reaſon it might have been rationally concluded, that the City would have been obliged to yield before the Spring; but the Foreign Troops being acquainted with the Deſign, began to mutiny, and loudly to declare, That they would not Winter on the Iſland, it being one of their Capitulations of Agreement, when they firſt Enrolled themſelves for Soldiers, that they ſhould at the Seaſon when Armies uſually break up their Camp, be provided with warm and convenient Quarters, and with the Spring return again into the Field.

The Siege raiſed.

To force the Soldiers to an Obedience in this particular, was not eſteemed adviſeable; but to try how far ſoft Terms and perſwaſive Arguments might prevail upon them, ſeveral Noblemen, and chief Commanders were employed to incline the Wills and Conſent of the Soldiery thereunto; but the Plot was deeper laid, for tho' the Commonalty only appeared openly therein, yet it was well known, that their Officers had the chief Hand in the Deſign, and inſtigated their Soldiers to act that part which was moſt deſired by themſelves. But what was moſt prevalent with the Council of War, was the Report made by Sergeant General Hor; That the Soldiers in the advanced Lines, were ſo far ſet on a Reſolution to Abandon the Siege, that in caſe it were not done, above 100 of them would deſert, and fly to the Enemy. Whereupon the Doge took a Reſolution before other Misfortunes arrived, to comply with the Soldiery; and as a beginning thereof, to embark all their Sick and Wounded Men, and Baggage; and that the Enemy ſhould not diſcover the Deſign, it was ordered, That the Cannon which were not drawn off from the Lines, Bonnet, and Batteries ſhould continue ſtill to play upon the City.

1688.
October.
Some diſorder.
Octob. 22.

After which, by degrees, all the remaining Cannon was ſhipped, and many of their Horſe embarked; and all things put in order for an entire Deſertion of the Iſland and Siege; which when the Grecian Inhabitants obſerved; who had taken the part with the Venetians againſt the Turks, full of Fear, and terrified Conſternation, came running to the Shoar, petitioned to be carried off to the Christian Coaſt, to avoid the Fury of the Turks; for performance of which, all the Boats and Veſſels of the Iſland were taken up at Freight for Service of the Army, and Tranſportation of the Iſlanders; of which ſeveral of them were cut off by the Turks, before they could reach the Veſſels on which they intended to embark. The Turks ſeeing their Enemies draw off, and commit themſelves unto the Seas, had cauſe ſufficient to rejoyce; as the Chriſtians had to be ſad and dejected, when the Rear of the Army was forced to betake themſelves to a precipitate Flight with ſome Confuſion and Diſorder. Howſoever they all got Aboard on ſuch Veſſels, as they could at firſt come unto, ſo that the lighter Veſſels were overcharged with Soldiers, and with Iſlanders, until ſuch time, as at the adjacent Iſlands, where Veſſels uſually Careen, they could more orderly diſpoſe their Companies, and repart them by a more commodious, and proportionable ſhare unto every Ship, Galeaſs, and Gally.

Orders given to the Admirals, and places appointed where to disbark the Soldiers.
Novemb.

From this place Orders were given by the Doge unto Venier Captain Extraordinary, to paſs into the Archipelago, to collect the Contribution of the Iſland. Admiral Zaguri was diſpatched with four Ships laden with Proviſions and Bisket, to furniſh the Fortreſſes of that Kingdom. The Veſſels laden with the Horſe, were ordered to diſembark them at the firſt Shoar, and thence to march by Land to Napoli di Romania. Some other Companies were Landed at the Fortreſs of Termizi. All the Foreign Troops were put into Winter Quarters in divers parts of the Morea. Other Companies and Troops Embarked on the Squadron of Ships commanded by Captain Piſani, were Tranſported to Modon, Navarin, and Patras; from whence Piſani had Commiſſion to Sail for Zant and Corfu, and thence to carry all the Proviſion and Ammunition which had been brought thither from Venice for Uſe, and Refreſhment of the Army. All the Galeaſſes were ordered unto the ſecure Port of Varvaronda under Cranidi in Romania. The Regiments of Brunſwick, Wirtemberg, and Heſſe, having compleated their time ſtipulated for Service, were diſcharged, and permitted to Sail for Venice.

Thus

1688.
Novemb.
The Doge Lands very ſick.

Thus all the Troops being diſmiſſed, and ſent into their Winter Quarters, the Doge intended himſelf to Land at Napoli di Romania; but being taken ſhort by the Wind, he could only fetch the Port Tolon, where the next Day he Landed, and went to Napoli di Romania, but in an ill condition of Health, cauſed partly by the Hardſhips of the Siege, but chiefly by the Troubles and Affliction of Mind for the Loſs and Diſgrace he had ſuſtained before the City of Negropont; a great cauſe of which being attributed to the Miſcarriage of ſome Officers, who performed not their Duty in the laſt Attack, he ordered a Proceſs to be made againſt them, and their Tryals to be managed at a Counſel of War.

But here we will leave the Venetians for this whole Winter, and return to the Wars in Hungary, tranſacted in the Year 1689; at the end of which, we ſhall recount all the Actions performed by the Venetians during that Campaign. But Procurator Girolamo Cornaro was more fortunate and ſucceſsful in Dalmatia, and Albania, where he Commanded the Venetian Army: For having Landed his Forces at Scardona on the 24th of Auguſt, they ſpeedily marched towards Clin, with deſign to inveſt that place; and on the 27th, the ſeveral Troops took their Poſts, and began a Line of Circumvallation, fortifying the ſame with ſeveral Redoubts. The next Day Summons were ſent to the Garriſon, which being anſwered with Vollies of ſmall and great Shot, the Night following the Trenches were opened, and in the Morning the Cannon and Mortars began to play upon the Town with great execution.

Cornaro marches againſt Clin.

Septemb.

The Venetians ſtorm the Breach.

In the ſpace of two Days a conſiderable Breach was made in the firſt Wall, which the Beſieged labouring to repair, the Cannon quickly ruin'd their Works. So that by the 1ſt of September, the Venetian Trenches were advanced ſo far, and the Breach made ſo wide, that it was reſolved to give an Aſſault, which was accordingly executed on the 2d of this Month, and performed with ſuch Reſolution, that the Venetians notwithſtanding the Vigorous Oppoſition of the Enemy, mounted the Breach, on which having lodged themſelves, obliged the Defendants to retire within their ſecond Wall, or Retrenchment.

On the 3d and 4th, ſeveral new Batteries were raiſed, from whence the Enemy was greatly annoyed; and a Bomb falling into their Magazine of Powder, blew up, and killed many of the Inhabitants; however the Defendants ſtill continued to maintain their Caſtle and the Lower Town, with great Reſolution. At length it being obſerved by General Cornaro, that one ſide of the Town was naturally fortified by Water, without other Guard or Defence; he ordered, that the Regiments of Corbon and Sebenico, ſhould paſs over, and ſtreighten the Enemy on that ſide, the which they chearfully performed; for moſt of them being practiſed Swimmers, they carried their Swords naked in their Mouths, and ſwam over to the other ſide; which when the Turks obſerved, fearing to have their Retreat cut off from the Caſtle, they quitted the defence of the Breach, and retired ſome within the ſecond Retrenchment, and others into the Caſtle. Thus the Venetians without farther oppoſition, entered the firſt Retrenchment, where they found ſome pieces of Cannon, 50 Horſes, two Camels, ſome Mules, 100 Head of Oxen, ſome Corn, and a good quantity of Hay.

1688.
Septemb.

They become Maſters of the firſt Retrenchment

The Venetians having gained the firſt Retrenchment, appointed Marquis Borro, and Franciſco Grimani, to maintain the Ground they had gained; which they performed by throwing up Earth for ſhelter of their Men, whilſt on the other ſide they cut off the Pipes, and ruined the Aqueducts which conveyed Water to the Caſtle. The want whereof, and the blowing up of the Magazine of Powder, greatly ſunk the Courage of the Defendants; howſoever the Venetians continued ſtill to throw their Bombs and Fire into the Caſtle, and batter the Walls of it with their Cannon, by which they had now made the Breach ſo wide, that an Aſſault might be made thereon: But the Proveditor-General well conſidering that the Turks could not long ſubſiſt without Water, deferred for ſome few Days the Aſſault, until he ſaw the Effects which the Extremity of Thirſt would conſtrain them unto, the which ſpeedily happened out according to expectation: For on the 12th of September, the Defendants ſpread a White Flag on the Walls, deſiring to Capitulate, and that in the mean time a Ceſſation of Arms ſhould be granted.

The Turks in want of Water.

They Capitulate.

Hereupon the Paſha of the place, ſent out two Aga's, who being conducted to the Tent of General Cornaro, they offered the Surrender of the Town and Caſtle, upon Licenſe given them to march out with their Arms, and Baggage, as is uſually granted to Valiant Soldiers. But Cornaro anſwer'd, That their Behaviour had not merited ſuch kind and honourable Uſage: And growing angry at their Diſcourſe, he told them plainly, That he expected they ſhould immediately yield at Diſcretion, without farther Argument, or Capitulation. The Turks aſtoniſhed at this peremptory Reſolution, deſired time to propoſe the ſame to the Garriſon, and to the Inhabitants; but no more time would be allowed than four Hours;

1688. Septemb.

during which, in caſe they did not ſubmit, they threatned them with the laſt Extremity. Within the ſpace of four Hours, the ſame Aga's returned again, declaring their neceſſity to ſubmit to the hard Conditions of the Conquerors; and ſoon after they were follow'd by the Paſha Atlagiok, attended with his Son and Nephew, and with Cernigick the Sangiack, and five Aga's, with 50 other Turks of Condition; who being conducted to the Tent of General Cornaro, they were received by him in quality of Slaves; howſoever to demonſtrate the Generoſity of the Conqueror, an Allodgment was aſſigned them in a Tent provided for them, where they were treated with all Conveniencies, both of Victuals and Lodging.

They Surrender at Diſcretion.

The Day following in the Morning, about 900 Women and Children came forth, and about 400 Turks capable to bear Arms, with Countenances full of Sorrow, and dejected Looks, which ſhowed the inward Grief which oppreſſed their Spirits. Theſe were follow'd by a Troop of 150 poor Chriſtians, who having hereby regained their Liberty, and Freedom from Slavery, changed the Scene of Sorrow into another of Joy and Feſtivity. 22 Pieces of Braſs Cannon were found in the place, 200 Horſe, great quantities of Proviſion and Ammunition both for War, and Suſtenance for Life.

Cornaro deſigns againſt Narenta.

October.

Clin being in this manner ſurrendered, the Proveditor Girolamo Cornaro, General in Dalmatia, deſigned to take Narenta, an ancient Port for all ſorts of Merchandize, brought thither in former Times from Thrace, Servia, Boſnia, and Macedon, and ſeveral other Provinces; but firſt it was eſteemed neceſſary in order thereunto, to become Maſters of a ſmall Tower called Narino, built about three Years before, by the Paſha of Boſnia, who had furniſhed it with ſome Guns, and encompaſſed it with a double Paliſado. In purſuance of this Reſolution, the General embarked at Spalatro, all his Troops, Proviſions, Cannon, and other Military Appurtenances; with which having looſed from that Port, they were ſo croſſed by contrary Winds, that the Fleet was forced to put into divers Harbours, and the Winds continuing long in that Quarter, they ſpent ſome Weeks without any Action. At length the General being wearied with longing Deſires to act ſomething, the Seaſon of the Year alſo ſpending apace, and the time approaching both for the Fleet and Armies to draw into Winter Quarters, he reſolved to proceed from the Port of St. George de Leſina with the Gallies, Galleots, and lighter Veſſels only, leaving Orders with General St. Paul, to follow him with the Ships, and Galleaſſes, ſo ſoon as Wind and Weather ſhould ſerve him: And being by force of the Oar come to the Mouth of the Port of Narenta; at the Point of which, the Fortreſs of Narin was ſituated: Cornaro Landed ſome Troops both of Horſe and Foot; upon whoſe approach, the Turks of the Garriſon of Narin, to the Number of 150, finding themſelves battered by Cannon from the Galley called Querini; they quitted the Fort, and betook themſelves to a haſty Flight, in hopes to eſcape with their Liberty; but being purſued by the Horſe, and ſome Morlacks who were good Footmen, they were either cut to pieces, or taken Priſoners, amongſt which was Alaibegh Carovaz, their Commander in chief. The Venetians being encouraged by this Succeſs, the General marched to a certain Village, called Metrovich, where he remained ſome Days in expectation of the Fleet under the Command of General St. Paul; and of being thereby reinforced with Men, Artillery, Proviſions, Ammunition, and all things neceſſary.

1688. October.

He takes Narin.

The Morlacks waſte the Country.

By this unexpected Invaſion, all the People of thoſe Countries being greatly alarm'd, and in much Conſternation, provided to ſave and put themſelves into a poſture of defence. Howſoever the General Cornaro having made ſeveral Detachments of Morlacks to waſte the Country round, they had the Fortune to ſurprize divers Villages and People, which they having firſt Plundered, put all to Fire and Sword, and returned with a conſiderable Booty both of Cattle, Captives, and Heads.

The Fleet of Ships ſtopt by contrary Winds.

But the Winds ſtill continuing oppoſite to the Ships of Burden; and by Rains, and bluſtering Weather according to the Seaſon of the Year, which was now far advanced and improper for Action, General Cornaro having ſecured the Country and Forts which he had conquered, embarked the remainder of his Forces, and returned to Spalatro, where he diſpoſed his haraſſed Troops in Winter Quarters, there to refreſh and take Breath againſt the next Campaign. After which, above 1500 Inhabitants of the Country about Narenta came in, and put themſelves under the Protection of the Republick.

Cornaro returns to Spalatro.

And now after all theſe Actions, and Martial Exploits both by Sea and Land; of which the Turks have had little cauſe to boaſt in all the courſe of the paſt Year, unleſs in their defence of Negropont; it will be time for us to conclude this Years Hiſtory, and proceed to the Tranſactions of the following, being the Year 1689.

The Succeſſes of the GERMANS,

AGAINST THE

TURKS in Hungary,

In the Year 1689.

1689. January.

THIS Year begins with the Surrender of the ſtrong City of Sighet, to the Clemency of His Imperial Majeſty, not being ſubdued by Arms, but by Famine, having almoſt for the ſpace of two Years endured extream Want, and Scarcity of all things neceſſary for the Support of Life. At length common Reports flying, That Sighet was upon Capitulations reduced thereunto by extream Want, and a thouſand other miſerable Sufferings; the News thereof came confirmed to Vienna by the Duke of Holſtein, on the 21ſt of January, and that the Surrender was agreed on Articles, not much differing from thoſe of Alba Regalis; after the Example of which, one or two Commiſſioners were appointed in behalf of the City to carry the Particulars unto Vienna, there to be Signed by His Imperial Majeſty; for which Affair, the Perſon deputed was Haſſan Bei, Lieutenant Governour of the place; who on the 28th Day of January arrived at Vienna, deſiring that the following Capitulations might be confirmed and corroborated by the Imperial Signature, which were expreſſed in this manner.

I.

‘THAT ſo ſoon as Haſſan Bei ſhall be returned to Sighet, the Governour, and Garriſon therein, ſhall faithfully deliver up into the Poſſeſſion of the Germans, the Caſtle and City of Sighet, with all the Powder therein without ſpoiling it, or maliciouſly ſuffering it to be made wet, as alſo all other things belonging to Military Services. That upon the Surrender, the Turks ſhall retire to ſuch place in the Lower City, as ſhall be aſſigned for their Quarters to lodge in, and there protected by a Guard of Imperial Soldiers; there to remain until the rigour of the Winter Seaſon is paſt, and the Drave become Navigable, by Thawing of the Ice; and in the mean time Waggons and Boats ſhall be provided for their faithful and ſecure Tranſportation; and till ſuch time the Arms which belong to them in quality of Soldiers, ſhall be depoſited in ſome ſafe place, and be thence returned to them upon their Departure. All things belonging to the Caſtle ſhall remain, as upon Delivery: And becauſe it is uncertain, when the River will be open, and become Navigable, ſo ſoon as the Ice is Thawed, and the Carts provided, a fixed Day ſhall be ſet for Departure of the Turks, after which they ſhall not ſtay longer than 24 Hours: And in the mean time they ſhall lodge quietly in the Lower Town free from all Moleſtation, Damage, or Inſolence of the Soldiers.

1689. January.

‘II. All Priſoners in the Hands of the Turks, without concealing any, or Perſwaſions, Allurements, or Promiſes to ſtay, ſhall be ſet at liberty, be they of what Age, Sex, or Quality ſoever.

‘III. That all Conveniences and Neceſſaries ſhall be allowed to the Turks for their Money, as well in their Journey, as in the time of their preſent Abode.

‘IV. That no Violence ſhall be offered to any upon their Departure.

‘V. That Carts, or Waggons ſhall be provided, as well for the Old, as for others, to carry them to the Water-ſide.

‘VI. All thoſe who became Renegadoes before this War began, ſhall have Licence to depart in Company with the Turks; but ſuch others as have denied their Faith, ſince

1689.
January.

‘ſince the beginning of theſe Wars, ſhall not be permitted to depart with the others, but ſhall remain ſtill in the City: And whoſoever ſhall deſire to ſtay behind, and live at their former Habitations, ſhall be left to their own Wills and Arbitrement, to do as they ſhall think fit.

‘VII. A ſufficient number of Waggons ſhall be provided to carry all the People to the Water-ſide; where in like manner a ſufficient number of Boats ſhall be furniſhed, to Tranſport the People, under a ſecure Guard to the Confines of the Ottoman Dominions.

All theſe Articles being ſubſcribed by His Imperial Majeſty, a ſtrict charge was given to all Officers, and Soldiers, and Subjects whatſoever, to obſerve religiouſly the Contents thereof: But before the ſame had paſſed the Imperial Signature, the Vice-Preſident of the Council of War, ſummoned Haſſan Bei ſeveral times to Audience; and at length upon Delivery of the Capitulations into his Hands, he made a moſt Elegant Speech, exalting the generous Piety and Glemency of the Emperour; who having all the Inhabitants and Soldiers of Sighet in his Hands, and at his Diſpoſal, ſo as either to put them to Death, or make them Captives, was yet pleaſed, out of a Natural Principle of Mercy, to conſider their Diſtreſſes, to ſpare their Lives, and give them Liberty. In ſenſe of which, Haſſan Bei acknowledged the truth of what had been uttered, and in token of Thanks to the Wice-Preſident, in the Name of the Paſha, and People of Sighet, with Eyes full of Tears he received the Capitulations, and kiſſed them with profound Reverence and Submiſſion.

So ſoon as Haſſan Bei had received theſe Capitulations he departed with all ſpeed by the Poſt towards Sighet, being fully ſatisfied with the obliging Entertainment he had received during his ſtay at Vienna, where he was ſumptuouſly lodged in the Houſe of Marquis Ferdinando Obizzi.

February.

Haſſan Bei being returned with the Articles ſubſcribed, to Sighet, no time was loſt to put them into execution; for all things being prepared, and the River open about the beginning of February, the Turks quitted Sighet, leaving one of the chief Fortreſſes in the World, eſteemed both by Nature and Art to be impregnable, in the Hands of the Emperour.

Sighet.

1689.
February.

For Sighet hath both a Caſtle and a City fortified after the ancient manner, with Earth lined with Brick; hath four very fair Towers encompaſſed with a very deep Ditch full of Water, and environed round with Fens and Marſhy Grounds, which make the Town inacceſſible. So that it ſeems no wonder, that Solyman the Magnificent Emperor of the Turks ſhould have ſpent three Years in taking thereof; and not being able to take it in his Life time, his Grand Vizier afterwards ſubdued it by Storm, with the loſs of 36000 Men. The Turks took it on the 7th of September 1566, after a moſt valiant Reſiſtance made by Nicholas Eſdrin Count of Serini, Great Grandfather of the Famous Nicholas Serini, who vanquiſhed the Turks in many Battels, and died in the Year 1664.

The Town hath three Gates, one called Quinque Eccleſiæ, another Siclos, and a third Caniſia, becauſe they lead to thoſe places. The Caſtle is fortified with three Walls, and a treble Ditch, and is the Capital City of that Province ſo named: There are three Moſchs, all ſtately Buildings, and covered with Lead: The Country round is Pleaſant and Fruitful; eſpecially one Hill about two Miles from the City, which the Turks call Turbe Doggi, which was rarely planted with Vines, and all ſorts of Fruit-Trees, and is famous for Cherries of an extraordinary bigneſs, of which there are none ſo good either in Hungary, or in any part of the Ottoman Dominions; the Ponds and Lakes are filled with Fiſh, and the Woods yield ſtore of Deer, Hares, Partridges, and all ſorts of Game; ſo that no place in the World can afford greater plenty of all things to ſupport Humane Life, or to furniſh the Tables of the greateſt Monarchs.

Caniſia refuſes to ſurrender.

Howſoever Caniſia refuſed to follow the Example of Sighet, being not as yet it ſeems reduced to ſuch a Condition of Famine, as to oblige them to a Surrender, for living in hopes that the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors would be able by their Negotiations to obtain a Peace, they ſuffered the utmoſt Extremities of Want, with much patience; that in reward thereof they might preſerve their Dwellings and Lands, and obtain the Honour due to the Conſtancy of good Soldiers, and the Praiſe and Commendation of their Prince.

The Turkiſh Ambaſſadors deſire Audience.

In the mean time the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors preſſed with much Importunity to be admitted unto Audience, that they might deliver their Credentials, and execute the Commands of their Maſter: But the Imperial Miniſters were not, it ſeems, ſo much in haſte, intending firſt to deliberate in what manner they were to be received, and what Anſwers were to be given to their ſubmiſſive Requeſts for Peace, a Matter unknown before to the Turks, who ſince the beginning of their Empire, had never before been acquainted with the manner of ſupplicating for Peace. But the Fortune of the World being now changed, and the Game running high on the Emperor's Hand, Expedients were contrived rather to return a plauſible cauſe of denial, and a juſtifiable ground for continuing a War, than how to form and project advantageous Articles for a Peace. Howſoever the Reſolutions being taken what to do, it was judged neceſſary to admit the Ambaſſadors to Audience, for by the Law of Nations that could not be refuſed; and ſo accordingly it was agreed, That on the 8th of February an Audience ſhould be given them: In order unto which, two Days before, the Ambaſſadors were conducted from the Caſtle of Pottendorff, into the Suburbs of the City, and lodged in that Street called Landt Straſs, being attended by two Regiments of Foot: The Day appointed for the Audience being come, they were brought with a Party of Horſe to the Gate of Carinthia about Two a Clock in the Afternoon, and there conſigned up to the Guard of the City, from whence they proceeded to the Emperor's Palace in the manner following.

The Solemnity obſerved at the Audience.

In the firſt place two Turkiſh Chiauſes on Horſeback led the way, with Staves in their Hands denoting Peace or Amity, after whom came two led Horſes, followed by the Secretary of the Ambaſſadors carrying the Credentials made up in Purſes of Cloth of Gold, holding them up in his Hand, that they might be ſeen by the People, who flocked in great Numbers to ſee this Entry.

After theſe followed ſeveral Attendants with led Horſes, all richly Harnaſſed, and covered with Embroidered Cloths: Then came Zulſigar Effendi the Ambaſſador in the Emperor's Coach accompanied with Alexander Maurocordato a Greek, Aſſociate to Zulſigar, and Interpreter to the Grand Seignior, together with Lacovitz the Imperial Interpreter. On the right ſide of the Coach walked the Ambaſſador's Footmen cloathed in Green, and on the left thoſe of Maurocordato, being Raſcians with Liveries of Yellow; all which were followed by a numerous Train of Attendants belonging to the Ambaſſador, amongſt which there was one Coach with the Ambaſſador's Kinſman, and Senior Tarſia, chief Interpreter to the State of Venice at the Ottoman Port, who were likewiſe attended with led Horſes and Footman.

In this manner being come to the Gate of the Palace, it was permitted only to the Ambaſſadors to enter into the firſt Court-Yard; the others alighted at the Draw-bridge, and walked on Foot to the Stairs; whence the Ambaſſadors, with the Secretary carrying the Credentials before them, were conducted between the Guards of Archers and Halberdiers, to the firſt Antichamber, being followed by great Crowds of People.

The Emperor ſeated on his Throne.

They are admitted to his Preſence.

In the mean time, whilſt they were aſcending the Stairs, His Imperial Majeſty came out of his private Apartment, and entered into the Chamber of Audience, and ſeated himſelf under a rich Canopy of State oppoſite to the Entrance into the Chamber, having the chief Princes and Miniſters of State ranked on each Hand according to their ſeveral Degrees and Qualities. Then were the Ambaſſadors admitted in, without other Attendance than their Secretary, who carried the Credentials before them; they were then conducted to the Foot of the Throne, the Turk wearing his Turbant on his Head, and Maurocordato carrying his Cap in his Hand, with his Head uncovered after the Chriſtian manner. Zulſigar Effendi having made three very low Bows in his approach to His Majeſty, took the Credentials into his Hands, and with another profound Obeiſance, was offering to preſent them; when His Majeſty making a Signal with his Hand, they were laid on a Side-Table near the Chair of State; and then both one and the other kneeled a little, and kiſſed the Hem of the Imperial Mantle: After which retiring at ſome diſtance back, Zulſigar Effendi made his Speech in the Turkiſh Language to this effect.

The Ambaſſador's Speech.

THE Moſt Puiſſant, and Great Emperor of the Muſſelmen, the Higheſt Monarch of the Univerſe, Sultan Solyman Han, Son of Sultan Ibrahim Han, our Lord and Maſter, hath ſent us to you, who are the Moſt High, and Moſt Glorious Emperor amongſt the Chriſtian Kings and Princes, to deliver this His Imperial Letter to You His Friend: The Summary Contents of which, is to ſignifie unto You, His Exaltation to the Throne of his Anceſtors, which hath happened in the Year, or Hegeira 1099. on the 2d Day of the Month Meherem: And alſo to put You in remembrance of the antient Friendſhip, and mutual good Correſpondence which paſſed between his Progenitors, and Your famous Predeceſſors with all Sincerity. And hath commanded us his Servants, to ſignifie unto You His Great Friend, the High Reſpect he bears in His Imperial Breaſt to the ancient Friendſhip which intervened between the Progenitors on both ſides. May the High God inſpire, and inſtill into the Hearts of both Monarchs, that which is profitable and beſt for the Devout Servants of God.

1689. To this Speech His Imperial Majeſty did not vouchſafe to return an Anſwer by Words from his own Mouth; becauſe that as yet no Treaty was begun, nor the leaſt ſtep made thereunto; and likewiſe becauſe that the Perſons who brought theſe Letters were not qualified with the Character of Ambaſſadors, but rather of Meſſengers ſent to prepare the way, in order to a ſtricter and cloſer Treaty; and therefore the Baron de Herbert, a Gentleman of the Emperor's Bedchamber, and Councellor of State, by Command of the Emperor, returned an Anſwer in the manner following.

An Anſwer return'd by Baron Herbert.

T*HE Moſt Auguſt, Puiſſant, and Invincible Emperor of the* Romans, King of Hungary and Bohemia, Arch-Duke of Auſtria, &c. Our Gracious Lord hath heard and underſtood what hath been moſt humbly propoſed to His Sacred Cæſarean Majeſty, in the Name of the Moſt Serene, and Moſt Powerful Prince Sultan Solyman, notifying by You His Exaltation to the Throne. And whereas You have made mention of the ancient Friendſhip which intervened between the Anceſtors of both theſe Sublime Monarchs; You are to reflect and conſider, That it never entered into the Thoughts of His Imperial Majeſty to trouble, or diſſolve that friendly Correſpondence; but would rather moſt ſacredly have continued the ſame until this very Hour, had he not been moſt Unjuſtly Attacked, againſt the League, and Articles ſtipulated, and Sworn by both Monarchs, by which the Effuſion of much Humane Blood would have been ſpared. Of all which, the Moſt Juſt God being Witneſs, hath Crowned the Peaceable Mind of Our Moſt Auguſt Emperor with Wonderful Succeſs, and Glorious Victories. Howſoever the Mind of His Imperial Majeſty being ſtill inclined to a Peace, he reſolves ſo ſoon as he ſhall have read the Contents of the Letter, to give Order unto His Miniſters to receive and conſider what farther Propoſals ſhall be given thereupon, and to enter into the Particulars of a Treaty; which is all that I am Commanded by my Imperial Maſter to ſay in this Matter.

To which Zulfigar Effendi, made this ſhort Reply.

The Ambaſſador's Reply.

T*HAT tho' many times moſt grievous Wars have ariſen between Great Monarchs, yet frequently, even in the heat thereof a Peace hath unexpectedly enſued. And whereas they had been employed and diſpatched from the* Ottoman Port, on a Work ſo beneficial and happy to a great part of Mankind, they did not doubt, but upon the Treaty and Conferences ſuch Expedients would be found, as would bring all Matters to a happy Concluſion. And farther he ſaid, That he had another Letter from the Grand Vizier directed to the Preſident of War, beſeeching His Majeſty that he would be pleaſed to behold the ſame with a Gracious Eye.

1689. The Ambaſſadors return from Audience.

The Audience being in this manner ended, which laſted about the ſpace of half an Hour, the Ambaſſadors (for ſo they were called in Turkiſh) returned from the Palace, in the ſame Form as they came thither, and conducted to their Lodgings, where at the Charge of the Emperor, a moſt ſumptuous Dinner was provided for them, ſufficient to entertain a Hundred Perſons.

Tho' the Ceremonies obſerved at this Audience, and the Honours and Treatment given to theſe Ambaſſadors, were much inferiour to thoſe, which had at other times been ſhown to Perſons diſpatched on the like occaſions from the Ottoman Port, yet the Concourſe of the People, who are fond of new Sights, was not leſs numerous; all the Streets, Balconies, and Windows, being filled with Spectators, who came to behold the mean Reception of the debaſed Turks, who never came before to beg Peace, but with a proud and haughty Behaviour to give the Conditions of it.

A Treaty begun.

The next day the Ambaſſadors, much in the ſame manner, were conducted to Audience of Count Staremberg, and in his Coach, who was Marſhal, and Vice-Preſident of the Supream Council of War, in the abſence of Prince Herman of Baden, who reſided at Ratisbonne, in Quality of Plenipotentiary for his Imperial Majeſty at the Diet. The Ambaſſadors being Introduced into a Chamber of his Palace, and cauſed to Sit down at a Table oppoſite againſt him, they delivered the Vizier's Letter to him; which being Read, after ſome Complements which paſſed on both ſides, they returned again to their Lodgings.

The Turks ſubmiſſive.

The Letters being afterwards Read, and Obſerved, contrary to the Cuſtom of that Proud Nation, to contain unuſual Expreſſions of Submiſſion, and earneſt Deſires for Peace, the Emperor appointed Four Commiſſioners to Treat with theſe Ambaſſadors; Namely, Count Kinniſek Great Chancellor of Bohemia, Count Straatman Great Chancellor of the Court, the Commiſſary General Count Caraffa, and Marſhal Count Staremberg.

No ſtep made to a Concluſion of Peace, by reaſon of the Demands made by the Turks.

Theſe Commiſſioners being aſſembled together, with Baron Razinsky, Envoy Extraordinary from Poland, and the Cavalier Frederico Cornaro, Ambaſſador from the Republick of Venice to the Imperial Court, with his Secretary Capello, the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors were called to hold a Conference with theſe Miniſters of the Allies, at a Palace belonging to the States of the Province of Auſtria; the which beginning about Ten in the Morning, laſted until Three a Clock in the Afternoon: After which, ſeveral Conferences were held, at which Maurocordato was the chief Speaker, expreſſing himſelf in Latin, and ſometimes in Italian; but in fine, Debates ended without making the leaſt ſtep towards the Concluſion of a Peace; for the Turks, inſtead of yielding to any Propoſal in favour of the Allies, required ſome of the Conquered Places to be reſtored to them; that Tranſilvania ſhould pay a Tribute to the Ottoman Port, as formerly; and that the Bloccades ſhould immediately be taken away from before Caniſia and Great Waradin; ſo that the Letters from the Grand Seignior and Grand Vizier containing nothing but General Terms, which teſtified their Deſires of Peace, and their Negotiations, and Propoſals far from any particular Condeſcentions, their Actions looked, as if they deſigned nothing more than to gain time, and to hear, and obſerve what progreſs the French made by their Arms in the Palatinate, and other parts of Germany.

Their hopes in the French promiſes.

Nor indeed were the Turks deceived in theſe Meaſures, being ſupported by the French Promiſes, and Arms, and without which, the Turks would have Condeſcended to any Conditions which the Emperor and his Allies might have offered: Notwithſtanding which, the Faith of the French was ſo low in the Eſteem of the Turks, that had the Emperor in that Conjuncture propoſed ſome little Advantages, which might have kept up the Credit of the Ottoman Power amongſt their own People, a Peace would certainly have enſued, which ſome Years afterwards by the Wiles and Artifices of the French could not be obtained, nor the Turks inclined thereunto by foul or fair means, by overthrows in Battle, and loſs of Towns, and a long continued Train of Misfortunes; nor by the Mediations of England and Holland, offered by their reſpective Miniſters to the Port, as may hereafter be declared; ſo that it is an unaccountable piece of Policy, the blame of which the World is apt to Charge on the Clergy, and the ſecret Partiſans of France hidden in the Imperial Councels, there being at that time no apparent Reaſon why the Applications and Overtures of the Turks were not Embraced, and improved to a Peace; For at that time the French had entered the Palatinate with Fire and Sword; and their Armies committing all ſorts of Hoſtility, had entered the Archbiſhopricks of Mentz, Cologne, the Dukedomes of Juliers, Bergue, and other Places of Suabia; ſo that now it was manifeſt, the Emperor had the Wars of two mighty Powers to ſuſtain, which had ſoon overwhelmed all Germany, had not a firm Alliance been made between England, Spain, Holland, and moſt of the Princes of Germany; which was brought about by a moſt miraculous Providence; which not being the Subject of this Hiſtory, we ſhall turn our Diſcourſe towards the Wars againſt the Turks; the Treaty with whom breaking off, the Hoſtilities on both ſides were carried on with the ſame Fierceneſs and Cruelty as before.

The Germans blamed for not making a Peace.

The French encourage the Turks to continue the War,

And endeavour to draw the King of Poland from his Alliance.

The Turks contrary to their Natural Temper, were become extreamly humble, and Supplicant, debaſing themſelves to ſo low, and mean a Degree of Submiſſion, that the Imperial Miniſters ſuſpected that ſome Deſign lay covered under their fawning Expreſſions, and over-acted Humility: All which would have appeared real, had not the French encouraged the Divan with Preſents, and Promiſes of recovering all Hungary back, and ſomething more, if they would only reaſſume their Ancient Courage, and patiently ſupport the Inconvenience of a War for a few years longer; to incline them whereunto, the French ſent the Turks a Minute Account of all the Victories they had obtained over the Germans, what Cities and Towns they had deſtroyed, what Devaſtations and what Incurſions they had made into the very Heart of Germany, with Fire and Sword; by which they had already rendered all thoſe Provinces on the Rhine, ſo weak and miſerable, that it was impoſſible for them to reſiſt the violent Courſe of the French Arms, much leſs, when united with the Puiſſance of the Ottoman Empire. And to facilitate this Work, ſeveral Engines were employed to Tamper with the Poles and Ambaſſadors ſent to that King; one of which was Monſieur de Bethune, who was Brother to the Queen of Poland; and to quicken, and give life to this Negotiation, vaſt Sums of Money were ſent, ſufficient to blind and corrupt the Mind of an Avaritious Prince; and tho' theſe means were not productive of a Peace, yet they begot ſuch cold Motions of War, as looked ſomething like a Truce, or an indifferent Neutrality: And indeed, ſe-veral Campagnes after this were carried on with ſo ſlow a pace, that the Arms of Poland came not into the Field until it was almoſt ſeaſonable to retire from thence; and ſuch Negligence was practiſed in their Martial Diſcipline, that they were commonly ſurprized by the Tartar, and defeated: And ſo little care taken to provide the Army with neceſſary food for Horſe and Man, that in the year 1691, (as may hereafter be made appear) all the Horſes of the Army died, even in the very Stables of the King, who was forced afterwards to return home in a Waggon drawn by Buffalo's and Oxen.

The Poles cold in their Actings.

The Emperor encourages the Bulgarians and Raſcians,

Howſoever nothing was omitted on the part of the Emperor to carry forward two ſuch important Wars, by ſeveral ways. And in the firſt place, to ſecure the New Conqueſts, it was thought neceſſary, to encourage the Bulgarians and Raſcians, who had made a Defection from the Turks, and ſubmitted themſelves intirely to the Service of the Emperor; and as a means to ſecure thoſe People, Count Marſigli, the Chief Director and Surveyor of the Fortifications, was diſpatched to erect a Fortreſs in ſome Place or other, the moſt convenient for Defence and Protection of thoſe People; for which no place could be ſituate ſo advantageouſly as that of the Iron-Gate; which would very much have ſecured the Chriſtian Conqueſts, and been a good Frontier, between which and Adrianople there was not the leaſt Fortification in all that vaſt Country; nor from thence to the very Walls of Conſtantinople.

And makes Preparations againſt the Turks.

Tho' the Emperor was greatly burdened by a War againſt France, and at the ſame time againſt the Turk, yet all Care was taken both in one and the other. The Imperial Chamber iſſued out vaſt Sums to Recruit the Militia in Hungary, to Remount their Artillery, and provide all ſorts of Ammunition and Proviſions for the next Campagne, with which the Magazines both in Servia and Sclavonia were ſupplied; as alſo Carriages, Bridges, Boats, and all ſorts of Warlike Preparations, which were carried on by the great Induſtry of Count Caraffa, Commiſſary-General.

In the mean time the Turks made continual Incurſions into Boſnia, along the ſides of the Rivers Unna, and Culpa, but without much Succeſs; they being on all ſides ſtreightned in their Quarters, and Marches by the Germans. For Piccolomini having notice, that the Paſha of Boſnia deſigned to over-run all the Country near the Save, detached ſome Parties of Hungarians and Germans from the Garriſon of Proot, to diſcover the Actions of the Turks; and being in the night time advanced ſome Leagues into the Enemies Country, they ſurprized the Town of Liſnia, and ſet Fire to it, and killed all the Garriſon, conſiſting of 500 men, ſome few only excepted, which they carried away Priſoners.

A Rebellion in Aſia.

But the Confuſion at the Ottoman Court was much greater, by reaſon of a new Rebellion in Aſia carried on by Tedic a famous Robber in that Country, and Partner with Teghen Paſha, whom we mentioned in our Treatiſe of the laſt Year; the which continued for ſome time before it was appeaſed, and Tedic cut off: But before we touch upon that Story, it will be neceſſary to declare the Fate of Teghen, who had forced himſelf upon the Government, and obliged the Vizier to Create him Seraskier, which happened in this manner.

The Fate of Yeghen.

He kills the Prince of Tartary.

After that Teghen had fled from Belgrade, he quarrelled with Noradin Galga, Son of the Tartar Chan; upon which, Noradin being a Man of a high Spirit, called him Coward, and pitiful, meanſpirited Raſcal, fit for nothing but to Command a Band of Thieves and Robbers; at which Teghen, who looked on himſelf as Seraskier, or General of the Army, was ſo enraged, that ſhaking his Topuz at him, (which is a kind of Iron-Mace, carried by the Turks on the ſide of their Horſes Saddle) cauſed him to be Strangled before the Eyes of many of the principal Men belonging to the Tartarian Court.

The Father meditates Revenge.

The News of this Affront and Outrage committed on the Son, the very hopes of the Houſe, highly enraged the Chan his Father; who ſtudying Night and Day a Revenge, wrote to the Grand Signior and Grand Vizier, in the moſt reſenting Terms poſſible againſt Teghen, urging, that that inſolent and unhumane Robber was to be deſtroyed, without which, the Cauſe of the Muſſelmen could not be Bleſſed, nor any Fortune be expected againſt their Enemies.

The Grand Vizier favours Yeghen.

But the Grand Vizier thinking himſelf under ſome Obligations to Teghen, who had the Year before ſaved his life before Niſſa; when the Janiſaries mutinying for want of Pay, (he being then Janizar-Aga) conſpired to Strangle him: In remembrance of which, being now advanced to the ſublime Office of Grand Vizier, he endeavoured to ſweeten the matter, and render the caſe of Teghen as plauſible as might be. But ſuch was the Miſfortune of Teghen, that the Tartar Chan coming in Perſon to Adrianople, to conſult on ſuch Meaſures as were neceſſary to be taken for the ſucceeding Campagne, he fell on his Quarrel with Teghen, who had put his

1689. his Son to Death, urging to the Divan, that there was an unavoidable neceſſity for putting Teghen to Death, as the Cauſe and Fomenter of all the Mutinies in the Army, and the Rebellions in Aſia.

Teghen being adviſed by his Friends, and Correſpondents, of which he had many at the Ottoman Court, of the Complaints and Endeavours of the Tartar Chan againſt him, found himſelf not only thereby defeated of his expected Confirmation in the Office of Seraſkier, but in danger of the Evil which the Wiles and Accuſations of an irreconcilable Enemy at the Court might bring upon him. Wherefore abandoning himſelf to Deſpair, he began again to practiſe all ſorts of Villainy, to rob Villages and Towns, entertaining all ſorts of Robbers, Murderers, and People accuſtomed to Spoil, arrogating to himſelf a power of creating Paſha's, and exerciſing all ſorts of Violence and Cruelty upon the Inhabitants of Romelia, or Greece. And moreover he wrote to his Friends and Acquaintance in Aſia, particularly to Tedic, to Declare in favour of his Cauſe, which was alſo ſupported by the Authority of the Grand Vizier.

Yeghen commits all ſorts of Outrages.

Commands iſſued from the Port to take Yeghen either alive or dead.

